Council gives go ahead for parking structure reapplication

by Sandi Stacki

Voting unanimously the City Council agreed to resubmit to the federal government a $1.5 million UDAG application to fund a downtown parking structure on Jackson St. between Third and Sixth.

The city of Moscow previously submitted a $4.6 million Urban Development Action Grant proposal to fund the parking structure, $1 million for Main St. revitalization, $1 million for alley improvements and a loan fund for downtown betterment, but was turned down.

The proposal items were main citizen concerns determined in the 3rd and Main downtown development project.

Bill Smith, city supervisor, explained the level of private funds to public funds is not as high as it might be. Reception of a UDAG suggests a six to one ratio of private to public dollars, he said.

As of the Monday city council meeting, 38 businessmen had reaffirmed private renovation pledges totaling about $6.5 million, said businessman Byron Henry. This amount does not include the commitments of nine original pledgers who were not available to reaffirm their pledges.

The commitments are not legally binding. They are "good faith statements," but Henry said he honestly believes the businessmen plan to fulfill them even if the city doesn't get the grant.

The city also has to meet a national distress element and Moscow's distress element is low, said Smith. "We have to compete with all other small cities submitting applications. Moscow is in the 90th percentile for funding and the grant program so far has only funded up to the 30th percentile," he said.

"The government is saying 'tell us your first priority,'" said Dee Hager, council member. She said she feels Main St. and the parking structure are the highest priorities, but Main St. is also U.S. highway 95 and state highway 8.

"I understand getting the route changed is about six years away, so my feeling is to move with the parking garage," said Hager. Rerouting the traffic to Jackson St. is part of the revitalizing Main St. proposal.

"I support applying for federal funding to build the parking structure, because it would be impossible to finance locally," said Max Nelson, a member of the Moscow Downtown Retail Association. The MDRA sponsored the 3rd and Main workshops.

The consensus of people city council member Roy Krauss talked to are in favor of the parking structure. Krauss said many asked why they should support downtown businessmen with their tax money.

"This money is set aside by the federal government for such projects and if we don't get it someone else will," he said.

"I do not think we need to see a parking structure as a single use item," said Linda Pall, council member. She suggested the building could provide added retail space, a skating rink, or restrooms.

The people's perception of a multi-storied cement parking structure is misleading, said Pall. She perceives three levels, one below ground.

To further 3rd and Main efforts, recommendations were made to continue studying other areas discussed in the first grant proposal.

"We could be studying rent of Main St. while the parking structure is being done," said Jim Anderson, owner of Ambassador Auto. Anderson also encouraged speeding up the rerouting of traffic to Jackson St.

Hager promoted a development corporation as she did at the 3rd and Main town meeting. "The city council can act as a facilitator, but can't do it all," she said.

Regents up BSU fees $40 for multi-purpose pavilion

by Sandi Stacki

In a 4-3 debated decision, the Board of Regents approved a $40 Boise State University student fee increase to fund a $14 million multi-purpose pavilion on campus.

All the regents admitted the need of such a facility for physical education courses, sports, entertainment and large group meetings, but some felt the timing awkward. The one percent initiative comes to vote in early November.

"The timing now is bad, but there is no opportune time for a fee increase. I criticize that we didn't move on it a couple of years ago," said regent A.L. (Butch) Alford.

Alford said waiting for alternate funding is impossible. "We have to soak the students and use the BAA," he said. Alford voted to increase fees.

The Bronco Athletic Association has offered to contribute over $4.5 million in pledges for the 12,000 seat pavilion complex. An initial $500,000 has already been delivered. The Alumni Association is also initiating a $500,000 fund drive for direct use on the pavilion.

Alford added the state permanent building fund is "sick," because it won't fund the pavilion with state dollars. Considered an auxiliary service, the pavilion must be totally funded by student fees and donations.

Suggestions were made to again hold the decision until the November board meeting. John H. Keiser, BSU president, said the question raised will not be answered then either. "I feel that after 2.5 years of effort this is the best and most forthright time to vote on this," he said. The students deserve to know much before next semester if fees are increasing, he said.

Since the reduced $14 million design was presented at the September Regents meeting, public hearings on the fee increase were held at BSU to get student reactions. "I feel safe the students were aware of the forums," said student president Robert Perez. The student senate voted 12-2 in favor of the pavilion, he said.

"I feel strongly a need for farsightedness in planning. It would be derelict five years from now, if we don't do it now," said regent Cheryl Hymas.

"We won't know the effects of the one percent until March. I don't feel we want to wait that long. This is the kind of facility the legislature has never funded. If we don't fund it by student fees we might as well forget about it," said regent Janet Hay.

"I'm hesitant about the $14 million," said board chairman Leno Seppi. He told Keiser he was concerned that the project not come back to the students for more fees. Seppi, Clint Hoopes and J.P. Munson voted not to increase student fees for the pavilion.

When the U of I ASUI-Kibbie Dome was built student fees increased $37.50. Later students were faced with another $5 increase for the project. But even with the BSU $40 increase added to the present $185 students still pay less in registration fees than the $219 the undergraduate resident students pay at U of I.

The projected bid for the Kibbie Dome if built in Boise in September 1979 would be $12,538,618. The pavilion projected bid is $13,985,000, according to F.W. Dodge Construction Corp.

Gano wins band give away

Steve Gano, Farmhouse Fraternity, is the lucky winner of the Idaho Marching Band and Vandalettes. His correct entry was drawn at 7 a.m. yesterday morning as part of KUID-FM's birthday celebration.

Gano and his friend, Brett Morris who from Clarkston and Lewiston, plan on inviting their parents up to listen to the band during the noon hour sometime in the next two weeks.

"We did it kind of as a joke," Gano said to the untraditional way he and Morris entered the contest. "Brett likes to play with computers and we found out no official entry blank was required, so he ran off about 100 entries on the computer," Gano said.

Gano and Morris correctly named the KUID-FM weekly morning disc jockeys as Monday, Mike Perryman; Tuesday, Mike Freedman; Wednesday, Greg Williamson; Thursday, Keven McMahan; and Friday, Michael Dame.

Homecoming to offer variety pack

Homecoming weekend is just three weeks away and the calendar of events includes something to entertain everyone. Activities are scheduled Oct. 26 to 29.

An ROTC Army - Navy football game will be played in the Kibbie Dome Thursday.

Freshman women from all living groups will participate in the annual pajama parade. Following the parade a rally and bonfire will take place in the arboretum. Members of the football team will be present.

Friday evening a concert will be given by Buffalo Rose, a country western group, in the SUB ballroom. The music will begin at 9 p.m. and admission will be $2 per person.

An alumni breakfast will be held at the Elk's Club on Saturday, at 7:30 a.m. The breakfast will be $3 each and is open to the public.

Twenty high school bands have signed up to march in the Homecoming parade which begins Saturday, 9 a.m.

The big event of the Homecoming weekend will be the football game between the Vandals and Weber State. Game tickets may be ordered from the university ticket manager. Reserved seat tickets are $7 and general admission will be $5. Students will be admitted free. The game begins at 2 p.m. in the Kibbie Dome.

During halftime of the game the float winners of the parade will be announced and the Homecoming royalty will be introduced.

After the football game, the Alumni Association will dedicate the Jim Lyle Alumni Lounge at approximately 5 p.m. The lounge is the former Hays Hall living room. Jim Lyle was director of alumni activities from 1946-1969. He now resides in Moscow.

Saturday evening the Homecoming dance will be held at the Best Western Convention Center. Melodies from the 40's and 50's as well as current tunes will be played by the "SBJR Jazz Quartet." Admission will be $1.

The First Annual Letterman's Breakfast will be held Sunday 9 a.m., at the University Inn Best Western. Former and current male lettermen are invited. Bill Belknap, athletic director, is sponsor of the breakfast.

Local churches have extended an invitation to Homecoming participants to attend the church of their choice.

St. Augustine's Catholic church, located across the street from the SUB, is hosting a breakfast from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. The public is welcome and donations will be accepted.

The theatre arts department will present "Carnival," Thursday through Saturday of Homecoming week, at the Ernest Hartung Theater. General admission will be $3. Students will be admitted for $2 with I.D. card.

Homecoming meets set

Two meetings are scheduled this coming week for Homecoming representatives of various living groups of campus.

All representatives from living groups located south of Sixth Street will meet Wednesday, 7 p.m. at the SUB.

Representatives of living groups located north of Sixth Street will meet Thursday, 7 p.m. at the Wallace Complex.

Coach Jerry Davitch will speak at the meetings.

Instructions for the rally, pajama parade, downtown parade, banners, house decorations, floats, royalty and halftime will be given.

Living groups are urged to have a representative in attendance.

Greeks to pay monthly bill for proposed lighting improvements on Elm and Idaho

by Diane Sexton

Five new lights will probably appear on campus next summer in an effort to improve hazardous lighting conditions, according to Rick Howard, ASUI senator.

In June 1978, the university approved the necessary capital outlay for Washington Water and Power to install the lights on Elm Street and Idaho Avenue, provided the Greek houses in the area agree to pay the monthly power bill.

The action follows protests of unsafe lighting conditions.

The university allocated $20,000 to improve lighting in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

The cost to install each pole is $157.58 for a total of $787.90, which will come out of the allocated budget. Also, an additional light will be placed on Idaho Avenue where a power pole already exists.

The power cost for each light is $4.60 per month and for six lights would total $27.60. Providing the 17 Greek houses in the area cooperate, each will pay only $1.62 per month.

Because energy and maintenance is through WWP, the power bill can go to only one designated house. Pi Beta Phi volunteered to take the responsibility. So far, all but two Greek houses in the area have agreed to cooperate and pay the power fee.

The major campus areas in need of improved lighting are city streets. The university maintained it is the city's responsibility to install lights in those areas. But Moscow Mayor Don Mackin said it is the policy of the city to establish lights only at each corner and additional lights would have to be paid for by the residents.

In the fall of 1976, campus security established that there were many areas on campus in need of improved lighting. Many women's groups expressed concern over hazards inadequate lighting could present to personal safety.

Clark Hudson, Moscow police chief, agreed campus lighting was inadequate and said poor lighting encourages certain types of crimes, ranging from prowling to burglary to assault and rape.

The ASUI Senate passed a resolution in September 1977 stating increasing amounts of concern have been expressed by students, staff and faculty over personal safety and crime prevention on the U of I campus and lighting facilities in several areas of considerable pedestrian travel are non-existent..."

So Howard, working with Dr. Thomas E. Richardson, then vice president for student and administrative affairs, took the initiative. Howard sent a survey to all women's living groups on campus in February 1978, asking them to list the five areas they felt were in greatest need of improved lighting. The results from the survey were:

- the area from the Kibbie Dome to the law building.
- the middle of each block on Elm Street.
- the alley behind the SUB.
- the middle of each block on Idaho Avenue.
- the middle of each block on Ash Street.

Regents to consider regional vet program

Regents' approval will be sought this morning for the establishment of a regional program in veterinary medical education. The program will be in effect July 1, 1979 if governing boards of Washington State, Oregon State and the U of I approve.

The Washington, Oregon, Idaho Regional Program in Veterinary Medicine, WOI, will replace the existing agreement between the U of I and WSU and the interim agreement between OSU and WSU.

Distribution of capitation of federal funds among the three states is the principal unresolved issue the Board of Education/Board of Regents will attempt to resolve, according to the agenda.

The agreement states funds are not based on the number of each state's sponsored students in the program, but will be made by the executive dean of the WOI program to each of the institutions. Funds will be determined on the basis of where the students are receiving instruction with consideration being given to where the instructors are stationed.

The agreement emphasizes the following benefits:

- Satisfying rising demand in the field of veterinary medicine.

- Sharing facilities, faculty and operating costs to provide a high quality educational program leading to the Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree.

- Sharing facilities, faculty and operating costs to provide a high quality educational program leading to the Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree.

- Minimizing duplication costs of new facilities.
- Assuring increased access to veterinary education.
- Increasing services for animal industries and public health.
- Promoting economic, education, research and service objectives of each state through a regional program.

Approximately 106 students would be admitted yearly to the WOI program at WSU student fee rates. U of I would have 15 reserved positions, which may or may not be Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE) sponsored.

OSU would sponsor 36 students yearly, 28 of whom will be Oregon residents and eight sponsored by WICHE. WSU will admit about 55 students each year, including WSU, WICHE and contract sponsored students.

Compare Our New Pricing System with Other "Discount Prices" —
You will be Surprised!

How are prescription prices determined?

At Hodgins Drug we use a "professional fee" pricing system. The prescription is simply the price of the product from our supplier plus a flat fee.

How is the "professional fee" determined?

The fee is the result of a complete financial analysis of the pharmacy — from taxes to label costs. The services offered are important. At Hodgins Drug we provide patient profiles, insurance & tax records, charge accounts & free local prescription delivery. We've streamlined our system to keep service fast & costs down, but not at the expense of patient care.

How is that different from other systems?

Prescriptions are traditionally priced on a "markup". In other words, the more it costs the store, the more the store makes. On inexpensive products the store does not cover expenses, but on expensive drugs it makes much more. Let's take an example:

Drug Cost	[Redacted]
Fee System	[Redacted]
Mark Up Less 15% Discount	[Redacted]
Mark Up	0	3	6	9	12	15	18	21
DOLLARS

How do larger quantities save you money?

Each time you fill a prescription it costs — for containers, paperwork and time. So when you fill your prescription once for a 100 tablets instead of twice for 50 tablets the savings are passed on to you. Ask the pharmacist about your medications — some of them can be filled in larger quantities

Can I ask for price comparisons?

Yes! We're happy to explain what we're doing! We feel we'll gain a new customer.

Keep in mind the advantages of the fee system:

- (1) You pay only for the product & our costs — when your doctor prescribes an expensive drug you aren't penalized.
- (2) On "maintenance medication" — such as blood pressure or diabetic products you save even more by buying larger quantities.

Senior Citizens:

- (3) You don't need a "discount card" or an age bracket to qualify. The fee system is the only equitable way to keep prices as low as possible. Your health is too important to us — we don't play games with you or your pocketbook. Take a moment & compare our prices. You'll be surprised!

Opinion

in a pig's eye...

Oh boy! New toys!

The ASUI Senate finally lifted the lid on the big toy box labeled "parliamentary procedure" Wednesday night.

By throwing "previous question" around like a ping pong ball, by calling for recess in mid-sentence and by asking to change votes 15 minutes after the fact, the senators cut off some valid debate on some valid issues.

Hopefully, the novelty of these new toys will wear off soon, and the senate can get back to more important business—namely serving the students it represents.

Senator Kerrin McMahan recognized in her closing communication the anger of falling into such games. Unfortunately, recognition of a problem is only the beginning.

Published twice weekly, Tuesdays and Fridays, throughout the academic year, by the Communications Board, Associated Students University of Idaho. Our offices are located in the basement of the Student Union Building, 620 Deakin Avenue, Moscow, Idaho. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the writer, and do not necessarily represent the views of the ASUI, the U of I, or its Board of Regents. Distributed free of charge to students on campus; mail subscriptions, $5 per semester, $8 per academic year. Second class postage paid at Moscow, Idaho 83843.

There was a massive sigh of relief yesterday as the State Board of Education, in a 4-3 vote, gave the go-ahead to Boise State University for its proposed $14 million athletic pavillion. The general spirit of the board's decision was based on the "need" for the facility—an impressive, well-designed ediface—which hopefully will serve the students of BSU well.

However, it will also be serving the citizens of Boise, who have been unwilling to build their own events center because of the cost.

The issue is once again who ends up financing building projects at the state universities, most of which are "needed" for something: the students or the taxpayers.

By all economic justice, and by the Idaho Constitution, the legislature should be supplying dollars for the total educational program: academics, auxillary services and buildings. This will happen about the same time our concerned and responsible lawmakers pass a bill legalizing heroin. So the students will continue to pay for everything the educational establishment can sock them with.

Athletics and other cultural events are not presented in a vaccuum for students only, since the majority of attendees at such events are the general populace. Such entertainment is mostly justified as a public relations device to draw attention to the institutions. The primary perception of this seems to be the legislature and populace will ignore the academic attributes of the colleges unless there is one expensive program to draw their attention.

U of I President Richard Gibb has both in public and private declared that a successful athletic program is quite necessary for the well-being of the university. One presupposes such a program includes winning in football, something which the U of I has done only five times in the last fifty years.

One of the formulas for winning is apparently having a full-range athletic facility—for both intramurals and intercollegiate athletics, not to mention other functions. Presently, the Kibbie Dome is not at such a stage. It is short of locker rooms, which apparently hurts recruitment. Thus at Idaho, we have a "need."

It is perhaps dangerous to equate the need at BSU, which the state board helped eliminate yesterday, with such a need at the U of I. However, it might not be far afield to guess such parallel's will be drawn in the near future.

Since it has been shown, over and over again, the board does listen to the students, this just might be the time for the elected ASUI officials to prepare a referendum to be presented at this fall's ASUI election about how their constituents feel about the need for the east end facility.

Letters

Gibb letter bad

Editor,

This letter is written concerning the "Letter to Gibb" printed in the Sept. 29 issue of the Argonaut. The letter was poorly written and its publication should be questioned.

Examination of several points within the letter will answer the question of the letter's quality. The letter began with an introduction that complained about President Gibb's lack of interest in student opinion. This argument was based on President Gibb's absence from a picnic.

The letter then continues with a copy of a letter sent to President Gibb. The letter is incoherent and hard to read. This stems from several derogatory remarks towards President Gibb. Some examples are calling him "running dog lackey" and "may tommy knockers infest your basement."

Another element of incoherence in the style of the letter is the rash and obnoxious put down of President Gibb. Such style is comparable to a high school student learning to write.

The letter ends with "therefore the executive council, with two exceptions, advise you to decline it's kind offer." The intention of the letter addressed to President Gibb is completely lost at this point. The reader doesn't know if the invitation to President Gibb was a joke, insult, or invitation. President Gibb inquired at the college of mines about the letter and its author. He then dismissed it's intentions of being a serious invitation.

Publication of this letter illustrates the neglect of journalism's responsibilities to present the public with factual and relevant material. The article served no purpose but to attack President Gibb. Is that why it was published?

Misrepresented

Editor,

As students in the Department of Geology, College of Mines, we have met some of the finest people with whom we have ever been associated. Therefore, we feel compelled to comment on a recent letter by Robert White which appeared recently in the Argonaut.

In our opinion, Mr. White's letter demonstrated a complete lack of taste, ethics, and judgment. Whatever the issue or opinion, name-calling is simply abuse and not an acceptable part of any discussion or debate.

Mr. White misrepresented the fact when he implied that the function in question was a College of Mines picnic organized by the Molly McGuires (whoever they are) to discuss politics. The picnic was organized by two geology students, Ken Paul and Michael Janik, to generate interest in our softball team and to give the new students in the department a chance to meet their new colleagues. We extended invitations to all College of Mines students and faculty.

We therefore feel that Mr. White owes an apology to Dr. Richard Gibb, the College of Mines, and the Department of Geology.

No joke comix

Editor,

I would like to comment on the latest "No Joke Comix," in which the woman decides to have an abortion in her third trimester.

Perhaps the pro-life organization did not realize that in the United States, a doctor is not allowed to perform an abortion in the third trimester unless the woman's life is endangered by the fetus. So the Comix is blatantly false (as well as being in bad taste). Can they not use truthful arguments in their case? I don't know what you call it, but it sounds like yellow journalism to me.

Hosack okay

Editor,
I recently had the opportunity of having Robert Hosack, Representative to District 5, be my guest for lunch. I have had several speakers attend meals at Alpha Gamma Delta, but I was exceptionally impressed with this man.
Robert Hosack has always carried the needs of the District to Legislature and as his record clearly shows, supported an improved educational system at all levels in the State of Idaho. College students make up a large portion of constituents for Bob, and he is looking out for our education, and the education of those to follow us.

There are people who care about our education and retaining the quality of our colleges and universities. However, students must utilize the vote in order to retain dedicated representatives and other congressional leaders. Be the runners of the race Democratic or Republican, no one will cross the finish line unless more than 15 to 20 percent of the students vote. The University is a large voting population, 5,000 or 6,000 votes have often made the difference in close races.

Come on University of Idaho! Lets make the difference for Bob Hosack and our future educations.

Jesus is truth

Editor,
Many people are so 'into' living it up—seeking personal gains and excitement that they push aside serious matters about life. I'm sure, though, there isn't one person, at one time or another, that doesn't ask questions concerning ultimate truth, like creation vs. evolution, man's future, etc. Are you concerned about truth? This is a vital question. Are you saying, "Of course I am"? Very well, then you and the Christian are interested in exactly the same thing. Jesus claimed, "I am the truth." He claimed, in other words, to be ultimate reality in personal, human terms. If you're interested in what is ultimate and what is real, then you cannot remain disinterested in Jesus. You might examine his claims and dismiss them as untrue: what you cannot do if you maintain a real concern for truth, is to pay him no attention, shrug your shoulders or say, "I'm not the religious sort." Jesus is alive and well today. Do you want to know Him as a personal friend? Come down for fun and excitement at College Life Friday nights at 7 p.m. Places will be given. Jesus loves you and is very concerned about your individual needs.

Ralph Goetzinger

Morals and pro-life

Editor,
Several points are consistently overlooked by the "pro-lifers" or anti-abortionists. First of all, man's moral systems are relative and incomplete by virtue of human nature. Further, they are personal and cannot be imposed on another person. Any such imposition changes a decision of morality to one of obedience. Or, if you like, from obedience to God to obedience to a man or woman or society.

Secondly, God's morality and judgments are incomprehensible to man, much as he would like to believe otherwise. How can we understand the Old Testament God's command to destroy an entire society. Is not murder wrong?

Finally, the answer to the question, "When does life begin?" is "life did begin on this earth millions of years ago and it continues to this day." Human egotism is clearly evidenced by the havoc we have created in natural systems. We are the center of the universe only to ourselves.

I do not and cannot personally advocate abortion unequivocally. It is not my decision to make. It is a woman's and ultimately hers alone. It is a decision of great consequence and I would hope that it is made with careful deliberation and prayer.

Women leaders honor Bush

Corlann Gee Bush, University of Idaho assistant dean of students, has been named Idaho's Outstanding Young Woman of the Year for 1978.

A founder and director of Nightline, Moscow's crisis telephone service, she is a member of the Executive Council of the National Student Exchange Consortium and founder and administrator of the Idaho Rural Women's History Project.

Bush also served as program chairwoman for the coordinating committee of Idaho's International Women's Year and was a delegate to the convention. She is a member of the Northwestern Regional Steering Committee of the Women's Caucus of the American Association of Higher Education and a member of the American Association of University Women.

She and women representing each of the other 49 states and the District of Columbia are being considered for the Ten Outstanding Young Women of America awards. Women selected for these awards will be honored.

First district debate set

The two candidates for Idaho's First Congressional District seat, Republican incumbent Steve Symms and Democratic challenger Roy Truby, will meet this Tuesday in Moscow for a debate. The topics of discussion will be America's farm policy, and other pressing issues.

Symms is seeking to serve his fourth term in Washington, D.C., and Truby, who is currently on leave from his elected position as Idaho superintendent of public instruction, is attempting to unseat him.

The debate, which is being co-sponsored by the Idaho Press Club (IPC) and the Idaho League of Women Voters, will be carried live over KUID-TV and simultaneously broadcast on KUID-FM. The program begins at 7 p.m. and will last one hour.

IPC President Rod Gramer of Boise said the format will be in the "classic Lincoln-Douglas debates" style, and it will be moderated by University of Idaho Dean of Law Cliff Thompson.

KUID-TV producer Rebecca Newton said because of space limitations in the KUID studios, the debate will not be open to the public.

The IPC has attempted to set up debates between the various candidates for statewide offices, plus the congressional candidates.

Democratic incumbent Gov. John Evans declined to meet GOP challenger Allan Larsen unless the format was changed.

District opponents agree on Initiative One

Technical difficulties may have prevented KUOI-FM listeners from hearing two representative candidate's comments in support of higher education Tuesday night, but the message was clear for the audience in the SUB's Borah Theatre.

Incumbent Robert Hosack, D-Moscow and his Republican challenger Joseph Walker, also of Moscow are vying for fifth District Representative Position B. They spoke before about 30 people.

Most of the questions directed at the candidates concerned the 1 percent initiative and how it would affect local government should it pass.

Walker said an increase of $60 million in sales and income taxes over last year would help offset the effect of the initiative on higher education. He said he would support cutbacks at the administration level such as a moratorium on government building projects, "before higher education would have to bite the bullet."

If cuts were made in the university's budget, Walker would not be in favor of in-state tuition without first asking for the consent of the students, he said.

"We enjoy a privilege of public support that few institutions of higher education enjoy," he said. U of I has a definite problem, "since 75 percent of the people live in the southern part of the state and are not familiar with our situation," Hosack said.

Walker said he entered the race because he was "concerned with preserving our Idaho lifestyle." He cited as a major goal restoration of confidence in the representative form of government through person to person contact.

Hosack, who has served two terms in the office, said he also has a strong interest in representing the people and finds it stimulating to be a part of state government. Stressing that he has served as a legislator, and knows the people, Hosack said, "I think I can do and have done a good job for the people of this district." He added this district is unique because of its diversified interests.

Walker said he does not support the initiative because, aside from its many flaws, it takes money away from the local governments when the real problem lies in the federal government. "The state of Idaho could run for 100 years on the funds of one year's federal deficit," Walker stated. He said he favors local option taxes, but feels that increased sales tax, being "a regressive tax," places the burden in the wrong place. Walker added he would consider exempting food from the sales tax.

Hosack, on the other hand, supported an increased sales tax as an option to fall back on if the initiative passes he said. "For each cent of sales tax you add, you get $30 million in additional revenue," he said.

When asked if state government should attempt to stimulate business in Idaho, Hosack replied that it is a "legitimate state function to assist business enterprise." He said with a continuing need for revenue, healthy economic growth through increased industry is warranted.

In response to the same questions, Walker answered, "the state could do more for promoting existing agricultural commodities."

Evans concerned with students, teachers and education

Although this campaign is his first venture into the partisan realm of elections, GOP candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans says his primary interest is the "politics of good education."

Evans is currently on leave from his position as deputy state superintendent, and is running against Democratic State Representative Daryl Sallaz for the seat. Incumbent Roy Truby did not seek reelection as he is running for Congress.

"I am concerned where the Board of Regents is going in terms of fees. It should give the issue much more planning and determine where fees fit in (the revenue structure) and where the needs are," Evans said.

"So far, if the students have wanted an increase, the board says, 'Perhaps we should go ahead' and that's wrong. The increases seem to come in times of crisis."

Evans has not endorsed the 1 percent initiative, and will not be voting for the proposed law change in the November election.

"I have sympathy for the taxpayers," Evans said, "but there will be changes (in the property tax law) in a time of crisis, rather than a planning for tax reform."

Jerry Evans

Union membership is a matter for teachers to decide, he said. Evans pointed out there is a negotiations law in Idaho which recognizes local bargaining units, whether they are affiliated with a state or national organization, or independent. However, he is "tremendously bothered" by the thought of strikes.

"There must be a way to settle differences without interfering with the education of the children," Evans said.

He proposed altering the negotiations law, so if an impasse is reached the issue goes automatically to mediators and factfinders.

"I don't want binding or compulsory arbitration," he said.

He explained when negotiations which would be held in private between teacher groups and the local board break down, the next stage should be open to the public.

"This way the community can bring pressure for a settlement and there can be a quick and fair resolution. I have faith in local control and the patrons of the district."

Evans said while intercollegiate athletics is an important aspect of the university, there must be a balanced approach in the total concept. "It can't be the tail that wags the dog."

He said sports brings benefits to students, to the downtown and to alumni. However, there is a bigger picture for athletics than just public relations, and the costs should be analyzed for what returns the institution receives, "no just once, forever, but routinely."

Evans brings a lengthy record of education experience into the campaign. He has been a teacher and elementary and high school principal. He served nine years as district superintendent for the Cascade, Idaho, school district and six years as superintendent at Caldwell, Idaho. He has been deputy superintendent under Truby for more than three years.

Evans is a 1953 graduate of the University of Idaho and received his masters from Oregon State University in 1962. He took additional work which qualified him for superintendent's credentials.

"In those positions, my primary goal was to increase instruction," Evans said. "I was concerned with the curriculum as well as administration. I also worked with the financial, legal and technical sides of the job."

Since he has been with the State Department of Education, he has been in charge of the development of budget requests and this year worked on a "disaster plan" for cutbacks one percent initiative passage could necessitate. He has testified annually, before the Joint Finance/Appropriations Committee and acted as general legislative liaison, he said.

Senate retains closed executive session

The ASUI Senate failed two bills Wednesday which would have opened to the ASUI president and vice president executive sessions of the senate and of standing, ad hoc and special committees.

Senate Pro Tem Rick Howard, the author of the bills, said, "The president and vice president should be more of a unit with the senate... I think they should be encouraged to come and find out a little bit more of what we do behind closed doors."

Opponents to the bill said allowing the president into senate sessions and both the vice president and president into committee sessions would hamper the workings of those groups.

"Every once in a while there is a need for closed doors, and if you get too many people on your side of the door it doesn't do much to close it," Senator Jim Wright said.

Senator Kerrin McMahan said, "Executive sessions don't come up that often and when they do it is usually to discuss personnel problems that the regents or administration won't care about anyway. Besides, the president is usually invited to attend executive sessions."

As the bylaws now stand, the president is not allowed at executive sessions of the senate or committees without an invitation. The vice-president is not allowed to attend committee sessions.

In other business, the senate approved a bill transferring $750 from the general administration budget to the senate special projects operational expense account, and allocated $250 to pay the insurance deductible to repair the ASUI car.

Two bills providing for a repairs and replacement reserve account and placing $10,000 into that reserve were sent to a joint committee of finance and rules and regulations.

The senate also tabled a resolution concerning the ASUI opinion of the one percent tax initiative.

like to know...

(Editor's note: Take an athlete. Take a question. Whataya have? You got it, an answer. Today's Argonaut Sports listens to the student athlete and his or her opinions.)

Pat Monasmith
Golf

Not at all. The Athletic Director told my coach that Idaho was going to concentrate on building up the premier money-making sports, football and basketball.

Is the University in general behind your sport?

Terry Neuenschwander
Volleyball

There aren't too many fans. There's not a great awareness of volleyball.

Should the one percent initiative pass, which sport(s) should be cut first? Which should be the last to go?

Not football and not basketball, simply because they pay for themselves. I think if they're gonna do away with any minor sport, they should do away with all of them.

Football should not be cut because of economics. Baseball hasn't been too successful. It'll be tough to decide.

Does sex before a meet or game help or hinder an athlete's performance?

From all what I've read and heard, I understand now it's not supposed to be all that bad. It's supposed to be pretty constructive because it helps you relax.

(no response.)

What's the distinction between varsity athletics and intramurals?

Basically the fact that they're intercollegiate. They can get just as intense in intramurals as they can in a regular sport. I've seen Greek football teams that have more intensity than golfers have ever had!

The level of play. In varsity athletics, it's more competitive, more intense.

What gets you off the most about your sport?

Especially in collegiate golf opposed to high school golf, you'd play other guys who were in football and basketball. Now I can go and just space out, check out the sun, the nice weather, and concentrate on my golf game.

Being able to play as a united team, succeeding to win.

Vandals looking for first win at UNLV

Two win-starved football clubs tangle Saturday night in Las Vegas as Idaho, winless in four tries, tackles UN-Las Vegas, 0-3.

"Nevada-Las Vegas is probably as good a football team as we have played up to this point," said Idaho Coach Jerry Davitch. "Even though they are 0-3 they have a tremendous number of skilled people."

Among those will be Henry Vereen who leads the Rebels in receiving, kickoff returns and punt returns. Punter Steve Gortz is one of the nation's leaders with 24 punts averaging 42.7, while teammate Brian Harris needs only four passes to break the Rebel career record of 103.

	W	L
Northern Arizona	3	0
Montana State	1	0
Montana	1	1
Boise State	0	1
Idaho State	0	1
Weber State	0	1
Idaho	0	1

Idaho didn't suffer any major injuries in last week's close loss to Northern Arizona, and will take 48 players to Flagstaff. The Vandals will operate out of veer offense, while UNLV goes to a pro set. On defense Idaho is expected to stick to its 5-2, and the Rebels will use a 4-3.

The contest can be heard over KRPL, starting at 7:10 p.m. Kickoff's at 7:30.

2-1 decision goes against Vandals

Women's field hockey lost to arch-rival Washington State University Wednesday at home. Idaho and WSU played nearly 55 minutes of scoreless hockey before Kathy Howard broke the ice for Idaho. WSU quickly came back and scored two goals within three minutes, then held off the Vandals to win 2-1. It was Idaho's first loss and their record is now 3-1.

Netters narrowly escape defeat

The women's volleyball team had some trouble with Lewis-Clark State College in a home match Tuesday, but came out on top in three games. Idaho lacked consistency, breaking out on top early in each of the three games, but nearly let them slip away before pulling out a win. Final scores were 16-14, 15-9, 16-14.

Mike McCurdy
Football

It's a lot better than last year.

Teresa Anderson
Field Hockey

Probably more so than people would normally be into hockey because of how well we did last year.

Kole Tonnemaker
Cross Country

I think most of the people in the school aren't really aware too much of cross country. Our friends are interested, but I'd say the school in general isn't.

No comment. I can't say.

I think we should cut everything down rather than cut anything down completely.

Of course I'd like to see cross country and track stay, but realistically the sports that students support the most should be the ones that should stay.

It depends. Some people think it relaxes you. I guess it just depends on who you are playing.

God, I don't know! I've never had any personal experience. Probably helps.

I've heard it's both ways, but I really don't know.

They aren't as organized. Though there are good players that play intramurals. Kirk Allen for example.

Intramurals is for everyone. Varsity is for the more highly skilled, and also people who are willing to put in more time, more body sacrifice.

In varsity athletics there's a lot more pressure on you, a lot more pressure than in intramurals. It's almost like a job; you're out there to perform.

Competition.

Let me think...I know. When "TL" (the goalie) makes a superb save—that really gets me high.

One thing I like is travelling a long way. Getting out and running—it's a way to blow off steam.

scene from seat 6-F — lynne albers

The Ram, a Pullman restaurant, recently revised its menu, and its prices have gone up, while suprisingly its servings have remained the same. The Ram is located at 1100 Johnson Road, the first left before the WSU campus.

In the past The Ram offered grill-it-yourself half-pound hamburgers and a trip through the salad bar which included salad, baked potato and soup, all for $2.95. The same meal now, without soup, costs $3.95, still not a bad price.

The menu is now set up to offer half-pound hamburgers topped with many different types of cheeses, dressings, guacamole and garnishes for $2.95 to $3.50. This meal comes with an already prepared dinner salad and stake fries. For $1 more, you can get a baked potato and visit the salad bar instead of getting the smaller dinner salad and fries.

The Ram also serves grill-it-yourself or grilled-by-the-cook steaks, filets and chopped sirloin. The meats you grill yourself average about 50 cents cheaper. The steak dinners also come with a dinner salad and fries, or with the $1 more salad bar option.

Specialty sandwiches, such as rubeens, ham and cheese, club and turkey sandwiches, are also prepared. And they now offer a wider selection of traditional dinners, such as chicken, shrimp, and fish dinners, which also cost a more-than-traditional price, such as $6.95 to $13.95.

When making its salad bar a $1 extra option, luckily it expanded. Before the salad bar only contained lettuce, carrot and celery sticks, croutons and dressings. Now it also has tomatos, onions, mushrooms, alfalfa sprouts, sunflower seeds, parmesan cheese, dressings and croutons.

The Ram has what I think is one of the best specialty drink bars around. They still make the greatest pina coladas, chi chis and daquiris. On weekends there is usually a wait to get a table, but during the weekdays, especially close to their 5 p.m. dinner hour, it is easy to get a table and get waited on. The Ram also serves pounds of beer.

Closer to home, some Moscow restaurants have gone through minor changes. P.W. Hoseapple's has a new menu. It is now a standard book-style menu with appetizers, salads and soups on the left-hand page, an expanded selection of dinners on the right-hand page, and the nibbly yum-yums has moved to the back page. Their half-pound hamburger selection has increased and so has the price, up to $3.50 from $2.95.

But a nice touch is the addition of the Big Petey sandwich to the back page. It is a large sandwich on a homemade roll covered with different cold cuts, cheese, lettuce, tomatoes, salad oil, vinegar and spices. The Big Petey is reminiscent of the old Hoseapples in Troy.

The Studio is no longer. Now it is the Moscow Mule. There has been no remodeling, but the menu has changed a little. The Mule will be the topic of a future column, so stay tuned.

Local television station schedules dramas, series

KUID-TV is featuring in October, specials, comedies, a new series of Great Performances and the old series, The Prisoner. KUID broadcasts on channel 12.

The life and work of Madam Marie Curie is the topic of a five-part series beginning Oct. 11 at 7 p.m. The series recreates Curie's traumas and triumphs, the discovery of radium, the element which holds the promise of both a cure for cancer and atomic devastation.

The five hour-long programs are set in the authentic atmosphere of the leaky, archaically-equipped laboratory where she worked with her husband, Pierre. Curie eventually received worldwide recognition and two Nobel Prizes, but her life was often filled with tragedy and disappointment.

"Verna: U.S.O. Girl," is a comedy show about a talentless girl who joins the U.S.O. and ends up being the sweetheart of the Armed Forces. Verna is the first in a new season of Great Performance shows to be broadcast Wednesdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. beginning Oct. 11.

Sissy Spacek plays Verna, an untalented girl who dreams of being a star. The show was made with the cooperation of the U.S.O. and U.S. Army and features songs from the 1940's.

A weekly suspense series which was originally broadcast in the 1960s makes its comeback on KUID, The Prisoner. Even then it was ahead of its time with its special effects, and it certainly should be popular today.

"The Prisoner" stars Patrick McGoohan in this unconventional series packed with action, suspense, thrills and mystery which broadcasts every Tuesday at 8 p.m. McGoohan is a former secret agent held prisoner in a self-contained community but who is constantly followed around by a huge balloon.

Concerts set, cancelled and foreign REO cancels

Officially, REO Speedwagon will not perform for homecoming, but Buffalo Rose, a country rock group, will.

The homecoming concert is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 27 from 9-11:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. Admission is $2.

When asked why REO backed out of the concert arrangement, Programs Director Imo Gene Rush said the promoter kept procrastinating and wasn't going to allow enough time for proper promotion. "The promoter was a disc jockey and he was always very busy. He was only going to allow a week for promotion," she said.

Also arranged for homecoming is an alumni dance set for Saturday, Oct. 28. The U of I Jazz Band will play from 8 to midnight and admission will be $1. That dance will be at the Best Western University Inn and everyone is invited.

Watson Bros.

Swing music from the 30s and 40s will be featured in a concert Tuesday, Oct. 10 in the SUB Ballroom. The concert will be from 8-11 p.m. and admission is $1 at the door.

The Baby Watson Brothers, John Pushkin and Steve Askins, play swing music and contemporary country music. Their concert is hosted by the entertainment committee.

The Brothers are on a tour of the Northwest, stopping at colleges in Idaho, Washington, California and Oregon. They aren't being paid for the concert, but are taking all the gate admissions.

Russian folks

Tomorrow night the heart and soul of the Russian people, portrayed in song, dance and instrumental music, comes to Washington State University with the appearance of the Massenkoff Russian Folk Festival.

The troupe will perform at 8 p.m. at the WSU coliseum in the first of the season's WSU-Pullman Artists Series. Tickets are $4, $5 and $6 for non-students; $3 for college students; $2 for high school students and under.

Massenkoff, possessor of an extraordinarily rich soulful bass voice with a range beyond four octaves is accompanied by young spirited dancers and virtuoso balalaikas. He sings traditional and contemporary Russian folk songs in their original language and tempo.

The festival has been a crowd pleaser wherever it appears.

Ritchie leaves politics saying people are ready for change

by Marty Trillhaase

He is a curious mix—something less than a professional, but not quite the inexperienced student politician. Like his classmates, he is more at home in simple dress. Suits seem to reveal his youth.

Yet he is attracted to big time politics.

Last year at this time, David Ritchie was embarking on a venture somewhat rare for a University of Idaho student—he was running for a seat on the Moscow city council.

A major factor in his defeat was the large numbers of unregistered and presumably disinterested student voters.

That reflects a trend. Since gaining the vote in the early 1970's, the 18-20 year-old voters have shown a disappointing apathy towards politics. The group accounts for a huge number of non-voters in the country.

Ritchie, a member of the college Republicans, was the exception. The emphasis is on 'was.' Ritchie is no longer a part of the political machine.

Ritchie's departure from College Republicans also reflects a trend for that party—the shrinking size of its moderate element. "I'm considered in this state to be a liberal Republican. I even have notions of limited gun control so I'm not to be taken seriously," he said.

But Ritchie maintains he is a fiscal conservative. So that leaves him without many ties to the Democratic party as well. There is too much waste in government and it should be cut, Ritchie said. "But that doesn't mean you have to scrap all the social programs we have," he added.

In the days of Ronald Reagan and Phil Crain, where does Ritchie fit into the Republican scheme of things? "Good question. Right now I'm a minority in the party," he said.

The Republican Party can't afford to lose what numbers it now has. Roughly 19 percent of Americans identify themselves with the party. That compares with 42 percent for the Democrats.

The G.O.P. now faces an even greater problem. In a year where the party out of power should make substantial gains in Congress, the G.O.P. is looking at a gain of only a handful of seats. Why? Because, as Washington Post columnist David Broder noted last summer, the party can not find enough qualified candidates willing to make the effort.

But Ritchie sees 1978 as a showdown for the party. The Republicans must make substantial gains this year, he said. If not, "They're going to have to do some serious thinking," he said.

Although the party does run a fairly successful college program, it holds little appeal for most young people.

Ritchie said it may come down to a difference of philosophy between college students and party regulars. "I always felt it was more important for the College Republicans to promote students to the Republicans than to promote Republicans to the students," he said. The regulars don't necessarily agree. "They want you to promote principles," he said.

"I don't know how well we promoted the student ideas. It might be as much our fault as theirs," he said.

One major College Republican accomplishment was the establishment of an Idaho Presidential preference primary. But the concept has been controversial ever since its 1976 inception. Ritchie said much of the debate comes from southern Idaho conservatives. The primary, although a big victory for Reagan, did throw some delegate support to Gerald Ford.

Though the Republicans house a number of influential moderates, such as New York Sen. Jacob Javits, Ritchie noted they are being purged from the party.

A classic example occurred this summer with the defeat of Sen. Clifford Case, R-New Jersey. Case, who relied heavily on moderate and Democratic support, lost the Republican primary to Reagan-backed conservative forces.

Ritchie said it is part of a cycle within the party that first took shape during Barry Goldwater's 1964 presidential campaign. Goldwater, a staunch conservative, defeated then-New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller for the nomination, creating a rift between party moderates and conservatives. Goldwater subsequently lost the presidency to Lyndon Johnson in a titanic landslide.

The moderates who left the party never returned, Ritchie said. Instead, they created a large independent class which also affected the Democrats, he said. "There's a nationwide shift from party to switch-ticket voters," he said.

The G.O.P., aside from holding its own in the White House over the past 24 years, has not done well in congressional and state legislative races. Republicans have controlled Congress only once in that time. Today, Democrats exercise a two-thirds majority in the House of Representatives. Five states have Republican controlled legislatures. Republicans also control the North Dakota state senate.

Beer helps power runner on 300-mile trip

A 300-mile run, perhaps the longest in Idaho's history, begins Saturday at 6 a.m., as University of Idaho sophomore Alan Walker starts from the Administration building in Moscow, hoping to finish a week later on the steps of the Capitol in Boise.

"I think it'll be quite a challenge," said Walker. "It gives me an opportunity to prove something to myself, and do it for a worthy cause, too."

Walker is running for the Idaho Diabetes Association, a non-profit research oriented group, with its Idaho office in Boise. Per mile pledges are being circulated from the ROTC office and SUB information booth, and signatures can be collected until the Oct. 21 deadline. According to Walker, support in Boise is strongest, where the organization hopes to raise around $30,000.

Surprisingly, Walker hasn't worked especially hard on distances in his preparation for the trip. His longest trip so far was a Labor Day run to Lewiston and back.

"In April I started training 1 to 2 miles a day for the run," he said. "This is contrary to the popular belief that you have to roll up a lot of miles. If everything goes right, I can go 50 miles a day - at a minimum, 40."

Diet will be critical for Walker, who credited women's cross country coach Roger Norris for developing his high calorie, rich carbohydrate intake. As far as liquids are concerned, Walker will rely on a half-glucose, half-water solution, and although some traditional coaches might raise their eyebrows, Norris recommended that Walker drink a couple beers before going to bed.

"Coach Norris said that two, or even three beers at the end of the evening meal might be good. They have plenty of carbos and might help me to sleep. The name of the game as far as diet, will be to try and replace calories."

A typical breakfast for the former Tacoma resident will be between 12-20 pancakes, which are drenched in carbohydrates. During breakfast and lunch Walker will attempt to stay away from fats, and noted that "every five miles I can go from a full stomach to feeling almost empty." Albertsons has donated $50 worth of food with the Diabetes Association picking up the rest of the tab.

Walker's support crew will consist of several people including Linda Wendeborn, who will drive Walker's truck, complete with cooking and sleeping facilities, plus an Army ROTC van with flashing lights to protect Walker from the rear.

Still, Walker feels he needs another person to help out.

"It's tough to find people to make a commitment for a week," he said, "but we just need somebody there to help out. Linda's really over-worked, and shouldn't be."

Students learn by experiencing

A year of helping others and learning by doing is being undertaken by some 16 University of Idaho and Lewis-Clark State College students entering the University Year for Action program this fall.

The students will live and work in various communities around the state, gaining experience in areas related to their chosen fields while working with different service oriented organizations.

Experiences range from working with delinquents and alcoholics, teaching and clinical laboratory work to recreation and land use planning work. Varied work situations are included in the program.

Center for economic education proposed to train teachers

Because the Idaho Board of Education has mandated that high schools begin teaching consumer economics by next year, social studies and history teachers are trying to learn as much as they can this year about economics.

The state board has said anyone graduating from an Idaho high school must have taken at least one semester of consumer economics by 1981.

To facilitate teacher training, the Idaho Council on Economic Education (ICEE) would like to see a Center for Economic Education established at the University of Idaho.

Such a center at the U of I, which would be affiliated with and partially funded by the ICEE, could benefit the university and surrounding community in many ways, said Gerald Draayer, ICEE executive director, during an ICEE board meeting in Moscow this week.

ICEE is a non-profit, independent organization whose purpose is to improve the quality of economic education in Idaho schools through teacher education workshops, research and curriculum development. Another focus is adult and consumer education.

"A localized teacher-training and curriculum-development service of this kind can serve the school district better than a state agency can. It can also give national visibility to the host university and offer an updated library of economic education materials," he said.

The center can also help the university to fulfill its "outreach" mission of training students, and act as a vehicle for receiving research grants, Draayer pointed out.

A center for Economic Education has already been established at Boise State University, and the ICEE hopes to see one at Idaho State University as well. The BSU center provides a systematic plan of instruction leading to classroom application and curricular changes for grades kindergarten through 12, said Draayer, an associate professor of economics at BSU. There are 180 such centers in the U.S.

A center at the U of I would be a cooperative organization receiving money for training, research and newsletters from the ICEE. The university would pay half of one professor's position to let him or her direct the center. The university would also provide clerical personnel and space for the center.

"It would be desirable to have a Center for Economic Education at the University of Idaho since one of our professors, Dr. Catherine Hofmann, is already conducting teacher training sessions in economics on her own time under the auspices of the ICEE," said Dr. John Knudsen, acting business college dean. Establishing a center at the university would be far in the future because none of the preliminary steps have yet been taken, he indicated.

An endowed chair in business enterprise was established in the business college in May 1978. The U of I Foundation has already raised $100,000 of the endowment for the chair which is envisioned as a program in the study and advancement of business enterprise.

However, Draayer sees the endowed chair as fulfilling only part of what a Center for Economic Education could.

Fund honors housemother

A memorial fund honoring a former Delta Gamma sorority housemother has been established at the University of Idaho.

Mary Kramer, housemother for the past 10 years, died Sept. 21. The memorial fund in her honor has been established by Delta Gamma sorority members, alumni and friends throughout the Northwest. Contributions may be sent to the UI Foundation, Moscow, Idaho, 83843.

A 50-year resident of Clarkston, Wash., she was the widow of W.E. Kramer, who served as principal of Clarkston schools for 34 years. She was 75 years old at the time of her death.
