Regents talk moving money, tri-state veterinary program

by John Hecht

In one of its shortest meetings in recent years, the University of Idaho Board of Regents took less than 20 minutes to breeze through its agenda Friday, wrapping up its October meeting, scheduled annually in Moscow.

Regent J.P. Munson of Sandpoint, attending his last meeting, asked half-jokingly why it cost the U of I $700 to move an associate professor from Iowa but $3,000 to move a basketball coach from Michigan.

U of I President Richard Gibb explained there is "no set policy" for determining moving cost reimbursement, but it was part of the package when hiring. Such a price, Gibb commented, was part of "negotiating and bargaining."

Milt Small, executive director to the board, said the only guidelines were that moving reimbursement was not to exceed actual cost, nor to violate state policy.

The board also approved a new agreement between Washington State University, Oregon State University and the U of I concerning the tri-state veterinary medicine program (WOI), which will take effect July 1, 1979.

The new agreement will replace two bilateral contracts which the board had ratified in 1976. Implementation of the three-way contract required an increase of $91,000 of the U of I's share of the program budget. Three positions, which are currently underwritten through federal capitation funds, were approved in a modification of the present budget. In addition, $18,000 for an increased research base was given the nod. Idaho's contribution to WOI now will be $966,800.

The board also approved a contract for $8,100 with Eastern Washington University, Cheney, to be channeled through the veterinary program, for research on internal parasites. It also gave permission for the U of I to repair the fire-damaged Forestry Building. The original architects, Hummel, Hummel, Jones and Shawver will be retained to supervise the reconstruction.

In a wrapup session the board asked Small to devise a possible eight meeting per year schedule for the board. It currently meets ten times annually, and by statute must have at least four meetings.

The board will next meet Nov. 9 and 10 in Gooding and Jerome, which will be two days after the general elections when the one percent initiative will be voted on.

Lower enrollment this year

Exactly 7,636 students are presently enrolled at the University of Idaho, according to formal enrollment figures released to the State Board of Education/Board of Regents. This is a 40 student decrease since last fall.

Of those enrolled at the U of I, 6,607 are full-time students and 1,029 are part-time students.

Idaho State University, Pocatello, took an enrollment increase and reported 3,651 full-time students and 1,378 part-time students for a total enrollment of 5,029.

Boise State University, Boise, remained about the same and reported 5,208 full-time and 3,891 part-time students, for a total enrollment of 9,099.

These are only head count figures, however. Full Time Equivalency figures, which are formulated by taking the total number of lower division, upper division and graduate division credits taken and dividing those by 15 credits, 15 credits and 12 credits respectively, showed different results.

U of I reported 4,202 lower division FTE students, 2,510 upper division FTE students and 539 graduate division FTE students. This totals to 7,251 FTE students. These figures do not include law or WAMI students.

ISU reported 2,503 lower division FTE students, 1,475 upper division FTE students and 426 graduate division FTE students for a total of 4,404 FTE students.

BSU reported 4,850 lower division FTE students, 1,417 upper division FTE students, and 234 graduate division FTE students for a total FTE enrollment of 6,501.

Enrollment figures are considered and influence budget allocations and program needs.

Evans and Larsen will not debate

by Marty Trillhaase

Gov. John Evans is taking his message to the people, but not in the form of a debate with Republican challenger Allen Larsen, Evans said while campaigning Thursday at Moscow.

Evans said his time does not permit him to debate "besides being governor of Idaho, or preparing the budget plus appearing as the governor plus appearances as a candidate for governor."

Two previous attempts came close. The first offer was made by the Idaho Press Club. The second came from one of the three Boise commercial television stations. Evans said the Idaho Press forum was "not appropriate." And although it looked promising, the television offer could have been unfair to the other stations, he said.

"We're expressing our opinions on a regular basis," and so a debate is not necessary," Evans said. "Why do I have to stand up with Allen Larsen on the same forum . . . particularly with this schedule?"

Larsen has accused Evans of "hiding behind his incumbency."

"He's more concerned about his reelection than the state of government," Larsen said.

Evans acknowledged that appearance. "That's one thing we're faced with—that criticism. I hope we get our message to the people. It's just a matter that we feel as governor we've been available to the people of Idaho," he said.

Evans criticized his opponent's assertion that state budget surpluses plus increased revenues would enable implementation of the 1 percent initiative without major revision. Evans said the state realizes an annual revenue gain of roughly 10-12 percent. He added that averages out to $35-$45 million per year. But that amount is used to pay cost of living increases to state employees, as well as covering the increased cost of government business, Evans said.

Evans also defended his 1978 veto of an eight mill property tax reduction, saying the move would have amounted to a tax shift to the benefit of utilities and corporations.

He noted homeowners and agricultural land owners now pay a proportionately higher amount of property taxes than they did ten years ago.

Larsen has said corporations and utilities pass along tax increases to consumers. Evans said those consumers are out of state.

Evans said Idaho corporations and utilities recently realized "their highest earnings in their history." And he said the eight mill figure might have done "great harm to our public school system."

What finally emerged with Evans' approval was a relief measure of four mills, sales tax and grocery allowances for senior citizens and more general reductions through the adoption of a new tax code similar to that of the Internal Revenue Service.

He said all removal of incomplete cards must be filed in the registrar's office by the end of the day.

Three regents comment on Gibb

by Sandi Stacki

"I feel a special affinity for Dick Gibb," said Regent A.L. (Butch) Alford. He said this was partially because he headed the search for a new president which chose Gibb.

Alford said the committee was looking for certain qualities in a university leader including administrative expertise, good money managing, and academic leadership. "Gibb gets grades of A in these areas," he said.

But Gibb "fails miserably in ability and perception of full openness in public office," he said. "I hope he will be able to accommodate the open tradition in Idaho and at the UI," said Alford. He added it is a learning job.

Regent J.P. Munson from Sandpoint agreed with Alford, but added that all the blame can't be put on Gibb. Munson explained that where Gibb came from in Indiana keeping certain things closed from the public is a matter of policy.

In Gibb's background "the only person who talks to regents is the president and in secret if possible," said Munson to a group of students in the Women's Center Wednesday.

"President Gibb has done an excellent job in promoting academics, but has problems with public relations and the press," said Regent Janet Hay. But Hay said as president, Gibb is "always under the gun." It's hard to judge how much of the criticism is just because he is new and how much is legitimate, she said.

"I am concerned with Gibb's actions in the area of Affirmative Action and hope he will become more supportive. "I have heard complaints he is not aggressive, but antagonistic to Affirmative Action," Hay said.

To be fair to Gibb, Hay said part of the problem stems from the fiscal crunch and fiscal restraints to come.

Senate to look at food

The ASUI Senate will consider forming an ad hoc committee to evaluate food services operations at its meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the SUB Chiefs Room.

ASUI President Bob Harding said, "Ideally, the committee will first study the procedures by which new policy is implemented, and the problems therein; then it will decide if the present services offered to the students are adequate. From those evaluations, it will make recommendations on how to implement changes in the system."

The senate will also vote on appointments to the ASUI Recreation Board and administrative assistant appointments.

Senators also will consider a senate resolution which "heartily thanks President (Richard) Gibb (university president) for his leadership and efforts during his first year in office at the University of Idaho."

Also, a senate resolution concerning the one percent tax initiative, which was tabled last week, will be discussed.

Truby, Symms to talk farms

How to improve the farmer's lot is the topic for the first debate between Rep. Steve Symms and his Democrat Challenger Roy Truby.

The session will begin at 7 p.m. tonight at the KUID television station. It will be broadcast live over KUID-TV and KUID-FM. Public attendance has been ruled out as a result of limited space.

Law school dean Cliff Thompson will moderate the debate. It is one of two scheduled for the opponents. The program is sponsored by the Idaho Press Club.

Attorney general candidate Leroy discusses tax initiative

by John Hecht

Suggesting there are defects in the measure as it will be presented to the voters, Republican attorney general candidate David Leroy said he will still vote for Initiative 1. However, his vote will come with reservations.

"It is the objective of the next attorney general to insure compliance," Leroy said. "Revision of the initiative is not an issue; the need is painfully obvious," he said.

Leroy is opposed for the position by Mike Wetherell of Boise. They are vying to fill the vacancy to be created by the retirement of incumbent Wayne Kidwell.

Leroy feels there are two messages from the public the initiative is delivering. The first is the "great need" for property tax reform. The second, he said, is the people of Idaho wish to see limitations on government and reductions of inefficiencies, although he feels the feeling is mostly directed at the federal government.

"There are gross inadequacies in the present statutes, and this will be an opportunity to eliminate many problems," he said.

He insisted education would not be hurt by the passage of the initiative. As both a former Associated Students University of Idaho President and now as a candidate, he "believes strongly" access to a "so-called free public education" or at least one of "modest expense ought to be guarded." Leroy would write an official opinion, if requested, whether the mandatory student fee is tuition or not, without an eye toward the political ramifications of the issue, he said.

Leroy said the attorney general's office probably drafts two-thirds of the legislation which is introduced each session. He pointed out much of the tax regulation is drawn up by the deputy attorney general who serves in the Tax Commission office.

"The margin of error in redrafting those tax concepts (in the initiative) is small," he said. "There is very little time available, as the average session is about 60-65 days. A mistake (in language) could cost the state millions of dollars."

Leroy sees three problem areas in the initiative as presented: its constitutionality, its ambiguity and drafting errors. He pointed to difficulties with the language calling for different requirements for changes in the law than the Idaho Constitution states. He said there also would be need to change definitions in the initiative to reflect current Idaho Code.

He said he would ask the legislature to pass a bill to bring all attorneys employed by state agencies and departments under the office of attorney general, probably including those who work for the universities. He said he believes this would prevent duplication of services and potential conflicts of legal opinion. He said he is concerned with the possibility of lawsuits between state agencies if there is coordination.

Leroy is a graduate of the U of I and received his law degree here in 1971. He took a Master of Laws from New York University, and after two years of practice in that city joined the Ada County Prosecutor's office. He was elected prosecuting attorney in 1974, and reelected two years later.

He pointed out the Ada County Prosecutor has the second largest public legal staff in the state, with only the attorney general's larger. He has been engaged with aspects of property tax for the last five years, he said, as his office provides service to the Ada County Commissioners, and has handled 3,000 tax appeals for that body when it sits as board of adjusters.

Ominous implications

The regents' decision to approve a $14 million multi-purpose pavilion for Boise State University is disgusting.

First, the decision which was justified by "need" shafts BSU students with an additional $40 per semester in fees. Forty dollars doesn't seem like much compared to $14 million, but for some students, $40 more per semester is a hardship.

Secondly, the decision was a bad move in these, the days of Initiative One. While some taxpayers are, through the proposed initiative, saying "cut back," does it make sense to start building a multi-purpose pavilion? For that matter, how multi-purpose is the pavilion? If it is primarily a sports pavilion, does that make sense when academic programs face possible cutbacks?

Third, the decision may set a precedent for University of Idaho students. The east end facility is something that could be called a "need," the same as the BSU pavilion. Approval of the east end facility would mean a fee increase for Idaho students. By extension, the administration's proposed $29 per semester student services fee could be called a "need." And that proposal will probably see some revision before being resubmitted to the regents—the same pattern the BSU pavilion proposal followed.

The implications for Idaho students are frightening.

We print what you say

ASUI President Bob Harding recently remarked that he was the Argonaut scape goat. He seems to feel we state his name and views in the paper a little too often.

Sorry Bob, but as the chief representative of the student body, who supposedly speaks for the students, whose name do you think should be in the student newspaper more than yours?

If you hadn't said you were the scapegoat, your words wouldn't be taking this space. We only print the things you say and do. If anybody makes you a goat, it's you.

reorganizing the ASUI

In past semesters, I have written a number of uncomplimentary columns about the ASUI Senate. Some Senators admitted my complaints were valid. But, they asked, why didn't I ever offer any positive suggestions about how they could do things differently? Such an invitation is too tempting to resist. In response, I have developed a plan for reorganizing the ASUI.

First, steps must be taken to insure the independence of the Communications Department. The student newspaper, through editorials and the letters column, often provides a better voice for student views than the senate does. (The Regents read the Argonaut.) We must make sure that this voice can be heard. And it is obvious that the student media must have the freedom to criticize the student government without fear of retribution. John Hecht, in a column at the end of last semester, suggested the creation of an independent Comm Board that would control a specified portion of the ASUI activity fee. This board would have complete control of the formulation of communications policy and the hiring of media heads. I support this idea.

Secondly, the senate must be freed from fussing over the details of operating those ASUI departments that provide student services and extracurricular activities. The main purpose of a student government is to deal with issues that have a major effect on the lives of students, such as academic policy and campus housing operations. It must represent student views on such issues to the university administration and the Board of Regents. But at present, the senate wastes three quarters of its time on transferring money from one portion of the student services budget to another, and rarely deals with any major issue. (Witness the way it has ignored the one percent contingency budget and the proposal to expend the Kibbie Dome.)

To remedy this situation, I suggest the creation of an appointed Finance Board, to be chaired by the ASUI Finance Manager. The Finance Board would be responsible for drawing up the ASUI budget. The budget would then go to the senate for approval, and the senate would be free to revise the budget as it saw fit. The Finance Board would also control budget transfers. The senate would not normally act on these transfers, but could veto any actions of the board.

At present, there are four student representatives on the Faculty Council, in addition to the 13-member ASUI Senate. I suggest that the number of student Faculty Council representatives be increased to seven, and the number of ASUI Senators decreased to seven. The senate should then take over the responsibility of representing students on the Faculty Council. That is, the ASUI Senators and the student Faculty Council representatives would be the same people.

Since the Faculty Council is part of the governing structure of the university, this would give the senate a direct effect on university policy (albeit a small one) rather than the mere advisory role it has now. This move would also solve the problem the senate and student Faculty Council representatives have had in coordinating their efforts. The senate would continue to hold its own meetings, and could still consider issues outside the scope of the Faculty Council. A smaller senate could work more efficiently, and competition for senate seats would be greater with fewer open positions. (At present, there is a chronic shortage of qualified Senate candidates.)

The present system of living group representation by individual senators is a failure, and should be abandoned. Many senators neglect to visit their living groups, and the 53 percent of the students who live off campus are not represented. Instead, the senate should hold student seminars every two weeks, much as off-campus seminars are conducted now.

Finally, the Gem of the Mountains should be eliminated, and the golf course shut down. The yearbook costs more than it's worth, and the golf course is used by very few students and is outside the purpose of a student government.

Many ASUI officials insist that the present ASUI structure is viable because they are afraid to admit the weaknesses in the present system and try to overcome them. As a result, our student "government" has become a joke, and few first-rate people are willing to become involved in the ASUI. Students cannot rely on the senate to represent their interests to the administration and Regents. Much of this is not the fault of individual senators, but of an ASUI structure that prevents them from being effective.

My plan for reorganizing the ASUI is probably not perfect. I am sure that the senate could devise other ways of restructuring the ASUI. In that case, I encourage them to come up with something better. The time for reform is now.

Night visitors

Editor,

Recently the university farms have experienced problems with late evening visitors. People have entered the barns and destroyed significant quantities of a special type of grass hay and straw purchased for research projects. In addition, they have littered the facilities and left gates open letting livestock loose. The university farms are open for supervised visits during normal working hours and visitors are welcome, but night visitation will not be tolerated and trespassers will be subject to prosecution.

The Animal Sciences Department has to maintain security for several reasons. The risk of fire is extremely high. One misplaced cigarette or match can result in an inferno which is extremely fast-spreading and can cause not only destruction of the barn and adjacent buildings, but also all the livestock and any occupants who may be trapped within the facility or in adjacent homes. Several of our barns contain valuable equipment and livestock research records which would be difficult, if not impossible, to replace.

On several occasions livestock have been turned loose. This is detrimental to our research program and creates a traffic hazard to any motorist encountering stray livestock. It requires much labor and inconvenience to return the livestock to their proper location and to correct the

Pro-life satirizes

Editor,

I have had it up to here with these goody-goody Christians trying to find out if their morals will fit down everybody else's throat!

Let me give a couple of examples. At registration, a lot of you probably saw the booth that the Evangelical Abolitionist Organization had set up. Behind the booth was a great big poster designed to cause an emotional reaction. It was a picture of a mother being separated from her children at the Charleston slave market. How these people could do something that is in such poor taste is beyond me! If they don't like slavery, that's fine. Nobody is forcing them to go out and buy a slave. But don't impose your morals on us!

The second example has to do with the cartoons that they have been running in the Argonaut. With no statistics or facts of any kind, they have been trying to say that slavery is a form of human rights violations. As any student of logic can tell you, this can't be the case unless the slaves are human. And the Supreme Court has recently decided in the Dred Scott Decision that blacks are not persons. So the law is with us. But I don't think God is.

Enough with the satire. Abortion is murder.

We love children, so we're against it. Abortion also destroys and hardens the adults involved. Because we love them too, we want to help. Thanks.

Chain reaction

Editor,

Millions of Americans break the law each day. The law which restricts the use of marijuana.

At the end of spring semester, more from curiosity than anything else, I attempted to convince a number of my cannabis consuming acquaintances to turn themselves in. Given adequate publicity, I am willing to turn myself in, if four other law breakers do it with me.

The idea is this. Marijuana smokers are ordinary citizens, and there are many. Most violate only drug laws; they (we) are not only ordinary citizens, they are generally 'good' citizens as well. As long as surreptitious smokers maintain a profile of being 'good', they go unhassled. The hypocrisy, the law (which must be bad, if marijuana users are publicly perceived as being 'good', or at least normal), is perpetuated ad infinitum.

If everyone was honest, anti-marijuana legislation could not exist. The U.S. has neither the facilities nor the economy to prosecute every dope smoker.

If a group of people were to turn themselves in simultaneously, might not a chain reaction develop across the country? If one person were to attempt this individually, he/she would be regarded as eccentric or insane. But a group? Their action could be perceived as a dedicated appeal to the nation's sense of honesty and justice.

Of course, if a chain reaction failed to materialize, a small group would probably get shafted. The smaller the group, the more critical the risk.

Of the 13 marijuana users I surveyed (excluding myself), only one said he/she would go along with the idea if there were four others. Four said they would turn themselves in if there was a group of 15, eight said they would participate in a group of 25, and 12 said they would do it if there was a total of 49 others. One person said he/she wouldn't turn him/herself in under any conditions, because a chain reaction of this nature would threaten our national security. But another acquaintance of mine, who doesn't indulge in the killer weed, said he/she would go along if there were 24 others, just for the hell of it. The more, the merrier.

Where are you, NORML? Name withheld upon request

Corrections

Due to production problems in the last issue, the last line in a letter to the editor from Ann L. Cosho should have read "those who do not believe in abortion should not get one."

Also in K. Barnard's editorial, the next to last sentence should have read "Senator Kerrin McMahan recognized in her closing communication the danger of falling into such games."

Finally, Boise State University students will, with an additional $40 increase, pay $225 per semester in student fees. University of Idaho students currently pay $219 per semester in fees.

Second place goes to UI

The Boise State Invitational saw the University of Idaho field hockey team earn a 3-1 record, bringing their season record to 6-2.

In taking second place, the women took 1-0 victories over Boise State, Brigham Young, and Northwest Nazarene, before falling 2-0 to Southern Oregon State.

Idaho will be at home this weekend, playing host to Western Washington, Northwest Nazarene and Central Washington. The games will be at the West Wallace Fields Friday at 4 p.m. and Saturday starting at 9 a.m.

Netters nab three wins

The women's volleyball team placed second in a tournament at Boise State University this weekend. The women defeated Northwest Nazarene, Boise State, and Eastern Oregon State, while losing only to Idaho State.

A new defense helped turn the team around and raised their season record to 7-4 after a dismal 0-3 start.

Against Eastern Oregon the women were behind in the first game 6-13, but came back to win 18-16. "They kept their composure," commented coach Amanda Burk. "I was excited to see that. We are beginning to realize our potential."

Soccer club blanks foe

by Martin Renzhofer

In the first part of a soccer doubleheader Saturday, Eastern Washington fell to the University of Idaho soccer club 3-0 in the Kibbie Dome.

It was a close first half with Idaho leading on the strength of a Richard Doss goal. But in the second half Idaho dominated play as Charlie Nathan and Ike Ofodu each scored to put the game out of reach. Goalie Ron Hall made three saves to keep Eastern Washington scoreless.

The second game of the day found the Dynamos of Idaho losing to North Idaho College, 4-0. There were several injuries in the game and one player for the Dynamos left with a broken hand.

Sunday the Dynamos forfeited a match with the Idaho soccer club due to lack of players. Idaho soccer club's record is now 4-0, while the Dynamos' win and loss record is 0-3.

Computer Careers at Amdahl...

Where Your Ideas are Valuable.

Computer professionals are aware that today's most advanced large-system technology was developed by a company that, not too long ago, was virtually unknown. It was during late 1975 that the company first attracted widespread industry attention. Now, Amdahl is a major contender in the large systems market: a group of highly talented high technologists producing the world's highest performing general purpose computers, the V/5, V/6 and V/7. With a worldwide installed base of 470 series systems rapidly approaching a half-billion dollars.

Although we are growing at a rapid pace, we are committed to retaining the same creative environment that characterized the company when we began. We are still small by computer industry comparisons.

We are still friendly. And we still enjoy attacking tasks because we think it's fun. We understand that if you're the kind of person who has bright ideas, you need room to make discoveries and explore your talents. You need recognition for your achievements. Appropriate reward for your efforts. And the chance for your ideas to be heard.

You can expect to find these things at Amdahl. So if you're about to receive a BS or advanced degree in electrical engineering or computer sciences, and consider yourself a cut above your classmates in competence, enthusiasm and potential, why not consider a career at Amdahl? You may be surprised at what your ideas are worth.

Amdahl Corporation, 1250 East Arques Avenue, Sunnyvale, California 94086. We are an equal opportunity employer.

We are seeking exceptional people at all degree levels in electrical engineering and computer science. Successful applicants will find themselves meaningfully involved in projects related to the conceptualization, design, development, test, and manufacture of large, advanced technology computers and supporting software. Some of these projects incorporate the use of mini or micro computers.

Rebels thrash Idaho 53-14

"Ooh Las Vegas, ain't no place for a poor boy like me... Everytime I hit your crystal city you know you make a wreck outta me."

-Emmalou Harris

by Scott Tudehope

"We finally played poorly," commented Idaho football coach Jerry Davitch after Saturday night's 53-14 loss to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

The Vandals are now 0-5, while the Rebels earned their first win of the season to be 1-3.

Turnovers once again plagued the Idaho squad, as it coughed up four fumbles and was intercepted three times. In all the Vandals set up their opponents five times inside the Idaho 30, twice inside the 20.

Three plays after taking the opening kickoff, starting quarterback Mike McCurdy made a poor pitch and Vegas safety Lucien Hardy recovered on the Idaho 21. But the Vandal defense held, and UNLV had to settle for a 36 yard field goal.

The first play after the Rebel kickoff, McCurdy fumbled again, and UNLV's Dave Beall recovered it on the 23. Six plays later, Russell Ellis punched it in from the two.

On Idaho's next possession, McCurdy threw an interception, which set up yet another Rebel score, this time on a Doug Robertson plunge from the two. A Jim Gaetano conversion made 17-0.

Finally after the next kickoff, Idaho hung on to the ball inside its turf. Yet another fumble was to appear as the Vandal drive died on the Vegas 20. This time Idaho recovered but Jeff Wellman's field goal attempt was wide and Vegas took over.

Five plays and one Vandal penalty later, UNLV went the distance to score again to lead 24-0 with 2:41 still to go in the first quarter.

Second quarter play saw the Vandals get stuck with a safety. With the help of three Vegas penalties, Idaho replacement quarterback Jay Goodenbour drove his team 36 yards and a score, his first of the season. The two-point conversion failed and the score at half was 26-6.

With reserves in by the third quarter, a Vegas scoring spree silenced any hopes of a Vandal comeback as Robertson scored his second one of the night on a 5-yard run, Sam Greene and Leon Walker on 26-yard runs, and Brian Harris on a 15-yard pass from Larry Gentry.

Idaho scored in the final quarter on a 1 yard run by Glen White and Goodenbour converted.

Idaho will look for its first win over conference opponent University of Montana this Saturday at 1 p.m. PDT.

Idaho regents first to ratify vet program

The University of Idaho Board of Regents took the lead Friday and ratified Idaho's portion of a three-state cooperative veterinary education pact.

The cooperative agreement, known as the Washington, Oregon and Idaho regional program in veterinary medical education, will tie Washington State University, Oregon State University and the U of I together in a three-way agreement. Previously there were separate agreements between WSU and U of I and between WSU and OSU for cooperation in veterinary medical education.

The ratification by the regents marks the first formal step in the establishment of the program. The WSU Board of Regents, the Oregon State Board of Higher Education and the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education must still give their approval to the pact.

All participating universities are expected to have approved their portions of the pact before the annual higher education commission meeting in February. Final approval for the agreement is then expected.

Idaho will sponsor 15 students in each year's entering class of 106 students at the WSU college of Veterinary Medicine under the agreement. Idaho students will spend most of their time on the WSU campus.

Besides funding, U of I will provide a food animal teaching clinic.

Hospital offers scholarships

The Caldwell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, Inc. will award mid-year scholarships to students enrolled in patient-related health career fields at an approved trade program center, nursing school, college or university in Idaho according to an auxiliary release.

The amount of each award will be determined by the cost of training and individual need of each applicant selected.

For information on requirements and on how to apply, inquire at the U of I financial aids office.

Eating at the Moscow Mule was a kick, in the shorts, stomach and pocket book.

On first walking into the Mule formerly the Studio at 505 So. Main, I was encouraged to see tasteful wall hangings, Tiffany lights and a crowd. Surely a restaurant serving poor food isn't crowded. But I was wrong.

A friend and I waited only five minutes to get seated, but while being escorted to our table a customer whispered, "Don't eat here." I should have clutched my skirts around my knees and ran. I stayed, determined to see what was attracting the crowd to Moscow Mule.

The menu at first was encouraging. The wine list features Preston wines from Pasco, Wash. The house drinks had such disgusting names, they didn't look very appropriate across the page

Garden of delight's topic cultivated at city hall

A program on gardening will be presented Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the Moscow City Hall.

This program is free and the sixth in the Moscow-Latah County Library's series "At Ease: What to do in Moscow When You're Not Working/Studying."

Louise Trail will discuss the possibilities for growing and using herbs in the Moscow area, then share some recipes from St. Anne cut prime rib.

The dinner menu ranged from $5.50 for a 12 oz. chopped sirloin or barbecued beef, up to the highest-priced dinner, $8.25 for a 10 oz. New York cut steak. Mule claims their beef is their speciality and it must be since they had run out of prime rib by 4 p.m. on Sunday.

All the dinners come with a choice of salad or soup, and baked potato or rice. The french onion soup came in a huge bowl and the salad was plentiful and crisp so things were still looking pretty good for the Mule, after I had to choose another dressing because they ran out.

Our dinners finally came much later than normal. It took over half an hour to get our meals after placing the orders. And it would have been better if they had never come at all. The baked potatoes were still crunchy and were undercooked, the carrots hadn't been pared and were dry, the rice bed was tasteless and tough. My friend complained that her kabob was dry and tasteless, even though the menu said the kabob was marinated in wine. My Idaho trout was alright; nothing to write home about, though.

We finished up the meal with a piece of cheesecake that would have choked a robin and for $1.50 I expected a much larger piece.

In all fairness I have to report the waiter explained it was a bad night. Sunday afternoon and evening, the Mule offers a spaghetti feed, and the regular chef and waiters were gone. The owner was cooking, and the waiter said he was a great cook. That is questionable.

I was told that dinner on a week night went much smoother and that I should come back when the regular cooks and waiters were there. But Sunday night is usually when most dormitory and Greek residents go out for dinner since their cooks are off. And I feel they should try to make Sunday one of their better nights.
