Only undergraduates escape student fee increase barrage

by Marty Trillhaase

Pocatello—Undergraduate resident students will be spared tuition increases approved by the Board of Regents Thursday and Friday.

But for non-resident, graduate, law and foreign student, the board's actions mean additional financial burdens.

The board Friday approved the following:

—A $25 per semester increase in the fee paid by graduate students.

—A $50 per semester increase in tuition charged students who are not residents of the U.S.

—A $25 per semester increase in the fee charged of law students.

—Partial elimination of tuition waivers for university employees and their spouses. Waivers will continue to cover portions of the fees going toward auxiliary services such as the ASUI.

Those increases follow the board's approval of a $150 per semester increase in tuition charged of non-residents.

The tuition increases come in the wake of a 2 percent increase in the state appropriation to higher education. On paper that looks like an increase. But it amounts to a smaller-than-usual increase which does not compensate for inflationary costs and employee salary increases.

To help higher education deal with shrunken budgets, the Idaho Legislature authorized the board to raise $586,000 in miscellaneous receipts. Although the projected revenues from the approved tuition increases are somewhat speculative, the actions are expected to raise $157,000 more than that.

That revenue is included in the $68.2 million budgeted for higher education by the Legislature. The board tentatively distributed the amount to the four state supported colleges and universities on a historical percentage basis.

Should the board follow the tentative action, the distribution would be as follows:

—The U of I would receive $28.2 million or roughly 41 percent of the total budget.

—Lewis-Clark State College would receive $3.2 million or about 4.8 percent.

—Boise State University would be allocated $17.9 million or roughly 26.5 percent.

—Idaho State University would receive $18.5 million or roughly 27.3 percent.

Those figures are not inflexible. The board is set to meet April 17 in Boise to make the final decision.

The board is also scheduled to decide at that time whether to declare a state of financial exigency. Exigency is a legal term meaning a state of emergency. Such a declaration would in effect give the institutions permission to lay off tenured faculty members.

Still awaiting regent approval is the administration's proposed $18 per semester increase in the uniform student fee, a proposed $500 per semester increase in tuition paid by WAMI students, and a proposed $400 increase in tuition paid by WOI veterinary medicine students.

The administration withdrew those proposals Thursday, opting to set in motion the process mandated by the state Administrative Procedures Act. That law calls for notification through publication of proposed rule changes by state agencies as well as hearings on these changes.

The ASUI Senate went on record last week opposing the bulk of the fee increases including those earmarked for I.D. cards and intercollegiate sports.

The senate resolutions to that effect were submitted to the regents. The only student presentation at the regent's meeting was made against the foreign student tuition increase.

ASUI President Rick Howard told the board the increase was opposed by the senate because it was felt foreign students could not easily absorb it. Roughly 42 percent of foreign students attending the U of I are self supporting Howard said. He added a host of federal regulations make it difficult at best for those students to hold jobs or receive financial assistance.

Woman eludes nighttime attack, urges prompt reporting of trouble

by Eddie Sue Judy

She didn't see where he came from. But then, she wasn't watching. She had just left work and friends, was near her home and felt secure. She wasn't concerned, even when she noticed he was running after her.

"I thought, 'Oh, the guy's just jogging home.'"

Then he stopped her and aggressively asked her what she'd think of having sex with him. When she vehemently refused, he struck her closed-fisted in the face and she ran, screaming. Her face was swollen for days and, though the incident was before spring break, she still bears a lump.

The victim, who asked her name be withheld, is from a large Eastern city, but the incident occurred here in Moscow.

"People have told me, 'This is Moscow. You don't have to worry.' But there are new people here. Everybody doesn't know everybody like they think they do."

She was in such a state of shock, she said, that all she thought of doing was going home, caring for her injury and telling a few friends about the incident. She called the police at the urging of her friends, but not until the next day. She regrets the delay.

"The first thing I should have done is call the cops. That night it was fresh in my mind. The guy probably would have had the same clothes on and we might have driven around and I might have spotted him. Now I'd never be able to identify the guy."

Reporting incidents late or not reporting them at all poses a major obstacle to police trying to check assault and rape in the community, according to Pam Moody, a Moscow Police Department officer.

"Once three or four days have gone by there's a destruction of evidence," Moody said.

Nightline has received reports of alleged rapes or attempted rapes the victims never reported to the police, Moody said. The callers did not give Nightline pertinent information such as assailants' descriptions or assault locations.

Even if the police knew a victim's identity, "We don't want to approach them if they don't want to approach us. That's intruding on their space," Moody said. But, she emphasized, victims should be aware that "it might happen again."

The police don't want to cause a panic over assaults and rapes, but they do want to build an awareness that the incidents happen, Moody said.

When a victim calls to report a rape or attempted rape, "we realize it's a traumatic thing and we try to be sensitive," Moody said. The officers will try to get the victim to go to the hospital, both to find and care for any injuries and to collect evidence. They will try to have a rape counselling person at the hospital.

Three women officers work on the Moscow Police Department and, even if one is not on duty, one can nearly always be reached if a victim prefers a female officer. Department dispatchers are trained to receive rape reports, Moody said.

Moody acknowledged that making a report can be emotionally stressful for the victim, but said, "I think the possibility that reporting a crime could stop it from happening again outweighs that by far."

The woman approached and struck before spring break admonished others to report incidents promptly.

"If that had happened where I grew up, the police would have come and asked a lot of questions and that would have been the end of it. But here it looks as though they really are concerned and would try to do something about it."

The woman, whose job often requires she go home after dark, said, "I refuse to go home earlier just because I got jumped. But now I go right down the middle of the street."

"The street where I was jumped was bordered with trees and bushes. There were no houses—and no lights. I'm not saying the city should line every spot with lights, but where there are no houses or anything it should be well lighted."

"You can't let people go around hurting other people for no reason."

this summer!

You can go to an all expense paid six-week summer camp this summer. You'll earn about $600.00, compete for a full two-year scholarship and prepare yourself to earn another $2500.00 during your next two years of college (all that in addition to the scholarship you might win).

You'll be preparing yourself for a career which starts at $12,000.00 per year, plus benefits worth thousands of dollars more. I know because I went last year and I'm getting $100.00 per month while attending school. Oh yes, I got a scholarship, too. And the summer camp doesn't obligate you for a thing... not even to accept the scholarship should you win one!

ASUI Report

Senate to re-examine minority group

The ASUI Senate Wednesday will consider a bill proposing a minority students awareness committee. The meeting is at 7 p.m. in the SUB Chiefs Room.

The bill, proposed by senator Jim Wright, would form a committee of four members and a chairman. The committee would be open to all students. It would "organize and supervise ASUI programs designed to increase cultural education for all ASUI members," and receive funding through a special ASUI allocation.

A bill proposing a similar committee comprised of only non-foreign, non-Caucasian students failed the senate last week after an hour of debate.

In other business, the senate will consider several bills preparing for the April 25 ASUI general election. Senators will look at bills:

- requiring the election board chairman to notify all candidates of the final outcome of the election within 48 hours of the closing of the polling booths.

- placing two advisory questions concerning funding ASUI services on the ballot.

- appointing members to the ASUI Election Board.

- changing polling booth hours.

- eliminating polling booths from the biology, education, law and forestry buildings.

A bill allowing two faculty members to serve on the SUBGold Course Board will be sent to committee.

Howard, Wani talk fee increase opposition

The students don't want an ASUI fee increase, and the ASUI doesn't need a fee increase, according to ASUI President Rick Howard and Senator Juko Wani.

The Argonaut recently has encouraged such a fee increase, and Howard and Wani explained their opposition to the idea Monday.

"Most of the people in the living groups I've visited asked a lot of questions," Howard said. "Students aren't really opposed to a reasonable increase, but they want us to look at the programs we have now and see if some cuts can't be made."

"So that's what we're going to do. I'm going to look at programs with the subsidies that are growing the fastest. If they're expanding and bringing in more money that's fine, but if a program gets more and more subsidy money each year and services stay the same then something is not right."

Wani, who is also chairman of the ASUI

Senate Finance Committee, agreed.

"When I talk to my living groups, they don't support a fee increase. We need to be putting what money we have into funding existing programs," he said. "Now most of the programs have reached their level of growth, I think. They don't need to grow any more."

"I'm also opposed to a fee increase because this is one area where the student has some control," he continued. "I can say 'no,' I don't want a fee increase, and my voice will be heard."

Both agreed there was room to cut in most departments.

"Anytime you have a student operation there is going to be some fat and inefficiency," Howard said. "That's what we have to examine."

ASUI fees are $15.75 per semester now. There has not been an ASUI fee increase since 1969.

Noon programs highlight lifestyles

Family lifestyles will be the focus of April's Tuesday noon programs at the Women's Center.

The programs are in conjunction with a series of feature stories on family lifestyles appearing in the Daily Idahonian. The articles, written by Susan Sample, are to appear Mondays. The people about whom the articles are written will be at the Women's Center the following day to discuss their family lifestyles.

The first program, addressing single fatherhood, was last Tuesday, but three remain. Today's discussion will be on the extended family. The April 17 discussion will be on unwed motherhood.

This month's Wednesday noon brown bag series will be a variety pack. This Wednesday will feature a program on divorce and community property, presented by the Law Women's Caucus of the College of Law.

No check-cashing syndrome

Every year about this time, Moscow retailers experience what could be referred to as "the no check-cashing syndrome." It's apparent by the signs.

Everywhere in Moscow these days are signs saying, "No checks accepted," "Checks accepted only for amount of purchase," "Student checks require summer address" or "No student checks."

This is understandable as merchants fear the possibility of having a student write a bad check and then leave town.

It's too bad merchants must resort to such policies, as students rely on checks as a way to make a tight budget work. (One is more likely to spend $5 out-of-the-pocket than to sign a check for the same amount.) Likewise, merchants rely on students for much of their business.

Unfortunately, identification cards and trust are the only guarantees merchants have that the checks they take won't bounce.

It's a shame that a minority of not-so-honest check writers make it harder on the rest of us.

But the fact is that they do.

With a little effort, students could help alleviate much of the problem. We don't profess to know what alternatives might work.

But this much we do know: with more communication between local business leaders and student groups, a workable method of getting around the check syndrome might be found.

Granted this probably won't help cash your checks this spring.

But it may in the future. At any rate it would be a step in the right direction.

Regents rock foreign boat

An academic institution, we have been told, is above the vulgarities of cost-accounting.

But that apparently is no longer true. And for a minority of U of I students, changing institutional values may mean the difference between the rewards of education promised themselves and their people.

Foreign students have come to American universities for the tools they need to lead their people out of poverty.

Traditionally, American universities, including the U of I, accepted these students, realizing they represented a financial loss. But in the spirit of brotherhood, not to mention good public relations, the institutions were willing to take the loss.

Apparently that spirit of brotherhood has become too costly in the days of the 1 percent.

In order to deal with the fiscal realities resulting from a smaller than usual state appropriation increase, the Board of Regents last week approved a series of fee and tuition increase—including a $50 per semester increase specifically to be paid by foreign students.

The official rationale used by some officials was that any student wealthy enough to attend college in a foreign country was in a position to afford a "moderate" tuition increase.

Unfortunately, the rationale was full of holes as noted by the ASUI Senate last week. Among the points raised by the ASUI senate were:

—the fact that 42 percent of foreign students attending the U of I are virtually self-supporting.

—Foreign students with non-resident status (as defined by the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization) can not qualify for any federal or state guarantee loan program.

—Under existing laws, foreign students are forbidden in most cases to hold jobs. Exceptions are granted only in the event that proof of extreme financial need is given.

—The imposition of tuition increases is not considered an example of extreme financial need.

Despite the strong points raised by students, the regents approved the tuition increase, putting foreign students in a real vice.

A number of explanations may be given; each probably pointing to some noble reason. But the symbolic nature of this act is anything but noble. The regents have come to embrace a lifeboat ethic toward fee increases.

That means avoiding fee increases for the largest number possible—namely the resident students who pay taxes along with their parents.

It's comforting as a resident to have such a favored seat. But it is disheartening to watch the hopes and dreams of others not as fortunate being tipped overboard.

Many thanks

Editor,

We should like to thank the following living groups for participating in last week's "Everything Goes for M.D.A." event held in the Kibbie Dome.

The following living groups helped raise $280 for the Muscular Dystrophy—Alpha Chi Omega, Houston Hall, Kappa Alpha Theta, McCoy Hall, Delta Gamma, Pi Beta Phi, Campbell Hall, Gamma Phi Beta, Delta Chi, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Farmhouse, Gray Loess Hall, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Delta Sigma Phi, Delta Tau Delta, Willis Sweet Hall, Targhee Hall, Pi Kappa Alpha, Phi Delta Theta.

Also, a special thanks to Moscow Trophy and Sign which donated the plaques and trophy for the event.

Finally, congratulations to Kappa Alpha Theta team number one for winning the women's competition, and Delta Sigma Phi the men's winner and Gamma Phi Beta the living group which won the outstanding living group participation trophy.

Thanks for joy

Editor,

I want to thank Don Hite for the joy his response in Tuesday's Argonaut brought to me. Quote: "Finally, Mr. Rast, just how do you know that Jesus is coming back very soon? Many people have been saying that same thing for almost 2,000 years, etc."

Although nearly all the prophecy of the end days has been fulfilled, there was one left and it bothered me, until I read Mr. Hite's 'response'. It is from 2 Peter: 3:3 & 4 "Know this first of all, that in the last days mockers will come with their mocking, following after their own lusts, and saying, "Where is the promise of His coming? For ever since the fathers fell asleep, all continues just as it was from the beginning of creation."

Praise God! He is coming soon! Behold even at the door!

Spares...or strikes?

Editor,

The Bowling Club would like to thank the Argonaut for listing the results of the U of I Bowling Invitational. There are, however, several errors and clarifications. The more prominent are as follows:

1. The U of I men's team won the first place team trophy. They did not take second place.

2. Washington State University won the traveling trophy by a combination of the men's and women's team scores.

3. Idaho State University did not compete in the men's division.

The tournament director, assistant director, and the game room manager all worked hard to make this tournament a success. They brought together 12 teams from the Pacific Northwest to make this the second largest tournament in the region. (Boise State, by virtue of the schools in Utah, had the largest.)

It's too bad that the Argonaut (which is one door away from the Gameraom) didn't see fit to cover such a large tourney, while the Idahonian (which is about three blocks away) not only printed the correct results but also team member's names and averages.

This year our tournament was a success. Next year it will be even better because the sports editor from the Argonaut will again be invited to cover our tournament, and maybe he'll attend next time. Then everyone will know what is going on.

Response

Understand the problem

Editor,

OK, so here you both are standing before the altar all dressed up in what are probably the fanciest clothes you'll ever wear, and getting married. Well so far so good, you're doing a good thing. Remember, God has said if a man and a woman live together they're to be married.

But alas, while the preacher is saying "...in sickness and in health," you are thinking instead, "well if it doesn't work out we can always get a divorce." "...For richer or for poorer," "I mean after all what if we 'grow apart?'" "Till death do us part." "Rose?" "I do." "Art?" "I do." "You may kiss the bride."

WHY DO YOU SAY YOU DO WHEN YOU DON'T? In a sense you have proved correct those who say, "What difference does a piece of paper make?" Now it's almost certain they will hurt each other and separate only to go and do the same thing over and over again somewhere else. But so will you! Why? because you have mixed up the piece of paper, which is an outer symbol of your mutual inner commitment before God, with the commitment itself.

Nevertheless God has taken you at your word. Before Him you stand committed to one another for the rest of your lives. God takes this vow so seriously that in Malachi 2:14 he says He will ignore you when you cry to Him if things are not right between you and your spouse. He then goes on to state flatly, "I hate divorce" (Malachi 2:16). Jesus himself said that if you divorce, you are causing one another to commit adultery (Mark 10:2).

Why is God so unbending on this point? Why doesn't He leave us any slack? Well, because He knows that anything good is going to cost something. Remember that He is equally unbending when He calls us into a relationship with Himself. "If any man would come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."

We know that two of the greatest blessings are the relationship between an individual and God, and between a man and a wife. Naturally God takes neither lightly, so why should we?

The whole idea of a life long commitment in marriage is bound to sound idealistic to a culture that is entirely "ME"-centered. If we have ever made a commitment to anyone, it's been to ourselves. "Looking out for numero uno." Well if you haven't guessed already, this attitude ultimately leads to death. It cuts us off from God and poisons everything we touch including our marriage.

There is only one cure for "me"- centeredness and that is a radical change at the very core of each individual; a change that will cause one to turn away from selfishness to a commitment to God. There is no way in which we can do this ourselves. Only the redemptive power of the blood of Jesus Christ is sufficient: a power that can take the most sin-stained, self-centered person and cause him to serve God. Only then can a real living relationship in marriage be had.

Mixed thanks

Editor,

I would like to thank the Argonaut and KUOI for their coverage and concern regarding the congressional hearing on the proposed River of No Return Wilderness. I applaud all those who took the time and initiative to attend and/or comment on the three proposals discussed at the hearing.

It is irrelevant as to which bill you supported, rather, by your involvement it showed a concern and interest in an Idaho (as well as national) land use issue. To make the legislative process work for you, it takes a certain amount of involvement. For those of you who sat on your ass and said nothing, well, I assume you are a member of the silent "apathetics."

In working toward getting people to provide input, I constantly heard reiterated time and again, "I'd like to but I have no time." Students will soon find that their greatest amount of free time and relative freedom existed while they attended school. Get your head out of the books. Look around. The world continues on its way while you sit back in your artificial environment of theory and semantics.

For those who did speak out, I congratulate you on breaking through the inertia of academia and considering a worldly issue of some significance.

Bowling clarifications

Editor,

I am writing this letter to correct the errors that appeared in the Argonaut story about our bowling tournament. The U of I men's team WON the men's team event. This is Idaho's first win in eleven years. The U of I women's team finished second behind a very strong team from WSU that has qualified to compete at nationals later in the school year.

Other teams that competed in the men's team event were, second place, WSU; third place, BSU No. 2; fourth place, University of Oregon; and fifth place, BSU No. 1. Also competing were Montana, Idaho No. 2, Oregon State, Treasure Valley Community College, WSU No. 2, Blue Mountain Community College, and Eastern Oregon. WSU's women were followed by Idaho, Oregon, and Idaho State.

First place in the singles events went to Dan Brittenham from the University of Montana, and Sandy Smith from WSU. Dwayne Newkirk, U of I, and Valarie Michalenko, U of O, took second. Washington State took first and second place honors in the men's doubles event, and first place in the women's. Second place in the women's doubles went to ISU. The U of I placed three men and one woman in the all-event rollofs. Leo Stephens was second high qualifier, Newkirk was third, and Charlotte Snook and Mark Hendrickson both placed fifth in their respective divisions. The rollofs were won by Stephens, (a 191-183 win over Lubke from Montana), and by Michalenko, (a 170-165 win over Siff from Oregon). The traveling team trophy was won by Washington State on the strength of their doubles teams finishes. Second was the U of I, and third the U of O.

Anybody interested in bowling on the team next year should contact Leo Stephens in the SUB Underground.

Thank-you
Bob Arnold, Tournament director

Leadership lacking

Editor,

There is no question the U of I is in the throes of a financial crisis. Our student government and its programs are also in trouble. However, the leadership the ASUI officials are providing and the options they are examining are not comforting.

It has been ten years since there has been a specific fee increase for ASUI programs. The shrinkage of the purchasing power of our fees has been dramatic.

In the upcoming student elections, there is to be a referendum to determine the levels of student support of various ASUI programs (but not all of them), and despite disclaimers, it is difficult not to believe the program areas with lower levels of support will not be affected financially.

There is another alternative which needs to be explored: an ASUI fee increase of reasonable proportions. Although our student leaders seem pledged to avoid any fee increases, it is time to gather information other than their own levels of consciousness.

It would take very little effort or cost (but perhaps too much of an adjustment) for the ASUI Senate to include on the ballot a simple question for the students: "Would you accept an ASUI fee increase of up to $3 which would go to continuing ASUI services and programs on the same level?"

Since a referendum is non-binding, no action would necessarily need to be taken. Perhaps the students do believe in and support the various services. Let them express their voices not just in a negative manner, but also in a positive way.

If the senate has enough trust in the students' will and knowledge to indicate where programs cuts should be, I would hope they would trust the students to also give them a vote of confidence. Do our leaders know something about the students which I don't?

John Hecht

Sex-obsessed

Editor,

One phenomenon in our society which has historically made its appearance in all decaying societies is an obsession with sex. History reveals that entire societies begin to deteriorate when "free love" reaches a position of social acceptance.

J.D. Unwin, a British social anthropologist, spent seven years studying the births and deaths of eighty civilizations. His research showed that every known culture in the world's history has followed the same sexual pattern: during its early existence, premarital and extramarital sexual relationships were strictly prohibited. Then, much later in the life of the society, its people began to rebel against the strict prohibitions, demanding the freedom to release their internal passions. As the mores weakened, the inhibition of sexual expression abated, eventually resulting in the decay or destruction of the civilization.

The family is the foundation on which mankind has built all societies. When a man is devoted to one woman and one family, he is motivated to build, save, protect, plan, and prosper on their behalf. However, when a person's sexual interests are dispersed and generalized, one's efforts are invested in the gratification of sensual desires.

History also reveals that sodomy, homosexuality, and lesbianism have been widely practiced, though seldom condoned, in all civilizations. Likewise, wherever incest, perversion, or marital unfaithfulness have become rampant, and sex becomes "value free," the family structure is weakened, crimes of all sorts increase, especially among the young, and all other social institutions begin to disintegrate, until the state itself collapses. Rome is probably the most famous example. Will one day America be the most famous example?

It is ironic that we cannot learn from history, a teacher that is so repetitious! "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, the people whom He has chosen as His heritage!"

Ruggers take first at St. Paddy's Tournament

by Martin Renzhofer

Western Washington University got the schooling of its life in rugby Sunday when it lost 30-0 to Blue Mountain from Moscow during the championships of the St. Paddy's Rugby Tournament in Spokane.

By controlling the scrum and lineouts, the backs of Blue Mountain continually maintained control of the tempo of the game. Bill Combo, a back for the Blue, said, "Thanks to the scrum, we had the ball all day."

Don Anderson, the captain of Blue Mountain, said it was the best he had ever seen the forwards play.

"The scrum played the best rugby they have ever played for Blue Mountain. The intensity was there all through the tournament," Anderson said.

An example of how well the forwards played can be shown in how the scoring was done. Of the six tries (the same as a touchdown in football) scored, four were by the front line.

Kevin Lynott scored two, Rick Mayfield and Al Aldrich pushed over for one each. Chris Nichols and Brent Lloyd added two more tries, but by then the game was out of reach.

Western Washington threatened to score twice, but were stopped each time. The first time was on a penalty kick, but the kick sailed to the right.

The only other effort by Western Washington to score was a major push near the Blue Mountain goal. WWU had the ball one foot from the Blue goal, but a big push by the scrum and a kick got Blue Mountain out of danger. Western Washington never threatened to score again.

Blue Mountain won four games in the tournament. The University of Washington, Boise and Spokane fell to the Blue. In the four games played, Blue Mountain scored 81 points to the opponents' zero.

The scores went this way: 4-0, 25-0, 22-0 and 30-0. It was the first tournament win played away from home for the Blue.

Several players stood out during the tournament, many of whom played in the scrum. John Hengesh, Steve Leach, Rett Landers and Bill Ogle were singled out by many players for excellent play.

The women's rugby team, the Dusty Lentils, fared almost as well as the men, but lost the championship game in overtime.

The match, played against Western Washington, was tied 4-4 at the end of regulation time. After four overtime periods of five minutes each, a best three-out-of-five kickoff was attempted. The women who could put three kicks through the uprights first would win the tournament. WWU hit its first three kicks to win the tournament.

The Lentils had been undefeated in the tournament until that game, and had defeated Western Washington the day before.

The Lentils' road to the the championship finals was an exciting one for the spectators.

After two wins Saturday afternoon, the Missoula women took a 10-0 lead over the Dusty Lentils. But the Lentils fought back and tied the score with little time remaining. Peggy Clemons finally scored as time ran out to win the game.

Sunday morning found the Lentils playing Elliot Bay from Seattle. Elliot Bay had a 6-0 lead until the Lentils exploded for 10 points late in the game.

Vandals tune for Boise in Ellensburg

Men's coach Mike Keller took the 1979 Vandal track team to Ellensburg Saturday for a non-scoring meet on the Central Washington University campus. Though they were competing on poor facilities, runners Dan Hammett and Scott Olin, along with weightman Steve Saras were still able to turn in lifetime best in their respective events.

Both Hammett and Olin ran their best ever in the 400 meters, while Saras tossed lifetime best in the discus and hammer.

"We're still a little rusty in places" commented Keller, "and when you take into account that a couple of our guys are injured, I have to say our boys are actually competing really well." Keller went on to say times and performances would have been faster under better conditions.

Bob Peterson won the high jump at 7 feet. He was unable to clear the bar after it was raised to 7 feet, four inches. Troy Sullivan cured Keller's problem of not having a pole vaulter when he cleared 14 feet, and freshman John Trott raced to a respectable 1:51 in the 900 meters.

"The next three or four weeks will be very important to us," continued Keller. "By early May we should have a real good idea as to how we stand." This weekend the Vandals will be in Boise for a triangular meet between in-state rivals Boise State and Idaho State, and the following weekend in Eugene competing with Pac-10 powers the University of Oregon and Washington State.

Kim Ward led the Idaho women, claiming three individual firsts in the 100 and 400 meters and the long jump. She also ran on Idaho's winning 440 yard and mile relay teams. Distance runners Cindy Partridge and Jeanna Nuxoll placed one-two in the 3000 meters.

Intramurals

Entries are due for the women's intramural tennis tournament which will be held Saturday. Applications will not be accepted after noon, Thursday in the intramural and campus recreation office, room 210 Memorial Gymnasium.

Intramural softball was cancelled for Monday. Intramural living group managers are encouraged to check with the intramural office for make-up dates.

Three university intramural championships were decided within the last two weeks. TMA 3C defeated TMA 21 for the coed volleyball title. Alan Price defeated Kevin Lockie for the individual singles badminton championship, and two champions were crowned in the first annual one-on-one basketball tournament.

Netters remain undefeated

Whitewashing the visiting University of Montana on Friday in Lewiston 9-0, the powerful U of I women's tennis team triumphed again Saturday against Boise State, 8-1, and ran its season record to six wins against no defeats.

Only Idaho's No. 1 singles player Kelly Friddle was unable to pick up two victories over the weekend, as she fell to Boise State's Phyllis Dupras Saturday afternoon.

"I think the girls were really pleased with the good crowd turnout on Saturday," indicated coach Amanda Burk. "It's the best crowds I've seen since I've been here and I really think it helped out." In singles competition, Karin Sobotta, Kristi Pfeiffer, Ellen Cantrell and Mary Pat Wheeler all remained undefeated for the U of I.

Weather permitting, the women are scheduled to play host to Eastern Washington University today at 3 p.m. on the university courts behind Memorial Gymnasium.

Competing in the 137 pound class, Dan Morrison shows what he's got in the bench press in front of intramural spotters Taylor Werness and Bob Bruner. Last night was the opening of IM weightlifting and is expected to run the remainder of the week. Photo by Mike Borden.

"May your fountain be blessed, and may you rejoice in the wife of your youth. A loving doe, a graceful deer—may her breasts satisfy you always, may you ever be captivated by her love. Why be captivated my son, by an adulteress? Why embrace the bosom of another man's wife?"

For a man's ways are in full view of the Lord, and he examines all his paths. The evil deeds of a wicked man ensore him; the cords of his sin hold him fast. He will die for lack of discipline, led astray by his own great folly."

Ballet Folk returns home, sets spring concert

The Ballet Folk Company touring group has returned home to Moscow and will present its Spring Concert Friday and Saturday. Three new ballets and one old favorite will be included in the performance that begins at 8 p. m. in the Hartung Theatre each evening.

Having its premiere performance will be "Anna Christie," a ballet that has been four years in the making. According to Jeannette Allyn, Ballet Folk artistic director, work on the ballet based on Eugene O'Neill's play of the same name began in 1975.

Brent Wagner, formerly of Moscow, began composing the music for the ballet, which was to be a bicentennial project, but due to lack of funds it was put off until 1977. At that time the lead in the ballet had to quit dancing due to an injury so the ballet was postponed until 1978. During the fall of that year it was begun again but there was not enough time to complete it before the fall tour.

Wagner graduated from the U of I with majors in music and theatre and received his masters degrees from Indiana University in music and drama arts. He is now teaching at Syracuse University, New York, where he has started a new program in musical theatre.

Choreography for the ballet is by Jeannette Allyn and the music will be performed live by Pianist Steven Sulich. Sulich is a graduate from Indiana University, is currently working in Moscow and has performed in several concerts here and in Pullman.

Also included in this weekend's programs are "Pas de Six," by George Montague and "Pas de Deux Jeunesse," by Jeannette Allyn. The company performed these ballets during its nine-week national tour, but they have not been seen in Idaho before.

"Viva la Company," the ballet about the behind-the-scenes life of a ballet company, will be the closing performance of the program.

Advance tickets for Ballet Folk's spring concert are priced at $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens and $2 for children under 12. They are available at Cox & Nelson, the U of I SUB desk.

Guest director, eight films to highlight French film festival

Visiting guest director Marie Genevieve Ripeau will highlight a French Film festival which will open at the Micro Theatre April 15.

The film extravaganza will feature eight French films—all subtitled—with varying topics of French aspects of life, such as business, provincial life, family life and social actions.

Tickets for the films will be priced at $2 for adults and $1.50 for students for each film. A pass for all eight films is available for $10 and may be purchased in advance at the Micro Theatre or in room 314 of the Administration Building on the U of I campus.

The festival is sponsored by the U of I Foreign Language Department in cooperation with the Washington State University Foreign Language and Literature Departments, the Foreign French Cultural Service and the Micro Theatre.

The movies to be shown and the scheduled times are as follows:

April 15 at 7 p.m.: "Le Sucre", (The Sugar), (1978). This film is less about the sugar hoarding of 1974 than that of the story of one of the speculators who befriends one of the victims. The tale of the victim's concern for the swindler and vice-versa is the main theme of the film.

April 15 at 9:15 p.m.: "Les Feux de la Chandeleur", (The Lights of Candlemas Day), (1972). Featured is Boursault, a provincial lawyer, who leaves his socialist wife for his bourgeois clients. Her life, as she tries to follow her political activities and give meaning to her life, is followed through the years.

April 16 at 7 p.m.: "La Chanson de Roland", (The Song of Roland), (1978). A young player in a troupe, who is for the first time playing the part of Roland, simultaneously discovers the life and customs of the different regions of France. The film is set in 12th century France.

April 16 at 9:15 p.m.: "Adieu Voyages Lents", (Farewell, Slow Voyages), (1978). This film is presented in three parts and is directed by the visiting director, Ripeau. It recounts the dissolution of a marriage and how the wife develops a relationship again with her mother.

April 17 at 7 p.m.: "Raphael ou le Debauche" (Raphael or the Rake), (1970). This is the story of Aurore, whose life has been devoted to virtue, and of Raphael, whose life has been devoted to debauchery, and of their discovery together of something that has been denied to them both, passion.

April 17 at 9:15 p.m.: "Leopold le Bien Aime," (Leopold The Beloved), (1978). Leopold, a bachelor, has become a woman-hater because the woman he loved when he was 20, never replied to one of his letters. A never-delivered letter, discovered by the now-middle-aged Leopold, promises to change his life.

April 18 at 7 p.m.: "La Traque," (The Track), (1975). This movie depicts the wide variety of antagonistic and contradictory relationships among a group of boar hunters. The hunt is diverted from its real purpose by an inexorable chain of events.

April 18 at 9:15 p.m.: "La Femme Qui Pleure," (The Crying Woman), (1978). The story of a woman who breaks down after discovering her husband has a lover. Her mental anguish forces her to deal with fantasy and reality.

Jacques Dollon, directress and actress, Dominique Laffin, and Lola Dollon star in the French film, "La Femme Qui Pleure," (The Crying Woman), one of eight films being featured in a French film festival at the Micro Theatre April 15 to 18.

Vandaleers to share repertoire

Having recently returned from a tour of southern Idaho, the U of I Vandaleers tour choir will present a home concert at 8 p.m. Thursday. The concert is free and will be given in the Administration Building Auditorium.

The music will be taken from the tour repertoire, which includes music from several categories.

The group's recent tour included concerts in 12 southern Idaho cities.

Dick Johnston, U of I director of Alumni Relations, said, "The turnouts in each city were some of the largest ever of any type of alumni gathering. The varied program had appeal for everyone and drew several standing ovations."

The Alumni Association and ASUI joined in financial sponsorship of the tour. Glen Lockery, professor of music, is the choir director.

Live in Las Vegas

Glamour, problems, excitement add to ABC prizefight broadcast

by Sam Wear

LAS VEGAS, NEV.—Cigar smoke filled the Las Vegas Hilton showroom; the only lights were the ones directly above the canvas. Photographers from around the world huddled next to the ropes anxiously awaiting the dramatic moment when the fatal blows would be delivered.

The camera men all were situated. Anticipation filled the crowd of thousands who had gathered to see four Goliaths of the world return to their familiar battleground.

To my right was the legacy himself, Howard Cosell. The show director began this countdown, "5-4-3-2-1..." then, "Howard you're on." In his own unparalleled fashion, the man who is both hated and admired by millions of people around the world began his introduction:

"From the city that lives by night, ABC Sports brings to you live from the Las Vegas Hilton, the World Boxing Council's Heavyweight Championship fight of the world." My heart was pounding dramatically.

The theme from "Rocky" burst loudly from the Hilton sound system, making it difficult to talk to anyone. Two spotlights placed at opposite ends of the Hilton reflected rays of light off the mirrored ball above the ring.

The crowd rose to its feet. Emerging from their locker rooms came Earnie Shavers and Ken Norton, better known as the Bald Bomber and the Beautiful Beast.

In the ring, sweat poured down over the two black men's faces, muscles covering their bodies. The referee quickly explained the familiar rules to the contenders in the middle of the ring.

Cosell continued his pre-fight monologue. "And so that brings us to tonight, each man's boxing career on the line. A win will assure the victor a shot at the title sometime around September, the loser, possibly the end of his career."

Quickly I was off to the pressroom again on an errand. When I arrived back at ringside, there was a bell. Brute strength against style, the war had begun.

This gave me a chance to rest. Cosell spoke at a furious pace, describing the fight punch-by-punch to millions of viewers.

Suddenly there was chaos. Unexpectedly, Shavers knocked out Norton at 1:58 of the first round, causing mass havoc at ringside and in the ABC control trucks outside of the Hilton.

ABC had allocated two hours of prime-time television for the show and the first fight was already gone. Producers were screaming at Cosell over the headset, "You gotta stretch it out, Howard; keep talking until we can run this goddam thing over again."

It was time for interviews, time for anything, time to eat the clock away. Nobody expected the bout to go this quickly, especially not the nation's "number-one" network.

I was sent off to apprehend "Too Tall" Ed Jones of the Dallas Cowboys for a ringside interview with Cosell. Telly Savalas, Richard Dawson and other stars were being located in the crowd. There were continued cries from the Chuck Howard, show director, to stretch it out. "Keep talking," he said, panicked. "We'll run the fight over again." Cosell began describing the fight again.

The fans got restless, having paid a minimum of $50 for a seat. Many people felt they weren't getting their money's worth. A decision was quickly made: the championship fight would be moved up. Holmes' and Ocasio's locker rooms were notified the bout would start earlier than expected.

The lights dimmed again while the tension and noise mounted. Underdog Ocasio left his locker room for the ring. He could speak no English.

To add to the level of "excitement and anticipation" ABC purposely held the champion Holmes in his locker room. I was told he needed to be released "just at the right time."

Howard commanded over the production line headset "let him go". From the moment he left his room, Holmes, was cheered in deafening fashion. Shortly, there was an introduction, commercials and the rules briefly were gone over in the middle of the ring.

Another battle was to begin.

For seven rounds the heavily favored Holmes pounded the smaller Ocasio with shattering rights and blazing left jabs. There was never any doubt to the outcome of the scheduled 15-rounder.

Four times in the seventh round, Holmes' crushing right punch sent Ocasio to the canvas, and four times the gutsy Puerto Rican got up. Never had I witnessed such determination. The fight was called after the fourth knockdown and though he had been defeated soundly, Ocasio had earned respect worldwide.

Runs back and forth to the pressroom kept me busy while producers tried to stretch the show till the top of the hour. With my headset on for the final time, I heard Cosell get a cue from the director to begin his long close.

In as much as his voice had gotten on my nerves by then, I could not help but smile. Maybe I was beginning to realize in what I had had a chance to take part.

My dream was coming to an end. I realized the next day's trip would be returning me to the real world in Moscow and the daily chores of the Argonaut.

GREYHOUND GIVES YOU THREE WAYS TO SHIP.

FAST.

Greyhound Regular Package Express Service, in many cases, can send your packages up to 500 miles in less than 24 hours. Best of all, Greyhound Package Express costs a lot less than many other shipping services.

FASTER.

If you've got a rush shipment that needs priority handling, Greyhound's Next Bus Out® Service can handle it. Greyhound guarantees it goes on the Next Bus Out or your special handling charge will be refunded. For speedy pick-up or delivery, call Courier Services at 800-528-6077.

FASTEST.

Greyhound and Airborne have teamed up to bring Air Express to hundreds of smaller U.S. cities. Now, if you've got Greyhound, you've got Air Express. Just ask for Airborne®/Greyhound Air Express.

I WANT YOU!

To earn $25,000 right after college.

With bonuses added to your base pay, you could earn over $25,000 per year as a Sambo's Manager. And that figure doesn't even include our benefits package.

The food service industry is one of the fastest-growing and most stable industries in America for the simple reason that people are eating out more and more.

Sambo's is an industry leader, grossing over 1/2 billion dollars a year, and capturing a giant share of the full service restaurant market—over 21% in 1977!

Across the nation, our 1,000+ restaurants average over $600,000 annually.

To be a Manager, you'll first learn while you learn from Sambo's proven Management Training Program. Upon completion, you'll be a Sambo's Manager, with management responsibilities for your own restaurant.

If you can handle a $600,000 a year business well, the next steps up are District, Territory, and Regional Manager positions ... and beyond.

To learn more about a future with Sambo's sign up NOW to talk with our on-campus representative in the Placement Center.

If your schedule won't allow for that, call our North Central Region Recruiting Department COLLECT at (312) 397-5318. Sambo's want to see YOU!
