

PROPOSED KIBBIE-A.S.U.I.
ACTIVITY CENTER ADDITION

East End funding still uncertain

by Bill Will

A report to be released next week will deliver specific recommendations regarding construction of the East End Facility and another proposal to remodel Memorial Gymnasium. How the projects will be funded has not been disclosed, but the total cost is estimated at more than $4.6 million.

The report, entitled "Athletic, Physical Education, and Recreational Facilities Studies" was the result of a study committee formed last fall by U of I Financial Vice-President David McKinney. Budget estimates in the report peg the cost of the East End addition to the dome at $3,328,705 and for the remodeling of Memorial Gym between $985,400 and $1,127,400.

The full scope of how the projects will be funded has not yet been revealed. McKinney refused comment on the East End Project until he has seen the final version of the report.

Controversy resulted last fall when it was learned that a "reallocation" of existing student fees might be used to fund the addition.

A proposal to raise the student fee for intercollegiate athletics by $5 is now before the Board of Regents, with a final decision on the question due next month.

Athletic Director Bill Belknap and McKinney have both stated that none of the revenue generated by the increase will go toward construction of the East End Facility.

"That money will go to athletic operations, not to East End," Belknap said.

The proposal to remodel the Memorial Gym is designed to utilize the large amount of space which will result when the athletic department moves into its new quarters in the new facility, according to Dr. Ernest Hartung, director of the U of I Foundation. The Foundation is involved in a fund raising campaign for the East End project.

The goal of the U of I Foundation is to raise $1.7 million of the $4.6 million needed to complete the entire project. Currently, the organization has received about $600,000. Hartung projects that another $100,000-$200,000 will be raised from a mail campaign, and another $1 million from other contributions. Hartung hopes the campaign will be completed by September 1.

Currently, the money being raised is designated for use in constructing only the dome addition, not the remodeling of Memorial Gym. But that "may have to change," Hartung said.

"Who knows?" Hartung said, "we could be lucky and raise more than $1.7 million."

U of I President Richard Gibb told the Argonaut last fall that if only $1 million were raised for the dome addition, "we would have to scrub it."

Hartung said he is aware of criticisms that the university should have higher priorities than the construction of the East End Facility.

"There is a hell of a lot more than athletics involved in this," Hartung said. "I am not speaking for the President, but I think the administration has probably decided that there aren't any higher priorities" than the construction of the East End Facility.

The addition could bring college and high school tournaments and conventions to the U of I, Hartung said. "What better way to show off the university than to have a facility to do this with," he added.

Hartung also said vacant space in the Memorial Gym that the dome expansion will create "has a lot of advantages for the student body." There will be more room for intramurals and for the physical education department to operate, he stressed.

Nels Reese, U of I Director of Facility Planning and preparer of the report, said he, McKinney, and Business Manager Don Amos "are in relative agreement" about the recommendations of the report.

"We see it as a complete view of the situation," he said.

Reese said the committee felt concern about the need for a comprehensive plan about facilities.

"The committee did not want to do a little here and a little there with the space made available in the gym," he said.

The plan for the dome addition calls for a two-story structure which would house locker rooms, offices, and training facilities. The study recommends that an area in the complex be used to distribute recreational equipment, and that the two practice fields near the dome be improved.

A proper outside practice field would make it possible to conduct spring football drills outside and free the dome for other uses, Reese said.

The plan for the Memorial Gym calls for the construction of 6-8 additional handball/raquetball courts, classrooms, renovation of the locker rooms, and repair of existing gym floor.

Today last day to withdraw

Today is the last day to withdraw from a class without a penalty. Students must obtain the signature of the instructor, adviser and dean. Drop cards can be obtained at the dean's office in the college in which the student is enrolled.

The number of credits that may be dropped and recorded on a student's permanent record is limited to 20 credits during a student's undergraduate career at the U of I.

U of I Iranians moved again; still nothing from State Dept.

There is still no word from the State Department on the status of the five U of I students stranded in Canada, but all of them are well and the university of British Columbia is taking good care of them, said foreign student advisor John Cooper and the U of I News Bureau.

The students had to move Thursday from their temporary quarters at the UBC school of theology, because the rooms were reserved by someone else, said News Bureau director Sandra Haarsager. However the UBC architecture department is finding them new housing.

The students are attending architecture classes at UBC and recently went on a field trip with the Canadian students, Haarsager said. The Iranians joined the UBC architecture students in a big party Monday night, Cooper said. "As I understand it, our kids are making the salad," he said.

Cooper was in touch with Sen. Church's office Thursday, but as yet had received no word. "We're still in a holding pattern," he said. "But we're optimistic and hopeful that everything will work out."

Awards

Three professors honored as distinguished faculty

Three U of I faculty members, who have been active professionally and in the community throughout their careers, have been selected for Distinguished Faculty recognition.

The three, who were chosen for the honor by the U of I chapter of Phi Kappa Phi national scholastic honorary, include Charlie F. Petersen, professor of animal sciences; Jeanne M. Shreeve, professor of chemistry and chemistry department head, and Walter C. Sparks, professor of plant science.

The awards, presented at the annual Parents' Association Breakfast, recognize overall academic performance and achievement. It is the second year the awards have been given, and they carry a $250 stipend for each recipient, provided by the U of I Alumni Association.

Petersen, a poultry scientist, has long concentrated his research on chick growth, egg production and quality of market fryers. He has written more than 130 technical publications on the subject. Petersen first came to the U of I in 1935 and obtained a bachelor's degree in agriculture in 1940 and a master's degree in 1946. He was first employed at the U of I in 1943 and obtained the rank of professor and poultry scientist in 1957. He was head of the poultry science department from 1961-1970.

Petersen has received both the Outstanding Teacher Award in the College of Agriculture, and recently was named the Outstanding College Counselor by agriculture faculty.

Shreeve, recognized worldwide as a leader in flourine chemistry, came to the university in 1961. She has headed the chemistry department since 1973. Originally from Deer Lodge, Mont., she obtained a bachelor's degree in chemistry in 1953 from the University of Montana, a master's degree in 1956 from the University of Minnesota, and a doctorate in 1961 from the University of Washington. She completed post doctoral work at the University of Cambridge in England in 1968. Her publications, professional memberships, invited seminars and lectures, honors and awards all number in the dozens. Recognition of her work has brought hundreds of thousands of dollars in research grants to the U of I's chemistry department.

Sparks, research professor of horticulture specializing in potato physiology, has consulted on potato problems throughout the world. His research on potato storage has led to year-round marketing for potatoes as well as climate-controlled warehouses replacing sodroffed potato cellars. The resulting economic benefits to potato growers, processors and consumers has been calculated in the billions of dollars.

Sparks, who is liaison coordinator for the potato programs at the Aberdeen Experiment Station, obtained a bachelor's degree in horticulture in 1941 and a master's degree in 1943 from Colorado State University. He joined the U of I faculty in 1947.

At the Parents' Breakfast, Sparks was also awarded the Alumni Service Award for outstanding service to the university and to the Alumni Association.

Council opposes academic calendar change

Changing the school calendar to start classes after Labor Day was turned down by the Faculty Council at its Tuesday meeting.

After considering a report from the ad hoc committee on academic calendar, the council voted unanimously to keep the present calendar system.

The ad hoc committee was appointed after philosophy professor Frank Seaman proposed a late start last fall, which, he said, would cut down on gasoline consumption by those students coming for registration and the first three days of school, then leaving for Labor Day

Four proposals were suggested, and the ad hoc committee circulated questionnaires to all colleges and departments on campus for their comments on those suggestions.

English professor Doug Adams said the questionnaire responses indicated the committee had not come up with an acceptable alternative.

The council also approved drafts of the academic calendar for 1981-82 and 1982-83. No changes have been made in the current calendar.

A motion was made by professor Charles Christenson to cut Thanksgiving vacation down from Tuesday evening to Wednesday evening, but the motion was easily defeated by the council.

Christenson said although most students would not attend class on the Wednesday, the change might increase the attendance in classes on Monday and Tuesday. Currently, he said some students leave the Friday before Thanksgiving and skip classes on Monday and Tuesday.

A proposed amendment to the faculty constitution was also approved by the council.

The amendment allows for the chairman of the council to declare a position on the council vacant if a member is absent from three consecutive meetings, unless the member has informed the chairman in writing of their intention to participate fully in the future.

GIT man new engineering dean

Dr. Richard Williams, associate dean and professor of engineering at Georgia Institute of Technology will be the U of I's new dean of engineering.

Williams was the second choice of the selection committee responsible for filling the position that was vacated by Robert Furgason two years ago. There were 50 other applicants for the job.

Dr. James R. Goodman of Colorado State University was the first selection for the position, but declined the deanship because he would be forced to give up his research work at Colorado State University. The fact that the U of I was unable to meet his personal financial request was also a major factor in his decision to decline.

Dr. Williams has received a B.S. and an M.S. in physics, an M.S. in nuclear engineering and a Ph.D. in nuclear engineering all from the Georgia Institute of Technology.

Williams has been associate dean at Georgia Tech for four years. During that time, sponsored research programs have increased from $4.2 million to $9.2 million.

He taught a wide variety of courses at both undergraduate and graduate levels.

Williams has authored two books, one of which Solar Energy Technology and Applications has sold more than 30,000 copies.

Williams was born in Millen, Georgia on July 7, 1941. He is married and has five daughters.

KUOI Graffics controversy resolved

A public hearing to determine the fate of KUOI Graffics ended in resolution last night with both sides agreeing to pursue steps for the legal establishment of a KUOI fund raising organization.

Speaking before the ASUI Communications Board and an audience of 25 students, ASUI Attorney General Dan Bowen voiced his concerns about the organization.

"I'm concerned about the future personal tax liability of individuals involved in KUOI Graffics," Bowen said. "If the organization is not set up right the IRS could hold individuals responsible for taxes on donations."

Scott Fehrenbacher, ASUI president, summarized the situation to date involving KUOI Graffics and urged resolution.

"I would urge the Communications Board to forget all past rules and regulations violations, and direct KUOI management to follow the simple alternatives to establish a legal and legitimate fund raising organization for KUOI-FM," Fehrenbacher read from a prepared statement.

U of I communications faculty member Paul Nicoli presented KUOI's side of the conflict and urged the avoidance of what he termed "unnecessary conflict."

After several questions from Communications Board members, the Board unanimously voted to direct Station Manager and Graffics member Tom Neff to turn the monies raised thus far over to the University Foundation for donation to KUOI and work with the ASUI Attorney General for the legal establishment of KUOI Graffics.

Stolen lizard

Racy reptilian rip-off reported

Residents of Moscow were treated to an unusual sight Tuesday evening involving a high-speed footrace, a would-be thief, an employee of P.W. Hoseapple's and a large, stuffed iguana valued at $1,500.

According to Dr. Terry Armstrong, Vice President of Student Services, the manager of P.W. Hoseapple's called him and reported that a student had taken a stuffed iguana from the restaurant and attempted to run down the street.

Armstrong said the Hoseapple's cashier chased the student down the street, at which point the student dropped the iguana and hit the cashier.

Police Officer Nancy Iverinen, who investigated the incident, said the iguana has been recovered, and the investigation is continuing.

Armstrong said he "cannot condone" that type of activity, and he views it as a "serious matter."

He said he believed Hoseapple's was going to press charges, but no charges had been filed with the police at press time.

The manager of Hoseapple's was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Tight-lipped and afraid

If the bureaucracy of this university is any indication of what the rest of the real world is like, I'm not sure I want anything to do with it.

Regardless of how much a person swindles, cheats, scams or lies, those people who know about it are afraid to tell anyone, especially the press, for fear of losing their jobs.

The sad part is that their fears are probably legitimate.

Don't make waves. That's the philosophy.

Do whatever you want, as long as nobody finds out about it, especially the press. We can sure do without all that bad publicity.

Throughout this semester the Argonaut has had several excellent leads on possible stories. Often people close to the situation who know exactly what the inside dope is, will tell us the whole thing; who did what, how he or she did it, how unethical it was, etc. "Off the record" of course. The more you keep your mouth shut, the longer you'll last around here.

It is an awful, gut-wrenching, infuriating feeling to know there are individuals on this campus who flat-out know that U of I students and Idaho taxpayers are being blatantly ripped-off by other uncaring, incompetent employees, but refuse to say anything on the record.

Free speech is a thing of the past. As long as you propagate "good things" about the university, you'll last a long time, but if you speak out against what is wrong, you may lose your job. So watch your step.

Strip off the sexism

Hoads of women were entertained at Rathskellers Wednesday night by a group of exotic male dancers. It's interesting to note there were a few comments murmured as to how disgusting it was, but nobody tried to protest the event.

I would venture to say if a group of female exotic dancers were to perform at Rats for hoards of enthusiastic men, our local feminists would be howling in outrage. "We can't allow this sexism in Moscow" they would scream.

Soon the entire community would be deemed a scandalous den of iniquity and the dirty little vixens would be thrown out of town.

Some would say practice what you preach, others might say what's good for the gander is good for the goose. At any rate, it's whatever blows your skirts up. Right women?

Hegreberg

Kibbie Dome U.

Isn't it interesting how a $1.7 million project can turn into a $3.3 million project, and then a $4.6 million project and still no one really knows (or at least will admit) where the funding will come from?

Even if the U of I Foundation manages to scrap up its goal of $1.7 million, almost $3 million will be needed to complete the proposed East End Facility. That is of course if the estimated cost of the project does not go up yet another million or two.

Admittedly, the completed project sounds fascinating. It would free up space for handball and racketball courts and increased locker room facilities. But it seems rather ironic for a university when it can't even afford to keep its best instructors to be investing in such an extravagant complex.

Dr. Ernest Hartung, director of the Foundation, told the Argonaut the expansion project seems to be the administration's highest priority. Why?

About $3 million in student money will be poured into the East End Facility project if it is to become a reality and we couldn't spare a couple extra thousand to bring an engineering dean to the U of I.

Wouldn't it be nice if we had a new building to house the College of Business and Economics? Or how about a new bookstore?

But of course, having adequate facilities for a mere academic department is not as important to the overall education experience as is having plush accommodations for athletes and coaches...

Open House

Editor,

The Montessori School of Pullman will hold an open house Wednesday, April 23, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Visitors will have the opportunity to meet the teachers, who will explain methods of teaching and demonstrate equipment used in the classroom. Parents of presently enrolled students will also be on hand to answer questions.

Registration forms for the summer and fall sessions will be available at the Open House. Parents of prospective students (ages 2½ to 6) will be able to arrange observing the class with the teachers. The open house will take place at the Montessori School, located on the first floor of the Gladdish School Building, Main and SW State Streets, in Pullman.

Sincerely,
Kathy Ham

Wasted time

Editor,

To the University Professors:

I'm sitting here writing this letter while I wait for my teacher to get to class.

So where is he? He is late as usual. This particular professor has only been on time twice this semester. He keeps my class of 40 students waiting an average of at least 5 minutes a day, 15 minutes a week or 270 minutes a semester. That is 180 wasted manhours. I have, unfortunately, had several instructors who are habitually late.

I address this letter to those select few instructors who are constantly late for class. get it in gear! As I have heard one of your fellow professors say before, "your tardiness is very rude and irresponsible."

Your students have better things to do than wait for you. Teachers, please make it to class on time!

Todd Kuiken

Outdoor living

Editor,

We students propose to the Physical Plant of the U of I to consider converting the roof of the Kibbie Dome into a permanent camping area. This facility could bring added revenue to the university by assessing a small users fee. With the increased revenue the needed running water and sanitary facilities could be provided.

In these times of tight money and limited gasoline this camping area would provide university students and members of the Moscow community a readily available recreational outdoor experience.

This could be the next number one tourist attraction in the Inland Empire.

Sincerely,
Campers Organized for

Return to learn

Editor,
Over a week ago, President Carter suspended Iranian visas prohibiting Iranians from entering the United States. As a result, four U of I Iranian students, who were in Vancouver, B.C. at that time on an architectural field trip, have not been allowed to re-enter the United States.

Baptist Student Ministries would like to express our support for the return of these Iranian students to the United States so that they may continue their education. We would also like to extend our appreciation to all those who share in the concern for their return.

Eat with the rats

Editor,
In response to an opinion written in the Tuesday April 15 issue of the Argonaut, I would like to point out to those who read the article on "Inedible Dorm Increases," and all who eat at the Wallace Complex Cafeteria that most of the statements made in the article are quite EXAGGERATED.

First, I would like to point out that dorm populations are increasing, perhaps reflecting the increased convenience of living on campus. The savings of time, alone, is great. The cost per meal is not all that high, if you consider the variety and amount of food available a meal.

On the subject of another room and board fee increase, I don't like the idea of shelling out more money either. But just think about it - this year already, an estimated 145 dozen cups have been "borrowed" from the cafeteria, not to mention silverware, bowls, plates, etc. The cups alone will cost close to $4,000 to replace. Everytime someone walks out the door with cafeteria property, it costs us.

I think we need to do a little more thinking and a little less criticizing about the fine place we have to eat at. By the way Wiebe, spring is here so why don't you move out today if it is so bad. The grass is green by the tennis courts, and I hear rats are in season.

Sincerely
Robert S. Welch

Moving out

Editor,
Well, guys, I did it. The big step. Moved into a new home, plenty of fresh air. I don't much care for the neighbors, though, they're a little tougher than I thought.

You all will have to come on over to my housewarming party as soon as I collect enough stolen place settings to throw a decent bash. If anyone has a rat-sized roasting pan, let me know.

Happy Spring

Graham Hall campers sleep closer to the stars

by Jason Wiebe

U of I students have seemingly found a new use for the ASUI-Kibbie Dome—and it has absolutely nothing to do with football, basketball or any other intercollegiate sport.

Moscow police responded to a call Sunday morning and arrived at the dome to find a complete campsite on the roof. Further investigation revealed two U of I students asleep inside a tent staked into the foam roofing of the dome.

The two men, Gregory Valdey and Charles Wetzel, both of Graham Hall, had pitched camp on top of the Kibbie Dome despite the absence of level ground.

Dan Weaver, sergeant-in-charge of the Campus Division of the Moscow Police, said both Valdey and Wetzel had been arrested and charged with "malicious injury to property." Weaver said the men had underestimated the delicacy of the roof, and had caused damage not only by driving tent stakes into it, but walking on it as well.

"I don't think the gentlemen involved were aware of the amount of damage they could do to that roof," Weaver said. "I think they just got caught up in something, and now they have to ride it out."

Weaver said the men were being "real cooperative" with the police and city prosecutor Robert Williams.

In a related interview, Richard A. Nathunson, spokesman for Campers Organized for Kibbie Experience, said he had read an account of the incident in an April 14 issue of The Idahonian.

"I laughed for about 25 minutes," Nathunson said. "I thought it was really funny, and that it made a good point."

Nathunson said he didn't know the campers, but "would like to meet them sometime."

"We started the organization as sort of a joke," Nathunson said, "but we eventually wanted to make a point of it—that the Kibbie Dome isn't being used to the full benefit of the community."

Nathunson said he would like to see concerts in the dome, and voiced his "frustration" with the proposed fee increase for the Fall '80 semester.

"Here we need things like better library facilities, and the increase is supposed to go to athletics," Nathunson said. "It's really frustrating—in the circle of people I hang around with, no one uses the dome for anything, but we're paying for it."

Women's tennis

Unblemished Vandals go on line

by Bert Sahlberg

The U of I women's tennis team is still undefeated at 12-0 on the year, and coach Amanda Burk considers her team to be one of the strongest Idaho has ever had.

The Vandals have proven themselves so far this season by beating opponents like Montana State, a highly ranked Division I team, highly regarded Northern Colorado, another Division I team, and Denver University, a Division II team which finished second in nationals last year. Idaho is also a Division II squad.

Today, the Vandals will put their unblemished mark on the line when they host the Idaho-P&E Athletics Invitational, which will include the University of Montana, Montana State University, Washington State University, University of Puget Sound and Idaho.

"Montana, Montana State and Washington State are all Division I schools," said Burk. "We also expect Puget Sound to be one of our strongest opponents in our division at regionals, so this will be a very competitive weekend for us."

The Vandals will open play Friday at 11:30 a.m. against Montana before meeting Montana State at 3 p.m. On Saturday, the Vandals will start off against Puget Sound at 8 a.m. before taking on Washington State at 3 p.m. All games will be played at the U of I outdoor courts.

The Vandal squad returns as regional champions from last year, as they were the first women's team in Vandal history to win any regional competition. The women's basketball team this year became the second.

Off last year's 18-4 team that placed 12th in nationals is the Vandals only senior, Kellie Friddle. Friddle came to Idaho after one year at Spokane Community College and has been the Vandals number one seed in singles competition for three years.

Last year, Kelly came in second in the number one singles competition in regionals and this year should win the regional competition and should be a candidate for the national title.

"Kelly is a little stronger in her doubles than singles," said Burk. "She is playing with Leslie Potts, a freshman as the number two doubles team and that should be her best shot at winning nationals."

Playing as the Vandals number two singles player is Karin Sobotta, a sophomore who also played on the basketball team. Karin teamed up with Kristie Pfeiffer and finished eighth in nationals as the Vandals number one doubles team.

Burk looks at the doubles match that Pfeiffer and Sobotta will play against Montana State to be one of the key matches of the tournament as the Montana State doubles team is the number one Division I doubles team. So far, Pfeiffer and Sobotta are 1-1 against the Bobcat duo.

Ellen Cantrell is the Vandals number five singles player and while playing as the Vandals number four singles player last year, she finished eighth in nationals.

Cantrell is currently 12-0 this year and has set her sights to do very well at nationals this year, said Burk.

Also doubling as a basketball and tennis player is Donna Rademacher.

"Donna is a real stable player that I can count on to win," said Burk. "She contributes a lot which is proven in her 9-3 record."

Potts is the Vandals number three singles player and Burk complimented her by saying "she is a lot of fun to watch."

This year, the Vandals will host the regional competition which will be May 9-10. Burk considers that Puget Sound and her Idaho squad to be the favorites of the tournament.

Men netters in league play

The Idaho men's tennis team, 5-5 in dual match play this season, will be in Missoula Saturday and Sunday to compete in the Big Sky Conference Northern Division tournament along with Montana, Montana State and Boise State.

The Vandals are coming off an 8-1 dual match victory over Montana State last Saturday. Head coach Rod Leonard said this weekend's tourney is important because one of the four teams will be eliminated from the Big Sky Championships scheduled for May 1-3 at a site to be determined.

Seeding for this weekend's tourney won't be determined until Saturday for the round-robin event.

The following is the won-loss record of Idaho's players going into this weekend's tourney: Mike Daily 5-6, Bob Simmons 5-6, Suresh Menon 7-4, John Simmons 2-7, Jim Gerson 5-6, Scott Moreland 3-8 and Doug Belcher 4-1. Doubles: B. Simmons-Menon 3-2, J. Simmons-Moreland 2-3, Gerson-Daily 4-1, Simmons-Simmons 2-1, Moreland-Menon 5-0, Gerson-Daily 4-1, and B. Simmons-Belcher 2-0.

Vandals tie WSU, face Gonzaga

After earning a 13-13 tie with Washington State in a nine-inning game that was called because of darkness, the Vandal baseball team enters a four game stand with conference foe Gonzaga this weekend.

On Saturday, the Vandals will travel to Spokane for a doubleheader against the Bulldogs beginning at 1 p.m. On Sunday, the Vandals return home to host the Bulldogs at 1 p.m. at Guy Wicks Field.

Idaho is now 10-19-1 on the year and 5-5 in Nor Pac league play, which is good enough for third place. Gonzaga is tied for first place in league competition with a 7-1 record. This will be the first meeting of the year between the two clubs.

On Wednesday, the Vandals rallied for five runs in the top of the ninth inning to earn a tie with the Cougars. The Vandals have not beaten the Cougars in 13 years as the Cougars have won the last 41 games between the two teams.

Idaho jumped out to an early 3-0 lead in the second inning and extended the lead to 6-4 in the sixth inning.

The Cougar bats went wild in the eighth inning scoring eight runs to pull ahead 13-8 going into the last inning.

But with one out in the ninth, Dain Hathaway beat out a bunt single and went to second when batter Rick Brown was awarded first base on catcher's interference. Joe Pointer singled to load the bases.

Don Wulff then lashed a two run single to leave men on first and third with one out and the score 13-11. Tom Rose then received a break when his foul pop-up was dropped. Rose then walked to load the bases.

Dave Alderman, who earlier in the game kept his 22-game hitting streak alive with a solo home run, struck out for the second Vandal out. But Gene delivered a two run single to tie the game at 13-13.

Idaho then played strong defense in the bottom of the ninth to shutout the Cougars before the game was called because of darkness.

Al Thol followed with a single to score the first Vandal run and Tim Mooney drew a walk to push across the second run to cut the Cougar lead to 13-9.

Alderman's hitting streak dates back to March 17 when he was hitting .172. He is now hitting .327 and is batting .471 in league play. Alderman leads the team in RBI's with 27, shares the lead in doubles with seven and home runs with six. He has also scored in the Vandals last ten games.

Men tracksters face WSU, OSU

SPOKANE—The Vandal men's track team will compete against Pac-10 schools Washington State and Oregon State this Saturday at Spokane Community College in a double dual meet. Field events are scheduled to get underway at 12:15 p.m. with running events beginning at 1:15 p.m.

A break in the action faces the Vandal women's team with competition to resume May 2 at the Pelleuer Meet at Cheney, Wash. The women have broken all but one school record this season and have 11 members qualified for NCWSA Division II and II regionals in all but the shot put event.

Mike Keller, men's head coach, said he plans on taking 24 athletes to the meet and has no plans to have his middle distance or distance runners doubling in any of the events.

Golfers at Missoula

The Idaho golf team is in Missoula to compete in the Montana Invitational today and Saturday at the Missoula Country Club.

Teams expected to compete in the two-day event include Boise State, Montana, Montana State, Idaho State, Weber State and Washington State.

The U of I team is coming off a fourth-place finish in the Boise State Invitational last Thursday and Friday. The Vandals scored 1154 points to place behind the University of Portland (1120), Columbia Basin (1135), and Weber State (1138).

concerned about team scoring in this meet. I'd much rather see good performances out of our athletes. I don't think overall we can compete with either WSU or OSU, but there should be some events that we will be very competitive in," Keller said.

Idaho finished second in the All-Idaho Collegiate Meet last Saturday at Boise State University. The Broncos captured first with 75 points to Idaho's 72. The Bengals from Idaho State took third with 56 points. The Vandal women were also second at the All-Idaho meet, scoring 176 points to trail ISU with 209. Boise State was out-run with its 129 points.

The Vandals had several outstanding performances during the meet. Senior Steve Saras established a new meet record in the shot put with a personal best of 59-feet, 6-inches. The throw was only 6 inches short of qualifying for the NCAA outdoor championships.

Saras and Northern Arizona's middle distance runner Larry Martinez were named Big Sky Conference Track and Field Athletes of the Week.

Adult musical, Robber Bridegroom performed at Hartung Theatre

The Robber Bridegroom, an adult musical produced by the U of I Theatre Arts department, celebrates America's lively musical heritage in a contemporary style. Fiddlers, guitarists, a banjo player and a string bass player accompany the singers and dancers in creating the exuberant atmosphere of Rodney, Mississippi in 1795.

Director Roy Fluhrer, musical director Charles Walton and choreographer Lynne Rigby have worked closely together to integrate music, dance and acting in the show. Fluhrer is associate professor of theatre arts, Walton is professor of music, and Rigby is a sophomore majoring in theatre arts and dance.

The story of romance, thievery and mistaken identity set in the post-revolutionary South is told largely through song. The 12 dance numbers emphasize early American square dances. Alfred Uhry wrote the book and lyrics, adapted from the novella by Eudora Welty; Robert Waldman wrote the music.

Bill Fagerbakke, a senior theatre arts student from Rupert, plays Jamie Lockhart, the singing highwayman who "steals with style." Kathryn Adkins, a graduate theatre arts student from Salem, Ore., plays Rosamund, the Southern beauty who falls in love with the bandit after he steals her gold petticoat. Adkins was a finalist in the Metropolitan Opera auditions in Spokane.

The fast-paced musical may contain scenes and language that some may find objectionable. The show will be performed April 18, 19, 24, 25 and 26 at 8 p.m. at the Hartung Theatre. The April 27 performance will begin at 6:30 p.m. Non-reserved seating is $3.50 for non-students and $1.50 for students. For more information, call 885-7986.

Life, death, and...

All That Jazz: Fun, frenzied, and daring

by Linda Weiford

Ah, the ironies of life. Sometimes it takes a tragedy to bring our potentials to the surface. The loss of a loved one, an illness—a brush with death—somehow such painful events tend to stir spirituous emotions. The outcome may be a turning point in one's life—expressed in poetry, novels, plays, and now in modern times, even films. Such were the circumstances for fast-climbing director-choreographer, Bob Fosse, who, after the successful turn-outs of Cabaret and Lenny, suffered a heart attack from driving himself to the brink of exhaustion.

Now, several years later, Fosse has returned with a memoir of his personal tragedy—the lush and effervescent musical, All That Jazz.

The leading character of All That Jazz is Joe Gideon (a strong role played by Roy Scheider), a highly motivated (thanks to his bennies), over drinker, chain smoker, playboy-type director-choreographer, who is a personification of Fosse himself. Most of the incidents in the film parallel Fosse's life, from his wife, daughter and dancers that surround him, to his deteriorating health, and ultimate heart attack.

The dance numbers in this film are spectacular, with a touch of Fosse's Cabaret. Colored lights, jubilant music, leggy dancers, and dazzling costumes set an ultra-show biz scene; and it really works.

Some may find All That Jazz hard to follow. It is fast moving, fragmented and dreamy—some say that in his "ego trip", Fosse gets too carried away. This may be true; at times the abrupt juxtaposition is difficult to follow. But over-all, Fosse's venturesome attempt to express his revelations and turning point produces one dynamite show.

All That Jazz is playing at the Cordova Theatre in Pullman, at 7 and 9:10 p.m. See this film...it's like looking through a kaleidoscope.

A REVIEW: The audience learns "The Game" just ain't there no more

by Jeff Coupe

Last Monday's KUID-TV documentary about declining elk populations in north-central Idaho was a professional job of television reporting. It was accurate, provocative and well done.

Rebecca Newton of KUID-TV was the producer of the film, "The Game," which was shot last September near Running Creek on the Nez Perce National Forest.

With the amount of anti-hunting material circulating these days, I was skeptical of the film when advance promotion releases were made available. There was no need for concern, however.

The half-hour film dealt with startling aspects of elk hunting in the north-central Idaho region. One of the most startling was the fact that the number of elk harvested in north-central Idaho has dropped nearly 400 percent since 1960.

And, contrary to my fears, Newton pointed not at regulated sport hunting as the reason for this decline, but at a typical wildlife management phenomenon: declining habitat.

"What I feel I really couldn't get across in the film," Newton said, "is the elk population in the area is rising slightly, but hunters are being regulated more and more; hunters are bearing the brunt of the dilemma."

The reason for the drastic decline, as pointed out in the film, is the once excellent habitat for elk is now either accessible by logging roads or covered with thick forest which chokes-off forage.

"The Game" pointed out that large fires around the turn of the century burned off thick timber. Eventually, with open areas of young forage available, elk populations boomed. Now the forests are growing back, and elk populations are falling.

Areas where the elk winter should be burned to restore the elk herds, the film explained. The Idaho Fish and Game has been trying to do this for some time. In fact the Fish and Game gave the Nez Perce Forest $50,000 to do just that—carefully burn some areas to restore elk forage.

"The Nez Perce Forest doesn't have any prescription burn areas, however," Newton said. "They've decided to clear areas through logging and timber sales instead of fire."

Again, logging an area isn't the same as natural fire in restoring elk habitat. "Logging has seldom been restrictive or careful....logging companies use the cheapest methods possible to maximize profits," the film pointed out.

So, in the meanwhile the Fish and Game, which is supported almost entirely by hunting and fishing licenses and tag sales, fights the problem of declining elk populations by regulating the hunter more and more and charging more and more for the privilege of hunting elk.

Newton and cinematographer Artis Mebane, Jr., accompanied professional hunting guide Travis York on a 10-day expedition last September. There were five hunters on the trip, each of whom paid more than $1,000 for the hunt. No one bagged an elk.

"It was a total bust," Newton said, "But, the decline of elk is what the movie was about."

Indeed, the film was a fine job of reporting and hopefully will cause enough reaction to stimulate the Forest Service to burn more habitat for elk. If logging continues to dominate Nez Perce Forest decisions, and elk habitat takes a back seat to dollars and cents, it won't be long before elk viewing or hunting in the Grangeville area is gone.

Publication tells Idahoans where to not get lost

Ever move to a new area of Idaho and not have any idea of where to take a nature hike. There's help.

A publication produced by the U of I College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences gives up-to-date information on 106 nature, education and recreation sites in Idaho.

"This is the first study to inventory what is there and available to the public," Dr. James Fazio, a co-author, U of I associate professor and head of wildland recreation management said.

The publication is titled, A Guide to Idaho Interpretive and Environmental Education Facilities and Sites.

The directory may be purchased for $3 from the FWR College or ordered from, Editorial Office, College of Forestry, U of I.

Given are self-guiding nature trails, visitor centers, wildlife observation areas and environmental education camps useful in planning expeditions afield.

The guide also contains a summary of support facilities for the recreational sites listed county by county, including camp sites, drinking water, restrooms and facilities for handicapped persons.

Environmental education programs in four Idaho school districts and professional training programs offered by the College of Forestry here are also featured in the guide written by Fazio and Diane M. Spott.

On a geographical basis, Fazio says Idaho's Panhandle—or at least the area north of the Salmon River—contains 48 of the state's 104 sites. Idaho County with Grangeville as the county seat, leads the list with eleven sites.

Of the state's 43 self-guiding interpretive nature trails, two have been developed for those in wheelchairs and one for blind visitors.

"An attempt is now being made, especially by the state and the Forest Service, to make access possible for the handicapped," Fazio said.

New Fish and Game chief wants to start liaison group

The Idaho Fish and Game Department's new chief, Jerry Conley, said recently he wants to improve communications between the average sportsman and local conservation officers.

Conley is replacing Joseph C. Greenly, who resigned from the position as the state's chief of Fish and Game. Conley is currently working as Kansas's chief fish and game official.

Conley, 39, will take over top fish and game position for Idaho effective June 1.

Conley said he'd like to establish a liaison group of sportsmen from around Idaho to offer advice and criticism of the Fish and Game Department's policies and programs.

Conley has caught steelhead in the Clearwater River near Orofino. Conley's wife is from Idaho.

Conley served as a regional state fisheries supervisor in Utah from 1966-69, where he helped re-establish the Westslope Cutthroat Trout Fishery in Utah's Bear Lake.

The new chief hopes to end Idaho's struggle with Oregon and Washington over apportionment of steelhead and chinook runs. He said this struggle may be turning in Idaho's favor because of recent court struggles.

Night line offers referrals and understanding ear

by Suzanne Carr

The U of I recently was shocked by a suicide at the golf course by a member of a local fraternity. Some questions that might appear in retrospect are: Why? What caused him to do it? What could we as fellow students have done to prevent it?

Although they do not guarantee easy solutions to suicide or other tragedies, the volunteers at Nightline are an available option.

Defined by the people who work there, Nightline is "essentially a referral service." The number is 882-0320, and the phones are open from 6:30 p.m. until 2:30 a.m., seven days a week.

Volunteers are on the lines in four-hour shifts, once every two weeks. They try to have a man and a woman on each shift, but it's not always possible. Students can receive one credit per shift, as a Nightline volunteer, and can sign up through the psychology department, for a maximum of two credits.

"Most of us don't want someone else to tell us what to do," said one Nightline volunteer, "often we have ideas in our own heads that would solve our own problems, even though at the time of the crisis we don't feel that way at all. By getting those options and ideas out in the air we can hear how they sound, and we can make decisions about what's important."

Some of the other services Nightline offers include referrals to Rape Crisis, Pregnancy Counseling and Legal Aid.

"We have a voluminous file of references sources in Moscow and Pullman. We can refer you to someone, talk to you, or put you on hold on one number and call up an emergency service on the other," the volunteer continued. "If we don't have the answers,—and quite often we don't—we can put you in contact with whatever is appropriate for the situation."

According to another volunteer, "Nightline is not here to judge people. We are here to listen and give out information. Nightline's policy is to preserve the anonymity of the listener and the caller, if the caller wishes. There is confidentiality about using the phone. All that we will ever know is that you're a person."

Nightline averaged about one to two calls a night last semester. The calls vary in subject, many are concerning roommate problems, or people breaking up with girl or boy friends. Much of the time, people are just lonely. Nightline also handles drug and alcohol related calls.

"If you care enough to want to help, there is an opportunity here to give of yourself in helping others. A joy shared is twice a joy, a sorrow shared is half a sorrow; this is essentially what Nightline is," explained another volunteer.

To apply for a job with Nightline, go to the Student Counseling Center, UCC 309, to fill out a form and have an interview. Nightline needs people who can answer practical questions and would welcome support from members of the community. Presently, most of the staff are college students, which becomes a problem during the summer, when Nightline is forced to shut down because of a lack of staff.

Nightline has been in the community since 1970.

Sexton appointed editor; Fehrenbacher gets pie-faced

Slapstick comedy highlighted Wednesday's ASUI Senate meeting when the faces of President Scott Fehrenbacher and several senators were treated to unexpected whip cream pies.

The pies were distributed by members of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority on a fund raising mission for the Sigma Chi fraternity, said one unidentified pie tosser.

A spokesman for Sigma Chi, later said the escapade is part of Derby Days fund raising activities. The monies collected will be donated to Wallace Village, a school for children with learning disabilities.

He said it has not been determined how much money was raised, but students paid to have the pies thrown at selected individuals.

In other business, the senate approved the appointment of next fall's Argonaut editor, Diance Sexton, a senior journalism student, will take office this summer.

The senate also approved the appointments of Larry Fry, a junior in business accounting, to the ASUI Activity Center Board and Darrell Coleman, a junior political science major, as chairman of the People to People Committee.

The ASUI golf course was appropriated nearly $400 to meet bid specifications for the purchase of a Cushman Turf Truckster.

Helpers needed for district 4-H contest

The District 4-H competitions are being held this weekend—and the local collegiate 4-H group is hurting for help.

The organization needs people who have been involved in 4-H and have at least a slight idea about how to judge contests, run 4-H demonstrations and relay information to younger 4-H members.

The competitions are being held Saturday in the SUB, from 9:30 a.m. on into the afternoon. Interested people can call Corinne Rowe at 885-6545 in the Morrill Hall 4-H office.

Rowe also has applications for dorm counselors, instructor's assistants, and advisors for 4-H Club Congress this summer. Applications are also available for summer camp baseball
