Professor of 39 years to retire

After almost 40 years and well over 1,000 students, U of I mechanical engineering professor Henry Silha is retiring at the close of the academic year.

Silha came to Idaho in 1941 from Montana where he graduated from Montana State University. He worked the equivalent of a semester after his graduation in engineering, before he moved to Idaho. He has taught at Idaho ever since.

Of the many changes he has seen through the years, the one that comes to mind quickest for Silha, is the growth of the Engineering department. "I was here before any of these buildings on this block," Silha says about the Janssen Engineering Building, the Gauss, Johnson and Buchanan Engineering Labs. The old engineering department was where the home economics building is today, according to Silha.

Silha plans to retire in Moscow, and pursue his hobbies which include wood and metal working and clock making. He also enjoys fishing and plans to stay active in a few community activities. He and his wife are active members of the United Methodist Church in Moscow.

Silha said he will still be a part of the community and the school. "I have enjoyed the community and the people in the community and the University. I have had many interesting associations with people since I came here, including students," he said.

He said he enjoyed working with the students over the years and he feels he has "always gotten along pretty well with students. I always thought I'd enjoy it and I don't regret it. I think the rewards are there, especially as I look at some of the letters I've been getting."

He said student attitudes are variable, "there are periods when they felt one way and periods when that changed the other way. In general we have had a pretty good rapport in this department. We've not had some of the fluctuations experienced in some schools and departments."

Silha has received two "Engineer of the Year Awards" in 1976. One from the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and one from the American Society of Metals. He is associated with both these groups as well as Sigma Xi and Sigma Tau.

Silha has concentrated his efforts in the last few years on mechanical design, vibrations mechanics, and stress analysis.

Silha has three children, a daughter in Wyoming, a daughter in Indiana, and a son in the Netherlands.

When asked about his special interests, Silha quickly replied, "Education... It's been my life." After 39 years at the U of I, who can argue?

Regents to look at $8 fee increase, credit transfer

The Idaho State Board of Education/Board of Regents will consider an $8 per semester fee increase for full-time students at the U of I and a $4 fee increase for summer school students at its meeting Thursday and Friday at Twin Falls.

Proposed by the U of I administration to "help meet inflationary impact" on the operating budget, the $8 fee would:

- increase the intercollegiate athletic fee $5 to $50.50
- increase the intramural athletics fee 50 cents to $4.50
- increase the locker service fee 50 cents to $2.
- increase the student health fee $2 to $17.50.

If approved, this increase would bring semester enrollment fees at the university to $245 and generate approximately $104,500 in additional revenue. It is the second increase in as many years.

A public hearing will be held May 8 at the Fine Arts Auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act. Written testimony will be accepted at the office of the U of I financial vice president until Monday, May 5.

The fee increase for summer session students is expected to generate $4,400 and would:

- increase the student health fee $1 to $6
 - increase the student union fee $2 to $9
 - increase the summer school activities fee 50 cents to $6
 - increase the locker service fee 50 cents to $2.
- If approved, the increase would bring the cost of attending summer classes from $132 to $136.

The regents also will consider allowing the university to enter into revised contracts for student health and accident insurance.

Presently all U of I students are covered by accident insurance during the academic year, and the premium is included within the uniform student fee. Health insurance, which covers sickness as well as accident, is optional and offered separately.

If approved by the board, the two-tiered approach will be retained, but the entire program will be treated as one insurance package, with a student allowed to make a choice about buying insurance during registration.

In other business the board will consider a facilities management agreement that would allow the U of I Foundation to acquire the INTERSEC Building in Idaho Falls and lease it to the university in conjunction with Idaho State University.

It will also consider an informal report about an updated electrical service agreement with Washington Water Power.

Elections draw low turnout

Fourteen percent of the student body re-elected five senatorial incumbents, passed a student fee increase for an entertainment department next year and failed a referendum which would have moved the ASUI presidential election to the spring in the ASUI election Wednesday.

Incumbent Eric Stoddard, received 571 votes to lead the pack of 14 candidates. Cathy Tesnohlidek was second with 556, Laurie Crossman third with 543, followed by Kevin Holt with 505, Joe Campos with 489, Steve Cory with 473, and Bruce Tarbet with 452.

Mark Rivard was eighth with 405 votes, followed by Dave Cooper with 323, Tim Towell with 304, Pete Becker with 292, Chris Nichols with 265, Ben Bruce with 235, and Lindblom with 123.

Terry Brown and Kirk Hadley were both elected to Faculty Council representative positions with 742 and 716 votes respectively.

A referendum to raise student fees $2 for the funding of an entertainment department passed with 749 voting yes and 352 no.

A referendum to move ASUI presidential election to the spring received a majority vote but failed to capture two thirds of the vote and went down in defeat.

In the preferential election ballot, John Anderson received 30 percent of the vote, Jimmy Carter 28 percent, Ronald Reagan 27 percent, George Bush nine percent and Edward Kennedy six percent.

In the Idaho senate seat race, Frank Church received 63 percent to Steve Symms 37 percent.

For the First District Congressional race Larry Craig received 43 percent of the vote, Wayne Kidwell 30 percent, Glen Nichols 12 percent, Terry McKay seven percent and Jan Hammer five percent.

In the Second District congressional race George Hanson received 35 percent, Diane Bilyeu 34 percent and Jim Jones 31 percent.

Aid asked for arboretum project

Work on the new Shattuck Arboretum and Botanic Garden will commence soon, with shelter belt planting, pest control and the planting and maintenance of a display garden first on the agenda, the Arboretum Associates announced.

The Arboretum Associates is organized to further the development of the arboretum expansion project. Membership is open to any individual or organization, with dues ranging from $2.50 for students to $1,000 for a "life associate" membership.

The project has received a boost in the form of an $18,500 CETA grant for 1980, but a great deal more money still remains to be raised, said Membership Chairwoman Marlene Johnston. The arboretum project receives no funding from either the university or the state.

Individuals or groups interested in furthering the arboretum expansion are asked to make a small annual contribution, Johnston said. "For faculty, staff and non-students, a $10 gift translates into less than a dollar a month," she pointed out. "For students, a $2.50 gift boils down to less than a penny a day. That's only the price of a pizza, a theater ticket or a six pack and a bag of potato chips," she added.

The address of the Arboretum Associates is P.O. Box 3391, University Station, Moscow, Idaho.

What Are The Employment Opportunities In Your Academic Major?

HISTORY? LIBERAL ARTS? PHYSICAL EDUCATION?
SOCIAL SCIENCE? PSYCHOLOGY? EDUCATION?
POLITICAL SCIENCE?

YOU MAY WANT TO LEAD A DOUBLE LIFE AFTER COLLEGE! FOR EXAMPLE, TEACHERS AS WELL AS PROFESSIONALS IN THE DISCIPLINES ABOVE CAN BE PART TIME OFFICERS IN THE ARMY RESERVE OR NATIONAL GUARD AND EARN UP TO $5000 PER YEAR IN ADDITION TO THEIR CIVILIAN SALARIES -- NOT TO MENTION VALUABLE RETIREMENT, SHOPPING, AND TRAVEL BENEFITS.

Enter the employment market with assets that American business and industry need. And begin your life after college with the opportunity of developing two careers.

How? Through Army ROTC leadership and management training. With that, ROTC graduates measure up to the needs of American Business.

You'll not only lead a life in a civilian career. You'll also have the opportunity of enhancing it as an officer in the U.S. Army Reserve or the Army National Guard.

That means extra income, immediate management experience, community involvement. Two careers.

More harm than good

What's wrong with Gary Spurgeon? Gary is the Communications Board appointee for KUOI-FM station manager and is facing stiff opposition from the ASUI President and the senate.

These leaders of the ASUI feel a "house cleaning" of the station is needed to sweep out all that noisy radical music. They say Spurgeon isn't willing to do that.

The Communications Board believes he has the ability to operate the station in a responsible manner, regardless of what his personal tastes in music are.

The senate is being rash.

The Communications Board has spent hours, if not days, determining what qualities make a good station manager. The senators spend a half hour every two weeks talking to their living groups. Their presentations are naturally biased in favor of their own opinions and reach only those students who live on campus.

It is the consensus of the Comm Board that a format change is needed at KUOI. Not a music change, but a format change. The Comm Board also realized that you cannot make major changes in the operation of a volunteer radio station over night.

The senate doesn't realize that. They want an immediate change, a change to represent the views of those they have talked to on-campus Greek and dorm students.

If the senate wants to change KUOI-FM's music format, they should sit down and take a good hard look at exactly where KUOI is at and where it is going. They shouldn't try to railroad a candidate through who may not be able to run the station but who will promise to do their bidding.

This year's senate is unique in that it will also be next year's senate. Because of the large number of incumbents re-elected, the same people have an opportunity to take a semester to look at a problem rather than hurrying it through in one week.

Gary Spurgeon has stated he is willing to work with the senate and is open to suggestions concerning KUOI's current format and proposed changes. They should take the Comm Board's recommendation and work with him rather than lock themselves into a single course that could alienate not only the KUOI staff, its listeners, and the Comm Board, but possibly cripple the station at a time of transition between managers when it needs all the support and continuity it can muster.

The story of "O"

Ah, the wonders of modern technology. We can have the entire newspaper typeset with sophisticated computer equipment, but for some unknown reason, our "O"s just wouldn't come out Monday night.

Everything worked just as it should, but try as we may, that stubborn equipment just wouldn't turn out a satisfactory "O". We begged, we pleaded, we even tried a black felt pen but nothing would really give us a decent "O".

So, every time you see a blank space in today's paper, just try to imagine an "O" there.

WHAT I WANNA KNOW IS... WHY WASN'T I CONSULTED?!

is gay really the way?

mark erickson

Two weeks ago, a CBS Special Report entitled Gay Power, Gay Politics played to prime time Saturday night. It was a powerful hour.

The documentary focused on the gay movement in the San Francisco area, more specifically on an area called "The Castro," where gay is the rule, not the exception. It examined the political power the bay area's gays wield, a power made strong and being strengthened by the force of unity among Frisco's prolific gay community.

In the wake of the slaying of the city's mayor and gay councilman and the subsequent rioting by the gay community after the killer received a relatively light sentence, the City Hall of San Francisco was forced to recognize the gay community for what it is: 15 percent of the voting population and a power to be reckoned with.

The film also looked at the question of community standards with respect to new lifestyles gays are beginning to make more prevalent with their advocacy of free sex, public sex and open cruising in the Castro.

One gay leader made a comment indicative of why their cause is futile and destined to failure. When asked by the reporter if the leaders of the gay community don't perchance have some obligation to be respectful of and to an extent follow community standards, the man's eyes flared slightly, and he retorted in shaky voice: "Accept community standards, we're going to set them."

Maybe in San Francisco they will. There people seemed more concerned with the gaining of political power than the correct use of it, and feel a changing world necessarily means changing social and moral standards. But they won't set standards in Moscow, Idaho or Topeka, Kansas or Washington, D.C., where people have a deeper sense of what is right and what isn't.

The report brought to light a couple of statistics that momentarily numbed my senses. A Kinsey report on gays in the San Francisco area, stated that more than 50 percent of the men interviewed had sex with at least 500 different men, and 28 percent of the men had sex with at least 1,000 different men.

The key word there is different. A thousand different men means having sex with a different person, everyday for three straight years.

Homosexual behavior by men or women isn't normal. It's not a natural state of existence. That doesn't mean people who lead lesbian or gay lifestyles are not normal, it means what they do, as an act, isn't normal.

Homosexuality has existed since the beginning of mankind; so has murder, wife beating, child molesting, adultery, greed, incest and war. I realize you cannot equate one to any other, but you can make the point that all of these activities, while they have existed, have not been condoned as normal and have faced strident opposition wherever they have flourished.

We are a culmination of what has been. What we are today as a society is what we were yesterday as a society.

One of the mainstems of our social activity has been to further the cause of what we perceive to be right: Ideals such as truth, justice, equality, freedom, brotherhood....

No where in that current will you find homosexual behavior propagated by any society as an accepted way of living, or condoned on any large scale by members of a society.

I'm not advocating stepping on the rights or the power of gay community in this country or anywhere in the world. I have a strong feeling that in time what they are doing will be examined by our society and either tolerated as an accepted change or discarded, much as it was in Germany during the 1930s, as an anomalous way of life.

If gays and lesbians feel their way of living should be a social norm, they should make their voices heard, and let people decide for themselves if what they advocate is right or wrong.

It's not just me you're going to have to deal with for the rest of your life if you're gay, it's the Catholic, the farmer, the clerk, and the butcher who will decide if gay really is the way.

even journalists need a little love

kerrin mcMahon

Someone once told me dentists have one of the highest suicide rates in the country. I can understand that. Being in a profession that makes people hate to come see you must eventually take its mental toll.

I think I know how a dentist must feel. I plan to be a journalist.

Journalists are among the most looked-down-on members of society. It is somewhat disheartening to know that there are thousands of people out there who have never even met me, yet still are convinced that I am an unprincipled, over-aggressive, rude, arrogant scandal monger, simply because I'm a journalist.

People who know me are free to think me an arrogant scandal monger, but I find it a bit presumptuous in total strangers.

There are many otherwise normal people around who become unreasonably paranoid at the sight of a reporter. Some of our illustrious and hardworking university administrators take pride in having an open-door policy for students. But let that student be carrying a pad and pencil, or, God forbid, a tape recorder, and the door suddenly becomes a lot harder to open.

One administrative type, who used to smile broadly and shake my hand at every opportunity when I was on the ASUI Senate, recently threw me out of his office (figuratively, not literally), amid a torrent of verbal abuse, just because I wanted to ask him a question for a story.

Frankly, I was hurt. After all, he could have just said, "I don't know."

Even a local campus clergyman, who is an undeniably reasonable man and general all-around nifty person, was reluctant to address a journalism class this semester because he was afraid the students would be "out to get" him.

I have trouble understanding how a class of eight or ten journalism students learning to write editorials could be thought of as being "out to get" anybody.

As a rule, journalists aren't "out to get" people. There are plenty of openings for that kind of work in the Mafia. Reporters are only "out to get" the news. The story. The truth, or the closest possible approximation thereof. That's even true down here at the Argonaut, where we have been accused at one time or another of being "out to get" just about every group or individual imaginable.

Of course, there are a few exceptions in any profession. But journalists are persons, too, and on the whole we are not better or worse than anyone else. Even we low-life Argonaut scum have our good points. Believe it or not, we actually have people working down here (including my boss) who salute the flag, go to church on Sunday and are kind to animals.

In fact, the only criticism that could apply to most of the Argonaut staff (and journalists in general) is that we drink a lot. But you'd drink, too, if everyone hated you.

ASUI interference

Editor,

Early this semester, the ASUI Senate voted on a bill (SB No. 9), that would restructure the ASUI Programs Department. Among other changes, this bill provided that appointments of committee chairs would be made by the president and approved by the senate. Another committee chairperson and I went to the Senate meeting to protest this, citing that the president was not close enough to all of the activities in the Programs Department to make good selections. We pointed out that this opened the door to political appointments and that the committee members and/or programs manager are best suited to select their committee chairperson.

The bill passed, nevertheless, and here is an example of its consequences: There were two applicants for chairman of the Coffeehouse Committee. One applicant had been a conscientious committee member all semester, knew how the Coffeehouse operated, and was perfectly suited for the position. As acting chairman of the Coffeehouse Committee, I submitted a letter recommending this person to Scott Fehrenbacher and the Senate. Yet, Scott selected the other applicant who had never before worked with the Coffeehouse.

When questioned about the reasoning behind his choice, Scott replied that it had been a "difficult decision." (He could have asked the programs coordinator, the programs manager, the assistant manager, or myself for advice in this decision. He didn't.)

If I felt that Scott's appointee would make a good Coffeehouse chairman, I would have no objection to his decision, but the new chairman has not been ensuring that everything is being done, nor has she even shown enough interest in the Coffeehouse to show up on Saturday nights. I suspect that Scott and his senate may fill up on Saturday nights. I suspect that Scott and his senate may fill other newly-acquired pigeon holes with birds of a similar feather. There are also other indications that the quality of the Programs Department is suffering as a result of this senate bill.

Perhaps it would be more advantageous to leave the internal affairs of the Programs Department to the programs people, freeing the senate to concentrate on issues so chronically neglected (such as the East End Elephant Expansion.)

Sincerely,
Ron Beloin

KUOI appreciator

Editor,

Well, it looks like the majority of students are going to get their way.

This summer KUOI will seek a mode of radio format to please all students. I personally don't see why students are dissatisfied with KUOI-FM. Is it the management the disc jockies or who?

Here are some of the many reasons why I enjoy KUOI.

1) KUOI plays a large variety of music for "all" people to enjoy during the day and at scheduled block programmed hours. KUOI plays bluegrass, blues, swing, country, rockabilly, rhythm and blues, jazz (progressive, avante-garde, fusion early era), classical, reggae (ethnic) rock-and-roll (light, medium, hard) and even the newest of music, new wave.

Is it that KUOI is too progressive, or are they trying to please too many people?

2) KUOI is a rich informational source. Featured goodies include the news (three times daily), the Music Monger (informs you daily of the weekly music in the surrounding Palouse area), On the Market (daily with sales, bargains, rides, etc.), special exchange tape programs (from the "History of Malcolm X" to "How to Buy a Used Car"), Coffeehouse highlights (weekly recordings of local musicians), Preview '80 (insight of various new music that is on the market), live remotes (i.e. U of I women's basketball, U of I baseball, ASUI senate candidates' forum, registration, etc.), interviews (every Wednesday features an ASUI senate, local and visiting musicians, politicians and people of interest.)

Are you bored with this? Is there too much information?

3) KUOI is an alternative radio station. This station is not trying to match or be like any other. They provide a different format that breaks the monotonous commercialism that rules the radio airways. Besides educating their listeners to a variety of music, they also expose their listeners to the newest music released by record companies.

I hope that I have provided some insight to the present function of KUOI-FM. Besides, if you would like to listen to "album-oriented" music, tune in to KREM-FM. If you prefer "Top 40" music, then KRPL or KOZE would be your choice. Let us also remember that KUID-FM changed their format to please and appeal to the students and the community.

Thanks for nothing

Editor,

I wish to express my appreciation for the publicity given to my sign-language class. However, as the article was published on April 11 it gave the people interested no chance, as you suggested to join the March 26 class. There will be classes this summer and next fall, possibly next spring. Thank you.

DEADLINE MAY 9

VanDerveer new Ohio State women's basketball coach

Tara VanDerveer, who coached the U of I women's basketball team the past two seasons, has been named head coach at Ohio State University, it was announced Monday.

VanDerveer, whose two year record at Idaho was an impressive 42-14, was named head coach at a press conference Monday at Columbus. The 26-year-old VanDerveer was an assistant coach at OSU from 1976 to 1978 under Debbie Wilson.

When Wilson resigned last month, VanDerveer applied for the job and learned she had been selected late last week. She said she had no plans to leave Idaho until she found the OSU job had opened.

"I hadn't applied for any other job this year, even though there were a lot of openings, even at Indiana, where I played. I felt I had some things still to do at Idaho. But this was a unique opportunity and it was the only job I would have been interested in.

VanDerveer will take over the Buckeye team that finished the 1979-80 campaign with a 10-18 record.

VanDerveer's contract at the U of I was renewable yearly. Kathy Clark, head of women's athletics, said she'll be looking for a replacement this week.

VanDerveer took over a young Idaho team two years ago, and it ended with a 17-8 record, including a 15-5 mark among small-college competitors.

This year's team finished with a 25-6 season record which included the NCWSA regional crown and a berth in the AIAW Division II tournament. The Vandals were beaten 84-81 by Cal State-Los Angeles in the first round of the national tournament, but the U of I squad posted the best season record ever by a Vandal women's basketball team.

VanDerveer, who competed on the Indiana University team during her collegiate career, will still conduct her scheduled girls basketball camp in Moscow June 22-27. She'll move to Columbus following the camp.

Baseball team splits with SU

After losing both ends of a doubleheader to Seattle University Saturday in Bellevue, the Idaho Vandal baseball team bounced back Sunday and dropped the Chieftains twice to earn a split in Nor-Pac Conference action.

The Vandal pitching again was hot over the weekend as the Chieftains scored only 10 runs in the four games, but the Vandal bats were cold on Saturday.

In Saturday's first game, the Vandals jumped out to a 2-0 lead when Dave Alderman homered in the first inning after Don Wulff singled.

Vandal pitcher Brian Stokes held the Chieftains hitless and scoreless until the sixth inning, but gave up three walks and hit one batter in the sixth and was replaced by Scott Ramsey.

Ramsey gave up another walk, and the score was tied 2-2 going into the seventh inning. Seattle then won it 3-2 in the last inning as the Vandals committed an error after a Chieftain batter reached first on a fielder's choice and stole second.

The second game was just as bad for the Vandals as they committed four errors that led to three unearned Chieftain runs. The Vandals lost 4-1.

On Sunday, the tide turned for the Vandals as the bats finally came alive with a 9-0 shutout in the first game. Brent Hathaway went the distance for the Vandals, picking up the win as he held Seattle to just three hits while striking out two.

The Vandals scored a run in the first and added two more in the third when Wulff hit a home run with Rick Brown on first. Brown, Wulff and Alderman had two RBI's each as the Vandals pounded out nine hits.

The second game saw the Vandals come from behind after the Chieftains jumped out to an early 3-0 in the first inning.

The Vandals got their first run in the third inning when Alderman doubled and Gene Ulmer followed with a RBI single.

Ulmer tied the game one inning later with a solo home run.

The Vandals won the game 4-3 in the sixth inning as Ulmer, Alderman and Wulff walked with one out. Tom Rose hit a ground ball and beat the throw to first, allowing Wulff to score.

The Shootest

Don Lindsey, Bonners Ferry, Idaho, a lifetime member of the National Rifle Association, has been target shooting for 35 years. Shooting from each of the four NRA positions, prone, sitting, kneeling and off-hand takes concentration and rock steady nerves.

Don fires a Model 52 C Winchester target rifle with a 30 power scope at a target 50 feet away. The target has ten Bulls about the size of a silver dollar, placed evenly on a piece of paper. Each Bull has five rings of declining value.

When firing from the prone, sitting or kneeling positions a clip is used, but not from the off-hand position. The rifle weighing 12½ pounds is set on the ground after each round has been fired.

Rodeo

While Parents Weekend meant turtle racing and entertaining parents for most U. of I students, members of the University of Idaho Rodeo Club were busy sponsoring a National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association rodeo at Lewiston's Tammany Arena. The University of Idaho team did not place high among the eleven northwest colleges and universities represented, by Alan Porath and Toby Flick (below right), both U of I riders, made the finals in bull and bronc riding, respectively.

The University of Idaho's Rodeo Team was formed in 1950 and has had chronic support and facility problems dissolving for lack of members several times. This year's small dynamic club is headed by President Dave Kiser, Vice-President Bruce Kerner and Secretary-Treasurer Sue Douglas.

Vets

Cedar Veterinary Hospital opened for practice in Moscow in 1973. Margretta Kethler D.V.M. started the business and currently splits the veterinary chores with Cathy Mosher D.V.M. The hospital treats small animals, and though most are dogs or cats, they have in the past had ferrets, snakes, a coati-mondi, and a cougar as patients. A valuable asset to the community, the hospital provides vaccinations and animal surgery as well as routine checkups.

Scuba dooba doo

Scuba diving opportunities may be few and far between around Moscow, but for some UI students scuba diving has become a twice weekly event at the Swim Center.

Roger Golden, instructor in physical education, teaches two sections of P.E. 108 each semester. Each student admitted to the class must pass certain water skill requirements, which are improved upon during the semester.

Completion of the class does not automatically lead to certification as a diver, but does give the student all the information and skills necessary for becoming certified. At the end of the semester the student is indeed ready to move out into the underwater realm.

JESSE...

a profile in ballet

Teri Keefover

Jesse Bedirian, 10, of Pullman, Washington, an intermediate student at the Ballet Folk School likes the grace and the performance involved in ballet. She says that a good dancer can give the dance a beautifully graceful movement.

Jesse says, "you can express feelings with ballet, like in a spring ballet. It can make you feel good." The performance gives the audience a chance to enjoy the movement of the ballet, sometimes giving the viewer something to "dream about."

Jesse started her dance training in Rochester New York at the age of seven and has played small parts in the Nutcracker Suite in New York. Besides dancing Jesse likes to participate in baseball, football and swimming.

Men finish third in Big Sky tennis

BOISE—After leading the Big Sky Tournament following the first day's competition the Vandal men's tennis team came away in third place in what coach Rod Leonard called "the best tournament yet."

The Vandals beat Montana and Northern Arizona by identical scores of 6-3 on Thursday to jump out in front with 12 points but then lost to eventual winner Weber State 5-4 on Friday. U of I rebounded to dump Boise State 6-3.

On Saturday, the Vandals were beaten by pre-tournament favorite Nevada-Reno, 6-3.

"We played fairly well against Weber State and Nevada-Reno," said Leonard. "They were just better teams. The 5-4 score against Weber is the closest we've come to them in two years."

Leonard said Nevada-Reno was the best team there but got a bad draw in the tournament and lost to Weber State the first day, as the Wolfpack had to default two matches to the Wildcats.

The Vandals had no champions in the tournament, but the doubles team of Scott Moreland and Suresh Menon wound up with a 4-1 record in the No. 2 doubles position. That was their first loss of the year as they wound up the season with a 14-1 record. Menon also went 4-1 in singles play to ear second place in the tourney and had a 15-5 season record.

Moreland went 2-2 in singles play for the Vandals and ended the season with a 5-15 record as the No. 1 singles player. Moreland is the only senior on the team.

Bob Simmons went 3-2 in the tournament as did his brother John Simmons. John ended the season with an 8-8 record while Bob had an 11-9 record. The two combined on the Vandal's No. 1 doubles team and went 3-2 in the tournament and wound up with a 7-5 season record.

"I thought we had a good year," said Leonard. "We ended the year 18-8 including both fall and spring matches and it was the toughest competition we have ever played."

"The Big Sky Conference this year was the best that has ever been," he added.

Women netters win WSU tournament

Proficient at winning its own tournaments, the Vandal women's tennis team proved this weekend it can win other teams' tourneys, too.

The Vandals swept through three matches to take first-place in the Washington State University Invitational, played at both Palouse colleges Friday and Saturday.

U of I blanked Central Washington and Pacific Lutheran 9-0 and beat tourney host WSU 8-1 to win the tournament. The Vandals are now 21-2 on the year. WSU finished second in the four-team affair with a 2-1 record and is now 11-12 overall.

"I felt like we did real well; the tournament was real low key," said Vandal coach Amanda Burk. "We managed to beat WSU 8-1, and we were playing without subs, so that gives us a good idea how strong we are. We'd also beaten Central and WSU before."

The tournament served as a warmup for this weekend, when the Vandals play host in the NCWSA Division II regional tournament.

"We're shooting for a good weekend, and our goals are to win No. 1 in everything," Burk said. "We hope to make a clean sweep of the whole thing, which hasn't been done before."

Burk said she's concerned, however, with the fact that Kristi Pfeiffer is still nursing a wrist injury. Pfeiffer, who plays No. 5 singles, injured the wrist two weekends ago and hasn't held a racket in her right hand in 11 or 12 days.

"I'd like to kind ease her into hitting balls, and I hope she's ready to go," Burk said. "If not, I'll do some lineup juggling." If Pfeiffer doesn't play in regionals, she won't be able to play at nationals if the Vandals qualify.

Soccer club wins

The U of I Dynamox received balanced scoring from the forwards and midfielders Sunday afternoon to beat the Lewiston Pepsi Seaporters 5-2 in a non-league game at Lewiston. The Dynamox are now 4-0 in the spring season.

The Dynamox got goals from Charlie Natahn, Terry Bartlett and Brian Hawes to take a 3-1 halftime lead over the Seaporters. The U of I team clinched the game in the second half with goals by Sunday John and Jerry Snyder. Chuck Barrrows placed both shots for the Seaporters.

The Dynamox wrap up Panhandle Soccer League action with a game against the Washington State University club at 5 p.m. today at Martin Stadium in Pullman.

Wear a sandal that's as good as gold.

You've probably heard just how comfortable Scholl Exercise Sandals can be. That's because they're shaped like the bottom of your foot—with a hollow to cradle your heel and a little crest that fits in right under your toes.

But it's that little crest that gives you something more than comfort from Exercise Sandals. That crest makes your toes hang on when you walk so your legs firm up and shape up. To help give you legs that are the best they can be.

And now you can get a little something else special from Scholl. A miniature gold-finished Exercise Sandal that looks as great around your neck as the real ones do on your feet. It even comes on its own 18" gold-finished "S" chain.

This charm of a sandal, available only through Scholl, is yours for just $4.95, including postage and handling. So step right up to the Scholl Exercise Sandal display, pick up an order blank (or send in the one on the right), and get the sandal that has the world on a chain.

Artistic freedom blooms at Renaissance Fair

Belly dancing:

"I like to dance wild!"

by Linda Welford

Throughout the United States, dance has become a focal point of the performing arts, and America's dance audiences have grown to unexpected proportions. Most of us know something about jazz, ballet, disco and modern. But there is another form of dance that is being resurrected from the deepest roots of civilization, and the demand for knowledge of the dance is nearly unparalleled: Belly dancing. This dance form has continued to amass a great number of students since the early seventies.

When it comes to belly dancing, Moscow resident, Lee Ann Frommig has what it takes to shake. Although an American, Frommig received instruction from a number of noted Mid-Eastern dancers...and she is good.

Says Frommig, "There's a kinship type of feeling in belly dance. You can feel how old it is when you dance it." She goes on to explain how the term "Belly dance" was contrived. "The early French explorers saw the Arabs dance. They marvelled at the rib cage, stomach and abdominal movements which were far from their ho-hum Western European dance." In sharing the experience with their countrymen, they described what they had seen as "belly" dancing.

Frommig contends that belly dance is more unique in that the dancer is "closer to the earth." There are generally rigid rules of choreography or memorization. It's the dancer and the earth at her (or his) feet. Whether it's the dance of a fertility rite or harum ritual, there's a luring and enticing message in those pulsating movements....

"Community theater on a grand scale" is how organizers are describing plans for the seventh annual Renaissance Fair scheduled May 17 and 18 at Moscow's East City Park.

A 10 a.m. medieval procession from the park to Moscow's downtown Friendship Square and back will open the fair. The procession will include a coven of 13 fairies, who later will serve as the fair's staff, the jack, queen and king of hearts, jesters, jugglers, minstrels and a giant fire-breathing dragon, which was a flat-bed truck in its previous life.

About 100 artists and craftsfolk have been selected to display and sell their work at the fair, according to coordinator Kally Thurman.

Exhibitors are asked to be in costume this year.

Crafts displays will emphasize quality in handmade articles, including clothing and shoes, musical instruments, pottery, jewelry and knives.

"The fair provides a forum for those people to sell their wares, to keep those arts from dying in a culture that is by and large mass marketed," Thurman said.

The fair's two full days of entertainment will include Shakespearian scenes, juggling acts and dance among a wide variety of performances. Music will range from jazz to bluegrass to a recorder ensemble

Four groups of puppeteers will roam the streets of Moscow between the park and downtown throughout the fair. Other entertainers will stray from the park to perform in other areas of the city, with much activity centering in Friendship Square.

A maypole, symbolizing the fair's function as a celebration of spring, home cooked foods and non-competitive games will be among the fair's other features.

Renaissance Fair traditionally has been the first weekend in May, but organizers moved it to the middle of the month this year to improve chances of rainless weather.

"We've checked the Farmer's Almanac and apparently that's going to be 'fair weather,' as they say," Thurman said.

Should rain prevail, the fair will be held at the Moscow Junior High School fieldhouse.

Fair-connected activity will extend beyond the actual event this year. Moscow artists are meeting to form a non-profit organization behind the fair, with hopes of making Renaissance Fair a permanent institution, sponsoring other events during the year and helping artists support themselves with their work.

Last year's fair drew an estimated 5,000 to 7,000 people, even though inclement weather forced it indoors.

"What will Prime do if we outgrow our computer in a couple of years?"

That's a tough, hard-headed question. But before you spend all the time and money selecting and programming a computer system you should know what can be done if you outgrow it. Because if you don't, somewhere down the road you may face the unpleasant prospect of outgrowing your computer and having to start all over again.

The Answer Is The Plan

The Prime Computer User Plan.

At Prime, we've built our business around better answers to your tough questions with uniquely practical, user-oriented solutions. For example, Prime's customers have always had the answer to the upgrade question. They're protected by the Prime Computer User Plan—the only guaranteed upgrade plan in the industry.

The Plan Is Your Guarantee

Under the Plan you can upgrade to a faster central processor, bigger memory and increased capabilities. When you buy your first Prime system you're actually buying into a family of totally compatible systems. And you'll know the upgrade costs before you buy—they're guaranteed for two years. You'll also receive up to a 50% trade-in allowance for replaced parts. And even better, your programs will run without modifications. They'll just run faster.

Upgrades are as easy as swapping boards.

Compatibility Is Your Protection

The Plan works because hardware and software compatibility has always been a part of the Prime design. And this Plan is typical of Prime's innovative approach to your tough problems. Whether you need a small system or a large system, distributed processing or mainframe capabilities—the answer is Prime. For more information on Prime, our products, and our Plan, write Prime Computer, Inc., Department 5310, 40 Walnut Street, Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts 02181.

Carter budget cuts named student aid, handicapped plans

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) — President Carter's newly-proposed balanced federal budget may cut as much as $50 off the amount of financial aid each student receives next year, while drastically reducing help to colleges trying to remove architectural barriers for handicapped students.

The budget, introduced in March as a means of combating inflation, proposes giving the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) program $140 million less than what President Carter had proposed in January, when he submitted his first budget to Congress.

Steve Leifman, lobbyist for the Coalition of Independent College and University Students (usually referred to as COPUS), estimates the cuts, if approved, would mean every student with BEOG will get $50 less next year, although tuition on most campuses will be going up.

"The danger in that," Leifman explained, "is that the people who can least afford the cut are going to be cut first."

Congress still must approve the president's new budget, but Leifman expects it to approve the BEOG cut because "Congress is so screwed up."

The environment in Washington is very peculiar," he said. "People want a balanced budget, but not at the expense of their own programs."

If the cuts are approved, total BEOG funding for the 1981 fiscal year would be reduced to $2.6 billion, approximately the level of fiscal 1979.

"When you look at the number," Leifman noted, "it doesn't look like much of a cut. But when you figure in an 18 to 20 percent inflation rate, it becomes a substantial cut."

"Overall, one out of every six students receives some form of financial aid," CORPUS' Leifman complained. "We've launched a major campaign to stave off the budget cuts. But the most effective way to stop this is through the people who benefit from the programs." Leifman said he hopes for a grassroots protest against the cuts.

The Arctic

Students may be missing lab experiences there

U of I undergraduates studying a field-oriented science may be missing a chance for a rare educational opportunity to study the Arctic and have a little adventure on the side, according to Dr. Maynard Miller, U of I College of Mines and Earth Resources dean.

Miller, also director of the Glaciological and Arctic Sciences Institute headquartered on campus, says the program is underutilized by Idaho undergraduates despite its popularity among students at "Ivy League" schools and other major U.S. universities.

A $22,000 National Science Foundation grant has enabled the institute to award 10 participantships to undergraduate students approaching their senior year, Miller said, but to date, no U of I undergraduate has applied.

Since the 12-week program begins July 1, however, applications must be received by mid-May, Miller adds. Research programs sponsored by the institute end August 24.

The institute conducts field research on rugged icefields in the remote region between Juneau, Alaska, and Atlin, British Columbia. Students assist professional researchers in their studies of glaciers and peripheral areas and pursue studies of their own.

"I think students at the University of Idaho do not realize the importance of this program," Miller said. "They also fail to realize that we can and are expected to give a certain preference to our own students in awarding participantships."

Each participantship, Miller said, is worth approximately $2,500, when the total costs of maintaining institute facilities, food and travel on the icefields are finally accounted for.

Perhaps more important than the actual research work itself or the expeditionary nature of the institute, Miller said, is the chance to work with some internationally known scientists.

According to Dr. George Williams, U of I geology department head and NSF program coordinator, one of the greatest benefits of the program occurs within the student.

"Working together on a glacier for eight weeks gives participants an idea of what it means to rely on a group for everything.

"But a strange thing happens because, although all material necessities must be taken care of by the group and these essentials remain the same, people in the program develop more confidence and individuality in their thinking. That is the only freedom of expression they have available."

U of I students can find out more about the program and the NSF participantships by contacting Williams at the College of Mines and Earth Resources, telephone 885-6192.

Class to focus relaying disaster info

The proper way to inform the press and public about an emergency will be the focus of a June 9-12 short course sponsored by the U of I College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences.

The course is called "Fire Information Officers Short Course," but the lessons will apply to a wide variety of situations where information about an emergency must be passed on quickly and efficiently, said Dr. James Fazio, professor and head of the U of I wildland recreation management department.

Class topics will include public relations, news value of information, fire management philosophy, logistics of emergency information centers and others relating to a general emergency theme.

John Marker, public information officer for the U.S. Forest Service's Region IV headquarters in Ogden, Utah, will assist in conducting the training sessions. Fazio said last summer's forest infernos "certainly underscored the need for this kind of workshop. The idea is to always have people available who are trained to help inform the public about what is going on during an emergency." This course should appeal to anyone who must provide information during an emergency, he said.

Other than a few programs held for Forest Service employees by the agency, Fazio said the U of I program is unique. "I don't know of any other university offering this kind of program."

This is the second time the college has held such a session. The previous workshop attracted 30 participants.

Registration for the upcoming workshop is limited to 25 participants and carries a $240 registration fee. Further information and an application form may be obtained by writing Fazio at the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences.

Engineering students grab top spots

U of I students stole the show at an American Society of Mechanical Engineers (ASME) Regional Student Paper Contest in Seattle Thursday through Saturday.

John Becker won first place with his presentation on "A Model Aircraft Engine Dynamometer." Doug Huffman took second place with his paper on "Design and Construction of Compressed Air Motors."

Becker will receive an expense paid trip to national competition at the ASME Winter Annual Meeting in Chicago, Ill., in November of 1980. He also received a cash prize and a centennial medallion from the society, which is observing its 100th year of service to the engineering profession and the public. Both of the students were successful in Spokane paper contests of ASME and the Society of Automotive Engineers earlier this month.

Becker's first place win was the first for the U of I since 1947.

The U of I also received an award for having the highest percentage of member student participation at the conference and recognition for having travelled the most miles to attend the meeting.

Fraternity initiation rites blamed for student's death

ITHACA, NY (CPS)—Joseph P. Parrella, an 18-year-old freshman at Ithaca College, died April 2 after participating in the two-hour exercise drills that are part of the initiation rites of the campus's Delta Kappa fraternity.

Delta Kappa was on probation at the time for hazing activities during the 1978-79 academic year.

The unofficial cause of death—the autopsy report is not yet complete—was hyperthermia, or overheating. Before being brought to Tompkins County Hospital, Parrella and his fellow pledges had been required to jog for about an hour and a quarter, and then to do calisthenics for approximately 45 minutes.

Delta Kappa members have declined public comment for the time being, but made a private group statement to law enforcement officers.

Parrella's family, while referring most inquiries to an attorney, did initially talk to the Associated Press. Parrella's mother swore, "I'm going to put a stop to fraternities in this country if I have to travel to every college in the nation."

PACK TWO YEARS OF ARMY ROTC INTO ONE SUMMER

If you have two years remaining at the University of Idaho, you can qualify for entry . . .

If you have two years remaining at the University of Idaho, you can qualify for entry into the Army ROTC Advanced Program by completing MS 205

Military science 205 combines basic leadership training, command experience, organization and employment of basic military units, and map reading with an overall familiarization with the Active Army, the Army Reserve, and the ROTC program. THERE IS NO MILITARY OBLIGATION WHATSOEVER INCURRED BY TAKING MS 205!! After completing this summer course, you may enroll for MS 301 in the fall semester and earn an extra $100 a month during the school year.

You may also participate in other programs that could earn you as much as $185 per month culminating with a commission as a Second Lieutenant in the US Army or Army Reserve. You start at a salary $13,363.22 per year as a full time officer, or you may elect to serve part-time (one weekend per month and 2 weeks during the summer) and supplement your regular job income by $2,000 per year while earning valuable retirement, insurance, shopping and travel benefits.

If you're interested in an Army Commission in the Active Army or the Reserves (National Guard or Army Reserves), you can still catch up by completing MS 205. For more information come by Room 101, Memorial Gym or call 885-6528. MAJ Larry Broughton or CPT Ralph Lingmire will be able to assist you.

ARMY ROTC

A decade later, a tragedy is still overshadowed

"I think there are three more nigger males over there, one of 'em shot in the arm, one of 'em shot in the leg, and one of 'em somewhere else... Them gals... It was two nigger gals... shot in the arm, I believe... Here's another one, let me see what this is:

We got two students 10-7 (out of service) here."

JACKSON, MS (CPS)—Jackson State College student Philip Gibbs and Jackson high school student James Earl Green lay dying as Mississippi State Patrolman Inspector Lloyd Jones radioed that message for the JSC campus on May 14, 1970.

Gibbs and Green, it turned out, were the fifth and sixth fatalities in police-student confrontations that May. Only ten days earlier, the first four fell under Ohio National Guard bullets during an anti-war demonstration at Kent State University, about 750 miles to the north.

Yet while the deaths at Kent State were quickly canonized by a Top 40 song, plays, books, innumerable articles, and a three-part network documentary now in production, Jackson State has largely faded from public consciousness.

Nothing illustrates the disparity better than the ten-year anniversary memorials on the two campuses this May. Legions of television and newspaper reporters have promised to descend on the Kent campus, as they regularly have for lesser anniversaries. They'll report on speeches by an impressive lineup of celebrity activists like Stokely Carmichael, William Kunstler and Bella Abzug.

Jackson State, meanwhile, will hold its first memorial in several years. A tentative schedule of speakers includes Constance Slaughter, a lawyer who filed an ultimately-fruitless civil suit on behalf of the victims' families, and the parents of James Earl Green. The memorial will culminate in a simple candlelight service.

Folks around Jackson suggest many reasons why the killings at the university (the school achieved university status in 1975) never became the cause celebre those at Kent State did.

One frequently-mentioned reason is that the 100 students who gathered on the campus that night were only generally protesting the war. The night before, students had rallied to protest the American invasion of Cambodia and the drafting of black students. But on May 14 they re-grouped to add expression to broader, racial discontents as well.

As one student characterized the mood in 1970: "When you go to class every day... in overcrowded classrooms, and it is hot and sweaty in there, you just get fed up with it. You know you should have had more classrooms, and your classrooms should have been cool... You just got to do something."

Some 50 state troopers and city police mobilized to stop them from across a four-foot fence. Without verbal warning, they leveled a 30-second volley of 400 bullets that raked the crowd in front of them, all five stories of the dorm building behind the crowd, and an area across the street from them.

Twelve students were wounded, besides Gibbs and Green.

Many feel race is the real reason why Gibbs and Green were never widely celebrated as student martyrs.

"People got more upset over Kent State because the kids were white," asserted Fred Banks, who served on Jackson Mayor Russell Davis' investigatory panel and now is a state legislator.

Reuben Anderson, Banks' co-panelist and now a judge, said, "One difference is that one happened in the North, and one in the South."

Race certainly influenced the subsequent investigation of the killings. Mayor Davis appointed a bi-racial committee to investigate and recommend preventative measures. But the state patrol, the Jackson police and state Governor John Bell Williams immediately disavowed the bi-racial panel and started their own.

The governor's probe exonerated the police, adding "the responsibility must rest with the protesters."

A subsequent FBI investigation, however, reached a drastically different conclusion. It dismissed the police contention that officers were responding to a sniper spotted in a dorm window, pointing out that all the bullets found were from police weapons.

The Presidential Commission on Campus Unrest, convened in the wake of the violent month of May, 1970, went further. It blasted the police action as "a completely unwarranted and unjustified" attack, pegging "racial animosity" as a precipitating factor. The commission deplored the "impression that police need not fear official punishment or even censure for regressive action against blacks."

Yet two grand juries did absolve all police and public officials. There was anti-black peer pressure in the grand jury.
