

Tenured professor files $1 million lawsuit

by Kristen Moulton
Managing Editor

A tenured University of Idaho faculty member, Homer Ferguson, has filed a $1 million lawsuit against the university, claiming his constitutional rights have been violated, his privacy invaded and that he has been libeled and slandered.

The 16-year member of U of I faculty says that repeated violations of university regulations by several administrators during and after his five-year tenure review have violated his rights. He filed suit in U.S. District Court Wednesday.

A four-member tenure review committee in March issued a report in which they said Ferguson is incompetent and should seek professional psychiatric help.

On May 23, Ferguson was informed by Academic Vice President Robert Furgason that he was being reassigned to the Department of Animal Sciences and transferred to Dubois on a research assignment, beginning June 1.

Ferguson refused the transfer and has since been negotiating with U of I administrators to hammer out a compromise. The Lewiston Morning Tribune said Thursday that negotiations had broken down earlier this week, prompting Ferguson to file a $1 million suit.

Vice President Furgason said that as far as he knows, the suit is the first to be filed against the university concerning a tenured faculty member's employment. In the past, appeals of decisions have been handled internally, he said.

Ferguson came to the university in 1964 and was granted tenure in 1968. He was promoted to associate professor in 1970 and full professor of zoology in 1975.

The suit asks for $250,000 in general damages for injury to Ferguson's reputation, $250,000 in general damages for invasion of privacy, $250,000 in damages for severe emotional suffering, and $250,000 in punitive damages.

Ferguson is asking the court to invalidate the tenure review committee's actions and all subsequent administrative actions against him.

"If there is any further harassment, we'll be in court literally the next day," Lee Eckhardt, one of Ferguson's attorneys told the Argonaut. Eckhardt, a U of I associate professor of law, said he does not anticipate administrators will harass his client.

Tally of 93 class cuts 'deceiving' says v.p.

About 93 classes have been cancelled or combined since the beginning of the semester, a report by Robert Furgason, academic vice president, indicates.

None of those classes were ordered terminated by Furgason and no arbitrary cut-off enrollment limits were imposed, Furgason said.

In early September, Furgason sent a memo to department heads asking them to justify continuing courses that had low enrollments. At the time, Furgason said low enrollment courses would mean those with fewer than 10 students if undergraduate and five students if graduate.

Furgason said the total of 93 classes is deceiving. "Some of the cancellations involved students changing registrations in individualized courses such as research and thesis. Also it is possible that some course cancellations will be reincarnated as directed study or a similar type of offering," Furgason said.

At registration this fall, nearly 30 sections of high enrollment courses were added, at a cost of about $45,000. The contingency set aside for creating new sections was $30,000.

So far this fall, the university has not had enough salary savings to build up a reserve for creating new sections next semester, Furgason said.

A study will be made later in the semester to determine the impact of current low enrollment courses on teaching loads. Many directed study courses are offered on and by overloaded teachers, he said.

McCarthy sees 'chaos, disorder'

by Brad Dundon
Staff Reporter

"I'm not a cynic, but I'm sarcastic."

Eugene McCarthy looked tired and sad-eyed but he was ironically humorous at the press conference yesterday afternoon at the University of Idaho, before his evening speech.

McCarthy made his reputation as a liberal Democratic humanist when he made a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1968. He lost the bid, but made a token run for the presidency as a third party independent candidate in 1976.

McCarthy, who attended St. John's College in Minnesota, "because it was closest to his house," first ran for Congress in 1948. Since then he has been a Minnesota senator and professor at St. John's.

At the 1968 Democratic Convention, McCarthy attracted primarily a constituency of college-educated youth and the liberal-minded white upper and middle class, according to Norman Mailer whose book An Informal History of the '68 Republican and Democratic Conventions is a notable testimony of the period.

In many respects McCarthy's loss of popular influence reflects a change in the American political ambience. A general contention is that the late 60s and early 70s were marked by concerned efforts to change the socio-economic structure of American society, while at present, public apathy is pervasive.

But McCarthy disagrees. He said it is not public apathy that is the problem, but rather a governmental tendency toward "chaos, disorder and randomness."

McCarthy refers to this chaotic condition of the country as "entropy." The ultimate result of government entropy is political inertia, which is the present state of affairs, McCarthy said.

McCarthy said there are three major reasons for this situation: irrational proliferation of nuclear arms manifested by the SALT II agreement; the estimated 80 percent corporate control of the economy; and the excessive and abusive power of bureaucratic organizations, including the Federal Communications Commission and the Internal Revenue Service.

"We are the most over-armed people in the history of the world," he said. He criticized President Carter and presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan for not addressing this issue, and instead talking about the absurd question of "equalizing the opposing side

Faced with questions of the breadth and depth of college education, and several amendments, the Faculty Council Tuesday postponed a vote on the proposed changes in requirements in baccalaureate degrees.

A vote was to be taken at Tuesday's meeting, culminating three weeks of discussion on the proposal. However, more debate from representatives of professional colleges and proposed amendments to the original document dominated the meeting.

An amendment to the original proposal submitted by English Professor Roger Wallins and civil engineering Professor James Hardcastle, which was approved by the council, provided for the proposal to become effective in the 1983-85 catalog.

The purpose of the amendment, Wallins said, was to give the University Curriculum Committee sufficient time to develop a list of courses that would accompany each category in the proposal, if the proposal is approved by the general faculty.

Another amendment, on the floor at the end of the meeting, provided for a regrouping of the ten categories into five categories. The proposal was submitted by Faculty Council representatives from the technical colleges on campus.

The original proposal lists the 10 areas in which students should have a general knowledge as communications, natural sciences, mathematical processes, applied science and technology, literature and the arts, culture and history, social institutions, philosophical and social thought, human behavior and physical education.

The amendment combines these categories into five: communications, natural and applied sciences, mathematical, statistical and computer processes, humanities and social sciences, and physical education.

Engineering Professor Richard Jacobsen, co-sponsor of the amendment, said the measure grouped the categories in a natural way and included both breadth and depth in elective subject areas.

As in past meetings, representatives from the technical and professional colleges voiced opposition to the proposal because of the tighter restrictions it would place on some curricula.

Dean of Mines and Earth Resources, Maynard Miller said the numbers of categories should not be important, but rather depth, student choice and whether the student will gain knowledge in all of these areas.

In other action, the council passed a motion reaffirming the mission, functions and objectives statement of the university, as amended from the faculty staff handbook. The amendments took the form of minor editorial changes.

Jacobsen, in moving for approval of the statement, said it defines the unique functions performed by the University of Idaho, as well as things that other universities do.

Idaho faculties: education needs money

Representatives of Idaho's university faculties this week echoed a State Board of Education/Board of Regents call for a substantial state revenue increase.

"We aren't saying that nothing should be cut and or that nobody should be fired under any circumstances," said John Knudsen, chairman of Faculty Council and U of I representative on the Council of Higher Education Faculties.

The role of the faculty in addressing cuts in the university's budget is one of evaluation and advocacy, Knudsen said.

"We should speak up for the programs, and say why they are good and why they are needed," Knudsen said. Board members and legislators should be told what level is necessary for maintaining and promoting higher education programs, he said.

CHEF endorsed Board Member Cheryl Hymas's statement last month that the state's educational system is "in a crisis, an emergency situation. We have never been able to afford the quality of education Idaho's students deserve. We have been behind year after year. And now with the cuts, we can't maintain minimal quality."

This year's budget for state agencies was cut by 3.85 percent in August because the state's revenue has been lower than predicted.

According to figures compiled by the state board, the college and universities have suffered in the past two years a relative loss to inflation of 21 percent.

Support for higher education during the past two years has declined more than $20 million, based on 1975 dollar values.

The state's higher educational institutions have been showing the effects of reduced funding in several areas CHEF said. Those areas include: elimination of faculty positions, resulting not only in fewer available courses for students but in some cases loss of expertise crucial to major programs; loss of some outstanding faculty for salary-related reasons; loss of support staff which slows student services; and inadequate maintenance of facilities.

According to the CHEF representatives, unless the 1981 Legislature is willing to find new tax dollars to remedy inadequate funding for higher education, Idahoans can expect to see a rapid erosion of quality in the state's educational institutions.

"The college and universities are serving more students than ever before, including ever-increasing numbers of non-traditional students for whom access to higher education is of great practical importance.

"If the ability of these institutions to provide diversified and high-quality education is impaired for lack of adequate financial support, the state of Idaho will be the loser," the representatives said.

Lawsuit

Ferguson, in his suit, does not argue with the findings of the review committee, but faults the procedures used.

He is also asking for a court order to force President Richard Gibb to make a recommendation relative to his employment. So far, Gibb has delegated that to Vice President Furgason.

According to the University Handbook, it is the president's responsibility to recommend either corrective action or dismissal to the faculty member's departmental administrator.

Furgason also wants the court to declare the five-year tenure review policy invalid.

Eckhardt said Thursday in a draft statement concerning tenure at the U of I, that the university effectively abolished tenure in 1974. The statement was not part of material filed in connection with the suit.

He claims that section 4515 of the University Handbook, adopted in 1974, and departmental regulations result in faculty members being given five-year renewable contracts, rather than actual tenure.

"The weakness of the position of current 'tenured' faculty members is underscored by the fact that the administration apparently takes the position that an outstanding record of research and publication, accompanied by mixed student evaluations and complaints by colleagues about 'personality differences,' equals functional incompetence," Eckhardt writes.

Under current policy, the performance of a tenured faculty member is reviewed annually by his or her departmental administrator. Each tenured faculty member's functional competence is reviewed at least every five years by a committee of peers.

The committee last spring determined that Ferguson is a "marginal" teacher at best, that he has failed to obtain outside funding for research since 1976 and that he is incapable of acting in a professional manner with students, faculty or administrators.

Ferguson also browbeat students in class, ridiculed his colleagues in class and contradicted himself and texts during his lectures, the committee contends.

In his suit, Ferguson claims that until last spring, he had not been notified that there were serious deficiencies in his performance.

Since 1964, Ferguson has received annual departmental evaluations averaging slightly better than satisfactory. And during his annual evaluation last October, Ferguson had a composite rating of slightly less than excellent in nine areas of evaluation.

Many of Ferguson's grievances concern Art Rourke, Biological Sciences Department head.

Rourke did not serve as chairman of the review committee, as is required by policy, and yet signed the report calling Ferguson incompetent, Ferguson says.

Since spring, Rourke has discussed Ferguson's competency outside of formal meetings and tried to persuade review committee members to unanimously recommend against him, Ferguson claims.

He further claims that Rourke has interfered with his abilities to teach by cancelling Ferguson's classes.

In the first few weeks of the semester, Ferguson claims his teaching assignment was changed at least five times.

Both Vice President Furgason and U of I Attorney Jon Warren have admitted the committee made procedural errors, Ferguson says.

Other errors the committee made, according to Ferguson, are:

--Rourke did not follow the required procedure for providing committee members with student evaluation information.

--The committee did not follow the rules requiring the faculty member to make a personal appearance before the committee and allowing the faculty member a chance to respond to allegations concerning his conduct.

--The committee relied on more than one ballot, which was not secret, to come to its decision. Departmental rules require a single secret ballot be taken.

Vice President Furgason said the university's tenure policies are consistent with those established by the American Association of University Professors.

The university has 20 days to answer Ferguson's allegations. After that, Ferguson's attorneys will "very vigorously" begin interviewing those involved in the committee review.

Named in the suit as defendants are Rourke, Vice President Furgason, Gibb, committee members Thomas McKean, associate professor of zoology, Verl Thomas, assistant professor of animal sciences, Rodney Mead, professor of zoology, Elmer Raunio, dean of the College of Letters and Science, and members of the State Board of Education/Board of Regents. Only one member of the review committee, Gerald Saunders, a graduate student in zoology, was not named in the suit.

Ferguson's other attorney is Darrel Aherin of Lewiston.

10 Homecoming Queen finalists chosen

Ten finalists have been chosen for Homecoming Queen of 1980. Of the finalists, two princesses and a queen will be announced at the bonfire on Thursday, Oct. 16.

The finalists and their respective sponsoring living groups are: Val Dasenbrock, Delta Delta Delta; Karla Friede, Sigma Chi; Mitzi Gehring, Houston Hall; Pam Gilmore, Campbell Hall; Cathy Tesnohlidek, Farmhouse; Marcie McGillis, Pi Beta Phi; Lonnie Gosselin, Gault Hall; Jo Anne Stringfield, Delta Gamma; Lorri Limbaugh, Beta Theta Pi and Paula Pierce, Kappa Kappa Gamma.

These finalists will be interviewed on Monday by a panel consisting of representatives from the administration, living groups, the past queen, ASUI president, parents association, and alumni association, said Mary Kay Delay, last year's homecoming queen.

Delay said the panel is looking for someone who is a "go getter" to be this year's queen.

Besides a parade, bonfire and football game, this year's homecoming events at the U of I include special anniversary celebrations for the Vandaleers, their 50th; Kappa Kappa Fraternity, its 75th; the class of 1955, the 25th, and the class of 1970, the 10th.

The traditional homecoming parade is planned for 9 a.m. Saturday.

A full weekend of dinners, visiting with friends and the game with Montana State is planned for the October 17 and 18 Homecoming Celebration.

Reunion dinners for the class of 1955 and returning Vandaleers are both planned for Friday evening, with the class of '55 getting together at the University Inn-Best Western beginning at 5 p.m. for socializing followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m. The Vandaleer event also begins at 5 p.m. with a social hour, but will be at Cavanaugh's Landing. Dinner will be at 6:45 p.m.

The Montana State Homecoming game will begin at 1:30 p.m. in Kibbie Dome and it will be followed by academic and living group open house events. A Fifth Quarter session is planned for 8 a.m. Saturday for all alumni and friends of the university at the Moscow Elks. The Kappa Sigma 75th anniversary dinner is planned for 7 p.m. Saturday at the University Inn-Best Western.

'Tis the season to be cloned

Let's play a game. We'll call it "Name this candidate."

"I'm a family man. I have 2.5 children (one's a doctor), a dog and a cat, and the greatest wife in the world. If it weren't for her I wouldn't be where I am today.

"I'm a born-again Christian, Boy Scout leader and a Man of My Word. If I make a promise, it's a promise to be kept. And that's a promise."

"I grew up in this town. It's the best town around. If I'm elected to represent you, the people, I'll see that it stays that way."

"I'm for a balanced budget, a thriving economy, tax cuts for the poor and middle-class, and an end to inflation.

"I like to hunt. I own a four-wheel drive and I run a 400-acre ranch."

"So you, the people of this great state, should elect me to be your next representative, mayor, council member, president, senator.... If I'm elected I'll be your voice in Washington, Boise, Weippe...."

"Call me anytime."

You've heard it all a million times.

The uniqueness of political candidates is never so apparent as it is the midst of the campaign season. Rhetoric runs rampant and each candidate strives to woo the vote of Joe and Jane Average by being "average."

Most political candidates are eager to portray the "wholesome" image of middle-class America. With the right song and spiel almost anyone can be a credible candidate.

How far could a political hopeful get if he spoke against a balanced budget, tax cuts, equal rights (not to be confused with the proposed constitutional amendment) and the middle class? Where would he be if he favored gay rights, abortion rights, forced busing, increased welfare expenditures, and wouldn't make promises?

With such platform planks, his campaign would end before it could begin.

But these are the issues that need to be addressed. Nevertheless, once we've heard about families and God and country, we're left with the uneasy feeling that we haven't the foggiest notion what these candidates will do with the responsibilities of the office they're seeking.

But because there are safe and unsafe stands to take on important issues, all candidates look very clone-like.

How unfortunate it is that there are so few candidates willing to take a chance. Willing to jump into the hard questions, give considered answers, and admit the possibility that positions cannot be cast in concrete.

What voters want are candidates who will be able to make decisions based upon the circumstances surrounding whatever conditions exist when those decisions are to be made.

If all we know is that the candidate is for this or against that how can we know what will happen when real decisions have to be made?

Let Ohio State pay for its own dome

Bert Sahlberg

Being an avid sports fan, not to mention a Vandal supporter, I felt it was only my duty as a sportswriter to reply to a column in the Sept. 30 Argonaut from Kerrin McMahan.

Ms. McMahan left the University of Idaho for Ohio State, so naturally that gives her the right to compare the football teams. Unfortunately, anyone reading her letter can tell she sounds like Howard Cosell; full of hot air.

No one has ever said the Vandal football team will be as good as the Buckeyes. There are several reasons.

First of all, Ohio State has an enrollment of more than 60,000 students, which makes the Buckeyes a Division IA college football team. Idaho has an enrollment of 8,000—seven and a half times smaller than Ohio State. Idaho plays in Division IAA football.

With Ohio enrollment being three times the size of Idaho, naturally attendance is going to be somewhat bigger. But Idaho is supposedly spoiled by the ASUI-Kibbie Dome; the poor Buckeyes have to play outside.

Ms. McMahan claims letting U of I students pay for a dome in Columbus from the funds allocated for the East End Addition would solve the problem.

Ms. McMahan believes that arrangement would be better because "the Idaho Vandals are, and are likely to remain, one of the worst football teams in history."

Well, I've got a few statistics from this season that prove differently. The Vandals lead all Division IAA schools in scoring, averaging 37.5 points per game. The Vandals also lead the Big Sky Conference in rushing offense with 232 yards a game, top total offense at 378 yards a game, rank sixth in Division IAA rushing defense allowing only 66 yards per game, and rank second in the conference in scoring defense allowing just 13 points per game.

True, you could say Ohio State tops Idaho in some of these categories, but Idaho has played some tougher opponents for its size than Ohio State has.

I could say that I get to watch that same Vandal team indoors where I stay warm and dry. However, no matter where I sit, I can see the game without binoculars.

As for Ohio State, the stadium seats more than 100,000. An eighth wonder of the world would be needed to put a dome over a stadium that sits more than 100,000 people.

But Ohio State, with its football program and the revenue from the games, has the money to do just that if it was possible. Ohio State makes more money from one game than Idaho does all season. Give Idaho the same amount of money Ohio State receives and nobody in the Big Sky would touch the Vandals. Nobody in his right frame of mind would try either.

Ms. McMahan said instead of going to the Vandal football games, the fans should stay home and watch Ohio State on television. "This would eventually reduce the team to intramural level, where they belong," she added.

Maybe Ohio State should invest in a dome. After all, losing to UCLA 17-0 at home outdoors must be embarrassing to you, Ms. McMahan. Personally, I don't like to sit in front of a T.V. and watch football when I can go watch it in person, especially if the Buckeyes are going to play some luck-luster team they can beat 42-0. The Vandals can do that also.

To sum it up Ms. McMahan, you should see what you are missing.

Ron May
ASUI Programs Manager

'Sleazy, yellow rag'

Editor,
Fall has returned to Moscow. Classes have begun. The leaves are turning gold, and the Argonaut is once again attempting to blame all of the community's socio-economic ills on the Vandal football program.

First of all, I do not accept Larry Barker's apology. Larry has gone to court and is paying for his indiscretion, that is sufficient punishment. His gesture was commendable. But, it was certainly nothing he "owes" me, or any other student on this campus. By apologizing he has only proven himself to be a far finer individual than those who make childish, libelous statements about him in their self-righteous letters to this paper.

Secondly, your East End Survey was nothing more than a ploy to get students to the polls, so they could be chastised for "not caring how their student fees are spent," if they refused to sign the petition opposing the bond sale. The ever objective press, taking a partisan stand by heading the campaign against the bond sale.

I had a fleeting thought of how pleasant it would be to pull the overzealous, petition-monger from behind the table and beat him to a bloody pulp. But, the idea soon vanished—I had a vision of the headline on the next edition of the Argonaut—"Unidentified U of I Football Player Sought in Assault Incident." Somewhat like last year, when a number of young men "alleged to be U of I football recruits," were blamed for a disturbance at Wallace Complex.

It certainly is convenient that there are so many of them (football players), after all, if there were only 50, they would have one hell of a time being in the right places, at the right times to cause all of the trouble they get credit for in their student newspaper.

I'm sure you found the suggested solution to the funding problem to be amusing. "Make all of the free-riding football players contribute." Since they are the ones that are being pampered. The East End is not a "Football Shrine." It will provide urgently needed offices, classrooms, locker rooms and conference facilities. It will also help bring the university in compliance with Title IX.

Judging by the reviews of the Argonaut I have been hearing lately, I cannot see that it is doing much of anything but criticizing everyone and everything it has the opportunity to cover. Yes, all of you ASUI politicians, KUOI employees and Greek living groups, don't get too comfortable. It's only a matter of time before it is your turn to be the scapegoat.

It is no wonder that football players have developed a defensive attitude, (as well as many other athletes, both male and female). I'd be defensive too if I went to class six hours a day, came home from practice tired and sore—after most people have eaten dinner and had a chance to relax, studied long into the evening, spent 11 weekends a year breaking my butt on the football field, to help make our program a winner—to find that nothing would please the press more than to learn that I molest grade school children on my lunchbreaks.

If the Argonaut has become nothing more than a sleazy, yellow rag for a small number of dissident students to use as a vehicle for airing their personal biases then, maybe they should have "a baked food sale" to finance it. I, for one, am tired of seeing student funds pay for something that does nothing but malign the people it is intended to serve.

Sincerely,
Sue Martin

Jock-size baggies

Editor,
The Sept. 30 issue of the Argonaut was fascinating. The first three pages were so full of absurdities concerning the upcoming bond sale for the Kibbie Dome that I was left in a quandary. What, given so many poor arguments and excuses by the regents and the administration, ought a potential antagonist concentrate on? That jewel of acumen quickly showed its arrogant little head.

"It is a needed project. It is necessary that those dressing rooms be built. I (Nels Solberg, U of I regent) don't see how anyone can question that because the teams have to walk outside, even when it's freezing."

After reading this over many times I realized how very selfish I was. I sunk to my knees, completely undone by my own moral depravity. I was in part responsible for football teams having to walk outside, even when it was freezing. I cannot adequately describe the depth of my moral guilt.

What propitiation might we, as students and faculty, offer for this corporate guilt? The cost of covering the university with a clear protective dome might be too prohibitive. I suggest that we outfit all football team members at the U of I in large, zip-lock, Glad baggies. This would fulfill the football team's need for perpetual foul weather protection and our need for a clear and unblemished conscience.

Paul Dakopoulos

Symms ineffectual

Editor,
I am writing this letter in response to Mr. Conradi's letter printed in the Argonaut on Sept. 30. This letter is so full of fallacious statements it renders impossible the task of responding to them all properly. Therefore I will just list them:

—Panama is not a "pro-Soviet" country.

—Frank Church did not disregard the voter's opinion when supporting the Panama Canal Treaty.

—The Soviet Union does not now control the Panama Canal even indirectly.

—The Soviet Union does not have direct or indirect control over any of the world's six major waterways.

—The United States did not give away the Panama Canal naively; it was carefully considered.

Frank Church, in supporting the Panama Canal Treaty, realized the U.S. imperialistic policy of the past must change. The U.S. image around the world has been tainted by the aftermath of Iran, Chile and Nicaragua to name a few incidents. If the United States is to remain a global power, it must seek the real support of the people in a country as well as the support of its political leaders. The Panama Canal Treaty was an attempt in this direction, and so far a very successful one.

Mr. Conradi's letter also seemed more an attack on Frank Church than support for Steve Symms. I have one fact to relate about Steve Symms. Steve Symms is the most ineffective congressman in U.S. history. He has submitted 132 bills and all of them have been defeated. One cannot do worse than 0 percent.

Finally Mr. Conradi's letter asserted that the Russians calmly told us "We will bury you." This is a misquote of what Nikita Khrushchev said in 1954, "America will not be destroyed from without, but buried from within." After reading Mr. Conradi's letter I'm inclined to agree with Khrushchev.

Let students decide

Editor,

This is to comment on the university's plan to create university-wide subject requirements. It is self-evident that a university has the most diverse offering of disciplines than anywhere else; however, it should also be evident that to involve oneself in any of these should be the choice of each individual student only, not the administration. Some majors are so intense it is just not feasible or fair to make a steadfast requirement that each student has to sample classes from each subject.

As Kristen Moulton stated in her editorial, "No group of required courses is ever going to turn someone into an educated person." Students who want a more-rounded educational experience will take extra classes outside of their major area regardless of whether these are required or not. Those who aren't interested, or who can't spare the time, should not be handed this ultimatum.

Many majors are so time-consuming and hard already that to enforce this rule would be against the basic purpose of the university: to provide students with the information they want and feel they need to succeed in their chosen careers. It should be a decision left up to each student to take the classes they desire, whether these courses lead to their "technical education" or to their "intellectual curiosity."

Sheri Gould

Religious studies

Editor,

I just wanted to let Larry Kirkland know that religious studies is alive and well at the University of Idaho. Contrary to his statements, the university has neither been commanded nor chosen "to be silent on this vital subject."

Twelve courses, including two philosophy of religion courses, are now in progress on campus. In my philosophy of religion class we are openly discussing Kirkland's question "Is God real?" Although some thinkers doubt their final validity, the traditional arguments for the existence of God are some of the most impressive achievements of the human mind.

I sense two fundamental misconceptions in Kirkland's letter. (1) He suggests that the focus to Biblical religion and the "Word of God." The proper academic approach, however, is to look at religious phenomena in general and to treat objectively all the great religions of the world. In addition to the "good news" of the Bible, students should also learn about the nirvana of the Buddhists, the saving grace of Krishna, and the Five Pillars of Islam.

(2) Kirkland's second misconception is that fundamental religious questions can be solved by a simple appeal to facts, and that these facts could be presented in the same way as the facts in a science class.

We must realize that all of the world's scriptures were written by disciples, and that these writings are therefore biased. They contain much historical material that has been verified, but much of it can never be proved. For example, Buddhists, Christians, and Hindus all claim that their saviors were divine, worked miracles, had miraculous births, etc. How is one to verify such claims? In the last analysis, a religion is chosen on the basis of faith and not rational judgment.

Get it straight

Editor,

The letter to the Argonaut last Tuesday on the Panama Canal misrepresented the facts. It is not correct to state that the Soviet Union "directly or indirectly" controls the six major strategic waterways of the world including Hormuz and the Strait of Malacca.

The United States has the edge in the balance of power at Hormuz with two aircraft carriers and its radar patrol planes. The Straits of Malacca are dominated by Malaysia, Indonesia and Singapore, all anti-Communist powers, and to a lesser extent their British and Australian allies. The United States dominates the defense of the Panama Canal.

Of course, the Soviet Union and the United States could destroy each other quickly in a nuclear war. Why would the Soviets want to start such a war by attacking a vital waterway, which would alert the United States and alienate most of the world?

Those who are interested in a good, factual report can read the article in the Sept. 29 U.S. News and World Report, which is a conservative magazine. It calls the first year of operation of the Panama Canal under the new treaties a "success" and a "major foreign-policy victory." The canal is moving 38 ships a day as efficiently as before the treaties. Animosity toward the United States, once shown in bloody rioting and threats to the canal, has virtually disappeared.

This was a major reason Sen. Church, and two-thirds of the Senate including 16 Republican senators, approved the treaties even though this issue was made into a political football in Idaho and certain other states.

Sincerely
Amos Yoder

Looking at facts

Editor,

Well, I took Greg Conradi's advice (Sept. 30 letter) and went out and "compiled all the facts" on the Panama Canal issue before writing this letter. Thanks for the tip, Greg.

Is the Sept. 29, 1980 U.S. News and World Report recent enough? (It may not be as credible as your John Birch Society Commie or Symms/Anybody But Church Truth, but it's all I've got.) Here are some quotes: "The first year of joint operation of the canal by the U.S. and Panama has turned out to be success..." "Panamanian animosity toward Americans, which once erupted in bloody rioting, has virtually disappeared... Moreover, the influence of Communist Cuba's Fidel Castro is on the wane, and U.S. influence is rising here:" "...the transition has been a success politically as well as operationally;" "...the Panamanian government has become anti-communist. Leftist officials have been moved out of the government or sent abroad. The government is shifting close to the private sector to restore business confidence and to stimulate investment in the economy." Hmm...

Let's see, you also wanted to talk about communist movement to Central America. O.K. Senator Church thought about that, too. Good point. Outspoken opponents of the treaty in Panama see Marxists who recognized that a new treaty would give the U.S. a big boost in Panama and through out Latin America. As a result of the treaty those leftists have been kicked out and the U.S. is much more popular in that region now.

Well, I'm about out of room, Greg. Why don't you set aside your rocket launcher and grenades for a moment, poke your head out of the bomb shelter and fire off another searing letter to the Arg. Since you mentioned "Symms listens to and votes with the citizens of Idaho," let's write about his voting: AGAINST education, the elderly, alternative energy sources, labor unions, combating Medicare-medicaid fraud, etc. FOR big oil, personal silver profits, Nelson Bunker Hunt, big business...

P.S. I'm still looking for Africa. What color is it on a Texaco map? I'll get back to you.

Liberals lambasted

Editor,

They finally did it. After almost 20 years of fiscal madness, they hit the end of the line.

After severing the dollar from gold, running up an $800 billion national debt, increasing the federal budget to more than a third of the entire GNP, flooding the economy with bond money, taxing the country to the brink of depression, causing 18 percent inflation and almost 8 percent unemployment, have the liberals learned anything? Look at the Democratic platform.

To pull us out of this mess, they're planning to tax $12 billion more from those who are producing and create, by their definition, 800,000 jobs. It's insane!

Another four years of Carters, Churches, and Kennedys and we'll all be sharing the poverty line.

C. A. Major

Help us out

Editor,

During my term of office as ASUI senator the senate has been faced with many problems ranging from in-state tuition to the East End Facility. Student input on these issues was significantly low.

Upon accepting the position of ASUI senator, I swore to uphold the ASUI Constitution and Rules and Regulations thereof, yet I feel that the most important aspect of this job is to form a close relationship between students and the senate. The absence of communication between these two bodies will weaken the strength of our students' government.

Many students view the senate as an "ineffective" organization and this concerns me a great deal. I strongly believe the senate is only as effective as its student body. That is to say, students must come to the senate, voice their concerns, and offer input. The senate encourages your involvement and welcomes all students who matriculate at the U of I to attend our meetings which are held every Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Chiefs Room of the SUB.

Speaking on behalf of the entire senate, we are a concerned senate and want to support student interests, but we cannot win the battle alone. Your support is imperative. Please feel free to call or visit the senate at any time. Thank you for listening.

Sincerely,
C.W. Collins

No more Church

Editor,

In Greg Smith's letter of Sept. 26, he claimed to "clarify" several matters concerning Sen. Frank Church. I must wholeheartedly disagree, however, with his clarifications.

In his letter Mr. Smith states that a balanced budget has no influence on the rate of inflation. When the government runs a deficit it must finance the excess. To do this the Federal Reserve buys government bonds, a process which indisputably increases the money supply.

According to my dictionary, inflation is defined as: "an abnormal increase in the volume of money resulting in a continuing rise in the general price level." It appears to me that a budget deficit does indeed cause inflation. Mr. Smith goes on to say that this "can be verified by any major economist in the country." I must again disagree, as Lord John Maynard Keynes, Milton Friedman, Friedrich Hayek, and many others, have loudly proclaimed the evils of inflating the money supply.

Mr. Smith then goes on to state that increased fuel costs are the major contributors to inflation. I think that by the definition of inflation we can see that this is not the cause. As further proof, we have had almost no increase in the price of gasoline since the beginning of the year, yet we have had a substantial underlying inflation rate in this time period.

The statement is also made that American oil companies are making "skyrocketing profits." On last count the oil companies were getting a 6 to 7 percent return on their investment. I'm sure that you are getting 5 1/2 percent interest on the money you have in the bank. Is that also obscene profits?

Then there is the question of defense. According to Sen. Church's own information he has supported an average of $70 billion per year. This sounds impressive until one considers that the U.S.S.R. is now spending more than $110 billion!

When you look at these matters closely, can you still believe that Sen. Church represents us well?

Barker not convicted

A letter to the editor in the Oct. 3 Argonaut indicated that University of Idaho football player Larry Barker had been convicted of a charge of criminal trespass. This is incorrect.

On Sept. 29, Barker pleaded innocent to a misdemeanor charge of criminal trespass. Barker is accused of swimming in the Syringa Trailer Court swimming pool about a half hour after closing time on Sept. 11. He will have a pre-trial hearing in the magistrate's division of Idaho Second District Court in Moscow at 11:30 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 17.

The Oct. 3 Argonaut letter also implied that Barker was on probation for a year in connection with the alleged trespassing incident. Barker is actually on probation until June 1981 as part of a sentence for his conviction for dropping a chair from Theophilus Tower Sept. 15.

The Argonaut regrets the error and any embarrassment it may have caused to Barker.

Student soil-judging contest today

Sixteen students from agricultural colleges in the Washington, Idaho and Montana area are competing in a regional soil judging contest here today.

The top two four-person teams will be eligible for national competition.

The competition is sponsored by the Plant and Soil Science Club and the Soil Conservation Society of America student chapter.

The teams will be taken to various "digs" in the area and will be judged on their evaluation of land forms and soil types, a spokesman said.

Associated Students of Idaho

Statewide student group formed

by Suzanne Carr
Staff Reporter

The student body presidents of the University of Idaho, Boise State University, and Idaho State University have formed an organization to increase communication among the three schools as well as create more influence for student wishes.

The organization is called the Associated Students of Idaho and will consist of the student body presidents, vice presidents, one representative from each of the senates, the editors of each of the recognized student newspapers and one student at large from each university.

"We started meeting on our own at the State Board meetings," said ASUI President Scott Fehrenbacher. "In June we came up with the idea for ASI."

The basic idea is to find out what is going on at the other universities.

"We realized that student communication is desirable," said ASBSU President Sally Thomas. "We need to talk to each other."

The presidents feel that ASI will enable them to compare ideas and problems other than those on their own campuses.

"Rather than just being concerned with our own campuses we will now have added input, which we really needed," said ASISU President Tim Smith.

According to the ASI constitution, the organization "will provide direct, continuous, and reliable communication on behalf of the students of higher education in Idaho on mutual problems and projects and in the coordination of student services and governments."

It will also create "a larger, more comprehensive base for student influence on the university administrations, the State Board of Education, the State legislature, and the citizens of Idaho."

The constitution will try to make ASI "an effective organization for the promotion and publicizing of student views."

Finally, the constitution states that ASI "will provide a forum for the expression of support among students on matters common to Idaho's post-secondary students."

Positive results have already arisen from the meetings, Thomas said.

According to Thomas, members of the BSU senate were impressed with the documents that go through the U of I senate. Evidently they had spurred talk on the BSU campus.

Although ASI won't be formally announced until Oct. 22 in Pocatello, it has met with much approval.

All three campus governments have endorsed ASI.

Among the goals ASI is looking at is the possibility of a student member on the State Board of Education.

"Although we will wait until after the first meeting later this month to have the necessary input on more ideas, we would like to have a student member on the Board," commented Thomas.

ASI is sometimes confused with Idaho Student Association, an organization that included every college in Idaho for the purpose of lobbying the State legislature.

"There were problems with ISA that we hope to learn from and solve with ASI," said Fehrenbacher. "Each of the colleges in the state was involved and had to pay dues according to size. There were unnecessary funding problems also because ISA had a full time director. It was finally ended when the money they requested was denied."

"Funding for ASI is to be provided at the local level, there will be no central funds involved," explained Thomas. "We're emphasizing communication, not projects."

Although ASI has been okayed by the senates, it has not been presented to the State Board of Education.

"I see no foreseeable reason why they wouldn't approve of ASI," said Smith.

"We went about ASI the way we did because we don't want them to think we're being reactionary, we're not," said Thomas.

Church wants fat cut and heart kept in government

Cutting the "fat out of government," not the "heart out of government," is the difference, according to Sen. Frank Church, between himself and Republican opponent Steve Symms.

Church further denounced Symms by speaking out against the "Sagebrush Rebellion," and the tally of bills that Symms introduced but didn't pass the House of Representatives.

Church, speaking Wednesday night to about 300 people in the SUB, said if the Sagebrush Rebellion is accepted, all public lands will be turned into state lands which will sooner or later be turned over to the big private interests. Church, seeking a fifth term in the Senate, said that Symms "is all for it."

"Now's the time to stop it (the rebellion) in its tracks," said Church. "Idaho is not for sale."

Also, according to Church, Symms "has flunked the course in the House" and now wants to get the Senate position. Symms, who has introduced 136 bills that haven't passed in his eight years of office, was compared by Church to a baseball player who struck out 136 times in a row.

Church also spoke against the "Anybody But Church" committee, a Virginia group, which he said is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on media to distort his record and misrepresent his position on the major issues of the day.

According to Church, it is up to the people of Idaho to decide who best represents them in the U.S. Senate, not a "bunch of Virginia gunslingers."

Responding to a question from Eric Matteson, a Moscow resident who was protesting the draft with a

"Nuke Russia" sign, Church said, "The only problem with nuking Russia is that we get nuked back."

As far as draft registration is concerned, said Church, he was against it unless the United States got into a war that required general mobilization. He said he voted against pre-registration because the selective service said it wasn't necessary.

Concerning the energy problem, Church said the answer "will not be found by the oil companies, we've got to find alternatives. That's why I support gasahol."

Democrats rally in Friendship Square

The kids were bundled up against chilly winds as they stood with their Moms and Dads at Friendship Square. "Church for Idaho," and "Church for President," proclaimed the signs their little hands clutched. "Friends of Frank Church," said the stickers that were plastered to their clothing.

The flickering of road flares and tin-can torches cast shadows on the crowd as it congregated around the flatbed campaign truck. Strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again" drifted across the square as the four-piece band energetically played.

Smiles, laughter, clapping and cheers. Why all the excitement? Why of course ... the Democrats have come to town.

Senator Frank Church, Governor John Evans, and congressional candidate Glen Nichols, along with some local officeholders had come together to put some spirit into their supporters. "Let's get this battle won," was their battle cry.

"Be careful," advised one girl to another (both of them carrying torches). "I don't want this burning up Frank Church."

Extension granted Ethnic Awareness committee

The continuation of the ASUI Ethnic Cultural Awareness committee passed by unanimous consent at Wednesday night's senate meeting.

The ECAC was created for the purpose of increasing ethnic cultural awareness among the student body.

The committee was extended on a one-year trial basis after ECAC members voiced significant interest in the committee.

About seven members came to the senate pre-session to participate in debate about whether to include ECAC under ASUI programs.

The debate resulted in positive feelings on the part of both senators and ECAC members.

Problems to be avoided were discussed and criteria outlined to give ECAC a better idea of how to get off the ground.

The senate unanimously appointed Rob Wood and Jane Freund as ASUI Activity Center Board Members.

Jim Slyfield, Terry Harris, Randy Terashima and Randy Lutten were also unanimously appointed as ASUI Recreation Board members.

John Windju was unanimously appointed as Issues and Forums Committee Chairman.

ARE YOU A LOST COIN?

The parable of the Lost coin (Luke 15:8-10) represents those who are lost in trespasses and sins, and have no sense of their condition. They are estranged from God without knowing it. They are unconcerned and unconcerned about their condition, but their souls are in peril! The coin was lying in the dust and rubbish, yet it is still a piece of silver. It's owner seeks it because of its value. So is every soul in God's sight precious however degraded by sin. As the coin bears the image and inscription of the reigning power, so did man at his creation perfectly bear the image and inscription of God. The traces of this inscription remain upon every soul, for we are made in the image of God, and this can never be effaced!

The parable of the lost son (Luke 15:11-32) depicts God's love toward us. When the son was returning and yet a great way off, the father discerns his form. He had compassion and ran and fell on his neck in a long, clinging, tender embrace. He takes his own mantle and wraps it around his son's wasted form. The father accepted his son back with great joy and rejoiced with all his household. He took him as he was, and this is how we should come to God. Do not think to stay away from Christ until you have made yourself better. If you take one step toward him in repentance, he will hasten to enfold you in his arms of infinite love. The very first reaching out of the heart after God is known to him. Never is a prayer offered, however faltering, never a tear shed, however secret, never a sincere desire after God is cherished, however feeble, that the spirit of God goes forth to meet it.

If you feel you would like to know more about the lost coin, write for your free copy of "Planet in Rebellion," to "The Wayout" P.O. Box 8905, Moscow, ID 83843

The Live Music Special

The entertainment provided by our local musicians is surprisingly varied, energetic, and furthermore, it's usually free. The biggest problem can be finding it. These people often perform in obscure locations (after hours at the local club), or within the confines of their homes, jamming with fellow musicians.

But this Saturday night will be the perfect opportunity to see and hear our "locals" in action. The Live Music Special, at the Moscow Mule, will feature an array of area musicians and musical entertainment, ranging from rock to bluegrass to folk.

Music will begin at 7 p.m. Among those to perform are Mary Myers, Phil Cascade, Dan Maher, the Dull Simmer String Band, and John Booth.

Open mike will be from midnight to 1:30 a.m. Mary Myers, the Live Music Special coordinator, encourages musicians to bring their instruments, regardless of their musical abilities. She hopes the musicians will utilize this occasion to share their music in a jamming-type atmosphere.

So, indulge yourself in an evening of musical entertainment. You deserve it. Take a break from a hard week of classes, and an impending week of mid-terms. The Mule has good service, delectable munchies, and an expansive imported and domestic beer selection.

The ingredients are right. Mixed with local entertainers, the Live Music Special should be something worthy of your attention.

SCAPIN

by N. K. Hoffman

Entertainment Reporter

Roy Fluhrer's production of Scapin, bursting at the seams with sight-gags, slapstick, love interest, creative make-up, juggling, crystal gazing, shell games of all kinds (just what has Scapin got in his cod-piece?), lively acting and lots of back-ground business, will make its final appearance this weekend.

John Morgan, in the title role, plays a sneaky and devious character whose powers of invention never fail him. Morgan brings charm to the role. He also gets a chance to exercise an amazing variety of accents as he impersonates what amounts to a whole platoon of the foreign legion.

Four young lovers' stories braided together form the core of the play. Timothy Threlfall and Dana Kramer play Octave and Leandre, two troubled young men who fall for the wrong women. Barbara Casement is delightfully decorative as Hyacinthe, a ship-wrecked lady, and Sheila McDevitt is forceful as Zerbinette, who, as a gypsy maiden, cannot measure up to the social status of her lover.

Scapin, with lively acting and lots of "background business," will make its final appearance this weekend.

John Colclough, Jr. develops his character, the cowardly servant Sylvestre, into one of the most amusing elements in the play. His impersonation of a fountain must be seen to be believed; and later, the borrowed bravado he derives from disguise changes him into another person—a convincing transformation.

The actors who portray the two miserly fathers of the young men deserve special commendation for making such basically unsympathetic characters personable. Charlie Shoemaker plays the tall, snub-nosed Geronte, and John Edgerton plays long-nosed Argante, who knows how to use his staff.

Performances Friday and Saturday night begin at 8:30 p.m., and Sunday's show will begin at 6:30 p.m. Student tickets to Scapin cost only $2; why pass up this opportunity?

Thousands of high school musicians will compete Saturday in the Second Western Regional Marching Bands of America Competition in the ASUI Kibbie Dome.

The number of entries has nearly doubled from last year's 12 to the 21 marching bands registered to compete this year.

Returning will be last year's first place winner, Skyview High School Band from Smithfield, Utah. Skyview took second place in the national competition last summer. Also returning will be the second place winner,

Robert Spevacek, U of I professor of music and coordinator of the competition, said there will be six bands from Spokane, three from the Tri-Cities area, one from Seattle, Wa., and one from Canada.

The Boise Valley will be well represented, bringing bands from Payette, Capital, Meridian, Caldwell and Weiser.

Spokane's University High School Band.

All events are open to the public. Admission will be $2 for the preliminary events and $4 for the final competition. No discounts will be given to students or children. Preliminary competition will begin at 8:30 a.m. and finals will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Vandals face tough Bronco team Saturday

The biggest football game of the season awaits the Idaho Vandals this weekend as they travel to Boise to face the tough Boise State Broncos.

A sellout crowd of more than 21,500 fans is expected to attend the tenth meeting between the schools. Boise State has won the last three games including a 41-17 win over Idaho last year.

Idaho, ranked ninth nationally in Division IAA, enters the game with a 3-1 record, its best start since 1938 when the Vandals went 6-3-1. Boise State is 3-2 after drubbing Montana 44-10 last weekend.

"It is a very important game for a lot of reasons, some of which are very evident," said Vandal coach Jerry Davitch. "It's a conference game, Boise is an in-state rival and it's a game that, if we hope to have a winning season, we would like to win."

A shot at the Big Sky crown is also at stake for both teams. Boise State, the pre-season favorite to win the Big Sky, lost to Montana State two weeks ago and posts a 2-1 Conference record.

The surprising Vandals lead the Big Sky in total offense and rank fifth in the nation among Division IAA schools. Idaho averages 422 yards a game.

The Vandals rank second in the nation on rushing offense with an average of 279 yards per game on the ground. Russell Davis is the Vandals' leading rusher with 362 yards.

Quarterback Ken Hobart is the Vandals' second leading ground gainer with 252 yards. Hobart was named the Big Sky's offensive player of the week for his performance against Portland State last week. Hobart hit on eight of 18 passes for 139 yards and rushed for another 140 yards leading the Vandals to a 37-27 win.

Hobart also ranks first in the nation among the NCAA rating process with 160.6 points. Hobart has hit on 31 of 61 passes this year for 555 yards and eight touchdowns.

The powerful Bronco offense ranks second behind the Vandals' in the Conference. The Broncos average 360 total yards a game.

Leading the Broncos is returning starting quarterback, Joe Allioti. Allioti is off to another banner year this season, hitting on 61 of 101 passes for 715 yards and four touchdowns.

But what makes the Broncos click is their rushing attack. Boise State has three senior running backs, two who rushed for over 500 yards last season and one who broke the 1,000-yard mark.

As a matter of fact, Cedric Minter has two seasons of over 1,000-yards rushing. In 1978, Minter rushed for 1,526 yards while last year he ran for 1,012 yards.

Minter got off to a slow start this season but recently has begun to spring. He currently ranks third behind Davis in the Conference in rushing with 416 yards this season.

Joining Minter in the backfield are Terry Zahner and David Hughes. Zahner has 248 yards rushing this year with three touchdowns. Hughes has 192 yards on 35 carries for a 5.3

yards-per-carry average. Hughes ranks second on the Bronco squad in receptions with 12.

At the wide receiver spot Kipp Bedard returns. Bedard is one of nine returning starters off the Broncos' 1979 offensive squad that went 10-1. Bedard has 16 catches for 242 yards.

The Broncos hold a slight defensive edge over the Vandals. The Broncos rank second in the conference in total defense giving up only 287 yards a game. The Vandals average 319 yards a game.

The Vandals rank second in the nation against the rush, giving up only 63 yards a game. The Vandals pass defense, which has been heavily tested all season, averages 256 yards given up in the air.

The Broncos rank fourth in the Big Sky against the rush with 144.8 yards and rank third against the pass with 143 yards.

The Broncos also have the slight edge in points allowed. The Broncos give up 14 points a game while the Vandals give up an average of 17.

"In my mind Boise State is still the team that you have to beat if you hope to win the Big Sky Conference championship," said Davitch. I felt going into the season that they had the best personnel in the conference. Nothing has happened thus far to change my mind."

But with a Vandal win, Davitch could change his mind as Idaho would be 2-0 with five conference games left, four of which the Vandals will play at home.

Volleyball team goes after eighth win

After running its season record to 7-2, the Idaho Vandal volleyball team faces a lighter than usual week of activity.

The Vandals will face a tough Lewis-Clark team tonight at 7 p.m. in Lewiston. Lewis-Clark, an Interstate League rival, has a split record with the Vandals. The Warriors defeated Idaho in the Whitworth Invitational 15-9, 15-8. Idaho then dumped the Warriors in Lewiston last week, 5-15, 15-2, 15-4.

"Lewis-Clark has always been a tough team," said Vandal coach Amanda Burk. "I feel a lot better about our team's play after last week's matches. We worked on our middle game, both offensively and defensively, and it really showed."

Burk said the middle blockers were stopping their opponents and were controlling the middle. "You have to be able to hit the middle as well as both sides to run the multiple offense we've implemented," said Burk.

For their play last week, Jenny Rothstrom and Beth Johns were named Athletes of the Week for the Vandal squad.

"Our two freshman came through for us," said Burk about Johns and Rothstrom. "Jenny had an amazing 12 stuffed blocks against Eastern Washington while serving three aces. She also played an errorless match."

"Beth was right in there with eight stuffs in the second game of the match, and between her and Jenny, they really held the middle," said Burk.

Burk said she was pleased with the Vandals' performance last week

Women harriers host Montana, WSU

A change in scheduling will find the Vandal women's cross country team at home against Washington State University and the University of Montana Saturday at noon on the ASUI Golf Course.

Idaho enters the meet after an outstanding performance at the Camp Casey Invitational at Whidbey Island, Wash., last week where the Vandals took a solid second place with 70 points. The University of Oregon won the meet with 22 points. Idaho was followed by last year's Division II champion Seattle-Pacific University with 104 points out of the field that consisted of 17 teams and 235 runners.

"I was extremely pleased with our runners," commented Vandal coach Roger Norris. "This was our first meeting with Seattle this season and I feel we did very well against them. In the meet there were only two Division II runners ahead of our number six runner so if we continue to improve, we should do very well at regionals."

Norris also noted that the Vandal women have not competed against the Boise State team when it was at full strength. Boise State is in the same region as the Vandals.

The Vandals were led by Patsy Sharples, a freshman, who placed fifth overall in a time of 17:43. The fifth place finish ended her five meet winning streak.

"It was a very tough course," said Norris. "It was woody trails and I think a few stumps were out there too. It was a long 5000 meters."

Sonia Blackstock, a sophomore, placed ninth as the Vandals' second leading runner. The 18:06 clocking for her was 40 seconds faster than any 5000 meters she's run before.

"She had a fantastic run," said Norris. "She helped break up Oregon's pack. Three runners broke their pack and two of them were ours."

For her effort, Blackstock was named the Vandals' athlete of the week in women's cross country.

Other Idaho finishers were LeeAnn Roloff, a junior, in 17th place in 18:38; Kelly Warren, a junior, 18th in 18:39; Caroline Crabtree, a freshman, 21st in 18:51; Penny Messenger, senior 23rd in 18:54; and Cindy Partridge-Fry, a senior in 61st in 20:09.

Lauri Shansby of Seattle-Pacific won the event in 17:16.

Placing behind Idaho in fourth place was the Falcon Track Club followed by the University of Montana and Washington State University.

Hockey team faces tough tourney

The Vandal women's field hockey team travels to Boise today for its first encounter with Division II rivals who will be seeking a berth in AIAW national competition.

Today at 11 a.m. they meet host Boise State, defending Region IX champion and AIAW contender, and at 2 p.m. they face Brigham Young University. On Saturday, Idaho goes against Northwest Nazarene at 9:30 a.m., the other NCWSA contender, and at 12:30 p.m. the Provo Club Team.

"This is a very exciting weekend for us," U of I coach JoDean Moore said. "We must beat Boise and NNC to go to nationals but the must games will be during the qualifying tournament at Moscow in November. This week we'll see how we stack up to our opponents and what we must continue to work on to stay in contention. It will be very interesting."

Idaho enters this weekend's activity after suffering two defeats at the hands of Simon Fraser and Washington State University.

Against WSU, the Vandals jumped to a 1-0 lead and watched it melt to a 4-1 defeat. "We did have some exciting play," Moore said. "In particular, the defensive play of Holli Glidden. For her efforts she was named Athlete of the Week.

In the SFU game, the Vandals fell 4-0. Three of their goals came in the first half with the U of I women playing SFU's game. "We regrouped our defense and we played a different ball game the second half," Moore said.

Visits from home mean cunning preparations

Carol J. Allen

For the first time, your parents will be witnessing your college lifestyle, which they have previously known only from letters—if you've written any letters—and those letters may not have always been exactly precise in their descriptions:

"Dear Mom and Dad,

This letter will be short because I'm so busy studying. Don't worry, I'm eating right. Bye—it's back to the books."

At first it may appear that all you must do to prepare for a parental visit on homecoming weekend is get reservations at a local hotel and buy tickets for the game. Ah, if it were only so simple!

Students who value their parents' opinion (or occasional deposits of money) would be wise to follow a more strategic plan.

As soon as you hear about the family reunion, you should begin your preparation. Hopefully, you'll have at least a month of forewarning, because unless you're already a Twiggy look-alike, you'll need that long to complete step one, which is to lose weight.

This won't be too difficult, cafeteria food being what it is.

The first reason for this step is that you want to look your best in case your good-looking second-cousin-once-removed decides to come.

The second reason is that your grandparents will feel sorry for you because you're so skinny, and they'll not only take you out for a seven-course dinner, they'll also keep sending you care packages after they leave.

Sometimes just complaining about how awful the food is will bring the same result, but they'll never believe you if you take them to the cafeteria as your guests, because the best meals you get there all year are on homecoming and Parents' Weekends.

While you're working on losing weight, you can pretty much put the visit out of your mind until about three days before homecoming.

At this point, it's time to begin the in-depth room cleaning extravaganza. Your projects might include getting the sloe gin spot out of the rug, wiping off the shelves, which still have the initials of last year's occupant etched in the dust, and putting up an air freshener to chase away the stale smell of your friends' cigarettes.

Don't wash your window unless someone has written a dirty word in the grime. Not only is it a dreadful job, but if your window is practically opaque, they might not realize what a great view you have of the men's dorm across the street.

Two days before the encroachment, you'll have to force yourself to break the news to your friends.

Discreetly suggest they refrain from Tarzan yells and insist they keep their boyfriends (the ones with the tatoos, greasy jeans, fringed jackets, and headbands to hold back their sticky hair) out of view.

Remind them that you won't be able to go out on Friday OR Saturday (sigh) and try to pretend they aren't looking at you like you have leprosy.

The day before the big day will arrive sooner than you expect. This is the time to scrape the peanut butter off the stick pin your aunt gave you for Christmas last year. Pin it to your coat, or you'll almost surely forget to wear it the next day.

Thumb through the program from last week's football game, and clip the picture of the best looking player you can find. Put this picture in your purse, so that when your Miss America-type cousin asks if you've had any better luck getting dates here than you had in high school, you can whip out the picture and introduce her to your unsuspecting instant boyfriend.

This way, you won't have to admit that you only know four guys on campus: your brother, your friends' boyfriends (see previous description for gory details), and a bacteriology major you went to high school with who looks like he just stepped off an "Are You a Nerd?" poster.

As you're waiting for the rap on your door, take a few deep breaths, fan yourself with the Hamlet program you found on the floor in your history classroom (your parents will be glad to know you've been getting your culture), and review some of the things you have to remember NOT to mention: you don't know which channels come in best on the TV, you haven't the slightest idea what that R-rated movie playing downtown is about, and that scroungy looking guy who just walked out of your friend's room must have been a repairman.

when they won the first round of the Interstate league play. The Vandals beat Eastern Washington 15-8, 15-6, and Boise State 15-11, 15-6 along with their win over Lewis-Clark.

"We're elated over our win over Eastern," said Burk. "Not only did it help us for seeding in the qualifying tournament, but we defeated the defending champion."

Sophomore Linda Kelling continues to lead the Vandals in assists with 82. As Idaho's setter, she is referred to as the quarterback of the team, setting the offensive plays. She is also leading the Vandals in serving with 90 serves recorded and only one error.

Asphalt oil being made from sewer sludge

Dan Eakin
Contributing Reporter

When average people flush their toilets, thoughts of foreign oil and asphalt do not weigh heavy on their minds.

But as our energy situation becomes more precarious due to reliance on foreign oil, Bob Lottman flushes his toilet spelling relief in a slightly different way. S-L-U-D-G-E!!

Lottman, a University of Idaho civil engineering professor, is working on a project to produce a low-grade oil from sewer sludge for use in asphalt production.

Making fuels from organic material is not a new concept.

Two or three years ago there was work done to do something useful with wood waste.

The wood waste was treated chemically then put under pressure. What resulted was a black substance resembling oil.

Lottman's work began when the city of Honolulu sent him ten samples of their sewer sludge in cake form.

When he received the samples, he recalled the wood waste project and decided to go ahead with the sludge research.

He didn't just jump into it though. He asked Patelle Northwest in Richland to do some preliminary sludge work.

Patelle is a research organization which began in Columbus, Ohio and earns two-thirds of its income researching for the Department of Energy.

At Patelle Lottman's samples were chemically treated, dried, then returned as seven black cakes, from which fuel oil, paving asphalt, and a residue ash could be derived.

After many treatments on the first four samples, which seemed to yield nothing, he obtained an oil that reached a level of 50 percent of the quality of a petroleum asphalt oil.

"To get something acceptable," he said, "you would have to get it almost as good." Close to 100 percent of the quality of petroleum asphalt would be ideal.

He displayed an asphalt cake four inches wide and an inch thick made from conventional petroleum oils, then showed a cake the same size made from a substitute oil product.

Deferred payment due today

Today is the last day to make payments on October board and October deferred registration without an $8 late charge. The cashier's office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Administration Annex.

Despite a slight odor from the sludge asphalt cake, it was difficult to differentiate between the two.

Lottman said this "ultimate use of sewage" could put a sewage plant in direct competition with oil companies if a plant to produce the substitute oil was put on the property.

Or, he added, a private contractor could make the substitute as well as the sewage plant could.

These possibilities are, of course, far in the future. He said to be successful, 10 to 20 years of research will be needed before substitutes for petroleum paving products will be used.

"I'll work on it as long as there's a little excitement," he said.

Half-hour plan working

The new half-hour schedule is "one of the less controversial subjects" affecting students this semester, said an ASUI senator.

Scott Fehrenbacher, ASUI president, said "it was a pleasant surprise" to see that students are not upset about the new schedule. He said he has received no negative comments from students or faculty.

Faculty and staff members say the schedule "has smoothed out the flow of traffic on campus"; made it "easier to get a parking space at 8 a.m."; and "hasn't affected me any."

Matt Telin, registrar, said "8:30 a.m. has become a prime time class," whereas 8 a.m. has not been a prime time class in the past. He also noted more flexibility in classroom scheduling.

Telin said there has not been a lot of activity at 7:30 a.m. but should increase in the future.

The schedule was changed to give students two more hours of classes per day and to make it easier for students from U of I to take classes at Washington State University.

Museums teach history, culture through objects

U of I News Bureau

Our culture doesn't teach people how to use museums or how to learn about history and culture through objects, which is what museums are all about, according to an Australian museologist who has been visiting on the University of Idaho campus for the past month.

It's partly the fault of the university system, said John Hodge, lecturer in museum studies at the University of Sydney.

"We all know how to read books, but few universities teach people how to read objects. We learn very little about history through material culture: it is all taught by the written word," he said.

As part of an overseas study leave program at his university, Hodge has been observing museum training programs in Europe, England and the United States. He is interested in the U of I's program, one of only two in the United States offering museology as a major, because the program's director, Ellis Burcaw, is author of the only textbook on museum training.

Because of his interest in museums as educational tools, Hodge is researching children's and teachers' perceptions of museums.

"If a child's perception of a museum is bad, the museum's great advantage as an educational resource is lost," he said, pointing out that a teacher's attitude can color how a student views a learning experience.

"For instance, a teacher who is too strict can make a museum visit an unpleasant experience for a child.

"In my research, I'm viewing how fifth-graders perceive museums. Although I'm not ready to quote my results, my objective is to find what experiences maximize an educational visit to a museum," he said.

He and Burcaw both believe in museum studies as an academic discipline in its own right.

Introduced as a discipline only as recently as the 1960s, museology is still an emerging profession, Hodge said.

Before it becomes a true profession, museology will have to gain acceptance as a discipline—very few universities worldwide offer degrees in museology—and museum associations will have to enforce a uniform code of ethics. For instance, there is a disagreement in the field on whether museum curators should be able to collect objects in their particular field of study.

"The contention is that a curator of an art museum who also has a personal interest in art might create a conflict of interest in collecting certain art pieces," he explained.

Moreover, museum-based training should offer post graduate degrees as well as training for all levels of museum work in addition to curator training, and emphasize the importance of computer training in cataloging, as well.

"It makes it difficult for museums to act in an educational capacity if its workers aren't well trained," he said.

The Australian museum system is young from a European viewpoint, so it has had to move faster to catch up, Hodge said. The Australian Museum of Natural History is 152 years old and is one of the 10 leading natural history museums in the world, he said.

Law building now monitored

The College of Law began using a monitor system this week to help prevent thefts in the building. The system will be used at least until a combination lock arrives.

The monitor system is a result of recent vandalism of study carrels in the law building. Although the building hours will be more restrictive to non-law students, the measure is meant to protect possessions of law students and prevent damage to the building. It is not meant to discourage use of the law facilities by non-law students.

Two work-study students will sit at the northeast entrance to let students into the building after 10 p.m. on weekdays. Students will sign a register and have their I.D.s checked.

After midnight, no students will be allowed inside and non-law students will be asked to leave the building. Law students will be allowed to stay but cannot re-enter if they leave.

During weekends, the law building will be closed to non-law students after 9 p.m.

University Place dedicated

"University Place" is the new name for INTERSEC (Intermountain Science Experience Center), according to University of Idaho Academic Vice President Robert Furgason.

The facility, to be dedicated Oct. 22 in special ceremonies, was acquired recently by the University of Idaho Foundation and will be used as an educational facility to serve people in the whole Idaho Falls area, Furgason said.

University Place dedication ceremonies will feature U of I President Richard Gibb and Idaho State University President Myron Coulter as well as many Idaho Falls community leaders. An open house will be held in the building from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 22, with formal dedication ceremonies to be held at 4 p.m. in the University Place Auditorium.

University Place will house the Idaho Falls Center for Higher Education, a cooperative effort between the U of I, ISU and Ricks College to provide university level education programs in Idaho Falls, Furgason said. The degree programs involve personnel associated with the Idaho Nuclear Engineering Laboratory and are operated by both the U of I and ISU.

University Place will have office, classroom and library facilities, upon completion of current remodeling, and a 300-seat auditorium. Offices will be available for the Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce and the Idaho Parks Department.

The public is invited to attend both the open house and the dedication ceremonies, U of I officials said.

Dorm arson baffles police

Due to the lack of new leads, Moscow police are idling in central in the U of I dorm arson. Police Chief Clark Hudson said the investigation was still in full swing but that there were no new developments since the last of the three arson attempts occurred in Gray Loess Hall Sept. 12.

Theresa Triplett, witness of the Gray Hall bombing incident Sept. 5 and victim of all three arson attempts, nearly lost her life in the last fire.

At one point Moscow police believed the two suspects in the bombing incident were responsible for the fires. However, after taking a lie detector test they have been cleared of starting or knowing the instigator of the hall fires.

Investigating officer Lt. Dave Williams felt Triplett could present some new leads if given the lie detector test. When asked to submit to the test, Triplett refused, claiming she wasn't up to it.

Later, she refused again because her father advised against taking the test. Williams foresees a change in her decision.

Williams is hoping for something to break soon. In the meantime he is considering the possible motives for the arsons. He feels the fires and the bombing incident are not connected, although he has not ruled out the possibility that a friend of the bombing suspects started the fire without their knowledge. Williams also felt the fires were too consistent and well-planned to be the work of a pyromaniac. No possibility has been ruled out completely.

Security measures are still being increased in all halls of the U of I dormitories and hopefully the smoke has cleared for good.

Faulkner says he's innocent

University of Idaho student Tom J. Faulkner, 208 N. Cherry St. pleaded innocent Monday to a misdemeanor charge of battery.

Faulkner is accused of battering U of I student Don W. Garrison, 1229 Hanson Ave., on Sept. 20 in the ASUI-Kibbie Activity Center. Faulkner and Garrison were spectators at the Idaho-Simon Fraser football game.

Faulkner will appear at 2:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 17 for a pre-trial hearing in the magistrate's division of Idaho 2nd District Court in Moscow.

in weaponry." McCarthy pointed out that "it is said that we can blow up the Russians 50 times while they can only blow us up 29 and a half times. It's that one half that we're worried about," he joked.

McCarthy also leveled severe criticism against major corporations. According to him, corporations "have no conscience and are committed to making money."

McCarthy's final bug-bear is the bureaucracy. He cited Hannah Arndt, a German-born American professor, known for her book, The Life of the Mind, saying, "There are two kinds of bureaucracies: one kind follows the dictates of one central man; another kind creates its own dynamism."

For example, the federal bureaucracy violates human rights, McCarthy said.

"When you walk in the Internal Revenue Service, the Bill of Rights ceases to exist. The IRS believes that it has the capacity and the right to arbitrate whether people should be married, what is a 'true religion'—according to the IRS James Jones (People's Temple) was a 'true religion'—and what is or isn't art."

McCarthy attributes the onset of this chaotic state of affairs to the development of the idea that American government should be frozen into a strictly two-party system.

"The Federal Election Law, which directly contradicts to Constitution, legalized the two-party system." The consequences of this is that it may lead to a totalitarian state, he implied. He cited John Adams, who said, "The worst thing for government is a strict two-party system because it leads to irresponsible politicians and bad government."

Second on McCarthy's list was the general proliferation of presidential primaries, which he views as absurd and meaningless.

The final cause, according to McCarthy, is the media. He believes that television is essentially an instrument—"a public opinion conditioning instrument." Television picks our entertainment, and decides which political candidates to cover, he stated. As a result, television "keeps us in a state of distraction from the real issues."

One major way to bring about changes is to oppose the strict two-party system by supporting independent third-party candidates, McCarthy said. By working within the present social order, McCarthy contends that significant changes can occur.

McCarthy didn't give personal support to any current presidential candidate. He advised voting for one of the three, Carter, Reagan, or Anderson.

Training room now coed

In years past, men athletes received treatment for injuries in Memorial Gym's spacious training room. Nearby in the Physical Education Building, women athletes used a training room no larger than a photographer's darkroom. But things have changed.

The women have joined the men in the Memorial training room.

"Our training room was so small we had athletes receiving treatment in the hallway," said Jackie Leander, head women's trainer.

To accommodate the men and women, the larger training room was remodeled in August.

The project included expanded office space and a new rehabilitation area. The women have already bought a new whirlpool and ultrasound system for the training room.

Although the training room is crowded now because of the number of teams in season, it is more efficient, Leander said. There is a designated area for taping, an area for treatments and another for rehabilitation equipment.

police blotter

... Someone entered the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity at 777 Deakin St. between 4:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. on Oct. 2 and removed a beige GTE telephone from its jack. The phone was worth approximately $35.

... Susan Remsen of French Hall reported she discovered a hole in her window when she returned to her room about 30 minutes after midnight Thursday.

Cpl. R.L. Anderson of the campus police reported the hole appeared to have been caused by a small-caliber bullet or by an object projected by a slingshot. No projectile was found.

There are no suspects, and there was no apparent reason for the incident. About $40 damage was done to the window.

... Jeff Mitchell, of 917 Logan St., reported that someone took a blue nylon Vagabond golf bag from his locker at the golf course pro shop between 6 p.m. Tuesday and 10:30 a.m. Wednesday. The bag was worth about $34 and contained a red towel and about $10 worth of golf balls.

... Someone entered the Orange Julius concession at the Palouse Empire Mall sometime between 9:30 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday and removed $732.44 in cash. The campus division of the Moscow Police Department is still investigating the incident.

... Someone climbed over or through the gate of the Corn Dog Factory at the Palouse Empire Mall between 9:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7:50 a.m. Wednesday and stole $31.95 worth of change from the till. The campus division of the Moscow Police Department is still investigating the incident.

Everyone has a fried chicken recipe. Only the Colonel has the Original Recipe.™

What can you get at Kentucky Fried Chicken that you can't get from any other fried chicken store?

The Colonel's Original Recipe. This is the way Colonel Sanders himself first started making fried chicken. And no one's topped him yet.

No wonder. His Original Recipe chicken is made with a secret blend of 11 herbs and spices. Then pressure fried (not deep fried) tender and juicy. All the way through.

Of course, some of our customers take a fancy to our Extra Crispy chicken. So crisp on the outside. Tender on the inside.

Which is your favorite? The Original Recipe or Extra Crispy? Take these money saving coupons to a participating store and try 'em both.

Human behavior institute created

U of I News Bureau

An institute—where scientists will research the causes of war and recommend some solutions for peace—will be dedicated on the University of Idaho campus Sunday, Oct. 19.

The dedication ceremony will be held at 1 p.m. in the Music Building Recital Hall and a reception will follow. The dedication and reception are open to the public.

The institute, named The Boyd and Grace Martin Institute of Human Behavior, was established through the Board of Regents in 1979 and will be supported largely by a $1 million trust fund set up by the Martins.

Boyd Martin, a distinguished political scientist, was dean of the U of I College of Letters and Science from 1955 to 1970. His wife, Grace, who was active in civic work during her life, died in 1979.

The institute, to be located in Forney Hall on the U of I campus, will delve into "causes of war and conditions of peace," according to Martin, through research and interdisciplinary study into such aspects of human behavior as violence, terrorism, war and peace.

Although the institute is now in its infancy, Martin hopes eventually it will become a major national research center where recognized scholars, practitioners and leaders come to study and influence the formulation of public policy concerning war.

The institute will be non-political. Its objectives are compatible with those of the Borah Foundation Committee for the Outlawry of War, which Martin chaired from 1947 to 1955. The Borah Foundation sponsors the annual Borah Symposium here which deals with the general concept of global peace.

Martin, an Idaho native, received a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Idaho and a master of arts degree and a doctorate from Stanford University. He taught in the U of I political science department from 1938 until his retirement in 1973, and was head of the Department of Social Science from 1947 to 1955. He was also director of the Bureau of Public Affairs Research, which he founded, from 1959 to 1973.

The cabbage patch between KUID and the Education Building is a good place to "get lost" if you're a dog. Mik is owned by Dave Lelsy.

Flowers turn to cabbage

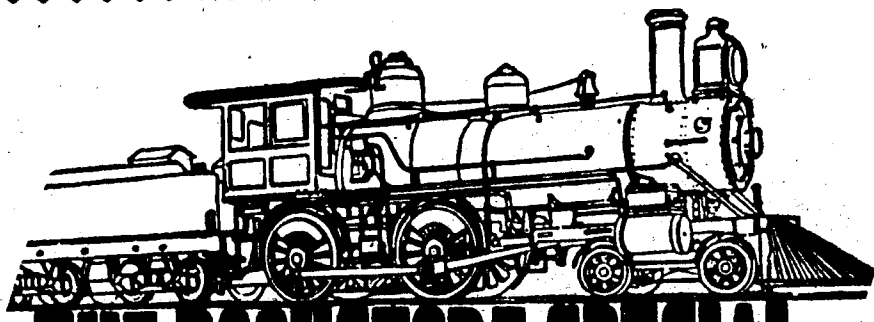

Flowers come in many shapes and forms. One of the unique forms flowers take on this campus, however, is as cabbage.

Flowering kale, a vegetable and member of the cabbage family, has been planted and is growing quite well between KUID and the education buildings.

The cabbage, according to grounds keeper Alan Fulton, is primarily a fall bloomer. He said Wednesday night's frost will cause the plants to bloom and turn colors such as lavender and yellow.

This is the first year the kale has been planted on campus, and it did not do as well as expected, Fulton said. More were planted in front of the law building, but because of lack of care they did not grow.

Fulton said another seed source has been found, and more cabbages will be planted next year.

Win $1,000 in poetry contest

A $1,000 grand prize will be awarded in the Sixth Annual Fall Poetry Competition sponsored by the World of Poetry, a quarterly newsletter for poets.

Poems of all styles and on any subject are eligible to compete for the grand prize or for 49 other cash or merchandise awards.

Poetry Editor Eddie-Lou Cole said, "We are encouraging poetic talent of every kind, and expect our contest to produce exciting discoveries—like Virginia Bates, a housewife from Woodbine, Maryland. She won our grand prize last year with her poem PIETA."

Rules and official entry forms are available from World of Poetry, 2431 Stockton Blvd., Dept. N, Sacramento, Calif. 95817.

Kitchen seminar to be held

To familiarize, excite and acquaint with new ideas is the goal of the first Inter-Fraternal Kitchen Management Seminar to be held here in the SUB on Oct. 30.

The seminar, open to food service people from greek kitchens at the U of I and WSU, will feature talks on practical sanitation, safety, meal planning, purchasing, house management, and continuing education. Sponsors of the seminar include the SUB board, Student Advisory Services, and the Student Union food service.

Food service people planning to attend the seminar must pay a $2 registration fee. For registration forms or more information, contact Al Deskiewicz, manager of food operations at the SUB, or Bruce Pitman, Student Advisory services.

"We look upon this program as a stimulus," said Deskiewicz. "This thing stimulates a lot of thought and provides valid concepts to provide that thought."

Fall Bible study classes offered

The Campus Christian Center has announced its fall schedule of non-credit Bible study classes.

Some of the classes to be offered are: "Christians - Threat or Endangered Species?," "Understanding Human-ness in the Light of the New Testament," "Peace Fellowship," and "Sensualism vs. Spiritualism."

The classes will be at the Campus Christian Center, St. Augustine's Catholic Center, and local churches. Some classes are scheduled in the evenings, and others on Sunday mornings.

A directory available at the Campus Christian Center provides information on the time and place each study will be offered.

The Campus Christian Center is located on Elm Street across from the Perch Grocery.

Chinese forestry experts include U of I in tour

Seven visiting Chinese forestry experts left Moscow for Spokane, Wash., Tuesday after a day and a half visit to University of Idaho forestry facilities.

While in the United States, the appointment of Yong Wentao as minister of forestry (similar to our U.S. Secretary of the interior position) became official. He became minister on Oct. 1, according to George Savage, editorial associate for the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. He formerly was vice-minister.

The men, accompanied by an interpreter and a representative of the Society of American Foresters, spent Monday touring the U of I Experimental Forest. They also briefly toured the Bennett Lumber Products operation near Princeton. Tuesday they met with the College of Forestry Dean John Ehrenreich and Associate Dean Ernest Ables.

Their visit to Moscow followed a three-day trip to Montana where they visited national forests and parks, industry and U.S. Forest Service facilities.

The visit is part of a month-long tour of U.S. private and public forestry and forestry schools by the Chinese experts and is being sponsored by the Society of American Foresters and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Office of International Cooperation and Development. It follows an early summer trip taken by eight American foresters to China.

The other Chinese foresters are Huang Shu, deputy director of the Afforestation Department of the Ministry of Forestry; Dr. Wu Chung Lun, professor of forestry and deputy president of the Chinese Academy of Forestry; Wang Zhenru, professor at Beijing Forestry College; Huan Yuyian, general engineer with Beijing Woodworking Industry Corp; Li Changjian, Ministry of Forestry forester; and Wang Hansheng, staff member of the Ministry of Forestry Foreign Affairs Department.
