KUOI dismisses promo director

by Lee Anderson
Contributing Reporter

KUOI-FM fired its promotions director Friday following a memo from Communication Board chairman Harvey Skinner directing KUOI to take "corrective action" concerning non-student employees.

Station-manager Jennifer Smith said she "fired" Victor Vincent, a Washington State University student engaged in unpaid, volunteer promotional activities for KUOI, immediately after receiving Skinner's memo.

Skinner told the Argonaut that he was asked last week to "check-out" the student status of certain people working at KUOI, but he refused to identify his source. He said after confirming that seven KUOI staffers did not meet eligibility requirements, he contacted Smith.

ASUI regulations state that for "participation" in ASUI activities, individuals must be enrolled students and members of the ASUI. Communication Board by-laws, additionally, require student media employees to carry a minimum of five credits.

ASUI Finance Committee Chairman Jeff Thompson questioned a $300 phone bill charged to KUOI by Vincent. He subsequently found that Vincent was not a U of I student.

Thompson contacted ASUI President Scott Fehrenbacher.

Fehrenbacher said Monday night he decided to investigate the situation partly in response to Thompson's information and also to help him answer "two or three" students who had asked why they hadn't been able to get disc jockey positions at KUOI.

Fehrenbacher said he and his staff requested the registrar's office verify the student status of KUOI employees and found that six DJ's and one paid manager did not hold proper student status under current regulations. Fehrenbacher then "briefed" Skinner, who wrote the memo that led to Vincent's firing.

The status of the allegedly "illegal" employees is not clear. All are volunteers who receive no pay except for Susan McMillion, KUOI music manager.

McMillion is enrolled for three credits. She said when she applied for her position she was told only that she must be enrolled, and that no credit limit was specified. She attempted to pay ASUI fees but was informed by registration personnel that she must pay the entire registration fee to qualify for ASUI membership.

A change in fee schedules for part-time students will go into effect next year, qualifying them for ASUI membership. Currently none of the $25 per credit part-time fee goes to the ASUI.

Following a staff meeting Monday, Smith said she will postpone further action pending advice from the ASUI attorney general, Trudy Hanson.

Chief engineer Terry Comstock said it would be impossible to operate the station full-time during vacations without non-student staffers.

Smith added that when she took the job it was her understanding that she give students "first-priority" for staff positions. She said she did not know she was limited to students only.

Eckhardt to speak despite board's restraint attempt

by Kristen Moulton
Managing Editor

University of Idaho law professor W. Lee Eckhardt Jr. will deliver a speech about tenure tonight, despite a legal appeal by the U of I administration and State Board of Education/Board of Regents to stop him.

Federal District Judge Ray McNichols Friday refused the university and board's request for a temporary restraining order aimed at keeping Eckhardt from speaking at each of Idaho's four college campuses this week.

Eckhardt, associate professor of law, is the attorney representing Homer Ferguson, the U of I professor of zoology, who is suing the university for $1 million. Ferguson claims his constitutional rights were violated during a five-year competency review last year.

The request for the restraining order was filed by Donald Farley, a Boise attorney handling the case for the board. The request alleged that Eckhardt plans to discuss the merits of the Ferguson lawsuit and that it should be prohibited. Eckhardt denies he intends to discuss the case.

Because of the injunction threat, Eckhardt will speak from a prepared text, said Nick Gier, associate professor of philosophy and president of the local American Federation of Teachers. AFT is sponsoring the statewide speaking tour, and Eckhardt is donating his time.

"We're being very, very cautious," Gier said. "They still may press the issue." The lectures will be tape recorded, Gier said.

Donald Farley, attorney for the university and board, said Monday night the university and board attorneys will decide in the next couple of days whether to pursue the issue. He would not comment on what action is possible.

Farley also declined to specifically say who had asked for the injunction against Eckhardt.

Robert Furgason, U of I academic vice president, said Monday he did not know about the university and board's request until he read about it in Saturday's newspaper.

"It's my impression that the attorneys feel the case needs to be tried in the proper legal setting, not in the newspapers," Furgason said of the $1 million lawsuit against the university.

Both Jon Warren, U of I attorney, and President Richard Gibb were unavailable for comment Monday.

Janet Hay, president of the state board, declined comment as to who originally suggested seeking a temporary restraining order.

If granted, the temporary restraining order would have constituted prior restraint of Eckhardt's freedom of speech, a law clerk in the federal

FAC undecided on tenure reviews

A resolution aimed at abolishing five-year competency reviews got mixed reactions at Monday's Faculty Affairs Committee meeting.

W. Lee Eckhardt, associate professor of law, told the committee the five-year reviews do much to damage collegiality among faculty members and do not get rid of incompetent faculty members.

Steve Davis, professor of animal sciences, disagreed with Eckhardt, and questioned parts of the resolution.

"I think you're making some assumptions that aren't necessarily true," Davis said. "I think I could just as easily make arguments on the flip side of each point (made in the resolution)."

According to the resolution, the reviews undermine the principle of academic tenure; unnecessarily call into question the competence of a majority of clearly competent faculty members; shift the burden of proof to the tenured professor, when it should be with the administration; and are likely to prevent the university from retaining high quality teaching and research staff.

Nick Gier, associate professor of philosophy, proposed the resolution to the committee, and said a petition will seek to include it on the agenda for the Dec. 9 general faculty meeting if Faculty Affairs Committee and Faculty Council do not pass it.

The State Board of Education/Board of Regents thinks there is a large reservoir of "deadwood," Eckhardt said. "But there is no empirical facts that show we have a big problem with incompetent teachers."

U of I administrators do not necessarily agree with the five-year review policy, Eckhardt said. "They just don't want to buck the regents."

Gier said the fact that two national professional organizations oppose the reviews should mean something to U of I faculty members. Both the Association of University Professors and the American Federation of Teachers think the reviews undermine tenure, Gier said.

The committee will continue discussion of the issue at next Monday's meeting.

Drug use prevalent, abuse extensive

Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series on drug abuse. Friday's issue will explore the medical profession's attitude toward drug abuse.

by Lee Anderson
Contributing Reporter

"I got tired of waking up feeling like I was covered with slime." (LSD)
"It felt so damn good I don't ever want to see it again." (Cocaine)
Two comments from local participants in the American drug scene say a great deal about the appeal and risk involved in experimenting with the many drugs sold in the American drug underground.

Drugs have become a prominent feature on the American landscape. Nearly everyone, if they haven't tried an illegal drug themselves, knows someone who has, and the use of drugs is both a standard topic of student conversation and humor, and a problem for the medical personnel on nearly any campus.

A report released in 1976 by the Response Analysis Corporation based on a national survey stated that in the 18-25 year-old age group 53 percent had used marijuana, and 25 percent had used the drug within a month of the survey. Twenty-nine percent had used hashish, 17 percent had used hallucinogens, 13 percent had used cocaine, and 4 percent had used heroin. Half the youth population, in other words, had tried an illegal drug at one time or another.

The Illini, the student newspaper published at the University of Illinois, recently ignited a controversy when it began publishing a drug index giving street drug prices that area police called "very accurate." Clearly, if drugs are still underground, they're not well buried.

One of the most commonly abused drugs, and one that most people don't even consider a drug, is alcohol: the world's best-selling tranquilizer.

In Drugs, Society, and Human Behavior, Oakley Ray says Americans have become a "nation of drug users," and alcohol is the drug of choice for most of us.

In a survey conducted by Bruce Pittman, director of Student Advisory Services, 90 percent of the students responding stated they used alcohol. Twenty percent said a drinking problem had existed in their family at some time. Local substance abuse officials estimated that at least 20 percent of Moscow residents have drinking problems, calling the figure "conservative."

The popularity of alcohol is often questioned. One major cause of alcohol's prominence as the drug of choice in America is that "alcohol is one of the most effective anxiety reducers known to man," according to Bob Gregory, associate professor of psychology at the U of I. The stress and anxiety our highly competitive society produces are obviously factors in the popularity of alcohol and other drugs.

The fact that alcohol is a neural poison doesn't seem to matter to most of us; we go on drinking, forgetting the hangovers and remembering the brilliance of our intoxicated remarks. In this light it is interesting to consider the statement of W.H. Smith in his 1940 publication, Liquor, the Servant of Man: "Beverage alcohol is fecal matter. Alcohol is not made of grapes or grain or other attractive foods. It is these which are devoured by the ferment germ, and the germ then evacuates alcohol as its waste product. The thought of swallowing the excrement of a living organism is not an aesthetic idea but people will do such things."

Use of alcohol in Moscow is certainly on a par with the rest of the nation, and probably a little higher than most rural towns, thanks to the annual addition of 6,000-7,000 students to the community.

More than 20 establishments in Moscow offer alcohol in some form, and at least eight of them have as their sole reason for existence dispensing of this bacterial waste product. And clearly, most are well patronized. Walk into any bar on Wednesday or Friday night and try to reach the bar without injuring yourself or enjoying an impromptu beer bath.

Alcohol is not an innocuous drug, however; too many skid row derelicts sleeping wrapped in cardboard in city heat tunnels and behind bars prove that. But society has at least some measure of control and under-

Legislators touring U of I, city

Idaho state legislators will view several University of Idaho projects and tour Moscow today as a part of the North Idaho Chamber of Commerce' annual legislative tour. Following a 10 a.m. coffee at the University Inn Best Western, the legislators will tour the Appaloosa Horse Club and the Pea and Lentil Commission. They will then tour downtown Moscow and the U of I campus.

U.S. Representative Larry Craig will speak to the group at noon in the SUB. They then will tour eight university projects. These projects include; biofuels in alternate crops, nutritional and cold stress on calves, genetic research for an insecticide, use of wood waste, harvesting small trees, study of cold-water fish, an engineering video tape program, and the new college of Mines lab.

district court told the Idahonian.

Tom McCabe, McNichols law clerk, said the board would have had to show "a great probability of irreparable harm" to their case in the $1 million Ferguson case.

Ferguson, a 16-year member of the U of I faculty, filed the suit in early October, claiming his constitutional rights were violated, his privacy invaded and that he was libeled and slandered during and after his five-year tenure review last spring.

The university last week responded to the suit, filing 28 defenses to the federal district court in Boise. Among the defenses are allegations of technical errors or errors of law in the suit.

The university also claims that any breach of contract originated with Ferguson; that allegedly libelous or slanderous statements were not made public and that they were true; that Ferguson has not exhausted all administrative remedies for his complaints; and that because the university has not initiated dismissal proceedings, there is "no case for controversy."

The university also claims that Ferguson's lawsuit is a "bad faith claim," and asks that Ferguson pay the university's legal fees.

In March, a four-member tenure review committee issued a report in which they said Ferguson is incompetent and should seek professional psychiatric help.

In late May, Ferguson refused a reassignment to the Dubois Experiment Station made by Vice President Furgason.

Ferguson's suit asks for $250,000 in general damages for injury to his reputation, $250,000 in general damages for invasion of privacy, $250,000 in damages for severe emotional suffering, and $250,000 in punitive damages.

Ferguson last week asked for a preliminary injunction to prevent administrators from refusing to sign his application for a $24,000 federal research grant.

Though the request was part of the original suit, last week's request would allow the issue to be solved before the main suit is settled. Ferguson's latest request says he hopes to meet a Feb. 1 deadline for grant applications.

The request will be considered Friday at 9 a.m. in the federal district court in Boise.

Eckhardt's speech, titled "The End of Tenure," begins at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the SUB Galena Gold and Silver room.

Election results indicate student preferences

Students from the on-campus precincts voted in favor of Ronald Reagan for president, Frank Church for U.S. senator and Glenn Nichols for U.S. representative. They also passed SJR112, HJR12 and a Latah County Bond Issue.

Ronald Reagan received 45.25 percent of 2,696 votes in precincts one, two, eight and 18, while Jimmy Carter received only 32 percent. John Anderson finished third with 22 percent.

Ed Clark had 3 percent and John Rarick received .37 percent of the vote.

In the race for U.S. Senator, Frank Church had an overwhelming 71 percent of the vote to Steve Symms' 27 percent. Larry Fuller had 2 percent.

2,782 voted from the on-campus precincts.

Symms went on to win the election although Church won in Latah County by 68 percent of the vote.

Glenn Nichols carried the on-campus precincts in the race for U.S. representative with 54 percent of the vote to the statewide winner Larry Craig who had 47 percent.

Norma Dobler ran unopposed for state senator.

Tom Boyd also ran unopposed for state representative position A.

For position B, Betsy Enochs carried 50.95 percent of the on campus votes although she lost to Joseph Walker who had 46.48 percent of the on-campus vote.

In the race for county commissioner from the second district, Jay Nelson with 56 percent of the vote defeated John Bieker who had 44 percent.

For county commissioner from the third district, Laverne Nelson won overall and on-campus, with 53 percent of the on-campus precincts to Everett Hagen's 47 percent.

Michael Goetz carried 53 percent of the on-campus vote to David Wilson's 47 percent. Goetz defeated Wilson overall by 156 votes.

Francis Spain ran unopposed for Latah County coroner. William Hamlett also ran unopposed for Prosecuting Attorney.

SJR112 passed by 60 percent on campus. It also passed statewide and will now make it easier for voter initiatives to get on the ballot.

HJR12 also passed easily on campus by 63 percent. It is an amendment designed to help church-run hospitals cope with rapidly increasing construction costs. It was approved statewide.

A Latah County Bond Issue that passed by 80 percent on campus will help remodel the Latah County Convalescent Center and build a new wing for nursing home care.

Silence, in this case, not golden

The State Board of Education and the University of Idaho have tried to violate the constitutional rights of a U of I law professor in a way that is both appalling and stupid.

W. Lee Eckhardt is representing zoology professor J. Homer Ferguson in a $1 million dollar lawsuit against the university. The suit charges the university and the board with violating Ferguson's rights as a tenured professor.

Eckhardt planned to lecture at all four public four-year colleges in Idaho this month about the tenure system. This series of lectures is sponsored by the U of I local chapter of the Idaho Federation of Teachers.

Apparently, the board didn't like that idea. It asked Federal District Judge Ray McNichols for an order forbidding Eckhardt to give the lectures. After all, he just might discuss the lawsuit itself, rather than tenure in general.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that "prior restraint" — keeping someone from publishing or speaking, because of what that person might say — is unconstitutional. Friday the judge refused to stop the lectures.

The mystery is why the board would have wanted to stop Eckhardt from speaking in the first place.

Any lawyer who publicly discusses the merits of a lawsuit he is involved in is not only unprofessional, but stupid. Were Eckhardt to be that stupid, the board and administration wouldn't need to worry about whatever he might say. Such a lawyer's comments would help the university's case more than they would hurt it.

Not only that, but the attempt to get an injunction hurt the administration's and the board's credibility with students.

Students have probably kept an open mind about the lawsuit previously. They know too well that tenure can protect incompetent bumbling and the classroom tyranny, as well as academic freedom.

This attempt to keep Eckhardt from lecturing will make it harder for students to keep their minds open.

It also raises a more serious question. To what lengths will the administration and the board go to silence the people they disagree with?

Nostalgia hits alum: sex, pinball n' Arg

Kerrin McMahan

Universities thrive on nostalgia.

You know the kind I mean—you can see them peddling it every year at Homecoming, when the alumni come back to sing the old school songs and marvel at how old everyone else looks. During the three long, hard years (summers included) I spent at the University of Idaho, I used to watch the alums each fall and wonder why they insisted on living in the past. Not that I was lacking in school spirit—I practically majored in extracurricular activities: I gave my all for good old Idaho. But I figured once I had served my time, I would move on and leave it all behind. I could never understand what could be so special about a place that it could bring people back year after year.

It finally hit me when the Homecoming issue of the Argonaut arrived (two weeks late). I looked at the picture on the front, and images of Moscow started drifting through my mind. You can build up a lot of memories in three years.

Who could forget Spruce burgers with onions, marching band practice, ASUI campaigns. My Otto Hill apartment, Argonaut parties, dinner at the Alpha Chis. Skipping classes for weeks on end, days in the library, nights at the Garden Lounge. Macklin, the Ad Lawn, St. Augustine's. Sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll. GDI week, skiing at Tamarack, the Bovill run. Doing the pogo, the Lewiston Morning Tribune, pinball at the SUB. Hays Hall, Vandaleers, Reporting 222 and Campus News. Term papers written in one night, movies at the Micro, straight shots of Scotch (I could do seven).

Wait, this is sounding like a Ricky Nelson movie. Or worse yet, a Ronald Reagan speech. We all know there was more to it than that.

Pain, fear, anxiety. Confusion, disappointment, uncertainty. Tragedy, guilt, loneliness. The other side of college life, the side our parents never hear about. It all adds up to growing up.

Despite my efforts to the contrary, I learned a lot at college, about the world and about myself. Along the way, I gained friendships I hope will last a lifetime. And memories I know will always be with me.

My last column, concerning the East End facility, caused some people to question my loyalty to my alma mater. I must admit, I have a hard time getting thrilled about football. Especially when it costs more than it's worth. But although I am now enrolled at Ohio State, and hate mail from U of I football players notwithstanding, I am not and never will be a Buckeye. I don't know that I'm a Vandal, either, but I do know which school I belong to.

See you at the class reunion.

End to tenure ?

Editor,
The public as well as the academic community is invited to attend a meeting co-sponsored by the Idaho Federation of Teachers and the American Association of University Professors at 7:30 p.m. in the Galena Gold Silver room at the University of Idaho Student Union Building.

The question as to whether tenure has been ended in Idaho's higher education institutions will be discussed by Williard L. Eckhardt, professor of law at the U of I. Attorneys for the university and the State Board of Education asked Judge McNichols for a temporary restraining order cancelling the speaking engagement, but on Friday, Nov. 7 in Boise, the judge summarily dismissed the request as an unconstitutional prior restraint. This action which raises very serious questions as to the status of free speech in higher education will also be discussed.

Frat for all

Editor,
As a new graduate student to the U of I campus, and having received my B.A. at another university, I am in a position where I have made some comparisons between the two campuses. I would like to share one of these differences with you now.

The differences are in the social lives of the two schools. Here on this campus small, private parties seem to prevail; these social events being thrown mainly by living groups for its own members. At my other university, it was quite common for campus parties to be sponsored by several different groups on campus. The whole campus would be invited, which would seem to me to be a much healthier atmosphere. There wasn't the negative attitudes and bad feelings there, that seem to be present here among the various living groups.

Because of the situation which seems to be present on this campus, it seems very difficult for a person to live off campus and have any group social life. The off-campus community, which from my estimates is about half the student body, seems to have been ignored.

Alpha Kappa Lambda, the new fraternity organizing on campus, for which I am the coordinator, recognizes the need for social functions for the off-campus community. One of its premises in starting up on campus is to offer this alternative to those students who wish it. We intend to be a means by which the off-campus community can have a social life, without living in a group environment.

Inquiries into this offering are welcome, either by mail or phone.

Sincerely,

Missing a beat

Editor,
As a member of the U of I Marching Band this year, I would like to express my congratulations to the football team for the fine performance they have given this season. They have represented us well in the Big Sky Conference.

However, I wouldn't want the conduct of one or two inconsiderate players to reflect on the entire team. After one disappointing play, one U of I player decided to take out his frustrations on the head of one of the marching drums.

Perhaps you noticed the band didn't play Go Vandals for the rest of the night.

We feel this act was uncalled for and an apology, or better yet, payment for repairs, is in order. Should we send you the bill direct?

We hope the season ends well for the Vandals, but next time try kicking the head of a Northern Arizona player, not ours.

Poor PR

Editor,
Friday evening, Nov. 7, high school football playoff games were held in the Kibbié Dome. The dome was rented by the high schools, along with locker room facilities.

The point of this? I, as well as numerous parents, and high school football players, would like some answers: The guest locker room (in Memorial Gym) was open for use. Why wasn't the Vandal locker room?

Why did a team have to go to Moscow High School to change?

I am not in public relations, but it would seem wise for this institution to put forth a good impression to prospective students. How can this institution make a good impression by allowing the above situation to happen?

Film Review by N.K. Hoffman

Oh, God! Book II: easy on sentimental ick

"Somehow I thought you'd look holier."
"You're thinking of Charlton Heston."

How would you feel if all the children in your neighborhood ran around writing "Think God!" on walls, tacking up posters that read "Think God," vandalizing schools and buses and even churches? Depending on your religious preferences, you might commend this activity; it makes me feel a bit squirmy. However, overall, Oh, God! Book II didn't have as bad a case of sentimental ick as I expected it to.

Part of this redemption comes from George Burns, reprising his role as God. Burns refuses to get too goopy, and he has some good lines here and there.

Child actress Louanne plays the central role, Tracy, the school kid who talks to God. Louanne's casting is one of the good aspects of the film. She's cute, but not supercute (she has bad teeth and loves horror movies) and if she occasionally seems stilted, it may be she's suffering from too many smiley close-ups through no fault of her own.

Suzanne Pleshette and David Birney play Tracy's separated parents, fairly cardboard characters, like most of the "people" in the film (the mean teacher, the jargon-spewing psychiatrist, the Spanish maid, the father's obnoxious girlfriend, etcetera). Pleshette and Birney cope adequately with their roles.

Beyond blatant stereotyping this movie suffers from two other problems: lack of credibility and lack of originality. If a little girl says she talked to God, does it have to turn into a world-wide issue? A competent psychologist would hardly condemn a child to an institution just because she's on a person-to-person basis with God.

Even so, if this film had been a first, it might have been more worthwhile. But it's not only a remake of Oh, God! (part one) but also of Miracle on 34th Street.

Still, if you're hankering after a few miracles and a couple of personable character actors, you might enjoy this film. It's playing at the Kenworthy at 7 and 9 p.m. through Nov. 18.

The Moscow Arts Commission is sponsoring an informal evening get-together for Moscow artists Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Moscow Hotel Restaurant Lounge. Artists and patrons of the arts representing the areas of music, dance, theatre, literature and visual arts are invited to attend the no-host gathering.

Following a multi-image slide show presentation, artists will have the opportunity to get acquainted with each other and with the members of the Moscow Arts Commission. One of the purposes of the evening will be to get information from artists in order to update the Moscow Arts Directory which was compiled last year by the Moscow Arts Commission.

Airborne Bengals end Vandal title hopes, 28-21

by Bert Sahlberg
Sports Editor

Idaho State eliminated Idaho's chances of winning the 1980 Big Sky Conference football crown Saturday night in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome with a 28-21 upset victory over the Vandals.

The defeat drops Idaho to 5-4 on the year and 3-2 in conference action. Boise State's 14-3 win over Nevada-Reno Saturday guaranteed the Broncos the conference title. Idaho can still tie Boise State in the conference standing, but Boise will be declared the winner because of the Bronco's 42-21 win over Idaho earlier in the season.

"We're a much better football team, but I was impressed with the way Idaho State played," said Idaho coach Jerry Davitch. "Still, we lost a game we should have won."

But it was an exciting game between the air-born Bengals and the veer rushing attack of the Vandals. Idaho State and Idaho were virtually even in the statistics except one big category: turnovers.

The Vandals committed seven turnovers in the game, four on interceptions and three on fumbles.

"We had too many turnovers," said Davitch. "We just can't play anybody with seven turnovers."

The arm of Mike Machurek also was a key figure in the Bengals second upset in two weeks which keeps their four-game winning streak alive. Machurek hit on 27 of 40 passes for 338 yards and two touchdowns with two interceptions.

"We have the most sophisticated passing game in the country with the exception of Brigham Young University," said Machurek, a junior college transfer from California.

But the receivers also drove the Vandal secondary wild with great catches and by coming through in the clutch situations.

"We thought we found a weakness in their defensive secondary," said Bengal coach Dave Kragthorpe. "We just saw something and knew we could take advantage of it in the first half."

But the first-year coach thought the Bengals stayed in and played tough throughout the ballgame. Idaho State is now 5-4 on the year and 3-3 in conference play after finishing 0-11 last year.

"The improvement over last year is because of confidence and competitiveness," said Kragthorpe. "We just beat a good team on the road tonight."

Idaho, who has never beat Idaho State in the Kibbie Dome, was first to get on the board. Linebacker Sam Merriman's first interception of the night set up quarterback Ken Hobart's 34-yard scoring run.

But the Bengals came fighting back on the arm of Machurek. Machurek drove the Bengals 85 yards in seven plays and scored from one yard out.

The Bengals took the lead in the first quarter on an option pass. Running back Dwain Wilson took a Machurek pitch and started down field with two blockers in front of him. Suddenly, Wilson stopped a yard short of the line of scrimmage and fired a 65-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Jerry Bird.

Idaho State punter Case de Bruijn kept the Vandals deep in their own territory. Four of his six punts were downed inside the Vandal 10.

But that didn't keep the Vandals from tying the game. Hobart drove the Vandals 75 yards in 15 plays and kept the ball himself to tie the game at 14 from one yard out.

Before the half, the Bengals took the lead again on the arm of Machurek. Machurek hit Charles Ewing for nine yards for the touchdown. Machurek enjoyed a great first half, hitting on 14 of 19 passes for 165 yards and one interception.

Hobart used tight end Tom Coombs for 46 yards to set up a 19-yard toss to wide receiver Jack Klein for the touchdown.

Idaho was gaining the momentum, and the defense stopped the Bengals. However, the offense couldn't get rolling again so Vandal punter, Chris Brockman, put the Bengals on their own nine-yard line to start the fourth quarter.

Machurek tried to use the run but to no avail. The Bengals picked up only 47 yards rushing on 31 attempts. So Machurek went back to the air.

Machurek hit two passes for 40 yards and the Bengals found themselves on the Vandal 39. Machurek again dropped back to pass but Vandal defensive end Larry Barker was in hot pursuit. Finally, Machurek eluded Barker and fired a 39-yard scoring pass to tight end Rod Childs.

Machurek came out throwing again, but Merriman was waiting and picked off his second pass of the night.

The Vandals then moved the ball from the Bengal 33 down to the three where they were faced with a third-and-goal situation.

Hobart took the snap and ran the option to the left side of the Bengal defense, but the Bengals were waiting and had Hobart wrapped up. In desperation, Hobart tried to pitch the ball back to Idler, but it went behind Idler and Bengal cornerback Steve Scott fell on the loose ball, ending the Bandal drive.

"I made a mistake," said Hobart. "I should have given the ball instead of keeping it. Then I

Volleyball team wins league championship

by Kevin Warnock
Sports Writer

The Idaho women's volleyball team received a scare from Lewis-Clark State College in the championship match of the Interstate League Championship last Saturday but survived to win first place in the tournament and advance to regionals Nov. 20-22 at Bellingham, Wash.

Idaho defeated the Warriors 15-11, 6-15, 15-4, in the final match but it wasn't a demonstration of the Vandals' best effort.

"Linda Kelling was injured on the first play of the game, and we never seemed to get rolling," coach Amanda Burk said after the match. "We also had some receive-of-service problems, and we weren't blocking well."

Kelling, a sophomore from Lyons, Colo., starts on the Vandal back line and holds the squad's mark for serving percentage this year.

Game number two of the match was all LCSC. Idaho was late turning in their line-up and was penalized one point. It was the first of six straight Warrior points. An Idaho time-out slowed Lewis-Clark's momentum momentarily, but the Lewiston squad took the game on a service ace.

In the deciding game Idaho jumped out to an early lead, but LCSC battled back to within four at the change-of-sides.

With Lewis-Clark serving at 4-10, Freshman Karen Dolan went airborne to record a big stuff block which gave the Vandals a side-out.

Pam Bradetich then strung out five services in a row to secure the title for Idaho.

Burk pointed to fan support and depth as keys to her team's win. A crowd of about 200 people jammed into the P.E. Building and were very vocal throughout the championship match. "If we had a proper place to perform we could put a lot more people in here," said Burk after the game.

Idaho placed three players on the all-tournament first team. Senior Yvonne Smith, Linda Kelling, and freshman setter-hitter Pam Ford were the Vandal stand-outs.

Idaho beat LCSC 15-7, 15-10, and Eastern Washington 15-13, 15-3, to earn their berth in the championship.

Both Idaho and Lewis-Clark advance to NCWSA Regionals where the Vandals will again be the first seed.

Before the tourney Idaho will play two final matches. Nov. 10 Burk's squad traveled to Spokane to meet Gonzaga and Spokane Falls.

The final home match of the year for the Vandals will be Friday, Nov. 14 with Eastern Washington and Whitworth Scheduled to be in town.

Hockey team wins second place

The Idaho women's field hockey team picked up two second half goals to down Boise State 2-1 Saturday to place second in the NCWSA regional field hockey tournament in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Northwest Nazarene won the tournament by thumping Boise State 3-1 on Friday. Nazarene also downed Idaho 2-1.

"I'm very excited with our win over Boise State," said Vandal coach JoDean Moore. "We've played Boise State twice this season before this game and lost both times."

Boise beat Idaho in the Vandals' first tournament of the year 1-0 in overtime. Boise again won by the identical 1-0 score three weeks later.

It looked like Saturday's match would follow the same route when Boise went in at halftime with a 1-0 lead.

But the Vandals came out strong in the second half controlling the ball. Claire Diggins tied the game at 17:05 in the 35-minute second period on a rebound shot.

Kristi Pfeiffer then put the Vandals ahead at 23:50 with a goal. Pfeiffer's goal marks the first time all season the Vandals have come from behind to win a game.

"We always seem to rally in the second half," said Moore. "And that's not really good."

But the Vandals came close to picking up their biggest win of the year Thursday against Nazarene.

"I really felt we were a better team than NNC," said Moore. "We really didn't play better but we had better stick work." Moore added ball control was a major factor in the Vandals' loss.

Besides Diggins and Pfeiffer, Hollie Glidden and Marianne Sekela also enjoyed a fine tournament. Glidden had two big saves in the Vandals' win over Boise while Sekela gave two outstanding goalie performances.

The Vandals will end their season this weekend in Nampa, at the NCWSA Field Hockey Conference. The Conference is an annual event held at the end of each season and involves nine teams. Each team will play four games, but no tournament winner will be declared.

Moore described the 1980 Vandal squad as a nice team that is closely knitted together. "I think it's a young team with a whole new group of people, and it takes awhile to learn each other's moves," said Moore. "We had so much talent but putting it to use was our main concern."

The Vandals enter the tourney with a 7-11 record, but Moore feels the record is misleading. "We've lost a lot of one-point games," said Moore.

Moore added the Vandals will be a tough team to beat in the coming years. "In another two years, I think you'd see a nationally ranked team."

Hoop game set Friday

Preparing for the upcoming season, the Idaho basketball team will host the Athletes in Action from Canada Friday in an exhibition game. Tipoff time is set for 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Gym.

"I would have to say that we are further ahead in what we are trying to do than in past years," said third-year coach Don Monson.

The Vandals are blessed with four returning starters off last year's 17-9 team that finished second in the Big Sky race behind Weber State.

Idaho State eliminated the Vandals from the Big Sky Conference title race by upsetting Idaho 28-21 Saturday night. The arm of Bengals' quarterback Mike Machurek kept the Vandal defense off guard all night. Above, Machurek hits tight end Rod Childs for 15 yards, while Jay Hayes (84) applies the pass rush.

pitched the ball when I shouldn't have. I should have eaten the ball."

The Vandals got one more chance with a minute left in the game and the ball on their own 12 when Mark Vigil came in as quarterback. Vigil, however, was also unsuccessful through the air, was intercepted, and the Bengals won.

"The defense came through when we needed it," said Machurek. "The turnovers were a big factor."

"These guys (ISU) aren't shit," said Jones after the heart-breaking loss. "We beat ourselves."

Drugs

standing of this drug. No so in the case of street drugs.

Street drugs are usually defined as any of the "illegals" for sale by the drug underground and not usually available through legal channels to private citizens. Street drugs commonly available in Moscow include marijuana, cocaine, hashish, speed (amphetamines), and "magic" mushrooms (normally plain musrooms coated with LSD).

Cpt. Robert Means of the Moscow Police Department said most of the marijuana sold here is "homegrown." He said most of the marijuana offered as "Columbian," "Sensemilian," or any other especially potent variety is actually homegrown, laced or "painted" with Phencyclidine, usually called PCP or "angel dust."

PCP is not an animal tranquilizer, contrary to popular myth. It is an animal anesthetic, originally developed for human use but found subsequently to be unsuited for that use because of its adverse side effects. It is popular on the streets because it is cheap and easy to manufacture.

Questionable purity is the biggest problem posed by a street drug, according to medical and police sources.

Ray emphasizes that with street drugs, "there is no way of knowing what drug is actually being used, or the purity of the agent, or the dosage, or whether one or more drugs are contained in the dose as taken."

According to Ray, PCP effects "mimic an individual with moderate impairment due to low-level brain damage." This picture of the drug is reinforced by a comment made to Time magazine in 1977: "It's hard to understand why people are taking PCP. They don't take it to get high. They don't take it to make sex better. They take it to zonk themselves out. In a way, it's a disguised death wish."

Cocaine is the current rage in Moscow and nationally. A prominent film producer was recently convicted of possession of several ounces, and presidential aide Hamilton Jordan was the subject of a special prosecutor's investigation into allegations that he had used the drug at New York's Studio 54 discotheque. He was cleared of the charge.

A recent Time article states cocaine is gradually being replaced as the drug of choice in the nation by Mexican heroin, since the heroin is cheaper and the "high" it produces lasts longer.

Means said substantial quantities of heroin are circulating in Lewiston, but very little of the drug has reached Moscow. "One or two people might be using it here," he said, but no significant amounts have reached the town yet. Cocaine remains the "hardest" drug available.

Cocaine is present in Moscow, and in quantity. Small quantities began to arrive last spring, according to Means, and the quantity available now is substantial. He mentioned several local taverns as centers of cocaine trading, an indication of the drug's easy availability. With cocaine, as with alcohol, Moscow reflects the national trend: the director of the National Institute of Drug Abuse stated in 1977 more than eight million Americans had used cocaine recreationally. It was called "a serious drug of abuse."

Second man sentenced in hall bombing incident

Robert Hoffman, Moscow, was sentenced Thursday for his part in a bombing incident in Snow Hall in September.

Hoffman and U of I student Jim Givens pleaded guilty Oct. 2 to planting an explosive device that blew a fire extinguisher off the wall in Snow Hall Sept. 5. The explosion did about $200 worth of damage.

Magistrate Robert T. Felton sentenced Hoffman to pay $150 fine and costs plus half the cost of the damage caused by the explosion. Hoffman was also sentenced to complete 35 hours of service at the Latah County Convalescent Home.

Givens was sentenced Oct. 23.
