

ASI says no to suit, yes to lawyer

BOISE—The Associated Students of Idaho defeated a motion to file suit against the State Board of Education/Board of Regents after it approved the $50 resident student fee hike at its meeting here Thursday.

Instead, the ASI decided to hire an attorney who would provide legal counsel to the group during the legislative session. Before the attorney is hired, however, the student senates of the University of Idaho, Boise State University, Idaho State University and Lewis-Clark State College must approve.

Tim Smith, ISU student body president, urged the ASI board to file suit against the state board. The student delegation from LCSC agreed with ISU, but the U of I and BSU delegations said filing a suit at this time would be ill-advised.

The fee was supposed to be earmarked as to how it would be spent, Smith said. Now it will be mingled in with general reserve funds, he said.

BSU Student Body President Sally Thomas told the student group it would destroy ASI's credibility with the education board if it filed suit against the board now. She reiterated to the ASI the board's demand that the university presidents tell the board in January how revenue generated from the fee hike will be used.

ASUI President-elect Eric Stoddard said he could see potential problems with the constitutionality of the fee increase, but he preferred to wait and see how the universities will allocate the funds.

ASUI President Scott Fehrenbacher urged the board to hire an attorney who could advise ASI on the legalities of action taken by the board and the universities during the legislative session, which begins in January.

His motion was approved unanimously.

Regents unenthused about TV merger

BOISE—Plans for merging the University of Idaho's KUID and Washington State University's KWSU will continue, the State Board of Education/Board of Regents decided Wednesday.

However, the board asked that a study of statewide centralization of the three Idaho public television stations be included in the planning for the proposed KUID/KWSU merger.

"The board is interested in seeing the idea of centralization pursued," said Janet Hay of Nampa, president of the board.

Board member Robert Montgomery, of Boise, agreed with Hay and said there should be more concern for Idaho's three public television stations. The merger of the U of I and WSU stations would prevent the state from creating an effective statewide public television station, he added. Idaho's three public television stations are located in Pocatello, Boise and Moscow on the university campuses.

Art Hook, KUID general manager, told the board a station is identified by its programming. Local programming would be severely handicapped with statewide centralization, he said. The proposed merger would allow continuation of current programming and increased diversity in the programs offered.

According to Hook, the proposed station merger would extend

'Temporary' fee hike may be here to stay

by Diane Sexton
Editor

BOISE—Students will pay more to attend Idaho colleges and universities next semester, and if predictions by the State Board of Education/Board of Regents prove true, the fee hikes could become permanent.

Idaho residents will pay an additional $50 in student fees when they register next semester, out-of-state students an additional $150 in fees and tuition, and part-time students an additional $4 per-credit-hour as a result of action taken by the board here Thursday.

Legally this is a one-time fee hike, said Board President Janet Hay of Nampa, but it will probably become permanent.

What started as a temporary solution has become a permanent cure, said Board member Eugene Miller, of Coeur d'Alene, who added that he was reluctant to support the increase.

When the board proposed increasing student fees, it was to be for spring semester only. The increase was intended to offset the financial burden incurred by higher education institutions when Gov. John Evans ordered a 3.85 percent holdback in all state budgets last summer.

But board members are predicting the state financial situation will not improve in the next year and possibly could worsen.

Nels Solberg of Grangeville, the only board member to oppose the fee hike, said he was opposed because it will come in the middle of the academic year when students are least prepared for it. In April, the board probably could be looking at a fee hike larger than $50, he predicted.

The presidents of the University of Idaho, Boise State University, Idaho State University and Lewis-Clark State College supported the fee increase. Of the four student body presidents, only Sally Thomas of BSU supported the fee increase.

ASUI President-elect Eric Stoddard said he could not support the increase because the $50 resident fee hike was calculated in an arbitrary manner, with no attention paid to the different fee structures at the four institutions.

Most students simply cannot afford a mid-year fee increase, said ISU Student Body President Tim Smith. Several ISU students have said they cannot return to school if the fee hike is implemented, he said.

The board is in a position today where it is either voting to maintain quality education, or voting for someone dropping out of school, said board member Clint Hoopes, of Teton. "I've reluctantly voted for fees before and will again," he said.

"I like the principle of no tuition and low or no fees, but if we see a deterioration in the quality of education, then it is unwise," U of I President Richard Gibb told the board.

Taxpayers and students both wonder why they're always asked to bear the brunt of the problem, Gibb said. But it is difficult to ask the taxpayers to bear a larger portion of the burden, unless students also are asked to share the load, he said.

Although the board approved the fee hike, it was applauded by the audience when it voted against submitting a constitutional amendment legalizing in-state tuition to the Idaho legislature. However, the board did approve proposed legislation defining tuition.

The legislation, which will be forwarded to the legislature, defines tuition as a fee dedicated to the cost of instruction at colleges and universities. But those costs, according to the legislation, do not include research, public service, maintenance and operation of the physical plant, academic support, student services and instructional support costs which are not directly part of the instructional program.

Currently, student fees are used to pay for things basically unrelated to academics, such as inter-collegiate athletics and student services. If the legislature approves the board's proposal, it would allow the board to assess student fees for purposes that have been previously considered unconstitutional.

The Associated Students of Idaho, a state-wide lobbying group of student leaders from the four institutions, objected to the board's definition of tuition.

"I must oppose the extremely narrow definition of tuition that has been proposed," said ASUI President Scott Fehrenbacher in a letter to the board. "I can support a concept of a more flexible definition of fees as opposed to the adoption of resident tuition. The fee structure protects the student from exorbitant costs and maintains control of higher education with the state board of education."

Fehrenbacher stressed that an expanded definition of fees should be accompanied by a ceiling on the percentage of the costs of instruction to be paid through student fees, and limitations on the yearly increases to reach the ceiling.

Although the board approved proposed legislation defining tuition, it defeated a motion to submit an amendment to the legislature legalizing in-state tuition.

Cheryl Hymas of Jerome, who urged the board to submit the amendment to the legislature without the board's recommendation, said such legislation would be the only way to clarify what Idaho's citizens want.

"It also gets everyone's attention to the problem of higher education," she said.

"A bill like this will be submitted to the legislature this year anyway. Why shouldn't it be our bill?" she asked.

"We shouldn't send it over in any shape or form," responded Solberg. "If the legislature wants to bring it up, then let them."

The motion to send the proposed amendment to the legislature failed by a 4-4 vote. The board also approved sending the legislature an amendment to the Idaho Code that would allow it to have more flexibility in determining the courses and programs offered at higher education institutions.

Even with revenue generated by the fee hike, the board still may consider eliminating or consolidating programs and reducing duplication of programs at the four institutions.

Forced cutbacks already have resulted in deterioration of quality in education, Milt Small, the board's executive director, said early in the meeting. "We do not wish to tax students but to preserve the quality for future students," he said.

Addressing the issue of cutbacks made already, BSU President John Keiser said "We already have four students dissecting one pickled cat."

The U of I will gain about $400,000 from the increase in student fees, while ISU and BSU will get less than $300,000 each. Ten percent of the revenue generated by the fee hike will be held by the board and redistributed later next year.

The four presidents are expected to tell the board at its meeting in Boise next month how the money generated through the fee increase will be spent.

Faculty, staff to dine and dance Dec. 12

The Faculty/Staff Dinner Dance is Dec. 12, and reservations will be accepted until 5 p.m. Monday, said Robert Baron, assistant professor of architecture and general chairman of the event.

The affair, which was called the Presidential Banquet Christmas Party when it was established by President Ernest Hartung in 1965, will include dinner, entertainment and dancing.

The SUB Food Service will suspend its normal food service operation at 1:30 p.m. Dec. 12 to enable employees to work on the dinner. Drinks and snacks will be available at the Snack Bar until regular closing time at 10 p.m.

During the dinner, which begins at 6 p.m., Christmas music will be played by organist Darrel Bozett. Entertainment will include a video KUID presentation, "White Water," a slide presenta-

Dancing will begin at 9 p.m. with music provided by Jazz I, a 20-member U of I student jazz ensemble. During intermission, members of the American Festival Ballet will dance selections from the Nutcracker.

Reservations made by Monday cost $5 per person, and later reservations will cost $7 per person. The personalized reservation forms sent to all active and retired faculty and staff members should be used, Baron said. If a form is not available, David Bennett, 885-6336, should be contacted.

The Argonaut is developing an art and literary supplement to be released next semester. The supplement will contain essays, photographs, poems and drawings and will be printed in black and white.

Ann Fichtner, art and literary editor for the Argonaut, said anyone in the Palouse area can contribute to the supplement, and the deadline for articles is Dec. 19.

There is no subject restriction or limit to the number of works submitted by one person.

Works can be sent to the Argonaut in care of Ann Fichtner, art and literary editor, or submitted in person at the Argonaut offices in the SUB basement.

Anyone turning in art or literary works should include his name, address and phone number on each piece submitted.

Core curriculum: it's up again

by Debbie Brisbois
Staff Reporter

The proposed changes in the core curriculum for baccalaureate degrees will come under scrutiny again at Tuesday's general faculty meeting.

Proposed changes in the structures of standing committees, proposed procedures for implementing the 20-credit withdrawal limitation, a statement concerning the sale of materials to students, and a petition on due process from faculty members also are scheduled to be discussed.

The core curriculum, which was passed unanimously after revisions by the Faculty Council in October, has been a center of controversy since its beginning two years ago.

The proposed curriculum requires students working towards a baccalaureate degree to complete 36 credit hours in five areas—communications, natural and applied sciences, mathematical, statistical and computer sciences, humanities and social sciences, and physical education.

Opposition to the proposal came from professional and technical colleges on campus, which argued that the new requirements would complicate already tight curriculums in those colleges.

A petition signed by deans and department heads asking for the appointment of a special commission to study the constitutionality of the proposal was sent to Faculty Council Chairman John Knudsen and University of Idaho President Richard Gibb, and a commission was appointed.

The commission was charged with deciding whether the council had the right to set such curriculum standards.

In reaching a decision last week, the commission found the proposal as not unconstitutional because it did not violate the right of the eight colleges to set their own course requirements.

Also to be discussed will be a statement concerning the sale of materials to students.

According to the statement, in keeping with required professional ethics, faculty members should "avoid any exploitation of students for their private advantage," and collection of money from students is prohibited unless under special circumstances and with specific authorization.

Faculty members will also consider procedures for implementing the 20-credit withdrawal limitation.

Under the proposal, a student will not be allowed to drop more than 20 credits. If the total number exceeds 20, the higher numbered courses will be given Ws (unless the student indicates otherwise), and the lower numbered classes exceeding the total will be given a grade, presumably an F since the student will have stopped going to classes and taking tests.

A petition dealing with due process concerning non-tenured and exempt personnel will also be presented to the faculty.

Under current university regulations, due process is denied to exempt employees who are not tenured.

The petition, signed by 59 faculty members, calls for changes in the constitution to give exempt employees the right to request reasons for nonrenewal of their appointments, and the right to ask for reconsideration of the recommendation.

The proposal also would allow an employee to appeal a decision although none of these rights shift the burden of proof to the university.

The meeting will be held at 3:30 p.m. in the Agricultural Science Auditorium.

Group to look at tenure reviews

The controversial tenure review system will be studied by a special ad hoc committee appointed by Faculty Council Chairman John Knudsen.

The appointment of the committee was spurred by a resolution passed at last Tuesday's Faculty Council meeting.

Members of the ad hoc committee include Larry Bobisuid, professor of mathematics who will chair the committee; Dennis Colson, professor of law and a member of Faculty Council; Robert Coonrod, professor of history; Robert Lotman, professor of civil engineering; and Sandra Slade, assistant professor of architecture/interior design.

The committee will evaluate the review system and survey faculty members for their views on the subject. It will also consider a resolution from U of I law professor, Willard Eckhardt, an outspoken opponent of the reviews, which calls for suspension of the tenure reviews until a state-wide committee can make a report on them.

25 students demand longer cafeteria hours

by Suzanne Carr
Staff Reporter

About 25 students who are upset with the SUB's closing hours submitted a petition to SUB Board at its meeting Tuesday and demanded a thorough investigation of hours.

Some 200 signed a petition while studying in the SUB bucket areas saying the SUB is catering to cash customers, rather than to students, and closes early when student demand for the service is high.

Al Deskiewicz, food service operations manager, said he was offended by the letter Machler and Nicolette Carrell had written to the Argonaut, which said "a few radicals were trying to make life rough" for him.

After a heated discussion Machler said the issue wasn't whether or not Deskiewicz was offended and offered an apology which Deskiewicz accepted.

Deskiewicz said Food Service had conducted a survey asking students what they wanted.

"Of the 218 forms collected only 11 made a comment related to hours," he said.

One student pointed out there wasn't a question relating to hours on the survey.

"There wasn't a question on if they wanted Porsches or not either," Deskiewicz responded.

The meeting brought out the fact the students wanted the SUB to rearrange hours to stay open later from Sunday through Thursday, not necessarily with the food service area open, but allowing students to study in the red and blue bucket areas of the SUB.

SUB Board agreed to look into the problem and Machler and Carrell volunteered to serve in a student ad hoc committee to investigate possible solutions to the problem.

Several ideas such as having student volunteers guard the grill area, paying a student to work later, or keeping the SUB open later during the last part of semester will be considered.

Ask Santa for 50 bucks

The future is not pretty for students who don't have a lot of money.

Next semester it's going to cost $50 more for resident students and $150 more for non-residents. And the state of Idaho is not going to stop there as it shifts more and more of the funding burden to its students.

Thursday in Boise, the Regents approved legislation that will open up all sorts of opportunities for hiking student fees. And the governor and legislature are already counting on passing that legislation, and on getting lots more revenue from higher student fees next year.

So in the spring, when higher student fees are proposed, legal notices printed and public hearings held, we'll see what a sham it all is.

By then, it all will be sewn up. The state will have the legal grounds for making students pay for everything but faculty members' salaries (for teaching only), and the legislature will have appropriated money to the colleges that it expects to get from higher student fees in the fall. The regents will be locked into passing higher fees.

The board can be applauded for one action this week: they voted down legislation that would put before the voters an amendment to the constitution legalizing tuition. It's less likely the legislature will pass such legislation now, and that's good.

But the sweet taste of victory for students turns bitter when you consider what's down the road. The regents have endorsed legislation that so narrowly defines tuition that students will be paying for much that is critical to their education, and much that is more critical to somebody else.

The board's endorsement of the legislation is disappointing. Caught in the dilemma of maintaining higher education with dwindling state revenues, the board (and legislature) has turned to the user, the student. It apparently doesn't see the user's—the student's—investment in education as an investment in the future for the state. It apparently doesn't see education as something the state should provide inexpensively to anyone who wants to learn. Idaho now ranks twenty-first (not fifth, as the board is wont to say) in the amount of money it pumps into education for each student. Hardly a great sacrificer among states.

The Associated Students of Idaho will fight as forcefully as the association is able to keep students from being the heavies in the budget crunch. In the end, though, the students least able to pay will inevitably be sacrificed by a state too short-sighted to see what's in its best interests.

Building education ?

by Dan Junas

Tuesday the faculty will consider a proposal to establish core curriculum requirements for the baccalaureate degree. If approved, it will require all undergraduate degree candidates to take courses in writing, natural and applied sciences, mathematics, the humanities and social sciences, and physical education. Since most colleges and departments already have such requirements, the impact would be minimal. Nonetheless, since this is an attempt by the faculty to define the goals of the university, it is a good time to reconsider and discuss the values and aims which underpin and govern our university.

According to Bruce Bray, the faculty secretary, consideration of a core curriculum was initiated by his suggestion that the faculty provide in the university catalog a definition of the bachelor's degree. A committee was formed to consider this issue, which proved so controversial that the committee decided to restrict itself to arriving at a core curriculum, prompting Bray to comment, "You're putting bricks in place, but you don't know what you're building."

If this judgment is correct, the core curriculum represents a political compromise more than it represents a coherent educational philosophy held in common by the faculty. Since the faculty cannot agree on the definition of an undergraduate education, which they are supposedly giving me, I have to ask whether the university is a community in the sense that it holds certain values in common, or whether, as one writer has suggested, it consists of autonomous departments with a common interest in parking. If in fact the faculty is putting bricks in place without knowing what it is building, what does this imply about the quality of education it offers?

To understand the workings of our university one must remember that it is founded, as is the rest of our society, upon a system of specialization. In such a system various responsibilities are distinguished from one another in order that each responsibility might be in the hands of the most skilled and best prepared individuals.

Of course these distinctions are not absolute; one uses English not only in the English department, but throughout the university. And the distinctions are arbitrary. Can anyone say where anthropology ends and history begins? Or where soil science ends and plant science begins? Nonetheless these distinctions govern the student's thinking. If he studies only one field, he can easily forget that all fields are interrelated, and that ideas acquired in one often apply to other fields. He can even forget that the distinctions are arbitrary and that he can redraw and view them any way he pleases. It is this kind of problem which a core curriculum is expected to address.

But can the components of education, scattered as they are throughout the university, be reassembled through such requirements alone? For an example, let us examine the problem of English composition. According to the proposal, "The core curriculum requires that students master certain fundamental skills in writing...." In fact it requires English 103 and 104, plus an upper division writing course. But can a student master writing skills in only three courses if he neglects them in other courses?

Anyone who has "mastered certain fundamental skills in writing" knows that it is an ongoing process which cannot be cultivated in three 3-credit classes and then ignored. But students object if anyone but an English teacher corrects their writing, and in the face of such objections, many professors choose to ignore the quality of their students' writing. Should it not be expected, therefore, that many students will just slide through their writing courses and forget them? Unless the whole faculty values good writing — not just pays lip service to it — can students honestly be expected to write well?

Some faculty members may argue that they are paid not to teach English (unless they are English teachers) but to teach their specialty. This is true, although it perhaps would be more accurate to say that they are paid to research their specialty, for the dictum of the modern university is, "Publish or perish." Most professors' promotions, indeed their survival, depend upon the frequency with which they publish scholarly articles; they are encouraged not to teach nor to help students think in terms other than those defined by specialties, but to advance their own specialty. Now, if professors are encouraged not to cross boundaries, but to remain within them, how can students be expected to do what their professors do not?

Moreover, how can such specialized individuals judge what ought to be included in the core curriculum. If they know only one field, they are not qualified to determine what other areas a student ought to explore. The result is that the matter is resolved by a political compromise which causes as little trouble as possible.

Don't get me wrong. I think the core curriculum would be a step in the right direction. It is an attempt to pull the university up by its bootstraps; at least it has stimulated discussion of a topic ignored for too long. But other steps must be taken. Students and professors alike must cross the arbitrary boundaries which separate them. They must strive to understand how the various parts of knowledge are related and how their respective disciplines can be brought to bear on one another. Most importantly, they must look not only toward the bricks, but toward what the bricks are intended to build.

Kiddie antics

Editor,

The men of Borah Hall demand a formal apology from the Inter-Fraternity Council for the disturbance on Nov. 18 caused by the juvenile antics of a number of Greek pledges. These aforementioned children descended on our place of residence (the Wallace Complex) and woke the residents with chants of "dorms suck" and "Greeks are number one." Furthermore, these adolescents invaded our hall and violated our quiet hours.

If this apology does not appear in the editorial section of the Dec. 12 issue of the Argonaut, judicial actions shall be taken against every fraternity on campus.

Sincerely yours,
Tom Naccarato
President of Borah Hall

A good batch

Editor,

I am a home economist.

You will not detect guilt, embarrassment or shame in this statement. What you will detect is a note of pride. I am proud of the fact that as a home economist I am highly adaptable, trainable and people-oriented.

So why, with all of these worthy attributes, is it that I still find I must educate people who have a misconception of a home economist?

For some reason many individuals have an image of a home economist sewing aprons and making brownies. But there are so many other things that you could ask me about that my chosen profession entails.

For instance you could ask me about the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act and how it benefits the consumer in the market place.

Ask me about the protein, keratin, which makes up a wool fiber, and how some chemicals can damage the cysteine linkage found in this structure.

Ask me how the "plastic elements" can be used in making your home more aesthetically pleasing.

Ask me how research done by home economists can benefit the potato farmers.

Ask me how the nuclear families' move to suburbia has effected our environment.

Ask me about the vanishing point of the perspective construction in Masaccio's "The Holy Trinity."

Ask me about the multi-interdisciplinary studies concerning human development.

Ask me about alternative energy sources and which can best be applied to the environment in which you live.

Ask me about Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations.

Ask me about the molecular make-up of an amino acid.

Ask me how nutrient density, a new concept, is being used to measure the nutritional value of food.

But, please, don't ask me how to make brownies.

I am so much more than brownies and aprons. A home economist is a diversified individual with knowledge in many areas. I am not trained solely to teach high school students, although that is a very important aspect of my field.

A home economist is an administrator, a merchandiser, an interior designer, a dietician, a consumer advocate, a consultant, a fashion designer, an educator, a counselor....

And if you ask me how to make brownies...Yes, I can tell you that too!!

Serving you

Editor, I would like to sincerely thank those who supported me for the candidacy of ASUI President.

The student voting turnout reflected the largest interest in ASUI elections in more than five years. I hope this election indicative of student concern for the educational future of the University of Idaho and the crucial role student representation must assume in determining that future.

I am optimistically looking forward to serving you as the next ASUI President.

Eric Stoddard
ASUI President-Elect

Extra helpful

Editor,

I greatly appreciated the help I received from all the people who were interested in having me as an ASUI senator. I would like to thank the following people who were extra helpful:

I congratulate the newly-elected senators, and wish them the best of luck for the coming year. I also would like to congratulate Eric Stoddard and Clark Collins on winning the ASUI presidential and vice presidential races, and I look forward to working with them in the future. Thanks again for your support.

Sincerely,
Dave Cooper

Reservations

Editor,

I wholeheartedly agree with Janice Galloway's letter in the Nov. 14 issue of the Argonaut concerning the saving of large blocks of seats at the football games. Be it a fraternity, residence hall, or any other group, there is no reasonable justification for this practice. It is completely unfair to those of us who arrive early in hopes of finding good seats only to discover they are all "reserved."

Because many of us are all too willing to allow these groups to get away with this, it has become somewhat of a tradition for these groups to send a few people ahead to save a half dozen rows for the rest of the group, who wander in just before gametime. Sure it's nice to be able to sit with your friends, but when this is done at the expense of forcing other spectators to take the crummy seats while the "reserved" seats are saved for some "slowpokes" then that is wrong.

Though I did notice some improvement on the part of these groups, the problem still exists.

Since the home football season is now over it is too late to do anything about it this year. But when that first game rolls around next year, think about the times you spent on the 20-yard line wondering if we got that first down or not. Then think about all those choice mid-field seats there for the taking! What are you waiting for? First-come, first-served!

Respectfully,
Michael Sweeney

Your blood

Editor,

The Blood Drive Committee of the ASUI Program Department again sponsored a successful blood drive. The quota for the university is 300 pints, but more people gave. The people on this campus have a proud heritage to uphold, and they do it beautifully.

The effort was supported by volunteers from the Faculty Women's Club, technicians and nurses from Moscow and members of service clubs on campus. Grocery stores and living groups supplied cookies, while the rest of you gave blood. A sincere "thank you" goes to each one who helped and a special tribute is given to the Blood Drive Committee: Ralph May, chairman, Erin Howser, Laura Jasma, Brian Faulks, Theresa Heil, Kellee O'Brian, Rob Fredrickson, Mary Ann Greenwell and Bob Sanders.

The next drawing will be held in the SUB Jan. 27, 28, 29.

"When I got killed it was a real shock," said Becky Kologi, Olesen Hall president.

Sound strange? Not if you know that Olesen Hall is playing a game of murder, which will last until the end of the semester.

Each of the hall members received a playing card at a hall meeting. The woman who drew the ace of spades became the killer.

The two black kings became the detectives. The murderer is trying to kill every woman in the hall — by showing them her ace — before the detectives figure out who she is.

A few extra rules add interest to the game. The killer can murder only two people a day, and she must "slay" them somewhere outside the hall. It can be in the cafeteria, the library, downtown — anyplace but the hall lounge or rooms.

Within two days of being killed, the girls must put up their post mortem notice which should include the date and time killed, but not the place.

Everyone knows who the detectives are, but people who have been killed are not allowed to give them tips. (Dead people can't talk.)

Nancy Froeschle, an exchange student from the University of North Dakota, organized the game.

"A friend of mine from North Dakota sent me the instructions for the game," Froeschle said. "I read it to a few people on the hall, and they thought it sounded like fun."

Froeschle brought it up at a hall meeting and the women decided to play.

"Now I'm just waiting around for the killer to flash me the ace," Froeschle said.

But seeing the deadly card can be quite a shock, according to Kologi, the second hall member to bite the dust. "You really feel like you got killed," she said.

As the hall members drop one by one, the mystery of the killer's identity continues.

"We do have a suspect," said detective Julie Krueger, a

The Ace of Spades Stalks Olesen Hall

freshman in engineering. "We've been watching this one suspect and trying to find out where she was at the times people were killed," Krueger said.

The two detectives haven't made their accusation yet, but the hall already has plans for whomever they name.

"We're going to have a trial for her before finals week using the evidence we've found," Krueger said.

Meanwhile, the hall members continue to fall. Fifth on the hit list was none other than...this reporter. Therefore you, dear readers, get the results of an exclusive interview with the murderer, who, of course, must remain anonymous.

The killer said at first she almost wished she wasn't the murderer because she didn't know how she was going to do it. Before long, however, she decided it was going to be real fun.

"I love to sneak up on people and kill them," the murderer admitted. "It's exciting to kill someone. You get the thrill of being in command."

The assassin told about killing her first victim, Katrina Smith, a junior majoring in special education. "I said, 'Oh Katrina, I have something to show you.' She said, 'Oh no!' I reminded her to keep quiet and not tell anyone."

The anonymous interviewee said one of the deaths was accidental. She has to carry the card with her in case she finds an opportunity to use it. One day she accidentally dropped it, and a hall member happened to see it.

"I hadn't actually killed her, but since she knew I was the murderer, she posted her death notice."

Having filled her limit of two victims, the murderer said she could hardly wait for the next day so she could kill some more people. "I wish I could kill more in one day," she said.

It's not only the potential victims who must be wary. The murderer herself is in a risky position.

"It's kind of fun having detectives," she said, "but I'm so afraid of being caught — Julie is just too quick."

Is the murderer the girl the detectives suspect? Will the jury find her innocent or guilty? Will all of Olesen Hall be dead before justice is served? And what about the butler?? (Hey, do they get butlers in the dorms?)

To find out the answers to these and other questions, you (yes, you) can play this game in your very own living group.

Not just for forestry students anymore

Public policy graduate, business economics major, law student or biologist, practically anyone can apply for one of the many conservation fellowships offered each year by the National Wildlife Federation.

Environmental conservation fellowships were first offered by the federation in 1957. Since then the program has been expanded to encourage graduate research in fields relating to wildlife, natural resource management, and protection of environmental quality.

Some areas being funded this year are conservation communication, environmental law, social and economic aspects of resource management, and public policy.

According to Al Moslemi, graduate programs coordinator for the College of Forestry, few people outside the college are aware of the program, despite the fact that it is not limited to science fields. "This is a very broad program," he said, and more students should apply.

Fellowships include a $4,000 grant that may be used for any research related purpose, including travel and relocation expenses, Moslemi said. Persons desiring further information or application forms may contact Moslemi at 885-6126.

The ski exhibition held in the SUB main lobby Nov. 20 sent five U of I students home for the holidays with prizes. The winners were: Eric Mende, five days of skiing at Silverhorn; Vicki Root,

ASUI V.P. vetoes communication bill

by Betsy Brown
Staff Reporter

Acting ASUI President Tom Crossan vetoed a bill passed by the senate Wednesday night that would have created a procedure for resolving conflicts over Communications Department appointments.

Vice-President Crossan was filling in for ASUI President Scott Fehrenbacher, who was representing the ASUI at the December meeting of the State Board of Education/Board of Regents. Both Fehrenbacher and Crossan leave office on Wednesday, when new ASUI officers are inaugurated.

Crossan told the Argonaut he vetoed the bill because it would bring control of the press under the executive branch and "it would allow the ASUI President to chair the compromise committee."

Under the terms of the bill, if the president rejected the same Communication Board appointment twice, and the board and president couldn't reach a compromise, a special committee would be appointed to consider the appointment.

The ASUI Communication Board appoints the Argonaut and Gem of the Mountains editors, the Photography Bureau director, and the KUOI-FM station manager.

The special appointments committee would have consisted of the four members of the senate Ways and Means Committee and four Communication Board members.

The ASUI President would have chaired the committee, voting only in case of a tie. If the committee approved the disputed appointment, it would have been sent to the senate for final consideration.

Crossan said that a tie vote would be likely to occur with eight voting members on the committee, giving the president the chance to use his or her tie-breaking vote.

"I believe it (the communications appointment bill) overrules the function of Comm Board," Crossan added.

Crossan didn't think Fehrenbacher would have vetoed the bill. But, he said, "The (ASUI) Constitution says in the absence of the president, the vice president takes over and I don't feel I'm overstepping my obligations."

Past problems with the appointment of KUOI station managers prompted introduction of the communications appointment bill.

The most recent controversy occurred in the spring of 1980.

According to Daniel Junas, former KUOI promotions director, Communications Board nominated Gary Spurgeon for KUOI station manager. When President Scott Fehrenbacher rejected Spurgeon's appointment, the Communications Board resubmitted Spurgeon's name.

"They felt he (Spurgeon) was the right person, and they weren't going to budge," Junas said.

Fehrenbacher again rejected Spurgeon's name. Junas said Fehrenbacher then issued a statement that there was nothing in the ASUI Constitution to tell him how to deal with the situation.

Fehrenbacher then invoked "emergency powers" and appointed another applicant, Jennifer Smith, to fill the position, Junas said.

Fehrenbacher contacted the members of the senate, who had by this time left for the summer, and they approved his appointment of Smith, Junas said.

The constitutionality of Fehrenbacher's action was called into question, but that question was never resolved.

The senate also passed bills approving more money for the ASUI lobbyist, creating a new Polls and Survey Bureau, and transferring $551 from the golf course reserve to the irregular help section of the golf course budget.

The Senate added a Polls and Surveys Bureau to the Communications Department. The bureau will conduct polls and surveys among students about university and ASUI issues.

According to the bill the bureau will operate "in coordination with the faculty agreeing to teach the needed skills, check the accuracy of the polls or survey, and check the information therein."

The bill further stipulates that "all polls or surveys must be sanctioned by the ASUI Senate through a resolution." All poll and survey results will be presented to the senate.

Starting next fall, the students in the bureau will receive university credit for their work, ASUI Senator Jeff Thomson told the Argonaut Monday. The three faculty advisers who will be responsible for the class will also advise the bureau in the spring, Thomson said.

Student retention survey nets disappointing results

A survey given to 500 students to ascertain how satisfied they are with this university has netted some disappointing results.

The survey, in the form of a questionnaire, was distributed several weeks ago by the Retention Committee.

Ernest Ables, co-chairman of the committee, said the response to the survey is "not good."

Approximately 40 percent of the surveys have been returned. The survey covers a broad spectrum of questions aimed at all aspects of university life.

Ables said to date he had only glanced at the advising portion of the survey. Those responses shows the "we're doing a fair job on this campus on advising." He added, "We have a lot of room for improvement."

The Retention Committee is seeking to make the university "a better place for students," Ables said.

All colleges were represented in the survey. Most of the respondents were upper classmen.

The survey, published by the American College Testing program, will be sent back to ACT for statistical analysis. Once those results are in, the committee will formulate recommendations to President Gibb. The formal recommendations should be in by the end of January, Ables said.

The committee meets again Dec. 11. Ables encourages any students who still have surveys out to turn them in to either the ASUI office in the SUB or Room 201 of the Forestry Building.

Advising workshop today at FOC

Administrators will discuss the University of Idaho's advising system during two workshops today. The workshops will be held at the Faculty Office Complex lounge from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1-3 p.m.

Galen Rowe, assistant academic vice president, said the workshops will be devoted to academic advising and counseling. He said the objectives are to identify ways to integrate and improve campus-wide academic advising and counseling.

Vandals now 2-0

Undefeated Idaho hosts Clansmen tonight

With a 65-51 win over Washington State Monday night in Spokane, the Idaho Vandal basketball team is off to their best season start in six years with a 2-0 record.

The Vandals will tip-off the home season at 8 tonight when they play host to the Clansmen from Simon Fraser in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Saturday, the Vandals travel to Spokane again, this time to meet Gonzaga. The Vandals will then host U.S. International in the dome Monday night.

The triumph over Washington State Monday marked the first time in six years the Vandals were able to beat the Pac-10 team.

Earlier in the week, the Vandals knocked off Nebraska 64-53. The win over the Cornhuskers marks the second win in as many years. Last season, Idaho defeated Nebraska 64-55.

But the win over the Cougars was a costly one for the Vandals. Idaho lost the services of guard Brian Kellerman in the first half with a back injury. Kellerman, the second leading scorer for Idaho last season and runner-up for the Big Sky Newcomer of the Year honors, injured his back in a water skiing accident this past summer. Kellerman is expected to be out for at least two weeks.

Replacing Kellerman in the starting lineup tonight will be senior guard Dan Forge, who has played brilliantly coming off the bench the last two games.

"Dan had done a good job filling in for us," said Idaho coach Don Monson. "He's an admirable senior with good experience."

Joining Dan in the back court will be junior college transfer Ken Owens.

"Ken had a better game against WSU," said Monson. "He turned the ball over a little too much but he is still adjusting to our system."

Ron Maben, the Vandal's 6-foot-5 senior center, was named the first Big Sky conference basketball Player of the Week for his performance against Nebraska.

Maben hit on six of 12 shots from the field and two-of-two at the free throw line for 14 points. He also had eight rebounds and five assists while playing all but 30 seconds of the game.

"I'd think we'd like to have any kid to get recognition on our team," said Monson about Maben's selection. "He really played extremely well in the second half against Nebraska."

Maben, who moved from forward to center this year, traded spots with three-year letterman Jeff Brudie. Brudie was the Vandals' center last season.

"Jeff moved to forward, and I think it was a good transition for both of them," said Monson. "Maben shoots better close to the basket while Jeff can shoot better outside."

Phil Hopson is the Vandals' fifth starter. Hopson, a sophomore, took over the starting spot when senior Gordie Herbert broke his wrist. Herbert just got the cast of his wrist but won't join the team for a couple of weeks.

"Phil maybe didn't start for us last year, but it's hard keeping someone like Phil out of the line-up," said Monson.

Hopson enjoyed an outstanding game against the Cougars Monday night when he scored 19 points and pulled down 13 rebounds.

"We played well at both Nebraska and WSU for this course of the season, and we are really pleased we won both games," said Monson.

The Vandals were picked to finish third in the conference race this season after finishing second last year with a 9-5 Big Sky record and a 17-11 season mark.

"I think that prediction is about right," said Monson. "We've got 12 lettermen back, but they pick you somewhere. It really doesn't make much difference where they pick you."

"I'd love to win the league this year," Monson said. "I feel our fans and students deserve a tournament."

Monson said the team's goal this season is to win the conference and hold the Big Sky tournament here.

"My goal, since the day I came, is to make the University of Idaho a contender every year and as competitive as we can be everytime we go out and play," said Monson.

With four returning starters, the Vandals should be very competitive this season.

Gymnastics squad starts season Saturday

With the addition of an outstanding field of recruits, second year women's gymnastics coach Wanda Rasmussen feels Idaho's strongest point for the 1980-81 season will be the team's depth. "The strength of our top two all-arounders is one of the factors that will make us a strong team with the ability to improve the 1980-81 season," Rasmussen said. "Our newcomers enter their intercollegiate career with high school and club experience."

Another factor that Rasmussen feels will be an asset to the U of I squad is the return of a healthy Cindy Bidart, a senior from Winnemucca, Nev., who will captain the team for the third straight season.

"Cindy is a team leader," Rasmussen said. "With her three years of intercollegiate experience and the very positive way she encourages her teammates by word and example is an intangible plus that any coach enjoys having on the team."

Rasmussen was also pleased with this year's schedule. Of the 11 weeks of competition, the U of I team will be at home for four of their meets. "It is a help in not having to spend the time and energy on the road as much," Rasmussen explained. "Another plus is that two of our home events are quadrangular meets. This gives us a chance to see more competition at one shot. We'll bring in eight judges so four events will be going on at once."

"We are looking forward to our Bozeman (Mont.) trip," she said. "We'll see two strong Division I teams (Idaho is Division II) and that's always a challenge."

Idaho faces a tough opener when they travel to Boise Saturday to go against strong Division I teams Washington State University and Brigham Young University, and the number four Division II AIAW team Boise State.

On the U of I roster with Bidart is returnee Elaine Hendrickson, a senior from Twin Falls, who specializes on beam, floor and vault. Newcomers are all-arounders Glenda Allen of Boise, Karen Ball of Mercer Island, Wash., Brette Cannon of Wenatchee, Wash., Shannon Daily of Portland, Ore., and Cheri Lande, a junior from Moscow.

Newcomers who specialize are Julie Morosic, a freshman from Kailua, Hawaii and Jane Vogel, a junior transfer from Scottsdale Community College of Scottsdale, Ariz. Vogel took third in vaulting at the Junior College National Championship in 1979.

Fery named to Conference All-Star team

Junior offensive guard Bruce Fery was the only Idaho Vandal football player to be named to the starting Big Sky Conference's All-Star team that was dominated by league champion Boise State. The Broncos placed six members on the first team in a vote of league voters.

Several Vandals received recognition in the voting. Sophomore quarterback Ken Hobart finished second in the balloting for the Top Newcomer of the Year and was tabbed fourth for the league's Most Valuable Offensive Player.

Larry Barker, the Vandals' senior defensive end that finished second in the conference in tackles by linemen, finished third in the balloting for the league's Most Valuable Defensive Player. Barker was named to the conference's second team while Hobart was an honorable mention selection.

Junior tailback Russell Davis and place-kicker Pete O'Brien were named to the conference's second team. Davis was the third leading rusher for the Vandals this season after being injured for the Vandals mid-way through the season.

O'Brien equalled the single-season point after touchdown of 32 this year to tie Steve Tanner's 1973 record.

Joining Barker on the conference's second defensive unit is sophomore linebacker Sam Merriman and senior cornerback Carlton McBride.

Merriman was the Vandals' leading tackler for the second year in a row with 111 tackles. McBride led the league in interceptions this season with four.

Named to the league's offensive honorable mention list were junior tight end Tom Coombs and Hobart. Coombs was the Vandals' leading receiver with 19 catches for 355 yards and five touchdowns.

Selected on the honorable mention list for defense were junior nose-guard Steve Nelson, defensive end Jay Hayes, and junior defensive back Kelly Miller. Punter Chris Brockman was also named on the honorable mention list.

Joining Fery on the all-conference team were wide receivers Kip Bedard from Boise State and Pete Mandley from Northern Arizona. Idaho State's Rod Childs is the starting tight end.

On the offensive line, Dennis Bradley of Boise State joins Fery at the tackle position while Shawn Beaton of Boise State and Melvin Gentry of Nevada-Reno are the guards. Boise State's Randy Schrader is the center.

Bronco quarterback Joe Aliotti completed his senior year this season and made the starting quarterback position for the second year in a row. He is joined by the conference's offensive Most Valuable Player Frank Hawkins from Nevada-Reno. Cedric Minter of Boise State rounds out the backfield.

The defensive squad consists of Randy Trautmen of Boise State. Bubba Puha and Greg Miller of Nevada-Reno and Dan Anders of Northern Arizona in the linemen position.

Weber State's linebackers Mike Humiston and Danny Rich are the two starting outside linebackers while Boise State's Dan Williams and Montana State's Jack Muhlbeier are the inside linebackers.

Joining Rick Woods of Boise State at the cornerback spot is Mark Massey of Weber State. Bob Matsey of Idaho State and Joe Saunders of Nevada-Reno are the two safeties.

Women cagers tip-off season tomorrow

Due to the cancellation of last night's game with the University of Lethbridge, the 1980-81 season opener for the Idaho womens basketball team has been pushed to Saturday night when the Vandals will host Idaho State at 7:30 p.m. in the Dome.

The Lethbridge team became snowbound Thursday on it's way from Anchorage, Alaska to Moscow.

According to coach Pat Dobratz who is entering her first season at the Idaho helm the ISU game will definitely be a tough one.

"By the time we play them, they will have played five games, where as it will be our first," she said. "We're going down to Lewiston on Friday to see them play Lewis-Clark State College which should tell us something."

Idaho's probable starting lineup includes 6-0 senior Cathy Feely at center, 5-9 junior Liz Abel and 6-0 sophomore Denise Brose at the forward positions, and 5-8 team captain Willette

White at one guard spot. The other guard will be known at game time and figures to be either 5-1 junior Karin Sobotta or 5-8 junior Karen Omodt joining senior White in the backcourt.

"This line-up is constantly in jeopardy of being changed," Dobratz was quick to caution. "We'll probably stay with a nucleus of two or three players and rotate at the other spots. "We've discovered through scrimmages that we have a lot of bench strength."

The Vandals strength will be at the guard position where five are on the roster. Dobratz reports if the team does have a weakness it's at the forward spot where they'll have to rely on freshmen to back up Abel and Brose. "The key is how well all the freshmen on our team develop," Dobratz said.

Overall Dobratz describes the team as possessing good team speed, strong inside, tough on defense and "anxious to begin play."

year's team which won the regional championship.

Karin Sobotta is described by Dobratz as a quick guard who anticipates well. "She is a sure handed dribbler, experienced and has good hustle." Another guard, 5-7 sophomore Renee Brown has a good outside shot and passes well according to Dobratz.

Willette White was elected by her teammates last season to captain the squad and has "great moves to the basket," according to Dobratz. "She also has strong passing."

Denise Brose is starting to develop some defensive capability. The Seattle native is a strong inside player and can be "rough on the boards," said Dobratz.

Feely and Abel are the other two veterans. Feely has proven to possess a nice touch inside and an ability to spot openings. Defensive stand-out Abel is, according to Dobratz, "a tough competitor who gives 100 percent at all practices."

Newcomer guards Omodt and Jody Grace, both juniors, give the Vandals more quickness as Omodt is strong offensively while Grace excels on defense.

Freshmen forwards Catherine Owen, Dana Fish and Darlene Davis are 5-11, 5-11, and 5-10 respectively. Davis is the most complete (offense and defense) ballplayer in the freshmen class. Fish figures to develop into a strong rebounder while Owen adds offensive punch with "good moves to the bucket and fairly good outside shooting abilities," Dobratz said.

The final newcomers to the Idaho program are 6-3 center Cathy Chalik and 5-9 junior guard Kellie Stockton. Stockton, a good outside shooter, transferred from North Idaho College. Dobratz said Chalik could become a strong rebounder when she develops. Also, "she's not a bad shooter for a big person."

Theater Review

by N.K. Hoffman

The Seagull: a new light on a great classical play

"Your play is very hard to act. There aren't any people in it."

"(People have been) remiss in overlooking the positive element in (Chekhov's) work, which has its basis not simply in the natural buoyancy of his character, but in his positivist outlook as a physician and as a 'man of the people' to whom 'soul sickness' seems largely self-indulgence and suffering seems essentially the result of individual and societal bumbling."

—John Gassner

Chekhov's Seagull is not a play that will please everybody. It won't send you home singing, for it is a tragedy (although a funny one) and at its heart lies the loneliness of people trying to give love to other people who don't want it.

However, Forrest Sears' production doesn't concentrate on the weighty sorrows of late 19th Century Russian life. Jean-Claude van Itallies's translation of The Seagull gives it a new lightness, and Sears and his actors have embellished this humorous touch with good comic timing, exaggeration, and facial expression.

The play itself is an interesting construction of parallel situations, echoes and restatements. How many people tear up flowers, and why? Watch carefully if you go.

Almost everybody in the play has three or more names, each useful on different occasions, and the cast is not listed in order of appearance, so at first it's hard to keep track of who's who. Here's a scorecard (in order of appearance):

John Morgan plays the bespectacled Medvedenko, the comic schoolmaster.

Sheila McDevitt plays Masha, the putative daughter of the estate manager. McDevitt starts out a little stiffly, but improves by orders of magnitude during the play. In the second act she is great.

Charlie Shoemaker plays Sorin Petroosha, the old man who owns the estate where all the action takes place. He does a good job of being feeble.

Norman Scrivner plays the moody young writer, Treplev Kostia, nephew of Sorin, son of Irena. Scrivner brings his talents into play in this, the most melodramatic role in the play.

Margot Knight plays Nina, the ingenue, and the only character in the 'play within a play,' where she plays the Soul of the universe with convincing innocence and awkwardness. Knight looks right for the part of Nina and understands her character.

Jerry Atkinson plays Dr. Dorn, in some respects the voice of sanity in the play. Atkinson is a trifle disappointing in the role; somehow he seems too ordinary.

Barbara Casement plays Polena, wife of the estate manager, mother of Masha, and in love with the doctor. Her character is usually overshadowed by the others, but she is competent.

Maggie O'Donnell plays the actress Irena Arkadin with wonderful flamboyance and egotism. She tramples all over the other characters, including her son Kostia, with great self-confidence.

Bill Fagerbakke plays Trigorin, Irena's tame and famous author. He doesn't get terrifically passionate about life, but he has some shining comic moments.

Guy Dodson plays Shamraev, the estate manager and master of gaucherie.

The Seagull will play tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday. Student tickets cost $2.

Winterfest opens today

Winterfest '80, an arts festival to be held at the University of Idaho today and Saturday, will be a place to shop for unusual Christmas gifts and share in some early Christmas excitement.

In its second year, the festival is sponsored by the U of I Fine Arts Committee and will be held in the ballroom of the SUB from noon to 8 p.m. Friday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Original oils and watercolors, pottery, macrame hangings and weavings done by students, faculty, staff and their families are just a few of the arts and crafts to be displayed for sale, according to Tom Richardson, director of the School of Music who is coordinator of the festival.

Singers, musicians, dancers and mimes will also be on hand to perform and spark a spirit of Christmas among festival-goers.

"The festival captures some of the flavor of a street fair at a time of year when such an event can't be held outside," Richardson said.

The festival is free and open to the public.

Theater: A Man Born to be King

The play, A Man Born to be King, will give University of Idaho students a chance to explore the meaning of Christ and the reason we have Christmas, said Paul Bendele, director of the play.

The one-act play, which opens Saturday at 8 p.m. at St. Augustines is a modern approach to the traditional Christmas story. "The playwright Dorothy Sayer wanted to make people as real as possible," said Bendele. "She takes the halo from Mary and Joseph."

The play was written from King Herod's perspective and according to Bendele, that's unusual. "Through Herod, Sayer is trying to look at the way people were thinking of Christ," said Bendele. It's a fresh approach, he added.

The play is sponsored by Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship and will be presented on the following dates:

- Sat. Dec. 6, 8 p.m.-St. Augustine's Center
  - Sun. Dec. 7, 2 p.m.-David's Department Store, 8 p.m. SUB Ballroom
  - Sat. Dec. 13, 8 p.m.-St. Mary-s Church
  - Sun. Dec. 14, 2 p.m.-David's Department Store, 8 p.m.-Assembly of God Church, Moscow
- Admission is free, however donations will be accepted.

Music: Vandaleers present Christmas concert

A Christmas concert Sunday by the University of Idaho Vandaleers will signal the beginning of the Christmas season.

The Vandaleers, U of I's well-known choral group, will perform Handel's Messiah at 8 p.m. in the Administration Building Auditorium.

Although the "Messiah" wasn't written as a Christmas piece, it is so descriptive of the Nativity that it has become widely performed at Christmastime, said Glen Lockery, Vandaleers director and U of I music professor who will conduct the performance.

"We will attempt to perform it in the way it was first done, by using a small choir and employing professional soloists from the outside," he said.

The work will be performed using the original instrumentation which Handel prescribed, Lockery said. Advanced music students, community musicians and musicians from the Washington-Idaho Symphony and the Spokane Symphony, will be in the orchestra.

The Messiah was written in 1741, in 24 days, Lockery said. It was first performed by an all-male choir for charity in Dublin, Ireland, on April 13, 1742. It achieved immediate public acceptance and has since become one of the world's best known and loved musical masterpieces. Perhaps its most celebrated part is the "Hallelujah Chorus."

The work is divided into three parts describing the prophecy and nativity, passion and spread of the gospel and a statement of Christian belief.

Lockery has directed the "Messiah" in various parts of the state, and this will be the third time he has conducted the presentation with the Vandaleers.

Admission to the concert will be $3 for general admission and $1 for students. The concert will benefit the Vandaleers' Endowment Fund. Tickets will be available at the door, at the U of I SUB and at Carter's Drug in Moscow.

Dance Review: Nutcracker shines on

by N.K. Hoffman

The American Festival Ballet's Nutcracker opened cheerfully and with a good deal of charm. The children were naughty or nice, according to their natures; the grown-ups were sedate but knew how to enjoy themselves at a Christmas party; Dr. Drosselmeyer, kicked in the shin by Fritz, staggered but recovered. Later his mechanical dolls provided excellent entertainment at the party.

During Clara's journey to the Candy Kingdom the elegant souffle of the evening collapsed just a trifle. The AFB dancers have a meticulous control of technique, and Elizabeth Rowe-Wistrich's choreography was satisfyingly responsive to Tchaikovsky's enchanting music in one respect: when the drums stood out of the music, the dancers leapt joyously.

But Tchaikovsky and the Spokane Symphony reached many magnificent crescendos and left the dancers behind: the music swelled to fill the WSU Coliseum, but the dancing, for the most part, remained restrained.

Delightful moments came from Geoffrey Kimbrough, both as Drosselmeyer and as the Russian dancer. Steven Wistrich, always light on his feet, sparkled as the Nutcracker Prince.

Jean West and Don Bailey brought whimsical humor to the Chinese Dance, and Dan Drooger and Jerry Turney managed marvelously as the double-decker Mother Ginger. The many children in the production were a continual delight.

The Spokane Symphony and the WSU Women's Chorale did full justice to Tchaikovsky's music, with exquisite control of dynamics.

All in all the evening proved enjoyable, just a bit short of exciting. If the energy level had been a little higher in the second act, the ballet could have been excellent.

police blotter

...University of Idaho student Kavous Mansourzadeh, 301 Palouse Hills Mobile Court No. 2, reported eight flower pots were broken in front of his residence on Tuesday evening.

...U of I student Johnny Crossler, 249 North Asbury St. drove his Ford pickup truck into a tree while avoiding a collision with another vehicle near C and Asbury streets Tuesday morning. The driver of the other vehicle failed to stop. There was about $100 worth of damage to the front of Crossler's truck, and about $50 worth of damage to Crossler's lawn and a retaining wall.

...A fire extinguisher was stolen from the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity between Nov. 23 and 24. The extinguisher was worth about $90.

...A 1979 Volkswagon Rabbit belonging to Ann C. Rowan, Pi Beta Phi, received about $150 worth of damage Monday afternoon when an unattended 1972 Dodge Charger belonging to Rosie C. Bruce, rolled across the alley behind Pi Beta Phi and hit the Volkswagon. About $10 damage was done to the Dodge.

...A cash bag containing about $7 in change, a small 110 volt radio worth about $20, and an unknown number of IBM selectric ribbons were stolen from a locked room in Art and Architecture North sometime Sunday evening.

...U of I student Ross Hoffman, 908 Blake St., reported a Sieko calendar digital watch worth about $200 was stolen from his room during the first week in November.

...John G. Bond, 641 North Hayes St., was involved in a hit-and-run accident early Thursday morning. Bond's Toyota was parked along Idaho Avenue behind a pickup belonging to Richard Swanson of Clarkston, Washington.

A witness said a third vehicle locked bumpers with the rear of Bond's car, dragged the Toyota back and forth until the bumpers were free and then left the scene.

The force of the impact sent Bond's car forward into the rear of Swanson's vehicle. About $300 worth of damage was done to Bond's car and $150 worth to Swanson's.

Idaho artists showing at gallery

Well-known Moscow artists Mary Kirkwood and Alfred Dunn are among six prominent Idaho artists whose work will be on display at the University of Idaho Art Gallery through Friday, Dec. 12.

The exhibit, entitled Six From Idaho, is a traveling exhibit of work by artists who have influenced the art scene in Idaho. The exhibit has been organized on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Salmon River inspired art show

Prints and drawings inspired by the Salmon River area of Idaho are being displayed at the University of Idaho SUB through Dec. 19.

Denise Laverty, Salmon, said she finds the "endless flow of the Salmon stimulating" and that this is the first showing for much of the work on display.

She will attend a reception from 2 to 4 p.m. today, which will include musical performances. The reception coincides with Winterfest activities at the SUB Ballroom. Much of Laverty's work is for sale.

Sign up for Miss Idaho-USA pageant

Women between 18 and 28 interested in competing in the Miss Idaho-USA pageant next spring can contact a campus representative on campus.

The pageant, which will be held in Pocatello in late February, will select a winner to compete in the Miss USA competition in the spring.

Contestants must secure $300 in sponsorships from one or more business firms or individuals, and compete in three areas, including evening gown, swimsuit and poise-personality interview. Talent competition is not a part of the pageant.

A contestant must be a resident of Idaho for the past six months, or a college student in the state. Other qualifications are that the contestant must not have been married, or have been a parent.

For further information, contact Jenny Pottenger at 885-6281, 728 Elm St., Moscow.

TV merger

efficiency, make the "dollar go further," and provide a first-rate training experience for students.

Addressing the board's question of the merger's financial impact, Hook said there could be the loss of a $162,000 community grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. But, the station could gain $175,000 in donations that would cover the loss, Hook said.

President Richard Gibb told the board that while the merger "quite possibly can't fly," he wants to go on with the planning to see what merit the proposed merger has.

Results of planning for the proposed merger and the study of statewide centralization will be discussed when the regents meet in April on the U of I campus. The board will meet with the WSU regents at that meeting.

In other action, the board approved a revised policy on faculty personnel files which was amended and approved by the general faculty in September.

Under the policy, the U of I will be able to keep documents in a faculty member's closed file for longer than five years. As amended, the policy requires that the faculty member be informed about the existence and substance of any document placed in the closed file and no anonymous information or information based on hearsay can be included in a faculty member's closed file.

The board also authorized the U of I to seek bids and negotiate funding for construction of two married housing facilities for handicapped students.

The six-unit and eight-unit complexes for handicapped students would cost about $375,000. According to the proposal, these units would be financed by a five-year bank note, using revenue from the current married student housing rentals. The complexes will be located next to the South Hill Terrace Complex.

Prior to considering the U of I agenda, the board approved an amended motion to support Lewis-Clark State College as an "integral part of the higher education system in Idaho."

The original motion, proposed by Solberg and amended by Montgomery, asked the board to

Cadets to be briefed on Soviet tactics

A briefing on the Soviets will climax a day filled with leadership training activities for University of Idaho Army Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets and interested people, Saturday.

Captain Ralph Longmire said the event includes first aid, winter survival, marching, rope bridging and Soviet weapons study in addition to the briefing on the Soviet threat.

Longmire said all of the 150 to 200 participants expected will meet in Kibbie Dome at 8 a.m. before breaking into five groups to rotate through each of the five activity sessions during the day. The Soviet briefing will again support LCSC with no intention of eliminating the school or its four-year status.

In a letter to the board, Solberg said the board "should hold the institutions together during this financial crisis."

"Legislators proposing legislation to close up tight LCSC and ISU have been demoralizing," he said. "The board should be an advocate of education and providing access in the future will become more important."

bring all participants together at 3 p.m. in the Agricultural Science Building lecture room.

More information is available by, contacting the Military Science Department, 885-6528.

Financial aid applications available at aid office

Financial aid application materials for the 1981-82 school year and summer school 1981 are now available in the financial aid office.

Office personnel suggests students pick up the applications in UCC room 228 before Christmas break and turn them in as soon as possible after Jan. 1, 1981.

Deadline for file completion is March 27, 1981.

Harry Davey, director of Student Financial Aids, said there is a premium on timely applications.

State appropriates matching funds

The state of Idaho was recently offered more than $256,000 in student financial aid funds by the U.S. government. The state was permitted to claim only as many of these dollars as it could match.

The state Legislature appropriated $160,000 in matching funds and told institutions of higher education across the state that they would have to find money to pick up the rest of the funds.

All of the private and public institutions in Idaho dug up a combined total of $96,000 from somewhere, so we matched essentially all of the federal money," said Harry Davey, director of Student Financial Aids at the University of Idaho.

The funds were distributed to all the colleges in the state. About $150,000 was available at the U of I.

The money, which was in the form of State Student Incentive Grants, has all been allocated.

EARN OVER $800 A MONTH FOR THE REST OF YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

Interested in math, physics or engineering? Then you could earn as much as $800 a month, while finishing college,

In the Navy's NUPOC-Collegiate Program (NUPOC is short for Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate.)

If you qualify, you'll get 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, and an additional year of advanced technical education. Education that would cost thousands in civilian life, but in the Navy we pay you.

And you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus at the end of your training year.

It isn't easy. But those who make it find themselves in one of the most elite engineering training programs anywhere. With unequalled hands-on responsibility and a $24,000 salary in four years.

For more details, simply see your Navy Officer Programs Representative. Or drop him a resume. The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It could be a start of a great career.

Sign up for an interview in the Placement office for the 9th of December, or call Jay Zoellner collect (406) 882-0577
