Gibb optimistic

Legislature wants 'the best way out,' budget not so grim, council was told by Bill Will of the Argonaut

University of Idaho President Richard Gibb told the UI Faculty Council Tuesday that he remains optimistic that the state's budget problems

"I'm an eternal optimist—I have got to be," Gibb said. "Things are not quite as grim as they appear, and I admit that they do appear pretty Gibb described the budget-cutting proposals now circulating in the Legislature as "a lot of political football tossing.

Part of the talk (of program cuts) is designed to ensure it won't happen," he said, "by making the public aware that it might happen." Gibb also remains convinced that the Legislature will be forced to ask

"It is not possible to avoid a tax increase and continue all (state) programs," he said.

Gibb said each political party is maneuvering to place the blame for a tax increase proposal on the other party and to use it "to burn them in the next election.

They are trying to find the best way out," he said.

The budget crisis was also greatly on the minds of the members of the Faculty Council.

Council Chairman John Knudsen and UI Academic Vice President Robert Furgason reported to the group on the recent education hearings before the legislative Joint Finance Appropriations Committee.

'The committee was skeptical that quality (in higher education) has been hurt. It was not a very friendly body," Knudsen said.

Furgason said his "biggest fear" was that the Legislature would approve a salary increase for state employees and then adjourn without appropriating any funding for it.

That is a duck, a cop-out, and would throw the whole problem back on the universities," he said.

Furgason also discounted talk in the Legislature concerning a salary freeze for state employees.

'I don't see a groundswell toward a freeze," he said. "Most people recognize it as a very short-sighted thing.

Council member Roger Wallins warned of the effects of any further salary cutbacks.

That would be the quickest way to put us (professors) into unions," he said. "Not professional organizations — out and out unions. I envision an even worse relationship between the university and the Legislature.'

The budget problem also figured heavily in a proposal introduced before the council to set guidelines concerning the reduction or elimination of university programs without a declaration of financial exigency. The guidelines state that tenured faculty members should receive no less than two years notice if their positions are to be eliminated. Such policies could loom important if the Legislature votes to consolidate or eliminate academic programs in the state.

'If there are faculty dismissed, it should be for good reason," Knud-

Under current policy, a tenured faculty member could be terminated with as little as 30 days notice if a financial emergency is declared.

Vandals hold off pesky Wolfpack, 81-76

by Bert Sahlberg Sports Editor

Nevada-Reno put Idaho's 15-game home-win streak in jeopardy Thursday night, but the Vandals held off the scrappy Wolfpack for an 81-76 Big Sky Conference victory.

The win temporarily puts the Vandals in first place in the league standings with a 6-1 record. The Vandals will put their 17-2 season record on the line Saturday night when Northern Arizona invades Moscow. Tipoff time is set for 8 p.m.

The Wolfpack, now 2-5 in league and 8-11 overall, used hot shooting and a tough zone defense to give Idaho problems all night.

"They hurt us with pressure," said Idaho Coach Don Monson about the Wolfpack. "We had better learn to attack a zone better than we Brian Kellerman and Jeff Brudie played key parts in the Vandals' win. Kellerman was the game's leading scorer with 25 points. His two freethrows with 25 seconds left in the game put the icing on the cake for Idaho.

Brudie enjoyed his best game of the year as the senior forward scored a season-high 19 points. Brudie was eight of 10 from the field while Kellerman sank eight of 14.

'Brudie played very well," said Monson about his sixth man.

Idaho jumped out to a quick 17-8 lead and seemed to have things under control. But the Vandals hit a cold spell and, led by James Fonti-nent, the Wolfpack came charging back to tie the game at 24 apiece with 6:07 left in the first half.

The Vandals continued their cold shooting, hitting only 42 percent from the field in the first half as the Wolfpack went up by one, 38-37 at half-

'Offensively, I thought we did a good job,' said Monson. "But we are going to have to play better defense.

The Vandals got things rolling again in the second half and took the lead for good at 42-40 when Kellerman hit his second jumper of the half at the 18:30 mark.

From there, Phil Hopson and Brudie took over and put the Vandals up 55-48 with a dunk by

The two teams battled back and forth before Tony Balogun hit a three-foot hook to cut the Vandal lead to 65-63 with 4:55 left.

Idaho moved out when Kellerman sank seven of eight freethrows and Hopson scored his 16th point of the night on a slam dunk to put Idaho up

The Wolfpack had one last trick left and cut the Vandal lead down to five before time ran out.

"It's good to get this win," said Monson. "We really didn't play too smart at times near the end of the game.'

Junior guard Ken Owens was the fourth Vandal player in double figures with 12 points.

Idaho shot just 50 percent from the field in the contest. The Vandals were ranked third in the nation in field goal percentage at 56 percent.

Tuition vote expected next week

A flurry of activity is taking place throughout the state while students, legislators and administrators alike stack their cards for both support of and opposition to the possibility of in-state tuition, an issue which could be voted on as early as Monday.

John Barker (R-Twin Falls), Chairman of the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, and Leon H. Swenson (R-Canyon County), also of the HEW Committee, are contemplating introducing legislation to propose in-state tuition.

Jack Gerard, ASUI lobbyist, said a bill could come out Monday and will probably appear next week.

Further north, ASUI senators and concerned students have been compiling a list of students who oppose in-state tuition in the form of anti-tuition petitions.

ASUI Vice president Clark Collins said he hopes to deliver alphabetical computer print-outs of students listed by district to the Legislature by Monday morning.

Students are still being urged to participate in a massive letterwriting campaign to representatives from their districts.

A Routing Slip defining tuition is expected to come up in the House on Monday also. Referred to as an R.S. Form, no action is taken other than a vote to decide whether or not to print a bill.

Jack Gerard

As the 46th Idaho Legislature completes its third week in session, it has become obvious that this could be the tightest financial year the state has ever experienced.

Due to the national recession and other contributing factors, the state's anticipated revenue has fallen considerably short of what is needed to fully fund the various state agencies, including higher education.

Over 70 percent of the state's general fund is allocated to some aspect of education. Higher education (colleges and universities) received 19.4 percent in 1978, but this figure since dropped to 16.4 percent in 1981 while public schools have increased from 36.1 percent to 46.1 percent in the same time span.

Due to the economic conditions of the state it is inevitable that higher education will again take a substantial drop in its state appropriation. This deficit can be made up in one of three ways: (1) the state can take action to collect greater revenue, (2) cut and consolidate university programs statewide, or (3) increase student fees and/or impose in-state tuition.

Because of campaign promises and a statewide feeling of tax relief possibility, number (1) is out of the question; however, it appears that possibilities number (2) and (3) are viable options and have strong support.

Never before has there been such a threat of students being priced out of an education. Figures as high as 25 percent of instructional costs (tuition) are seriously being reviewed and prepared for introduction. They will probably be considered next week.

These increases are totally new and independent of present costs. If passed, these increases could triple ($800-plus per semester) what it costs a student to attend an institution of higher learning in the state of Idaho.

Having talked with the legislators, it is evident that many who opposed such legislation last year are now in favor of these measures. Many have commented that they are concerned and responsive only to the demands of their constituents.

If we as constituents are apathetic in letting our legislators know our concerns, it is very possible that higher education in Idaho will soon be accessible to only the wealthy and elite.

Jack Gerard is the ASUI lobbyist in Boise.

With a face lift and new owners, Roger's Ice Cream store has been resurrected in David's Center.

"Is it peanut butter, is it peanut butter?" Clustering around the display case at Roger's Ice Cream emporium, several giggly highschoolers pointed to an unmarked tub of brown.

"Ask your tastebuds," chuckled co-owner Pamela Scattone as she spooned out some samples to her eager customers.

With sticky fingers to their mouths and a last look at the flavor lineup, the teenagers made up their minds. Minutes later, they trooped happily out the door. Clutched in each hand was a sugar cone—topped with a generous dollop of icy sweetness.

Offering a variety of sundaes, shakes, cones, pies and drinks, the ice cream shop in the David's building on 3rd and Main is "new in town" and a 38-year-old Moscow tradition.

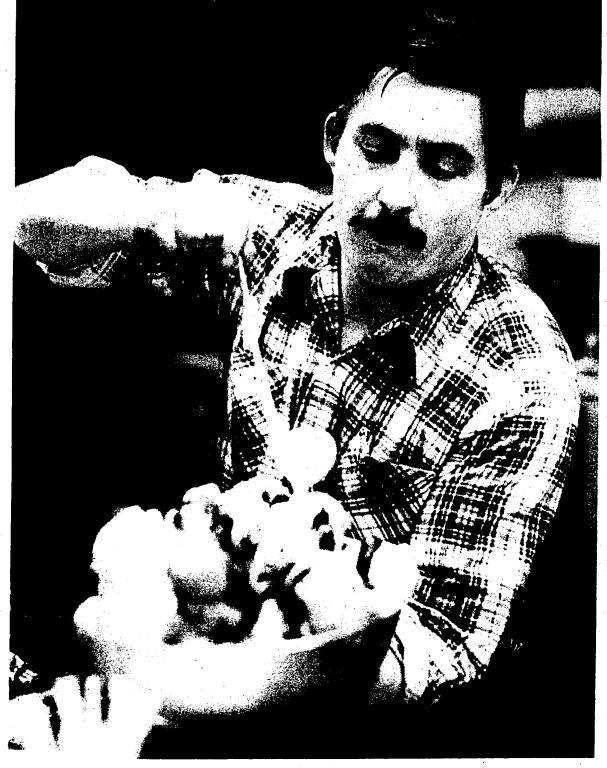

A quick scan down the shop menu shows many interesting items featured. First, there's the "Pig's Dinner," with ice cream and a banana served in a wooden trough. Then there's the "Moscow Mountain" which is described as a whole mountain of ice cream and sherbet with toppings, whipped cream and nuts. And don't forget the "I cent" banana split, where customers pick out tagged bananas that are secretly priced from I cent to $2.25.

Sound familiar? Although Marshall Scattone, his wife Pamela and their three children are new to Moscow, their shop is continuing the same homemade ice cream, recipes and traditions made popular since 1940 by the original Wilson Rogers and four succeeding owners.

"I've always been an ice cream eater, always," said Marshall, adding that he and his family like Moscow and wanted to run a community and customer-oriented shop. While shop hours will be flexible, he said the shop will be open from 11 a.m.-8 p.m. on weekdays, 11 a.m.-11 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and closed on Sunday.

Extra services offered by the shop include free birthday sundaes, reserved time for birthday and living group parties (call ahead), a 10 percent senior discount, special order ice cream, and hand-packed ice cream.

A former customer of the "old Roger's" was in the new shop one day. Reminiscing, she described her visit as "one more time." Apparently, Roger's Ice Cream really is back in town.

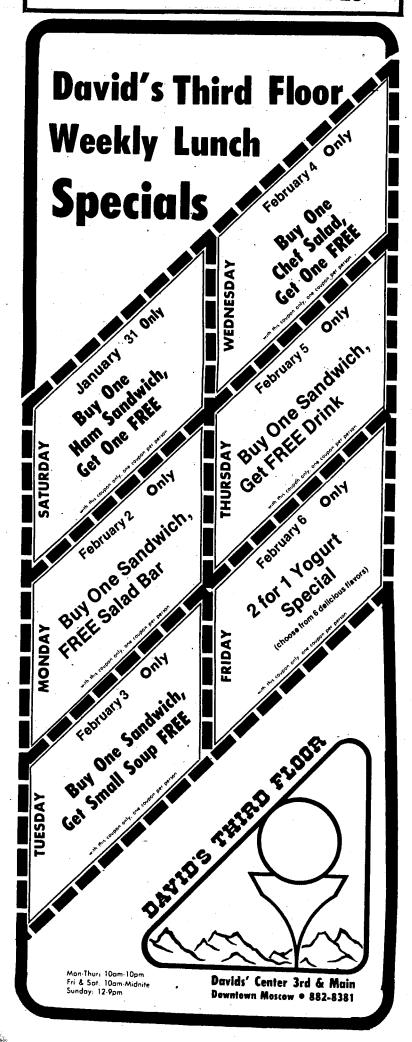

Roger's Ice Cream owner Marshall Scattone builds a summit of ice cream and gooey toppings to create a "Moscow Mountain." Text and photos by Mary Kirk.

Jackson Browne isn't pretending

by Colleen Henry of the Argonaut

Give me the restless power of the wind Give me the comforting glow of the wood fire Give me the steady glow of the waterfall And take all your atomic poison power away.

—John Hall, Power

Those lyrics were sung by Jackson Browne at a "No Nukes" benefit concert in Madison Square Garden.

Browne is opposed to the use of nuclear energy. Perhaps he's worried about the world his son will inherit, a world that may be poisoned with radioactive waste. At any rate, Browne is concerned enough about the issue of nuclear power and water pollution to perform another benefit concert in Idaho.

The concert, titled "Water for Life", will be held in Boise on Feb. 22 at 7 p.m. in the Boise State University Gymnasium. Tickets, which are selling for $9.50, are limited and must be reserved by Sunday by calling Idahoans for Safe Energy at 882-0211.

Browne, who began his career in the 60's with the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, became involved in anti-nuclear activities and is a strong proponent for discovering alternative energy sources.

Two other artists will be performing with Browne in Boise. Chris Williamson is a folk singer "in a class with Joni Mitchell," according to Peter Basoa, music director at KUID-FM. Basoa says Williamson does not have as much exposure as Mitchell does because she records on a small label.

Floyd Westerman is a Native American who sings and is also "a remarkable storyteller," says Dorian Duffin, editor of the Idaho Sun. Westerman has been involved in Native American causes in the past. His latest album, called "Custer Died for Your Sins", was "very political, very Native American," according to Basoa.

John Trudell, a regional activist and Native American, will speak at the concert on the subject of water and its relationship to our way of life

The groups sponsoring the benefit concert are battling the misuse of Idaho's water resources. The groups involved are the Snake River Alliance, Idahoans for Safe Energy Nuclear Counterbalance, Groundwater Alliance, Pacific Alliance and the Owhee People to Protect Wild Horse.

These groups are concerned about the imminent pollution of Idaho's aquifer through the dumping of radioactive materials.

The Snake River plain in southern Idaho is a forbidding, barren place but its sagebrush-studded surface "yields underneath to the heart and soul of the inland Pacific Northwest—the Snake River aquifer," writes Terry Lawhead, member of Idahoans for Safe Energy, in a recent issue of the Idaho Sun.

The aquifer is composed of collected groundwater, caught in what Lawhead describes as 'near-perfect bowl' of basalt. The ground water is vital to farming, industries, and life as we know it. The aquifer is irreplaceable.

This seeming wasteland is also the site of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL). INEL receives 24 percent of the nation's military nuclear waste, including 95 percent of the wastes from other nuclear sites in the country.

Prior to 1970, these radioactive wastes were buried in the soil above the aquifer, often without being first put into containers. Since then it has been placed in shallow trenches, but the containers include cardboard boxes, plywood crates and drums, reported Lawhead in his article.

This radioactive dumping and its gradual infiltration into the aquifer is but one of the issues the concert is aimed at helping.

Editor Duffin is quick to point out that "once the concert is over our campaign is just starting." The concert is just one foothold in the struggle to inform people of the issues concering water in Idaho.

Proceeds from the concert will be used to foot the bill for the production, but most of the money will be divided between the various groups involved and funneled back into the Water for Life campaign.

Folk: there is something happening

by Dan Junas of the Argonaut

If you've ever complained that nothing ever happens around here, or even if you haven't, you should know about the recently formed Palouse Folklore Society.

Described as "as a non profit organization for the promotion and revival of folk tradition," the society is looking for members with an interest in folklore, including music, dance and crafts.

They emphasize that they are open to ideas - especially to people with the energy to implement them.

Since their creation last fall, the society has sponsored concerts, dances and community sings.

Last Saturday at David's Center, in conjuction with the Moscow Arts Commission, they held Folk Arts Day.

Currently two concerts are planned. At David's on Feb. 13, they will present fiddler Kevin Burke, who plays traditional Irish music. Guy Carawan, who plays hammer dulcimer, will appear at Cafe Libra on Wednesday, Feb.

Other planned activities include a singing circle every other Sunday, and playing music at local nursing homes.

If interested in joining, you can attend one of their meetings on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month, at Cafe Libra. Or you can address correspondence to Palouse Folklore Society, c/o Guitar's Friend, 309 S. Main,

Annual dues are $5, which entitle members to discounts at all Palouse Folkore Society events.

Cindy Bidart has been suffering from a sprained ankle and shoulder injury, while teammate Karen Ball injured a knee and is scheduled for bars only this evening

All-arounder Glenda Allen is coming off pneumonia while several other team members have been hit with the flu.

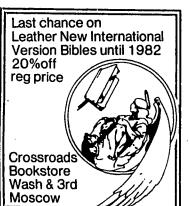

Ricks College from Rexburg will join the Vandals and Cougars in tonight's competition.

2-1. The UI women are 10-5 overall for the season.

Lewis-Clark is led by Clair Bouwman with 281 points in 15 games. She is also LSCS's leading rebounder with 137. Last week LCSC split with the University of Alaska. Anchorage, taking the first contest 78-56 and losing the second 77-71. They also defeated the University of Portland, a league opponent, 79-54.

Portland entered the LCSC game without the services of Beth Thompson, their leading scorer and rebounder. She also leads Portland at the charity line. Thompson suffered a sprained ankle in the last four minutes of the Idaho-Portland game on Jan. 23.

The UI women defeated Portland 69-52 to add to their league record.
