Gov. Evans answers questions posed by students

by Bobbi Humphries
of the Argonaut

Gov. John Evans addressed University of Idaho students and townspeople Thursday evening, answering questions on tuition, the possibility of having a student on the state Board of Education, faculty salaries and other topics. A meager crowd of approximately 60 people attended.

Evans' appearance was one of many in Latah county last week on his "Capitol for a Day" tour in which he will visit every county in the state. Latah is the 38th county he has visited so far, he said.

"This program has brought up problems facing Idaho on a region-to-region basis. It has been a free-wheeling process, which is what I like," he said.

Evans said he would like to see no change in tuition at Idaho's institutions of higher education. He said if the constitution was amended to make tuition the cost of instruction only, it would shift a severe load from the state to the students.

Evans vetoed a bill last year defining tuition, according to Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow, who was sitting in the audience at the forum.

"I don't want to see it because a great number of students will not be able to take advantage of the benefits of higher education," Evans said.

He added he wouldn't want to see Idaho's institutions of higher education become "elitist", meaning that only the upper class individuals would be able to afford to go to college.

"We're going to be faced with increased fees because service costs will increase. Hopefully, we can keep fees down," he said.

Evans said chances are slim of getting a university student on the Board as a voting member. He said the student body presidents should continue to serve "an advisory role" to the Board.

A student would probably have to drop out of school for one year to develop the expertise needed, Evans said.

"Can a student really understand all the issues facing the Board?" Evans asked.

The ASUI President has three major responsibilities: serve the students directly, work with the administration, and lobby for the students at the state legislature. To be an effective president, one must be able to fulfill each of these responsibilities equally well and not concentrate on one while neglecting the other two.

I am running for president because I have the past experience and desire to be effective. In the area of student services, it is important that the president be able to listen and that the students know they can voice their opinions. I have not limited myself to just the ASUI and instead chose to be involved in a variety of campus activities. This broad background with various groups at the U of I has enabled me to be aware of what the students want and has prepared me to work with a wide variety of interests and perspectives. The point I want to make is that what the students want should govern the actions of ASUI and not vice versa.

The ASUI President must also work with the administration. I have already had the opportunity to work with these people on a number of projects, and because I have established a working relationship with them, the transition to ASUI President will be smooth and problem-free.

The third major function of the ASUI President is to lobby for the students' interests at the state legislature. To be an effective lobbyist, the president must know how the legislature functions and be able to convince the legislators that the students' interests must not be ignored.

By working in the governor's office, I have gained valuable experience which will give me a great advantage in fighting in-state tuition. We can defeat in-state tuition, but it will take a concerted effort of all students.

By bringing fresh blood into the ASUI system, I intend to draw on many new resources to improve student representation and services. You have a $42.50 yearly investment in ASUI. Please insure that your money is used wisely by voting on Nov. 18. I would appreciate your support.

Friel

A junior in recreation

My name is Melissa "Moe" Friel and I am running for ASUI President. The position of ASUI President is a position that requires experience, responsibility and a working knowledge of what the ASUI has done in the past and what needs to be done in the future. I have this special knowledge.

I cannot express the importance of experience in the position of President. After serving in the position of ASUI senator over the past year, I understand the demands that are placed on the president and the different functions the ASUI President is required to perform.

I find it interesting all the campaign promises that have been made over the past three weeks. I have made only one campaign promise and this promise is one promise that will be kept. What I promise is to work for you, the student, and to do everything humanly possible to maintain student rights and your rights to a quality education.

I also feel strongly about student participation in the ASUI. It is time for you, the student, to stand up for what you believe. Every year the ASUI spends $42.50 of you hard earned money. Take an interest in how your money is being spent—become involved in the ASUI.

I also encourage you to fight for your right to a quality education. Don't sit back and let the ASUI fight your battles. As your president I can lobby for months, but without your support, your in-pout, we won't be able to defeat in-state tuition. I'll be real honest, I don't want to be the person you think of when you are writing a $750 check at registration because in-state tuition was initiated. I challenge you to take an interest, take charge of your education.

This election is one of the most important elections in the history of the ASUI. I invite you to vote for a candidate that is experienced in the ASUI and knowledgeable with all that the ASUI encompasses. I ask for your support, your vote, and again ask you to stand up for your rights; vote on Nov. 18.

Correction

The Argonaut wishes to make a correction to last week's senate meeting story "Grundy in, Naccarato in, Biggs protests."

Senator Tammy McGregor, not newly-inaugurated vice-president Kevin Grundy, agreed to re-authorize both the bill and the resolution former vice-president Scott Biggs submitted to the Senate. The remaining bill and resolution submitted by Biggs were deleted from the agenda because, according to Grundy, no senator re-submitted them in their name. Grundy originally called both resolutions and bills invalid because Biggs submitted them after the recall election.

making plans to become your next ASUI President. My experience in student politics amounts to nothing. However, I'm kind of honest and will always say what is on my mind, unless paid to say otherwise. People have been asking me, "Why President?" Well, my father always said, "Start on top." Now whether or not old Dad meant this to apply to politics, I don't know. Every time I ask him, he just brings in God and walks away, shaking his head.

In becoming president, I will do my best to understand and help the ASUI with their various problems, unless certain uncontrollable circumstances come into play (like a blond). One of the problems that is facing the students seems to be poor inter-student relations. To solve this, I plan to have a world-record-breaking picnic in the spring, for the entire student body. Parties always seem to bring people together; at least it always works for me. Another thing that I have noticed is that there seems to be a growing interest in beautifying the campus. My plan to handle this, inexpensively, is to purchase 310 pink plastic flamingos. These fine birds will be strategically placed over the Administration Building Lawn. To deal with the possibility of theft of this plastic menagerie, football players will be hired to watch over them during the off-season months. (That's twelve of them, isn't it? Who knows.) Another thing I feel to be a problem is the Ad Building clock tower. It never seems to keep decent time. My answer to this problem is to convert it to digital readout.

That would give the University of Idaho the largest liquid quartz clock in the world. Other ideas include a free Big Mac for every three Campus parking tickets received. Also, I feel we could clean the university barns and deal with in-state tuition with the same shovel. In conclusion, let me leave you with this: If YOU don't vote for me (David Fulton), I'll shoot your dog, or drown your cat. Thank you.

Ballot box blues

Attention prospective student voters: for Wednesday's general ASUI election you won't have an Argonaut staring you in the face as a reminder to vote. So here's the gentle slap now.

Many students, via letters-to-the-editor, campaigns to recall unethical bureaucrats, and mumbling in hallways and classrooms feel there are changes needed in ASUI policies and the leaders who guide those policies. The Argonaut stands with them on those feelings.

To promote the election tomorrow, the Argonaut asked all candidates to submit their opinions in an essay-type format. This was to avoid as much bias as possible on our part.

To some students candidates already look active in student politics. To some, candidates have been lately been attenders of hall and house meetings. And to some, candidates have just been names on colored posters and butcher paper, plastered all over campus.

But who are they really? Like most elections, we won't know till it's over who the real able-bodied souls are. This means some calculating now. By running for office, all candidates should want to represent you the best way possible. They should be willing to tackle issues head on and should physically show their might and man/woman power.

The offices they're aspiring to aren't just names on paper or victory pictures in the next Argonaut. Rather, they're the democratic, organized and responsible way UI students get things done as a student body.

This doesn't mean the ASUI is a passive organization. Not at all. ASUI members should be the first to sound the battle cry if there needs to be one.

Today is your last chance to look at faces, names, and what candidates say they'll stand for. Electing those candidates who will do that is your responsibility before the polls close at 5:15 p.m. tomorrow. Why let the usual small voter turnout decide your ASUI leaders (and possibly your educational fate) when your vote counts as much as anybody's.

But then maybe the ASUI doesn't count for much. After all, we've got Help the Students Anonymously, a brilliant faculty organization devoted to our causes. And then we've got Mr. Tuition, a loving administrator who cares for us deeply. And don't forget SCRUFF, an itchy gathering of student pets now lobbying for new owners and ethical fire hydrants.

Oil and land: they don't mix

Big oil interests in this country are trying to acquire even bigger pieces of this country's public lands for oil leases. Not content with the vast acreage already assigned to them, the petroleum industry's honchos are determined to enroach even more upon those parts of our sacred wilderness that have so far remained untouched.

We in the Northwest are particularly fortunate to be surrounded by incredible examples of the breadth and depth of nature's bounty. Unfortunately, our proximity to this grandeur makes us, on the one hand, take our good fortune for granted, and on the other, unable to conceive of a world without it.

But oil people and the people in our government who will be responsible for allowing this invasion seem all to have come from big cities where the folks apparently have little understanding of how delicate and precious our wild lands are. Destruction of territory which rightfully belongs to none but the creatures who live on it will be the price paid for looking for more of the black stuff that has been ruling our lives.

Much of the public land already leased to the oil interests has never been exploited. Why give over any more? Why aren't this country's leaders as interested in developing alternative energy sources as they are in pandering to the wealthy, exploitative petroleum industry?

On the wagon with...

Brian Beesley

Yeah, I remember my first beer. In fact, I remember my first five beers. After that, though, everything gets hazy and it's anybody's guess.

I was 16 then, and experimenting with a new toy, as many adolescents will do at that age. A friend and I had procured a couple of six-packs from our respective family refrigerators, and we proceeded to gulp them down with as much hesitancy as expectancy.

Yeah, I got drunk alright, and so did my friend. It was but another discovery in a long line since, but I also woke up to another new encounter the next morning—the hangover. Since that time, I guess you could say I've become a seasoned veteran, but you could say the same about almost any freshman who survives his first year here at the University of Idaho.

All that was five years ago, and I've lost count of the beers I've swilled, and the brain cells I've lost because of it. These days, I try not to abuse the drug as much as I used to.

I say alcohol is a drug, and it is abused, because these are facts. We tend to forget that any chemical that alters our central nervous system the way alcohol does is a drug that can be misused by people who haven't learned how to use it responsibly.

All this reminiscing was prompted by the Alcohol Awareness Week and preceding Alcohol Awareness Committee. Such actions are admirable, if long overdue.

Earlier this semester, the ASUI seemed intent on trying to relax the campus alcohol policy to allow the drug to be consumed in the SUB, in the Dome, on the golf course, and in other public campus areas. I'm not disagreeing or agreeing with that attempt, but I could have told them it was destined to fail in a state so conservative it gives breathalyzer tests for consumption of excessive amounts of carrot juice.

With the advent of these alcohol concern programs, it seems the ASUI has realized the stone wall it is up against and decided on a peace offering as an alternate method of implementing its policy changes.

Its creation may be dubious as a means to another end, but the Alcohol Awareness Committee is a valiant effort to educate students on the drug's uses and abuses.

Playboy magazine may have put us beyond ranking in its "Drinking Top Ten" a few years back, proclaiming Idaho as a "professional drinking school," but you have to consider the source before you take it seriously.

When I was a high school senior trying to decide on an Idaho college to attend, the pros and cons of each institution were tossed around, probably exaggerated, and I was left with a vague, somewhat misleading idea of what each was offering.

Whenever this university was talked about, its party atmosphere and wild drinking habits were right up there with its engineering department and agricultural school. I suppose at the time, one could be excused, as a high school student, for getting his or her priorities screwed up. However, after three and a half years as a college student, I no longer have an excuse.

I think I realized that the college experience was more than tossing off beers and nursing hangovers after my second semester here. It wasn't one of your garden-variety revelations or anything like that, it was more of a gradual understanding that big drunks were only fleeing rewards, for which a higher price was collected later. In other words, I was losing brain cells at a horrifying rate, and with a GPA teetering on an abyss of bottomless proportions, I figured I couldn't afford to lose any more.

One instance, however, sticks out in my mind as contributing heavily to that realization. It was the Friday of test week that semester, and after scrambling through a myriad of disasters called finals, I decided it was time to unwind.

Well, I remember hitting the bars and drinking like a fish with my fellow survivors, but I don't remember much else. The next morning, after painfully crawling out of bed, I couldn't recall when or how I got home, what the second bar we visited was called, or where my left shoe was.

Try as I might, I couldn't remember those seemingly meaningless details. Truth to tell, it scared me. I had heard that loss of memory was not uncommon after an alcoholic binge similar to the one I tackled the night before, but somehow that didn't make me feel any better. All the aspirin in the world wouldn't have helped much, either.

Well, after that episode I didn't make any drastic vows or impassioned resolutions to hit the wagon from there on out, but I did do some thinking on the matter. These days, I occasionally go out for some drinks and come home slightly buzzed from it, but I have yet to pray to the porcelain god because of drinking. I think I now know my limits as far as alcohol is concerned.

Upon entering college, many of us didn't get much guidance in the area of responsible drinking. It is a tough self-instruction course to pass, and some people still haven't.

Because some groups on campus have recently begun to show concern for the responsible usage of alcohol, maybe now incoming students will be more informed on the drug and its uses. Maybe then we can truly live up to a professional status.

Now if you'll excuse me, I think I'll go have a V-8.

Invitation

Editor,

I am finally taking the opportunity to write a letter to all of you. A special thanks must go to those students who stuck by me even through the worst of times and believed in what I was doing. I would like to further thank those students that voted for me in my previous two elections that were so successful. I would like to also extend a very special thanks to all of those people I had the "pleasure and honor" of working with to make the great gains in both the university and the ASUI: that would range from the ASUI committee members to the University staff and faculty, and certainly the administration.

I hope you won't think I am writing this letter out of bitterness, but I grow somewhat angry, not for the fact that I was "slur campaigned" from office, but for those who will be intimidated from saying and doing what should be done for fear of reprisal from Glen Miles, Dan Connolly, and their henchmen, and for the inevitable losses we students will suffer at the hands of subversive actions in the future. If the students were tricked once, what is to prevent it from occurring again?

I have chosen not to run for president, not because I have been beaten, and not because I don't feel I could make outstanding gains for the students, but because so many students won't stand behind their elected officials. So many are so quick to jump on the bandwagon and not enough care to give a hand unless of course it's to assist in sticking a knife in the outspoken workhorse's back.

The University of Idaho is not a four year hotel for students, but so many treat it that way. This kind of self-centeredness and shortsightedness won't only be the destruction of our free higher education but of our society and freedoms alike. It is pathetic to see just 50 percent of the eligible citizens in the US vote, but we the highly educated, young, enthusiastic members of the ASUI turn out less than 20 percent. We are letting 10, 15, and 18 percent of the student body run our million dollar plus organization and control the future of the university by their special interest votes. There is 80 percent of the student body that is unconcerned, apathetic or just plain lazy. In my opinion, none of those are good excuses, or something to be proud of.

People playing grudge games, apathetic voters, childish squabbles, fear of reprisals, inexperience and immaturity; that, my friends, is why the state legislature, Board of Regents, and, many times, the university faculty and administration, don't and won't listen to the students. When you have a worker in there hitting, you vote him out of office.

How do I know whether my official is good or not, you might say? Well, every Wednesday night 7:00 senate meetings, elections with speeches and forums, and just taking the time to listen might be a nice start! My name is not on the ballot this time. I have put in my time and paid my dues. Have you???

Ballots only

Editor,

I recently observed how out of hand our last election of Nov. 6 was conducted. The persons issuing ballots in Wallace Complex were coaxing people over to vote and, when asked, told the personal history of the ASUI officer in question. With the general election coming close, I would like to think that the Election Board will take a close look at the people manning the polls. It is the individual's responsibility to know the candidates and issues before they go to the polls on election day. The poll attendants are only there to ISSUE BALLOTS NOT OPINIONS!!

High report

Editor,

There was a letter to the editor printed recently (Arg. Nov. 10) that corrected two supposedly inaccurate statements made by Doug Jones, chairman of the ASUI Political Concerns Committee, in an article entitled "In-State Tuition Focus of ASUI Concerns Committee." The letter is signed by Lindy High, the Public Information Officer for the Idaho State Board of Education. In defense of Mr. Jones, I would like to comment briefly on the statements made in that letter.

First, contrary to Jones' belief, Ms. High contends that the Board is not "currently working on a redefinition of tuition." This is merely a cheap shot. If they are not currently involved with redefining, as Mr. Jones has suggested, then it is only because the job is already completed and the Board is merely waiting to pull the legislation out of the drawer when the legislature convenes this January. Furthermore, High admits that the Board has proposed a definition of tuition for the Idaho Code. It is highly unlikely that this definition will be representative of student opinion.

Second, High refutes Jones' accusation that there is an alternate plan to lift the constitutional ban on tuition. She tells you that in the vote of the Board this last December, the proposal was defeated in a 4-4 tie. This is a rather uncomfortable thought, especially when she backs her contention with the argument that the motion was defeated two years ago only by a tie vote as well.

The staff of the State Board of Education is no friend of the students when it comes to in-state tuition. Do not be fooled into believing that they have not already laid the groundwork for redefinition. They are silently inviting state senators to introduce the bill. Next time, there will not be any tie. Once the legislature even begins tampering with redefinition, in-state tuition will become a reality. The Board's staff has already sold some senators on the idea.

As students, we are already standing on the edge of the cliff in the battle against in-state tuition. Will the staff of the Idaho State Board of Education give us that final push that will send us toppling over the edge?

Small vote

Editor,

I'm very disappointed in the student body's decision to recall Scott Biggs. It's not that I support unethical political practices, it's just that I disagree with the ethics of the recall itself.

First of all, requiring only a 15 percent majority vote to unseat a politician is ridiculous. How can a mere 15 percent possibly reflect the entire campus opinion?

Sure, 18 percent of the ASUI voted; but how many of those 18 percent really knew the whole story? I'd bet half the voters didn't even know there was going to be a recall until the day it was held. If this is the fact, then the recall was hardly fair.

Finally, I'd like to point out the very unethical hit list tactics used by SCRUB in ruining Scott Biggs. These types of tactics are designed to present the worst possible picture of the politician and rarely tell the true story.

Tactics such as these have no place in politics and surely misled many voters into voting to oust Biggs.

In writing this letter, I'm not supporting the poor ethics displayed by Biggs. I'm just saying that if in the future the ASUI decides to recall an unethical politician, the least it could do is use proper ethics itself.

Dynamic team

Editor,

"Match Idaho" is a phrase we've come to love all season. Yet last Thursday night, these two words brought more than just a victory to Idaho. Along with the elated joy and happiness, the victory brought forth a close to the women's volleyball home season.

Just as saying good-bye to an old friend, we were sad to see the close of a memorable season. For in compiling this winning season, the young team was faced with a difficult task that was anything but ordinary. Yet they confronted this dilemma with the courage and dedication found only in a few. Everytime they entered a court, whether at home or away on the road, their dedication was reflected in a winning spirit. From their astonishing kills to their fantastic blocks and miraculous saves, this dedicated team treated their fans to breathtaking play. Indeed this was a memorable season, full of marvelous surprises and heartbreaking illusions shared not only by this dynamic team, but also by their loving fans.

Lovingly we send our heart warming congratulations to Beth, Jenny, Julie, Kelly, Laura, Linda, Pam F., Patti, Terri, Amanda, Pam B., and Deanna for a fine winning season, and also to you, the best of luck at the NCWSA Regionals this weekend. As always, we'll be cheering you on, all the way to the top!

Air time at risk

Editor,

Last May the Idaho legislature was told by the Joint Finance Appropriation Committee that Public Television in Idaho could not be funded. This January the Idaho legislature will meet and decide if Public Television will live or die in Idaho.

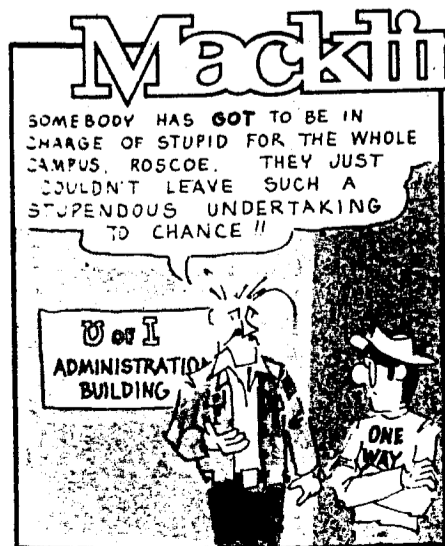

Although many important educational funding questions will be decided during this legislative session a "no" vote for Public Television funding will mean the end of Public Television in Idaho.

Presently 95 percent of Idaho enjoys the benefits of public broadcast programming. Also at stake are educational opportunities for many School of Communication students. KUID-TV/FM is the only place in Idaho where students have the opportunity to work and learn with professional broadcast equipment. Without your help, these benefits for students and Idaho at large will be lost. You can help by attending an organizational meeting to save KUID-TV/FM to be held this Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at the Radio and Television Center behind the Administration Building.

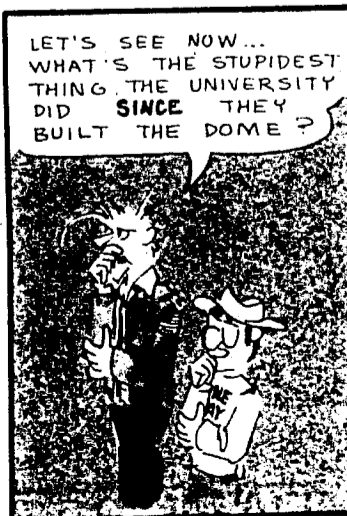

If KUID goes off the air one day because of the lack of funding our broadcast license will be lost. You can make the difference by attending this meeting. Thank you for your time and we hope to see you on Nov. 19.

Smith

A sophomore in communications

EXPERIENCE: Full year on ASUI Senate, ranking senator in seniority and chairman of one of its major committees; served as an officer in living group, on Academics Board and on Faculty Council during summer.

Smith lives off-campus. Smith has lived on all three sides of campus and knows the problems of off-campus, dorms, and Greek.

THE CHALLENGE: Ask each candidate where they stand on redefinition. Everyone running is against in-state tuition. Smith stands with the UI Political Concerns Committee and its Chairman, Doug Jones—and their petition drive now approaching 1,000 signers—against in-state tuition and against redefining the word tuition, legislatively, to bring about the same effect, namely TUITION! Smith does not want to "up" our fees $600 a year by playing with the dictionary.

OPPOSES: Any effort by the ASI (BSU, ISU, LCSC, UI) to redefine tuition.

SUPPORTS: Going to student body with referendum with any significant change in our position before the Legislature. No lobbyist or ASUI "groupies" should be allowed to sell the students short on something that affects our pocketbooks.

OPPOSES: Elimination of Wallace Cafeteria and Theophilus Tower voting booths proposed by ex-vice president Biggs; regrettably this proposal still has support on Election Board and in the ASUI Senate.

SUPPORTS: Lighting on campus to cut campus crime. Believes lighting should have highest priority; if we cannot obtain legislative appropriation then we should go to Idaho alumni and service groups.

SUPPORTS: Blue Ribbon Commission of people who are expert in various areas of ASUI—to make recommendations to new ASUI president at the beginning of the term of office. In the past it has taken months to get new programs rolling.

SUPPORTS: what the students voted for with the $2 entertainment fee, namely major concerts. Any change in policy should be placed before the students in a referendum.

Cook

A junior in political science

"Let my experience work for you." That's not an empty campaign slogan. I've been working with the ASUI longer than any other candidate running for office this fall. Currently a junior majoring in political science and economics. I have played an active role in student government at the University of Idaho for over two years. I have been a presidential aide, a member of several ASUI committees, and an ASUI senator for the past 11 months. I am currently the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the senate delegate to the Associated Students of Idaho (ASI).

As the only remaining member of the finance committee that budgeted the entire ASUI last spring, I believe I would be a real asset to the ASUI President on financial matters. My experience on the finance committee has also given me a great deal of insight into the workings of the ASUI and an understanding of the many departments. I feel the vice-president could serve as a crucial link between the president and these departments.

My knowledge of the senate and its operation would help me in my job as chairman of the senate and organizer of the senate. The vice-president is responsible for making committee, living group, and college assignments and a number of other "house-keeping" duties that keep the senate functioning as a group.

As ASI delegate, I have been working hard on the issues of in-state tuition, a definition of tuition, and the current alcohol policy of the state Board of Education. I am dedicated to the cause of a quality education at a low cost and pledge to oppose in-state tuition and all that it implies. I am in favor of a new alcohol policy that addresses the social and economic concerns of the students of the state and will continue to work on a policy change by the state Board of Education. At the same time I encourage the responsible use of alcohol and have been working to that effect as a member of the Alcohol Awareness Committee.

My term of office as an ASUI senator ends in a few short weeks. I've enjoyed working for the ASUI and would like to continue doing so as your vice-president. I am concerned about the future of the ASUI and the students of the state and will work hard for their best interests. My name is Greg Cook and I would appreciate your support on Nov. 18. Thank you.

Reimann

A senior in political science

Why did you decide to attend the University of Idaho? I chose this university because of the quality of the education available here. Today, we find ourselves in a very difficult situation. While costs are rising everywhere, finances are tightening up—financial aid has been cut, state subsidies reduced. Our very reason for being here, a quality education, is endangered.

Issues of importance to students this past semester have been: in-state tuition, campus lighting, alcohol policy, street modifications, etc. It is interesting that each of these issues is somehow centered around one central point—money.

Are students capable of assuming the additional costs of education if in-state tuition is instituted? Should money be spent on street modifications in our present situation of financial exigency? Can money be found to improve campus lighting in those areas where personal safety may be endangered?

All of these questions are frustrating to us as students. They must be dealt with by ASUI officials that are aware of how you feel and are willing to work with you for the betterment of our campus. The future of this university is important, and we must face these issues immediately in order to ensure that we maintain a quality education, at a cost which is affordable to students. Student input is essential to any decisions that are made by ASUI officials; after all, those decisions can and do affect all students.

I am currently a senior majoring in political science and economics. After graduation, I plan to attend law school. I have had experience working with the ASUI and with the Idaho State Legislature. As a sophomore, I was a senate intern at the State Legislature in Boise. Legislative proposals concerning the one percent initiative and higher education were part of my work. Last summer, I worked out of the ASUI president's office on the supplementary lecture notes program which is to be instituted in the spring semester.

This past semester I have served as an ASUI senator. Campus lighting and alcohol awareness are two other issues which I have worked with. As vice-chairman of the ASUI finance committee, I have become even more aware of the financial difficulties which are facing students today.

You, as students, can work for your future and help establish a credible ASUI by voting Wednesday, Nov. 18. Lend your support to those who represent you.

Fortunately this is the last time Idaho fans will see Brian Kellerman after Gordie Herbert as the two will undoubtedly be an integral part of the Vandals' bid for a second conference championship.

Burk is believing; back to regionals for Idaho spikers

by Bruce Smith
of the Argonaut

The regional tournament awaits Coach Amanda Burk and her women's volleyball team as they trek to Butte, Mont. this weekend. Idaho, which sports a 27-17 record overall and finished 5-2 in the Interstate League, will leave for Butte tomorrow and practice before the tournament starts on Friday.

The Vandals finished second in league and will represent the league, along with first place finisher Boise State.

Burk believes that she and her team can finish in first place in the regionals, despite losing to BSU twice during the regular season.

"I think we can take the whole thing," she said. "We came close to beating Boise State both times, but just lost. I think if we beat Boise, we can take the whole thing."

Idaho lost to BSU twice after the Broncos lost the first two games and won the next three to take the match. In the regionals, only two out of three games will take the match, which gives the Vandals an advantage.

"That has got to help us," Burk said. "It will give my kids an incentive to know that if we were playing with these rules during the season, we would have beaten them."

Last year Idaho swept through the regionals and went on to finish in ninth place nationally. This year Burk feels the team could do as well or better.

Harriers stumble at Big Sky

by Don Rondeau
of the Argonaut

Lack of a veteran line-up for the men's cross country team may have been the big reason for the Vandals' poor showing in the Big Sky Championships. The race was held over a rainy and cold 10,000 meter course at the Highland Golf Course in Pocatello last Saturday.

The young Vandals placed last in the meet. If anything good can be seen after the ordeal, it is that all the runners will return next year.

Last week coach Mike Keller said in order to finish higher than last, "We'd have to get a season best performance by everyone." However, it did not happen. No one on the seven-member team ran their best for 10,000 meters, another factor contributing to Idaho's last place showing.

Junior John Trott, usually running second best on the squad, led the Vandals overall by placing twenty-seventh, with a time of 33:30.

Other Vandal finishers were: Andy Harvey, twenty-eighth, 33:32; Jim McKean, forty-second, 34:26; Brad Webber, forty-third, 34:44; Don Rondeau, forty-fourth, 34:46; Kevin Wolf, forty-seventh, 35:07; and Steve Lauri, fifty-first, 35:50.

Montana State's Steve Bishop was the overall winner with a time of 30:47. Idaho State easily took the team title with 49 points. They were followed distantly by: Montana, 75; Northern Arizona, 86; Nevada-Reno, 104; Boise State, 105; Montana State, 115; Weber State, 161; and Idaho, 184.

Cagers perform to fans' delight

by Kevin Warnock
of the Argonaut

It's tough to make it interesting when you know what the other guy is going to do, and vice versa, but the glimpse of action provided the 2,000 anxious Idaho basketball fans last Saturday evening seemed to be a big satisfier for everyone except fourth-year coach Don Monson.

"I've never liked them," Monson said afterwards about scrimmages in general, while signing autographs for fans of all ages. "But, they serve a two-fold purpose: public relations and a chance to work on our game."

The team was broken down into a black and a gold squad, with Vandal assistants Rod Snook and Barry Collier serving as coaches in the 40-minute contest, won by the Black, 78-50.

McDonald's restaurant of Moscow provided free team photos and breakfast coupons for the first 750 spectators to come through the door. The session included a team introduction and brief explanation of Idaho's various offensive and defensive alignments.

Junior forward Phil Hopson stood out during the game-condition scrimmage with 26 points for the victorious Black side. He also led both sides in rebounds with 14.

"Hopson and (Brian) Kellerman made the difference," Monson said. "They seem to make the other kids play harder."

Sophomore forward Freeman Watkins and Pete Prigge contributed 20 and 19 points respectively for the Black squad. Senior forward Gordie Herbert led the Gold team with 22 points, while Kelvin Smith, a junior center, pulled down 12 boards for the Gold.

"We need to play more aggressive on defense, especially man-to-man, and rebounding is still a problem," Monson said of the team's play.

Charges filed against Idaho football player

Allen Swenson, a University of Idaho junior and Vandal football player, was charged with three felony counts and one misdemeanor count Monday in connection with incidents at several UI women's dormitory rooms.

According to a report by the Lewiston Morning Tribune, 20-year old Swenson is being held on $6,000 bond at the Latah County Jail after his arraignment on the charges yesterday.

He is charged with two felony counts of battery with the intent to commit rape or an infamous crime against nature. He allegedly entered the room of a Steel House woman at 2:30 a.m. Oct. 29 and touched her. He also is alleged to have entered the room of another UI student at Hays Hall Nov. 12 at 2:45 a.m. and again "actually intentionally and unlawfully touched the woman."

The third felony count charges that he entered two rooms of Campbell Hall at 1:45 a.m. Nov. 5 "with the intent to commit the crime of theft." The two women residents were absent at the time.

The misdemeanor charge of battery alleges that while he was in Steel House the morning of Oct. 29, he used force and violence upon another woman by pushing her and seizing her by the neck.

Sgt. Dan Weaver, sergeant in charge of the campus division of Moscow police, would not say whether the women were asleep at the time of the attacks or whether the man broke into their rooms.

During his arraignment Monday, Swenson offered no plea and Dean Wullenwaber, public defender, was assigned as his attorney.

Swenson is a PE major from Boise. He played reserve receiver for the Vandals last season and has been a substitute tight-end receiver this season. This is his third year of Vandal football. He was also a track team member for one year.

Cuddy

A sophomore in advertising

Who are you going to vote for? Or are you going to vote at all? There are some important issues that the ASUI will be addressing this year that could affect every student on this campus. I'm concerned about this election and that's why I'm running.

My name is Jackie Cuddy and I'm running for ASUI Senate.

One of my biggest concerns is the fight against in-state tuition. Many students could be deprived of an education if there is a $700 to $1,000 tuition cost added on to our fees. There are other ways to raise income for education such as increasing the sales tax by one cent.

As a member of the political concerns committee, I have taken a part in the petition drive, the letter writing campaign, besides the living group presentations.

Representation is another important issue that every candidate has talked about. As Campbell Hall president, I learned how vitally important it was that your senator show up at your hall or house meetings. How can senators responsibly represent their living groups when they fail to show up at their meetings until election time.

Another thing I'm concerned about is the lack of continuity in the ASUI Rules and Regulations. Rules and regulations need to be revised and updated so that they correspond to the actual practices that the ASUI follows.

The current street closures have greatly benefited the students by keeping traffic off the roads during weekdays. The road between the Tower and Wallace Complex is heavily congested with pedestrians during cafeteria hours, which created problems when traffic traveled on this road. However, I am willing to listen to discussion on any further street closures and campus beautification. If I feel the students are in favor of campus beautification then I will vote for it.

Campus lighting is a serious issue in this campaign. "Greek Row" it seems, has the biggest problems with lighting. Without more lighting the violence on campus will continue to rise.

Because of all these issues I feel this particular election is very important. I would like the chance to represent your views; I'm willing to listen. Please support me in tomorrow's ASUI general election. Thank you.

Green

A sophomore in accounting

My name is Scott Green and I'm running for ASUI senate. After spending a year as a senate aide, I felt that a lot of students weren't being represented well by the senators assigned to their living groups. I strongly believe that a senator should allow themselves to be influenced by how the students feel on certain issues. This can only be done with regular visitations to the living groups. Off-campus students also need to be heard from. This can be done by setting aside a room at the SUB every two weeks at a set time that the off-campus people can come and express their problems or feelings on an issue.

One of my main concerns right now is that of campus lighting. As campus lighting chairman, I have worked closely with the Moscow Police Department and I am worried that assaults on campus have the potential to increase drastically over the present figures on assaults. I am working hard to get a working package to the administration next semester to better light our campus.

In-state tuition, of course, is the big issue facing us now. I'm against in-state tuition as it could place a college education out of reach for many students. I am, however, very concerned about the quality of education here. I would rather see the legislature increase sales tax or give business tax incentives, as it is the business world that most commonly complains about the quality of education.

As vice-president of the Student Alumni Relations Board, I fully support the ASUI referendum which allows for a fifty cent increase in fees which goes to the Alumni Association. These monies will be used for student scholarships and job placement.

I would appreciate your support.

Kunz

A sophomore in political science

Rally behind a winner. The ASUI elections are this Wednesday, Nov. 18. There is a real need for the students on this campus to get to the polls. Not only because there are some important issues upcoming, but also to express disapproval of a recent initiative that sought to take at least part of the students' right to vote away.

Stop attempts to tamper with your voting rights. Exercise your right to vote.

In-state tuition has few friends. Redefining tuition to provide a narrow interpretation accrues no real advantage. Why? On balance, most colleges and universities have the option of charging tuition and/or fees. In Idaho, this is not so. There is a constitutional ban on tuition. Redefinition merely invites opportunities to amend both. Should this happen, in-state tuition will become a reality.

With a narrow interpretation, anything that does not appropriately fit under tuition will simply be transferred to fees. Hence, an increase in student fees.

The ASUI Political Concerns Committee has come out against redefinition. I enthusiastically support this stand and the objectives of this organization.

Presently, the ASUI Senate endorses a policy of providing an alternate definition. This suicidal stand must be reversed! My first priority will be to introduce a resolution to reverse this position. In summary, redefinition is no solution. The irony? Several Idaho Supreme Court decisions have upheld the constitutional ban on tuition (Dreps v. The UI Board of Regents).

campus. However, there is a strategic advantage in approaching tuition before alcohol. Both issues are winnable if approached in the correct order.

On-campus lighting has been promised for too long by too many people. There is a quantitative relationship between the adequacy of lighting and crime rate. Similarly, street closures are inconsistent with a policy of increasing safety.

Scrutinize the candidates and their stands. Afterwards, go to the polls and vote. Rally behind a winner. Help elect Jeff Kunz to the ASUI Senate.

Lang

A junior in business management

I am Bob Lang and I am running for ASUI senate. Michael Borden and Melissa Friel endorse my candidacy, and I receive the support of much of the ASUI government. However, I run for office because we need more aggressive, dynamic leaders who will fight for us.

Before I expand on my platform, let me share the truth of Wednesday's Senate meeting.

S149 attempted to remove the polls from the living halls. This was a pay back, and any conscientious being would abhor the bill's obvious, inherent wrongness. Right?

Wrong! Examining the senate's pre-session uncovers that half the senate, highly visible by their living arrangements, supported this action. Presently, a faction promoting unequal representation would deny you your vote and abuse the senate for their interest.

While I am the only candidate currently residing off campus, I have experienced dormitory life and institutional food. Although I have many friends in the houses and halls, my loyalty is to all the students and my conscience. I could never support a bill such as S149.

During the candidate's forum, Val Peterson stated that lighting was not an issue. Because we may have to pay to relight the campus, it is an issue. None-the-less, Peterson opposes increased lighting and explicitly pledged to vote against it.

Also during the forum, Peterson attacked my platform because I will not support the administration's present monetary policies. They do not spend our money wisely, and they rarely solicit our input. I refuse to lie in bed with those who are robbing our pockets for non-academic projects. I would question Mr. Peterson and ask him if he has read Dr. Faustus. What pact is he willing to make?

My political advisors say that I should not stand firm on any issue. Rather I should allow random voting to gain my office. This may be fine, politically, but my conscience dictates otherwise. Thus, I clearly present my platform to you.

I support better lighting of the campus. I support a progressive responsible alcohol policy. I oppose any fee used to expand, continue construction of, completion of, or repair of new or existing non-academic facilities. I oppose tuition in any form, including tuition disguised as fees. I oppose the further closure of the campus as we cannot afford it—it will aggravate the parking dilemma and endanger the safety of the students.

For the benefit of all the students, I present my views. For this I will incur the wrath of those who will lie to you, suppress your rights, and restrict your freedom and education. Therefore, I implore you to vote, vote wisely, and vote for BOB LANG.

Malarchick

A junior in American studies

A junior majoring in American Studies, Tim Malarchick is the sole incumbent ASUI senator running for another term in the senate. Tim has been an ASUI senator since his appointment by President Eric Stoddard in early October to the student senate.

I have approached this campaign from a different perspective than some of the other candidates. Ranging from the fact I am an incumbent, to the slogan I've adopted, "A Good Bartender Listens", I've tried to maintain an original perception of the campaign, the ASUI senate, and my role in both. My slogan stems from my part-time job as a bartender and bouncer at Cavanaugh's Lounge. Many people find that a bartender who is friendly and receptive is a good sounding-board. Someone who is easy to talk to. I've tried to be this way as a bartender and as a senator in the time that I've filled both of these jobs. I also have a strong desire to act upon problems and situations which are presented to me. After all, someone who listens is important: someone who listens and makes an earnest effort to accomplish a goal is dedicated. And I do believe I am dedicated.

I am a member and former president of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity. Through my experiences related to the house and especially those in my year's term as president, I have gained some vital experiences. Dealing with people and with problems is an integral part of any president's job, and I feel that I have learned quite a bit about both of these areas. Also I believe that I have acquired the patience and dedication to develop commitments to ideas and then follow them through.

This election is a crucial one in that in the upcoming year the students here at the university will be facing some volatile questions. The most controversial one to be debated here and at the state legislature will be in-state tuition. As a resident who is totally self-supporting in my financial status, I am strongly opposed to the inception of in-state tuition. I am also against a decrease in the quality of the educational opportunities offered here but do not believe that in-state tuition is the most equitable answer to the problem. A happy medium must be reached through the efforts of the ASUI, our state legislature, and people, just like yourself who share these common concerns.

I believe that I have served well the needs of the students of the University of Idaho and can continue to do so if you will take the time to help elect me to another term in the ASUI senate.

Peterson

A freshman in finance

I feel that a time of crisis is at hand in this institution of higher learning. This is why I have decided to run for ASUI senator. I feel that I have the qualifications and experience necessary to be an ASUI senator that can represent you well.

As a co-chairman of the ASUI Political Concerns Committee, I have been working against in-state tuition. In-state tuition is a threat to students' opportunity to gain a higher education, which our constitution has guaranteed us for the past 92 years.

I also am presently serving as a member of the ASUI Recreation Board. As a member of this board, I am the students' representation over such things as the Kibbie Dome and the intramurals program.

Some facts that will curl your hair.

If you've been thinking about giving yourself a home perm, there's something you should know. The reason perms curl your hair is because they literally rearrange the molecules within the hairshaft permanently. Whether you end up with soft waves or frizz depends on how, and how much those molecules are rearranged. At our salon, our stylists are trained in the chemistry of permanent waving. They don't take it lightly. Before each perm, you can ask them to analyze your hair to be sure it can take the chemical change and come through it beautifully. So if you want the curl and easy care of a perm, come to our salon. We recommend perms by Redken, the scientific hair care company. So don't risk your hair's beauty. Come into our salon and make a permanent change—for the best!

I also have the legislative experience necessary to be an ASUI senator. This past year I served as a page in the Idaho State Legislature. This experience gave me enough knowledge and personal experience to deal with the state legislature.

As state president of the Idaho Association of Student Councils, I gained many personal contacts throughout the state that could help me be an effective senator.

The issue of campus lighting has come up again in this campaign, as it has in many others in the past years. For the past six years, the ASUI has been working on campus lighting. I feel that if the ASUI has the funds for campus lighting then they should go ahead and upgrade the inadequate lighting throughout the campus. But, if the ASUI does not have the funds or lighting, the ASUI during this time of financial emergency should let it become a secondary issue.

I also feel the ASUI should have better communication with the administration. If communication with the administration was improved then the ASUI would become a more effective organization. Even if we did not agree with the administration on certain issues, I feel that this would help us gain a better understanding of the issues from the administration.

I urge you to VOTE on Nov. 18. A vote for VAL PETERSON is a vote for experience and a person qualified to represent you.

My major reason for running for this position is because I am concerned with several of the issues now facing the University of Idaho and the ASUI. Also, I believe my experience with the ASUI for the past year and a half as a Gem of the Mountains staff member and a current member of the ASUI communications board could be of benefit to the student body.

The issue with which I am most concerned is that of in-state tuition. I am opposed to in-state tuition for three reasons. First, the revenues generated by the tuition would not be specifically allocated for higher education. Second, this bill would circumvent the Idaho State Constitution which provides for a tuition-free education for all residents. Lastly, the much increased cost of attending the university would place an undue financial burden on most students.

The purpose of any elected official is to serve his constituents and represent their views. As it now stands, communications between the senate and the students need to be improved. Possible remedies to this situation include holding public forums concerning important problems or bills. An example would be those forums held for the jogging path and in-state tuition. An open meeting could be held once or twice a month. At these, a panel of senators would present and explain current issues and bills, as well as listen to the questions and opinions of those attending. The relationship between a senator and his living group is of paramount importance. Here, the two work together on a more personal basis. If it is used effectively, this interaction should result in many new ideas and a realization of the living groups' opinions. As your senator, I would be more than willing to listen and take action.

I would appreciate your support on Nov. 18. Thank you.

White
A junior in political science

Hi! I'm Sandra White and I'm running for ASUI Senate. I am a junior and I'm majoring in political science.

The functions of an ASUI senator are twofold—representative and legislative. I have the background to be effective in both areas. Before coming to the University of Idaho, I participated in student government and was an officer in my 4-H groups. Currently, I am the Vice-President of Theophilus Tower and I have been a French Hall officer for three semesters. Throughout both high school and college, I have written and amended bills.

I'm not running for senate to achieve any personal glory; I'm running because I could do a good job: I want to take an active part in assuring students of the full benefit of their education.

I vehemently oppose in-state tuition for several reasons. Most importantly, because many students would not be able to afford to complete their education. With an incomplete education, the job market is harder to survive in. Another reason is that there are other alternatives which are much less drastic. Area legislators agree that an increased sales tax is the most palatable way to go.

I also oppose core curriculum. Why? The university, individual colleges and degree objectives already impose numerous requirements on us to enhance our "educational horizons." Some students would have to go to school an extra semester or two if there were core curriculum requirements. The more classes students are required to take, the more professors will have to be hired. That takes money that the UI clearly doesn't have now.

Student unity is vital to a successful student government. If we all work together as one unified force, we can accomplish tasks, such as the defeat of in-state tuition.

Let's try common sense. Elect Sandra White to the ASUI Senate.

Correction

The Argonaut apologizes that one new sub-committee with the ASUI Political Concerns Committee was left off the list in "In-state tuition—fight now or never" in last Friday's issue.

UI freshman Kamala Shadduck is head of the petition committee, which is in charge of the campus and state-wide petition drive, processing signatures, and making logistics available to the ASUI lobbyist. The campus petition drive has so far netted close to 1,000 signatures. PCC chairman Doug Jones said Shadduck was responsible for collecting close to 500 of those names.

NASA scientists to hear UI prof

A University of Idaho associate professor of engineering will present NASA scientists with technical vibration damping information Nov. 16 in Hampton, Va. Ron Gibson will discuss the vibration suppression characteristics of graphite-epoxy composites at a technical review.

He worked at NASA Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va., as a NASA summer faculty fellow and hopes to continue work here on a contract basis.

Ex-Mormon speaks out against church's stand

Johnson explains why she gave up church

Speaking on her awakening as a feminist and her excommunication from the Mormon church, Sonia Johnson appeared as an ASUI Issues and Forums speaker, Sunday night. Johnson spoke of her gradual change—from a suburban housewife to a "founding mother" of Mormons For ERA.

She recounted her first introduction to the issue of women's rights in a discussion with a friend named Hazel, and later telling her husband, "I hope I never sound like Hazel!"

Johnson said she objected to hearing about the amendment in church, saying she had always gone to church for spiritual needs not political ones. One evening she went to the church to hear a Stake leader speak on why the Mormon church was opposed to ERA. She said she wanted to hear an intelligent explanation. "That was before I knew there wasn't anything intelligent on the other side," she said.

She said the man who was to document the opposition to the amendment confessed to not having prepared anything for his remarks. He had, on the way over, picked up a copy of Pageant Magazine with an article on ERA. Johnson said this man, and his attitude converted her to feminism, "heart and soul."

She said she felt a growing rage, especially when the speaker read a letter from the First Presidency of the Mormon church. Two parts of the letter especially touched her: one said the church held women to be exalted, on a pedestal, and the other told how the church men loved their women. After hearing that, Johnson said, "I knew in my bones what the women's movement was all about."

After that Johnson said she became involved in promoting ERA. She took part in marches, spoke to legislators, and testified about the amendment before a Senate committee. In her committee testimony she got into a heated debate with Utah Senator Orrin Hatch, a debate she said helped publicize Mormons For ERA, and her struggle.

Johnson said she realized she would come into conflict with church officials. "I heard from the Bishop a lot," she said. Of her excommunication, she said, "It was the greatest thing that happened to me," and that it offered her the chance to examine her feelings about her church and God.

Concerts

Problems due to little experience

by Lori Ann White
of the Argonaut

Too much emphasis has been placed on the money-making aspects of college concerts by critics of the ASUI programs department, according to Bill Spoljaric, programs manager, and Kevin Herby, entertainment committee chairman.

They admit that the recent concert featuring Tim Weisberg did result in financial losses of about $4,000 to $5,000 ("We haven't pinned it down yet," said Herby) but the financial side of college concerts is only one consideration.

"You can either be in it to put on a good show, or to make money," said Herby. "If you look at it (the concert) from an entertainment point of view, it was a complete success."

Herby said only about "10 percent" of college concerts make money. One of the main reasons for college concerts, or what should be one of the main reasons, is to provide entertainment for students and a chance to learn how to stage a concert for members of the programs board.

It was quite a learning experience for the board members, Spoljaric said. "We learned more in four hours than in the previous four months." He admitted that mistakes were made. Chief among them were bad promoting and the fact that the students working on the show tried to do the lighting themselves.

"Herby agreed with Spoljaric about one of the problems. "The whole problem stemmed from people saying 'Who's Tim Weisberg, and Harry who?'" he said. About the lighting, Spoljaric said, lighting for the show was too large a job for the students to do it effectively. "When Weisberg has to wave a guy with a spot over to the keyboards, something's got to

Abortion is debate subject

The pro's and con's of the abortion issue will be discussed Thursday when Bill Baird, a sex educator and Kenneth D. VanDerhoef, a lawyer get together in an ASUI Issues and Forums presentation.

Baird will hold the pro-choice argument and VanDerhoef will side with pro-life. After a 20 minute speech by each, there will be a 15-20 minute rebuttal period in which each will defend their views. After the rebuttals, questions from the audience will be accepted.

Baird is a certified sex educator from the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists. He established the nation's first abortion and birth control center on the Hofstra University campus in 1965. He also pioneered distributing medical and sex information in poor neighborhoods in some of the large cities of the East Coast.

VanDerhoef is a Gonzaga University Law School graduate and has worked in the King County Prosecutor's office and the Washington State Attorney General's office. He is a past president of the National Right to Life Committee, Washington, D.C. and is a member of the board of directors of that committee.

The presentation is at 8 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom and is free.

Evans spoke of "target budgeting" by the Idaho Legislature, saying that they have chosen faculty salaries as the highest priority.

However, Evans told UI deans and other administrators he is not optimistic the legislature will appropriate enough money to raise salaries up to levels comparable to those at similar colleges and universities.

Evans said the social services money will drain the overall budget of the state's general fund. "We haven't determined revenue projections yet, but the economy is going down and where we can stop it" will be anyone's guess, Evans said.

Evans said Idaho is the seventh fastest growing state in the nation and as the population grows, revenue will ultimately increase.

In conclusion, Evans presented a certificate of appreciation to ASUI President Eric Stoddard for helping with the "Capitol for a Day" program.

be wrong," he said.

Spoljaric said the concert date was also a mistake because it was a Friday night, the night before Halloween when many people had other commitments.

One other major mistake, according to Spoljaric, was the fact that student promoters tried to make the Memorial Gymnasium, the site of the concert, accessible to the handicapped but were unable to do so.

Another purpose for the concert was to see if University of Idaho students would support concerts and would attend, and also to discover what types of acts and music the students would be most likely to support.

Spoljaric amended statements made in an earlier article stating they would be "hesitant" to do another show if the Weisberg show was not a success. The programs board will continue to do shows, he said, but they must be more carefully researched and organized.

Herby seems to put great faith in "market research". This is the process of surveying the area to discover what types of entertainment would be welcomed there. Herby said that all shows will be researched from now on. "It all boils down to market research," he said.

Herby said that "nothing big" is planned for the rest of the semester, "but we will have some small things," such as the Laserium this weekend, and they are as yet uncommitted to any concerts next semester, but hope to have one major musical act and one comedy act, depending on results of the market survey.
