Jerry Davitch ended his Idaho coaching career with the last game of the season against the Boise State Broncos Nov. 21. Though the Vandals nearly pulled off an upset in the final quarter, senior defensive end Jay Hayes had to say "good-bye coach" with a hug.

Contracts, grants considered for UI

The approval of $1.6 million in outside grants and contracts is probably the most exciting business the state Board of Education will consider at its Dec. 3 and 4 meeting in Lewiston.

The largest grant is $240,000 for a U.S. Department of Agriculture allotment to the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. Next, $180,000 goes to M. Stoszek, director of the Forestry Nutritional Center in that college, from the Agency for International Development for a research project on making food products from wood cellulose.

Also on the agenda for the meeting is a report that the Boeing Co., Seattle, is providing the College of Engineering access to its computer and associated computer-aided design and manufacturing programs for academic use. The services from Boeing include two terminals, a plotter and the programs.

Another item is that KRPL, Moscow, is being granted the commercial radio broadcast rights for the 1982-83 football and basketball games with its bid of $150.

The university also requests authorization to participate in the new Auxiliary Loan Program to Aid Students being established by the federal government. To participate UI will deposit $12,000 from unrestricted student loan funds with the United Students Aid Fund to establish a loan guarantee reserve of $600,000 in anticipation of major reductions in other sources of student aid next year.

The university's agenda also requests approval of purchase of a $25,000 word processing system for Veterinary Medicine, a $19,000 liquid chromatograph for chemical engineering, and a $19,000 polarimeter for chemistry.

ASI to discuss strategy for legislature

The Associated Students of Idaho will meet tomorrow to discuss various legislative strategies to be used in the upcoming legislative session, according to ASUI President Eric Stoddard.

Among the items listed on the agenda are the possibility of getting a student on the state Board of Education, a report from the ASI funding committee, discussion on alcohol awareness and alcohol on campus, discussion on tuition, and the election of a new ASI chairman.

Stoddard said the meeting will mainly consist of setting up communication lines for early next semester, since the legislative session begins before school resumes.

Editor

Carr new Argonaut head

by Steve Nelson
for the Argonaut

Suzanne Carr, former managing editor of the Argonaut and a sophomore in Interdisciplinary Studies, was recommended to be next semester's Argonaut editor by the ASUI Communication Board.

The board's recommendation came before Thanksgiving break and is the first in a three-part review before the ASUI Senate casts the deciding vote. Next to consider the recommendation is Eric Stoddard, ASUI president, followed by the Government Operations and Appointments Committee.

Martin Behm, communications board chairman, said Carr's recommendation should move swiftly through the review process, and will be voted upon by the senate soon.

The communications board consists of six members and a chairman. The members are appointed by the ASUI president and confirmed by the senate. The board acts as a liaison between the senate and five departments: Argonaut, Photo Bureau, Reprographics, KUOI-FM and Gem of the Mountains.

"All the applicants were very qualified. It was a close decision. The strongest criteria we looked at were improvement ideas and managing experience," Behm said.

Carr presented a host of new ideas to the board and said, "I would like to take the good I've seen at the Argonaut and incorporate that."

To provide better coverage of ASUI student government and the UI administration, Carr said she would dispense with the news editor and establish a political editor. Carr said the police blotter would be eliminated too.

She also proposed the creation of three new sections: faculty council, ASUI Senate and a clubs and living groups section. However, she said clubs and living groups "basically will send in their own news."

The reason for these new sections, Carr said, is to "organize the news so it is in a specific place." She said the Argonaut should have more entertainment and feature stories too.

Carr said that in the past there has been much tension between students and the university's administration, and she sees the Argonaut as a vehicle to relieve that tension. "I want to contribute to better communication between these groups," she said.

Electioneering is allowed

by Bobbi Humphries
of the Argonaut

A section in the ASUI rules and regulations dealing with electioneering is unconstitutional because it violates the protection of free speech, according to ASUI Attorney General Rory Jones.

The section—30.530 in the ASUI rules and regulations—states, "There will be no campaigning on election day."

Jones began his investigation when campaigning, in the form of distribution of flyers, occurred on the day of the recall election against former ASUI Vice President Scott Biggs. Biggs protested the election, since rules were broken.

Jones said electioneering cannot be banned because it is constitutionally defined as an act of free speech. It can, however, be controlled. As an example, Jones said that in national elections, electioneering is prohibited within 60 feet of the polling booths. Flyers are legally distributed outside of that boundary.

ASUI President Eric Stoddard will be drafting a bill to amend the ASUI handbook to eliminate the section, or change it to be a measure of control only. He said the bill will also contain a suggested sanction in case another infraction occurs. No sanction has been stated in the past.

What the punishment will be is still up in the air, according to Stoddard.

"We'll have to toss that subject around a bit," he said. Stoddard said he hopes to submit the bill by next week, allowing the "new" senate to decide whether to accept or reject it.

According to Jones, "The subject of recall is definitely not properly covered in the handbook."

The members of SCRUB (Student Coalition to Remove Unethical Bureaucrats) were just lucky enough to have broken a rule which had no set punishment, Jones said.

UCC seeks input

P.E. changes eyed

Changes in the university physical education requirement are being considered by the University Curriculum Committee, and student opinions on those changes are encouraged, according to Bert Cross, UCC chairman.

Under the present regulation, students over 30 years of age, mothers, physical education majors, and veterans with at least one year of service are exempted from the requirement of two activity courses.

A new proposal, submitted by the Division of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, would remove these students from exemption. The only students not required to complete the courses would be those with a valid medical excuse or those certified by the division as having demonstrated equivalent proficiency, based on completion of an advance-level activity course. Transfer students could transfer PE activity course credit.

Cross urged that students send written comments to him in care of the School of Communication or voice their opinions in person at the meeting of the University Curriculum Committee Dec. 3 at 3:30 p.m. in the Forestry Conference room.

The full text of the proposal is available at the Office of the Faculty Secretary.

Vandal gridgers conclude season with class

by Kevin Warnock
of the Argonaut

Joe Koegh died last summer in an automobile accident, but his presence was felt by an Idaho Vandal football team which refused to succumb to adversity in the concluding game of a disappointing season.

Boise State beat Idaho 45-43 Nov. 21 to earn a berth in the NCAA Div. I-AA playoffs, but Number Four seemed to make it a thriller in the second half and a heart stopper for the Broncos.

"We hadn't done anything like this all year, but at halftime we just said why not play this one half for Joey Koegh," Idaho coach Jerry Davitch said afterwards. "Somewhere, he has a big smile on his face ... he played a good half."

Koegh's number, four, was worn on the side of every Vandal helmet during the season. He was a cousin of senior cornerback Mike Keogh.

Idaho, playing for the last time under fired mentor Jerry Davitch, trailed the defending national champions 35-7 at one point and 35-14 at the half. At that point, the prospects for ruining Boise's playoff aspirations seemed dim.

"We haven't given up all year long. We have too much character. We're not about to let down," Davitch said afterwards in his vacated office.

"The only thing that pisses me off is the fight song. I just learned the words to this one."

Idaho scored four touchdowns in the second half and wasn't finished until the fourth quarter, with just over a minute to play, when the Broncos recovered an onside kick attempt by Tim McMonigle.

Senior Vandal tailback Russell Davis finished the game with 186 yards on 21 carries as the Vandals rolled up 547 yards of total offense—26 less than the Broncos.

Davis won the Big Sky rushing title with a per game rushing average of 111.7 to outdistance Boise State's Rodney Webster who averaged 103.5 yards per game. Davis' numbers break down to an average of 8 yards per carry as the Renton, Wash. native scored three touchdowns in his final game to bring his season total to 11.

For his efforts, Davis was named All Big Sky honorable mention behind Webster and Montana running back Rocky Klever.

Quarterback Ken Hobart and wide receiver Jack Klein garnered second team honors, while the right side of the Idaho offensive front, guard Steve Seman and tackle Bruce Fery, were given honorable mention.

The Vandals led the Big Sky in total offense with an average of 438.8 yards per game, averaging nearly six yards per snap. Idaho scored 42 touchdowns and also led the league in rushing with a 266.3 yard average in 11 games.

BSU ends spikers' hopes

by Bruce Smith
of the Argonaut

Another disappointing loss to cross-state rival Boise State has ended the Idaho volleyball team season in a sad way.

Coach Amanda Burk's squad fell to the Broncos twice in the finals of the regional tournament in Butte, Mont., Nov. 20-21, to fall out of the tournament.

The team still had a chance of entering the national tournament this weekend in Colorado Springs, Colo., but the executive committee decided to pick Hawaii-Hilo and a California school, Loyola-Marymount, instead of the Vandals.

"I'm extremely disappointed in the committee's decision," said Burk. "I felt, and so did a lot of other coaches, that we should be there in the finals." Idaho entered the tournament as the second-place finisher of the Interstate League and opened against Boise State. The Vandals fell for the third time this season, 16-14, 9-15, and 7-15, to go to the losers' bracket against Western Washington.

"We should have beaten Boise," said Burk. "We lost one of our best players, Beth Johns the night before. She played in the first game and we won it, but we hurt too much to win the next two."

Idaho then defeated Western Washington rather handily, 15-5 and 16-14, earning the right to play Boise State again. Without Johns and a couple of other players, who were out with stomach problems, the Vandals lost 15-5, 15-12.

"I think that if any other team were in the same predicament we were, they couldn't have done any better," Burk said. "We were really hampered with injuries and other problems over there. It's too bad it happened right then."

Despite the sad finish, five Idaho players were named to the all-league first and second teams.

First team members included Jenny Rothstrom, Newport, Wash. and Pam Ford, Yakima, Wash.

Second team members from Idaho were Linda Kelling, Lyons, Colo., Beth Johns, Yakima, Wash., and Patti Bennett, Sandpoint. Most of the all-league teams' members were from the two top teams in the conference, Boise State and Idaho.

Women cagers look impressive

After two convincing wins in the Mark IV Thanksgiving Classic, the Idaho women's basketball team travels to Boise to play the Weber State Wildcats Dec. 4 and Boise State Dec. 5. Weber will be on the road also.

The Vandals won their classic Nov. 20-21 with strong victories over Alaska Anchorage and Montana State. In the process, Idaho broke one school record and tied another.

The scores of the games, 97-68 over Alaska-Anchorage and 84-59 over Montana State, started the Vandals' season in hopes of retaining their position of Northwest Empire League and NCSWA Division II Regional champion.

The records were achieved by Karin Sobotta, who scored 16 points but had 15 assists to tie in the Vandals' win over Anchorage, and Denise Brotes, whose 35 points against Montana State broke the school scoring record for a single game.

Sharples wins all the marbles

It's safe to say she's the best. Not only is Patsy Sharples the best cross-country performer in the intercollegiate Div. II ranks, but she's number one in the nation—period.

Idaho's record-setting sophomore sensation from Fish Hoek, South Africa claimed her second straight national championship Nov. 21 in Pocatello at the AIAW Championships.

Her time over the 5,000 meter Highland Golf Course was a course record, 17:34 flat, a time which would also have won the Division I race had Sharples entered it.

As a team, Coach Roger Norris' squad placed fourth, behind Utah, Air Force and Seattle-Pacific. Last season the Vandals placed fifth in the national championships.

Sharples was scheduled to compete last Saturday in The Athletic Congress meet at Burbank, Calif., but was forced to withdraw from the meet which attracts the finest distance runners in the nation, because of a severe cold.

Oregon State manages split

Idaho's swim teams opened their 1981 season at home Nov. 21 against Oregon State with the men winning their half of the dual meet 79-26, while the Beaver women snatched a victory from the Vandals 72-67.

Idaho's top performers were Don Moravec and Jim Zimmer. Zimmer won a pair of freestyle dashes while Moravec collected a first in the 200-meter medley.

Nancy Bechtholdt won the women's 100, 500 and 1,000-meter freestyle races, while teammate Sara Osborne captured the 50 and 100-meter backstroke events, to pace Idaho.
