Politics GOP involvement encouraged...

"The students are number one," said Representative James Lucas, a member of the House Education Committee, at the organizational meeting of Idaho College Republicans Tuesday night.

Lucas went on to say, "The greatest thing in the free enterprise system is the opportunity for an education."

Appearing with Lucas at the organizational meeting as a featured guest was James Anderson, Latah county Republican chairman. Anderson emphasized the need for students to get involved in the political process.

With two precincts almost entirely on campus and two adjacent to the campus, Anderson said, "I can't emphasize how important the campus is." Encouraging student participation in politics, Anderson outlined several areas that need volunteers, from serving as precinct chairmen to conducting campus canvasses. Tom LeClair, chairman for both the local and state college Republican groups, described Idaho College Republicans as "A group of students leaning toward Republican views who want to get involved in politics."

Both Anderson and LeClair strongly encouraged students to become directly involved in the campaign process, urging them to pick a candidate they could support and work to see that candidate elected.

The College Republicans plan to assist candidates by distributing information at the Latah County Fair, passing out bumper stickers at football games, and performing other campaign functions.

The organization's next meeting will be Sept. 7 at 9 p.m. in the SUB. Membership dues are $2; $1 of that going to the local chapter to print flyers and to keep members informed, and the other $1 going to the state organization.

Garbage-to-steam plant could get help from state

Plans for a garbage-tosteam cogeneration plant on the University of Idaho campus have been put on the back burner for the past three years, but with some financial assistance from the State, things could start cooking.

Nels Reese, director of Facility Planning, reported the university has submitted a grant proposal for $25,000 in matching funds to the Idaho Office of Energy to finance a feasibility study. He said his department has already budgeted $25,000 of its own for the study. "It's been up in our minds since we first looked at it a few years ago," said Reese. "But we have a limited staff and no money to finance it (the study), so we've allowed the thing to mature a little bit, as it were."

waste from surrounding areas. The university is currently doing a study in St. Maries on wood waste utilization, Reese said, and cooperation would be beneficial to both programs.

There are some federal standards and permits that will have to be studied as well, he said. "As you work with cogeneration, developing generating power, you need federal approval. There are requirements in air quality standards that have to be met, and a number of design considerations." He said the study would not design the plant, which he estimated would cost $8 to $10 million, but would review a whole series of issues regarding the project's construction. Reese said the cost of energy generated by natural gas for the university will be over $1 million for 1982, and will increase in the future. A wasteto-steam plant would be costeffective, according to the grant proposal. If the grant is approved, then the final report of the study should be finished by April 1982, Reese said.

...as Demos try to gain control

A former Idaho House of Representatives Democrat said Tuesday people have "gotten a taste of the Republican whip" and his party members must work to ease the sting.

Steve Scanlin, a law student who served in the House from 1976 to 1980, spoke at an organizational meeting of Campus Democrats Wednesday night.

Scanlin said that one of the main local issues this year would be tuition. "It's a people issue," he explained, "it affects students primarily and students' families." He said it was a bipartisan issue, in a way, but "of the 43 people who voted in favor of tuition, 42 were Republicans.

"I think you'll find that the Republican party, by and large, favors the privileged and the few. I know that's a gross generalization to make, but I've seen it so many times that I just know it's true, I really believe it," said Scanlin. He added that the Democrats have always stood behind the common people.

In explaining why he felt it was important to become involved, Scanlin said, "In 1960, when John Kennedy was elected, if there would have been one vote difference in every precinct in the United States, Richard Nixon would have been president."

When Scanlin lost his seat in 1980, it was a surprise to him; he said that if there is a large voter turnout then the Democrats usually come out on top. "It was a fluke, I think, if was a very unusual and different situation," he said. "I was in great company, though,"

See Demos page 6

Reese said the university decided to go ahead with the study on July 1, and the possibility of receiving state funds was a "major encouragement."

Two issues that also influenced the decision were benefits of buying power from a smaller producer, and the expanded possibility of wood

ASUI Senate GPAs concern senators

Senators act on bills

A number of bills were passed at Wednesday night's ASUI Senate meeting, including one that would apportion senators to represent living groups.

The bill states that all senators shall meet with their living groups at least twice a month and report back to the senate.

The bill also reads that the president pro-tempore shall act as off-campus coordinator.

Another bill passed appointed senators to senate subcommittees.

These committees include finance, rules and regulations, governance and appointments, and ways and means.

Two bills submitted concerning the appointment of senators to different colleges and ASUI boards were also passed.

Senator Scott Green submitted three bills which passed, affecting the ASUI repair and replacement reserve account.

The first bill states all funds from this account shall be carried over to the next fiscal year. At this time, $2500 shall be added to the account.

The account shall not be

Artis, ASUI Andy president, submitted four bills at the senate meeting Wednesday night dealing with the cumulative grade point average of ASUI elected officials.

The first bill is concerned with the cumulative GPA of a candidate for an ASUI elected position. The proposed GPA requirement is 2.5 or greater.

The election board chairman would be responsible to verify each candidate's academic eligibility through the University of Idaho registrar's office.

The second bill proposd that all ASUI elected officials must the academic maintain eligibility requirement of 2.5 or greater.

The bill also states that any elected official whose cumulative GPA falls below a 2.5 will be automatically placed on ASUI academic probation.

The third bill says that it is the ASUI vice president's responsibility to request verification of academic eligibility for all elected officials at the beginning of each semester.

The last bill proposes that any official on ASUI academic probation may continue to serve for one semester. At the end of the semester, the elected official must have raised the cumulative GPA to 2.5 or greater.

Failure to make the 2.5 cumulative GPA will cuase the elected official ineligibility to hold an ASUI elected office.

The four bills have not been passed, but have been sent to the Ways and Means Committee to be discussed.

Artis encourages students to talk to their senators when they visit the living groups and give them input on the bills. He also said a survey will be conducted regarding these bills.

A survey conducted of all the schools in the Big Sky Conference showed the average minimum GPA for elected officials in student government of the eight schools is 2.225.

"There's more to life than throwing a little plastic disc around," comedian and filmmaker Woody Allen once said as he pondered the frisbee phenomenon.

That may be true for some, but that plastic disc is here to stay, and on any Sunday afternoon it can be seen in almost every park across America. And there are those who would rather spend their lives doing nothing else but chucking the "fris".

To most, though, frisbee is simply a game of catch and throw, with an occasional twofinger throw or behind-theback catch added just to show off a little. Then, there are those instances in all sports when someone transcends the commonplace and creates art out of sport.

Jack Nicklaus has done it with golf; Ingemar Stenmark with skiing; and O.J. Simpson with football. Now, Rick Castiglia, Bill Wright and Doug Branigan, the Coloradicals, are doing it with frisbees.

On Wednesday, students had a chance to see this trio from Fort Collins, Colo. The event, sponsored by ASUI Programs, had the crowd of about 150 spectators and frisbee buffs shaking their heads in amazement as the

Gym will get new floor, roof

The Memorial Gymnasium is getting a $1 million face lift to "bring the building into the 20th century," according to Nels Reese, director of facility planning.

The gym is one of three buildings on campus listed on the National Register of Historic Places and the renovations are part of the East End Addition/Memorial Gymnasium remodeling project approved by the State Board of Education nearly two years ago, Reese said.

electrical The and mechanical systems-roof and floor of the building are in bad shape and a continuing maintenance problem, he explained.

"They were good in 1928, two-time world champions demonstrated "state of the art" freestyle frisbee. Their choreographed routine, done to music, combined gymnastics and dance with just about everything a person could do with a frisbee.

All three agreed that giving audiences something to whoop about was a big part of what they do. "I love turning the crowds on. It's just plain fun," said Castiglia.

"Everyone's goal is to get paid for doing what they want, and this is it," Wright said. "The sport is so new that we're all real pioneers. It's a challenge to try and spread it around."

After 90,000 miles of travel the team's spirit for spreading the good word about various frisbee sports hasn't been dampened. "It's probably the best way to see the country," Castiglia said of the arduous travel schedule. "They're (the tournaments) real social affairs."

While they receive some compensation from Discraft Products, the company they represent, they all hold down jobs to pay for much of their travel.

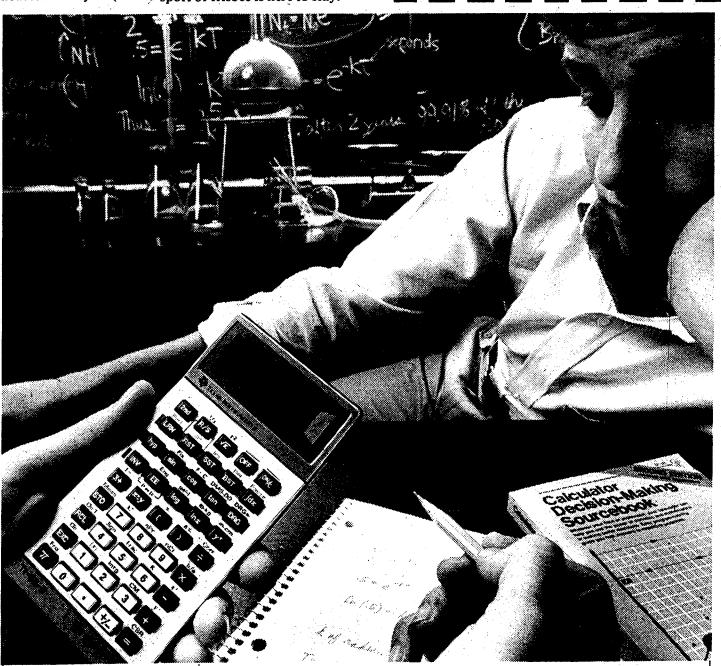

Wright owns a sporting goods store in Fort Collins, Branigan tends bar there, and Castiglia is waiting for word on a marketing job that would move him to Denver. There's no danger of the trio breaking up, however. "I'll probably have to do quite a bit of flying on weekends," said Castiglia.

After their demonstration and performance were completed, the three took time to give personal instruction to anyone who asked for it and to sell their autographed frisbees. Then, as most ambassadors with a cause, it was back on the road to chuck the "fris" and spread the word...the sport of frisbee is here to stay.

when the building was built, but they're not very good today," Reese said.

The roof repairs for the gym have been bid and the roof will be fixed this fall at a cost of about $170,000.

A new gymnasium floor and a set of telescopic bleachers at . the south end are already under construction. Reese said the floor will be completed by Sept. 17 at a cost of about $120,000.

Also scheduled to be built is a new elevator, ramps and other modifications that will make the gym accessible to handicapped students.

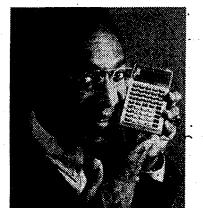

The locker room on the second floor of the building will be remodeled to meet building code requirements, Reese said.

Dick & Jane go to collej

You've probably seen the bumper stickers floating around that say "If you can read this then you're too close." Well, you don't even have to be able to read it to attend the University of Idaho.

At least those are the signals we seem to be getting from not only the state legislature, but this institution's faculty as well.

Whether because of recent economic low blows or just a plain lack of concern on the part of its prime source of funding, the quality of education in Idaho, both primary and secondary, is slowing waning. The legislature, reeling from the delayed backlash of the 1% initiative, has been forced to cut the "fat" out of its entire budget the past couple of years.

Education, it could be argued, has had more than just its "fat" lopped off.

Funding for primary education in this state was already sorely lacking on a national comparison before the budget cuts, and it just got worse. Some Idaho high schools have even had their accreditations questioned.

That means future high school graduates of this state—and potential UI students—will be even more deficient, as a whole, in basic learning skills than they already are. Communication is an important part of those skills.

Students in every field, from electrical engineering to entomology, need to have a solid command of communication skills to receive and convey information and ideas. They all need to communicate effectively, not only in their chosen professions, but their daily lives. Without some form of language, we human beings would revert to grunts and growls as a means of understanding each other.

It's debatable whether English 103 as a required course ever really helped anybody; 104 is still one of the most frequently failed courses in the core curriculum. So, there's no sense in mourning its demise...if you could call it that.

But the relaxation of communication core requirements by the faculty here brings to a conspicuous head the short-comings of incoming freshmen.

As Idaho's high school graduates, more illiterate as a whole than the class before, continue entering the state's institutes of higher education, an important question to ask is: how much can those colleges and universities be expected to make up for what the primary schools neglect to do?

Granted, it's not this university's responsibility to teach Dick how to read or Jane how to speak. But, when it chooses to relax standards already so slack that students need remedial teaching at a college level, one wonders if Dick and Jane will learn those vital skills at all.

Enrollment limitations are not only a short-term solution to a far-reaching problem, but unlawful in the state. Even if the university could keep out the students who don't make the grade, sooner or later they'd have to renege because they would be excluding too many educationally malnutritioned individuals.

It's the universities' job to provide learning opportunities beyond what students were supposed to get in grade and high school, not make up deficiencies. It's primary education's job to insure there are no such deficiencies, and they can't do it without proper funding.

We may be in a financial crisis that dictates what can and can't be offered students by higher education, but we can't afford to ignore basic fundamentals of any learning.

Keep your bird occupied

Attention budding intellectuals: this is your opportunity to let the world, or at least the rest of the university, know what you're thinking. So, unsheath your pens and unstick your typewriter keys, and start cranking out those mirthful missives and flaming flak-catchers we all know as columns and letters to the editor. Yes, now you, too, can provide many a bored canary with stimulating cage linings from future issues of the Argonaut. Scientific research has proven, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that column and letter writing is a viable and healthy release of tension, anxiety, and an overabundance of bile in a person. And besides, it lets us know you're reading the paper.

Number one is better K.M. Nelson

There are those in this country who would have you ignore the political realities of the past 40 years. There are those who would approach you with the docility of lambs and seduce you into thinking that facts can be changed by wishing them away.

The Peace Movement is a case in point: though it is founded on noble ideas, those that mouth its dogma blind themselves to the damage they do, and the aid they give to the enemy.

Now, I'm aware that in certain circles it is considered a faux pas to suggest that any nation is our enemy. I am also aware of what Lenin said about the armed destruction of the capitalist state. Yet, there are people who would have you ignore this fact. There are people who would have you bare your breast and lay down your weapons on the assumption that the Russians would reciprocate in kind.

Let us look at this assumption and see just how much credence can be placed on it.

First, the Russians have built the greatest marine and the cruise missile. As if it was a crime to wish to be free and be willing to fight for that right. They would tell you "Don't register for the draft, it is an infringement on your rights." Yet, they mention nothing to you of the possible consequences, nor do they warn you about the yoke of the totalitarian state. It is a heavy yoke, and once you place it on your neck Armageddon itself might not be able to remove it. R

What else would the pacifists have us do? It seems we should dismantle our nuclear weapons unilaterally, trusting the Soviets to do the same out of good faith. They trust them to do this even after the Russians have refused to dismantle on a weapon-for-weapon basis.

Why do the Soviets refuse to disarm? Is it possible that they have uses for those weapons in their plan for world hegemony? Why else would they and their lackeys talk peace, yet arm for war? These are questions left unanswered by the "peace at any price" crowd. What can be done about all of this? Are we to sit on our shores grinning stupidly and congratulating ourselves on our moral righteousness while the Communists gobble up the globe, or do we carry the struggle to the enemy? Do we arm the Afghan and Angola freedom fighters? I say yes, let us help the Russians squander their blood and iron. As long as they are bogged down there, the chances that they will stir up trouble elsewhere are slim. We must assume the offensive, we must meet each Soviet move with one of our own. If we wish world events to turn out in our favor, then we better work on tipping the scales. Only through our own military power will we remain free. The Peace Movement should recognize the errors in attempting appeasement. As W.R. Inge once said, "It is useless for sheep to pass resolutions in favor of vegetarians, while the wolf remains of a different opinion."

In addition to the benefits to your health and mental wellbeing, you can earn some beer money: the Argonaut will fork over the extremely generous sum of $7.50 for each column we use. See if you can top that deal. We make you famous (or infamous as the case may be) and pay you for it.

Letters, while not as financially remunerative, can still be stimulating to our feathered friends, and are just as welcome. Of course, we have to check all material submitted for legality, but basically, all content will remain true to the author.

In order to spare our typesetters from nervous breakdowns, we ask that you type all material when possible, double-spaced on wood-pulp byproducts. Also, letters and columns must be submitted in person, with a student ID number or other form of identification and a phone number.

So, don't delay. Start your career as an Argonaut contributor today. You'll be glad you did. offensive force, both nuclear and conventional, that the world has ever seen. Surely, even the most dogmatic peacenik alive doesn't believe we are going to invade Russia. Then why such a massive buildup?

If, as some say, weapons are made to be used, then how can they explain this?

Even with that fact in mind there are those who would say that the Soviets are peaceloving folk who wish only to defend themselves. They said this while the freedom fighters fought and died in the rubble of Budapest; they said it while Russian tanks crushed the Prague Spring; they continue to say it while Afghanistan and Poland experience the "Pax Soviet". These are the same people who mocked the domino theory and cheered the North Vietnamese, and then became strangely silent when South Vietnam fell, then Laos, and when the massacre of Cambodia began.

Now they would have you believe we are the immoral ones for building the Trident sub-

Academic assistance

While the Learning Skills Center did newsurvive the final round of budget cuts last July, there is help available for some students through Special Services for Disadvantaged Students, a federally-funded program at the University of Idaho.

According to Cindy Lou McDonald, student program consultant, Special Services will conduct several seminars this fall for qualified students as well as an on-going spelling lab and unlimited tutoring in any subject.

Students must meet one of three criteria for admission to the Special Services program. S/he must be (1) physically handicapped, which includes learning disabilities that have been previously diagnosed, OR (2) low income, which for a single, financially independent student means having a net taxable income of less than $6435, OR (3) be a first-generation college student; that is, neither parent (or the one with which the student lived) had received a bachelor's degree before the student was 18 years old. Only one of the criteria must be met.

The purpose of the Special Services program is "to improve the retention and GPA of disadvantaged students." according to McDonald. If the study results they received this week are any indication, the program seems to be working. McDonald said they were able to locate a control group of students with the same income level and SAT and ACT scores as students involved in Special Services. By comparison, students with 2.0 GPA's for the Spring '81 term who did not go to Special Services went down to 1.8 for the Fall '81 term, while those who did receive tutoring or attend seminars received 2.5 GPA's for the same term. On a more drastic scale, students who received 0.0 GPA's went up to a 0.6 without Special Services' aid; but with it, students went from 0.0 to 2.0.

"Without the help I received (from Special Services), I could have not only wasted my years here in college-I could have wasted my productive capacity for the next 30 years," commented a 41-year-old student after a year at Special Services. (In that time, his GPA went from 2.6 to 3.6.)

This semester Special Services is offering consecutive seminars in Study Skills and Textbook Reading on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 3:30 to 4:30 in FOC W305. The Study Skills seminar (9/14 - 10/7) will cover note-taking, test-taking strategies and organization skills, while the Textbook Reading seminar (10/19 -11/18) will focus on improving reading comprehension and speed at an individual level.

.Criteria set for Special Services aid

Also being offered are a Math Refresher workshop (to review fractions, decimals and basic algebra); a Spelling Lab (to learn to catch and correct spelling errors); and study skills tutors who meet with interested students once a week to go over notes from that week and help plan the coming week's study time.

Anyone who thinks they might qualify and wants to enroll in any of the seminars or programs should conact Cindy Lou McDonald at 885-6746 for more information.

Learning Skills lingers on

The Learning Skills center has been closed down and students seeking academic help will have to look elsewhere. Of the learning services offered, all but three have been eliminated icluding the tutoring program, Beat Academic Probation, and special services for disadvantaged students.

The Learning Skills center was another victim of last spring's budget cuts. The future of the center, if there is one, is still undecided said Judy Wallins, coordinator of the Student Development Programs.

"I have no idea (about the center's future), but we are concerned about retention and will be making plans for students needing learning skills help," said Wallins.

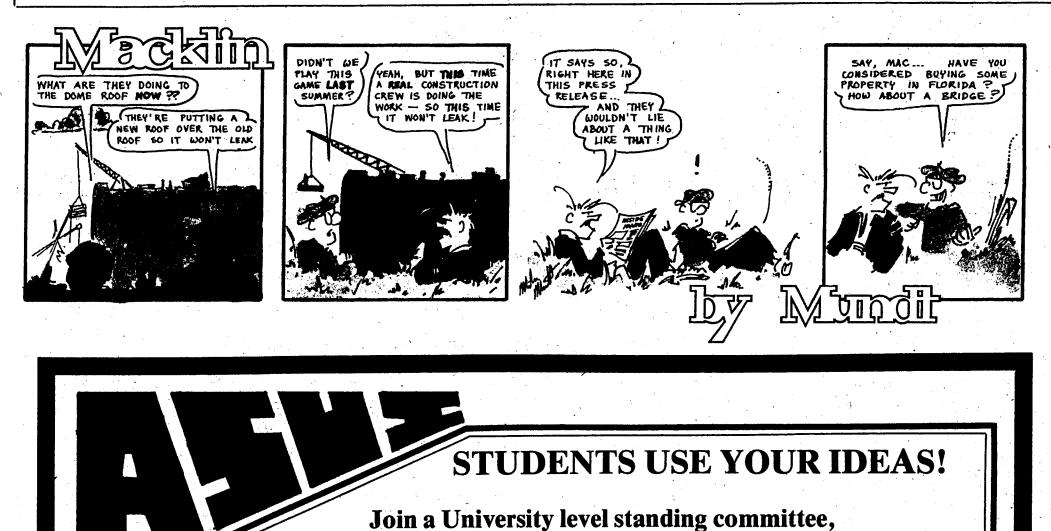

Learning Skills Coordinator Jeanette Ross was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Ross has left her duties at the Learning Skills Center and has begun teaching two English composition classes and coordinating the tutorial program offered out of the letters and science dean's office.

The tutorial program will continue as in the past with veterans, athletes and vocational rehabilitation students obtaining free tutoring. Any student who is getting a "C" in a class may obtain one hour a week of tutoring paid by the ASUI.

Ross is coordinating the tutorial program from Administration 112 on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. Any student interested in tutoring should see her during those times.

According to Cindy Lou McDonald, student program consultant, the program usually employs approximately 85 tutors a semester, and they are currently in need of more help.

"I think that people now have gotten a taste of the Republican whip and they know what it feels like," Scanlin said.

Scanlin went on to endorse Larry LaRocco-"He's the best I've seen since I've been in Idaho"-and John Evans. "Our governor is up again and if you don't think that's important, you know we have 12 votes in the senate. 11 is not enough to sustain a veto, 12 is what it takes. If we lose one senate seat we're in trouble ... it means that things like Right to Work, anything the governor vetos will not be sustained if we lose that seat in the senate.

Heughins, who is writing his thesis on Public Land Use, said "Don't ever forget that the University of Idaho exists by the benevolence of the people of the United States, because it is a land grant college." Congressman Larry Craig, he said, stated on a Caldwell radio program that public lands were socialistic.

According to the group's newly elected President, political science major Roger Thurston, he's looking forward to a busy fall, including campaigning at the Latah County Fair, the Lewiston Roundup, homecoming and football games. He said the most important work they'd be doing is a public opinion survey. They will have people designated as coordinators for each area-off-campus, dorms, and the greek houses.

Other officials elected at the meeting were Melissa Friel, vice president and Sal Villegas, secretary and treasurer.

Dispatchers sign off

Until Aug. 31, 1982 the University of Idaho employed campus police dispatchers. As of Sept. 1 all complaints must go directly downtown to the Moscow Police Department.

Included in this year's budget cuts were the three fulltime and three part-time dispatchers that maintained the police substation at the Campus Information Center. As of Sept. 1, however, the substation moved downtown and the officer working at the information center became a liaison officer between the university and the MPD.

Former Chief Police Dispatcher Tom LaPointe said that the liaison officer will now keep the records necessary to maintain the University Division of the MPD, but that all calls for assistance from on-campus will now be directed downtown.

As of Oct. 1, LaPointe will become coordinator of parking, information, night watch, and telephone services for the university.

Liaison officer Sgt. Dan Weaver said that the MPD will still have six officers patrolling the campus, as in the past.

The MPD began moving the records and files of the former substation from the information center to the police department at the Moscow City Hall in January.

Larry Wright is a very funny man. Well, perhaps that's assuming a bit much; after all, I don't know if the man is funny, but his cartooning sure is.

Wright, in real life the Op-Ed page artist for the Detroit News, is one of my favorite cartoonists. His work first caught my eye several years ago when his strip, Citizen Kane (also known as Wright Angles) was first published. The Kane Family, his typical American household, is continually beset by the foibles of life in the twentieth century.

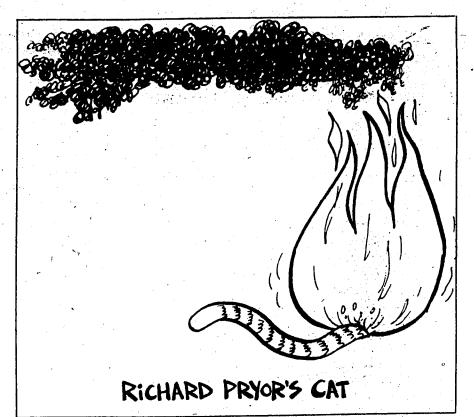

At the heart—or at least I should hope so-is Motley, the family cat. Motley is capable of getting into trouble at the drop of a ball of yarn. Wright's affection for cats comes through, and this feeling lies at the base of his new book, Celebrity Cats.

Cats are a favorite obsession today. There are tons upon tons of books and memoribelia floating around, and it seems that every bookshop has a smiling cat leering out at the bleary-eyed passerby. Celebrity Cats is a welcome change from all of that. It is a truly funny book, without losing its credibility by being cutesy.

Wright takes a list of famous individuals and gives the reader his idea of what their feline accomplices would look like. Some of the entries are wickedly twisted, such as Yehudi Menuhin's cat, a lone violin. A personal favorite of mine is Nancy Reagan's beaming kitty, smiling out from behind a stack of shiny new dinnerware.

His look at the felines of the great and neargreat is irreverent, thoughtful and often verging on the perverse, which may be why those of us who are a bit perverse take comfort in it. Celebrity Cats is quite funny. Loving cats isn't a precondition—loving good humor is.

Show to highlight new forms

The University of Idaho Art Gallery will open Sept. 10 with show entitled "New Photographics." A watercolor show by Kathy Wren will also open at that time.

The "New Photographics" show, according to gallery director Kathy Ecton, has some "pretty wild things. One of them is dogs in business suits."

The show includes works by many widely-known photographers and was compiled by Jim Shalstrand at Central Washington University in Ellensburg. The photography section of the show was funded in part by the UI Communications Department.

The paintings by Wren are

Garp "Totally Successful"

Frequently, movie adaptations of well written novels come in for major criticism for lacking faithfulness to the printed word. Movie makers have been known to create a new story on the way from Manhattan to Hollywood, and the shuffle and compromise in the motion picture industry often dilutes the original intent of both author and filmmaker. The World According to Garp cannot fall to that criticism; if anything it is too faithful to the original.

John Irving penned the lengthy novel several years ago, and it became (at 3.5 million copies) a bestseller. When George Roy Hill was signed to direct the movie version there was a lot of genuine concern about preserving the integrity of the book. Not that Hill was suspect, but anyone would have a hard time trying to get Irving onto film. It was no easy task. There are subtleties of the written word which sit perched in the clouds, occasionally peeking out, always refusing to come down into the projection booth.

And he didn't get it all on celluloid. Irving uses his language carefully; with precision and care he fashions words into chapters into books, and the transition of every nuance from paper to projector is just not possible. All the points aren't on the print side, though. There are some things Irving hinted at, but which cannot be completely seen in novel form. With Garp in living color we are able to completely visualize TS Garp and his existance. Still, Garp's genesis is on the written page, and from it all other incarnations must be judged.

Robin Williams is TS Garp. Now, depending on when you talk to him, the TS may stand for Terribly Sexy or Terribly Shy or even Terribly Sad. In all actuality, the initials don't Garp's mother, Jenny Fields was a wartime nurse. In the '40s she was working in a hospital, caring for the casualties of the war in Europe. She was a woman of purpose, one with a sense of her needs and desires far ahead of the times. One of those needs was to be a mother. Technical Sergeant Garp, a fast-sinking gunner was available to assist Jenny in her quest, and presto, little Garp. Glenn Close bears a superficial resemblance to Williams, and as Jenny she does the one thing movies can do for us that books and im-

The 15 year old Burmese refugee was discovered in a laundromat by Sex Pistols creator Malcolm McLaren. Her name is Annabella and despite her bushy mohawk, she bears an amazing Annette likeness to Funicello. Maybe Annabella will never be a Mouseketeer but she's certainly holding her own as lead singer of the British band Bow Wow Wow.

Their latest album I Want Candy carries the RCA label.

This album, like their previous See Jungle See Jungle features thundering Latin percussion with a bit of an African beat. With this "good noise" (as lead guitarist Matthew Ashman, formerly of Adam and the. The title song has a catchy beat and fun lyrics. "Baby, Oh No" follows with equal spunk-definitely pop material.

magination can't-she lets us see Jenny.

Jenny is a strong woman. Raising her son alone, she instills in him a strong sense of right and right, with a large dose of "the way things should be." One thing she misses is giving Garp her distaste for lust and its attendant circumstances. Jenny is able to make "lust" sound like the vilest form of the plague.

As Garp begins his literary career, his mother gets the urge to tell her story. And does she ever. Jenny's book, Sexual Suspect is ice on the raw nerve of society. Unwittingly Jenny becomes the messiah of a polyglot and often less than sane women's movement. Irving's view of the women's rights struggle takes a perverse twist, in that it becomes an ugly, degrading force. The beauty and strength of the movement is turned into a dark and menancing reservoir of hate and mistrust. In his direction, Hill is able to capture the vulgarity and piteousness of the novel in his enlivening of the maudlin bitches who leech onto Jenny.

Everyone wants to know why Jenny keeps them around. Fortunately, Garp is able to ask the question for us, and his mother reproaches him. These are sick women, but still deserving of compassion.

One of the women, though, is not sick. In fact, Roberta Muldoon is probably the healthiest person in the whole movie. John Lithgow, in aside what must have been strong misgivings about protraying a transsexual. He did well to leave them behind, for his Roberta Muldoon (nee Robert) is a strikingly warm, real woman. Lithgow ably mixed the right amounts of humor and sensitivity in creating the living, breathing Roberta. She is a powerful woman; there is a solid integrity in Lithgow's Roberta which makes her the philosophic pulse of the movie. It isn't that she is the most important charater, Roberta is merely the reference point from which we view the characters and actors as the World According to Garp is filled with the breath of life. One must wonder to what extent Garp is reflective of the world of John Irving. This is a world filled out by women; men are peripheral in Garp's life. Irving has been accused of misogyny in depicting the hangers-on in Jenny's life, but it looks more like he was presenting the sides of human nature which appear throughout any life. That they are all women cannot be seen any indictment or statement.

taking the part, had to throw

As a statement of our times, the World According to Garp captures certain essences of American life in the midtwentieth century. This is a time of excess; in love, hate and pain. Through the vicious brutality of the Garpian women's movement, Garp's own irrepressible sexualness and the roller coaster of emotional spasms, the World According to Garp is staggering in the force with which it exposes our culture and the orgy of gratification that is a characteristic of the where the African beat pounds harder and harder—going crazy! Then it leans back to the Latin sound a bit with "El Dicho Boss," a rhythmic instrumental which really shows off the band's talent. "(I'm a) TV Savage" is ... uh... wierd! According to a radio special, even Ashman, co-writer of the song, doesn't know what it's about.

The album ends with "King Kong" and a pleading request from Annabella, "Tell everyone the King is here!"

Overall, I Want Candy is a good album. The songs have a good beat and fun, lyrics. And Bow Wow Wow is just new wave enough for this generation. I'd give this album an 89.

CBS Sports is scheduled to televise the game against the Gamecocks on Jan. 22 from Columbia, S.C. The time will be determined at a later date. Tentative plans call for the game to be shown live on the East and West Coasts.

With the addition' of South Carolina, the Vandals face one of their best non-conference schedules in the school's history. A total of 28 games are scheduled including a season-opening home exhibition contest against Athletes in Action-Canada on Nov. 12, plus play in two tournaments-the Fresno State Classic (Nov. 26-27) and the Far West Classic (Dec. 26-29).

Fresno State, Hardin Simmons University, Loyola Marymount and Idaho comprise the four teams in the FSU Classic. The Vandals will defend their Far West Classic title by opening against the University of Portland on Dec. 26. Rounding out the Classic field are Oregon, Oregon State, Montana State, Tennessee State, Drake and Lamar.

Idaho's home schedule is also one of the best in recent history. The Vandals begin the regular portion of their play at home by hosting the University of Washington on Dec. 1 in the first of five consecutive home games. The Idaho-Washington game is followed by Washington State (Dec. 4), Eastern Washington (Dec. 7), St. Martin's College (Dec. 9) and the University of California-Irvine (Dec. 18).

Also on the schedule is a game against Midwestern State University from Wichita Falls, Texas, to be played on Dec. 20 in Richland, Wash. The game is scheduled at a time UI students are on their Christmas break and will afford fans in the Tri-Cities area a chance to watch three area players on Idaho's roster-Brian Kellerman, Kelvin Smith and Matt Haskins.

Completing the nonconference portion of the schedule is a game against Gonzaga University on Jan. 8 in Spokane. The Vandals then begin their defense of the Big Sky Conference title by opening league play against Northern Arizona in Flagstaff on Jan. 13. Idaho's first conference home game is scheduled against Weber State on Jan. 20, two days before the meeting with South Carolina.

All of Idaho's conference games, except one, will be played on Thursday and Saturday nights. The lone exception is the Vandals' first meeting with Idaho State which will be played on Tuesday, Feb. 1, in Moscow. The date was changed to accommodate the South Carolina game.

Idaho is coming off a 27-3 overall record and 13-1 league mark. The Vandals advanced to the final 16 team in the NCAA post-season tournament last season before being eliminated in the West Regionals by Oregon State. For his team's performance, Vandal head coach Don Monson was named NCAA Division 1 Coach of the Year.

Injury sidelines Seman for 4-6 weeks

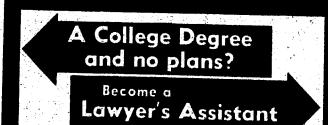

University of Idaho starting offensive guard Steve Seman sustained a broken leg in an intra-squad scrimmage last Saturday and will be lost to the Vandals for four to six weeks.

Seman's injury caused major shuffling to take place on the offensive line, where he was expected to be one of the team leaders. "Any time you lose a starter and a veteran like Steve Seman it's critical." said Idaho coach Dennis Erickson. "We'll adjust."

David Thoreson has been moved to the right guard spot and Greg Peck has been shifted from defense to offense to help the depth situation.

Seman's injury is to the fibula, a non-weight bearing bone. He will be in a cast for approximately one month.

Other injuries are taking their toll on the team as well. Reserve running back Andrew Smith, a JC transfer from Pierce Junior College in Los Angeles, suffered a severe bruise in the scrimmage and will be on crutches until Idaho opens against Washington State Sept. 11.

Freshman punter/wide receiver Darrin Magnuson, from Moscow, has been lost for an indefinite period of time after undergoing ankle surgery for a practicesustained injury.

Two freshmen offensive linemen, Maek Orthmann and Daryn Young, were injured during practices. Orthmann underwent surgery for a sprained left knee and Young sprained his left knee, but did not require surgery.

The University of Idaho is the media's pick to occupy the cellar of the upcoming football standings in the Big Sky Conference. At the annual meeting of coaches and media representatives held in Sun Valley this summer, Idaho was picked by the Big Sky coaches to finish seventh.

Sports Illustrated magazine picked Idaho to finish 5-6, in fifth place in the Big Sky.

Boise State was the pick of both polls to win the crown, with defending conference and national champion Idaho State selected second. The media picked Weber State to finish third and Nevada-Reno, fourth, while the coaches had the Wolfpack and Wildcats reversed.

Montana and Northern Arizona were predicted to finish fifth and sixth, respectively, on both polls, with the Vandals are the choice to battle Montana State for seventh in an eight-team league.

A particularly helpful advertisement from Stereocraft

Selecting a stereo.

Selecting a stereo system is more than just a matter of taste. It is the process of finding the most (quantifiable) performance for your dollar. How much sound will a system produce and how cleanly? How much of the full musical range does it reproduce?

Because we at Stereocraft spend a great deal of time listening to, and evaluating, all kinds of audio equipment, we can supply a helpful summary of what performance characteristics can be had at what price; what you will gain if you spend more; and what you will lose if it is necessary to spend less.

What your dollar buys.

With a limited budget ($300-$450), you can get a system of reasonable accuracy, but it is necessary to sacrifice response at both ends of the musical range to get a satisfactory acoustic output (loudness). A system in this price range is most appropriate in a small listening area.

With a moderate budget ($450-$650), you can get a system which provides accurate musical reproin every respect, with sufficient output for a medium-sized room. If you like music very loud and have a very large room, you. can select a different kind of. system that gives up some musical accuracy (bass response, usually) in order to get higher sound output level.

Examples.

882-7016

We have selected two systems that will offer the best possible value for your particular number of dollars. When you come in to talk to us we are confident that we can convince you of one thing: we can probably furnish you with a better music system for less money and with better service than you are likely to get elsewhere.

SYSTEM 449

We can now offer a true component stereo system for what you'd usually pay for a "component-type" system (the ones that sound like appliances instead of music).

Our $449 stereo system is built around the Boston Acoustics A-40 speakers, which sound like all the music most people every really wanted. They have genuinely amazing sound - rich, detailed, and wide-range, with bass that comes within a half-octave of the best you can do at any price.

SYSTEM 699

OPEN 9 TO 6

Our $699 system is built around a really remarkable pair of loudspeakers from Boston Acoustics. The A-70's go as far up the frequency scale as any speaker at any price and their bass equals that of far more expensive ones.

To power them properly we've chosen the widely acclaimed NAD 7020 stereo receiver with clean low-distortion performance and the ability to get all the FM and AM stations along the dial.

For getting all the music off your records and treating them gently in the process we selected the new NAD 5025 semi-automatic turntable with Signet's fine TK1ca cartridge.

The Vandals started preparing exclusively for WSU on Wednesday which meant a major shift for the defense which has seen the pass since spring football and all through fall drills.

The Vandals competed in an intra-squad game Saturday morning in the Kibbie Dome and showed tough defense against a well-equipped, but somewhat inexperienced offense.

Erickson said that the offense has improved a lot, but still needs to cut down on mental mistakes. That was the culprit Saturday as quarterbacks Ken Hobart, Sean Knudsen and Scott' Linehan were plagued by interceptions. However, the Idaho quarterbacks were going against an improved Vandal defense.

"Defensively, we have really improved," said Erickson. "That's the best our secondary has played all year. We've really come along."

Erickson said he expected the mistakes since it was a fullcontact scrimmage. The new offense isn't easy to learn and execute.

Overall, the offense scored 17 points in their 13 drives. Hobart was the quarterback that keyed two of the scoring attacks. Knudsen led Idaho to their first score when he pitched the ball to Brian Allen, who scored on a 55-yard reverse run.

Idaho's other points came on a 41 yard field goal by Tim McMonigle and a 10 yard pass from Hobart to Kerry Hickey on the 10th series.

magination can't-she lets us see Jenny.

should be." One thing she misses is giving Garp her distaste for lust and its attendant circumstances. Jenny is able to make "lust" sound like the vilest form of the plague.

As Garp begins his literary career, his mother gets the urge to tell her story. And does

she ever. Jenny's book, Sexual Suspect is ice on the raw nerve of society. Unwittingly Jenny becomes the messiah of a polyglot and often less than sane women's movement. Irving's view of the women's rights struggle takes a perverse twist, in that it becomes an ugly, degrading force. The beauty and strength of the movement is turned into a dark and menancing reservoir of hate and mistrust. In his direction, Hill is able to capture the vulgarity and piteousness of the novel in his enlivening of the maudlin bitches who leech onto Jenny.

Everyone wants to know why Jenny keeps them around. Fortunately, Garp is able to ask the question for us, and his mother reproaches him. These are sick women, but still deserving of compassion.

One of the women, though, is not sick. In fact, Roberta Muldoon is probably the healthiest person in the whole movie. John Lithgow, in taking the part, had to throw aside what must have been strong misgivings about protraying a transsexual. He did well to leave them behind, for his Roberta Muldoon (nee Robert) is a strikingly warm, real woman. Lithgow ably mixed the right amounts of humor and sensitivity in creating the living, breathing Roberta. She is a powerful woman; there is a solid integrity in Lithgow's Roberta which makes her the philosophic pulse of the movie. It isn't that she is the most important charater. Roberta is merely the reference point from which we view the characters and actors as the World According to Garp is filled with the breath of life.

One must wonder to what extent Garp is reflective of the world of John Irving. This is a world filled out by women; men are peripheral in Garp's life. Irving has been accused of misogyny in depicting the hangers-on in Jenny's life, but it looks more like he was presenting the sides of human nature which appear throughout any life. That they are all women cannot be seen indictment as any or statement.

As a statement of our times, the World According to Garp captures certain essences of American life in the midtwentieth century. This is a time of excess; in love, hate and pain. Through the vicious brutality of the Garpian women's movement, Garp's own irrepressible sexualness and the roller coaster of emotional spasms, the World According to Garp is staggering in the force with which it exposes our culture and the orgy of gratification that is a characteristic of the age.

by UI athletic director Bill Belknap.

CBS Sports is scheduled to televise the game against the Gamecocks on Jan. 22 from Columbia, S.C. The time will be determined at a later date. Tentative plans call for the game to be shown live on the East and West Coasts.

With the addition of South Carolina, the Vandals face one of their best non-conference schedules in the school's history. A total of 28 games are scheduled including a season-opening home exhibition contest against Athletes in Action-Canada on Nov. 12, plus play in two tournaments-the Fresno State Classic (Nov. 26-27) and the Far West Classic (Dec. 26-29).

Fresno State, Hardin Simmons University, Loyola Marymount and Idaho comprise the four teams in the FSU Classic. The Vandals will defend their Far West Classic title by opening against the University of Portland on Dec. 26. Rounding out the Classic field are Oregon, Oregon State, Montana State, Tennessee State, Drake and Lamar.

Idaho's home schedule is also one of the best in recent history. The Vandals begin the regular portion of their play at home by hosting the University of Washington on Dec. 1 in the first of five consecutive home games. The Idaho-Washington game is followed by Washington State (Dec. 4), Eastern Washington (Dec. 7), St. Martin's College (Dec. 9) and the University of California-Irvine (Dec. 18).

Also on the schedule is a game against Midwestern State University from Wichita Falls, Texas, to be played on Dec. 20 in Richland, Wash. The game is scheduled at a time UI students are on their Christmas break and will afford fans in the Tri-Cities area a chance to watch three area players. on Idaho's roster—Brian Kellerman, Kelvin Smith and Matt Haskins.

Completing the nonconference portion of the schedule is a game against Gonzaga University on Jan. 8 in Spokane. The Vandals then begin their defense of the Big Sky Conference title by opening league play against Northern Arizona in Flagstaff on Jan. 13. Idaho's first conference home game is scheduled against Weber State on Jan. 20, two days before the meeting with South Carolina.

All of Idaho's conference games, except one, will be played on Thursday and Saturday nights. The lone exception is the Vandals' first meeting with Idaho State which will be played on Tuesday, Feb. 1, in Moscow. The date was changed to accommodate the South Carolina game.

Idaho is coming off a 27-3 overall record and 13-1 league mark. The Vandals advanced to the final 16 team in the NCAA post-season tournament last season before being eliminated in the West Regionals by Oregon State. For his team's performance, Vandal head coach Don Monson was named NCAA Division 1 Coach of the Year.

Injury sidelines Seman for 4-6 weeks

University of Idaho starting offensive guard Steve Seman sustained a broken leg in an intra-squad scrimmage last Saturday and will be lost to the Vandals for four to six weeks.

Seman's injury caused major shuffling to take place on the offensive line, where he was expected to be one of the team leaders. "Any time you lose a starter and a veteran like Steve Seman it's critical," said Idaho coach Dennis Erickson. "We'll adjust." .

David Thoreson has been moved to the right guard spot and Greg Peck has been shifted from defense to offense to help the depth situation.

Seman's injury is to the fibula, a non-weight bearing bone. He will be in a cast for approximately one month.

Other injuries are taking their toll on the team as well. Reserve running back Andrew Smith, a JC transfer from Pierce Junior College in Los punter/wide Freshman receiver Darrin Magnuson, from Moscow, has been lost for an indefinite period of time after undergoing ankle surgery for a practicesustained injury.

UI predicted last by media, but 5-6 by SI

The University of Idaho is the media's pick to occupy the cellar of the upcoming football standings in the Big Sky Conference. At the annual meeting of coaches and media representatives held in Sun Valley this summer, Idaho was picked by the Big Sky coaches to finish seventh.

Sports Illustrated magazine picked Idaho to finish 5-6, in fifth place in the Big Sky.

Boise State was the pick of both polls to win the crown, with defending conference and national champion Idaho State selected second. The media picked Weber State to finish third and Nevada-Reno, fourth, while the coaches had the Wolfpack and Wildcats reversed.

Montana and Northern Arizona were predicted to finish fifth and sixth, respectively, on both polls, with the Vandals are the choice to battle Montana State for seventh in an eight-team league.

Chosen for pre-season honors were BSU tailback Rodney Webster and Bronco

A particularly helpful advertisement from Stereocraft

Selecting a stereo.

Selecting a stereo system is more than just a matter of taste. It is the process of finding the most (quantifiable) performance for your dollar. How much sound will a system produce and how cleanly? How much of the full musical range does it reproduce?

Because we at Stereocraft spend a great deal of time listening to, and evaluating, all kinds of audio equipment, we can supply a helpful summary of what performance characteristics can be had at what price; what you will gain if you spend more; and what you will lose if it is necessary to spend less.

What your dollar buys. With a limited budget ($300-$450), you can get a system of reasonable accuracy, but it is necessary to sacrifice response at both ends of the musical range to get a satisfactory acoustic output (loudness). A system in this price range is most appropriate in a small listening area.

With a moderate budget ($450-$650), you can get a system which provides accurate musical reproduction in every respect, with sufficient output for a medium-sized room. If you like music very loud and have a very large room, you can select a different kind of system that gives up some musical accuracy (bass response, usually) in order to get higher sound output level. Examples.

882-7016

We have selected two systems that will offer the best possible value for your particular number of dollars. When you come in to talk to us we are confident that we can convince you of one thing: we can probably furnish you with a better music system for less money and with better service than you are likely to get elsewhere.

SYSTEM 449

We can now offer a true component stereo system for what you'd usually pay for a "component-type" system (the ones that sound like appliances instead of music).

Our $449 stereo system is built around the Boston Acoustics A-40 speakers, which sound like all the music most people every really wanted. They have genuinely amazing sound – rich, detailed, and wide-range, with bass that comes within a half-octave of the best you can do at any price.

OPEN 9 TO 6

Our $699 system is built around a really remarkable pair of loudspeakers from Boston Acoustics. The A-70's go as far up the frequency scale as any speaker at any price and their bass equals that of far more expensive ones.

To power them properly we've chosen the widely acclaimed NAD 7020 stereo receiver with clean low-distortion performance and the ability to get all the FM and AM stations along the dial.

For getting all the music off your records and treating them gently in the process we selected the new NAD 5025 semi-automatic turntable with Signet's fine TK1ea cartridge.

Come in and see for yourself how true our headline really is.

With somewhat more to spend ($650-$1000), you will be able to get a system that combines completely satisfying accuracy with ample output for the largest of listening rooms. A system in this price range will include features that add to the ease of operation and which help to preserve your records.

To drive the A-40's, we have the Hitachi SR2001 stereo receiver. It makes them sing without a false note, and gets all the FM and AM stations you'll be wanting.

The record player is the Hitachi HT21 semi-automatic turntable with a Shure M70B cartridge and diamond stylus. It will use your records for the music they offer, but not abuse them in the process. Our special $449 system price leaves you a lot to buy records with.
