Candidates field questions during ASUI forum

by Carol Woolum
Staff writer

Candidates running in the ASUI election voiced their platforms and opinions at the ASUI Election Forum last Thursday night in the Wallace Complex Game Room.

Bruce Pitman, dean of student services and master of ceremonies for the event, began by explaining why the forum is held.

"This is a chance for the candidates to discuss many current issues of concern and explain critical concerns before the election," said Pitman.

Two questions were asked the presidential and vice presidential candidates, the first of which was, If elected, how would you represent the ASUI to the IACI Task Force?

Greg Cook, who is already a representative to the subcommittee, said he will make sure the students keep their voice heard. Cook's opponent, Margaret Nelson, said, "Not only do I think I should represent the students to IACI, but IACI to the students."

The second question dealt with enrollment limitations. Nelson said this is an issue that should be looked at as a last avenue. Cook said, "I don't favor anything that limits students to higher education in Idaho."

The vice presidential candidates were asked what they thought the relationship between the vice president and president should be. Mike Borden said a good relationship between these two offices is vital for a working ASUI. Scott Green said the two should stick side by side in communication and the vice president should support the president.

These two men were also asked how they would deal with senators not doing their elected jobs. Green said he would push for a reprimand of these senators. Borden said that he prefers to take care of the problem on a personal level.

"It's an ugly thing when people don't do their job. I would either handle it on the personal level or give them the rack," said Borden.

Each senatorial candidate was questioned on issues of current ASUI concern. One question asked many of the candidates was, How would you utilize student input to influence IACI? Terry McHugh said this is a very important time for senators to get student views to IACI because the task force is now gathering information.

Robin Villarreal said the students need to be more informed on the issues. Chris Veloz wanted to get the students more involved in what is going on with IACI. The Political Concerns Committee could be used to inform the students, said Tom LeClaire.

David Borrer, a voting member on IACI, said the advisory members of the task force should be used for the input from the students. Boyd Wiley said the most important thing to do is to visit the living groups and get their input.

When asked what a person's duty as a senator should be, Andy Hazzard said the official should try to perform to the best of their ability. Phil Blocksom said the official needs to be there to hear what the students are saying. Brenda Peppersack said that a senator should always listen with an open ear.

Student input and its relationship to senator's voting habits was also asked. Rob Collard said a senator follows students' lead on main issues. Jeff Kunz said that student input plays a major role in the vote.

The forum will be televised tonight at 6:30 on Channel 8.

Votes, not excuses

A lot of people like to use the excuse that by not voting in elections they are making known their dissatisfaction with the political system itself. It's time we stopped making these flimsy excuses.

Without berating the fact that apathy is a problem not confined to this campus but is a national one as well, it's obvious that a lot of people don't care about their representation in government, and that includes the ASUI. Low voter turnouts are shameful proof of that.

People have the right to be discontented with the officials they may or may not have elected during previous campaigns, but unless they take subtle masochistic pleasure in such discontent, they do have an alternative. That alternative takes the form of their right to vote.

It appears that students, especially on this campus, are generally ignorant of the power they possess as a united body. If we weren't here, there wouldn't be any here. We, as students, are the primary reason this university exists, and without us, there would be no purpose for having a University of Idaho.

At the risk of sounding radically subversive, if a majority of UI students were all disgruntled enough to pull out of this university or just decided not to register here next semester, this university would not operate. It would not be able to carry out its purpose of educating students because there wouldn't be any to educate. It seems amazingly simple. And it would be...if the students could organize.

This is not to say the Argonaut is advocating such measures, but it's good to keep such a scenario in mind the next time you begin to think of your powerlessness as a student. Instigating such a massive retreat of the student body would be extremely difficult, and there is a better way to go about it.

We have a student government, and while it hasn't been as effective as it could or should have been in recent history, with the power it has in representing the student body the potential is there.

In order for it to work effectively we don't need cynical individuals who carry around a defeatist attitude. We need to cooperate effectively in solidifying our government representation, and all that takes is for each of us to cast our votes for the candidates we perceive as most qualified.

Vote if it matters to you...but don't bitch and expect people to listen if you don't vote.

Valerie Pishl

If I had a cookie for every time my parents made me "clean up" my plate, I'd be giving Mr. Keebler some pretty stiff competition.

You just didn't leave the table in my home without "trying" everything served and then finishing up — cleaning your plate. "Think of the starving children in India," my mother would say in answer to my tantrum over spinach souffle or corned beef; I always had a real clever, original comeback for the "starving children" line which usually ran something like, "Why don't you send it over there to them, then."

As I staged a breakfast table mutiny over raisins in my oatmeal, my father calmed me with assurances that it would be waiting for me after school and remonstrated me with the old "when I was your age, your grandfather..." And sure enough there would be my oatmeal and raisins sogging in their lukewarm milk at my place on the table when I got home from school.

But my parents' repeated efforts to instill gratitude in me for my "daily bread" was not as effective as one lesson I learned when I was a senior in high school staying at a youth hostel in Cuernavaca, Mexico. As myself and the other residents sat down to our first meal at the hostel, the hostel director encouraged us to help ourselves, there was plenty for everyone, but she emphatically asked that we eat everything we take (meals were served Walton style). She went on to explain, before we had time to comment, that the man who was the hostel groundskeeper and handyman had a family of ten children; the food left over from our meals went home with the groundskeeper to feed his family. I didn't have to be reminded to clean my plate.

If you think I'm trying to make you feel guilty for living in an affluent, but often wasteful, society, you're wrong; mainly because, in spite of the old "starving children in India" line, there are far too many children in our affluent, but often wasteful, society who go to bed hungry. More than anything, I am trying to instill some gratitude, some thankfulness — at least some awareness — for the feeling of a full stomach which most of us have two to three times a day; it's a feeling which is too easy to take for granted.

It's a feeling so easy to take for granted that many of us don't think twice about tossing pizza crust, leftover popcorn, or stale crackers; such things often hit the disposal or the bag with a jaunty fling but no second thought of wasted food or starving children.

It's easy to push your chair back from the table, direct the waitress to take your plate — along with the potato which you couldn't finish and the fourth of the steak which was just a little too well-done and the roll you really didn't feel like eating.

Okay, so you don't like split pea soup, or boiled artichoke, or carob ice cream, or stuffed mushrooms; if your mother couldn't get you to eat your spinach, I'm not going to waste my time explaining the nutritious value of leafy green vegetables.

Hopefully I'm not wasting my time explaining how lucky you and I really are never having to worry about where the next meal is coming from or even if it's coming at all. And you know as well as I do it won't do any good to toss your mashed potatoes into an envelope addressed to "Starving Children of India" — or did you think you were the first kid to come back at the dinner table with that one, too?

But I must not be the first kid to think of how lucky I am to have the choice between split pea and cream of tomato, or between carob and maple nut. Because it's World Hunger Week: a week that's sponsored by various community organizations concerned with world hunger and overseen by Oxfam, an international organization whose goal for over a decade has been to increase world hunger awareness.

You'll have a legitimate chance to send your spinach souffle to those starving children by participating in the fast on Thursday — and by donating the money you saved in your food allowance to world hunger.

Valerie Pishl is a starving English major who, thanks to her parents, has acquired a taste for just about everything — but lime jello.

Letters

Of dragons and senators

Editor,
Why have ASUI senators basically kept mum on the issue of tuition? It is only now, more than halfway through the semester, that some are bringing up the name of the dreaded beast.

And how are they wiping the grime and mold from its scaly face? Why, in letters to the editor...telling us they will address this hot issue if elected ASUI president, vice-president or senator.

Well, if this snaggle-toothed beast is all that important, why was the 2.5 GPA the big headline grabber up till now? The senate wrangled and squabbled over it until they drove us all silly, right up to the day Andy Artis withdrew his bills and it was proposed that students vote on it through a referendum.

UI students barely got it together last year to fight against in-state tuition and even though a tuition bill died in the Legislature, students apparently didn't have enough oomph to prevent a cute little fee increase over the summer.

Maybe some senators just don't feel strongly against the scaly-faced dragon. Perhaps they've heard the woes of "Puff" too many times. But regardless of their views, ignoring the subject was uncalled for...and so are "playpen politics."

Argonaut sports—sexist?

Editor,
I feel the Nov. 9 issue of the Argonaut was disproportionately balanced in favor of women's athletics. For example, I have been studying column inches devoted to legitimate sports versus women's sports and believe too much attention is devoted by your sports department and sports editor to the latter.

The sports which pay for themselves are the ones that should be covered. If you don't buy that rationale, consider attendance.

Let's proportion space in 'Sidelines' and 'Sports Friday' by attendance. For example, football games average over 11,000. Counting race officials, coaches, etc., women's cross country turnout probably is less than 100.

By my calculations, a 10th-ranked football team should never have to take the back seat to cross country. No offense girls, but welcome to reality.

Let's get this inadequacy settled before hoop season starts.

Editor,
On Thursday, Nov. 18, just one week before Thanksgiving, please join thousands of Americans around the country in Oxfam America's annual Fast for a World Harvest. The money we save by not eating on that day will be donated to self-help developmental projects around the world. Last year more than $475,000 was raised. Your donations to OXFAM can be brought to the Hunger Worship Service Thursday, Nov. 18, 12:30 p.m. at St. Augustine's Catholic Center or be forwarded by the Campus Christian Center.

On a local level, we are putting boxes in all markets for canned donations to the Moscow Food Bank. As you are shopping for your Thanksgiving feasts, please be mindful of those who are not so lucky these days.

At least change the name

Editor,
This letter is in response to the recent English Proficiency Exam required of transfer students. I transferred to the University of Idaho in the spring of '82. Upon finding out about the E.P.E., I signed up for it. It seemed harmless enough. Six topics were given for the students to choose from. Then, in the privacy of their own home, they could think about their topic, draw up an outline and take it with them on the day of the test. At the test, their main thoughts were already together and all they had to worry about was structure. Doesn't sound too bad, right? However, due to a job and three other tests in my regular classes that week, I decided to wait a semester. That was my big mistake.

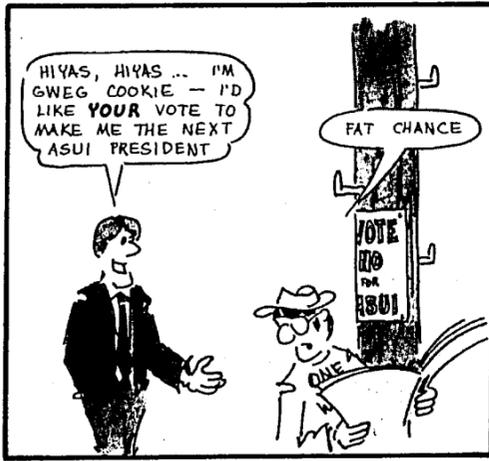

This year the format was slightly changed. When signing up, students were given an obscure poem, written by an obscure poet (I thought Liv Ullman was an actress), and told to think about it. Doesn't give you much direction, does it? On the night of the test we were frisked for offending material or illegal objects which would enable us to cheat (even though we hadn't a clue to what we were writing about) and then we were herded into a cold, harshly lit room and packed into seats like sardines. After being told that we'd better get started because we're running out of time (this was to motivate us, I suppose), they told us the rules. No talking, no smoking and, if you have to go to the bathroom, someone of authority must go with you (either they were perverts or they thought there might be a thesis taped to the back of the toilet).

Given these circumstances, I wasn't surprised it took me half an hour to get an idea on which to write. I was less surprised to discover I had failed. I have serious doubts whether Poe, Whitman, Dylan Thomas or any other great American poet could have written under those circumstances. I have serious doubts whether the English department staff could have written under those circumstances. It is hard to foster creativity in a sterile box. It is also hard to believe an "A" student in creative writing (with a 3.60 GPA) can fail an English Proficiency Exam, requiring a "C" to pass.

I would like to see a change in format for this test (after all they've changed it once), to allow for a little freedom and creativity. Not expecting that, I suggest they at least change the name from English Proficiency Exam to English Proficiency Under Adversity Exam. At least students would be better prepared mentally for this ordeal.

With flashy wide receivers and an outstanding quarterback it's tough for Shawn Jackson to be a...

Center of Attention

by Kevin Warnock
Sports editor

As it is, centers don't get a lot of notoriety. When you're moved around like a foster kid between offense and defense you get even less.

But for Idaho center Shawn Jackson, a 6-foot-2, 220-pound junior, the accolades come as a team, so it's not so bad that you never get mentioned in the scoring summary.

Originally a high school quarterback, Jackson played linebacker for two seasons during the Davitch years. He started six games as a freshman alongside Sam Merriman and finished the year with an impressive 64 tackles. The switch to his current position came last spring and, judging from the success the Vandals have enjoyed this year, it's worked out well, despite injury problems.

"I'd rather play than sit on the bench, regardless of where it is," Jackson says. "We (offensive line) may not get all the notoriety, but we are proud of what we've done and our accomplishments are our happiness."

Jackson's first game as a center was unscheduled. "I was in an all-star game for Washington high school players and they didn't have any centers so I said 'Heck, I'll play it.'"

He came to Idaho as a linebacker after judging Wichita, Kansas to be "too flat," and knowing he didn't want to wait until his junior or senior year to play for a Pac-10 school.

He credits his ability to convert to a blocking position to Idaho assistant coach Keith Gilbertson, who mentors the offensive line. "I can't say enough about him, he's a great person and a great coach. He's a real inspiration to me, he gets me going before every game."

With an early season injury to Vandal offensive captain Steve Seman, Idaho's already shallow line had even more pressure put on it. "We've had to suck it up, and the defense is hurting even more than we are," said Jackson. "Coach Gilbertson is a hard man to please. He expects excellence out of his offensive line. He has a great football mind. If I were on the scout team and not playing I'd still say the same thing about him.

Idaho head coach Dennis Erickson said that a shortage of centers in pre-season led to Jackson's transfer. "When we came here we needed a center. He wanted to play and asked to do it," said Erickson, adding that he wasn't worried about Jackson's size.

"How big is he?" asked Erickson "220 — that's big enough, he'll get bigger."

Against Washington State, his first game at the center position for Idaho, Jackson faced a 275-pound nose guard. "It's tough, you've got to counter it with great technique," he said. "Believe me, I've been knocked on my butt. But, I get a lot of help from Lance West and Dave Thorsen (guards) which makes up for a lot of insufficiencies I might have."

A native of Bainbridge Island, Washington in Puget Sound, Jackson is majoring in business marketing and plans on getting a job in the Seattle area after graduation.

Jackson does have one skill he's been practicing since the eighth grade — long snapping. "I've done it for every team I've played on. Speed is the most important thing, and accuracy. I snapped two over the punter's head as a freshman," he said.

The new coaching staff brought a new attitude and outlook on the game and everyone liked it, according to Jackson. "I felt we had a good team last year. This year, we have pulled it together."

Look for Jackson to stay put where's he at now. "He's played real well and is getting better. He's a great competitor and likes to win," Erickson said.

Look for Jackson to center in on continued Vandal success.

At the beginning of the year Idaho's offense was very successful generating lots of yards and lots of points. The last three contests, the defense has come on to keep the Vandals winners.

When the two get together the best place for an opponent to be is another league.

It happened to Northern Arizona last Saturday as the surprise package of the year in the Big Sky — the Idaho Vandals — ran their league-leading record to 5-1, 8-2 overall, with a 55-37 victory. No Idaho team has ever won nine games in a single season.

"I'm glad we don't have to play our own offense," commented linebacker Darby Lewis who was part of a third quarter vice which limited the Axer offense of quarterback Scott Lindquist and receiver Pete Mandley to minus-two yards total offense in the period. It took the visitors out of the game.

"Our defense played a lot better in the second half and they played a lot of man coverage, something you can't do against our good receivers," said Ken Hobart who passed his way into the Big Sky and Idaho record books with his best night yet.

He broke Jim McMillan's

"They're good (Idaho) but they're not going to beat Reno, not at Reno and not outside."

—Pete Mandley

eight-year old BSC mark for TD passes thrown in a career with his 66th. It went to Vic Wallace and covered nine yards, giving Idaho a 14-0 lead in the second period. Idaho's first TD went to Kurt Vestman on a seven-yard pass.

Mandley was the subject of intense preparation by the Vandal secondary, but still managed to catch 10 passes for 190 yards and a touchdown.

All-purpose back Kerry Hickey, who rushed for 98 yards on 20 carries, scored Idaho's next four TDs rushing. Coach Dennis Erickson admitted Idaho had somewhat of a letdown before halftime allowing NAU to get back into it 34-23, after the Vandals scored on their initial five possessions.

But the Vandals came back from a safety (blocked punt) and pulled away to stay 55-23 after three quarters. NAU added two late touchdowns to make the final 55-37.

Idaho now travels to Reno, Nevada for its conference finale against Nevada Reno's Wolfpack, which has had a disappointing season with only two league victories to its credit. They have however, some big non-conference wins to their credit (Fresno State, for instance) and a coach (Chris Ault) with a tradition of winning.

"After four tough games, suddenly we're at the end of the rainbow, sort to speak. It's down to one game to do the impossible," Erickson says. "They'll (UNR) play good and have super personnel. We're going to have to play our best football game of the year."

For his performance against the Lumberjacks, Hobart was named Big Sky Co-Offensive Player-of-the-Week. He is now ahead of former Vandal QB Steve Olsen for completions in a single game, most yards passing in a single season and dmoat yards passing (career). Hobart's fourth record is for most plays in one season.

Sharples 2nd at regionals

The Idaho women's cross country team's quest for a trip to the Division I Nationals was ruined last weekend at the District 7 Championships in Salt Lake City, as they fell short to some stiff competition.

The Vandals placed third in the 5,000 meter race with 104 points, behind Brigham Young's 46 and Colorado State's 78.

Idaho didn't come away empty handed, however. Junior Patsy Sharples placed second overall, thus qualifying her for the Division I Nationals in Bloomington, Indiana on November 22.

Kellerman heads AIA win

Ken Owens — the man who helped Idaho win back-to-back Big Sky Championships — returned to the Kibbie Dome Saturday night, this time in an AIA-Canada uniform. But it was his former Vandal backcourt mate that sparked the Idaho Vandals to a 78-73 exhibition victory over the Canadian Christians in front of 5,000 fans.

Senior Brian Kellerman led the Vandals with a game-high 22 points.

"Brian played hard and did prettywell," said Idaho coach Don Monson.

Men swimmers beat OSU

The Idaho men's and women's swim teams came out even last Saturday against Oregon State in Corvallis.

The men's team overpowered the Beavers, 86-39. The Vandals recored eight first place finishes, the most thus far in the early season.

The women's team came through with some national qualifying performances, but were defeated by the Beavers, 85-61. "The girls muffed the diving," said one swimmer.

Spikers end season Wed.

The Idaho women's volleyball team closed out their Mountain West Conference season last weekend with a split on the road against Boise State and Portland State. The Vandals also played Oregon in a non-conference match.

The Vandals concluded the season 7-7 in conference play, finishing in fifth place. They are 18-10 overall with one game remaining on Wednesday against Spokane Falls Community College in Memorial Gym.

PEACE CORPS

Peace Corps Volunteers are people pretty much like you. People with commitment and skills who have decided there must be more to life than just holding down a job.

The problems that our volunteers deal with both overseas and here at home aren't new. Such as the cycle of poverty that traps one generation after another because they're too busy holding on to get ahead. The debilitating effects of malnutrition and disease. Education and skills that are lacking, and the means to get them, too.

Former Volunteers will tell you that long hours and frustration come with the job, but that the satisfaction and rewards are immense. For many it has been the central event of their lives, with experiences and new perspectives that few of them expected. As one Volunteer to Africa stated: "Don't expect to change the world. The Peace Corps experience will change your world."

We are now accepting applications for several thousand two-year volunteer positions that begin in the next 12 months in 65 overseas countries. Our representatives will be pleased to discuss the opportunities with you.

Recruiters from Seattle will be on campus
November 18 and 19. Sign up for interviews

LET MY EXPERIENCE...

- ☆ Senior in Political Science & Economics
- ☆ ASUI Vice President
- ☆ Chairman, Associated Students of Idaho (UI, BSU, ISU, LCSC)
- ☆ Living Group President
- ☆ Former ASUI Senator
- Chairman, Senate Finance Committee
- Delegate, Associated Students of Idaho

...WORK FOR YOU!

Elect
ASUI President

Wednesday, November 17th

Greg Cook President

I believe that my experience in several areas of concern makes me the most qualified candidate for the job of ASUI president.

I am a senior majoring in political science and economics. For the past three years I have been actively involved in the ASUI, serving as a presidential intern, a member of an ASUI committee and as an ASUI senator. In that capacity, I served as the Finance Committee chairman and as delegate to the Associated Students of Idaho, which consists of students from BSU, ISU, LCSC and the UI. I have since been elected chairman of that group, with one of our major accomplishments being the defeat of in-state tuition in the Legislature last year.

I have established strong working relationships not only with students from other schools, but also with the UI administration, the State Board of Education and the Idaho State Legislature.

I am currently the ASUI vice president, and as such, have worked side by side with the ASUI president over the past year. I understand everything that the job entails and I have the benefit of three years experience in the ASUI to help me. I know what the issues are and I understand them.

Margaret Nelson President

Students are closely associated with many facets of the university. We are closely associated with our individual colleges, places of residence and individual organizations. The ASUI President must tap those resources outside of the ASUI to make students government effective. My work in the many areas of the university will bring those resources to the ASUI.

My experience gives me an awareness of student concerns. Having lived in the residence halls and a sorority, I am aware of the concerns of students living in both. Working with Student Advisory Services, colleges, the ASUI senate and the Alumni Association not only gives me a better link with students, it gives me a working relationship with administrators. The president must know students concerns and be able to communicate those to administrators.

Experience outside of the university gives me a link to the processes and resources of community, state and federal government. I have worked at the community level at KRPL. I have dealt with state politics as a lobbyist for PBS. At the federal level, I worked in Washington, D.C. for Senator Jim McClure. All these experiences combined with an ability to listen will bring to the ASUI new ideas from outside and most important: student input.

Mike Borden Vice president

ASUI prides itself on service to students, but the emphasis is on the recreational and entertainment needs of students. I believe ASUI can provide services to really help students and meet their needs. As vice president I intend to have new services offered, services directed at human needs of students.

ASUI can offer a housing referral service to help students find hard-to-locate apartments in Moscow. The student population is steadily growing, and housing is hard to find. ASUI can solicit vacancies from local landlords, maintain an active list of vacancies and ensure that students are aware of their rights as tenants.

In addition, ASUI can provide a part-time job referral service by providing an available pool of hard working students and soliciting local users of part-time help. Such a service would provide a central mechanism on campus where students can locate part-time work for weekends or summer.

As vice president I intend to help maintain the SUB as a student facility. Does anyone really know why students use the SUB? ASUI should find out and then orient the SUB's operations accordingly. Students contribute $300,000 annually for ASUI operations. I want to put that money to work for the students.

Scott Green Vice president

During the past year, I have served in the ASUI senate. While in office, I made a point to attack and solve major problems that concerned students. As I was the first Campus Lighting Committee chairman, I knew how strongly students felt about the inadequate lighting on campus. After the committee finished the lighting report, we followed it up with work to get more lighting on campus as quickly as possible. This semester, we have seen lights put up along Idaho Street, one of the committee's areas of highest priority. Also, wiring is being laid for lights in four areas that we expect to be operational by December.

As ASUI Senate Finance Committee chairman, I introduced legislation to televise, at low cost, senate meetings so that we could be much more accessible to off-campus students. It is not the off-campus students' duty to seek out a senator in order to find out what is going on. It is our job to reach you, the students.

As vice president, I will continue to work hard, both on campus and statewide. Let's keep proven hard work working. Vote Green.

Philip Blocksom Senator

Hi. My name is Phil Blocksom, I live at the Moscow Fire Department where I am known as "Big Bird." I am a senior in political science and history, hoping to graduate in a year-and-a-half.

I will not bore you with campaign rhetoric except to say that, if elected, I will devote my time to the needs and rights of the students with great dedication. There are a number of issues that are going to need a great deal of attention, among them are enrollment limitations, alcohol on the golf course, 2.5 GPA for participation in student government, and, most importantly, the Damoclean sword of in-state tuition. I want to hear your ideas on these issues, and will study on my own to help keep you informed.

Remember to vote, and remember the Big Bird for ASUI senate.

David Borrer
Senator

I am seeking a second term on your ASUI senate. My experience resume looks something like this:

Fall 1981 — Appointed to serve as the ASUI student delegate to the Associated Students of Idaho (ASI), the state student organization.

Spring 1982 — Appointed to senate to fill seat resigned by Bob Lang. My duties on the senate have included serving as the senate delegate to ASI, as the chairman of the senate Rules and Regulations Committee, and as member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Summer 1982 — Was asked to serve as one of two student members of the Idaho Task Force on Higher Education formed by the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry (IACI). The task force will be making a two-year comprehensive study of higher education in Idaho and then recommend changes to the Board and the Legislature.

The reason I am seeking a second term on the senate is basically a selfish one. I am a student interested in protecting my education. I have seen the quality of student representation on the state level grow immensely in the last two years. Now I'd like to see that happen here on the campus level.

Rob Collard
Senator

My name is Rob Collard and I am running for the ASUI Senate. I am currently a junior in chemical engineering.

My interest in student government started in high school where I was a senator for two years. Since then I became more aware of student problems within the university when I went on National Student Exchange to the University of Delaware. At the U of D, there is no student government. Therefore, when problems arose between the students and the administration, they were difficult to deal with, and the students usually got the shaft. I don't want this to happen at the U of I, and I will do what I can to prevent it.

As a student, I want to know what is going on at the U of I. My senator has only visited my living group once, and to top it off, he gave a very biased view of the issues. I don't feel that a senator should state his or her views until after the pros and cons of the issue have been stated and discussed.

Some students feel that I won't have the time to be a senator because of my major. I feel that because of my major, I have had to learn to use my time wisely.

Andy Hazzard
Senator

My name is Andy Hazzard, and I am seeking the position of ASUI Senator. I am currently a first semester freshman.

I consider this fact important for two reasons: the first is that because freshman classes are usually easier than more advanced level classes.

This would mean that I would have more available time to fulfill my obligations to the senate; the second reason is that because I will be here for the next three-and-a-half years, I care very much about the future of the U of I.

The university is in a very critical period. The poor economy has caused the price of education to be much higher. Managing that education is therefore of very high importance. I feel that I have the dedication and responsibility to become a very good ASUI senator given the chance. Being an elected officer is a privilege, and I feel that any elected official should live up to this by giving 150 percent, if necessary. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Jeff Kunz
Senator

Re-elect a proven problem-solver to the ASUI Senate! During his last term in the senate, Jeff Kunz acquired the experience, responsibility and ideas necessary to make the ASUI not only more responsive, but also more effective.

2.5 GPA REQUIREMENT FOR ASUI ELECTED OFFICIALS:

Kunz has repeatedly opposed this legislation on grounds that all ASUI students, regardless of GPA, should be eligible to run for ASUI office. Moreover, Kunz pushed to get a referendum on the ballot so that students, rather than the senate, could set eligibility requirements.

IN-STATE TUITION AND KUID:

Kunz introduced legislation that clearly outlines the ASUI's position on in-state tuition. Kunz spent many hours in Boise working with key legislators to defeat in-state tuition and save KUID.

ENROLLMENT LIMITATIONS:

The proposals now being considered may actually increase enrollments since students may perceive improved academic quality.

ALCOHOL ON ASUI GOLF COURSE:

Kunz favors this proposal so that the course might increase revenues and attract more usage.

Terry McHugh
Senator

Hello. My name is Terry McHugh and I am seeking a position of an ASUI senator. As students, you and I have the right to expect a quality education when coming to Moscow. A major factor concerning this expectation is a governing body which has the ability to collect the inputs of our students and put them into effect for the good of the University of Idaho.

Our governing body is the ASUI senate. In having senate members visit various living groups and represent the students' ideas and criticisms, the ASUI senate must be composed of quality individuals.

Therefore, it is vital that we have people in those senate positions who are interested in what the students think and have the ability to represent their inputs in a most effective fashion.

My interest not only involves this student representation, but also an interest in making Idaho the best possible university. This means representing the students of the University of Idaho at out state legislature; this means spending extra hours examining the improvements needed in Moscow; and this means listening and responding to what the students have to say. When voting tomorrow, please keep these necessities in mind.

"Re-elect a Proven Problem-Solver to the ASUI-Senate"

Tom LeClaire
Senator

QUALIFICATIONS: Living group officer; representative to St. Augustine's Ctr. and IFC; Election Board Chairman; vice chairman, ASUI Political Concerns Committee (working against In-State Tuition); senate aide to ASUI senators Mike Smith, Jeff Kunz and Jackie Cuddy.

INVOLVEMENT: As a senate aide, I helped write the resolution stating the official ASUI lobby position against in-state tuition and against the redefinition of tuition (to gain the same thing through the back door). Helped Senator Cuddy write the ASUI senate position opposing the "satellite" concept for Idaho's Public Broadcasting System. Helped lobby student position in Boise on in-state tuition with members of the House Education Committee as state chairman of Idaho College Republicans. Secured re-opening of hearings so that high school and BSU students could testify.

ISSUES: A quarter-of-a-million dollars is a lot of money for the ASUI. Who gets it when and how? Your senators will make the decision. If you care enough to balance your check book, you should be voting this Wednesday.

Another budget item I believe is important to the student is the placement of typewriters in the library by the ASUI.

2.5 GPA requirement: freedom of choice is the key issue here. Students should not have their option of picking a strong representative lost by a pre-drawn restrictive regulation. My GPA is above a 2.5 and I'm voting against the referendum on the ballot.

Brenda Peppersack
Senator

I am tired of seeing policies being established by the administration and the ASUI that are, in my opinion, detrimental to student rights. The only way I feel that I can effectively fight for the rights of the students is to become a senator.

For example, if the GPA requirement is enacted, over half of the student body will be denied the right to free association as guaranteed in the student bill of rights. I cannot see any more credibility to a senate that is academically elite.

With a divided student body, there can be no real effective means of fighting administrative policies that infringe on student rights, like the Tower situation and the East End Addition. I would like to see the senate incorporate ideas and concepts that would break down the barriers between off-campus and on-campus students. I don't like seeing off-campus students alienated from the university. After all, they are as much a part of this university as anyone else.

I believe that having alcohol at the golf course would make the golf course more viable and saleable, which in turn would possibly generate more funds for the university.

I do not approve of limited admissions standards because I feel everyone is entitled to higher education in Idaho. With the move toward limited enrollment, I feel experience on the senate is a good asset, but I feel a dedication to the needs and rights of the student is much more important.

Robin Villarreal
Senator

Hello, my name is Robin Villarreal. I'm running for ASUI senator. I'm running because I know I can be a worthwhile part of the ASUI student government.

My ASUI involvement includes serving on the Concert Committee and the Activities Funding Board. I am currently on the University Judicial Council, Academics Hearing Board and serving as Scott Green's senate aide.

Other campus involvement includes St. Augustines and the UI Marching Band.

I see being a senator, as my slogan states, as being a "responsible representative." Responsible meaning dependable, available, dedicated and knowledgeable about ASUI programs. We need action not reaction to such issues as fee increases and living group relocations. We need a senate that doesn't get hung up with a 2.5 GPA requirement.

Senate duties include preserving communications by going to the living groups and keeping the Argonaut well-informed. Often, the Argonaut is the only source of information the students have about the ASUI government activities.

Representation requires an open mind. Senators represent both the students to the senate and the senate to the students. Also, we need to represent the students as a credible voice to the faculty, administration and legislature.

I would appreciate your vote.

Boyd Wiley
Senator

With the financial situation of the university seemingly going from bad to worse, the most important issue facing the University of Idaho students this year, and probably for several years to come, will be the financial crisis.

There are several proposed solutions to the financial crisis. Tuition and enrollment limitations are the two alternatives which would effect students most. I am opposed to both of these proposals on the basis that they would limit the ability of high school graduates to obtain a college education.

However, if the university is forced to resort to one or the other. I would lean toward enrollment limitation because it bases admission on past performance instead of financial position.

Although I believe that the GPA of any candidate is an important aspect of why students should or should not vote for any candidate, I am opposed to the 2.5 GPA requirement on philosophical grounds. I believe that any member of the ASUI should be able to run for office and the votes should decide whether or not he or she is able to fill the needs of the office.

I have attempted to become active in the ASUI, however, as the Political Concerns Committee has not met yet, I have not had the privilege of working within the ASUI. Outside of the university, I was students body president of Caldwell High School and I am currently active with Boys' State programs as the director of the legislative branch.

Chris Veloz, a candidate for ASUI senate, was out of town last week and failed to turn in his statement to the Argonaut.

Kirk Nelson, who will appear on the ASUI ballot also a candidate for senate, has withdrawn from the election. "Due to complications in my life cycle, I am unable to run," said Nelson.

Dook and owner take campaign 'sirius'-ly

by Brian Beesley
Copy editor

He is not your ordinary ASUI senatorial candidate; he's got four legs, a wet nose and is able to catch Frisbees flawlessly in his mouth. He has no political affiliations or living group loyalties, but is extremely affectionate to strangers in public.

His name is Dook and his master and campaign financial director, Bill Malan, has organized a write-in campaign for the three-year old Springer Spaniel and Lab. Their slogan is "Write in DOOK...because every dog has his day," and they're hoping tomorrow — the date of ASUI elections — is that day.

According to Malan, Dook has what it takes to become an ASUI senator, but there would be drawbacks if he were elected. "I think Dook would make a good senator, but he probably wouldn't show up for any of the senate meetings.

"A lot of candidates say their job is mainly to listen to students," he continued. "Well, Dook's ears are about three times bigger than any of the senators. He also has twice as many legs, plus I don't think he could do any worse of a job. It would also save the students some money because he wouldn't accept any pay."

Malan and campaign director Kirk Nelson accompanied Dook as he campaigned throughout UI dormitories, with good response. Nelson said, "He's got Upham Hall solidly behind him, plus he's got a large portion of the women in the Tower on his side. The girls, especially, really went for him."

Malan reported spending about $10 on Dook's campaign, most of it for glue used in sticking up posters and flyers. Like other candidates' material, some of Dook's posters were torn down or damaged. Malan attributed this to a "certain negativism" by people who probably resented Dook running for the senate.

While some people may consider the campaign a mockery of student government and question the motives behind it, Malan said he takes it seriously, and he questions other candidates' motives for running as well.

"I think the ASUI is mostly used as something to pad peoples' resumes," he said. "It's used for their own personal motives, and while I don't mind that, I do mind it when they try to pass it off as doing students a favor. At least they should be honest about it."

By voting for Dook, Malan said that students would be sending the ASUI "a clear mandate to cut the fatheads out of the senate."

Elections Board Chairman Keely Englesby said that, while she couldn't take Dook's candidacy seriously because he was not a student on the ballot, voters could write him in if they choose to, without canceling their ballots.

"Every year we have people vote for Mickey Mouse and Kermit the Frog. They can write anybody in," said Englesby. But she said if Dook were to receive enough votes to be elected to one of six senator seats, he would be disqualified because he doesn't pay student fees.

"It doesn't show much of the student's (Malan) attitude toward the position (senator)," she added. "Everybody thinks the senate is a big joke, and that's a pretty bad attitude to take."

She said that although the election board would keep count of Dook's votes, they probably would not publicly announce the total, even if he won. However, the board would probably tell anybody who wanted to know, she said.

If elected, Dook would not accept the office, according to Malan. Dook, himself, may not particularly care one way or the other...he'd probably just as soon catch Frisbees on the Ad lawn.
