New fine for voters ruled illegal

A fine established last week by the ASUI Senate for violations of elections rules has turned out to be illegal.

The newly reformed election rules passed by the Senate last week have a section that establishes fines of up to $300 for election violations. But the fine has turned out to be illegal because the University of Idaho Student Code of Conduct authorizes fines of only up to $25.

The fine was established to penalize students who were caught voting more than once in an election. The $300 would be used to cover the cost of a new election, should one need to be called because of violations of the "one-man-one-vote" principle.

In a memo sent to the Argonaut, ASUI President Margaret Nelson said that the Senate felt that those violating the principle should be the ones paying for the new election rather than all students through their fees.

The memo also said that, as it is, the Student Code of Conduct does not allow the Senate to fine students more than $25. So for Wednesday's election, and until the Student Code of Conduct is changed, the fine for violating election rules will remain at $25. Notices at polling place will inform the students of the fine.

Vice President Scott Green also commented on this issue at last week's meeting. He said having the rule read "$300" is not illegal as long as no one is fined more than $25. He also said the election rules will be amended.

Last week, Nelson sent a memo to the Faculty Council asking them to change the fine in the Student Code of Conduct from $25 to $200. In her memo, Nelson said that in 1971, when this code of conduct was adopted, $25 may have been seen as a deterrent; however, she said, the Senate thinks this needs to be updated not only for its purposes, but for the University Judicial System.

Nelson also said in the memo that "our (ASUI) fines are imposed by the University Judicial Council, thus regulated by the code of conduct, we feel it necessary to have the ability to impose fines that would be an

NOTA referendum on election ballot

ASUI voters will find a referendum on Wednesday's general election ballot which, if passed, will call for a none-of-the-above (NOTA) box to be placed on election ballots in future ASUI elections.

The NOTA concept was introduced to University of Idaho students in a petition written by Bill Malan, a candidate for ASUI Senate. Malan attained the required number of signatures on a petition — 10 percent of the student population — to get the referendum on the ballot.

If the referendum passes, the Senate will be directed to place a "none-of-the-above" box below the list of each block of candidates on the ballot. If the NOTA box gets more votes than any candidate running, no candidate will be elected to that position. Only when a candidate receives more votes than the NOTA box, and the other contenders, will that candidate be elected.

"I didn't make this up," said Malan. "The alert and conscientious voter should realize that there is a NOTA box on the Idaho primary election ballot. There is also one on the Nevada general and primary election ballot."

Malan said he "can't stand hearing junior politicians speak nonsense about the 'I represent you' thing. They try and represent 'the people,' whoever they are. The individual is where it is at," he said.

"I think I can say this is what people think and want, and I want the Senate to pass it, but I doubt if they ever will. They will probably just table it and ignore it until it goes away," said Malan.

The referendum will work the same way the GPA referendum did in the last election. If the referendum passes, it will indicate to the ASUI Senate that the students want a NOTA box on the next ballot.

actual deterrent and not just a token fine."

The memo said that Bruce Pitman, dean of students, also feels the fines are too low to be of any use as a deterrent.

Blood drive may be altered

Competition among living groups for a traveling trophy, awarded to the group donating the most blood for the ASUI-Red Cross Blood Drive, may have become a little too intense.

At least that's the word from Blood Drive Committee Chairwoman Margo Hikida, who says her group may cease giving the trophy out because the trophy itself seems to be more important than the underlying philanthropic intention of donating blood.

"I don't know if we'll give it out or not," Hikida said. "We're not sure because of the competition aspect."

About 325 pints of blood were donated between April 5-7, almost a third of that by two living groups alone.

Tau Kappa Epsilon officially sent 50 donors, while its Greek neighbors Pi Kappa Alpha had 49. The Tekes won the trophy at the two other blood drives this year (November and February).

Hikida said the problem stems from no-shows after house members sign up for blocks of time slots.

TKE President Ken Kalthoff said a letter sent to him by Hikida "encouraged friendly competition between living groups as some people can be convinced to give blood in their living groups' name that would normally not consider the idea," according to the text of the letter.

"The competition probably has something to do with it, but this fraternity has a pretty well-recognized reputation over the years of public service projects and aid to a myriad of charities," Kalthoff said. "Whatever secures a quota for them would seem to me the best way of assuring a successful blood drive."

The quota asked of the ASUI by the Red Cross headquarters in Boise is 300 pints. "We usually have no trouble at all taking all donors. They (Red Cross) usually request 10 Type O-Negative donors, this time it was O-Positive," Hikida said.

The drive is supported by six campus service honoraries, the Moscow Red Cross and local merchants and living groups that donate cookies and beverages.

Dome lot closed to parking

University of Idaho employees and students who use the parking lot east of the Kibbie Dome are going to have to find another place to park for the next week.

According to Ed Chavez, dome manager, the parking area next to the East End Addition will be closed beginning today to prepare for the Parents' Weekend Rodeo.

The parking area will remain closed through next Tuesday, April 19.

ASUI Senate slates meeting

The ASUI Senate will meet Wednesday at 7 p.m. to discuss several financial bills and several appointments. This meeting will be held in the Chiefs Room in the SUB.

According to Vice President Scott Green, the Senate will discuss financial bills establishing an Irregular Help portion in the Activities budget, and a transfer of $200 to the Academic budget for Parent's Weekend.

Green also said several appointments will also be discussed. These appointments include Photo Bureau Director, KUOI Station Manager, Gem of the Mountains Editor and Attorney General.

Concert, art sale to benefit Amnesty

An evening of classical music and jazz will be featured Wednesday for the fourth annual benefit of the Moscow chapter of Amnesty International at 7:15 p.m. at the Moscow Hotel.

Performers will include the Dozier Reeve Trio, Dorothy Barnes, Bill Billingsly, Roger Coke, Ron Klimko, Jay Mauchley, Richard Neher, and Bill and Linda Wharton.

Tickets are $5.

In addition to the musical program, the group is sponsoring an art exhibit and sale of works by local artists from 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. The sale will be by silent auction. The exhibiting artists include Kristen Aufdenberg, Susan Congleton, Jed Davis, Mary Kirkwood, Darice Lowe, Floyd Peterson, George Roberts, Genevra Sloan, Jeanne Wood, Bill Woolston, Kathy Kearney, Claire Harris, Frank Cronk, Sandra Deutchman, Gayle Scott, Arnold Westerlund and George Wray.

Money raised will be used to continue the group's works in the release of political prisoners throughout the world. AI received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977 for its efforts on behalf of getting prisoners of conscience released from prisons. AI works through an extensive letter-writing campaign aimed at the people responsible for the imprisonments.

Special Olympics held in Dome

The regional Special Olympics were held last Saturday on the Kibbie Dome track, with approximately 100 handicapped athletes participating.

Opening the regional event, as the Rocky theme was played, the athletes paraded around the track, each displaying a banner with their team insignia. Teams participating included Grangeville, Highland, Kooskia, Lewis-Clark, Moscow, Palouse-Colfax, Pullman, Troy and Winchester.

After the parade, four athletes, Chuck Ouldhouse of Troy, Joseph Rainden of Moscow, Larry Ashby of Palouse-Colfax and Orville Fisher of Kooskia ran a small torch around the track to light the Special Olympics torch.

As the torch was lit, balloons were released and the competition began. Despite the rain and snow, the athletes participated in various running events, a softball throw, frisbee competition, standing long jump, bicycling events, and the high jump. Several also competed in a pentathlon.

The athletes now advance to state competition which will be held in Boise later this year.

The ages of the competitors range from under 10 years old to 73 years old.

This regional event is sponsored by the Delta Delta Delta sorority. Tri-Delt Service Projects Chairman Teresa Woods said that the Tri-Delts have been sponsoring this event for the past six years.

ASUI election

The choice is between those who want ASUI membership voluntary and those who don't

By Kathy Amidei and Carol Woolum
Staff writers

Editor's note: On Wednesday, all full-time University of Idaho students will be able to vote for their choices for ASUI senator. Polling places will be located around the campus, including at the SUB, the Physical Sciences Building, the UI library, the Satellite SUB, and most dormitories. Following is a look at the 12 candidates and their views on issues relating to students, including in-state tuition and some candidates' proposal to make all ASUI fees voluntary.

Chris Berg

"I think it's important for the senators to vote the way the students want. If we educate the students we should vote the way the students want," says Chris Berg, a sophomore in political science from Idaho Falls who's running for an ASUI Senate seat. "As a senator I could vote the way the students want — even if it interfered with the way I wanted to vote personally," he said.

As he sees it, the major issue of the election has become whether or not to make it non-mandatory to pay ASUI fees.

"I think that it's important that we do pay ASUI fees. I think we'd lose a lot of really good things we have here at the University of Idaho if we didn't have those fees," Berg said.

While the issue of making the ASUI a strictly voluntary organization may sound good, Berg said that it is "an issue that doesn't exist."

He likes the idea of a 2.5 grade point average requirement for ASUI senators, but said that a 2.25 would have been a little better.

"Grades don't necessarily show the intelligence of a person and it's possible for someone to have a 2.25 grade point average and still be a really good senator," he said.

He said that while the credibility of the ASUI may be low, it is not beyond repair. It isn't hard for an organization to lose credibility, Berg says. But it does take hard work to restore confidence. And, he said, he is ready to put out the effort that is needed in order to restore the students' trust in the Senate.

"I want to work with the students — not for them," he said.

Jane Freund

"I've been involved with the ASUI for about three years now, and I've seen it do a lot of positive things," said Senate candidate Jane Freund, a sophomore in computer science from Idaho Falls.

"Even though the ASUI is a good organization, it does have its bad points — things that can be improved upon. That's the main reason I'm running," she said.

There are a number of issues coming into this election which are of equal concern to the students, she said. One concern of students is that they are not being represented in the ASUI.

"I think students are getting sick and tired of not being represented by their senators," Freund said.

In-state tuition is another thing that "rears its ugly head" every so often. Freund says that she can "see the feasibility of it"; providing that it goes to improve the quality of the students' education and not "to fill a pothole outside of Bone, Idaho."

Restructuring the ASUI into a voluntary organization has also become an issue in this election.

"The basic idea of making everything voluntary is great and I'm one who believes that the more you can do on your own, that's fantastic. But I think that we are all directly affected by the ASUI, in one way or another," she says.

If the ASUI didn't make the decisions somebody else would, she said.

"It's similar to paying taxes. It's something we have to do. And we all benefit, in one way or the other from taxes," she said. As part of the United States, we pay taxes and we can vote if we want to. The ASUI is like that."

Vote Trail

Editor:

Concerning the upcoming ASUI elections, I would like to see someone in there who would establish credibility for the ASUI. This is why I support Mike Trail. He is a hard-working and responsible individual who would help build a strong program and not destroy it. I feel his experience in working with people is a very strong asset that is needed for the ASUI. This is why I think that a vote for Mike Trail would be a vote that could only improve the ASUI.

Randy Terashima

Editor:

Mike Trail will go where no man has gone before ... ASUI Senate meetings! How can an absent senator represent you? Vote Mike Trail and you won't have to worry.

Martin Trail
Julie Taylor

Editor:

In the past year I have had many opportunities to work with Mike Trail, an outstanding student who is now vying for a position on the ASUI Senate. My first such opportunity was in working with him as co-chairman for the St. Jude's Wheels for Life Bike-a-Thon last October. He proved to be reliable, energetic and totally committed.

During this and any other project he takes on, Mike shows a mature ability of handling decisions and assignments. Having been raised in Moscow, he also has a keen awareness for what is going on within the university as well as the town.

Feeling the importance of having a strong living group commitment, Mike is willing to take the initiative to get more action from the ASUI on campus. I believe he will do it, so I urge your support for Mike Trail as ASUI senator.

ASUI mudslinging

Editor:

I am writing in response to Helen Stonhill's letter, "Questions, Questions."

Upon reading such an opinionated article, or should I say, outright attack on Richard Thomas, a question came to mind. Could there be some motive behind this article other than just informing the public? Is this a classic case of political mud-slinging?

Richard's accomplishments are numerous, from helping to pass the 2.5 GPA minimum requirement for senators, to battling to keep tuition down. Richard is an active senator. He cares enough to attend Senate meetings. Some senators don't even do that. Above all, he is doing what he feels is best for the students. Students should appreciate that!

As voters, we need to look at the good and bad points of each candidate. We can't afford to take anyone else's word on this issue. So voters, don't let one biased person persuade you from voting for a candidate you might need. Look closely at the candidates and vote for who you feel will be active and do the best job for you.

Brian Thompson

something as stupid as the "NOTA" referendum. There are never enough people to do all the work that needs to be done. Good, knowledgeable workers are what is needed, not fewer people.

Jana Habiger is one of those candidates who has prepared well for the job. She knows the issues and is ready to work. Vote for her and for any others who will represent you well.

Exercise your vote — make a difference on April 13!

Cops are OK

Editor:

Concerning the editorial in the April 5 Argonaut written by Don Moniak, I have a few comments. Today's youth can take a positive view of the MPD. I think they are doing a great job in Moscow. I noticed quite a few mistakes in your editorial I would like to clear up.

First, I'm a youth and think the MPD is doing a great job, so all youths do not look down on the police.

Second, police (no matter who they are) are not always relaxed or ready for anything. No one can be.

Third, just because someone is a communist does not mean they make up a majority of people who commit thefts. Some communists abide by laws better than people who base their beliefs on a democratic government. If someone is a communist it doesn't mean they have no morals about theft or murder, that is just a narrow-minded misconception.

Fourth, do you really think police should be able to "beat the tar" out of anyone when it is not necessary? If so, I'd qualify you as one of your own "freaks."

The United States is based on a system of individual freedom. Everyone dresses different and has different morals. To accomplish your dreamland of a perfect town, we would have to make 8,000 clones of you. To tell you the truth, I would never visit the sweet moral town of Moniak and risk being beat up by your police. A final word to you: "Keep dreaming, 'We have met the enemy and he is us.'"

Kurt Jokela

I like Jana

Editor:

With the coming of spring, many good things follow here on our campus. Spring break, Moscow's endless rain showers, green grass, and thoughts of the days of summer soon to be here. Also in the springtime the eyes of many are focused on our student government. The ASUI Spring General Election will soon be here. I hope that each of you as a member of the ASUI is taking the time to look for qualified candidates. I feel that one has been found in Jana Habiger. I have known Jana for two years and I believe in her. Jana is a person with strong convictions and a desire to work for the students and within the ASUI. Please join me in providing Jana with the opportunity to work for you by voting for Jana Habiger for the ASUI Senate April 13. I think you'll be pleased with the results.

Tim Malarchick

Editor:

With the ASUI Senate elections approaching on April 13, there is one candidate that I strongly urge your support for — Jana Habiger.

Jana is a hardworking person who has been involved in campus organizations. She has shown to be a reliable and responsible person. She is someone I feel could represent the students and become a vital link between the students and the ASUI Senate. Jana will not only listen to the students' concerns, but will take action on the students' behalf.

I strongly encourage you to vote for Jana Habiger for ASUI Senate on April 13.

Everett Walker

Forget their message

Editor:

Wishing to enlighten the student body has prompted me to write this letter. I am appealing to the serious, thoughtful side of the ASUI. This upcoming Wednesday, elections will be held. A few students have chosen this time to actively express their interest in bettering our student government. A few, however, have chosen to spend their time spreading half-baked philosophies throughout the campus.

The seven candidates who have earnestly looked into the possibility of improving our student government are Richard Thomas, Jane Freund, Jana Habiger, Frank Childs, Mike Trail, Chris Berg and Andy Hazzard.

However, other candidates have ignorantly been ranting on about matters which basically are not in their hands. These select political candidates remind me of "fake intellectuals" who hang around and complain yet really have not thought about their proposed course of action. Like "Eric the Rocker" they are different to listen to, but after the fun of listening is over, the message should soon be forgotten.

One half-baked scheme is to attempt to make ASUI fees voluntary. It is absurd to believe the Board of Regents would allow this fiasco to take place. The anarchy would soon be "fixed" by the administration. It would simply take over where students formerly were. The Board of Education will not reduce the fee by $21.25, but tie the ASUI's hands and run whichever programs they see fit, as they saw fit, by themselves.

Thomas, Freund, Habiger, Childs, Trail, Berg and Hazzard would represent the students seriously and responsibly, not apathetically or obnoxiously. In the end, smart cracks shouldn't impress the students, and they don't impress either the administration or the state.

My advice to the people with their philosophical differences: You chose to be a part of the University of Idaho, knowing a student government existed. If you don't like it, you can leave.

Charles Bond

Thomas and Freund

Editor:

During this election season, I have been watching the candidates closely. Two people stand out as students who truly understand the ASUI, and honestly are serious about upgrading rather than degrading it.

Richard Thomas and Jane Freund have both had experience in the ASUI as dedicated workers. Their goals are to become part of an organization they can be proud to be members of. They stand for responsible representation rather than political games.

The ASUI, now, more than ever, needs senators who understand the impact we as students have now, but could so easily lose. I back Richard Thomas and Jane Freund, knowing that these two people will strengthen the Senate.

Richard Thomas has served on the ASUI Senate for the past year. He headed the Finance Committee. He represented all his living groups faithfully.

Jane Freund is active in anything that concerns the students. Whether it be campus lighting, Parent's Weekend, or the Election Reform Committee, she has shown herself to be an outstanding leader who gets things done.

Once again, I urge the students to support Richard Thomas and Jane Freund — students with willingness and expertise to support and represent the students of the University of Idaho.

Robin Villarreal

Freund's the one

Editor:

Once again, ASUI election time is upon us. Twelve very different candidates are vying for seven seats. However, one candidate has demonstrated the leadership ability necessary to be an effective senator.

Jane Freund has been active in ASUI activities for three years. She has worked on campus lighting and election reform. Jane has also served the ASUI Senate as an aide and parliamentarian. Her experience is not limited to the ASUI. She is the president of the Women's Intramural Association.

Jane understands the issues that are of importance to the students. She is very concerned with making their opinions heard. At a time when the seriousness of the ASUI is being questioned, Jane's dedication and ability to work hard is needed. I urge you to vote for Jane Freund for ASUI Senate.

Rob Collard

SIL no menace

Editor:

Why is it that college students get to have more government than everyone else? Most people in the U.S. only get the honor of being governed by federal, state, county and municipal governments.

College students, on the other hand, must be real hot stuff to be honored with an additional layer (two additional layers if they are in the residence hall system) of government.

Students generally have many thoughts on their minds (sex, drugs, money, homework, etc.) and are more than happy to have the burden of how to spend their money removed from their shoulders. Their eminently wise ASUI representatives know what is best for each and every one of them. Being an ASUI member is kind of like having a bigger Big Brother than every other kid on the block. It will certainly feel good going into 1984, knowing that Big Brother ASUI is looking after us.

There is a menace lurking over the horizon that threatens to throw the student out into the cold, cruel, real world where they will only have to pay Big Brother ASUI if they desire his services. Big Brother ASUI always knew what was best. Would these poor, lost souls be capable of deciding what is best all by themselves?

That menace lurking over the horizon is the Students for Individual Liberty (Chris Garrard, Susan Harter, John Keating and Bill Malan). They believe that students should have the right to decide for themselves what they want to do with their lives and their money. They are advocating voluntary ASUI membership as a means to achieving this goal.

If you value your liberty, vote for Chris Garrard, Susan Harter, John Keating and Bill Malan. If you don't value individual liberty, vote for someone else for ASUI Senate.

Chris Garrard

UI needs sports

Editor:

Your opinion column entitled "Bad perspective on athletics" was mailed to me by a student of the university. After reading your comments, I feel compelled to respond.

First of all, my testimony was presented not as the president of the University of Idaho Foundation, but as a concerned parent who has a son enrolled in the UI and a daughter who is graduating from a high school within the state of Idaho.

It is obvious that you did not adequately reasearch the subject you presented in your opinion article as you should do both professionally and ethically before you express your thoughts to the public. It is my "opinion" that you did your research from your office chair reading from the Lewiston Tribune or The Statesman of Boise. Before literally expressing in writing an opinion of this nature a reporter of professional integrity would have had the courtesy of either attending the hearings he is writing about or obtaining a copy of testimony presented. This is an extremely important time at the UI and your reporting should be done accurately, which you failed to do.

You misquoted two of my statements. Permit me to submit the correct quotes. My original quote is: "I cannot accept or even comprehend the reduction or elimination of intercollegiate athletics at our universities in the state of Idaho and particularly the University of Idaho. Athletics is a part of the total effort of the university in extending to our high school graduates a complete, well-rounded and positive exposure to the academic and real world. The athletic program involves all of the current students who wish to participate, 45,000-50,000 alumni of the University of Idaho, faculty and friends of the University of Idaho."

The other statement you said I made which you inaccurately quoted is as follows: "I believe the future financial and academic success of a university has a direct relation with the athletic programs within the university. Theoretically, this doesn't make sense but in reality it is a fact. The three universities within the state of Idaho can attest to the effect of a successful football and basketball season and the direct effect a winning record has on fund raising during and subsequent to a winning season." The fund raising I speak of, Mr. Neiwert, and as I stated to the Board of Education, is all fund raising in the university, which includes financial support of the colleges within the university, foundation projects and other university financial needs.

The commitment of The University of Idaho Foundation is to solicit and receive gifts to support student scholarships and loans, research and campus programs in order that our university attains academic excellence within each college. During fiscal year 1981-82 the Foundation's Consolidated Investment Trust earned for distribution over $1,200,000. To my knowledge these funds were used for academic purposes only. Let me assure you, the funds solicited for the foundation and the dollars received fluctuates with the winning or losing seasons of the football and basketball programs. And as I stated before, this is an unfortunate circumstance but it is reality, and, Mr. Neiwert, you'd better face reality as I believe all the faculty and friends of the university have done. For your information, the Faculty Council made their presentation to the Board of Education in support of the athletic program as it exists today. In my testimony I made note of the fact that 1.6 percent of the university budget goes towards intercollegiate athletics. When you recognize this percentage against the total budget you will see the investment is well worth the results in dollars received which do go towards academic programs within the university. The economic impact in the state of Idaho of the athletic programs is very positive towards additional sales tax dollars which are returned to the state and communities in which we all live. It seems this is helping to pay for your education as you are only funding a small portion of the true cost of your education at the University of Idaho.

It would be my pleasure to meet and visit with you and to detail the programs of the University of Idaho Foundation as they have been so stated in writing within the University in our Foundation Annual Report. I think it would be prudent for you to read this particular document. In the future, I hope you take it upon yourself to exhibit journalistic professionalism on behalf of the university and the Argonaut as compared to what you have so inappropriately presented in your article of March 22, 1983.

Jim Hawkins

university, I believe you will remember Idaho as Dr. Habib does as "a place where the skies are blue, the air is clear and friendships are formed."

ASUI is worth it

Editor:

ASUI election time stands out as one of the best systems of checks and balances we have at this university. It is a chance for present senators to reflect on their accomplishments, and for the future senators to remind them of their failures. However, perhaps more effort should be devoted to emphasizing the good the ASUI governing body does.

The most important aspect of the ASUI remains its organization and support of a lobbying function. Quality education is the focus of all lobbying activities. As students, we can never fail to keep striving for this important asset. Whether it be questioning tuition, enrollment limitations or a core curriculum, the ASUI supports representation which should be, and is, heard as a student voice to the bodies that have our education's future in their hands. The ASUI can boast of participation in ASI and on the IACI Task Force, which are dominant forces in gaining important recognition by the State Board of Education. Support for the PCC (Political Concerns Committee) is support for beneficial feedback to and from the state's government.

Other ASUI benefits include the funding of programs which give students hands-on experience in vital aspects of their future careers. These include KUOI, the Gem, the Argonaut and Reprographics. ASUI also helps provide students with concerts, tutoring, Nightline, lecture notes, a child care center, a golf course and an outdoor rental program.

Considering even these few mentioned benefits and programs, it is well worth my $21.25 to be a part of the ASUI.

Thanks for Habib

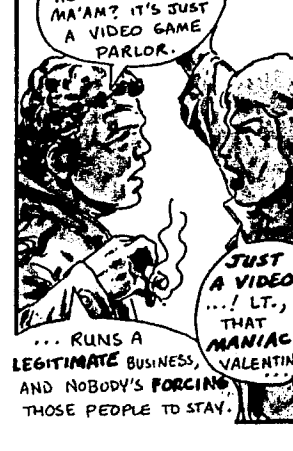

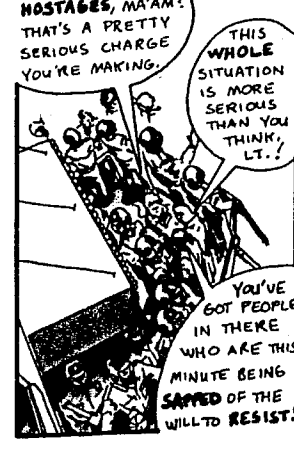

Editor:

Now that they've had some time to catch their breath, I would like to thank those responsible in organizing Ambassador Philip Habib's homecoming: Nancy Riordan, associate director of the Alumni Board, whose hard work and wrecked nerves kept things running smooth. I would also like to thank all the staff at the Alumni Office, Shirley Strom and John Mix, president and vice-president of the Alumni Association, the ladies in the President's office, Jane and Esther, and all who helped in making Silver and Gold Day spectacular.

April 7, 1983, will definitely go down in the diaries and journals of many people associated with the UI as the day their lives were touched by an Ambassador of Peace, Philip Habib. I know it will for me. April 7, 1984, 1985, 1986, and so on, will continue to be a special day as the fourth, fifth and sixth annual Silver and Gold Days are celebrated, marking the anniversary of the founding of the Alumni Association. I hope as you leave this university you will keep in your hearts the memories of the university as Philip Habib has done since 1942. As alumni of this

"I'd like to continue the student representation we have had in the past on Faculty Council, because people have done a good job in the past. I want students to get a fair shake," said Kamala Shadduck, candidate for student representative on Faculty Council.

Shadduck said that, as an ASUI Senator, she has worked with faculty and students, and realizes that Faculty Council plays an important role in determining the outcome of such issues as admission standards and the enrollment system.

"I definitely oppose a Faculty

Senate. It is a pyramid effect. If students are adequately represented, it prevents misunderstanding.

Lewis Day

Lewis Day is one of two candidates running for two vacant student representative positions on the Faculty Council.

"I think somebody is needed on Faculty Council to express a student opinion. I don't claim to speak for all students, but I think I do represent a valid portion," Day said.

Day thinks it is a shame that so few people are interested in the Faculty Council position, especially since no one is running for graduate position for Faculty Council. Students are being irresponsible by not being interested in these positions, he says.

Student input is important, he says. "I think the idea of a Faculty Senate is a dumb idea. With students on the council, this makes other members realize a viewpoint essentially different from theirs. As someone who pays fees, I feel students must have a voice in university governance," said Day.

Susan Harter

"I think by making the ASUI voluntary, you can revitalize the credibility. If you want to belong, you could just give the money you want to use and you would know where your money is going, and you would not be spending your money on things you are not interested in," said Susan Harter, a freshman in accounting from Wallace and a candidate for Senate.

Harter supports voluntary ASUI membership. She said she thinks the voluntary ASUI issue is a good idea, because a lot of students don't use all the programs and they shouldn't have to subsidize them.

When asked about in-state tuition and how she would represent the students on this issue, Harter says she doesn't think the ASUI should get involved.

"The ASUI shouldn't lobby and have one student representative represent the whole student body. Each student should take care of it themselves," she said.

Harter said she does feel something has to be done, though. She said she feels the University of Idaho students are paying "peanuts" for their tuition now, and sooner or later the tuition will go up.

Andy Hazzard

"There are two real important reasons I am running for the ASUI Senate. First, I have heard a lot of living groups say they have only seen their senator once or twice. I don't think this is right. Second, I think this is a real important time to have a Senate that is going to work with the changes the IACI (Idaho Association for Commerce and Industry) task force is going to do," said Andy Hazzard, candidate for the Senate and a freshman in political science from Boise.

Hazzard said that the Senate is a representative government for UI students, not just their ideas, and he said he believes some things can be changed.

"I also think that I can help mobilize students to pressure legislators, and not just slide by," he said.

Hazzard said that one reason the Senate is losing credibility is because its members are not getting to their living groups and are not attending the Senate meetings.

"Their job is to get in touch with you. If not it is hard to be credible. They are not in touch with the ideals of the people they represent."

When asked how he would go about representing the students on such issues as in-state tuition, for example, Hazzard said he would find out how the students feel and express the views the way they are heard.

Mike Trail

"I feel there is a lot of apathy with the students. I feel the Senate is not doing what they want, and I have the skills to make a better ASUI and help improve it," said senatorial candidate Mike Trail, a freshman in business from Moscow.

Trail believes senators are losing credibility because they don't show up for meetings. He favors more student input into Senate decisions, and says it takes more than basic common sense to make good decisions. Senators should show up for meetings, he says.

When asked about what he thinks is the biggest issue of this election, he said, "Communicate and have the senators speak to their living groups. There have been a few good senators in the past, but, for the most part, they don't go to their living groups," said Trail.

Trail said he also wants to devise a way to communicate with the off-campus students, because about 55 percent of the students live off campus. He said he wants to find out their needs.

"The two things I think are important are the living group commitment and the off campus communication, so the Senate will know what the students want," said Trail.

John Keating

"I don't think that you should have to join the ASUI if you don't want to. It should be a voluntary organization," says John Keating, a Senate candidate from Melrose, Mass., majoring in political science.

"I think they (the ASUI) represent views and do things that are good for a lot of people and reflect a lot of people's views. But I don't think that they reflect everyone's views or do things that everybody wants," he said.

"I think that there are some people out there that don't use anything that the ASUI gives them, and they don't want to pay for them," Keating said.

"The credibility (of the ASUI) is little or none. Roughly 20-25 percent of the student body, if that, votes and that is a direct implication as to what the rest of the student body thinks," he said.

By making the ASUI voluntary, Keating said that those who joined would pay fees and enjoy the benefits that ASUI could bring

Vandal men claim All-Idaho title

The University of Idaho men's and women's track teams almost made a clean sweep of the All-Idaho meet in Boise on Saturday.

The men totaled 76 points, to outscore Boise State with 63 points and Idaho State with 62 points.

The women came up five points short of winning their second straight All-Idaho title. Boise State edged over Idaho 65 to 61. Idaho State placed a distant third with 44 points.

The men's effort was filled with outstanding individual and relay performances. The Vandals recorded nine first-place finishes and five new school records.

Placing first for Idaho were the following tracksters: the 400 meter relay team of Everton Wanliss, Dave Smith, Vic Wallace and Dave Harewood, 40.66; Craig Christianson in the discus, 167 ft. 2½ in., and in the javelin, 237 ft. 11 in.; Harewood in the 400 meter dash, 47.47; Smith in the 100 meter dash, 10.60 and 200 meter dash, 21.38; Neil Crichlow in the triple jump, 52 ft. 5 in.; the 1,600 meter relay team of Richard Taylor, Dave Benton, Glenn Mitcham and Harewood, 3:13.50; and Mike Kinny in the 400 meter intermediate hurdles, 52.12.

Neil Crichlow's winning jump in the triple jump qualified for the NCAA championships and also was a new school record.

Other Vandals to have school record performances were these: Christianson in the javelin; Kinney in the 400 intermediate hurdles and in the 110 meter high hurdles at 14.33; and Harewood in the 400 meter dash.

"The meet duplicated our performance in 1981. That team went on to win the Big Sky. I hope there's a correlation."

— Mike Keller

"The biggest surprise was Harewood in the 400 meter dash and running a 46 quarter in the 1,600 meter relay," said Idaho coach Mike Keller.

Both Crichlow and Harewood's victories were coming off injuries sustained earlier in the season. However, middle distance star Leroy Robinson was not as fortunate. Keller indicated that he has a stress fracture in his leg and will be out for three weeks. Robinson will undergo X-rays today.

Rodeo club readies for its biggest event ever

By Craig Gehrke
Contributing writer

Dump trucks will begin hauling dirt into the ASUI-Kibbie Dome tonight to prepare for the University of Idaho's first indoor rodeo, an event sponsored by the UI Rodeo Club.

The first performance will be on Friday at 8 p.m. Three additional performances are scheduled, with two on Saturday at 1 p.m. and 8 p.m., and a final show Sunday at 1 p.m.. The rodeo will be part of Parents' Weekend activities.

"The first year the rodeo will be a novelty," said Casey Amy, Rodeo Club president. "People will come to see the indoor set-up. We want to put on a class performance to bring them back next year."

The Rodeo Club let the bid for construction and later removal of the indoor arena for $34,000 to Roach Construction of Genesee.

As a first step, sheets of plywood will be put on the asphalt floor of the dome. Next, sheets of fiberboard will go over the plywood in the area of the basketball court to give it extra protection. Then polyethylene sheeting will go down, followed by eight inches of soil which will form the arena's surface.

The arena will measure about 150 by 200 feet. The entire rodeo grounds, including pens and chutes, will take up a 250 X 200 ft. area.

Brad Roach said his company will have three trucks and 22 workers on the project, and that the dirt will come from a road recently cut in Moscow.

Roach said he expects to have all the dirt hauled in by 8 or 10 p.m. Wednesday. Then the crew will spend the rest of Wednesday night and all of Thursday spreading and packing the dirt.

Before each performance, Rodeo Club members will groom the surface to insure smooth and stable footing for the animals. Amy said the surface will be similar to that of an outdoor arena.

Roach Construction will also remove the dirt after the rodeo performances, using a front-end loader and the dump trucks. Roach said that the dirt will be taken to the construction site of the new Agricultural Engineering Building where it will be stockpiled until the Rodeo Club decides if it wants to save the dirt for next year's performance.

Gerald Willet, Rodeo Club advisor, said that the arena and the pens and runways will be enclosed with interlocking steel fence panels the club is renting. Such panels are made from steel pipe and are free-standing. The panels will be used to construct the arena itself, and the animal holding pens and runways. Portable loading chutes will also be used.

Ed Chavez, dome manager, said he's pleased that the rodeo is being held in the dome. Chavez sees the event as another use for the structure.

As the rodeo draws near, Amy said he's "more confident that ever" that the rodeo will be a success.

The major promotion for the event began when 3,000 flyers were distributed at the Idaho-Boise state basketball game in Boise. Posters for the event were printed, and ads will be placed with area newspapers and broadcasting stations.

Amy said the bulk of the promotion for the rodeo is being paid for by national sponsors such as Copenhagen and Skoal tobacco products, Wrangler jeans, and Miller Brewing Co.

The club has selected its first rodeo queen, Julie Cahill, and she will go to community service organizations to promote the rodeo. Cahill, an animal science and agri-business major who will graduate this spring, is from a ranch near Weiser.

Amy had no estimate of the size of the crowd that has attended previous shows. Earlier performances were at the rodeo grounds in Lewiston and at the Latah County Fairgrounds.

The club's expenses are expected to total about $60,000 and are being underwritten by the university. The rodeo must draw 15,000 spectators to cover expenses.

Amy acknowledges that the indoor rodeo is an ambitious project, but he says that all responses to the plan have been positive. If the club falls short of paying its expenses, Amy said, the debt will be one the club assumes and will pay back over the coming years.

Terry Armstrong, executive assistant to UI President Richard Gibb, is not worried about the university backing the Rodeo Club. "These kids have done an excellent job in planning," said Armstrong. "They've figured their expenses within a gnat's eyelash."

Armstrong said that the UI administration has been monitoring the club's plans. "We gave them the loan with the understanding that we'd keep track of what they're doing," he said.

Armstrong considers that backing the Rodeo Club in this venture is no different from sending a campus theater group to Coeur d'Alene or the ski team to McCall. Armstrong said that helping the campus groups is "what we're here for," and that "we do it all the time."

The executive assistant stressed that no state money is being used to fund the rodeo. If the rodeo doesn't pay its expenses, then other funds the university has access to will be used to pay the debt. Armstrong said that the university has funds which are used to help student groups.

Armstrong entertains no thoughts that the university will be left with a large debt if the rodeo is less than successful. "The Rodeo Club has been around for years and years," he said. "We believe the club has analyzed this enough to make it go."

The Rodeo Club was founded in the early 1950s, and presently has about 30 active members. Of these, Amy expects 10 to 12 to compete in the rodeo. From 150 to 175 participants are expected for the rodeo.

Amy and Armstrong both hope the rodeo will become a yearly event during Parent's Weekend. Amy hopes that the rodeo will eventually make it possible for the university to offer a scholarship to attract top rodeo athletes.

Bowlers settle for second

The University of Idaho men's bowling team returned home Sunday after placing second at the National Bowling Congress Sectional Tournament in Portland, Ore.

Idaho did not leave, however, until they put a big scare into champion Washington State. Idaho led the entire tournament until the 12th and final team game. Going into the game, UI enjoyed a five-pin advantage.

The final tally favored WSU 12,352 to 12,284.

"Sixty-eight pins is very close after it's all over. It's just a drop in the bucket," said team member Mike Fischer.

Despite coming within a whisker of a trip to nationals at St. Louis, Idaho did take home the individual trophy.

UI's Don Hollis averaged

203 for the tournament to win the title. Other Idaho bowlers making the trip were Fischer, Al Allen, Rocky Heib, Mark Franklin and Mark Hendrickson.

"WSU is fourth ranked in the nation, we aren't at all, but that's just an oversight because we haven't won any tournaments," Fischer said. "Every one we're at, they are too. We have an awful lot of seconds."

Other teams invited to the tournament from a five-state region included Oregon State, Portland State and Washington.

Idaho women's bowler Marie Nelson began play Monday in Las Vegas at the ACUI National Tournament. She was the only UI women bowler to qualify.

Netters play MWAC preview

A preview of what may be the MWAC championships in tennis was glimpsed by the Vandal women last weekend, who finished 3-2 in the Weber State Invitational and beat Boise State on the way back to Moscow.

Idaho opened with a 3-6 loss to Montana State, but came back to beat Idaho State 6-3. Idaho coach Jim Sevall sees both MSU and ISU as threats to win the 1983 title, along with the Vandals.

In other action, Idaho defeated host Weber State and the Air Force Academy, but lost to Grand Canyon College. Sunday, in Boise, Idaho walked over the Bronco women 9-0.

At Ogden, Utah, Idaho won three individual championships. Karine Wagner took the number four singles place and teamed up with Trish Smith to claim the second doubles spot.

Dee Dee Sobotta and Jane McGeachin won at third doubles.

"It was a good indication of where we'll be in the conference. It shows that it will be a real competitive and close battle between ISU, MSU and us," Sevall said. "I don't think Weber has the guns to win, but they could be a factor in who does."

Idaho, despite a 6-3 loss to MSU, has reason to be encouraged. Earlier in the year, ISU beat MSU and the Vandals handled ISU 6-3 in Ogden.

Meanwhile, the Vandal men picked up a pair of wins in Boise, 6-3 over Utah State on Friday and 5-4 over BSU on Saturday. Their season mark in duals is now 9-7.

The favorites in the Big Sky Conference this season are Nevada-Reno and Weber State, with Idaho, Northern Arizona and the Broncos right behind them.

"It was a good win over Boise State," Sevall said. "On a given day one of us (Idaho, BSU or NAU) could have a chance to upset them (WSC and UNR), but from a realistic standpoint they would have the edge. It will be difficult enough just beating Boise State again."

Against BSU, the whole match came down to third doubles where Idaho's Dave Long and Jon Brady fought off a double-match point in the second set to earn a tiebreaker. The pair ended up winning it and the match.

The Vandals had gone into doubles play down 4-2.

"I don't want to be in that situation (down 4-2) again. I was pleased that our doubles play was so strong," Sevall said.

The match with BSU lasted over eight hours after several interruptions because of rain.

went on to win the Big Sky. I hope there's a correlation," Keller said.

The women's team, led by sophomore Sherrie Crang, scored well in the distance events, but lacked vital points needed in the other areas.

Crang scored a double victory in the 5,000 meter run with a national qualifying time of 16:34.5, and in the 3,000 meter run at 10:20.22.

"She's just been training very well, and she really has improved from last year. In the 5,000, she went through the 5,000 in about the same time she did last year when she won the national championships," said women's coach, Roger Norris.

Other Vandal runners to win were: Sandy Kristjanson in the 1,500 meters, 4:43.2, and Allison Falkenberg-Ryan in the 400 meter dash, 56.44.

This weekend, the men's team will get a taste of Pac-10 competition when they travel to Pullman to face Washington State and Oregon. Both teams are highly rated in the NCAA dual meet standings. The women's team will be in California for the California-Davis Invitational.

Golfers hope consistency returns by this weekend

The Idaho men's golf team travels to Eugene, Ore., this weekend to meet the finest collegiate competition in the Pacific Northwest on three separate courses.

Idaho will play 72 holes in all.

So far this spring, Idaho has been up and down in its performance.

After tying for first place at the Columbia Basin Community College Invitational, the Vandals fell to fifth place in an eight-team field at the Washington State Invitational played at Lewiston.

"The first week we played real well, the next week real poor, and Lewiston is the course we play in the winter. We should have done better," said Idaho coach Kim Kirkland.

Idaho has played one other tourney this spring, finishing second out of eight teams at the Whitman Invitational in Walla Walla, Wash.

Kirkland says this weekend's competition will be stiff, but valuable.

"We'll be going against the best in the Northwest so it will be a tough tournament for us. There will be a couple of nationally ranked teams there," he said. "It will be good experience on difficult courses. We'll play four rounds on three courses in and around Eugene."

them. They would have an interest in saying what happens; they would care.

Keating does not favor in-state tuition. He says, "It's great that there is not in-state tuition. I think it's something that is very difficult for a state to preserve at today's high cost of education," he said.

Frank Childs

"The students' views are the most important thing," said Frank Childs, a junior in mechanical engineering from Idaho Falls who is running for senator. "It's they who are going to be affected by decisions made in the student government. So they should have their input on it."

There are a number of major issues in this election, one of which is in-state tuition, he said. The shortage of funds available for education has him worried about the quality of teaching, because UI faculty are among the poorest paid in the nation, he said.

"I think that there needs to be some research into getting more funds," he said.

Where there is a shortage of funds, there just isn't enough faculty to teach more students, he said. Consequently, restrictions limiting enrollment to those most deserving may be seen.

As far as making the ASUI voluntary, "there's just no way of enforcing it," Childs said. The individual student fee of $21.25 is used to finance various programs on campus. It's difficult to keep track of where the money is going, since the money is so widely distributed. If a student wanted his fees to go towards a certain program, Childs said, it would be difficult to arrange.

Chris Garrard

"I'm perturbed at having to pay for something that I feel doesn't represent me," said Chris Garrard in giving his reasons for running for senator. Garrard is a junior in mechanical engineering from Boise.

"I would like to see the ASUI be more of a representative body than a governing body," he said. "And the only way to do this is by making it strictly voluntary."

For example, the ASUI spent $2,500 on a child-care center and Garrard asks why he should have to pay for that service. He asks that he "just have the freedom of choice restored to me."

The ASUI has the potential to be a good organization with a lot of good programs, he says. But there will always be a few who don't feel that they receive their money's worth — and they shouldn't have to pay, he said.

The major reason that the ASUI lacks credibility goes back to his reasoning behind making the ASUI a voluntary system.

"The only reason people complain is because they are forced to pay and don't think they are getting their money's worth," he said. By making it voluntary, students could "vote their sentiment with their pocketbook," says Garrard.

With regards to in-state tuition, he says, "The prime beneficiary of this education is me and I don't think that I have the right to ask the Idaho taxpayer to help pay my way."

Richard Thomas

"I am running for the ASUI Senate because I understand how the Senate works and look forward to helping ASUI fulfill its potential," said Richard Thomas, the only senatorial candidate seeking a second term of office. Thomas is a senior in forest products business management from Moscow.

Thomas said he wants to help restore the credibility of the Senate by being a senator who does his job. He says a good senator should spend the time necessary to do a good job and he said he would try and impress upon the other senators to do the same.

"The senators should project themselves as being responsible and competent representatives of students and they should help our business operate as efficiently as possible. They should also make sure all contacts with the president, administration and legislators are done in a responsible constructive manner," said Thomas.

He said the senators need to take the job seriously and realize how important it is to contribute and come to the meetings on time. He stressed the importance of doing Senate homework so they can be prepared and aware of issues. He also favors getting input from the living groups.

Bill Malan

"I would like to express certain ideas on student government. I feel in the past that people and candidates tinker with the Senate without questioning the basic premise of the Senate and how it affects the students," said Senate candidate Bill Malan, a senior in political science from Moscow.

Malan is one of four Students for Individual Liberty, who are running on the voluntary ASUI membership issue.

"The whole problem with the system is they start programs, have the budget, but can only increase but not cut back. This is democratic inertia. That is why I speak about a voluntary system. I believe I claim what the students' desire," said Malan.

When asked about credibility, Malan asked, "What is credibility? Do you represent the students or allow a select group to administer the program? You shouldn't force people in to a club."

He also said that he doesn't like the way the ASUI lobbies.

"They consistently lobby against or for things I don't agree with. How can you represent a group as diverse as the University of Idaho students? It is all a big fallacy. How can you represent 8,000 or 9,000 students?" he asked.

Jana Habiger

"Students need to know what is going on on campus with the ASUI. Senators need to talk to students and see what they want. You need to talk and work with your living groups to see what they feel about issues," said Jana Habiger, a sophomore in agricultural economics from Kuna.

Senate because she said she believes she can help make the ASUI a more credible institution at the UI, and she wants to express her opinions in a constructive way.

When asked about in-state tuition, Habiger said she would rather it not be enforced at the UI, but said she would take a long, hard look at the issue.

"I would represent the students on this issue by going to the legislators and speaking on it. I would also encourage students to write to legislators if they don't want in-state tuition. The student's voice needs to be heard," she said.

Habiger said she feels important issues in this elections are the NOTA referendum and voluntary ASUI membership. She does not favor either of these.

John Edwards

"The main reason I'm running is because I just spent 12 weeks on internship and saw the non-communication of this university and the people who set the policies. I have seen non-effective and ineffective lobbying. I want to work to improve communication, and I believe I can with my thorough knowledge of the legislative system," said John Edwards, a junior in mechanical engineering from Marsing, while explaining why he is running for the ASUI Senate.

He said he feels the most important issue in this election is the lack of communication. "I think the ASUI can work as an organized body when taking their views to the administration and the legislators. I think the ASUI tends to show the administration as the 'bad guys.' There is nothing you can do about the administration," he said.

Edwards said he thinks the Senate spends too much time on petty issues. He said it spent roughly three semesters on the 2.5 GPA issue. "The students are apathetic. I think we need to start gearing ourselves toward the legislative part of things," he said.

When commenting on the in-state tuition issue, Edwards said he feels the students don't want it, but if they get it, we should get the same percentage of the money as we do now.
