Palouse prancings keep cops hopping

By Chris Pakkala

On a recent Saturday night, Moscow Police Officer Becky Hogan began her shift at 7 p.m. and before her shift ended at 3 a.m., Hogan had answered a "blood call," investigated a prowler report, dealt with a barroom brawl, ended a disturbance at a dorm party, helped a woman who was locked out of her car and answered a burglar alarm at the Palouse Empire Mall.

Hogan started her shift by taking blood to the state line in answer to a "blood call" from Memorial Hospital in Pullman, which needed a certain type of blood that Moscow's Gritman Hospital had.

Then she investigated a report from an 11-year-old babysitter who said she heard a prowler. The girl gave the wrong address, which led Hogan to the wrong side of town. When she did finally get to the house, she found that it was a false alarm.

At 10:23 p.m., Hogan got a call from the dispatcher. "Contact Bill at the Capricorn in reference to a dispute between two subjects; one is in the (manager's) office, the other is in the bar somewhere." The dispatcher also contacted another officer to assist Hogan.

Hogan sped to bar and entered the smoky, crowded foyer. A man was trying to calm an irate friend who was involved in the dispute. Apparently this man had the lenses of his glasses knocked out by the man in the office. The glasses were "brand new and cost about $200 and that asshole is going to pay for them," he said.

The man eventually calmed down enough to fill out a complaint. Hogan entered the manager's office. The inebriated man was slumped on the chair and the weary-looking manager sat behind his desk. Officer Hogan asked the man where he was from and where he lived at that time. He said he lived with his mother and an attempt was made to contact her. The man was arrested on a charge of battery. He could be released if he came up with a $50 bond.

"It was a citizen's arrest," Hogan said. "He was arrested because the other man signed a complaint and there were enough witnesses." She said she could not have made the arrest herself because she did not see the action.

Hogan, 28, has been with the Moscow Police for seven years and is the mother of a six-month old baby. "I would like to work in a big city, but right now I think this is the best place for me because my first responsibility is to my family," she said.

Hogan said that being a police officer is a lot of fun. See NIGHT LIGHTS, page 6

Architect to speak at UI, WSU

Marco Frascari, a distinguished architect, will visit the Palouse this week as the first speaker in a joint UI-Washington State University program.

Frascari will present a lecture Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium at WSU. The free presentation is titled, "Technology Mirror of Architecture — the Work of Carlo Scarpa."

On Friday, Frascari will hold a seminar on technology and architecture on the UI campus in the College of Art and Architecture library from 10 a.m. to noon. He will be available for comments and critiques following the seminar.

Frascari was born in Italy and earned a Doctore of Archittura in 1969. In addition to serving as an architect in the United States, he is an assistant professor and assistant director of doctoral programs at the University of Pennsylvania. He earned his doctorate in 1981 from Pennsylvania.

Frascari has published numerous papers and publications and his work has been exhibited worldwide in several famous galleries.

Council to study admissions

A review of the report from the Statewide Committee on Admission and Retention Standards for Higher Education will be the principal matter on the agenda today at the Faculty Council meeting in Brink Hall faculty lounge at 3:30 p.m.

The council will also consider whether part-time faculty members should be allowed to vote in faculty meetings.

The date on which fall semester grades should be filed with the registrar will also be discussed.

College bowl contest Friday

Trivia enthusiasts at the UI are brushing up on their collected bits and pieces of information in preparation for annual campus College Bowl intra-murals.

The competition will be at 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 30, in the SUB.

Members of the winning team will automatically be on the UI College Bowl varsity team. Four other members will be chosen from among the competitors, said Judy Wallins, coordinator of student development programs.

Wallins said the members of the varsity team will spend two months in training before going to compete in the western regional contest.

There is a $10 fee for each team registering to compete.

Blaze guts bird barn

By Carolyn Beasley

The UI kept Moscow firefighters on the go recently with a blaze in the poultry barn last Friday and a false alarm at the Alpha Chi Omega sorority Monday afternoon.

The poultry barn fire last Friday may have been caused by a broken high pressure oil line, said Fire Chief Ralph McAllister.

A break in the line would have caused oil to shoot up on the exhaust system (a pipe-like muffler), according to McAllister.

The barn was being used by the Agricultural Engineering College for a long-term engine test on alternative fuels, said Professor of Agricultural Engineering Chuck Peterson.

"When we got there, we found out there were 800 gallons of diesel fuel outside, but they were safe," McAllister said.

"The fire had a good start, but because it was an aluminum building it didn't take long to stop melting," he said.

"There isn't a dollar value yet on the damage," Peterson said. "My guess is about $10,000 to $12,000."

Only one test stand was damaged. There is a partition in the building, and most of the fire was on the other side, where the tests were not taking place.

The testing is temporarily at a halt, though, he said. The computer system appears to be in a fairly good condition, but it will have to be examined. However, some test data was lost.

One student, Pete Mora, was working on a master's degree project in the facility, Peterson said. Although the project would have been completed in two weeks, it will now be set back about three weeks.

"In my opinion the building will have to be knocked down and rebuilt," said Carol Grupp, risk management officer.

RHA competition attracts GDI voters

By Laura Hubbard

A contest designed to improve turnout for the Nov. 14 ASUI elections encouraged partisan voting, according to some ASUI senators.

In an election-day meeting, senators said that the contest, sponsored by the Residence Halls Association (RHA), spurred students to vote for candidates based on whether they live in a dormitory or a Greek house.

Five students from dorms and two from fraternities or sororities won senate seats in the election. Turnout was up — 32 percent compared to 20 percent last fall.

RHA offered $60 to the hall with the largest percentage voter turnout and $30 to the second place finisher. The group, comprised of the presidents and vice presidents of the 22 halls, obtained the money from vending machine receipts in the dorms and from other resources.

Two women's halls won the money. McCoy took first place with a 91.7 percent voter turnout and Tower 10 took second with a turnout of 90.5 percent.

According to a voter survey, 32 percent of the Greek community and 52 percent of the dorm community turned out.

Senators said some dorm candidates put up posters telling students to vote GDI (a term referring to dorm residents) and said this and the contest encouraged block voting.

ASUI Vice President Boyd Wiley said it turned the election into an "us versus them" campaign.

"I'm not sure it's the best way to get people out to vote," he said. "I do think, however, that we are finally getting some response from that side of campus."

"Hopefully this won't snowball and we won't have a GDI slate and a Greek slate and an off-campus slate."

Sen. Dean Boston said he hoped such posters would be discouraged in the future.

"I understand that there are a few people in the Greek houses that do not care for it, and — me being a GDI — I do not care for it," he said.

Sen. Brian Merz, who is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, said people running on the GDI ticket entered the fraternity around 3 a.m. or 4 a.m. and put up the posters.

"The guys in our house are really mad, and they're going to write some letters to the Arg, so you'll see more," he said.

"It's a shame what's happening between the Greeks and the independents because we all live here on campus and this is our major concern — we're all students," Jana Habiger said.

"I think it's really, really wrong that the RHA is paying people to vote. I just think that's awful."

"I think it's really, really wrong that the RHA is paying people to vote."

Jana Habiger

Jane Freund, who won the presidential seat in the election, said one student told her the senate should stop the contest. However, she added that the senate has no power over the RHA.

"We can pass a resolution and say, 'Golly gee, guys, don't do that,' but they can do what they want," she said.

Outgoing ASUI President Tom LeClaire said the contest might have been handled differently. For example, he said students who voted could have had their hands stamped so they could have a free beer somewhere downtown.

"I like things that bring turnout. But what I saw was something happen on one side of campus that didn't happen on another," he said.

He added that the senate may try to charter such organizations so it can review such policies in the future.

However, Jim Bauer, coordinator of residence halls programs, said he thought the contest was democratic and that saying it encouraged block voting was insulting to the GDIs' intelligence.

"We wouldn't be independents if that were the case," he said.

He called dorm residents a powerful force and said their involvement on campus scares some people.

He said he will stand by RHA contests as long as they are legal and don't violate the student code of conduct or housing contract.

Independents are like a minority group trying to break out of its place, according to

Bauer. "We're not doing anything but standing up for the rights that we deserve."

GDIs will also be more involved in organizations such as the Blue Key Service Honorary and others. "Wait until we start going after those things if you want to see some people pissed off," he said.

RHA President Scott MacKinnon said the organization sponsored the contest because of past low turnout among independents. "Why not use RHA? There's nothing wrong at all. It kind of falls in with the role of RHA," he said.

He said the contest gives candidates incentive to go among the living groups and campaign. "It kind of separates the men from the boys."

RHA does not plan to hold the contest again, he said; the senate must keep up interest. He said the senate hasn't deserved voter attention this far and will have to patch up some hard feelings against it.

"They've got to turn around basically. I kind of think of it as a Band-aid for the senate," he said. "It's been a Greek-dominated senate up until now, and look where they're at."

Time's almost up!

This Friday, the 1984-85 UI College Bowl team will be selected.

Last year's UI squad captured regional and national awards, and got to represent the university across the US.

Because the team disbanded, UI College Bowl is actively recruiting new players. An eight-person team will be chosen Friday.

You don't want to miss out on all the fun!

If you have played "Trivial Pursuit" or just enjoy academic stimulation, you could win a spot on the team!

College Bowl is the Varsity Sport of the Mind!

If you need help putting a team together, or want to register your four-person team for Friday's competition, stop by the College Bowl office in the Learning Resource Center (just down the hill from the Satellite SUB), or call 885-6307.

Opinion

Voters shouldn't get paid

Student interest in the ASUI has always been lackadaisical at best. This apathy is routinely conveyed when students are asked to cast their ballots for ASUI officers.

Historically, the number of students not voting has made a louder statement about student government than the small handful of students expressing their views in the voting booth.

However, an interesting thing happened in the recent election. Voter turnout dramatically increased to 32 percent, a 12 percent jump over last year's 20 percent turnout.

But statistics can be deceiving. Unfortunately, the surge in voter turnout doesn't reflect an increased interest in student government.

In a letter in today's issue, Scott MacKinnon, the president of the Residence Halls Association (RHA), incorrectly claims the dormies turned out in record numbers because "truly a great amount of interest in the ASUI government resides in this educated group of students."

MacKinnon failed to mention the RHA offered $60 to the hall with the largest percentage of voters. If such an overwhelming interest in the ASUI government exists within the residence halls, dorm voters shouldn't have to be lured to the polls by a $60 door prize.

While the RHA was perfectly justified in sponsoring the contest, it has created several negative drawbacks. Although it's hard to knock any plan which increases voter turnout, the divisiveness the RHA contest has created between the dorms and the Greeks is unnecessary.

It seems the residence halls view the senate as Greek-dominated. And although the senate is often criticized for its meaningless bickering, even the ASUI has managed to rise above the childish dorm v. Greek rivalry.

But unfortunately, the events of this recent election open the door for GDI and Greek political tickets. Not only would this fragmentation abolish equal representation on the senate for all students, it would slaughter any credibility the ASUI has managed to earn.

It is true the contest increased overall voter turnout, and the RHA should be commended for showing an interest in the ASUI election. However, the RHA should have enough courage to admit the contest, rather than sparking "a great amount of interest in the ASUI," encouraged record numbers of GDIs to cast ballots.

It would add credibility to MacKinnon's comments if the two winning halls — McCoy and the Tower-10th Floor refused to accept their $60 and $30 first and second place checks.

If these halls were sincerely motivated by "a great amount of interest in the ASUI," they shouldn't accept money for casting their ballots.

ASUI election

RHA prez pleased with turnout

Editor:

As president of the Residence Halls Association (RHA), I wish to sincerely extend my congratulations to all newly-elected officers of the ASUI Senate. Their elected positions are the result of hard work, endless hours of campaigning, education of the issues, a strong determination to succeed and the ability to lead a winning campaign.

I would especially like to congratulate the truly outstanding turnout by a group that, before this year, stood in "second place" on the "most active in school activities" list — the GDIs!

Reports received from the senate offices indicate over a 50 percent turnout from the dorm system GDIs alone! This figure is three to four times the usual participation number by the dormies for senate elections. Truly, a great amount of interest in ASUI government resides in this educated group of students.

Earlier this week some members of the ASUI Senate expressed a so-called "concern" over a possible GDI "ticket-vote" that would supposedly elect every GDI candidate to senate positions. I can understand their "concern" — it would indeed be hard to swallow a GDI sweep in a Greek-dominated senate.

But analysis of GDI voting indicates that no pattern exists regarding support for GDI or Greek candidates. The result yielded a truly democratic ASUI election.

I would like to wish Jane Freund, Mike Trail, Larisa DeKlotz, Kelli Kast, Richard Kuck, Keli Patton, Larry Seid and Scott Speelman the best in their future with the senate.

Scott A. MacKinnon
RHA President

'Arg's' real heros deserve thank yous

Editor:

Most of the dust has now settled around the great Argonaut controversy this semester (I hope). However, there is one oversight that I feel should be corrected.

When thanks were passed out to the substitute staff, a couple of names were conspicuous by their absence. Eb Gaines pitched in with some long hours toward the end of the ordeal and would have stayed on if needed.

One of the real heroes was John Hecht. From what I understand he brought a needed dose of experience and stability to the Argh. Regardless of how you viewed the quality of the those issues, the bottom line is that the paper came out twice a week.

There are probably some others that deserve credit than I am unaware of. To those, Eb and John — thanks.

Bruce obeys the word of God

Editor:

An open letter to Anne Allen:

I can tell you what happened in Bruce's life to make him think the way he does. He has accepted Jesus Christ into his life as his personal Lord and Savior. Bruce is obeying the Word of God and standing up for righteousness, and if that bums people out 99 percent of the time, then maybe they ought to check out what the Bible says about homosexuality, abortion, divorce, humanists and feminists.

If some people are so blind and ignorant to the Word of God, then isn't Bruce doing us a favor by revealing Biblical truths in his column? Hosea 4:6 says, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." Yes, Bruce may be denounced for his beliefs, but the Bible clearly states in 1 Peter 3:14, "But even if you should suffer for the sake of righteousness, you are blessed. And do not fear their intimidation, and do not be troubled."

Also in the same book 4:14, "If you are reviled for the name of Christ, you are blessed, because the Spirit of Glory and of God rests upon you." Doesn't that speak something to you about Bruce?

I have to agree with you on one point, and that is caring for others is an important aspect of being a Christian, but there isn't just love and compassion. There is justice. Bruce is trying to reveal some of that to us at the UI.

Anne, have you ever read the Bible? I challenge you to read it and not just read the parts that suit your lifestyle, but read the convicting parts also, and ask the Lord what it all means. James 4:2 says, "Ye have not because ye ask not."

officer can be hard on the officer and the family. "Actually with this shift I get to see my daughter more, I just don't get to sleep!" Hogan said. "My husband worries about me and makes me wear a bullet-proof vest, but every husband or wife of a police officer is encouraged to ride with their spouse because it's better than going home and trying to tell them what goes on — but they usually don't let them ride past 10 p.m."

At 11:05 p.m. the dispatcher told Hogan: "In the Baskin-Robbins parking lot, keys are locked in a blue Ford station wagon."

While an embarrassed Baskin-Robbins employee and her friend waited, Officer Hogan attempted to open the door, using a tool called a Slim Jim. She tried both doors with no success and then tried a coat hanger, also with no luck. Hogan headed back toward the police station to get another Slim Jim, but she found another in the car. This one worked and the grateful girls drove home.

Driving around the UI campus, Officer Hogan told this reporter about the training she went through to become a police officer. "I went to a police academy in Pocatello. To receive a certificate from it you had to pass a two-hour written test which covered questions on criminal and case laws-like Miranda and that type of thing," Hogan said. "You also have to pass physical tests, of course."

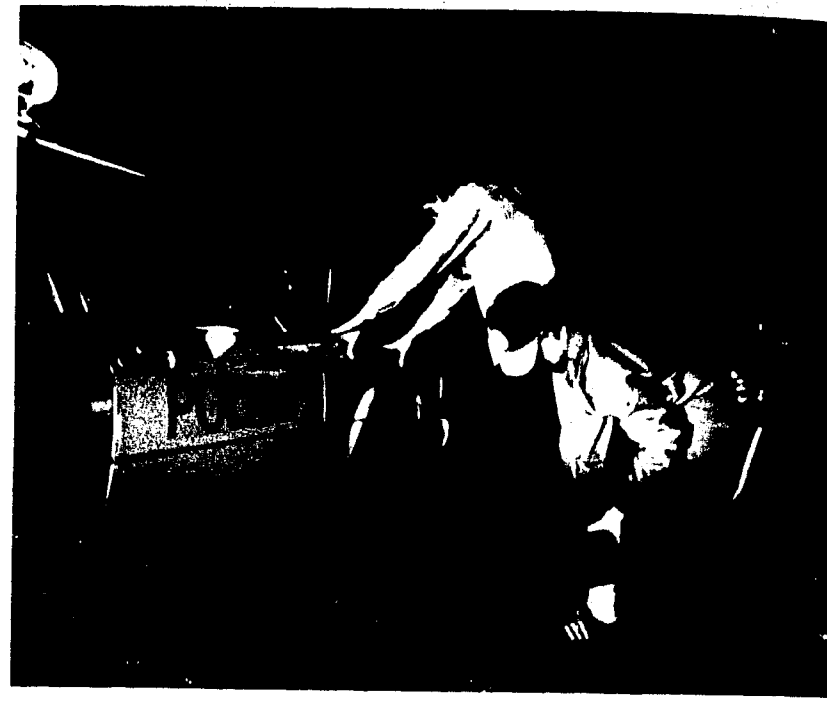

Around 11:30 p.m. Hogan arrived at the Gault party room, responding to a call from John Dirks, resident area coordinator. Dirks was having trouble with two uninvited male guests. He said they were causing trouble and would not leave. When questioned by Hogan and other officers they said they had tickets and weren't causing any problem. However, because the police had received a complaint and the two were not actually invited, the officers asked them to leave.

Hogan said the officers could have checked all of the partygoers to see if there were any underage drinkers. "We have the right to ask them for their i.d. even if we just suspect that they are underage. We probably wouldn't take them in and lock them up; we would probably treat it like a traffic ticket — write them up and call their parents."

Hogan said that the fraternities, sororities and dorms have a rule against minors drinking at their parties.

An alcohol-related problem is loud parties. "We have had a few calls from people complaining See NIGHT LIGHTS, page 9

UI Marching Band annoys BSU officials

Football players weren't the only ones battling at the UI-Boise State University football game Nov. 17 in Boise's Bronco Stadium. According to UI Marching Band Director Dan Bukvich, band members had their share of unfriendly jolts.

The band's trouble began several months ago, when BSU threatened to charge UI marching band members to attend the Boise game.

"Originally, they were going to make us pay to get into the game," Bukvich said, "but we got that all straightened out a couple of months ago."

The UI had to give BSU 180 free tickets to next year's UI-BSU game at the UI in exchange for the UI band's getting in free to this year's game, he said.

But money squabbles were just part of the difficulties the band faced while in Boise. Bukvich said he was disappointed but not surprised that the UI band was not permitted to march during halftime ceremonies.

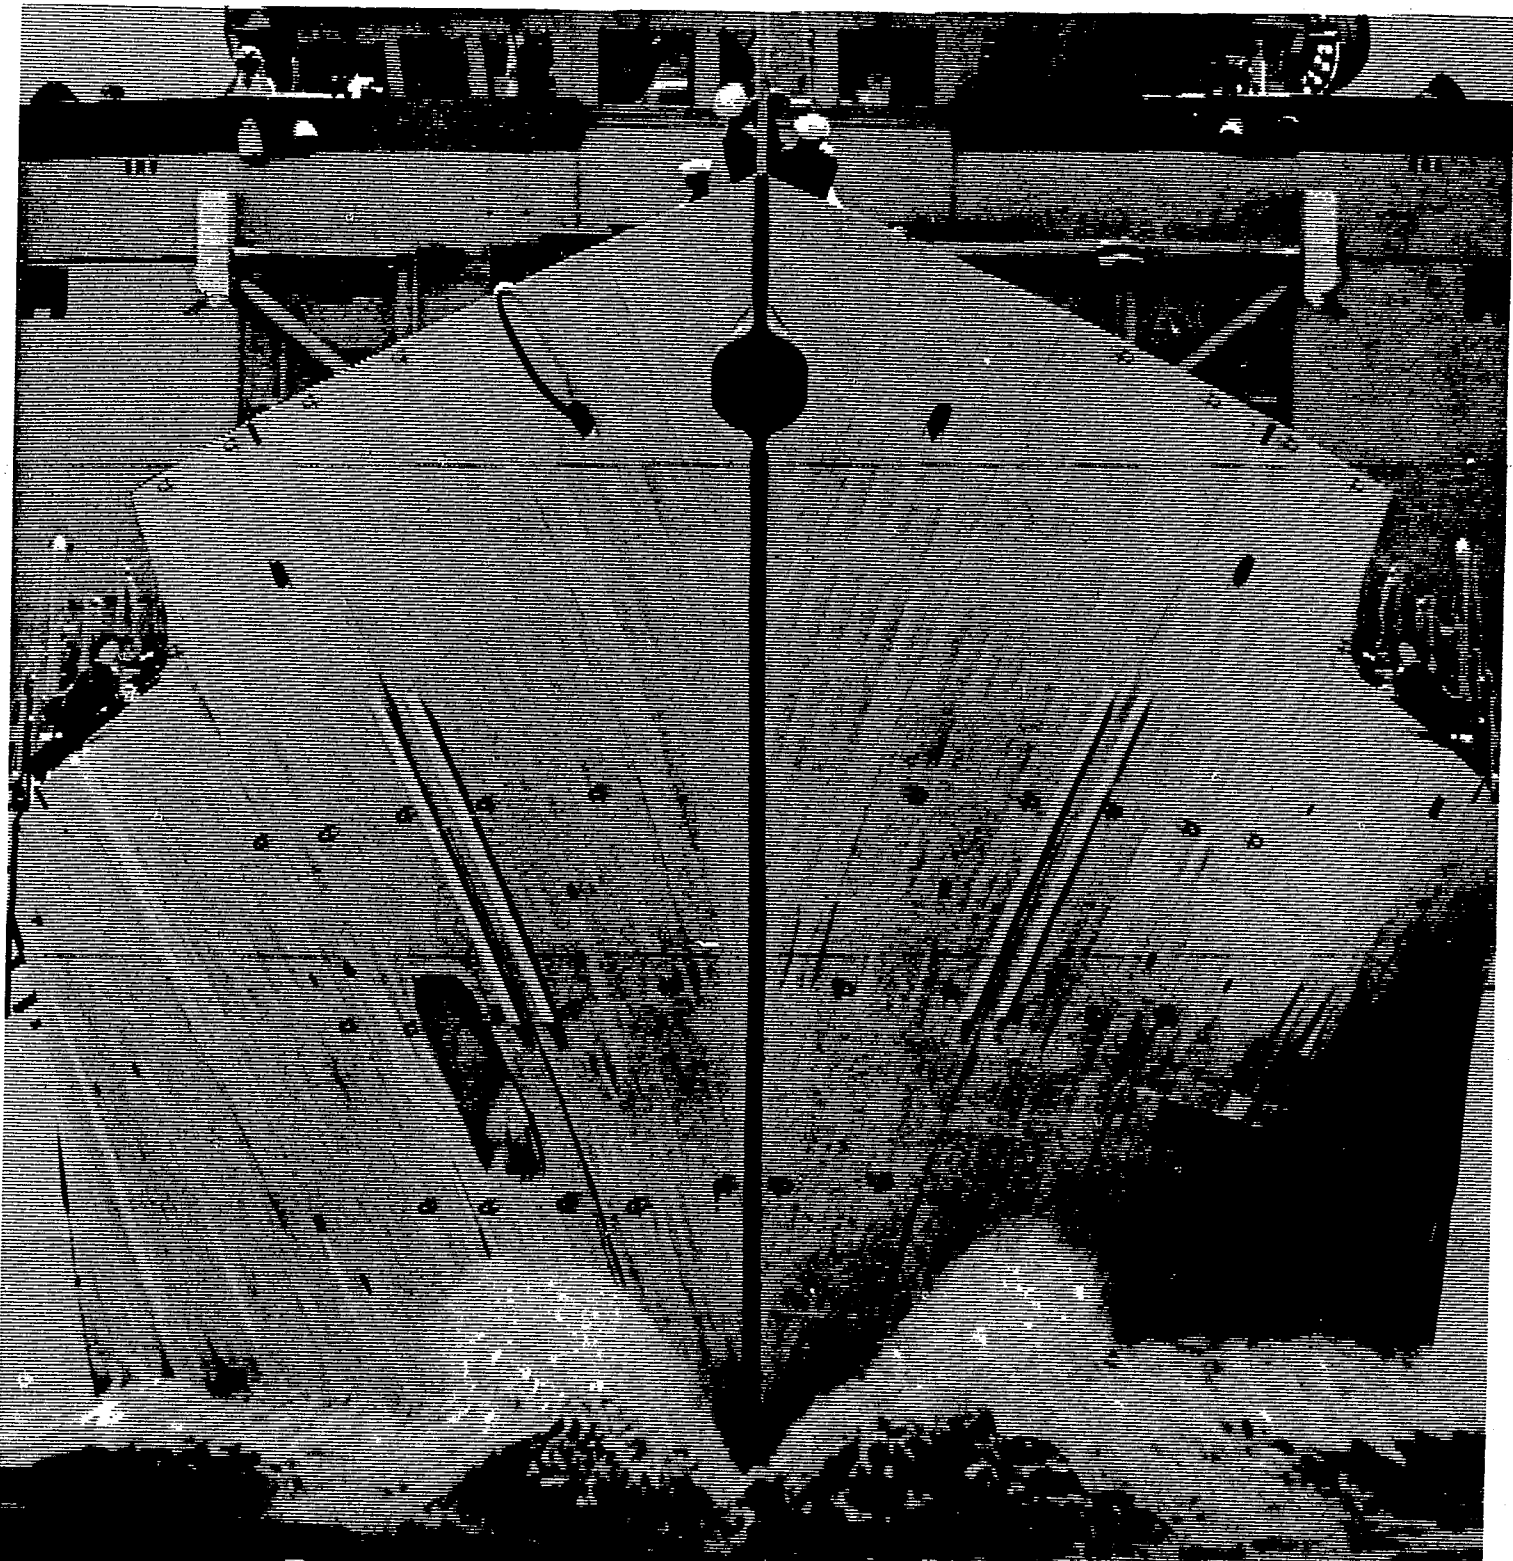

"They never let us march at halftime there because they don't have a marching band and they are jealous that we do," Bukvich said.

BSU officials authorized the band to play at pre-game and post-game ceremonies. But Bukvich said that Bronco officials became angry when the UI band played from the stands during the game whenever the Vandals made a touchdown.

BSU officials were also dismayed when several band members did push-ups in the end zone for every point scored by the Vandals, he added.

"There were just a lot of crazy things going on," Bukvich said. "I'm sure that they weren't happy at all that we were there — and that's why we went."

The 175-member UI Marching Band left for the Boise game Nov. 16. En route, they gave indoor concerts at high schools in Lewiston, Cottonwood and Grangeville.

UI prof receives physics grant

By Kate Ripley

A $25,000 grant was recently awarded to a UI physics professor.

Professor Philip Deutchman received the grant from the National Science Foundation for his research in theoretical nuclear physics.

Deutchman's research studies collisions of heavy nuclei moving at relativistic speeds and the creation of pions, subatomic particles that carry nuclear force.

The proposal for the grant, sent in last January, was recommended by Da Hsuan Feng, director of theoretical science at the National Science Foundation, and went through a strict reviewing process by five scientists from all over the country.

Deutchman considers the grant a chance of a lifetime. "It's sort of a beginning grant — it covers 2 months of summer pay and travel money to Berkley, Calif., where they have the machinery to do the experiments.

"The hope is that successful research will be done with this money and a possibility for future support from NSF," Deutchman said.

Deutchman said the foundation will be closely watching him and UI to see if the research goes well.

"It sort of puts me and the university under the spotlight. We need to get some results and publication of the research done," he said. "If all goes well hopefully the grant could be expanded to support graduate students in their research."

Deutchman came to the UI in 1968, after earning his master's degree from the University of New Mexico, studying biophysics at the University of Washington for a year and getting his doctorate at the University of Oregon. The next year he worked toward a post-doctoral fellowship and further studied nuclear theory at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada.

Deutchman said he likes teaching and research equally well. "I love to teach and I love to do research. I really like the combination of the two," he said.

Deutchman likes UI because he wants to continue to grow and be around people who are growing and using their minds. "That's why I originally got into my research," he said. "It has to do more with motivation than intelligence. You have to be willing to work for it."

about loud parties coming from the Greek houses and in the past we have shut down parties because there were minors in there, but we tend to approach it with a mellow attitude," Hogan said. "If there is a problem we get hold of the resident adviser or house mother because they can take care of it a lot better than we can; if the police get involved, fights are likely to start and people are likely to get arrested."

"Actually with this shift I get to see my daughter more. I just don't get to sleep!"

Becky Hogan

Hogan used as an example the big snowball fight between the Greeks and the GDIs, which happens every year around the first snowfall. When a group of 500 to 600 students started breaking windows last year, the police responded by herding the group to the area behind the ASUI Kibbie Dome, rather than trying to break up the snowball fight.

"There isn't too much they can break down there so we just let them go at it," Hogan said.

The dispatcher's voice interrupted the conversation. "The Palouse Empire Mall security officer advises an alarm went off in Andrew's Hallmark. They will be in the entrance of Pay 'N' Save."

Inside the Hallmark shop, all was quiet except for the strains of Night Ranger's Sister Christian. After an investigation, Officer Hogan found that a radio alarm had been set during the day and had just gone off.

"We don't get paid enough to play catch with bullets, so anytime anything out of the ordinary happens we call the police," the security officer said.

As we were about to leave, four teenage boys from Boise approached Hogan in the parking lot. The car they had left overnight in Tijuana Tilly's parking lot was gone. After a check over the radio, Officer Hogan learned that it had been impounded that morning because it was parked in a handicapped zone. The boys said they had planned to leave the next day but learned they could not retrieve their car until Monday morning.

And Hogan told them that it would cost about $60 to get the car. "Isn't $25 plus $1.50 a mile towed the usual fee?" one of the boys asked.

"Well, yes", Hogan said, "but there is an inventory fee, storage fee and the auto wrecker."

"What happens if, hypothetically, we don't have the money to get it out?" he asked.

"Then it stays where it is," Hogan told him.

After she directed the boys to the police station where they could pay the fine, Hogan headed back to the now quiet streets for the last, quiet hour of her shift.

THE ROAD TO Victory

By Greg Kilmer

The Vandals put a great big cherry on top of their 1984 season with a 37-0 demolition of Boise State in the season finale in the state capital.

With that victory the Vandals finished their season with a four-game winning streak, kept the Gem State trophy on Coach Erickson's desk and gave the three-year head coach his third winning season.

Overcoming injuries and at one point finding themselves 2-5 and 0-3 in the Big Sky, the Vandals roared back with four straight wins and capped off their drive for 6-5 with the annihilation of the frustrated Broncos of Boise State.

The Vandals marched up and down Boise's worn-out carpet for 449 yards total offense, led by quarterback Scott Linehan's 21-of-26 effort for 269 yards and two touchdowns to wide receiver Eric Yarber.

As was the case most of the year, it was Yarber, seven grabs for 103 yards, and Scott Auken, six catches for 76 yards, who were the targets for most of Linehan's aeriels.

The three Vandal running backs, Mike Shill, Marlon Barrow and Steve Jackson, along with Linehan rushed for 215 yards to complement Erickson's Air Express' 269 yards.

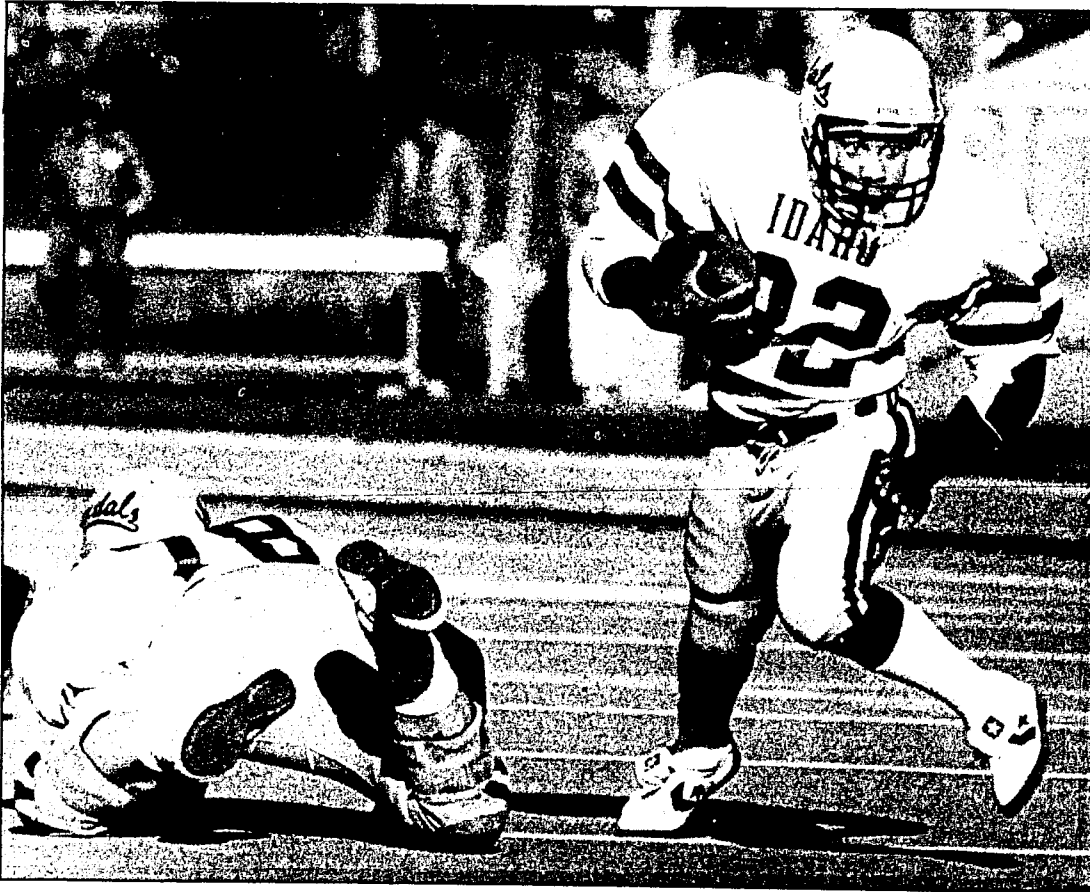

Senior placekicker Tim McMonigle finished the season on the right foot, kicking three field goals, 29, 37 and 43 yards, and four extra points to push his total career scoring to 224 points, passing the 222-point record of Ray McDonalds.

The Vandal defense definitely had their hand in the action, as they held the once potent Bronco offense to 197 total yards. Most of the 197 were taken after most of the fickle Boise fans left the stadium.

So overwhelming was the Vandal defense that it all but demolished the once highly touted Bronco offense. Starting QB Hazsen Choates was held to a sub-par performance in anyone's book with a 4 for 11 effort for, get this, 0 yards. Back-up QB Scott Anderson replaced Choates and threw for 99 yards for the rest of the romp.

Vandal women crush foes effortlessly

By Mike Long

The women's Vandal basketball team easily defeated its first three opponents of the season and also took the Mark IV Thanksgiving Classic crown over the weekend.

The lady hoopsters claimed their first win of the season on Nov. 16 when they defeated Western Montana University in the UI Memorial Gym, 90-44.

The following weekend, the Vandals hosted Utah State University, Washington State University and Idaho State University. They crushed Utah State 100-62 and followed with a 85-62 victory over WSU.

"Yes, we played well," Head Coach Pat Dobratz said. "We were really pleased and feel we're on a roll."

"We're trying to get a tradition of not losing at home, and with a 3-0 record we're on our way," she said. During the previous year, the Vandals at one time owned a road record of 10-0 while having a 3-5 record in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Dobratz said that "everyone should feel pretty good" about this weekend's two contests, as the team pulled off nearly 60 percent of its shots against Utah State and 54 percent the following night.

The games were highlighted by the "real good consistent play for both games" of starters Paula Getty and Kris Edmonds, according to Dobratz.

Getty made eight of nine shots for a total of 17 points and had five assists the first night. She made six out of seven shots for 12 points the second night. Teammate Edmonds went up for 23 points the first night and 27 the next.

Also heavy on the points for the Vandals was starting forward Mary Westerwelle, who came up with 22 in the first contest along with 20 rebounds and four blocks. She then followed with seven blocks the next night.

Breaking her own standing school record of two years was starting center Mary Raese, who blocked 11 shots against WSU.

Vandals pull first victory

By Greg Kilmer

The UI basketball team notched its first win of the season Sunday night but had to travel to the South Pacific to get it.

The Vandals nailed down six straight free throws in the last 30 seconds of the ballgame — two each by Teddy Noel, Steve Ledesma and Chris Carey — to put out the fire in the late Hawaii-Hilo Vulcan's rally.

Noel converted his two with 30 seconds to go while Ledesma and Carey knocked theirs down with seconds remaining to hold off the NAIA Vulcans 71-65.

The Vandals repeatedly opened up leads throughout the ballgame, only to let the Vulcans answer back with their own rallies.

The Vandals started out slow as they trailed the Hilo school 7-6 with about six minutes off the clock.

The Vandals opened up in the latter part of the first half and outscored their Hawaiian guests 17-2 in the next seven minutes to open up a 23-9 lead.

Ulf Spears, the Vandals scoring leader with 18 in the loss to UCLA, led the charge with fast break lay-ins and long shots from the corner.

UI Spikers finish season

By Frank Hill

The Vandal volleyball team closed out the 1984 season by losing the championship match of the Mountain West Athletic Conference playoffs to Portland State University 15-9, 19-17, 15-8.

The loss to the PSU Vikings gave the Vandals a season ending record of 26-14 and a second place finish in the MWAC.

In addition to the UI's second place finish in the MWAC (highest ever in the history of UI volleyball), first-year UI Head Volleyball Coach Pam Bradetich was voted Conference Coach of the Year by her peers.

Bradetich, who replaced seven-year UI Head Volleyball Coach Amanda Gammage prior to the start of this season, was pleased with the award but said she didn't earn it all by herself.

"There were really two factors that went into my getting the award," she said. "One, the award is really a recognition of the coaching staff. And two, it's a reflection back on the team."

"It shows how they, as a group, have proven themselves to be winners," Bradetich said of her Vandal players. "The award shows that they're high achievers and they believe in themselves. I'm not only happy for myself, but I'm happy for the team as well."

In addition to Bradetich, three UI "high achievers" were also recognized by the conference as some of the top players in the MWAC.

Seniors Kelly Gibbons and Jenny Frazier were tabbed to the league's all-conference first team. Junior setter Kelley Neely was picked to the MWAC's second team.

Yet, as Bradetich said, she and her three all-league players would return all of their awards for just another crack against Portland State University.

Portland State, who accounted for three of the UI's 14 team losses this season, defeated the Vandals for the ninth time in nine career tries. The three-game season ending win over the Vandals on Nov. 17 gave the Vikings the MWAC title.

The loss was especially frustrating for the Vandals as PSU won the conference title for the third consecutive year and thus prevented any Division I MWAC school from advancing to the NCAA Division I playoffs in late November. PSU is a Division II school and cannot take advantage of the MWAC's automatic Division I berth right to the NCAA playoffs.

"Portland State played very well and deserved to win the match," Bradetich said. "We made some mistakes again, and we didn't take advantage of their errors. We came up real short."

The turning point in the PSU match came in the second game with the Vandals leading 13-11.

"The second game was real close when the officials gave us a red card," Bradetich said. A red card is a penalty which, in this case, awarded PSU a point.

"We were leading at one point

The Vandals increased the lead to 29-13 with five minutes left in the half only to let the Vulcans outscore them 12-0 in the closing minutes on mostly second chance rebounds. The Vulcans had a 35-34 lead at intermission.

Hilo, despite a height disadvantage, out-rebounded the Vandals on the night 39 to 28. Ledesma led the Vandals on the boards with seven and also was the Vandal's top scorer with 18.

The second half started as the first did, with the Vandals jumping out quick only to let the Vulcans back in it. With the score tied at 51, Teddy Noel hit a jumper to give the Vandals a lead they never relinquished.

Substitutes Mark Hoke and Matt Haskins came off the bench to stretch the lead to six before the Vulcans tried their last run at the Vandals, who turned it back with the late freebies from the line.

For the night, the Vandals shot 51 percent while Hilo hit on 54 percent.

Forward Tom Stalick is still fighting an illness that has kept him out of the first two games. He isn't expected to play in tonight's game against Hawaii-Pacific but should be ready for next week.

The Vandals return home for their home opener against the Falcons of the United States Air Force Academy Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The Falcons are coming off a tough loss to Gonzaga 64-59 at home in Colorado Springs. The Air Force drew praise from the Zags for their discipline and aggressiveness.

Size is not the Falcons' strong point, as their tallest player is 6-foot-7 center Tim Lewis. Freshman Bob Marr led the Air Force in scoring in the contest with 16 points.

For the season, Spears leads the Vandals in scoring with a 17.5-point average followed by Ledesma with a 14-point average. Ledesma also leads in rebounds with a six per-game average.

in the game 13-9, but Portland State came back."

Bradetich, who said she had never played on a team that had been whistled for a red card and had certainly never coached a team that had been ticketed with one, called the red card incident the turning point in the match. "The red card was a factor," she said, "Combine it with losing a close second game, and it really hurt.

"It was a match with a lot of emotion and the officials didn't allow for it. After the red card, all the emotion was taken away from us."

The Vandals advanced to the Portland State showdown following a three-game 15-9, 15-10, 15-4 win over Montana State University on Nov. 16. MSU, which finished third in the MWAC, was one of four teams to be invited to the MWAC post-season playoffs.

UI Volleyball Spikes

But probably the most impressive stat for the Vandal defenders was the total shut down of the Bronco's bread and butter man, running back Jon Francis. Francis, the Big Sky rushing leader and only the third Bronco to rush for 1,000 yards, was held to 26 yards rushing, easily his lowest of the year.

Vandal linebacker Tom Hennessey, a Boise native, said, "I'm surprised by the way we dominated them, but I can't think of a better ending to a season than beating the Broncos at home." Hennessey, who bounced back from an early season foot injury, led the defense with 16 total tackles, seven unassisted.

"It turned out to be a most gratifying season because our players fought so much adversity," said Erickson, who joins J.G. Griffith, 1903-06, as the only two to put three successful campaigns together. "The seniors went out the way they should and in my wildest dreams, I didn't think it would end like this."

The Vandals were full of surprises all year. The week after blowing a 14-point lead to eventual conference champ Montana State, the Vandals rebounded to knock off Oregon State in rolling up more than 400 yards in total offense. It was the first Idaho win over a Pac-10 foe in 20 years.

A sweet surprise for the Vandals following the Oregon State win was they found they had a two-quarterback attack.

After not producing in the Fullerton State loss after Linehan was injured and a mediocre showing in the Montana State setback, QB Rick Sloan showed his stuff, as he guided the Vandals to a 41-22 victory over the Beavers with a 27 of 44 effort for 322 yards and two TDs. The victory evened the Vandals at 2-2 for the season.

"Winning those last four games was truly a gratifying experience. The kids get all the credit for that...I'm extremely proud of the way they came back."

Dennis Erickson

Any momentum from the Beaver pelting went out the window as the Vandals dropped their next three ballgames to fall to 2-5. Most frustrating was that the three losses were by totals of 6, 3 and 7 points with Linehan, back from injury, throwing for the end zone in each case.

The next week looked no better as the Vandals found themselves down 16 to Montana in Missoula. But the Vandals, behind Linehan who improved every week, guided the Vandals to two quick scores to tie it up. In the final seconds, Linehan hit Eric Yarber who had also just returned after being injured, for the 23-yard game winner.

"These kids could have rolled over right there," Erickson said of the halftime score. "I'm extremely proud of the way they came back."

The final three weeks went all the Vandals way as they cut down the Lumberjacks of NAU 37-9, held off Idaho State in a 45-42 thriller and the humbling of the Broncos to secure the Vandal winning season.

"Winning those last four games was truly a gratifying experience," Erickson said. "The kids get all the credit for that."

Only McMonigle, Barrow and Shill plus stand-out lineman Lance West will be missing from the offensive attack while on defense, corners Cal Loveall and Steve Simpson, safety Jon Cayton, linebacker Ed Rifalato and linemen Dan Hunter and Sam Manoa won't be back for the 1985 season.

"I'm really excited about next year," Erickson said. "I wish we could start tomorrow."

With the momentum of four straight wins and returnees like Linehan, Yarber and Auker, that Gem State trophy might have to slide over a bit on Erickson's desk to make room for a larger trophy with NCAA Div. 1-AA Championship written on it.

Vandals splash by the Oregon schools

By Tom Liberman

The Vandal swim team had a successful weekend before the swimmers went home to eat turkey. The team competed in Corvallis, Ore., against the University of Oregon and Oregon State University.

The meet was not a formal meet because the coaches of all the schools agreed on an unusual and unscorable format. It was agreed that each swimmer would be allowed to swim in as many events as he or she wanted to.

The usual schedule limits each swimmer to two individual events and one relay event. This prevents one very good swimmer from dominating a meet.

The reason behind the change was that the coaches wanted to "give an idea of what we had in all the events," said UI Coach Frank Burlison.

Even though no official scores were recorded, the UI men's and women's teams did very well. Rich Root swam in seven events and got four individual firsts.

Root won the 200-meter and 400-meter individual medleys as well as the 200-meter backstroke and butterfly. He also picked up a second place finish and two third places.

The only man who got a first besides Root was Gavin Holles, who won the 500-meter freestyle. Burlison said the men and women swam well. "There were a lot of personal bests."

The swimming star for the Vandal women was Charene Mitchell, who became the first Vandal to gain entry in to the NCAA Division II Championships. She swam the 1,650-meter freestyle in 17:35.96 and finished in second place.

Mitchell easily beat the NCAA qualifying time of 17:52.99 and will represent the UI in the championships next year.

Tonya Nofziger collected four first places. She helped three relay teams to victory as well as taking an individual first in the 50-meter freestyle.

Tracy Thomas received six firsts. She was in three relay victories and took first in the 100-meter and 200-meter freestyle and the 200-meter breaststroke. She also got a third place in the 50-meter freestyle.

The next meet for the Vandals is this weekend against arch rival Central Washington University. They swim at the UI Swim Center on Friday at 6 p.m. The Vandals will be looking for their second dual meet victory over CWU in 24 years.

Burlison is looking forward to the meet as he feels that the Vandals have a very good chance of winning. The Vandals have already defeated CWU twice in relay meets this year.

OSU considers UI's Erickson

Shortly after Vandal Head Football Coach Dennis Erickson finished his third winning season at the UI, another school has turned envious eyes on him.

Oregon State University is reportedly considering Erickson as a replacement OSU Head Football Joe Avezano, who was fired Friday. Erickson's Vandals defeated the PAC-10 Beavers 41-22 this past season.

Erickson said this is not the first time he has been eyed by another team. He has been approached by the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football league in the past two years.

"It's kind of tiring, to tell you the truth," he said. "Everybody uses it in recruiting against you."

He went on to say that he was extremely happy with his life here in Moscow and that "my family likes it here."

He is also the only Vandal coach to team to achieve three winning seasons; and this is only his third season on the UI campus.

Domino's giving away pizza

Domino's Pizza will be offering certificates worth $100 in pizza in the first annual Domino's Doctor Dunk slam dunk contest.

The contest is to be held between the men's and women's basketball teams on double header home game nights in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

There will be six of their double header games with the winners of the first five matchups of six to continue on to the last night, Feb. 23.

The winner of those first five matchups will receive a $10 certificate towards Domino's pizza with the first matchup scheduled for Dec. 4.

All interested, must either sign up at the Intramurals office or call them at 885-6381. It will be limited to the first 30.

Women

Her previous record was nine blocked shots.

Dobratz commented that the height of the "Twin Towers," Mary Raese and Mary Westerwelle, intimidated the other teams and gave Idaho a decided edge. They are both 6-foot-4.

In the Western Montana game, Getty and Raese led the team with 17 points apiece;

Raese also came up with four blocks, while Kris Edmonds followed with 14 points.

Also with 14 points was Westerwelle, who led the Vandals in blocking with a total of eight.

The Vandals made 68 percent of their field goals in the first half and 48 percent in the second. They were 43 percent from the free-throw line in the first half and didn't miss a beat with 7-7 in the second half.

The women will travel to Pullman, Wash., and the Dial

Classic on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

At 9 p.m. on Friday, the Vandals will face Cal-State Fullerton, while host WSU will face Texas Christian University in the game prior to Idaho. The consolation and championship games to be played the following night.

"We're looking forward to our next tournament," Dobratz said.

"We've made some new improvements and are planning a hard week of practice."

Slippery slopes keep program alive

By Kathy Amidei

Fresh from a weekend cross-country outing, two students maneuvered skis, boots, poles and packs through the door and deposited them on the floor.

It was a Monday afternoon, and a steady stream of equipment came through the door as students returned equipment rented from Outdoor Program over Thanksgiving break.

Despite the post-break activity, Moscow's warming winter-time trend over the last few years has slowed down rental activity in the downstairs office of ASUI Outdoor Program.

"We have had such lousy weather the last three years," Jim Rennie, manager of Outdoor Program, said. Generally 60 to 70 percent of the program's rental business is to what Rennie refers to as the "golf-course" skier.

"When we have snow in town generally all the equipment is out all of the time," he said. However, in the past few years, rental of the department's 70-odd ski packages has slowed because of the decreased snowfall in town, which keeps the "golf course" skier off of the golf courses and out of the rental shop.

Despite the warming trend, plenty of snow has remained for the avid skier in the forests just out of Moscow, Rennie said.

The weather warming trend has seen the advent of a trend of a different nature as well. According to Rennie, there has been a trend recently toward a different style of participation in Outdoor Program activities.

"There is more demand for organized group activities now," Rennie said.

In the past, Outdoor Program would present a slide show to a dormitory or fraternity, then be besieged with requests to coordinate a group activity or outing for them.

At that time, the department was organized to handle small groups of people who came individually and signed up for a trip — often without knowing any of the other participants.

The department was simply not equipped to provide arrangements for groups larger than 12 people, the manager said. However, this is all changing.

"We now have more capabilities to where we can start handling that type of thing," Rennie said. "With the river program we gained the ability to do more custom group organizing."

Outdoor Program provide three major kinds of services in the wintertime.

"The most obvious one and the one most people are aware of is equipment rental," Rennie said.

Outdoor Program rents cross-country skiing packages, winter camping and some mountaineering equipment. In addition, the department is the only place in town that beginners can rent wind clothing as well.

"You can rent gear, but if you don't have the proper clothing it is not as much fun," Rennie said. And the best way for beginners to discover what they need and what equipment works best for them — and even if they like the sport enough to take it up — is to rent.

"Before you make a big investment, make a little one," Rennie said.

The next most visible service provided by the ASUI-funded department is indoor seminars and presentations. Slide shows portraying winter sports are scheduled once a week or once every two weeks throughout the semester.

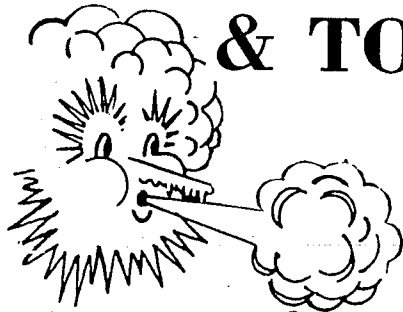

"And 99 percent are free of charge," Rennie said. "People can come get information and entertainment without expense to themselves." The program manager will also present the seminars upon request to interested living groups.

"The least visible service is the trips that we do," Rennie said, "even though you may think it is the most glamorous."

Play costumes take time

By Chan Davis

This is the first of a series of articles relating the different tribulations of the UI theater world.

Activities at the Hartung Theatre continued at an almost normal pace last week despite Thanksgiving vacation. Play and dance rehearsals dominated the stage almost every day while costume and stage designers were at work behind the scenes preparing for the Dec. 7 opening of William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Nancy Zaremski, a graduate student in costuming and costume designer for the upcoming production, said there has been a lot of work put into designing and sewing the costumes. She said the crew must make more than 50 costumes and most have to be made from scratch.

This is quite unlike the costume work for Little Foxes, which the theatre department presented last month.

"All the men's suits and one dress were pulled from the storage room for Little Foxes and that saved a lot of money. But for this play, well, we didn't have much in fairy wear so we have to make it up from scratch, pattern and all," Zaremski said.

Zaremski said the ideas for the costumes are usually conceived after reading and analyzing the play to get a general feeling for the setting and costumes, and then, if possible, researching the time period.

But how does one research a dream? Zaremski said there is much room for creativity in designing the costumes for the fairies in A Midsummer Night's Dream.

"We went through books on Greek history for the general costume ideas. But we also found little decorative patterns that we drew stencils from and spray painted the designs onto the fabric," she said.

But before beginning the actual construction of the costumes, sketches are drawn up and presented to the director for discussion, she said. "Everyone really has to work together."

All the production people meet with Director Fred Chapman every week to discuss ideas for the set.

One of the production people is Anita Biggs, the prop mistress. Anything that is not part of the stage, the costume or the actor is called a prop.

"I pull the props from storage and fix them up or rebuild them or even make a new ones," Biggs said. She explained that during the semester theatre students help with props, costumes and set construction two days a week as part of a lab for stage craft class.

Many help on the running crew.

"The running crew shifts the set and moves the props between scenes during the show," Biggs said. They also help the actors into their costumes and sew any costume tears that may occur during the show.

Bruce Brockman, scene designer and scenic artist, also works with Chapman to come up with a visual approach to the play that is both effective and workable as far as space availability is concerned. He said he did some sketches and discussed his ideas with the director to come up with a compromise.

The visual effects of the basic stage must be consistent to the theme of the play with enough flexibility to incorporate several different scenes, while the actors must have the space to perform to the director's satisfaction.

"I wanted it to be filled with fantasy without doing it storybookish," Brockman said. "It's a magical forest."

College success book says to grab brass,

By John Britschgi

College instructors are fond of expounding on the Real World: You're going to the University of Oz and even if your dog did eat your term paper, that won't save you out there, in the Real World.

But James Calano and Jeff Salzman promise to help college graduates become successful "out there."

Presidents of their own companies before they needed to shave, these two have also founded a management training firm that teaches others to be as upwardly mobile as they are. It is from this experience that they draw the material for Real World 101: What College Never Taught You About Success.

Seeing such a title, one could expect either a tongue-in-cheek look at the authors' formative years as professionals or a serious look at their formative years as professionals. Unfortunately it is the latter.

Calano and Salzman are the new professionals. Clean-cut and confident they vote Republican and read Ayn Rand.

They refer to unconventional people as "artsy," and they believe that the pathway to success is advertising. In other words, they tend to be obnoxious.

They tell their readers to get organized, be aggressive and grab that brass ring with both hands. The bohemian lifestyle of college crumbles in the Real World, and those all-nighters you continually pull to get the job done are unsatisfactory outside of Munchkinland, they say.

The authors are unanimous in their contempt for those who don't pursue the dollar (university professors, et al.).

What the authors have is a condensation of every bit of self-improvement advice you've ever heard, and if you've heard it before, why read the book?

If you couldn't figure out that it would help to dress neatly and act confidently for those job interviews, then maybe this is your book. It has large type and doesn't use big words.

Everyone else, hold onto your $7.95.

Tubists give X-mas show

PULLMAN — Washington State University's Department of Music is inviting tubists and euphonium players across the region to be part of an international "Tuba Christmas" planned for Saturday, Dec. 1.

According to WSU Director of Bands Keating Johnson, the university musicians and anyone else who plays either of the two instruments will rehearse traditional Christmas music that morning and then participate in Pullman's Community Christmas Parade before performing a 2 p.m. concert in the city's High Street Mall.

Questions about the program can be directed to Johnson by calling 335-3972.

RHA hosts Christmas formal

As the first winter snowfall settles on the Palouse, the Residence Halls Association is crystalizing plans for its first annual Christmas formal.

Dubbed the "RHA Crystal Ball '84," the dance will be held Dec. 1 at Ratskellars Inn in Moscow. It will feature music by the Crosstown Rivals and is open to all residence hall students with tickets from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Tickets are available from each hall's president and are priced at $5 per couple.

"Tickets are selling well, but we still have many of them left for people who still want to go," RHA President Scott MacKinnon said.

Alcohol will be served at the event, and IDs will be checked at the door. The formal will be catered, with cakes and cookies as well as other treats being served.

According to MacKinnon, decorating will be very extensive and will transform Ratskellars into a prom-like atmosphere.

"I'm not looking to see a few off-campus GDs there also," he said.

Adventures

unaware of the cross-country ski trips, the winter climbing expeditions and camping tours which are open to anyone interested.

Two-thirds of these trips are instructional in nature, Rennie said. Outdoor leaders assume participants come, for the most part, without skills and are there to learn.

"This helps to dispel the mistaken impression people have that this is a club," Rennie said. "It is not a club."

Trips are not subsidized by anyone, and everyone is welcome. "People don't need to think they're outsiders," he said. There is a tremendous turnover, with many participants turning out only once or twice a year before striking out on their own.

The slowest time of the year for the program department is between Thanksgiving and Christmas. "Late fall semester is always very blue," Rennie said. But activity begins to pick up beginning in the spring semester, peaking in July, August and September with the advent of river running.
