Education board approves fee increases

By Lewis Day
Editor

Students at the UI will pay more for their education because of action taken by the State Board of Education last week. The Board's meeting on Thursday and Friday saw approval of a $10 increase in the Institutional Maintenance Fee and a similar one in the fee paid to the ASUI. The Board also increased room and board rates for university housing and turned down a request for increased athletic fees.

The UI will gain $4,080,836 over this year's allocation of $42,591,500. The UI budget for 1986 will total $46,672,336.

The Board's approval of an increase in the IMF brought that fee to $245 per semester for full-time undergraduate students. The increase in the fee passed on a 5-3 vote, and will take effect June 1.

Voting to increase the IMF were Board members Roberta Fields, Cheryl Hymas, Dennis Wheeler, Jerry Evans and Diane Bilyeu. Voting against the increase were Robert Montgomery, Charles Grant and Mike Mitchell.

ASUI President Jane Freund opposed the IMF increase in testimony before the Board. "We feel it is time to send a message," she said. "(The IMF) cannot be used as a cure-all." Freund also said she is against "any kind" of increase in the fee.

Joining Freund before the Board were student leaders from the state's other universities. Todd Walters, student president at Idaho State University, said continual increases lead to "a financial burden" which is unfair. He added that a relationship between increasing fees and declining enrollments can be established.

"To say there is something of a shortfall in state funds is like saying there is something of a famine in Ethiopia," said Sharon York, a member of the Lewis-Clark State College student assembly.

Board members also heard from the presidents of the schools affected by the fee increase. Clifford Trump, acting president of ISU, said, "I do not support a general fee increase." Those sentiments were echoed by LCSC President Lee Vickers, who said, "I speak in opposition to a general fee increase."

Boise State University President John Keiser concurred, stating, "I oppose a general student fee increase at this time." Keiser also advocated the establishment of a stable method of determining future fee increases. He said there "should be an inflationary number attached" to fees.

UI President Richard Gibb said the university had not requested an increase, and added, "I don't like fee increases." Gibb also said he finds it "strange" that there are requests for athletic and activity fee increases, "but none for academics."

"I don't think we should balance the budget on the backs of students," Gibb said. "But nor," he said, "should classified employees, faculty or the taxpayers be required to pay the entire cost of education."

Richard Jung, BSU student president, said students are willing to pay for quality education, but said others in the state do not share the same commitment. "You have to have some kind of commitment from the legislature," he said.

State Superintendent of Education Jerry Evans said the options facing the state are few. "We have three alternatives: ... a fee increase, reduce access to programs, or (to) cut programs," he said. Evans concluded the least painful way of maintaining quality in higher education would be to increase fees.

Despite the near-unanimity of the witnesses, the Board passed the $10 increase. It later passed an increase in housing and board charges for all the schools.

Shortly after passing the IMF and room/board increases, the Board acted on requests from three of the schools for "activity" fee increases.

The ASUI requested the authority to levy up to an additional $10 per semester. The request, to make up for projected

Forestry dean candidates narrowed down to two

By Shawn McIntosh
Staff Writer

Out of 26 applicants for the Dean of the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences, the field has been narrowed down to three finalists.

The finalists include two out-of-state people, John Hendee from the USDA Forest Service in North Carolina and Mason Carlton Carter from Purdue University in Illinois. The in-state finalist is Ernest D. Ables, who has been acting dean for the College of Forestry since last summer.

John C. Hendee is assistant director of the USDA Forest Service, Southeastern Forest Experiment Station, Asheville, North Carolina. He has a Ph.D. in forestry-economics and sociology from the University of Washington, a master's degree in forest management from Oregon State University and a bachelor's degree in forestry from Michigan State University.

Hendee is 46 and has been a private forestry consultant, handled Forest Service assignments on two ranger districts of the Suislaw National Forests in Oregon for three years, and served 11 years with recreation research work in the Pacific Northwest Experiment Station in Seattle, Washington. He has also had two years of legislative work in Washington, D.C., and he's been six years in his present position.

He has authored or co-authored over 80 publications based on his studies of wilderness, recreation, public involvement and other aspects of forestry that deals with people. He also served as a federal congressional fellow in 1976-77 on the staffs of Senator Frank Church of Idaho and Congressman Jim Weaver of Oregon.

Hendee is supposed to be at UI from April 24-26, in which time he will meet faculty members, administrators and students. He will also give a seminar entitled "Future Directions in Renewable Natural Resources--Key Issues and their Impact on the College of Forestries, the Process of Teaching, Research, and Service Programs."

Mason Carlton Carter, 50, is professor and head of the department of forestry and natural resources at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Indiana. He has a doctoral degree in tree physiology from Duke University, a masters in plant physiology and a bachelor's degree in forestry, both from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Carter has been a research forester for two years for the Forest Service in Georgia, and worked in the department of forestry at Auburn University in Alabama for seven years.

He has been at his current position for seven years, and while there he has presided over two extensive curricular revisions, managed a three-fold increase in research contracts and the development of a major continuing education program.

Other experience includes committee and advisory board responsibilities for state, regional and national forestry organizations and associations. For two years he was a member of the budget committee for the division of agriculture, National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges (NASULGC).

Carter will be appearing at UI from May 6-8, in which he will go through the same process as Hendee and will give the same seminar.

Flooded engine strands ASUI trio

Three UI students who attended the meeting of the State Board of Education meeting in Boise last week had an unexpected adventure on the trip home. ASUI President Jane Freund, Argonaut Editor Lewis Day and ASUI Senator-elect Cheri Sabala were involved in a minor traffic accident

McCall, and an automobile owned by the ASUI in a McCall garage.

Sabala was driving the car on Idaho route 55, just north of McCall, when the car struck a patch of black ice. Sabala lost control, and the car spun several times before coming to rest in about four feet of water in Goose Creek.

Freund, Sabala and Day climbed out of the car, which filled with water, and were stranded in the creek for about seven minutes. After contacting the Idaho State Police, the threesome returned to Moscow. No charges were filed in the incident, there were no injuries, and the car should be returned to Moscow later this week.

Seminar aids graduate students

A seminar designed to help students with their graduate educations will be held on Tuesday, April 23, from 3 to 5 pm in the SUB Dipper room, according to Nancy Weller, a grant officer at the UI Research Center.

"Funding of the Graduate Education" is open to graduate students or any graduating senior, not just those planning to attend a UI graduate school.

said Weller. No preregistration is required and the seminar is free.

Topics will include advice on financial aid, competitive research, and fellowship programs. In addition to Weller, Roger Wallins, Asst. Dean of the Graduate School, and Dan Davenport, Director of Student Financial Aid, will lecture and answer students questions.

State senator speaks to students

Idaho Sen. Ron Bettelspacher of Grangeville will speak at the ASUI Senate meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the SUB Chief's Room.

He will discuss the recent legislative session and answer students' questions. The meeting is open to the public.

The senate also meets for pre-session Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Chief's Room. The pre-session meeting is also open to the public.

Bad advising takes its toll on students

By Laurel Darrow
Staff Writer

Bad advising has meant extra semesters for at least 118 University of Idaho students, according to the results of an unscientific ASUI survey on academic advising.

ASUI senators gave questionnaires to off-campus students and members of campus living groups. A total of 590 students responded.

Twenty percent of the respondents answered "yes" when asked "Do you think your college career has been extended because of bad advising?"

Although the survey is unscientific and therefore is not representative of all students, it does point to problem areas, said ASUI Sen. Holly Rickett and ASUI Vice President Mike Trail.

Rickett said senators will be meeting with college deans this week to discuss the survey results.

In their responses, students said they would like to have pre-advising for sophomores, juniors and seniors; a requirement that students meet with their advisers at least once during the semester; an outline of all requirements for graduation from each college; and an overhaul of the catalog.

They also think advisers should be required to attend a training seminar, Rickett said.

The survey was taken because many students had been coming to senators with problems related to advising, Rickett said. The purpose of the survey was to identify problem areas and report to the deans so that changes could be made.

Prof talks on India

A University of Idaho professor will relate her experiences in India last fall on April 24.

Jo Ellen Force, associate professor of forest products at UI will give a seminar entitled "Community Participation Workshops in India," at 12:30 p.m. in Room 205 of the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences.

Force conducted workshops in community participation techniques for 70 foresters in Madhya Pradesh while she was working on the U.S. Agency For International Development Social Forestry Project. Her work was supported by the consortium for International Development-Women in Development Fellowship Program.

Requests by ISU to institute an application fee of $10 and an increase in the student health insurance fee ($4.75) also met with unanimous Board approval.

A request by LCSC for a $30 dedicated fee for new construction and renovations of its College Union Building was turned down by the Board on its first reading. The proposal, supported by the LCSC administration and student government, failed on a tie vote.

Later in the afternoon Board member Roberta Fields raised the issue again, and said, "I would like to have your reconsideration of that vote." Fields said it seemed unfair that the Board would support campus-generated requests for fee increases at the UI and ISU, but not at LCSC. The Board agreed, and approved the fee request.

Requests by the four state schools for increased athletic funding met with downturned thumbs from the Board. The proposed increases — $15 per semester at the UI and ISU; $16 at BSU; $10 at LCSC — were proposed by the schools to make up for projected shortfalls due to the Board's 10-10-10 plan.

The plan, which mandated the reduction of state support for intercollegiate athletics by 30 percent over three years, left the schools scrambling for funding, said witnesses.

Student opinion was sharply divided on the issue. BSU student Vice President Diane Ralphs said she agreed: "Athletic departments are in dire need of more money," but noted that the BSU student senate had voted both to support and reject more funding.

Likewise, ASUI President Freund told the Board the ASUI Senate did not support the full $15 increase, but would support a $6 increase. "I was surprised to see our Senate support a fee increase," she said.

After hearing more testimony on the athletic fee increase, the Board decided not to support the fee increases for intercollegiate sports, and instead moved to implement the 10 percent cut after adding the 11 percent legislature-mandated increases for all higher education funding. The result is a one percent gain for athletics for 1986.

At the UI, the athletic budget is projected to face a $300,000 shortfall for 1986.

In their final deliberations the Board decided on a funding allocation of the higher education budget of $110,313,946. This amount includes money budgeted for continued maintenance of current operations, monies for critical programs and funding for faculty salary equity. The budget passed on a 5-3 vote; Mitchell, Mon-gomery, Hymas, Evans and Wheeler voted yes; Fields, Grant and Bilyeu voted against the measure.

Under the 1986 budget the UI will receive $46,672,336, 42.309 percent of the state allocation for higher education. The other schools in the system will receive the following: BSU, $31,268,990 (28.345 percent); ISU, $26,611,535 (24.123 percent); LCSC, $5,761,085 (5.222 percent).

After selecting Bilyeu to serve as its head for next year, the Board adjourned.

Study investigates early Moscow

A University of Idaho home economics faculty member is investigating life in Moscow when the town was in its infancy.

To introduce the project to the community, Joann Jones, assistant professor of home economics at UI, will lecture at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 24, at McConnell Mansion. She will discuss some of the historical information about people who lived in the mansion during the more than 80 years it served as a residence.

Jones said her study of the historic building began when students in her historic furnishings class selected pieces of furniture to research. She hopes to expand the information available to an interpretation of what the daily lives of the McConnells and others of their social strata were like and how the pieces of furniture fit into that pattern of life.

She said she plans to write a brochure about the history of the mansion and the lives of people who lived and visited there for distribution to visitors at the building. An article for "Latah Letgacy," the journal of the Latah County Historical Society, is also planned.

Jones has received a $2,000 matching fund mini-grant to finance her investigations from the Association for the Humanities in Idaho. Co-sponsors

Faulty faculty moves

So, the Faculty Council has established itself as a force to be reckoned with. What a relief. We were afraid the old West defenders of virtue had faded into the sunset. Last Tuesday's brave actions disabused us of that notion.

The faculty — the UI's own maiden tied to the tracks — rescued university parking from the (excuse the free mixture of metaphor) student wolf at the door. Such gallantry has not been seen in these parts in years.

In reality, though, the actions of the Council last week were below despicable. The Council's cowardice in depriving students of equal access to campus parking was yet another example of that body's insensitivity to the concerns of the thousands of students who provide them with employment.

The outrageous hubris of Council members who said the faculty "do the work of the university" indicates a severe reality adjustment problem. Each of the Council members who voted to deprive students of parking are the same individuals who howl when the university administration acts in a capricious and arbitrary manner.

Well, folks, at least the administration gives something when it takes. The Faculty Council has shown itself to be a pale imitation of the forces it detests; a generally ineffectual body has seized upon an isolated occasion to show itself a mean-spirited martinet.

Since the Council has declined to listen to reason -- or even to dissent -- we think students should enjoy parking in the core while it exists. Students with autos should make a special effort to clog lots in the campus' core. Let faculty members know what it is to walk; let's see a little academic baggage carried up the hills into the halls of academe by our distinguished faculty.

Perhaps student entities on campus should reconsider breaks given to the parking elite; we could, say, trade parking for racquetball privileges in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome; perhaps ASUI facilities should be closed to the faculty in toto. This is something the ASUI Senate should take up.

We want yours

The Argonaut has not issued its Palouse Review supplement in several years. This year, however, Palouse Review returns, with an expanded format and lots of space for expressions of creativity.

Palouse Review will feature the arts of the Palouse. Original fiction, poetry, line art, photography and other forms of art are welcome for inclusion. Students, community people, faculty, administrators, staff and transients are invited to submit art for Palouse Review; the supplement is the community's chance to shine!

Palouse Review will be issued with the Argonaut's graduation issue, May 10. The deadline for entries is 5 p.m., Friday, May 3. Submissions may be brought to the Argonaut office at any time during the normal work week.

We are looking forward to seeing your best work!

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They must be typed, double spaced, signed in ink and must include the name, address, phone number and university I.D. or driver's license number of the author. Letters may be edited for length, clarity and mechanical mistakes. Letters should be limited to 250 words. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse letters that are libelous or in bad taste. Letters will be published as they are received.

ARMS CONTROL

A space for you

Jane Freund

In a problem-solving class which I took recently, the professor warned against getting so involved in a problem that an obvious solution would be overlooked. He stressed the need to "step back and examine a problem and its solution from an 'outsider's'" point of view.

Using this professor's method, let's "step back" from the campus parking problem and examine it and the solution proposed by "the people who deliver the services" (i.e. the Faculty Council (FC) solution).

PROBLEM: The campus lacks adequate visitor parking. FC SOLUTION: No additional visitor spaces were allocated in the Faculty Council solution.

PROBLEM: Many parking lots need paving and lighting. FC SOLUTION: "That lighting and design of parking lots continue to be improved." However, these improvements take MONEY. Yet, the Faculty Council solution does not provide for enough increased funding to make these improvements possible. Even if the 485 exclusive parking spaces were oversold at a rate of 2 to 1, the Faculty Council proposal would only raise approximately $15,000 in additional revenue. For sake of comparison, the Infirmary Lot would cost approximately $15,000 to pave (not to mention lighting costs).

PROBLEM: The need exists for a storage (or long-term) lot. FC SOLUTION: "That a storage lot be created on the perimeter of the campus and that storage be permitted only in such other lots as so designated." This idea is not a concrete solution, but rather a "definite maybe." What lots are going to be designated? What constitutes "storage" (1 day, 2 days, etc.)? Finally, how can a storage lot be created without additional funding?

PROBLEM: The campus does not have enough short-term (i.e. 15-30 minutes) parking in crucial areas. FC SOLUTION: The Faculty Council offered no solution to this problem.

FC SOLUTION: Prohibit students from parking in the lots by Morrill Hall, Home Economics, Kibbie Dome-East End, Administration, Steel House-Music, Gault-Upham, Memorial Gym-Swim Center-PEB, Agricultural Science and Infirmary. PROBLEM: The TRUE problem behind this solution is still unclear. Let's look at some of the possible problems which may have provoked this solution:

POSSIBLE PROBLEM 1: "The people who deliver the services" should have priority. This "holier than thou" attitude must be stopped! The faculty, staff, administrators and students are all here to work together! Until EVERYONE accepts this fact, we will beat our heads against each other rather than working together to improve ourselves and the university.

POSSIBLE PROBLEM 2: The students are capable of walking to their destinations. Lumping all of the students together as being capable of walking everywhere is as unfair as lumping all faculty, staff and administrators of being incapable of walking everywhere. Perhaps the Faculty Council should have examined the proposal suggested (facetiously) by Holli Crawford, who is a student member of Faculty Council. Ms. Crawford's solution was to allow anybody over 60 to park closest to the buildings, anybody between 55 and 59 to park next to these people and so on down the line. This proposal may have been facetious, but it demonstrated the lack of consideration that the Faculty Council proposal has for students who cannot walk long distances.

Perhaps I am unsure as to why this solution was proposed, but I sure as to why it is wrong with this solution. First, the closure of the lots does not eliminate congested parking in the core lots. The Faculty Council's proposal changes the "hunting license" status of the parking permit to one of an "exclusive hunting license." Second, some students will be prohibited from parking next to their place of residence. How many faculty, staff and administrators would like to be told that they cannot park in their own driveway? Third, ill students will not be able to park in the Infirmary Lot when receiving treatment. Many more specific problems could be presented regarding this closure of lots, but they become more apparent with closer examination.

Now that I have presented the problems with parking and the problems with the Faculty Council, what is the solution? No proposal is going to be perfect, but I firmly believe that the Parking Committee's proposal is very sound and answers many of the problems which I have presented. When the general faculty meets this Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in the Ag Science Auditorium, I hope that they ask themselves if the Faculty Council proposal is the best solution to the parking problem. In other words, I hope that they "step back" from the problem.

Activities club

Editor,

Concerning the faculty council meeting of Tuesday, April 16, we must say that we were absolutely disgusted not only with the issue concerning reserved parking for faculty, but even more so with the very unprofessional manner in which the meeting was conducted. The childish actions portrayed by Chairman Fluhrer and the council were very reminiscent of nothing more than a high school activities club, in which everyone always wanted to get home in time for dinner. Parliamentary procedure was quite abused in the fact that the only words the council seemed to know near the end of the meeting was "I move for question."

Dealing with the parking issue, the faculty council seemed to be digging a hole in which they actually seemed to bury themselves. Several times it was brought out by individual council members that their plan was full of holes, and the main intent of railroading it through faculty council was for the purpose of trying to get something passed concerning their objective. The unique thing about it is that in their extreme haste, they did not seem to solve any major problems, nor did they take the time to research answers towards many other questions that were brought out. In allocating 485 parking spots to be available to all faculty and staff on campus, the faculty council merely assigned an exclusive hunting permit among themselves making no provision on how these spaces would be allocated.

Chairman Fluhrer's very condescending attitude toward the concerned students present left little to be desired. I found it quite interesting that faculty, both on and off the council, had no trouble in obtaining recognition whereas students were overlooked several times and quite rudely cut off from much of their debate on the basis that it was irrelevant. The faculty council was very inconsiderate in the fact that two weeks ago they held their vote in order that the ASUI make their own proposal, yet they took no time in reviewing that proposal, and any debate directed towards it was called out of order.

We would recommend that in the future when the faculty council deals with problems which impact the university as a whole, they should take into consideration the views of all parties concerned rather than just their own selfish needs.

Mike Trail, Larry Seid

MX not needed

Editor,

The recent House and Senate votes appropriating 1.5 billion dollars for the production of 21 new Mx missiles contradicts polls which show that a large majority of Americans favor a reduction of our nuclear stockpile. Why then are our representatives voting to further accelerate the arms race? One reason may be that our elected officials pay little attention to a silent constituency.

As citizens of a democracy, we are responsible for educating ourselves on this life threatening issue. We have relied on military "experts" to give us new weapon systems which they claim make our nation secure and yet we are living today in a world where many children believe they will not have a future. Is this the national security we look to the experts for our continued reliance on? The judgement of others is leading to the development of the most costly and destabilizing nuclear weapons to date, namely the MX missile and President Reagan's Strategic

Defense Initiative.

It is time for all of us, who desire a secure future for our children, to educate ourselves and to make certain our informed voices are heard. If we do not take responsibility and control of our future we will be like lemmings marching to the sea, led by a military "expert."

Kathleen M. Shields

Re-evaluate fees

Editor,

I'm underwhelmed at the prospect of another student fee increase. If we carefully scrutinize the cost of education at UI, perhaps we would consider exchanging the dishonest, pusillanimous form of taxation without representation for an honest system labeled elsewhere as "tuition."

Recent Argonaut articles indicate that the golf course is operating in the red. Do I need the golf course for a quality college education? Athletics is gaining much attention as a monetary loser. If I don't par-

Targhee Hall is a University of Idaho tradition with roots dating back to 1938. It is one of the last of many cooperatives that made the U of I famous during the Depression Era.

However, this piece of Idaho history is beginning to run into some problems with enrollment and the basic appearance of the hall. The hall has been averaging 20 to 30 persons below capacity and there have been complaints to Housing by new recruits that the hall looks like a dump. The Hall members refuse to take the blame, claiming that few of their work orders are ever answered by Housing.

It was also discovered that someone in Housing during the last year was sending potential recruits elsewhere. This part of the problem has been eliminated.

Housing has now asked the hall to put together a tentative plan of action for improvements on the hall. The outcome of those plans may change the individual character of the hall.

Many of the rooms have been painted to match individuals' tastes and one of the main features are wooden lofts in place of the tradition metal bunks. These lofts give the men more space and a more personal flavor to their room. However, there have been complaints to Housing about lofts that have been left in the room and are not wanted by new occupants.

It has also been said that some of the lofts are unsafe. The men of Targhee have countered this claim and are willing to have their lofts inspected.

Many also claim that the current bunks, stored in the trunk room, are in poor condition and are no longer safe to sleep on without repair.

Housing has offered to do one of two things. The first would be to build standardized lofts for the hall, although many of the rooms differ in size. Those residents who would rather have bunks would be out of luck.

The second plan would be to standardize all of the rooms to match other dorms on campus. This would mean the bunks would be replaced in the room, with the option for the men to build their own lofts and then remove them at the end of the year.

Currently, the hall officers are favoring the second plan with the feeling that Housing would not be too likely to do much for them if the first is chosen. They have yet to make a final decision and turn it over to Housing representative Jim Bauer of Student Advisory Services.

But what factors make this hall so independently oriented?

The men of Targhee, unlike the rest of the dorm system with the exception of Steel House, have their own separate dining hall and kitchen. They buy their own food, pay for a cook and trade-off serving in the kitchen during meal times, much like a fraternity. They also have no janitor, since they also take turns cleaning up the hall. This enables them to keep their expenses down in comparison to other mens' halls on campus. Currently, the men of Targhee are paying just over $500 a semester for board (21 meals a week) and about $360 per semester for a double room.

The goal of low expense was the reason for the cooperatives and was vital for the students of the 1930's during the Great Depression. The first cooperative hall in the United States was founded here at Idaho in the fall of 1932.

This first cooperative hall was formed in the basement of the LDS Institute. The next year, the first official university cooperative was put together by engineering students and called Senior Hall.

Neack and forth, conversion of Ridenbaugh Hall to a co-op, which is now the oldest building on the UI campus. And on August 1, 1935, the Board of Regents gave approval to UI President Mervin G. Neale to build Idaho Club.

Idaho Club was a one-story frame building, much like Army barracks, that housed 118 men. Demands for co-op's continued to rise and so did the forming and building of them on the Idaho campus.

In 1938, Idaho Club gained a neighbor called Campus Club that was built along basically the same lines as the first building. Campus Club is the forerunner of the current Targhee.

The two buildings were located behind the present College of Agriculture with Idaho Club located at the current 6th Street corner and Campus Club along side, facing the street.

The hall remained open until the war when it was used to house U.S. troops on campus along with Idaho Club, Hays, Forney, and Lindley. Shortly after the war, the hall was the first to resume operation as a co-op in 1945.

A year later, they reopened their kitchen and caught the eye

Ernest D. Ables, 51, has been acting dean of the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences at UI since last July. He has a Ph.D. in zoology-wildlife ecology and a master's degree in wildlife management, both from the University of Wisconsin. He has a bachelor's degree in zoology from Oklahoma State University.

Ables was associate dean of academics in the UI forestry college from 1974-82 and has headed the fish and wildlife department from 1982 to the present. He has also had other faculty experience at Texas A & M and the Oklahoma State Conservation Department.

Ables has a lot of international experience, which includes working overseas doing consulting, advising and research activities at the College of Agriculture, Seoul National University in Suweon, Korea and with the Honduran Forest Service. He also taught the first course in wildlife ecology and management to wildlife workers and students at Harbin, in the People's Republic of China.

His research has included radio-tracking studies of impala antelope in addition to research on baboons, mountain reedbuck and Thomson's gazelle in Kenya, Tanzania, and the Republic of South Africa.

No date has yet been set for Ables to meet students and give the seminar.

of the Idaho Argonaut of that year saying, "One of the semester's most interesting stories of growth comes from the Campus Club."

"From a handful of students living there last semester, it has grown to a group of over 100, who have combined to successfully develop all the possible benefits of group living."

However, 13 years later, the hall was to face its greatest tragedy ever, when a fire caused by an electrical short destroyed the original building on May 14, 1958.

All of the 109 students were able to escape the blaze. This was a relief to the U of I community who had just lost three students in the Gault Hall fire of October 1956.

Shortly afterwards, U of I President Donald R. Theophilus announced plans to build a new co-op building at the corner of Blake and Taylor avenues.

The new building could only house 60 due to lack of funds to build a larger building, though as a former resident of the Campus Club, Theophilus thought highly of the hall.

In fall of 1974, the hall was still facing problems in finding recruits and was told that the name caused confusion with new students thinking it to be a bar.

The members of Campus Club then passed a resolution to change the name and the Board of Regents gave their approval. So that in the fall of 1975, Targhee made its "first" appearance on campus. The hall was named after the mountains in Southern Idaho by forestry majors.

Still, the name was the only thing that changed and the hall continues as what is described as by members, as a half-way house between Independents and Greeks.

Current talk on the hall concerns the possibility of another Targhee reunion, the first was held in Sept. of '81, and they may include alumni from all former cooperative halls on campus in the reunion.

participate, must I support it? A portion of our fees support lecture notes. Baloney! Let the otiose sloths get to class and take their own notes.

Last year $19,063 of fee subsidy was allocated in the ASUI budget for outdoor programs. I was told it included a summer outfitting program of river related items such as boatman, shuttle driver, and river trip transportation. No kidding! We all pay for that.

An outdoor rentals item in last year's budget (and I assume this year's also) was for life jackets, rafts, stowbags and large coolers. Can you believe it?

These are only a few of the items we support with "fees." We hear that abominably low faculty salaries are a real threat to the quality of UI. I believe it.

Around the campus grounds and facilities much neglect exists because of lack of funds to maintain them. When have new buildings been built? We hear that equipment needs updating in all departments for classroom instruction and research. In at least one lab classroom, students must stand on a cement floor for a two-hour class if they don't arrive early and get one of the few seats available.

Some of the costs we share, such as building bonds, insurance and identification cards are fair for everyone. Some costs such as student health, locker fees and marching band are marginally applicable to all.

Some costs such as the golf course, student bar debates, entertainment, Gem of the Mountains, outdoor programs, lecture notes, and an ASUI that doesn't represent the 53 percent of off-campus students are downright discriminatory.

Get real, folks. It's time we became hard-nosed consumers if we expect to be qualified job applicants when we get out into the competitive real world.

May I suggest a possible solution: Let's start with "zero-base" budgeting. Let's prepare a new budget of "fees" to include non-discriminatory, educationally vital items that we can afford and that will enhance our knowledge in classroom instruction and research. Let's launch a campaign to inform the entire student body fully what all the new budget items mean. Then let's have a student body election to accept/reject the new "fee" budget. If it is accepted, fine. If not, let's revise it until we can live with it. Then let's open a meaningful dialogue/lobby campaign with the State Board of Education. I think it is possible that we can shop more wisely, and get more for our "fees."

Story by Eb Gaines
and Megan Guido

What is it about rugby that makes a person get out on a field and play to the point of exhaustion in a contact sport wearing

What is it about rugby that makes a person get out on a field and play to the point of exhaustion in a contact sport wearing no protective gear? They are many answers, and a rugby player and his game are often misunderstood.

You're on the pitch inside the 22 meter line at close quarters with the opponent. You're down six to four and in the thirty-eighth minute of the forty minutes in the second half. The ball is spun out to the fly-half who attempts a fifteen meter drop goal. It's good and your team wins by one.

After the game, it's common courtesy for the home team to host the visiting team to a night on the town, commonly known as the third half. Team Chants and songs are exchanged and drinking contests may take place. As a player, you could very possibly end up in a line with your team, after the game, facing a similar line of your opponents. When the sound occurs, each member of the team must guzzle his beer then place the empty glass upside down on top of his head. This is done in the order of the line and the team who's last member finishes his beer first, wins. It all adds to a type of respect and camaraderie between opponents that many sports cannot claim.

Just as soccer is the gentleman's game played by ruffians, rugby is the ruffians game played by gentlemen. According to those who play it, it is the most complete sport—it involves a unique type of commitment both on and off the playing field. A commitment that, at times, involves an intense seriousness, and at other times, a rowdy sense of humor.

Ron Landeck, who in 1965 was selected as All Ivy while playing football at Princeton University and considered for the Heismann Trophy, is now a Moscow attorney with considerable rugby experience under his belt. While working for a law firm in Denver, Landeck played on a Colorado team that toured France one year. After battling it out with the University of Marseilles, a party was thrown that night for both the teams at a club. The French team dressed, in coat and tie and led by their rugby club president, proceeded to all stand up and simultaneously toast the visiting American team during the dinner ceremony. "After toasting us they turned around and dropped throw on the whole assemblage of people attending the seven course meal with champagne."

"It's a very essential part of rugby—," said Craig Lewis, UI law professor and long time rugger, "the idea of the really tough physical sport then having a great time with the people you played with and against. It's not like super competitive sports where you don't talk to your opponents. Anyone who has gotten into the game, and understands it, knows what that's all about. You can go anywhere in the country and run into someone who plays rugby and there's an instant bond there."

Wives of rugby players evidently don't share that bond. Occasionally, they may take the back seat to the sport which involves such a peculiar adherence.

"If I had the choice to choose between a rugby player and an accountant," said Karen Lewis, sarcastically pointing out the boredom associated with having to put up with the bawdy game, "I think I would have a hard time choosing."

"The sport is greater than the man," said Landeck. "The thing I like about it is it's unselfish features. It's just as important to pass the ball as it is to score the try."

"One of my most memorable experiences," said Joe McGurkin, Moscow real estate professional and an essential element to Moscow's Blue Mountain Rugby Team on and off the field, "was the game against Trill, a Canadian team.

"We were playing for the Columbia River Invitational Cup up there. It was a seven hour drive and they didn't want to come all the way down here, so fifteen of us headed up there. Three of our guys had a flat tire on the way up there. They were about forty minutes behind everybody else so when we got to the field they made us start with twelve guys against their fifteen. It was great, the first half we were down 14-10. We really had to compensate pulling some of our other positions. We didn't play with breaks nor an eight man. Finally at half time these other guys showed up. We ended up winning 27-14 with a full team. We took them downtown and they were really unsportsmanlike. They were a sore bunch of losers."

Landeck, Lewis and McGurkin have all, at one time or another played for a team out of Denver named the Harlequins (Quins). Now, the three compete on a team named Grey Mountain, an aging collection of past Blue Mountain players. Grey Mountain sporadically travels and competes in Northwestern tournaments. The members consider themselves as "coarse" players, meaning "you've already run your course." According to Lewis, this level of competition is played by the "true gentlemen" of the sport.

"We had a rule on the (Quin's) team," said Lewis. "Wednesday evening was practice—and the rule was that you couldn't play in the game on Saturday if you didn't make it to the party after the practice. There might have been two guys out there at the practice, but everybody would show up at the party."

Other local rugby players take a little more serious approach to the game, such as the University of Idaho team this spring.

Bill Ekern, coach of the UI Rugby Club for three years, says to some, the game looks like "tackle the man with the ball."

"You have to be psychologically tough to play," he said. "You run the very real risk of being stepped on. The ball cannot be passed forward, only laterally and backwards. You develop a fixation on the ball. Anybody who stops you from getting it becomes the transgressor of aggression."

Deeder Petersen, captain of the UI Blue Mountain Rugby Team, and Lance Levy have played rugby for the UI since 1981. Levy explained how he got involved in rugby.

"I went to see Deeder play in a rugby match and saw him getting banged around and thought, 'This is crazy', but then I went to the team party after the game and met the players and found out a unique attitude concerning the sport."

UI sprinters swat Ducks, Cougars

By Tom Liberman
Staff Writer

In the cold, snow and freezing weather in Pullman the Idaho sprinters stopped a Washington State University track steam roller that dealt the University of Oregon its worst ever defeat.

The WSU track team won 12 of 19 events in there 107-55 defeat of the defending NCAA Champion Ducks while also outscoring the UI 116 to 34.

Virtually all of the Idaho points came in the sprints. The poor weather kept the times slow on the whole but Vandal Coach Mike Keller said, "The weather is the same for everybody."

In the 100m dash the Vandals displayed an unexpected mastery over last years NCAA third place finisher Lee Gordon by taking first, second and third.

Chris Stokes and Everton Wanliss both finished with times of 10.90 but judges ruled that Stokes had won the race, meanwhile Dave Smith took third .12s ahead of Gordon.

Smith said he came to race

Vandal sprinter Dave Smith is all smiles as he flies to victory in the 4 X 100 meter relay over the vaunted WSU squad. Argonaut Photo by Phil Lauro exclusively in the 400 relay and that he was not worried about the 100 and 200m dashes.

In the 200 Gabriel Tiacoh of WSU managed a first place, finishing just ahead of three Vandals, Stokes, Smith and Sam Koduah.

Tiacoh is the Olympic Silver medalist in the 400 although he did not race in the event out of fear of pulling a muscle in the cold weather.

The 400m was another success story for the Vandals as Sam Koduah won with a time of 48.47.

The big race for the Vandals was the 400m relay in which WSU had beaten the UI earlier in the year at the Kibbie dome.

The race was neck and neck until the end when Cougar anchorman Chris Durr was slowed with a slight hamstring pull in the final stretch.

Then Smith got his wish as he pulled away to win the race with a rather slow time of 40.42. Other Vandals in the race were, Koduah, Stokes, and Wanliss.

There will be a rematch between the sprinters next week when the Vandals again travel to Pullman to take on WSU, Boise State and Oregon State University.

While the Vandal sprinters were scoring points most of the rest of the Idaho team was being beaten thoroughly.

Keller was happy with the performance of Senior Glenn Mitthum. "Glenn got a lifetime best in the 400 intermediate hurdles with a time that makes him second best in the Big Sky."

His time of 52.55s was good enough for a second place finish in the event and was only 2 seconds off a school record.

Tim Taylor of the Vandals took a fourth in the shot put and a fifth in the discus for the only field event scoring the team managed.

The pole vaulters were again a disappointment as the two UI vaulters were not able to crack the opening height. Keller was as upset about this as anything.

"We have to solve this problem by the time the Big Sky meet comes around, we need the points."

The victory for WSU upped their dual meet victory streak to 54 straight and established them as one of the top dual meet teams in the country.

Ruggers nab No. 2 seed

The University of Idaho Rugby Club won two matches and lost two on their way to a second place finish in the W.S.U.-U.I. Collegiate Rugby Tournament held in Pullman April 13-14. Rugby teams from seven colleges in the Northwest participated in the two day event.

The W.S.U. Rugby Club won the tournament and a combined side made up of players from E.W.U., W.S.U. and U.I. placed third.

On Saturday Idaho defeated W.S.U. in a Pacific Northwest collegiate playoff match by a score of 17-16, Idaho gaining victory on a last minute try by Flanker Buddy Levy. The win puts Idaho into the Pacific Coast College Tournament in Corvallis, Oregon April 25, 26, and 27, and Idaho will be seeded second in the Northwest behind hosts Oregon State University.

Also scoring tries for Idaho in the close match with W.S.U. were Fly-half Lance Levy and Winger Rich Moore, while Levy added one conversion and one penalty goal. Captain Deeder Petersen and Eric Jones made crucial assists in the match that eliminated W.S.U. from the Pacific Coast regional competition.

Baseball been bery, bery good, leave it be

Greg Kilmer

There's some changes going on out there and I don't like it.

Ask anyone that knows me, I'm a real easy going guy. Not much gets my dander up, except that is if you start messing with America's favorite pastime, baseball.

Hey, the game has been around through two world wars, a depression and Richard Nixon. It's been just fine, if something works don't mess with it, leave it the hell alone.

I've been into boxscores since I was a little shortstop back in 1967. For all of you that were still a little to wet behind the ears to remember, that was the year the greatest ball player of all time, Carl Yastrzemski, was roaming left field for the Boston Red Sox.

All Yaz did that year was win the Triple Crown (let one of our recent day million dollar babies do that) in leading the red hose to the American League pennant.

I guess it was then that I got the notion that baseball goes hand in hand with beer.

My dear baseball-loving mom's Saturday afternoon constitution was sitting in front of the ol' tube with a beer and pretzels with mustard watching Koufax mow down San Francisco. I thought that was the way it was supposed to be, and I'm one that has a hard time breaking a habit.

Well, this is what's disturbing me, whats this noise I hear about LA beer in Detroit, special dry sections in Seattle, no beer sales after the seventh inning in Kansas City.

I don't care if he did get Lionel Richie to sing "Party all night long" at the 84 games, if Peter Traverso is responsible for this travesty, he's gonna hear from me.

I can stomach the lowering the mound, no spitters and the DH rule but don't start messing with the hops. It's just not American.

Being a linkster, I never really played the game (truth is, I stunk). You know the type, no glove, no bat, great chatter. But my love of the game has never slipped a notch, some of my fondest memories come from the ballpark.

Watched a double dipper in the King Dome a couple summers past, Sox vs Mariners. By the seventh inning stretch, my cronies and I had our own signals with Bill the beerman (of Ranier fame). Touch the hat-one beer, pull the belt-round us. By the end of the second game, our pants wouldn't stay up from all the tugging at our belts. Wouldn't have had the guts to ask the immortal Yaz for his autograph either if it hadn't been for the liquid courage.

Another good memory was watching a Boise Buckaroo game at Borah Field. I was sitting with the Right Field Rowdies with my then current heart throb, when some Eugene Emerald sliced off a monstrous foul ball right over us. I knew this rainmaker was gonna be coming down like a missile but that courage took over. Made an over the shoulder catch that the "Say Hey Kid" would have been proud of. Little Boise beauty, I vowed that nite Boise say, even with my hands soothing in my beer cup.

I know some of you abstainers say that partakers get too ugly at baseball games but compared to a guy watching an extra inning game who hasn't had a beer since the seventh, they look like Bo Derek.

Play ball and bring me a beer.

Deidre McCalla makes Palouse tour stop

Singer, songwriter and guitarist Deidre McCalla is touring to promote her new release on Olivia Records, Don't Doubt It, and will be in concert at WSU this Friday.

McCalla, whose performance begins at 8 p.m. at the Butch's Den in the Compton Union Building, has been a working musician for 12 years. She has toured the United States performing in solo concert, as part of an acoustic duo called "Gypsy," and as lead guitarist/vocalist for Milwaukee's six-women jazz-rock band "Breakwater."

The concert is being produced by More Music for Moscow, a group of area residents who promote women's music, and the UI and WSU Women's Centers.

Known for the rhythmic undercurrents of her music and the poetic integrity of her lyrics, McCalla creates vocal textures which glide easily from mocha rich sweetness to high energy dramatic intensity.

Tam Martin, the publicity director for Olivia Records, described McCalla's music as "acoustic pop."

"It's a mixture of rock, jazz, R & B — it's hard to classify," said Martin.

Other artists featured on Olivia Records are Meg Christian and Chris Williamson. The small California label has enjoyed quite a measure of success.

Diane Sexton, a partner in More Music for Moscow, said McCalla's music is upbeat and happy, something that women's music needs more of.

"I think that she's new, creative, innovative voice in women's music," said Sexton. McCalla marks as the begining of her professional career the release of her first Roulette Records album, Fur Coats and Blue Jeans, in the spring of 1973. Since then, her mainstage performance highlights have included the New England Women's Retreat, the National Women's Music Festival and the Michigan Women's Music Festival, as well as major club appearances in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

A theatre graduate of Vassar College and the National Theatre Institute, McCalla was a member of the ensemble cast of the film "Chords of Fame" — a docu-drama on the life of 60's folk singer Phil Ochs.

The native New Yorker's songs have been published in Home Girls-A Black Feminist Anthology, Conditions Five: The Black Women's Issue and Sinister Wisdom; her non-fiction work can be found in The Coming Our Stories, Chrysalis, and Paid My Dues.

Admission to the concert is $5. Tickets may be purchased in advance at Guitar's Friend and Heartwinds (in the Armstrong Brookfield Circadian) in Moscow, the Debutante Bakery (in the Combine Mall) and the Old Mole in Pullman and at the WSU and UI Women's Centers. There will be a dance following the performance. The location will be announced during the concert.

Mail orders may be placed by sending a check or money order and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to More Music for Moscow, Womens Center, University of Idaho, Moscow, ID 83843.

Roaring 20's recreated in Broadway

By Douglas Jones
Staff Writer

The UI Theatre Arts Department's second major production this semester, George Abbott's Broadway, is now in rehearsal and will open this coming Friday evening.

George Abbott wrote Broadway with Phillip Dunning, and also directed it when it was first produced on Broadway at the Broadhurst Theatre in September of 1926.

According to director Roy Fluhrer, Broadway was meant to be a drama when it was written in 1926. However, "today (some 60 years later) when you do the script straight it tends to be funny. The values have changed so much that what was considered dramatic in the context of George Abbott's Broadway in 1926, is no longer dramatic now."

Abbott, considered one of the most successful and versatile theatre craftsmen of the modern American stage, gained his reputation as a playwright by his well-paced and fast moving melodramas and farces.

Abbott is probably most noted for his series of highly successful musical comedies such as On Your Toes, The Boys From Syracuse, Where's Charley?, The Pajama Game, Damn Yankees, and New Girl In Town.

Broadway is considered one of the best plays about prohibition and racketeering written during the 1920s.

Fluhrer said that he picked Broadway after it was called to his attention by UI theater arts designer Bruce Brockman, his mother, and a friend who has had the lead in the play at the Empty Space, a professional theatre in Seattle.

"All this happened within the space of about six weeks. I got the play to take a look at it and said this would be great fun to do," he explained.

"It has a lot of good roles and it gives an opportunity for a lot of talented people to get on stage and do some (acting)," he said, adding, "It's a large cast show."

Fluhrer also said Broadway "provides the technical department a real challenge in terms of costumes, setting, and lighting so that it involves a large number of people in the department. It is a great way to end the season."

The set for Broadway is that of a large brick warehouse that has been converted into a night club. "The set is just outstanding" Fluhrer said of designer Bruce Brockman's work on the two-story set.

Although Broadway deals with the same era as the recent film The Cotton Club, Fluhrer denies that they are similar.

"It does not have the violence and terror of the gangsters that The Cotton Club has."

One thing that stands out according to Fluhrer is that the gangsters' names are common everyday American names.

"Does Steve Crandal sound like a gangster? No, it sounds like someone on an afternoon soap opera - 'Dr. Steve Crandal of General Hospital' - But this guy's the hood! He's the bad guy! They're not Italian. They're not German. They're not Chinese. There is no ethnic identification like you would expect today."

Broadway will be shown this weekend on April 26, 27, and 28 and on May 3, 4, and 5 in the Hartung Theatre. For more information, call the Theatre Arts Box Office at 885-7986.

Vandals prep for silver, gold finale

Junior quarterback Scott Linehan broke open a tight Saturday scrimmage with two touchdowns in the second quarter as the University of Idaho black squad defeated the Silver 41-20 in their fourth of five Ingrassquad games this spring. The Vandals wrap up the 1985 spring session with the annual Silver and Gold game next Saturday night at 7:00 in the Kibbie Dome.

Linehan hit tight end Scott Auker and wide receiver Brant Bengen with the two second stanza scores to pull the game away for the Black squad.

Nelson Washington, a 5-foot-9 156 pound freshman receiver, provided some excitement for the Silver squad with two long TD catches.

Running back Steve Jackson added two TD bursts for the victorious Black.

UI takes third in Seattle

The University of Idaho men's tennis team finished third at the Pacific Northwest Intercollegiate Tennis Championships held at the University of Washington with a 7-2 victory over the University of Oregon Sunday.

Idaho, now 12-5 for the season, finished tied with Washington State University in the third place position.

Vandals Efrem DelDegan, Skosh Berwald, Bob Hlavacek and Kim Carter took single wins while the teams of Berwald-Carter, DelDegan-Hlavacek and Alvarez-Jones finished off the scoring for the UI.

On Saturday, the Vandals pulled a split with the University of Portland and Washington. Idaho beat Portland 7-2 and dropped a 7-2 defeat to Pac-10 power UW.

Hlavacek had an 11-match win streak ended against UW, falling 6-7, 6-4, 6-2.

"He (Hlavacek) played a good match," Vandal coach Jim Sevall said. "Washington has a very strong squad."

"Skosh had a very good win over their No. 2 player," Sevall said of Berwald's 2-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Huskie Charlie Short. No. 6 Nate Jones picked up the other Vandal victory.

The Vandal women continued their winning ways over the weekend as they swept the University of Montana and Montana State in Missoula.

Leading the way for Idaho, 13-2 and 8-0 in conference, was Holly Benson. Benson's 15-0 record is followed closely by Pam Waller's 13-1, Jane Strathman's 13-2 and Karine Wagner's 11-2 overall record.

Ruggers, from page 12

Idaho's other win came over E.W.U.. Tom Ryden and Buddy Levy scored tries and Petersen made one conversion in the 10-0 win. Sunday Idaho was defeated by the combined side 14-4, and then by W.S.U. in the semi-final match 18-6. Leading scorer Buddy Levy accounted for all Idaho points in Sunday's matches.

Idaho plays Long Beach State in their first match in the Pacific Coast Collegiate Tournament Thursday in Corvallis.

the team had a party every weekend," remembers Petersen. "It's gone down and I don't know if that's for the better. It's part of the fun."

"You're comrades in arms after the game," said McGurkin. "It's an intense game and the relationships that develop are just as intense."

"Rugby has a history of singing songs," explained Ekern. "As a matter of fact, they're crushed when everyone doesn't know the lyrics." Many of the songs are from the 20s and have been changed into drinking songs, he said.

"It's just another tie that binds," said McGurkin. "To me these are great songs."

"Not all songs are smut-rakers," informs McGurkin. But Ekern said, "The good ones are."

"A lot of songs have sexist connotations but it's part of the tradition," remarked Peterson.

"I've seen rugby turn boys into men and old men into great people," remarked McGurkin. "The sport really brings people out of their shell."

Blue Mountain's current record is seven wins and eight losses. Their elimination of WSU made them number two in the Pacific Northwest and entitles them to attend the Pacific Coast Collegiate Championships in Corvallis, Oregon with seven other Pacific Coast college teams for the first time in May.

If the UI team wins this tournament it will go on to nationals. Ekern commented on the team's chances.

"It all depends on them not being over-awed as the new kids on the block."

For young men or old, on and off the playing field, the game is never over. The next time you run into a rugby player, and you have the time, have him tell you a story, or two, who knows...you might even be tempted.
