Playboy picketed for abuse on the Palouse

By Mike Long
Staff Writer

A chilly reception in Pullman sent the Playboy bunny hopping over the hill to Moscow to another chilly reception. Two photographers from the Playboy corporation are searching for tentative candidates for a "Girls of the Pac-10" feature from Washington State University.

Yesterday, photographers David Mecey and Steven Conway received a challenge from the WSU Women's Center to come to a forum. The two photographers declined the challenge.

"We were sent here to photograph. I am not a spokesman for the magazine," Mecey said. He continued that with such short notice, there was no way they could fit the proposed debate into their schedule.

He suggested that they contact the Playboy public relations staff. As of yet, it is unknown if such a contact has been made. This was however, only the latest in their troubles.

When they arrived in Moscow, they were greeted by protesters from the UI and WSU branches of Students for America. According to UI marcher Jim Corbett, about 15 members showed up for the march.

He was not sure of the response, however. The group members did get a chance to talk to the few curious or those adamantly against the demonstration.

Even earlier trouble arose in Pullman when photographers David Mecey and Steven Conway published ads in Washington State University's Daily Evergreen and included the name, address and phone number of the Quality Inn, where they were staying.

They were intending to use the hotel for initial interviews and photography sessions for the potential candidates. Trouble arose when the corporation failed to notify the management of the Quality Inn of its intentions.

Quality Inn manager Tom Weaver informed the photographers that they may use the room, but not for interviews and photography sessions.

Motel owner Chris Wilde was upset that prior approval for the use of the motels' name and number in the ad was not obtained.

Wilde said that approval would never have been given in the first place and that he and the company do not want to be associated with the Playboy corporation.

Following the incident, the two photographers chose not to spend further time in the Quality Inn or Pullman for that matter. Instead, they chose to travel about eight miles and across a state border to Cavanaugh's Landing in Moscow.

According to photographer Steven Conway, the corporation regrets the "...misunderstanding. But both of us came through fine and we're on talking terms."

He says the move to Moscow has caused them no inconvenience for the operation and that they have had the best turnout yet experienced on their tour, although they expect more in Seattle when they photograph for the University of Washington.

Every year, the corporation picks a conference to highlight in their collegiate calendar. The last time they were in the area was six years ago. Last year, they highlighted the Big 10.

They chose the Cavanaugh's Landing because they were unfamiliar with other Moscow motels and they wanted to find one which all of the girls would know.

He says there has been no problems with Cavanaugh's and that the hotel has been very good. The Quality Inn gave him the first trouble he has ever received, according to photographer David Mecey.

This is not Mecey's first assignment with Playboy. He has done a number of similar features for the magazine such as Women of Ma Bell, Girls of Texas and upcoming in December, the girls of Alaska.

Originally from Dallas, Texas, Mecey has worked as a staff photographer out of Chicago for the past three and one half years. He now calls Chicago his home, as does current partner Steven Conway.

Conway is currently employed as staff assistant photographer with the magazine and has been working for the publication for a year since graduating from the Art Institute of Chicago.

Senate pushes UI disinvestment from companies in South Africa

By Laurel Darrow
Staff Writer

On Wednesday the ASUI Senate voted not to consider a resolution regarding University of Idaho Foundation investments in U.S. corporations in South Africa.

Some senators said it is not an issue on which the senate should act. Others argued that there is not enough time to study the issue and act on it this semester.

The resolution, submitted by ASUI President Jane Freund, would have called upon the Foundation to sell university stocks and securities in Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corp., International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., Mobil Oil Corp. and Union Carbide unless those corporations agree to withdraw their investments in South Africa.

"What we're proposing is very much a non-violent proposal to put pressure on the South African government," said Elliot Skolnick, a member of the Idaho Coalition for Peace and Justice.

He said his group is not asking the Foundation to throw away the $1,000,000 it has invested in those corporations. It is asking the Foundation to invest that money in other corporations, he said.

"We are so instrumental, those American companies, in supporting that apartheid regime. It's a show of force to show that what's happening there, we don't like," Skolnick said.

Sen. Jana Habiger objected to the senate's considering the resolution. Seven senators agreed with her. Later in the meeting, Sen. Larry Seid tried to get the senate to reconsider their decision, but his motion failed.

Habiger argued that this is not an appropriate issue for the senate. "This is way above our heads," she said. "We have no business even considering it."

Sen. Rich Kuck disagreed. "I think this is a topic for the senate to look into," he said. "It's something the students are interested in. It's timely."

Sen. Chris Berg also said the senate should consider the resolution. "This is something that merits discussion and maybe a senate decision."

But Berg and other senators said there is not enough time this late in the semester to find out what students think about the issue. "These are million dollar investments. We need to have our students' input

Faculty parking privileges not yet voted into effect

The Agricultural Science Auditorium was about three-fourths full as approximately 40 students and 105 faculty members attended the Meeting of the University Faculty Thursday afternoon.

In the meeting, faculty members vote on proposed changes by the Faculty Council that involves UI, among these issues was the proposed change in the campus parking policy.

President Gibb opened the meeting with a few comments on the budget and how UI's faculty salaries are still lower than their peers in other states.

The first issue was the proposed addition of photography as a major under the degree of Bachelor of Fine Arts. This passed quickly and without discussion.

The next two proposals, the first involving an addition in the Student Code of Conduct dealing with theft and vandalism, and the second dealing with a proposed change in credit loads, both passed quickly after brief discussions.

The third proposal involved a change in regulation J-3, and it would require students to take their math and English requirements in their first year and continue taking them in subsequent semesters until they are finished.

Francis Seaman, professor of philosophy, opposed the change, saying many new students aren't prepared to take math in college after only two years of high school math. He thought that students should get a year or two of college under their belts before taking math, a subject many students have trouble with. He suggested that the proposal be amended to delete the part about students being required to take math their first year.

A UCGE member said that the UCGE feels that the longer a stu-

Faculty Council elects leaders

It was a changing of the guard as the present Faculty Council yielded the floor to next year's council to elect new officers, before proceeding with their own meeting Tuesday.

David J. Walker, an associate professor of Agricultural Economics, was elected president on a majority vote in the first round of voting.

N. Dale Gentry, a Special Education professor, was elected next year's council vice-president.

Candidates were nominated by the council members and voted on until one won a majority vote. All council members were eligible for nomination.

The present Faculty Council, in their last meeting of the year, referred a memorandum from the Faculty Affairs Committee (FAC), urging the council to resolve the problem of illegally filing unsigned student evaluations or summaries of these evaluations, back to committee.

Presently, these evaluations are being kept in the Office of the Faculty Secretary.

Faculty Council wants FAC to make specific recommendations and changes which are to be presented to the council next fall.

FAC suggested in the memorandum that students sign their evaluations, and that until this occurs, all unsigned student evaluations must be removed from all files.

According to the FAC, these evaluations violate the State Board of Education policies which say that "no documents that are anonymous or based on hearsay" may be placed in the open or closed personnel file.

FAC says that such violations permit appeal of all decisions pertaining to tenure, promotion and tenure review in which filed documents have been used and also open the University and administration to possible litigation by disgruntled faculty.

Also passed was a proposed regulation change which requires students pursuing a minor to discuss the proposal with an adviser in the department in which the minor is offered. The student must then declare the intention to the registrar and the department in which the minor is offered.

This change will bring the regulation into line with the needs for advising of students who elect academic minors.

The council also passed the schedule for next year's final examinations and recommendations of candidates for degrees.

dent waits to fulfill their math requirement, the better the chance that they will forget what math skills they did learn. A vote was taken and Seaman's amendment failed.

A new amendment was then proposed that would change the wording from "subsequent semesters" for the time that students could retake math classes to "subsequent years". This amendment passed.

The next item involved proposed changes in financial exigency policy and staff-reduction procedures. Although this item was rather lengthy, all five issues passed without discussion. The next proposal, involving changes in the policy of covering evaluations of academic administrators by faculty members also passed without discussion.

The proposed changes in the campus parking policy drew the most comments from both students and faculty. The faculty was very divided with an equal number of comments both for and against exclusive faculty parking in the core areas of UI.

Bill Voxman, professor of mathematics, started out saying he has walked to campus from his home for about 15 years, "without any apparent undue effects." He then went on to say how long it takes to walk to reach the center of campus from various areas on the periphery of campus, with the longest being from the Kibbie Dome parking lot to the SUB taking just over 10 minutes. From most periphery parking lots, it takes around 6-8 minutes to get to the campus core.

"To prove my point, I actually timed these distances today," he said. "I did this to show the seriousness of the problem," he added with a laugh.

Philip Deutchman, professor of physics, supported Voxman's amendment and was followed by Jane Freund's plea for faculty understanding of the students situation. She said she was particularly disturbed by the fact that students wouldn't be able to park at the Student Health Service, the lot next to Gault-Upham, or in front of the music building and Steel House. "We're all in this together," she said.

Students chosen for AIPAC conference

By Mike Long
Staff Writer

This past weekend, two UI students were chosen to fly back to Washington, D.C. for a policy conference of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee or AIPAC.

UI liberal Renee Grimmer and UI conservative Bruce Skaug joined forces with students and politicians from across the country in standing behind the belief that a strong America is a strong Israel and visa-versa.

The two students were approached by Idaho political science professor Amos Yoder who was formerly part of the Israeli foreign service.

After they expressed interest in the offer to go back to D.C., the two were called by AIPAC representatives who volunteered to pay all expenses for the trip with the exception of $58.

Skaug and Grimmer jumped at the chance. Senior Skaug originally became interested in Israel when he wrote a paper on Israel's political system for a class last year.

Israel was of concern to Grimmer after she read the novel "Exodus" by Leon Uris which she called a fictional work with a factual basis.

She latered looked deeper into the holocaust and so she says she also has moral ties with the Israeli issue. The students were put through a number of workshops with many speakers while a number of congressmen and governors were campaigning.

Skaug had a chance to meet with Idaho Governor John Evans, presidential hopeful Jack Kemp and more. The most interesting political point of the entire conference was the joining of both liberals and conservatives in support of Israel.

The intent of the students' presence on the conference centered on building a strong pro-Israel feeling on campuses across the U.S.

AIPAC hopes to use this to counter the growing spread of anti-Semitism by arab groups at various colleges. The main groups are the Organization of Arab Students, the Muslim Student Association and the General Union of Palestinian Students.

AIPAC says the groups use buzz words to deceive such as occupied territory rather than Israel and the Palestinian Question instead of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The Israeli opposition would like nothing better then to see Israel off the map. Fawaz Turki, one of the most outspoken of those who are against Israel has said, "Our goal is the total destruction of Israel. There is no room for compromise."

Skaug said that those who claim to be Anti-Zionists are also Anti-Israeli, that they're one and the same. They are also denying them the right to a feeling of nationalism.

Israel also needs our help economically according to Grimmer, now that they are running over a thousand percent inflation rate. A grant of 3.2 billion dollars in economic and military aid in the works.

Grimmett plans to start the formation of a pro-Israeli group on the Idaho campus next year.

THE IDAHO ARGONAUT

It really is a playpen

They don't carry rattles, but ASUI senators really do act like they're in a playpen.

You remember the playpen episode. An Argonaut editor got into a lot of trouble for writing this headline: "Two join senate playpen."

Maybe that was not an appropriate headline, but I've learned this semester, reporting on the senate, that it was true.

In their meetings, senators act like children. For example, they throw tantrums. Sen. Keli Patton threw a pen at Sen. Gary Lindberg one time. Vice President Mike Trail got mad because he thought Sens. Gary Lindberg and Chris Berg were abusing parliamentary procedure. "It pisses me off, Gary, it really does," he said.

Senators even sit like children, tipping back their chairs. But most children don't get to sit like that too long. Their mommies make them stop because they might tip the chair back too far and hit their little heads — like Sen. Mike Felton did at a meeting a few weeks ago.

That's nothing compared to what Sen. David Dose once did. He shot off a toy gun one night. Funny, I didn't see "Show and Tell" on the agenda.

They pass notes, too. But the notes probably relate to senate business, right? Maybe, but senators sure giggle a lot about those notes. And what about the "34B" sign that a senator held up at one meeting? Apparently it had something to do with the president's bra size, but I have yet to see a bill or resolution about that.

This is what senators do during public meetings. I'd hate to see how these kiddies act off the job.

What is disturbing is that these people represent University of Idaho students. And if they act like children, what does that say about you?

Most of their hijinks can be overlooked. We can forgive a few bad jokes, a few tantrums, a few passed notes. We can even forgive a few toy guns. After all, as they say, all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

But Wednesday night, they went too far. They embarrassed some one and injured her reputation — for the record.

The matter came up during "communications," when the senators elect the winner of the Broken Pin Award. It's given to the senator who has done the most stupid thing during the week. It's a nice idea because it's all done in fun and it probably helps develop esprit de corps or something.

Unfortunately, the senators' discussions about the stupid things they do also result in some strange items on the public record. But most of the things they say are just strange and sometimes they are even funny. Most of the time they are not defamatory.

But this time, several senators stated for the record that a certain senator gets too drunk at parties. She even falls and spills drinks in her hair, but she keeps on partying. That is what Sens. Gary Lindberg, John Vanderpool and Holly Rickett stated for the record Wednesday night.

Under normal circumstances, a person could get sued for saying such things in public. But these things were said during a public meeting, so it is all right. It is not a nice thing to do, but it is legal.

At most public meetings, though, you won't hear such things. You won't see people giggling about notes or shooting toy guns either.

An ASUI senator recently faced a possible reprimand for acting in an unprofessional manner. The charge was dropped, and it's just as well because if acting unprofessionally were cause for punishment, all of our little senators would deserve a good spanking.

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They must be typed, double spaced, signed in ink and must include the name, address, phone number and university I.D. or driver's license number of the author. Letters may be edited for length, clarity and mechanical mistakes. Letters should be limited to 250 words. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse letters that are libelous or in bad taste. Letters will be published as they are received.

Pull over buddy this is the senate.

Paul Baier

An incident occurred a couple of weeks ago that confirmed my suspicions.

Ever since my name has been associated with the good ol' Argonaut, I've had the feeling that someone has been following me.

At first, I thought that it might be Students for America, but they're too busy picketing gay dances and Playboy photographers to worry about a lost soul like me.

I knew it couldn't be the student loan people, because I don't graduate for another two weeks.

I just couldn't figure it out until the incident occurred.

In case you've forgotten the incident, and you probably have, because the ASUI Senate has, I'll refresh your memory.

The Argonaut features editor, Ol' Leadfoot Lyons, was on his way to Lewiston in the ASUI truck to cover a lecture with his wife and little girl.

Chris Berg, of the ASUI (Associated Student Undercover Institution) Senate, stepped out of Gambinos after having a medium beer (a mere 32 ounces) and noticed this wild band in the ASUI truck.

Forever on the lookout for bad guys and newspaper men, Berg and his buddies Starsky and Hutch lit after them.

I don't know why Lyons didn't simply outrun them, because that truck will get right down and boogie if you want it to, but he figured he'd pull over and let the tailgaters by.

But, lo and behold, there was the ASUI Kid fighting waste and corruption.

Now I'm all for fighting waste and corruption; in fact I think the senate could have been eliminated a long time ago, but the way Berg handled this particular situation stinks.

A quick phone call would have told him that the truck had been officially checked out by a responsible ASUI employee doing his job.

But of course Berg claimed that he was being responsible by making sure student fees weren't being abused.

I've got a good four-letter word for that, but I'll settle for bull.

Since the senate voted not to reprimand Berg for conduct unbecoming a senator, the only thing left from the incident is a bad taste.

But at least now we know our elected student officials are keeping graft and corruption off of Idaho's highways and in the parking lots where it belongs.

And speaking of parking lots. You've all heard by now of the great UI parking lot crisis. That's the one that gives the faculty the prime parking spaces on campus.

It really has raised quite a fuss. While other colleges across the country are protesting silly things like apartheid, we have the burning issue of parking to keep us aware.

It looks like the faculty has won the first battle, but I think I've come up with a way to win the war.

I think that the ASUI Senate should form its own version of the secret police called the PP's (for Parking Patrol) and get its most qualified member, Sen. Berg, to be the commandant.

We could give him a uniform, a whistle and a mean little meter maid scooter and turn him loose on the faculty.

If they abuse their privileges the PP's hassle the hell out of them, and they lose their gold-sticker parking spots. Then we hold a lottery, a lucky student gets a good parking space and the profits go toward a motor home for the Argonaut so we can take out road trips in comfort.

In the meantime, I'm still going to be checking my rear view mirror. You can never tell who might be following you—an over-zealous member of our esteemed senate or an overbearing instructor trying to crowd you out of your parking space.

Letters

Kicked off campus

Editor,
I realize this letter may not be read by everyone--after all, I am a lowly U of I student. When I started college three years ago I was an idealistic eighteen year old. Tuition (oh god, please forgive me-I mean "fees") was only $408 and I was allowed to park my car on campus. Now tuition is $485 and my car and I have been kicked off campus!
Now, at the age of 21, I am not as idealistic as I used to be. But I still find myself amazed at the final decision regarding parking at UI. I kept hoping the magic word "compromise" would pop into someone's head. But No! Let's give the students the shaft. Compromise would mean that the faculty/administration would have to settle for something less than total control of the campus. I would like to thank the faculty and the rest of the "higher beings" for putting us lowly, slimy students back in our place--on the streets! And in such a short time too-unbelievable.
I know that, as a student, I am supposed to respect faculty/administration. And I do--as individuals. But when I think of the faculty and administrators as a whole, feelings of resentment and animosity arise. One can be sure that if students were to solve a problem in such a discriminatory, rash, and hurried way, they would hear about it. So--since the roles are reversed--I'm letting you hear about it faculty!

Terri Houde

Glad to be going

Editor,
While counting down the days to when I am an Engineer, I felt this strange urge to write a Senior will; you know, sentimental stuff.
This senior will not miss the annual temporary fee increase. I will not miss the administrative personnel I've met who've only told half the story, or just plain lied.
We can't of course, forget the ASUI Senators, who, with few exceptions, spend their time on petty power struggles instead of building a organization the administration must listen to.
I also won't miss the male to female ratio or the smell of the UI Experimental Farm from the Palouse Empire Mall.
This Senior will miss the relatively carefree college life though. The weekend parties, the Monday post function, the Tuesday post post function, the Wednesday pre pre function,....
I will miss the wide variety of people that are allowed to roam the campus, some are so weird.
This Senior will also miss those dumb freshman' looks each fall.
I'll miss the Wallace Cafeteria, and trying to decide if I should revive what's on my plate or just eat it while it's at a disadvantage.

I'll miss a girl I call Sunshine. I'll miss my close friend of five years, friends like him are hard to find.
I shan't forget this place, but the time for college has ended, it's time to travel, work experience; in short it's time for the rest of my life.
Goodbye UI, it's been real, it's been fun, but...

Editor,
I wish to thank the Interfraternity Council and the Pan Hellenic Council for their work on behalf of the American Cancer Society. Their efforts in the "Send a Mouse to College" campaign helped greatly. This money goes to cancer research. Some of the money collected from the Turtle Derby sponsored by Phi-Delta Theta also went to this worthy cause.

The American Cancer Society is the largest and oldest of the private nonprofit cancer organizations, funded entirely by private contributions.
Drew Yoder, along with many others, contributed time and effort, and we wish to thank all who participated.

Timber mismanagement hurts taxpayers

By Alex Voxman
Staff Writer

The federal government is managing its timberlands very inadequately, and the American taxpayer is the one who ends up paying for this mismanagement. That is the theory of University of Idaho Associate Economics Professor Catherine Hofmann.

Hofmann, who received her Ph.D. at the University of Washington in 1969, received the A.D. Free Enterprise Award, which was offered through the College of Business and Economics, in 1982. The award provided her a grant to do research on the pros and cons of federally owned timber lands. Her research work will be published shortly.

According to Hofmann, the federal government's "sustained yield even flow" management policy is where the problems begin. This policy calls for net timber sales to equal net timber growth in a given year.

The Pacific Northwest has a lot of mature timber, but because of this type of management policy, the timber industry has looked to the South, where most timber lands are privately owned. "They (the federal government) are basically letting the bugs eat the old timber" just to keep the net growth equal to the total sales, says Hofmann.

Hofmann argues that the government's managerial policies are political, not economic. "As an economist, I am very disappointed because I think we could all be better off, environmentalists included. Government should begin to use market values."

By market values, Hofmann means that the government should begin to use "economic rather than political criteria on more productive lands." The older, more mature trees that have stopped growing should be sold rather than left to rot. This would not only raise money, but it would also allow for new trees to grow, Hofmann claims.

Hofmann, however, has become very disillusioned with the federal government's management of its lands and sees no policy changes coming about in the near future. Therefore, she proposes that a private takeover of the lands might be better for everyone.

The wilderness lands could be auctioned off to the highest bidders, and anyone with an interest in the lands could purchase them. For instance, if the demand for wilderness were as great as many perceive it to be, then environmentalists could band together and purchase large chunks of land. This land could be designated as wilderness.

Private industries would also have the opportunity to purchase this timber land. Hofmann disputes environmentalists' claims that a private takeover of public lands would mean the elimination of most of the existing trees. Private industries would use great caution in the number of trees they cut down because too many trees on the market would mean a vast reduction in the demand for timber, which, in turn, would greatly depreciate the value of timber.

According to Hofmann, industries would "choose a level of rotation which would maximize the timber's value." The benefits and costs to wilderness would no longer be distorted as they are now.

Senate, from page 1 on this," Berg said. Kuck argued that senators know how students feel about the issue without even asking them. "If you go out and talk to students, you're not going to find one who supports apartheid policies." Sen. Keli Patton said: "I know one."

Sen. Gary Lindberg said that although the resolution did not pass this semester, he expects Skolnick to bring it up in the senate next semester.

In other business the senate:

- Failed a resolution urging next semester's senate to increase the ASUI Productions budget by at least $10,000. Senators argued that they should not tell next semester's senate what to do. They also argued that, since the resolution would not be binding, the Productions Department may enter into contracts expecting to get money that it would not really have.

- Provided $750 to help the Vandal cheerleading squad go to a camp in California this summer. Sen. Kelli Kast, a member of the squad, did not vote on the issue.

- Transferred $71 from its general reserve account to pay Election Board members for doing a recount of the recent ASUI election.

There's more to college than grades and good times.

There's no question about it. The most important part of the college experience is learning. And good times probably come in a close second.

In Army ROTC we offer the college student a little different kind of learning. And a little different kind of good time.

As far as learning goes, our main goal is leadership. How to motivate men. To take on problems, to solve them fast.

The good times are best exemplified by the challenge of Advanced Camp, a six-week training period between your third and fourth years. It's here you put into practice the theories you've learned in class. You'll be in charge of men and equipment, making decisions, getting the job done.

College is a place for learning and for having good times too. In Army ROTC we think we can give you a little more of both.

Army ROTC. Learn what it takes to lead.

Broadway highlights large cast and set

By Douglas Jones
Staff Writer

A very excited and enthusiastic cast are preparing to entertain University of Idaho audiences this weekend when George Abbott's Broadway opens this weekend.

Directed by Roy Fluhrer, Broadway has a large cast of 19 actors and actresses.

"The play showcases a lot of talent. A lot of talented people get to do a lot of talented things," said Leigh Selting, who plays "Roy Lane, a small time song and dance man." David Borrer, who is playing Steve Crandall, "the ruthless mob boss," agrees that "the cast is hot! There's immense talent in this play."

The characters Roy Lane and Steve Crandall, play opposite of each other, vying for the affections of the same chorus girl Billy Moore. Billy is played by Carla Rene Capps, who speaks of her character as "a sweet girl who is not very wise to the world."

When talking about the play, many of the actors alluded to its similarity to both the 40's and 50's gangster films and the recent film Cotton Club.

"It's all the movies you've seen in the 1950's" says Thomas Hepner, who plays the tough Detective Dan McCorn. "It's all the Bogart and Cagney you've ever seen and wanted to be in," states Borrer. "It's the same time period as Cotton Club and is about a lot of the same things, but it's better than that" Carla Rene Capps says, going on "and it's going to be more fun than a gangster film."

The set which Broadway is performed upon is a realistic two story brick warehouse converted into a night club and all the costumes are straight out of the prohibition period.

"Visually, it's going to be stunning," said Borrer, "the set designed by Bruce Brockman is incredible, and the costumes are incredible."

All the cast members agree with Roger Jones, who plays "the gangster from Chicago" when he says "this show will have the widest appeal of any show done this year." Borrer added, "the show is a lot of fun and it's going to be a lot of fun for people to watch--you won't find anything that's much more entertaining on Broadway itself."

"It's a blast! It's fun. It's pure entertainment," said Hepner.

Broadway opens tonight at 8 p.m. in the Hartung Theatre and shows Saturday and Sunday, as well as next weekend, May 3, 4, and 5. Students are encouraged to arrive early to get good seats.

Silver, Gold set to clash tonight

By Greg Kilmer
Sports Editor

Teamwork, comradery, unity, the Gipper, essential to every successful football program?

You can throw all that stuff out the window this weekend as the University of Idaho football team concludes their spring drills with the annual Silver-Gold game.

The squads were decided with a draft Tuesday morning, with defensive coordinator John L. Smith heading the Silver team and offensive line coach Gregg Smith leading the Gold.

"It's the most balanced teams I've seen since I've been here," coach Gregg Smith said. "We really countered each other throughout the draft."

Silver coach John Smith won the toss for top draft pick and quickly selected last year's starting quarterback Scott Linehan.

"We knew they would select Linehan," Gregg Smith said. "But I think our secondary should be strong."

"We really have to contain Linehan," Gregg Smith said.

"He's dangerous because he can run on you. Our defensive front is young and must contain him."

Guard Joe Smiley was the Gold top draft pick and combined with letterman lineman Matt Watson and Mark Caldwell should give qb's Rick Sloan and Darrel Tracy plenty of protection.

Wide receiver Eric Yarber should be the main target for the two Gold throwers.

The Gold defense will be led by linebackers Tom Hennessey, Mike Cox and Dave Parker and returning secondary men Virgil Paulson and Paul Ramsey.

Joining Linehan on the Silver side of the ball are tight end Scott Auker, returning wide-outs Brant Bengen and Ron Oliver.

The Silver coaching staff pointed out lineman John Andrews and linebacker Nolan Harper as their draftee gems on defense. They will be joined by

Dobratz applies for UW job

Pat Dobratz, who coached the University of Idaho women's basketball team to a 28-2 record and an NCAA tournament appearance last season, intends to inquire this week about the women's head coaching job at the University of Washington.

"I just plan on calling Kit (Green, UW's women's athletic director) about it," Dobratz said Tuesday. "I have nothing to lose by making a phone call."

"I've been on vacation a week and I just heard about it," Dobratz said. "I haven't really thought about it much, but I definitely will inquire about it."

The Washington job opened when coach Joyce Sake resigned to return to Grossmont College in San Diego to become a teacher. Sake had spent nine years at Grossmont prior to joining the Huskies two years ago.

Sake led the Huskies to a 26-2 record last season and an NCAA tournament appearance where her team fell to UCLA.

Dobratz is familiar with the Seattle school, having served as an assistant there during the 1978-79 season before taking over as an interim head coach in 1979.

"As far as the budget, the school and the travel money is concerned, it definitely is a step up," Dobratz said of the UW position. "I think our leagues are comparable, but the team returning here (Idaho) has more talent on it."

Washington is losing three starters off last season's team, including Northern Pacific Athletic Conference Player of the Year Leteia Hughly.

"I know five of the players they have over there; we tried to recruit them here," Dobratz said.

"The difference (between Idaho and Washington) is the location of the school and with the name of the school, it's easier to recruit there. And the financial situation there is a little healthier."

Recent decisions by the Idaho Board of Education involving funding of state universities has placed some athletic programs in jeopardy.

In five seasons at Idaho, Dobratz has compiled a 116-34. Green said she hopes to fill the position by the end of May.

"We're going to try to narrow down the field to a half-dozen applicants and bring them in for interviews," said Green, who would not comment on Dobratz' qualifications for the job.

Vandals sign duo

By Greg Kilmer
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho signed two athletes this past Tuesday to letters-of-intent, one in football and one basketball.

Vandal head football coach Dennis Erickson announced that 6-foot-5, 258 pound Joe Taibi will be in a silver and gold uniform next year.

Taibi, a defensive tackle, played last year for the University of Southern Colorado. USC dropped their football program following this year.

"Joe's coach (Mike Friedman) is a good friend of mine."

Erickson said. "We got in touch with him and asked him to take a look at us. He's a welcome addition."

"He was their (USC) best player, he's a pro prospect," Erickson said of his newest addition. "He's a smart ballplayer and he's going to get bigger, around 270."

Taibi earned three letters at USC and was a starter for the Colorado school the past two seasons. As a prep, he played for Pueblo East High in Pueblo, Colorado, earning all-state honors as a tight end and linebacker his senior season.

Vandal head basketball coach

Bill Trumbo also added a experienced college player to his roster with the signing of JC transfer Donald Nelson.

Nelson, a 6-7 1/2, 215 pound junior, was a two-year letterman at Pasadena City College in southern California. Nelson led his conference in rebounding last year, pulling down 12 per contest. The JC transfer also averaged over 10 points a game in earning second team All-Metro honors.

"He's the inside enforcer type," Trumbo said of the Pasadena native. "He's a good inside rebounder and defender."

With the signing of Nelson, Trumbo brings the number of signees to five this season. But he is still looking.

"We'd like to sign a high school small forward," Trumbo said. "Someone to back Ulf (Spears) up next year. We want him to learn the system for the future."

Trumbo has one such prospect coming to the Idaho campus this weekend.

UI's Schoenborn gains honors

Sherri Schoenborn, a junior with the University of Idaho's women's track team, has been named the field athlete of the week in the Mountain West Athletic Conference.

Schoenborn, from Clackamas, Oregon, set a Idaho school record with a 175-10 javelin toss in a meet with Washington State and Oregon in Pullman last Saturday. It was the second time the junior has surpassed the NCAA qualifying mark.

Spring Banquets

Athletes at the University of Idaho will be honored at two separate banquets to be held this spring. Vandal Boosters and the general public are invited.

On April 28, all athletes in the women's program will be honored at a banquet set for Cavanaugh's Landing at 2:30 pm. Each sport in the women's program will honor their athletes and three special awards will be presented for each team. A slide show featuring Idaho women in action will also be presented.

Tickets are available at the Kibbie Dome Ticket Office until noon on April 25. Price of the ticket is $8. Anyone wishing to join in honoring the UI women is urged to attend.

On May 2, all senior athletes who participated in inter-collegiate athletics at Idaho will be honored at the 3rd annual Silver and Gold Senior Banquet which will be held at the University Inn-Best Western at 7:30 pm. A no-host social hour is set for 6:30 pm.

The senior banquet features all sports at Idaho. Those wishing to honor UI senior athletes can purchase tickets at the Athletic Ticket Office in the Kibbie Dome for $9 until noon on April 29.

Time changes

The Swim Center, Memorial Gym, the Weight Room and the Physical Education Building will all close at 9:00 pm during dead week and final's week. Friday, May 10 (graduation day) the facilities will close at 5:00 pm and remain closed for the weekend. Summer schedule will begin Monday, May 13th.

"I tell you how we're going to win," Silver assistant coach Bret Ingalls said. "We're going to out coach'em."

"We can have two special plays," Silver assistant coach Dan Cozzetto said. "We're going to burn their secondary, one of their strengths, with our two great plays."

"The Corner Club line has us 10 point favorites," Cozzetto said. "It should be more than that."

The Vandal coaching staff and players all wished coach John L. Smith's father a quick recovery from his surgery.

Game time for the Silver/Gold finale is Friday at 7 pm in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

ASUI dance kicks off area hunger benefits

By Shawn McIntosh
Staff Writer

Highlighted by ASUI Productions' video dance, this weekend will see four different benefits to fight hunger and to aid its victims on the Palouse.

On Friday, April 26, there will be a dance at the SUB from 9 to 12. On Saturday at Bogart's, there will be a dance from 8 to 1 with specials on drinks to be announced randomly. On Sunday, beginning at 1:30, there will be the 2nd annual Palouse Hunger Walk. Thursday through Saturday there will be a carnival at the WSU Coliseum parking lot.

ASUI Productions, in cooperation with United Support of Artists for Africa, Campus Network and the Argonaut will present a three hour video-dance in the SUB from 9 to 12 p.m. Admission is $2 and all proceeds will go to USA for Africa. The public is welcome.

Campus Network has provided the video center equipment to UI at Campus Network's expense. Campus Network provides television programs that are broadcasted on channel 8 from 8 p.m. to 12 p.m. weeknights. They have arranged for posters, flyers, studio time for the dance video's production and transmission costs all to be donated. Campus Network t-shirts, posters, and buttons will also be given away at the dance.

For ASUI Productions, the event will also be the premiere of the new video center that has been installed in the ballroom. The center has been called, "the world's first satellite-driven video theatre." It includes a ten-speaker Dolby surround-sound system.

The Board of Directors are the people most responsible for the creation of USA for Africa. These people include Harry Belafonte, Michael Jackson, Quincy Jones, Ken Kragen, Lionel Ritchie, and Kenny Rogers. USA for Africa has also developed an Advisor Board of distinguished experts in the field.

The non-profit foundation is incorporated in California and will allocate donations as follows: 35% will go to Africa for immediate relief, with a heavy emphasis on medical care, medicine and vaccines. Another 35% will go to seeds, fertilizer, farm implements and the means to generate water supplies. Approximately 20% will be used to create long-term economic development programs. The final 10% will be used to help the hungry and homeless in the United States.

On Saturday, April 27, Bogart's will be having a Palouse-For-Ethiopia benefit from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. There is a $1 donation at the door and specials on drinks will be announced at random. All proceeds will be donated to CROP Walk.

CROP is the name for local community hunger education and fundraising events that are sponsored by the Church World Service (CWS). CWS is an international relief, development and refugee resettlement agency of more than 30 Protestant and Orthodox communions in the U.S.

CROP and related community appeals brought in $10,489,676 (25.1%), which was the largest source of income for CWS. Member denominations are the second largest source of support, bringing in $10,068,456 (24.1%). The third largest source is contributed commodities, totalling $9,933,568 (23.8%).

The CWS' largest expense was buying commodities for support, which totaled $9,933,568 (23.9%). The second and third largest expenses went to service to refugees ($7,591,893 which was 18.3%), and self-help development ($7,231,332 which was 17.4%). Their total income exceeded their total expense by $252,794.

CWS said that for every dollar donated to them, 90 cents of it goes to programs to aid the hungry.

The Palouse Hunger Walk will also be donating its proceeds to CWS through CROP. There is no entry fee and registration begins at 1:00 for walkers and runners, with the race beginning at 1:30. The course is 10 kilometers (6.2 miles) and winds throughout Pullman. People who are interested in participating in the event or who wish to sponsor a person, should contact Joyce Stratton at (509)-332-2216. Donations will be accepted until Monday.

"We expect over 300 people to be there," said Marcia Schekel, a publicity spokesman for the walk. "Our goal is to raise $10,000," she added.

The Carnival Company of Lewiston and WSU Activities will be hosting a carnival at the WSU Coliseum parking lot. On Thursday and Friday the carnival will start at 3 p.m. and finish at about 10 p.m. All proceeds will go to USA for Africa and CWS.

KUOI continues talk show

KUOI-FM will host Bruce Skaug, president of Students For America, Monday night from 7 to 8 p.m. News and program director Greg Meyer will field phone-in questions during the hour.

The show has featured a number of topical discussions this semester including university divestiture and American policies in Central America. Meyer says the show is the first of its kind at KUOI in many years and there are plans for the show to be aired again in the fall.

The public is urged to air their opinions by call 885-6392.

Meyer will be the next station manager for KUOI-FM beginning June 1.
