Although Governor Evans has not yet announced his candidacy for Idaho's upcoming senatorial race, others are doing it for him. State Senator Norma Dobler introduced him yesterday at a Latah County Democrats' picnic as "the next US Senator from Idaho."

Evans used the occasion of Labor Day to speak to University of Idaho students and area residents on issues important to the region such as education and the Potlatch mill shutdown. While he mainly stressed these issues, Evans did say he is "closer to a final decision on the Senate".

Evans said "The economic problems in Idaho are worrisome to me. When legislators return this fall, they will vote with their pocketbook and this could mean reduced revenues for Idaho schools". Evans added though, "I will not agree to a budgetary holdback until I have a new set of figures to work with and all other possibilities are looked at." Those figures should be available September 11 Evans added.

Evans said Republicans used the predicted 2% budget shortfall to "get their name in the headlines". "Although this may seem like a problem, we could make this up in a month or two, and may even end up with a budget surplus" the Governor added.

Evans called for bi-partisan support of a less conservative budget, particularly in regards to funds for education. "I am hoping for the support of Republicans around the state, especially those in southern Idaho, where they are quite strong" Evans said. "We need the changing philosophies of republican legislators to allow both parties to get together and provide budgetary help for education," he added.

On the issue of the impending Potlatch mill layoffs, Evans cited education as an important contributor to recovery. "I am going to establish a Governor's task force on retraining those persons who have lost jobs to the closure" Evans said. The Governor said 300 to 400 people will still be out of jobs when the mill reopens.

Evans noted that the UI and Lewis and Clark State College would be the main tools of this reeducation effort, providing vocational training to those who need it to get into new lines of work.

Faculty told to look at future

By Bryan Clark
Of the Argonaut

"Due to government rules and budgetary cutbacks, college has become just another regulated industry" said University of Idaho president Richard Gibb.

Gibb was quoting from a recent report by the Carnegie Foundation in a speech he gave at the first faculty meeting of the new school year.

Gibb said that this emphasis on the management of education is detrimental to the creative and learning processes in colleges. "Overplanning is hurting productivity in today's universities," Gibb added.

Quoting further from the Carnegie letter, Gibb said "We are shifting from the expansion of higher education of the early 1960's to a policy of restraint."

One cause of this restraint is research money has decreased and, as a result, so has the enthusiasm for discovery, Gibb said. During the middle to late 1960's it became unpopular for colleges to accept government grants to do research and this damaged the role of higher education in the furthering of science, Gibb said.

Again citing the Carnegie report, Gibb said "Higher education is now suffering from a lack of direction." He said while the overmanagement and restraining of universities' work are major causes of this, there is an additional contributor: "Simply that there are no great problems for higher learning to tackle." The issues of poverty, the war effort, and the space program have either been eradicated or put on the back burner for now.

To sum up this problem, Gibb said "Today's world is on a rapidly moving train called change, and we must decide if the UI is going to board that train."

On the issue of where Americas colleges and universities are going, Gibb said "A major goal of higher education in the next few years will be the education of a new sector of students." These students, Gibb said, will be those already out of school for the most part, returning to receive education in new fields or further learning in old ones.

Gibb identified national literacy as a goal the American university system should aim at in this fashion.

"To take advantage of opportunities to reach new students, we must upgrade education. Not just on the university campus though, we must bring higher learning to the people who need it," Gibb said.

Gibb also addressed the issue of the growing world economy and the role of education in it. "With current advances in telecommunications and related technologies, we must prepare students for careers in international markets" Gibb said. He said "Educators must focus more attention on foreign language training, geography, and the cultures of other countries."

A problem of particular importance here in Idaho has been the decline of US primary industries. Industries, for example, such as forestry, agriculture, and mining, Gibb said colleges and universities could help alleviate this dilemma through research. In particular, He said the UI College of Forestry would be of great assistance, especially in the north Idaho area.

Even though these ideas would cost the university money, Gibb said "Although some would argue that if we had the dollars we could do the work, I think if we do the work we will get the dollars."

Towards accomplishing these goals, Gibb outlined some of the strengths of the UI as he sees them. He said one of the foremost pluses of the university is very strong alumni support. Also he said he was quite impressed with the participation of UI students and alumni in local service organizations. Gibb said "At a recent Rotary Club meeting I discovered that roughly 60% of those attending were affiliated with the university." Gibb noted he predicts the UI should receive about $4 million in gifts from private individuals and groups.

Gibb said the most important asset to the university, though, is its distinguished students and faculty. Gibb added "I predict the University should receive $20-25 million in grants for this reason."

Gibb concluded "We do not know what problems lie in the future but, in light of these positive aspects, I feel optimistic."

ASUI President Freund explains $61,000 debt

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

The ASUI ended last fiscal year over $61,000 in debt.

ASUI President Jane Freund believes the ASUI can be held accountable for some of the debt, but says she as president did not have that much control over last year's budget.

"In the minds of the students, as ASUI president, I'm responsible for the budget. But I've come to find I don't have all that much power when it comes to the budget," Freund said.

She said the problem is that when an ASUI account looks like it's losing money, she can not freeze the account. At present, if the ASUI wishes to freeze an account, the "senate has to shut down an account and take the money out, which can take up to one to two weeks," Freund said.

Freund says she plans to change this in her last semester as president. "I have found a great hesitation to put any real strong power into the hands of the president because it's a one-year term," said Freund. "I don't know if I'll be granted that power outright (to freeze accounts), but I'm sure going to fight to get that power."

She is presently working on a money making plan with Vice President of Financial Affairs, Dave McKinney, to help alleviate the debt and will present it to the Senate at Wednesday's meeting, she said.

"Part of the problem last year," continued Freund, "is accounts weren't monitored closely. We weren't getting timely information from the Hill (UI administration). And we didn't always get monthly statements." She said the key to avoiding these problems in this budget year is to strive to get information on department budgets before it's too late to help ones that are losing money. Her plan, according to Freund, concentrates on the system - "getting the information and then doing something about it."

Of course, the deficit suffered by the ASUI Golf Course, which totaled $61,822 at the end of the last fiscal year, is also a reason behind the total ASUI deficit she said. "Rarely is a golf course a money making thing, especially when you have weather as volatile as in Moscow," commented Freund. "Maybe some business operations could be improved. I'll be interested in seeing the audit when it comes out."

Freund says she advocates the sale of beer and wine at the golf course to help the deficit because it would attract more golfers and the course might then attract tournaments. She also ad-

The story on page three of the Idaho Argonaut's August 30th issue entitled "ASUI Senate: new members, new problems," should read — Keli Patton was the only senator nominated for the position of ASI delegate and Larry Seid and Mike Felton were nominated for Pro-Tempore. Scott Speelman was also nominated but turned it down.

also advocates the ASUI leasing out the golf course club house and then taking a cut of the profits.

"We knew the golf course would go in the hole. But we spent so much time looking at that, we didn't see Entertainment coming up," said Freund. The Entertainment accounts ended last fiscal year $38,186 in the red. "I know if we spend so much time looking at those two (Entertainment and Golf Course deficits) this semester, something will come up in back of us again."

Freund also admitted the debt can partly be attributed to over estimation of incomes of ASUI departments by the Senate Finance Chairman last year. Freund held the position of Finance Chairman last academic year. "I'll be honest, when the budget was being put together, we missed projected incomes. But not every department missed their projected incomes though."

Plans to release a three-year history of all departments losses is in the works Freund said.

According to Freund, another source of the debt can be attributed to what she calls "the one big happy family syndrome" or block budgeting practiced by the Communications departments last year.

"For example, the Photobureau would take some pictures for the Argonaut and wouldn't charge them. Also the Argonaut sold $171,000 worth of advertising but only collected $143,000." She says, however, now all the Communications departments are charging each other for work done and starting this fiscal year, the administration will be collecting money from Argonaut advertisers in an attempt to soon have all university accounts receivable handled by the administration.

Although Freund says some of the money generated by increased student fees will go to paying last year's ASUI debt, she does not believe the student government will ask for another fee-increase to cover the deficit.

Freund also said she hopes that the ASUI will its share of the Social Security retirement contributions refund monies that is being split between past student employees and the university. If the refund, from the Social Security Administration, was in the form of a cash refund rather than credit on future payments, the student government's share could be used to cover the short fall.

But overlooking the rather cumbersome debt, Freund feels optimistic about the coming semester. "Despite the deficit, I feel good about the semester. Rather than dwelling on it, we're seeing what we can do to avoid it again."

Summer construction gives face lift to campus

By Bryan Clark
Of the Argonaut

The University of Idaho that students returned to last week is a different UI than the one they left in the spring. While the majority of students and faculty were enjoying a well deserved vacation, the Physical Plant has been hard at work on improvements to the campus.

One of the most visible changes is the addition and remodeling of the Life Sciences Building. According to Nels Reese, an architect with the Physical Plant, "We have brought UI Biology into the 20th century."

A great effort was made to maintain the architectural style of the university's historical core, Reese said, and added that the effort has been quite successful. Also, efficient use of funds allocated for the project allowed for some "extras" planners did not originally think possible. Among these are greenhouses, installed on the roof of the building and a courtyard inside the complex.

Another improvement that is in progress at the moment is the installation of lighting on the Administration Building lawn. It is one phase of a project to formulate a lighting plan for the UI as a whole.

According to Jayne Jeffrey, a UI landscaper, the lighting installation is "mainly to overcome safety and security problems but for asthetic reasons as well."

Towards that end, the lights have been custom made to resemble the light outside the Home Economics Building. Jeffrey said "This will enable the lights to blend in with the architecture of the surrounding buildings."

While "custom made" may sound expensive, Jeffrey added "The lights cost less than comorable ones that were already manufactured." The lights are more efficient as well, using less electricity than half the number of the type of light currently used on campus.

Although much work is being done outside the Administration Building, all is not idle inside. The auditorium inside that building is recieving a major facelift. According to Reese, "The Ad Building auditorium has been a dinosaur of the UI campus for many years, recieving little or no use due to poor visibility, inferior acoustics and obsolete seating."

These problems will be taken care of now with the installation of new seating, a new floor and a more modern audio system. This last improvement involved the hiring of an acoustical consultant who recommended that sound baffles and a new sound system be put in service.

Also in the Administration Building, changes have been going on in the Political Science offices on the second floor and in the computer room in the basement.

There has been much talk this summer about the UI parking situation, with new regulations and faculty only lots being the main topics of discussion. Most people attribute these issues to a lack of adequate parking on the UI campus, said Jeffrey.

In an attempt to alleviate some of this problem, the Physical Plant is remodeling the parking lots at Ethel Steele and the Alumni center. This involves paving and striping the lots to make them more efficient. "We are doing this in hopes of not having to build new lots this year," said Jeffrey.

In addition to the remodeling of the parking lots, the Physical Plant will be installing new parking signs early this year. The new signs will be easier to read and contain less of the unnecessary legalities of the old signs, according to Reese. Reese added that "Threats of towing illegally parked cars have never been carried out anyway."

A project that Reese said he has some strong feeling about is the work done this summer to the Law School Building. Reese said "We are repairing mistakes in construction and design that have existed since the building was erected."

Among these are what Reese termed "cost cutting measures in construction" and enclosing the open stairwells that "Weren't very well designed for Idaho winters." Reese added though "The building is an architectural award winner so it is our responsibility to keep it in good shape."

Reese said these projects will be completed by December at a cost of $1.5 million, except for the Life Sciences Building.

Living groups don't own the senators

The ASUI rules and regulations call for the vice-president to assign the senators to certain areas of purview. These include an ASUI department, standing board or committee; a college; and living groups. This policy to permit the senators to gain expertise in the respective areas, and let them to more knowledgeably and wisely serve the students.

However, some of the living groups become confused as to the responsibility of the senator. They think just because a senator visits them on a regular basis, discussing the issues and listening to student concerns, the representative must vote the way the consensus of the living group indicates.

Unfortunately, some senators feel the same way. The student senators are elected on a campus-wide basis. There can be some identification of support based on the votes from each polling location, but that's about it. In addition, over one-half the students live off-campus.

The senators are not elected to conduct referenda with their respective living groups, and then go back to the senate meetings and vote that way. They are elected to gather as much information as possible from all sources, then vote as they believe will best serve the entire student body.

Usually, the senator will arranged to meet with a living group during a hall or chapter meeting. He or she will usually attempt to explain those issues which seem to be important, give some background on the matter, and then respond to questions and comments. There might even be a straw poll taken, to get a sense of the living group.

At best, the elected official has about 20 minutes before the constituents' attention begins to wander, and they need to get onto other business. A short attention span on the part of the voters is a political fact of life.

The Argonaut has a responsibility to serve the students with news and opinions of importance and interest. If we are doing our job, the students who do interact with the senators will be more informed, and less time will be needed to explain the issues to them.

The senators can then spend more of their time hearing their constituents opinions, and gather information about other matters which may be developing, but have not yet surfaced into the political arena.

This process of information exchange is not only more efficient, taking less of everybody's time, but has a greater likelihood of providing better representation and better government.

This is not to say when the senator is ambivalent about which way to vote, and there is a consensus of opinions from each living group, not to vote that way. But the official must ensure the living group understands such voting is on a case-by-case basis.

But this can only work if everyone involved understands the ground-rules. And therein lies the weakness. It requires an elected official with a fairly strong personality and a high level of self-confidence to tell voters just because the representative is listening and taking into account their concerns, the group will not necessarily see the senator voting that way. This is especially true with first-semester senators, who are learning the process. And it requires a fairly open-minded and politically mature student body to understand this, and accept it.

The best time to tell the students they don't own their senators is now, when the semester is beginning. Otherwise we will continue to hear from inflamed living groups the angry cry, "Our senator isn't voting the way we said we wanted." And the senators will have no one to blame for those complaints but themselves.

It wasn't uplifting

Editor:

With considerable incredulity, on Wednesday afternoon at 4:30, I watched the rudest behavior I have seen in over a year on campus. Thirty-eight persons — at various stages in their exercise routines — were ordered to leave the Kibbie weight room "Because the football team needs to use it." Yet the schedule posted at the door, which most people use to plan their exercise time, indicated that the room was reserved for team use at 5:30 — a full hour later.

Curious about who was responsible for the order, I asked a football staff-student. "The coach. Go see him if you don't like it." Curiosity now piqued, I went out to the field to see the coach. He was obviously preoccupied. I settled for the weight-training coach, and he denied that such a directive had been given. On returning to the weight room with this information, I was again told to leave by a staff-student, who out of bluster or embarrassment or both, refused a request to identify himself by name. It was now 5 p.m., no footballers in sight, but everyone else had been evicted.

Some considerations, in my opinion, are raised by such inconsideration. Anyone who exercises on campus sooner or later is inconvenienced to some degree by team sports. Fair enough. Students who pay fees, staff, and faculty, however, have at least as much right to use athletic facilities as athletes on a full-ride, whose fees are waived. Any members of the athletic staff who are so egocentric or inconsiderate that they think teams have an inherent and superior claim to the use of such facilities need to be reminded that there are probably several thousand persons on campus to whom personal fitness is of far more import, and who find organized sports about as absorbing a watching a plank warp.

It has occurred to all of us at times that what is needed in the world is simply a little more courtesy. Later I was told by a civil, apologetic member of the football staff "We don't want any bad press." Again, fair enough. But there is another point: thirty-eight persons were unfairly deprived of their exercise because some student-staffers had such a bush-league grasp of the rights of others that they felt comfortable in saying "Get out" instead of "We will wait our turn." Those individuals have missed some minimal training and minimal education (L. educare: to bring up a child.)

Wilderness plan

Editor:

This is an open invitation to all students to attend an informative and entertaining evening surrounding the topic "Idaho, the Wilderness State." The program is free and will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 4 at 7 p.m. in the UI Forestry Building, Room 10.

This presentation, sponsored by the Idaho Conservation League, comes at a particularly critical time with the release of Idaho's 10 proposed national forest management plans. Immediate public comment (the deadline for the Clearwater National Forest is Sunday, Sept. 15) is necessary to ensure a healthy national forest for the next 50 years!

The evening's program begins with a short slide show presented by Cindy Tjepner of the ICL in Ketchum, which highlights Idaho's wilderness history, planning process and definition. This will be followed by an important briefing of the Clearwater National Forest's proposed management plan and a discussion, question-and-answer session with top officials of the Clearwater National Forest.

At state is the fate of close to one million roadless acres in such places as the Mallard-Larkins, Hoodoo Mountain/Great Burn, Elk Summit and Kelly Creek areas.

Evans calls Symms' remarks 'an embarrassment'

By Douglas S. Jones
Of the Argonaut

Although Idaho Governor John Evans has not officially declared his intention run for the U.S. Senate, he is already making comparisons between himself and Republican incumbent Steve Symms.

Evans, in Moscow for a Labor Day picnic sponsored by the Latah County Democrats, said he found it "an embarrassment to have the United States senator from Idaho making the statements that he's made in relation to apartheid not being in serious existence in South Africa."

Evans also said he does not think that people of Idaho appreciate "the position that Mr. Symms has taken on this apartheid issue."

"Apparently he's trying to defend the administration once again and the Reverend (Jerry) Falwell," Evans said. "Obviously in his visit to South Africa, the only place he visited was possibly the white section of the country, and he should have gotten out into the countryside."

Last week Symms called

Bishop Desmond Tutu "A creation of the media" and said he did not consider Tutu a true leader of the blacks of the Republic of South Africa. Symms said tribal leaders, including Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, who leads 6 million Zulu, have more credibility as representatives of the black race.

Evans pointed out Tutu "received the Nobel Peace Prize, and that recognition on an international basis is one of the finest recognitions a person can receive in a lifetime. He's dedicated himself to the peaceful cause of bringing about equality within the country. I just think he's proven himself to be the kind of a leader we should accept advice from."

Evans also said that "the President's constructive engagement policy is truly sidestepping the issue," adding that he (Evans) certainly would encourage businesses and industry in the United States to withdraw their investments and support to that government.

"Do it very gradually, but the message should go out to that country that you can't tolerate those kinds of discrimination without bringing to pass a very serious strife among the people," Evans said.

Evans said he did not believe the state of Idaho has any money invested in corporations doing business in South Africa.

"I don't think we've got any investments in firms that would be doing any substantial business there. But we should look very carefully at that, and if we do have huge investments, we can find others that will give us just as good a return, or better. Let's put the economic pressures on South Africa's government and business to bring about a realistic change in their public policies," he said.

Evans said he expects Symms' position to be a campaign issue in 1986, "Because to me we're going to see greater strife taking place as a result of very serious problems that the apartheid philosophy brings about in people."

On other issues the governor said he planned to use Idaho's universities more in an attempt to help the state out of its current economic crisis.

"We really haven't been using our universities and colleges enough to develop plans and programs for economic development," Evans said.

Evans said he does not "think the legislature represents the viewpoint of the people. You talk to people generally across the state, and they all support a very much improved educational opportunity for their children."

"I think two-thirds or three-quarters of the people would support that kind of a budget. But the legislators were elected for a lot of different reasons, not necessarily their philosophy towards education," Evans said.

Evans believes parents recognize the better their children's education, the better off they'll be.

Calling the northern part of the state "very much more progressive" and "very much more supportive of education," Evans said he thinks that northern Idaho might be justified in, if only tongue-in-cheek, toying with the idea of secession.

"Some of the southern legislators are so very conservative, they'd rather do without and have their children do without, rather than providing those opportunities, so I think there is some justification over the period of time."

"I said a number of times, to my friends, if your serious about succeeding and look like your going to accomplish that goal, please notify me in plenty of time so I can get north." Evan said jokingly.

Although he will not going make an announcement on his "possible" candidacy until November, Evans said that he has budgeted $2 million for his proposed campaign to the senate.

"We're going to make every effort to secure that amount, but we'll never be able to raise as much as he (Symms) does," Evans said. "I'd rather have 1,000 five or ten dollar contributions rather than one $10,000 contributor."

Evans called his chances "very bright" if he were to run against Symms. "I feel very comfortable at this time. I've watched him campaign and he doesn't do it aggressively as well as I do. When the polls close in November of 1986, John Evans will be the winner of that particular race...if he announces."

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA FRATERNITY

The Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, the third largest fraternity in the world, will be forming a new chapter at the University of Idaho on September 9 - 17 1985. This will be an opportunity for men to become "Founding Members" of their own fraternity.

Beginning Monday, September 9 through Saturday, September 14, Fraternity Representatives Bob London and Bill Marks will be meeting with interested men everyday. They will be here to provide information and to answer questions about Lambda Chi Alpha.

Interested men can contact Dean Bruce Pitman or Mark Brigham in Student Advisory Services at 855-6757.

Look for further information in future issues of the Argonaut and on campus!

Corky Bush to leave UI

By Erin Fanning
Of the Argonaut

Corlann "Corky" Bush, assistant dean of advisory services, is leaving the University of Idaho Oct. 1 after almost two decades of dedicated work.

Bush has accepted the position of Affirmative Action and Human Resources Director at Montana State in Bozeman. Her new position will be a definite advancement in her career, she said.

Her goal as the new director at Montana State is to develop new programs and opportunities that will educate and further the advancements of all people.

Bush, 42, as been on the UI faculty for 18 years and for the past seven worked as assistant dean of advisory services. During her stay she has seen many improvements in women and minority rights.

She has coordinated the Women's Center and worked hard to make the UI a better place for women to go to school.

When she first arrived in 1968 women still had a dress code and curfew. In 1970 these rules were completely abolished.

Women have worked hard for the past 10 years and have seen an increase in community awareness but unfortunately women at the university level are still treated as men in skirts, she said.

A major project that Bush, the Women's Center, and other groups accomplished at the UI is lighting on campus.

The poor lighting on campus contributed to the dangers for women, Bush said.

Because of the lighting women became victims for rape and assault. As a result of the increased awareness of these problems the lighting at the UI improved. Soon Hello Walk next to the Administration building lawn will also have lighting and women will no longer need to take a dangerous risk.

Another accomplishment of the Women's Center under Bush's direction has been working directly with Alternatives of Violence, a group that works with rape, battery, and assault. The Women's Center is the daytime number for Alternatives.

While working in Montana Bush will maintain a residency at Idaho through her husband John Bush, professor of geology at the UI. The residency will allow Bush to finish her year as Idaho Division President of the American Association of University Women.

Bush will leave Idaho with many accomplishments but there is much more to be done regarding women and minority rights, she said.

ENROLL IN AMERICA'S LARGEST MANAGEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM

Becoming an officer in today's Army — which also includes the Army Reserve and Army National Guard — requires getting the right kind of management and leadership training.

What's the best way to get it? By enrolling in America's largest management training program — Army ROTC.

In the Army ROTC 4-year program, you'll acquire discipline of mind and spirit, and the ability to perform under pressure. We call it learning what it takes to lead.

It'll pay off, too. First, during your last two years of college, when you'll start receiving up to $1,000 a year.

And, most of all, on graduation day, when you receive a commission along with a college degree.

Lorek to replace Norris

By Chris Schulte
Of the Argonaut

University of Idaho assistant men's and women's track coach, Scott Lorek, has been named interim head coach until a permanent replacement is appointed. The position was vacated by Roger Norris, who resigned over the summer after numerous successful campaigns to pursue a position in the Education Department.

This fall Lorek will handle both the men's and women's cross country programs. A permanent replacement should be named around the first of October, though it appears that Lorek may have the inside track for the job.

In his first two years, he has been crucial in bringing some top-notch student athletes to the UI program. Despite not nearly having the funds of other sports, Lorek has assisted both Norris and men's coach Mike Keller in developing some top runners in the Northwest.

One of his most successful triumphs was the success of the women's 4 X 100 relay team which consisted of four freshman and set a school record in the event.

Lorek has developed a rapport with many of his athletes which is very evident when talking to them.

Tony Therieult, a returnee after sitting out last year, stated, "Scott is a big part of the reason why I'm back this year. He feels I can help the team so I'll give it my best."

When questioned about Lorek, sophomore Laurie Askew, a member of the record setting 4 X 100 relay team said, "He's a great coach, he's helped me a lot."

It isn't uncommon to find Lorek out at the track or in the Dome at different times during the day running athletes through individual workouts due to class conflicts at normal practice time. He also spends many hours helping injured athletes get back into shape.

With this kind of dedication, knowledge and respect, it is evident that Scott Lorek wants and is qualified for the job and that the athletes feel he is the right choice. Now they can only hope the Athletic Department sees it that way too.

It might have been ideal conditions for runner Greg Kallio and an unidentified canine but not for time keeper Paula Hoffman during Monday's Labor Day Moscow Mountain Madness Run. John Trott and Cindi Zenner, both of Moscow, were the winners of the 12 mile endurance test. Argonaut Photo by Gayle Williamson Deliver entries to Tri-State, located on the Pullman Highway in Moscow. Box will be located on Sporting Good Area's counter.

Rules:

- Contest is open to all University of Idaho students, faculty and staff. Argonaut mail subscribers are also eligible.
- Contestants may submit only one forecast form each week.
- Forms must be filled out completely and correctly.
- The entry deadline is noon on Friday before the games. The Argonaut is not responsible for entries lost in the mail or delayed.
- Tie games cancel out.

Forecast on again

Football forecasters, here we go.

Today begins the first week of the Tri-State/Argonaut "Pick the Winners" contest. Once again, Tri-State will be giving a $25 gift certificate to each week's top forecaster.

Unlike last year, there will be only one box for your entries, located on the Tri-State Sporting Good's section counter. There will not be a box at the Argonaut.

The entry blanks will be in each Tuesday edition accompanied with the previous week's winner. Deadlines for the entries will be Friday noon before the games.

Each week's games will be selected by Argonaut Sports Editor Greg Kilmer.

"I know this is the first week, but there's some toughies," Kilmer said. "USC/Illinois and Nebraska/Florida St. should be dandies and how about that Maine/Howard shootout!"

Astericks indicate Kilmer's choices.

EVENTS

UI faculty, staff, students walk

By Karma Metzler
Of the Argonaut

The University of Idaho is joining the hundreds of people who participate in such sporting events as fun runs, cycling races and marathons. How? The Campus Walk Walk.

"Walking is fun," according to Jeanne McHale of the U of I Campus Planning Committee. To prove her point, she and the other members of the committee have organized the Campus Walk Walk.

Campus Walk Walk is a "non-competitive, three kilometer walk around campus to raise awareness and money for the pedestrian walkway system," said McHale.

The walk is scheduled for Friday, September 6 at 3:30 p.m. According to McHale, everybody is invited to attend, including staff and faculty even though the event takes place during business hours. University officials have given their permission for staff to leave work to attend the event.

The walk is divided into four legs, and both individuals and four-person teams can participate. It begins in the parking lot west of the Kibbie Dome and ends at the lawn north of the Administration Building.

U of I President Richard Gibb will officiate as master of ceremonies at the end of the walk where prizes will be awarded. Everyone entering the event will receive an iron-on transfer, McHale said.

Prizes are "just for fun," McHale commented. For instance, Gibb is donating one of his award winning pumpkins from his garden and Terry Armstrong, assistant to the president, coordinator of student services and part time artist is donating one of his paintings.

The entry fee is a donation of any amount to the Campus Walkway Beautification Fund.

The streets within the campus were closed in 1980 after the eruption of Mount Saint Helens. The Planning Committee has since had plans to redo the walkways, but because of lack of funds and awareness, nothing has been done.

The goal of the committee is to make the campus a pedestrian oriented campus.

"People don't use them (the walkways) because they look like streets," McHale commented. "They don't feel the streets are safe."

Eventually, McHale would like the inter-campus walkways to become a "pedestrian plaza" with old fashioned cobble stone streets and sculpture and other art forms lining the walks. "The walkways should look like walkways," she said.

The above logo for Campus Walk Walk was designed by Leo Ames of Publications Design, located on the UI campus. This logo will be the one used for the free participation iron-ons.

Belafonte to visit WSU

He's a singer, actor, director, producer, protester and a statesman and he's coming to perform at the Beasley Performing Arts Center this Saturday at 8 p.m. He's Harry Belafonte.

Over 20 years ago, he found and liked a little-known style of music called "folk" and with it, he stepped into the worlds of theater and music for it gave him an opportunity to become an actor in song.

Thus Belafonte aided the establishment of folk music as a popular art form in America today, and this interest in folk music has taken him around the world.

To the American public, he has introduced South African singers Miriam Makeba and Letta Mbulu, and Greece's foremost folksinger Nana Mouskouri.

Such will be the case when he visits Pullman this weekend. He is currently put-

Movie Review

Carmen is still sensational, a visual joy

By Patrick Healin
Of the Argonaut

"Bizet's Carmen," directed by Francesco Rosi is a joy to watch and hear. The opera is playing at the Micro Cinema through Wednesday at 5 and 8 p.m.

The Micro just installed a new sound system in time for the first showing and the music is inspiring. Much of the music includes some very familiar pieces which I had not realized had originated from this opera.

An example is the song which is performed whenever the toreadors enter the bullring. Another great number is Carmen's song about the futility of looking for love. In different words Carmen says that when you're sure you have love then you don't, and when it is not sought, there it is.

These songs will be recognized by many, opera buffs or not. The characters throw their emotions into their music, particularly the pleading innocent Micaela who is played by Faith Isham. Micaela is capable of stealing anyone's heart, except that of the one she loves. Even the high spirited horses seem to prance to the musical score.

Visually I consider the film to be a masterpiece. Most of the opening section was shot in a beautiful sun-splashed mountain pueblo of white walled buildings which are topped by Spanish style roofs.

The color photography enhances the contrast between the costumes of the peasants and those of the aristocrats. Color is the word to describe this town and its residents. Rosi used the outdoor lighting and scenery to maximize the drama.

The second half is notable for its use of desert canyon walls, the gypsy campfires, open spaces, and vast expanses of sky to frame the antagonists. The sky is used to reflect the action: it darkens as the plot darkens.

The action revolves around a love affair starring Carmen (Julia Migenes Johnson), who is a freckle-faced deceiver whom anyone can see can't be trusted, that is anyone, who doesn't fall in love with her like Don Jose (Placido Domingo) does.

Those who love Carmen will go to jail for her, fight bulls, desert armies, become gypsies, fight knife duels, and then do it all again for Carmen. In return the lusty seductress will dance and sing for all she's worth and still keep the film rated PG.

Micaela is beautiful as the girl next door who deserves more than she gets. She is Carmen's antithesis. All of the characters are rendered with a fierce square-shouldered pride; they wear the emotions on their sleeves.

"Carmen" is almost three hours long but it does not drag. The subtitles do not tell everything that was sung in French, but the story line is easy enough to follow so that it doesn't matter.

While the love theme of "Carmen" is not new, the treatment in this remake is beautiful. You can see "Carmen" while she is in town without fighting a duel or a bull, after Wednesday the price goes back up.

ting together a workshop of West Indian and African singers with plans for an album from the project next summer.

Following his performance on the Palouse, he will travel to Spokane, Wash.

Tickets for his WSU performance are on sale now for $11 and $14 and can be found in Moscow at Budget Record and Tapes.

Ladies, a fair warning

Greg Kilmer

Whenever I usually write something, I must admit that I am a little bit of a sexist. But then, not many sports writer's ramblings appeal to the fairer sex.

Ladies, this one's for you. I write this as a warning for you damsels, you are about to be overwhelmed by so much football that a heavy conversation with your husband, boyfriend, or lover might just be "Honey, is there any beer left?" And it's quite a while until the Super Bowl.

For all you telling yourself, "Oh, I'm used to it, I've done it before," think again my gorgeous gridiron gals.

With a recent legal ruling, any network willing to shell out beaucoup (there's one for the copy editor) bucks can televise a collegiate battle.

And believe me, there were a bunch that did more shelling than a seafood restaurant.

ABC, NBC, CBS, ESPN,

WTBS, USA, hell it surprises me M-TV didn't jump on the bandwagon. Imagine, J J Jackson doing play-by-play and Martha Quinn doing color.

If my brand smacking new desk calendar knows what it's talking about, there are seven days in the week. For the next four months, there will be football on the ol' tube for five of them.

Starting with Thursday, you will see the back of your beloved squeeze's head in front of Monday Night Football, Thursday edition. This might be your type of show though ladies, my mom has had a thing for Frank Gifford for years, she really thinks he's a hunk.

College football will be highlighting prime time on Friday nights, all the boys will be in great shape gathered around after Happy Hour.

Don't get panicked yet, here comes the weekend. Saturday is loaded, everybody's got their stuff for Saturdays. Some networks are even going with three ballgames to keep the fanatics hypnotized.

Sundays, well I think all of you remember how the holy day goes. CBS gets it going right after that big Sunday breakfast and NBC keeps the ball going with their double header, the finale always a Seattle Seahawk game.

I admit Seattle is going to be good, but taking the Super Bowl, pishaw! I agree with Playboy's Anson Mount about those Bears making it but the Seahawks will fold. (Oops, sorry girls, I said this one is for you).

Monday Night Football will be better for you this year ladies, they replaced Howard Cosell with Joe Namath. I know he's married but he still looks good in panty hose.

So for all you ladies who would like to save your relationship, here's a tip to help.

Tonight at Bogarts in Cavanaugh's is the Fig Leaf's lingerie show. If one of those teddies doesn't turn his head, he's a lost cause or I would seriously doubt his sexual preference.

And if you would like to learn a little about the game, here are a few pointers from my new book, I Like the Team in the Pretty Blue Uniforms.

A tight end is a football position, not Mel Gibson's fanny. A mad dog has nothing to do with rabies, a return has nothing to do with the IRS and illegal use of hands is not, well, it's not what you think.

So if any of you ladies are interested in shoot'n the s---t with the boys this fall, mail $29.95 to Greg Kilmer, UI Argonaut and you will receive this potential Pulitzer. Allow six weeks for delivery, (I'm pretty busy Thursdays, Fridays, Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays).

Free.

Get our new $49* software module when you buy an HP-41.

It's a deal that has no equal, for a calculator that has no equal.

Our new HP-41 Advantage software module packs 12K of ROM. One and a half times the capacity of any other HP-41 module. Large enough to hold the most popular engineering, mathematical and financial programs ever written for the HP-41.

You get comprehensive advanced matrix math functions, roots of equations and polynomials, integrations, base conversion and logic functions, and time value of money functions.

Our new module is also sub-programmable. So you can quickly access just a portion of a program, or transfer that section to your own program.

And it's even menu-driven. That eliminates overlays and reduces the number of prompts.

In short, you get everything it's going to take to help you make the grade in everything from Linear Algebra to Physics to Electronics to Statics and Dynamics.

The HP-41 is a deal all its own. Its operating system is so advanced, it doesn't need an "equals" key. Little wonder it's preferred by more engineers than any other calculator.

This is a limited time offer. Call (800) FOR-HP-41. Ask for Dept. 658B. We'll instantly give you the name of a dealer who has no equal.

Do it now. The phone call is free. Our new module won't be for long.

I'm a student who has no equal. Here's my proof-of-purchase to prove it. Please send me my free software module.
