Higher Ed. budgets to be set by board

By Douglas Jones
Of the Argonaut

POCATELLO — Because of dropping revenue collections, Gov. John Evans found it necessary Tuesday to order an across-the-board 2.5 percent holdback of state agencies' budgets. The holdback, if not rescinded later, will force an automatic statewide property tax increase.

Evans' order means that state education budgets will have to cut $10.9 million.

Since the executive order calls only for a spending holdback, it will be left up to the agency heads and boards to decide where the cuts will be. The State Board of Education will have to decide how much will be cut from public school support, higher education, vocational education and other programs under the board's jurisdiction.

The board has been meeting here since Wednesday, primarily to generate its budget requests for the next fiscal year. Charles McQuillen, the board's executive director, said he expects the board to send the university presidents back home and have them produce "impact statements" as to the effect of the holdback.

This information would be presented to the board at its October meeting in Couer d'Alene. Then, if the board discovers one any institution is severely impacted, the others would have their budgets reduced to cover the shortfall.

Although the UI had not planned for the holdback, President Richard Gibb said the financial vice-president, "has made calculations of [what] a three percent holdback would mean."

Gibb estimates the holdback will be no more than $1 million.

It has not been yet decided "How we would handle that (the 2.5 percent holdback), and we've been somewhat reluctant to decide," Gibb said.

"The board, of course, has to study it, look at it carefully, and decide how it will impose those holdbacks."

Gibb said he understands the holdback order will be in effect until January 31, 1986. "Presumably the legislature can act on it then."

He pointed out that last year the UI also had a holdback, which was later restored in January. "I don't know that will happen this year at all. I'm not as optimistic this year that we'll get it back."

Gibb said if the holdback does not come out of the budget base, and he understands that it will not, he will try to handle it through "vacant positions — not filling positions, and things like that."

Board cuts budget request

By Douglas S. Jones
Of the Argonaut

POCATELLO—The Finance Committee of the State Board of Education took the other members by surprise yesterday when it presented its budget request recommendations. The final figures were based on a five percent increase ceiling instead of the 10 percent cap which had been dictated by the board earlier this year.

In addition to the changes in the limit, the committee's recommendations excluded both economic development programs and salary equity requests from any limit while placing any increases in personnel benefits under the five percent restraint.

The board, which has been meeting in Pocatello since Wednesday, will set its own recommendations today, which will be passed on to the governor. The changes in the request guideline apparently took place at last month's meeting of the Financial and the Academic Affairs/Programs committees in Boise.

That gathering involved two voting members of the finance committee, Chair Robert Montgomery and Roberta Fields. In addition, Ed Cisek, board financial officer, was in attendance.

Reporters from the three newspapers which cover the board meeting with regularity asset they had no knowledge of the "mini-meeting. This includes two reporters from the Idaho Argonaut, and one each from the Lewiston Morning Tribune and the Moscow Idahonian.

However, Cisek says no official business of the board or any changes in policy were made at last month's mini-meeting.

Gibb sweats holdback, looks to centennial

By Kristi Nelson
Of the Argonaut

The effects of the two-and-a-half percent budget holdback on the UI are unknown, President Richard Gibb told the Faculty Council Tuesday.

"If it's a one-time holdback, that's one thing," Gibb said. "If it's a permanent reduction in the base (budget), that's another."

Gibb said the holdback, which had been announced earlier in the day by Governor John Evans, would mean roughly a $1 million loss for the UI.

Gibb said he received Monday a "report" from the UI financial affairs office in anticipation of the holdback. The report was predicated on a three percent reduction, and described what it would mean to the university.

However, nothing will be implemented until the State Board of Education acts on the matter, he said.

Two things can be taken for granted at the UI this year, Gibb told the council. "There will be problems and there will be some good things happening at this institution. We'll have budget problems, that's given."

Gibb said money the university received this year from the state legislature "for the first time in many years" improved morale at the UI. Critical programs received $1.25 million, and one-time equipment purchases $2 million.

"At least there was some hope," he said, adding that the holdback would probably negate those effects.

Saying that he refused to think negatively, Gibb turned to the UI's 1989 centennial preparations.

"A great portion of this is going to be a massive fund raising campaign," he said.

Gibb would not disclose the goal amount, joking that the figure usually isn't announced until one-third of it has been raised. Student scholarships, equipment funds, and faculty development would each receive $3 million if the fund raising is successful, he said.

After Gibb's remarks, Council Chairman David Walker presided over the election of a new vice chairman, a position vacated by Dale Gentry when he was appointed Dean of the College of Education.

After eight candidates declined their nominations, Eugene Golis of the Business Department ran unopposed and was elected unanimously.

"It's nice to start with such a vote of confidence," he said with a smile.

In much more disputed battles, George Williams from the Geology Department and Joann Henderson from the Law School were elected to the Budget Liaison Committee.

In final action, the council approved two new academic programs. A new sport science degree will allow students who want to pursue fitness management careers to graduate without a teaching certificate. Instead of student teaching and other teaching-related classes, majors will take more physical education classes and complete an internship, said Dorothy Zakrajsek, director of the Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Division.

A computer science option under the foreign language B.A. degree was also approved. The new program requires 36 credits in a foreign language and 32 credits in computer science and math in addition to the university requirements.

Board, from page 1

Because of the changes, the UI fiscal year 1987 operating request stands at an overall increase of only 5 percent from this year's base, to a total of $67 million.

However, that does not include the UI's share of a "overall system request" of $7 million for a six percent increase in employee compensation, $3.8 million in salary equity, $3.6 million for preventive maintenance, and another $2.6 for economic development programs.

These packages, which are to be voted on by the full board today, are intended to be sold to the legislature as programs above the five percent increase above maintenance of current operations.

Boise State University and Lewis-Clark State College also have been increased to five percent. Idaho State University received an increase of 6.3 percent, because of an extra $340,000 requested for the College of Pharmacy accreditation.

The finance committee's recommendation for the UI differed from last month's request by the university in that $213,000 was trimmed from the original $658,000 for "general improvements."

However, it increased library support services $94,000 to $476,000.

(D-Porthill).

Their plan also calls for a widening of the tax base into areas which have been abandoned by the Republican-dominated legislature over the past eight years, and/or deepening the present tax base.

EchoHawk said this group will hold meetings throughout the state, and asked the board to encourage attendance by citizens.

Board member Jerry Evans, commended the men's courage for bringing up the plan. He encouraged fellow board members to participate in these hearings when they are held in their respective region.

Evans, a Republican, is state superintendent of public instruction, and the only elected official on the board. He has often been critical of his party's leaders over funding of education.

Board Chair Diane Bilyeu said the state representatives' actions were "timely and very needed."

Women to raise money

The University of Idaho Athletic Department has announced plans for an ambitious fall fundraising event for the Vandal women's athletic program.

Jo Kleffner and Donna Belknap of Moscow have been named to co-chair the "Lady Vandals Stride for Gold, 1985."

"Successful women helping the Lady Vandals succeed is the key to the concept," said Assistant Athletic Director Kathy Clark. "We want to make this an annual event and are searching for a 1985 goal of $25,000," Clark said.

This year's "Lady Vandals Stride for Gold" will take place Saturday, September 28, during Vandal Homecoming '85. The one hour fundraising walk will be culminated by a celebration champagne brunch to present awards and announce results.

Department of Defense to woo UI scientists

By Erin Fenning
Of the Argonaut

A team of Pentagon recruiters sent by the Department of Defense will arrive at the University of Idaho September 17.

The recruiters invited by the UI and WSU will be in Moscow to show academic researchers how to take full advantage of the programs offered by the Department of Defense.

The specific objectives of the one day seminar are; to share information on research programs open to universities by the DOD, how to develop contacts with the DOD, and to learn methods on how to approach and work with DOD agencies.

Arthur Gittins, associate vice president of research, believes the seminar will be an important step for the UI and future UI research projects.

"The important thing is to put the DOD in direct contact with our faculty members on a one to one basis. The faculty can see these people, who they are and get information that is not readily available," Gittins said, "and the only other way to do it is to send our faculty back to Washington."

With the federal budget allocating $25 million for on campus research programs through the DOD (according to the National Council of Research Administrators) universities are looking toward the Pentagon as an important resource.

Because of the increase in DOD funding the UI has become more interested. "We have very few grants that have come from the DOD and we have wanted to build more," Gittins said.

The UI has been involved with DOD through projects such as graduate fellowships in Bio-Genetic Engineering and equipment purchases for the chemistry department. Last year UI researchers were funded about $300,000 by the DOD.

Faculty reaction to the upcoming seminar is expected to be extremely positive.

"I think most of the faculty will be delighted to talk to the DOD because we are interested in getting funding for our own research interests," Gittins said.

President Richard Gibb finds possible research funding from the DOD acceptable if the Pentagon makes it clear "no strings are attached". Funding from the DOD is welcomed if the UI can publish research material as the university sees it and not feel obligated to the Pentagon, he said.

One faculty member, Larry Davis, professor of physics, said the DOD puts researchers in a difficult position.

"The system is at fault," he said. "A dilemma that scientists face is that the main way funding for basic research is found is through the military."

At one time Davis did have project funding from the DOD. He said that he would never have accepted the funding without first knowing the project would not be used for defense.

"Hardly any scientists I know want to work on anything that may be used for defense," he said. "It is a matter of conscience."

"I would rather starve than participate in nuclear research." A colleague of Davis, Philip Deutchman, professor of physics, is planning on attending the upcoming seminar in hopes of generating discussion concerning the DOD.

"It alarms me that funding is coming from the DOD," he said, "and there is pressure to receive funds from the military."

The freedom of scientists is being seriously threatened by government censorship, according to Wilson. "Since 1980 hundreds of scientists and engineers have been pressured into withdrawing unclassified contributions from conferences."

Deutchman added, "Accepting funding from the DOD is an ethical question for me. I am worried about the use of science for destructive ends".

Gittins does not believe that any grants obtained by the UI during the seminar will fund research that could benefit the military.

"Why do people immediately think that because it is the DOD that the only thing we do for our country in terms of betterment of our country is build a big war machine?" he said. "One of the best mechanisms for the defense of this country is to educate all people and the DOD agrees with that."

Help for Africans from the Palouse

South Africa's political problems have dominated headlines this year, just as Ethiopia held our attention last year, as millions teetered on the edge of starvation. The headlines might dwindle, but the problems will not go away. The continent of Africa will dominate the world's attention for the remainder of this century and well into the next.

Africa currently has 530 million people, of which one-fourth exist entirely on imported aid. The United Nations expects the population to triple to 1.5 billion by 2030. It does not take much foresight to see decreasing agricultural production is going to undercut even the best intentions and best efforts of the Western world to keep on supporting these people.

Food aid shipments from Western nations has become a leitmotiv in Africa since the drought of 1972-73. Over the last ten years almost $10 billion in food aid has saved countless lives, but most of it came at the wrong times and in the wrong amounts, depressing prices and discouraging local production. Worse yet, for the most part only food was sent.

Unfortunately, Western aid has often lead to the increase of starvation because it has been given in ignorance. Starvation is not only a problem in itself, but a symptom of a greater set of problems in Africa.

In the last ten years, the majority of African states have been embroiled in civil wars, border wars, or invasions. Unsure of the intentions of their neighbors, and unsure of the support of their own populace, African governments have spent three or four times more on military and police services than on agricultural projects.

The slow change in awareness by African societies that the socio-economic traditions of yesteryear no longer apply is defeating attempts to relieve the plight. Historically high infant mortality rates have created social values which support high birth rates. Africa's projected population growth exceeds all other continents.

Africa needs more than food aid. To send only food is to only create a greater unutterable tragedy.

But there is hope. Hope because the concerned people behind projects like USA for Africa and this weekend's "Musical Chairs for Africa" realize that what aid is sent must be systematically utilized to meet both the present and future needs of Africa.

The money raised this weekend will reflect this understanding. The first 35 percent will go for greatly-needed immediate relief. The next 35 percent will buy seeds, fertilizer, farms implements and the means to generate water. Another 20 percent will be invested in long-term economic development programs. The final 10 percent will remain in the United States to help the hungry and the homeless.

With the support and participation of students from Idaho and Washington State, real hope can be implanted.

We are the hope.

We can make some headlines of our own. But more importantly, we can do something which will truly make a difference: we can change the cataclysmic path of a continent and the very lives of 500 million people.

We can make a difference.

Thinking: Is it worse than AIDS? David Blakely

Students for America, in case you didn't know, is the local conservative, rally-round-the-flag group here on campus. Tuesday they held a public meeting regarding AIDS. We were purportedly going to be told things about this disease that the news media, for one reason or another, had failed to report.

The speaker, whose only credential seems to be a B.S. in environmental health, proposed this disease and others were caused by the spreading of feces among humans due to anal intercourse. He further proposed that we should quarantine - I love that word - all known practitioners (i.e. gays) of this technique.

Unfortunately, our well-intentioned speaker failed to consider several salient points which were mentioned after he had finished. To wit: If anal intercourse stimulates disease, why have we not seen a corresponding rise in other diseases among gays, such as cholera? And, if anal intercourse is the source of AIDS, why have practicing heterosexual couples also not been affected?

More alarming than the speaker's failure to consider these simple contradictory points was his "solution" to the problem: since gays practice anal intercourse, they necessarily must be quarantined from other gays as well as the general public. Sounds easy until you realize that this involves incarcerating some 10 million Americans.

When the staggering cost of this proposal was mentioned, our speaker responded that at least we should make said method illegal. In fact, it already is illegal in a number of states. It ranks right up there with jaywalking in terms of its enforceability. Somehow, the simplest way to avoid fecal contamination: using a condom, never crossed the speaker's mind.

Another point not considered was who would determine whether an individual is Gay or not. And what about the heterosexual couples who practice the aforementioned method of sex? Sounds like a job for the bedroom police.

If there is another disease aside from AIDS which threatens our country it is certainly our present infatuation with uncritical, dogmatic thinking. Critical thinking takes effort and time. One must admit one's own fallibility and acknowledge the prospect that truth may not necessarily be pleasant or according to what one wants to believe. This naturally is unsettling and explains its present unpopularity in our society, which only wants to hear platitudes about its own greatness.

Sadly, many otherwise good religious people fall victim to this disease. The classic symptom is claiming God has sent AIDS to punish gays first, then all mankind for tolerating them. By that same logic any sickness, from the common cold to leprosy, can be claimed as God-ordained punishment. One wonders what God's quarrel is with blacks, who are more vulnerable to sickle cell anemia than other races.

This disease exists because too many people are willing to accept, as Ambrose Bierce said, "Belief without evidence in what is told by one who speaks without knowledge about things without parallel."

That a person can claim that he or she knows the truth, that his/her interpretation of the Bible, Koran, or whatever, is the right one and the only one for all mankind is more than incredible. It's preposterous.

If this is the kind of thinking that Students for America plans to use to re-establish America's greatness, then count me out. I prefer our present mediocrity - where facts must be documented, theses challenged, and hypotheses proven.

Whose own private Idaho?

In order to settle the public's business, elected officials sometimes have the need to thrash matters out in private. The procedures for going into "executive session" are specified in statutes and in bylaws.

The responsibility of the media is to report matters affecting the public. Therefore coverage of meetings of the ASUI senate is a necessity. We were dismayed when an executive session was called at the "Pre-session" Tuesday, and our reporter was asked to leave.

The dismay was not based on the senate's perceived need for privacy to work out what it considered a sensitive matter. It was caused by its violation of the statutes and its own procedures regarding executive sessions.

The Idaho Open Meeting law states in order to call an executive session, the governing body (the ASUI senate) must have a two-thirds vote approving the move. At that time, it also requires official citation as to what legal purpose the session was requested.

Afterwards, the minutes, although not required to be verbatim, must also contain sufficient detail to convey the general tenor of the private session. No binding or official final action may be taken in executive session.

"Pre-session" was evolved in order to have an opportunity to work on senate business informally, without the formal constraints of parliamentary procedures. Because of desired informality, minutes are not taken.

The ASUI Senate bylaws say a motion to move into executive session is always in order, is debatable and must be approved by a majority of the ASUI senate.

It also states that the following persons may attend an executive session: The president of the senate (the vice-president), the thirteen senators, one representative each from KUOI-FM and the Idaho Argonaut, and other persons invited to attend by the senate.

No reason for this executive session — as required by law — was given.

A review of the rules and regs which are supposed to make the senate a smoother-run body, by everyone concerned, would be appropriate. As an organization having much power over affairs of UI students, it is up to the senate to take seriously these rules, and not to ad-lib. Although spontaneity is nice once in awhile, in this case it was inappropriate.

The only way the students are going to have a good idea of what's going on is if their newspaper gets in there and covers it. The media shouldn't be more aware of government rules and regs than the senators themselves.

Alayne, Corky: A hearty salute

Editor:

Friends of Alyne Pettyjohn and Corky Bush are inviting all of their friends to a "going on" party. Alayne is taking a year's leave to seek her fame and fortune in Seattle. Corky has resigned from the University of Idaho and accepted the position of director of the Affirmative Action and Human Resources Office at Montana State University in Bozeman.

This party has all the ingredients to be the event of the year. It will be held Friday evening at 8 at the Down Under in Pullman. The Down Under is located at SE 1100 Latah, directly off Johnson Road. Drinks, hor d'oevres, and music from the Fifties through the Eighties, with a smattering of earlier Big Band tunes, will be on the agenda for the evening.

All who wish to bid Alayne and Corky a hale and hearty salute should come, bringing their friends, partners, spouses, and dancing shoes. The Down Under is open that night only for us, so we will be the only ones there. Anyone wishing more detailed information can call the Women's Center at 885-6616.

Wanted: yellers, and screamers

Editor:

Since I have been the Head Football Coach at the University of Idaho, my staff and myself have tried to develop a football program that you, the students, would be proud of. We believe at this point we have come close to accomplishing this.

As we enter the 1985 season, the expectations of Vandal football is at its highest. What we need now to make it a great year, is your support at games.

There is nothing more inspiring than to run out on the field with four or five thousand students, screaming and yelling in support. That, in football jargon, is called the home field advantage, and we need it.

We open Saturday night,

September 14, against Mankato State. Wear your Gold and please come and support us. Let's win the Big Sky Championship!

Hey, Mike. Stick to entertainment

Editor:

A note regarding the Argonaut's latest venture in religious propaganda, the column on AIDS by your "Entertainment Editor," Mike Long:

The level of thought in Mike's essay is nicely indicated by his sentence: "Even though it has not been proven for certain that AIDS can be carried by moisture, there have been instances when it has."

Happy the writer who can — in the same sentence — admit that a given assertion is not proven, and then go on to assert it as proven anyway.

Happy the writer who can get away with it. I hope Mike's readers read him very carefully — or not at all. Either one will do. Perhaps Mike should stick to entertainment, which seems to be his natural field.

Book-banning in the good ol' U.S.A.

By Mike Long
Of the Argonaut

This year marks the 250th anniversary of the trial of John Peter Zenger who was arrested and tried for printing the truth in colonial America, the first important victory for freedom of the press in the North American colonies.

Therefore, it was chosen as the theme this year for Banned Books Week, which ends tomorrow on Sept. 14. This past week, the University of Idaho Bookstore and the Moscow-Latah County Public Library joined together in erecting displays to protest book-banning across the nation.

Judy Lyons of the UI Bookstore said they are "doing it to call attention to the problem." And just how prevalent is the problem? 115 books have been challenged or actually banned in the last reported year, May '84 to May '85, according to Lyons. And these are only the documented cases.

Lyons pointed out that book-banning is not new and has been going on for a number of years, in a number of different countries.

"In Russia, it (the Koran) is restricted to students of history only," she said. "You kind of expect this. Hitler did it. But to realize that a certain amount of this is going on here in the United States, I find that frightening."

One of the examples she had for this last year was Vision Quest by Terry Davis. The book concerned a boy growing up in Spokane, WA, which was also Davis' home town.

Not only was the book banned in two school libraries in Wisconsin, but was also challenged at Mead High School, located in Spokane. The Milwaukee, WI claim against the book was it was "obscene."

Another example, which she has found to be not only a popular book but also a part of a popular series, is Valley of the Horses by Jean Auel.

The series traces from the beginnings of man to modern day and Lyons describes the book as still set in the pre-historic. It was challenged at Bastrop, TX because "the book violates Texas obscenity laws."

It was also banned in Stroudsburg, PA because the book was "blatantly graphic, pornographic and wholly unacceptable for a high school library."

Lyons said she could understand the banning of Playboy and Penthouse, but it "goes so much farther than that." In 1981, protestors in Gaffontia, North Carolina burned The Living Bible because "it is a perverted commentary on The King James Version."

Other books that have been challenged or banned over the years include the American Heritage Dictionary, The Divine Comedy by Dante, Camille by Dumas and many more newly published books such as Go Ask Alice and Krantz's Minstral's Daughter.

She said that the people doing the protesting are usually individual members of the public and the moves frequently are against libraries or public schools.

According to the sponsors of Banned Books Week, "censors allow their own interests to filter their perceptions and obscure the value of the work taken as a whole."

"These books may well upset some, but that is not a reason to prevent others from reading them. The message of Banned Books Week is a message of freedom."

"The freedom to choose and the freedom to express one's opinion even if the opinion

Palouse can raise support for USA for Africa

By Mike Long
Of the Argonaut

This Sunday, Musical Chairs for Africa will give the Palouse an opportunity to help the hungry there and in the U.S. and also enjoy themselves.

And it is still not too late to register for the event. The basic donation is two dollars, or you can pick up a commemorative T-Shirt and register at the same time for eight dollars.

Registration will be conducted right up to 11:30 a.m. on the day of the event and people are also free to make a donation without registering. They will also be taking new organization, 25 individuals, categories till 11:30 on the site.

The event, which is scheduled to begin at noon on Sept. 15, will be held on Wicks Field on the University of Idaho campus. Rain, however, will not wash away all plans.

If it rains, the event will be postponed for a week and if the weather hasn't cleared by then, organizers, TKO Communications, will take it inside the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Though there have been changes since the idea was first put in motion, Terri Lynch of TKO said "We need to refocus on the main thrust, which is to raise money for African relief."

Previous plans called for an attempted 5,000 participants to play a game of musical chairs and on top of raising money, set a new record for the Guinness Book of World Records. "People got all enveloped in that," Lynch said.

However, approximately three weeks before the event was scheduled to happen, organizers discovered that either they pay $100,000 for insurance coverage, call the whole thing off or reorganize.

"If we had a $100,000, we would give it to Africa, not the insurance company which would be counter-productive," Lynch said.

So they have changed the event into a spectator's affair and according to Lynch, it's "still going to be fun and for USA for Africa."

New plans call for the registrants' names to be placed into boxes according to organizations. Names will then be chosen at random by master of ceremonies Shelly Monahan of KREM-TV in Spokane.

Actual participants will be limited to 100. "They (the insurance company) said they would cover us if we have no more than 100 on the field," Lynch said.

The game will then begin with participants competing for the grand prize, a cruise for two in the Caribbean for seven days.

The organization with the largest participation will be able to send a representative on a weekend trip to MTV's studios in New York.

Participants and spectators will be entertained by bands Black Rose, Chaos, Stryker and a ten piece African dance band, Gwinyal.

"It is difficult to do a 360 when everything was suddenly obsolete two weeks before," said Lynch. The new plan was "the only way we could relate all the previous work."

"It would be destructive if we dropped the ball now," Lynch said. Especially since the group has already raised $1,500 to send to USA for Africa.

However, plans have not gone forward without controversy. There have been questions as to why there is not more being done for our own nation.

Lynch quickly counters that while people in the U.S. have resources such as welfare, there is nothing for the people in Africa, no place for them to turn.

Fellow organizer Rhonda Osborne said, "There are no resources for the African people. There is only sand. The pictures show hundreds of thousands at distribution points and there is nothing but sand around them."

On top of it, USA for Africa also invests 10 percent of all it raises here in the U.S. where Lynch says we have less than 10 percent of the world's hungry.

And the rest of the funds go to more than just food aid. Only 35 percent goes to immediate relief, another 35 percent goes for seeds, fertilizer, farm implements and ways to get water, while another 20 percent goes toward long-term economic plans.

Crops, livestock, the carney, more come to town

By Erin Fanning
Of the Argonaut

The Latah County Fair got underway Thursday, September 12, and will continue through Sunday until 4 p.m.

Latah's Harvest Bouquet, this year's theme for the fair, will have all the events from last year, including livestock judging, carnival rides, and a talent show.

The fair officially began Thursday morning with the judging of various fair events ranging from flowers to livestock entries. The climax of the day was Cabin Fever, a country western band who played in the early evening.

The fair will be open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday and will close early Sunday at 4 p.m. Carnival rides provided by McKay's Shows will be available daily and prices will be comparable to last year's.

Friday's scheduled events include more livestock judging in the morning with the Children's and Junior's classifications showing at 4 and 6 p.m. respectively. Four-H Club and Future Farmers of America make up the bulk of the groups participating in the livestock showing.

Saturday's events continue with 4-H and F.F.A. finishing the livestock portion of the fair in the morning. Awards will be distributed to outstanding F.F.A. and 4-H members that same day at 6 p.m.

A special addition to Saturday's entertainment will be Kuba the Clown who will be at the fair 1-9 p.m. to entertain the children.

The highpoint of the fair comes on the last day, Sunday. It begins with a church service from 10-11 a.m. Following the service is a talent show which is open to everyone who wants to participate (for further information contact Jody Smith at the Fair Office). Participants in the talent show are advised to bring their own accompaniment and extra mikes if needed.

Other events on Sunday's agenda are a loggers contest 1-2:30 p.m., a dogshow 2 p.m., and a Junior and Senior Tractor Jack Contest. The tractor contest involves loading bails of hay on a tractor and competing to see which tractor can carry the most.

The fair ends Sunday at 4 p.m. According to Sheri Ogden, everything from the various events must be claimed by 7 p.m. or it will become the property of the fair. This year premiums may be picked up between 10 and 6 p.m. on Sunday.

The fair takes place at the Latah County Fairgrounds near Third Street and Blaine.

KUOI making comeback

By Nella Letizia
Of the Argonaut

1985 looks like the year of the comeback for KUOI, University of Idaho's 24-hour student radio station.

With new ideas for radio programming, KUOI's image as just a station playing new releases will be a thing of the past.

Greg Meyer, station manager for KUOI, said the bulk of the programming has been rock oriented or hard rock oriented and KUOI has earned the reputation of being punk rock.

"I'm trying to gradually change that image," he said.

Changes have already been made. During registration, a remote broadcast was made live from the Kibbie Dome during the course of the day, announcing class closures and including interviews with students, ASUI President Jane Freund, and people who had tables set up at the dome, Meyer said.

The station is planning a live broadcast of women's volleyball games starting October 1 and women's basketball games later, he said.

KUOI is already diversifying its general programming, Meyer said. The station will cover other sports, critical ASUI Senate meetings, and speeches. KUOI will also feature live music from local musicians.

The station's music selection will offer folk, blues, country, and jazz, Meyer said. Presently, KUOI receives its records—mostly new releases—from record companies on loan, said Matt Kitterman, production director. These companies send new records in hopes that they will be played. KUOI in turn sends a rating of the tunes back to the companies.

Existing problems at the station will be changed. KUOI started broadcasting in 1945, and much of the original equipment is still in use today, causing some problems with breakdown.

"Most of the stuff is pretty old, breaks frequently," Kitterman said.

"We are going to go to the ASUI Senate with a proposal to replace equipment," Meyer said. "We're hoping to get a sympathetic ear from the Senate."

Meyer said other ideas included going to the Federal Communications Commission with a proposal to boost the power of KUOI and adding a third antenna bay on the two already existing antennae to increase the signal.

Some problems at KUOI cannot be easily changed. Meyer said part of the problem is that KUOI is a student station, and the staff is learning as they work.

Budget cuts, including salaries, have also been a problem for the station, according to Meyer.

KUOI will release its program guide around October 1. The guide will give more information about the station's programming.

KUOI's all-student staff consists of Meyer, Kitterman, Program Director Dave Hanson, Music Director Jeff Morehead, Engineering Director Greg Clifford, and about 50 DJs. The DJs are all volunteers, said Kitterman.

"We do it for love, I guess," he said. "It's really the most fun I have all week, doing my show."

Kitterman said this year they have a lot of DJs and not a lot of time slots. Shifts have been reduced from four hours to two hours to accommodate the large number.

KUOI started on November 15, 1945 under Ted "T.S." Cady as its first manager, was redone in the early 1970s. Last year, the station was almost closed down by the ASUI Senate because of a study which indicated the station rated low in popularity. Large student support for the station prevented its closing down.

KUID celebrates 20th birthday

The youngest station in the local area is having a birthday party tomorrow night when KUID-TV celebrates its 20th year of broadcasting in the Northwest.

To be held in the Galena Room of the SUB, the banquet will feature Mark Russell who has been called America's best known political satirist.

At the banquet, Russell will entertain via closed circuit TV from Boise, though it will be a live performance. And though he will be focusing on Idaho politicians, it is unknown which ones will catch his barbs.

Describing his talent, Russell said, "In a very natural way, without an act, or any preparation—without even thinking about it—you start mimicking people and situations." He has been with Public Broadcasting Systems for 11 years.

It gives them a chance to try their hand at directing, lighting, audio, script writing and more. KUID is subsidized by government funding and donations.

The tickets for the banquet are $20 apiece and the evening begins at 5:30 p.m. with a no-host prefunction at St. Augustine's Center and then moves on to the banquet in the SUB at 6:30 p.m.

Pullman hosts first annual Harvest Fair

By Michael Haberman
Of the Argonaut

A fishing derby in a public swimming pool, a Zucchini Critters Contest and an evening concert by autoharpist Bryan Bowers will highlight the first annual Harvest Fair in Pullman.

The fair begins at 9 a.m. Saturday, September 21 on Main St. in Pullman. Food and craft booths will line the street, and a music stage will feature performances ranging from songs having to do with cabbage-patch dolls to old-time fiddle tunes.

A toy boat race, frisbee toss, and the fishing derby are scheduled for Reaney Park. Children will be able to catch and keep fish, some of which will be marked for prizes. The Zucchini Contest will afford an opportunity to turn what is usually a plentiful crop into creative critters.

Entries in a Pea and Lentil Cook-Off will be judged at noon in the High Street Mall area, and the United Way will kick off their fall campaign with a parade and balloon release at 11:45.

Folk music is an important theme running through the festival. Organizer Pat Askham said it seemed like the natural thing to do.

"Since we have so many wonderful folk musicians in this area it seemed like the best possible thing to do," she said. Dan Maher, The Bottom Dollar Bluegrass Band and Mike Garner are among local performers.

Bryan Bowers, a storyteller, singer and autoharpist, will end the Harvest Fair with an 8 p.m. concert at the Gladdish Middle School Auditorium at NW 115 State St. in Pullman. Bowers has released three albums and has been voted the best instrumentalist for the autoharp by Frets magazine.

Maher, host of Inland Folk, a radio program on KWSU, said a Bowers concert has a universal appeal. It features American and Celtic fiddle tunes played on the autoharp, humorous stories, gospel songs and some songs Bowers has written himself.

"He really tries to reach out and get people to feel the music," said Maher. Tickets are available for $6 at Guitar's Friend in Moscow, The Combine in Pullman or at the door.

Sponsors of the fair are the Pullman Main St. Program and Pullman Parks and Recreation. Complete information on times and locations of events is available on posters or at the Combine

Vandals down Whitworth, prepare for Wyoming bout

By Chris Schulte
Of the Argonaut

The University of Idaho volleyball team traveled to Spokane Thursday and knocked off the Whitworth squad in four games, 15-11, 15-12, 9-15 and 15-11.

Idaho coach Pam Bradetich stated afterwards, "Whitworth came out ready to play. It was their first match so they started a little slow, but they scrapped and played good defense."

Leading Idaho to the victory was their aggressive play at the net. "We played much better than we did over the weekend (Cavanaugh's/Idaho tourney), that was the difference."

Nelly Gant, in the line-up for the first time in two weeks, led the Vandal attack with 14 kills and three blocks. Also playing a good match for the UI were freshmen Julie Hansen with 10 kills, Cavanaugh's tourney MVP Robin Jordan with nine kills, Terri Plum with seven kills and sparkplug Kelley Neely with 24 assists.

The Idaho team also had 13 service aces, much to the enjoyment of Bradetich. "If we continue to serve like that, it would make a big difference come conference play," she said.

Bradetich concluded by saying, "We hit better, we won the long rallies and close games. That's improvement over last weekend." And what a weekend the Vandals are in for.

The Vandals travel to Wyoming for the Wyoming Invite only to be thrown to the wolves. On Friday, Idaho takes on host Wyoming, a Top-20 squad and then plays the Cornhuskers of Nebraska, the fifth-ranked team in the country.

"We're excited to play the best competition we can," Bradetich said. "This helps us to improve. We need this kind of competition," Bradetich said.

Other teams in the tourney include the University of Montana, Cal State Long Beach and the University of San Diego. How the ladies fare on Friday will determine their opponents for Saturday.

Following this weekend's tourney, the women will prepare for the following weekend's Brigham Young Preview tourney. There will be 16 teams in Provo for the tournament.

Vandals ready for MSU Mavericks

By Greg Kilmer
Of the Argonaut

The University of Idaho football team changes from the Div. I ranks to Div. II for their next opponent as they entertain Mankato State of Minnesota Saturday night in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

The Maverick's, a member of the tough North Central League, are coming off a 48-7 demolition of Wisconsin-Whitewater in their season opener.

Mankato returns 31 letterman from last year including eight starters on offense and eight starters on defense.

"They like to run the ball," Idaho coach Dennis Erickson said after viewing films of the Mankato/Whitewater game. "They're big up front and have real good speed in their backfield."

The Maverick running game churned out 315 yards in their season opener last week.

Fullback Larry Brown, 5-foot-10 175 pounds, had 75 of the total on 13 carries and a touchdown.

Newcomer Tony Diggs joins Brown in the Maverick backfield.

Running the Maverick offensive system is quarterback Mike McDevitt. McDevitt threw for 100 yards last weekend on hitting seven of ten, but it's his running that concerns Erickson.

"He runs their option very well," Erickson said. "He popped a couple 50 and 60 yarders last week."

McDevitt's favorite receiver is wide-out Pat Walker. Walker caught 50 balls for the Mavericks last year.

The Mavericks have changed their defensive philosophy this year from last year's 4-3 front. Mankato is going with an eight-man front with a three deep zone secondary.

"They do a lot of blitzing with their front people, Erickson said.

The Mavericks shut out the Wisconsin/Whitewater running game last weekend, giving up zero yards on the ground.

Although it will be the first time the two schools have met, it will not be the first time head coach Dan Runkle has been in the Kibbie Dome.

Runkle was at Northern Arizona as an assistant for Joe Salem in 1978 when the Lumberjacks beat the Vandals 34-28 on a blocked Vandal punt on the last play of the ballgame.

Runkle went with Salem to the University of Minnesota before taking the head job at Mankato in 1981.

Following last Saturday's loss to Oregon State, UI's Erickson stressed his team's mental mistakes during practice this week.

"We made the most mental mistakes in that game than any since I've been here," Erickson said. "We blew coverages, ran wrong routes and had some passes that shouldn't have been thrown."

Bouillon brings "Show Me" experience to UI

Rick Bouillon

By Tom Liberman
Of the Argonaut

Midwesterner Rick Bouillon has taken over as head of the UI intramural program from former Director Robert Whitehead.

Bouillon, a native of Alton, IL takes the job after serving for two years as the assistant director at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

Bouillon said that he applied for the job last February and that he feels fortunate to have gotten it.

"I feel that I am qualified for the position but there are many qualified people with a lot of experience in this field," he said.

He said that the job was a move upwards for him and he was very pleased to be working here.

While the Big Sky is not quite the athletic conference the Big Eight is, Bouillon said that this is an advantage to the intramural program.

"At Missouri there was a lot of Big Eight hype and not as much interest in intramurals," said Bouillon.

The job as assistant at Missouri was his first intramurals job after finishing Grad School at Eastern Illinois University.

He said he got his start in intramurals as a referee and encourages students to come out and ref games.

"I've always been interested in sports. I coached at a high school level but this job lets me be involved in many sports instead of concentrating on a single one."

He said he has not had much of an opportunity to participate in any sports as he has been busy with mostly paperwork so far.

Bouillon said that he has no definite plans for the program yet and that he would wait and see which sports are doing well and which are not before he makes any changes.

The major problem with the program that he has noticed so far is a low turnout for referees.

He hopes to overcome this in part by visiting living groups personally and encouraging participation.

"The UI has an excellent variety of activities and outstanding facilities for this size of an University," Bouillon said.

"At Missouri many of the facilities were antiquated and unpleasant to look at," he said.

The indoor facility is a big bonus as many sports can be held there he said.

He said he would welcome student input concerning any part of the program.

He said to come to him with complaints if things are wrong but also tell him if a referee is doing a good job.

"This program is for the students. Any input they can give me will help the program. I'm all ears," he said.

Bouillon said that the UI is a good place to work and that Moscow is a nice community to live in.

He said, "Hopefully the intramural program and I will grow together here at the UI."

FIT-TIP

QUESTION: After a tough game of racquetball, I wake up in the morning with sore muscles and stiffness, especially in my legs and back. Anything I can do to relieve the tension?

ANSWER: Stiffness often occurs when a group of muscles have been worked hard for a long period of time. The fluids that collect in the muscles during and after exercise are absorbed into the bloodstream at a very slow rate. As a result the muscle becomes swollen, shorter and thicker, it's more resistant to stretching. Light exercise, massage, and passive mobilization assist materially in reducing stiffness. A proper warm-up and cool-down will help to reduce muscle soreness and stiffness afterwards.

Bio-85 symposium to take place at WSU

By Kristi Nelson
Of the Argonaut

New ethical and legal questions created by advancements in genetic engineering will be discussed at a three day Washington State University symposium that begins Sunday.

Internationally known scholars will participate in "Bio-85: Decisions on the Engineering of Human Life," including the University of Idaho's Robert Blank. The political scientist will fly to Pullman from New Zealand, where this semester he is lecturing and doing research on biomedical policy under a Fulbright grant.

Admission to all symposium lectures and discussions is free, and coordinator Allan Kachemeier said student and public participation is encouraged. Most of the 18 speakers will be present at all symposium events, giving the public "ample opportunity" to meet and converse with them, he said.

WSU President Samuel Smith will open the symposium Sunday night, and five more sessions will follow on Monday and Tuesday. Kachemeier said each authority would speak for about 30 minutes individually, leaving time for discussion at the end.

Besides Blank, Kachemeier said speakers include lawyer David Vickers, who last month argued an adult sterilization case in front of the Canadian

Supreme Court and was involved in a Canadian Baby Doe case, Michael Dolan, one of the foremost pediatricians in North America, and theologian Kenneth Vaux from the University of Illinois Medical Center.

Other featured participants include prominent lawyers, physicians, political scientists, sociologists and philosophers, who will speak on such topics as genetic screening and cultural changes in the meaning of life.

Kachemeier, who is president of the Associated Students of WSU Symposium Committee, also coordinated last year's WSU symposium on George Orwell and government control in society.

"We're interested in having an annual symposium dealing with the humanistic side of technology," he said.

Kachemeier said the unusual multi-disciplinary aspect of this year's Bio-85 symposium lured many participants to Pullman.

"People are somewhat intrigued and excited about it," he said.

The mechanical engineering student said he read about 25 to 30 books, and solicited recommendations from authorities in the various fields before extending invitations to potential participants.

Although Kachemeier said he had heard of Blank's reputation before, he was further impressed when he read some of Blank's books.

"I found, quite frankly, that his books were some of the best in the field," he said. "I'm surprised he's still at Idaho."

Al Rouyer, chairman of the Political Science department at the UI, said Blank's work is "right in the center" of a new field created by medical advances which cause conflicts between medicine, religion, and biology that must be solved politically.

Senate has problems

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

The ASUI Senate handled personnel problems during pre-session Tuesday night. On Wednesday during regular session they heard a report on the Argonaut, and approved a bill giving money to Special Allocations for the entertainment program.

The major action took place in pre-session on Tuesday, when an executive session was called to discuss a bill passed last week appointing senators to ASUI Senate subcommittees. Senators to ASUI Senate Subcommittees.

During the executive session this reporter was ejected from the meeting. At Wednesday's senate meeting Senator Mike Felton moved to go in to executive session to discuss this bill again but later retracted his motion.

Kelli Kast, the senior senator, was taken off the Finance Committee and appointed to the position of Vice Chair of the General Operations and Appointments Committee (GOA).

Kast said at pre-session, she understood why Vice President Mike Trail put her on GOA (so two junior senators could get experience), but "I feel it's extraordinary circumstances with our financial state that we need an experienced senator on finance."

Senator Mike Felton said, "I think there's some senators here who need to put some things out on the table and stop keeping so many secrets."

Kast added, "There's been a lot of talking going on on this bill and very little to my face. If I don't have your support, I want to know now."

Apparently, Kast got her wish because Senator Kelly Patton gave her opinion of moving Kast back on to Finance. She said, "Personally, I want to keep her on GOA. Kelli had a tendency to get awfully emotional about money issues last year."

A motion to go into executive session was then passed to discuss this further off the record. Trail said afterwards it was basically to talk about personalities and who got along with who.

According to Trail, the bill stands as it is, with Kast as Vice Chair of GOA.

On Wed. night, John Hecht, Argonaut Editor, gave a report on the state of the newspaper. In general, things are running smoothly, said Hecht. "Our weakest spot is we do not have a good copy editing system."

Job descriptions were made and the editorial and style guide is down on computer disk, he said. The advertising staff contains almost all new people, but

Hecht said, "Ads are going pretty well."

The new processor the ReproGraphics Bureau requested last spring from the Senate has arrived and as a result, Hecht commented, "There will be smoother production and a savings of time and money."

Where's money?

By Karma Metzler
Of the Argonaut

Idaho students are not getting the full amount of federal financial aid that they are entitled to.

According to Dan Davenport, director, Student Financial Aid, Idaho has only experienced a 1.9 percent growth in aid while states of comparable size and population, like Vermont, have seen at least a 21 percent increase in federal student money.

"We have a several million dollar shortage in campus based aid," Davenport said. Campus based aid being financial assistance like work study and supplemental grants.

Idaho post secondary schools get federal financial aid money based on the amount of taxes state residents pay. Ten percent of that money is put into a special aid fund by the Board of Education to help states with more need. However, since 1979, constitutional law prohibits post secondary schools getting less money than they did during 1979. According to Davenport, this means that even if needs change monetary appropriations remain the same.

"If we were fully funded we would get an additional six to eight million dollars," Davenport said. He pointed out however that other states would also see increases.

To correct the short fall there will have to be a change in federal law. The current financial aid law expires in October of 1986. Federal aid administrators and legislators are currently working to make sure Idaho gets fair funding through the next law. For now, though, "We are kicking a dead horse," Davenport said.

Davenport said that Senator James McClure has done a lot to help Idaho students get their fair share of money. "I don't know what we can do," Davenport said. "We've made everyone aware of it."

Refugee to talk

El Salvadoran refugee Pilar Martinez will discuss Central American Literature and the theological implications of the sanctuary movement in separate events today.

Martinez, who claims she was beaten and raped by El Salvadoran soldiers, will talk about the sanctuary movement at a potluck at 6 p.m. tonight at Simpson United Methodist Church, NE 325 Maple St. in Pullman.

Sanctary is a group attempting to provide protection to what it believes are political refugees. Many churches have been involved in the movement, and Martinez is now in sanctuary at University Baptist Church in Seattle.

This afternoon from 11:30 until 1:30 Martinez will be present at a discussion of Central American Literature at Bookpeople, 512 S. Main in Moscow.

Worker injured

By Bryan Clark
Of the Argonaut

Vern Kinnison, the University of Idaho farm worker injured last Friday in a forklift accident, is listed in serious condition at Sacred Heart Hospital in Spokane.

Kinnison was apparently injured when his forklift rolled off a 15 foot embankment on Sixth St. Police reports listed the cause of the accident as inattentive driving.

A hospital spokesman said Monday that tests were being performed on Kinnison but would not comment on whether he is paralyzed. According to Steve Maki, farm superintendent, Kinnison can move his feet and legs but can't yet move his fingers or right side.

Funseth, a professional golfer who continued to play on the PGA Senior Tour until last year after being told he had terminal chest cancer, was 52.

Funseth was a consistent money-winner on the PGA tour for close to 20 years and won three tour events: the 1965 Phoenix Open, the 1973 Los Angeles Open and the 1978 Greater Hartford Open. He won more than $600,000 during his career on the regular tour and was successful on the senior PGA tour as a 50-year-old rookie.

His wife, Sandi, daughter Lisa, 18, and son Mark, 17, were with Funseth when he died.

"He wanted to die at home," his wife said. "This was his choice. He fought a courageous battle."

The Spokane, WA native and UI graduate set the competitive course record at Pebble Beach, an 8-under-par 64 in the 1972

Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. The record stood until 1983

when Tom Kite shot a 10-under 62.
