

Musical Chairs

Money raised but attendance low

By Roger Jones
Of the Argonaut

Things didn't turn out as planned for Musical Chairs For Africa Sunday. The contest-fundraiser had already taken a blow because of insurance problems. And on Sunday, the day it all came together, weather, misunderstandings and lack of foresight caused a low turnout.

The biggest problem was that most of the students misunderstood the starting time. Close to 200 showed up at Wicks Field at noon, but the event did not begin until 2 p.m. After learning this fact most of the shivering students left. Some returned, most did not. The weather kept most of them home. It was at best a dreary day, with cold, wet winds. The music began at noon with a 10-piece African music and dance ensemble. Stryker followed with modern music. Black Rose was scheduled to play but did not perform because of the lack of participation. The bands were performing for free, in sight of the cause. The original plan for the event was to have all the people who registered participate. Organizers had hoped for 5,000 people to break the record for musical chairs. But after an unforeseen insurance conflict it became a spectator event with one randomly chosen person from each living group to play. So, 100 participants and a crowd of spectators were expected Sunday. But at 2 p.m. not enough people were there. To have a large musical chairs game, the organizers drew from the people who had showed up, about 75 to 100.

Once the game got started then an excitement was generated and the game of musical chairs itself went without a hitch. Terri Lynch, the chief coordinator, said there was a good registration turnout but the people just didn't show up for the event. Later organizers commented that the registration was 500 plus.

"We were still able to raise money for African relief," Lynch said. The exact amount was not available, but the total was said to be well over a thousand.

There was at least one happy participant, Cathy Holmes, the winner of the contest. The excited Pi Beta Phi member beat her competition and landed in the last chair to win a week long trip for two to the Caribbean.

The second place winner was Shari Miller of the Cutting Loose hair salon. She won a weekend trip to Couer d' Alene. Third place was landed by Tim Henderson, he won a waterbed for this honor.

Gualt Hall won the distinction of being the organization to donate the most money. For winning this, the hall will be able to send a representative to New York City to tour the MTV studios.

Terryl Sharples of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, a spectator, observed, "No matter what the monetary impact may be, there is definitely an enthusiasm here. . . you can tell by looking around that there is a real sincerity here."

The money made from Musical Chairs For Africa is to be given to USA For Africa. Organizers chose USA For Africa for its effective distribution of funds. Of the funds, 35% is to be used for immediate relief, 35% for seeds, fertilizer and other farm implements, 20% for long-term economic development, and 10% for feeding the hungry in the United States.

Vietnam Veterans memorial model to visit Moscow

By John Hecht
Of the Argonaut

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial, a monument listing the names of 57,939 Americans killed or listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia has become the most visited attraction in Washington, D.C.

A one-half scale model of "The Wall," created in 1983, is scheduled to tour Idaho, with stops in Moscow, Boise, and Pocatello. The tentative dates for Moscow are Thursday through Sunday, Oct. 10-13.

The 72-panel exhibit — photographs mounted on masonite — is owned by the Vietnam Veterans Project of San Francisco, a non-profit umbrella organization. It was originally constructed for the "Peace is Alive" job fair in May 1983.

According to Jim Owens of the UI sociology department, an ad hoc committee has been working with the Vietnam Veterans Center in Boise to bring it here.

Other members of the committee include UI students Wayne Nelson and Rob Wilson, both Vietnam veterans; Campus Program Coordinator Barry Bonifas; and Dave Esser, ASUI Productions Chairman.

Plans call for the model to be set up in the SUB Ballroom. However, one of two arms, each of which are 125 feet long, may need to be extended into the lobby.

"It will be a tight squeeze," Owens said.

The original monument was surrounded by controversy from its conception. Except for the two-acre plot, which was donated by a unanimous vote of both chambers of Congress, it was funded entirely by donations.

It is located within a grove of trees on the Capitol Mall, two-hundred yards from the Lincoln Memorial. Two walls — each 250 feet long — are engraved with the names listed chronologically. They date from July 1959 until April 1975. Ten-foot high where they meet in the center, the walls taper upward to ground level.

The model, designed and executed by San Francisco artist Jerry Littlejohn, replicates the original except for the addition of the names of four students killed at Kent State University and two at Jackson State University during anti-war demonstrations in the early 1970s.

It has been exhibited nationally, including Florida, Illinois, Oregon and Washington, and in three Alaska cities last summer.

Over 1,400 proposals were submitted for the original monument. The winning design was submitted by Maya Ying Lin, then a 21-year old Yale architecture student. The memorial was dedicated November 11, 1982, Veteran's Day.

FICA returns? "soon"

By Bryan Clark
Of the Argonaut

An estimated eight to ten thousand past and present University of Idaho students are probably wondering when their FICA tax refunds, announced this summer, are going to get here.

The answer, according to Jeff Eisenbarth, UI Payroll Officer, is "we don't really know for sure when we will get the authorization to begin sending out checks."

This summer UI announced that $936,000 was mistakenly paid by the UI to the Social Security Administration (SSA) on the paychecks of employees who were also full time students.

In 1979 the SSA ruled that full time students were exempt from paying social security taxes. In 1982 a SSA audit revealed the UI was still deducting FICA from students paychecks. Unfortunately, due to a lack of communication between the State Auditors Board and UI payroll officials, this wasn't brought to the UI attention until last year. The UI was meanwhile still deducting FICA from the student paychecks.

"A detailed report accounting each of the 10,000 students and the part of the $470,000 owed them was sent to the State Auditors office last month, but was sent back to us for rewriting because of six discrepancies," said Eisenbarth. "The report has been redone now and we sent it to Boise at the beginning of this week," he added.

"The Board in Boise takes a lot of time to go over the reports because they are very thorough, but once it gets to the SSA in Baltimore the process shouldn't take much time," Eisenbarth said.

While unable to name an exact date, Eisenbarth said, "We still have a couple of months at least before checks can be sent out because we have to verify addresses after we receive approval. If our refund goes like that at WSU approval should take a couple of weeks from now."

Although UI has stopped deducting FICA from students paychecks, BSU and ISU have not as yet followed suit. According to Eisenbarth "They have not stopped yet and, as far as I can see, they have no intention of refunding either. I'm sure that eventually the students will start to say something."

Dorms to dry up?

By Karma Metzler
Of the Argonaut

The Residence Hall Association is considering limiting the amount of alcohol distributed at residence hall parties.

The proposed rule would curtail the amount of alcohol served in the party rooms and promote non-alcoholic events, said Ken Altmen, R.H.A. president. Another suggestion would eliminate alcohol completely.

The rule is being considered to reduce the liability risk to hall presidents who are responsible for the parties and school administrators, Altmen said.

"Drinking in the party rooms is a privilege, not a right, given to us by the Board of Regents," Altmen said. "I believe we can reduce the legal risk without completely eliminating alcohol in the party rooms."

The current proposal would limit the amount of alcohol to 1 keg per 70 people or that equivalent in hard liquor, Altmen stated.

Paul Scalchert a junior of Borah Hall said, "I think they are worrying over nothing. People are going to party as much as they can until the new drinking age takes effect."

Altmen commented that in view of the new drinking age, "It might be to our advantage to move the focus of our parties away from alcohol and begin enjoying ourselves in other ways."

Hall presidents have been getting feedback from their halls and the R.H.A. will hear the results at tonight's meeting.

Rep o gets toy

"In a move to increase our control over the reprographic process, the ASUI purchased a new processor for the student publications section" said John Pool, operations manager for that department of the ASUI.

The machine is used to make a photographic negative of printed material such as pages of the Argonaut or the Gem of the Mountains. These negatives are then sent to printing companies who use them to make printing plates, which are used to print the final product.

"While the new machine is the same type as the old machine, it is 15 years newer and thus 15 years more reliable," Pool went on to say.

The old reprographics processor was bought in 1980 from a Spokane firm where, in the words of Pool, "it had been well used." The price tag then for the unit was about $10,000. The new one cost the ASUI about $14,000 with installation which was "much less than my original guess of $20,000," said Pool.

The funds for the purchase came from the ASUI, which bought it when there was an expected surplus in the budget. But Dean Vettrus, director of the ASUI said "It was an expense that was needed for a long time and the money was well spent."

Senate to act

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

The ASUI Senate will decide the fate of three bills at their meeting Wednesday night. They are for the required visitation of ASUI departments by ASUI Senators which ASUI President Jane Freund is the author of. Freund said, "I knew a senator who worked his way up the ASUI and had never even visited KUOI." Right now, senators are not required to visit ASUI departments.

Also a bill providing for the reimbursement of the FY 1986 Gem of the Mountains budget for extra costs incurred in producing the FY 1985 Gem of the Mountains will also be up for approval.

The bill providing for the creation of Advertising as an ASUI department will be up for a vote by the senate. Suzanne Gore, Advertising Manager of the Idaho Argonaut, will discuss the proposal this week with General Operations and Appointments (GOA) Committee before talking to the senate Wednesday.

According to President Freund, Dean Vettrus, ASUI general manager, George Dafeo, ASUI accountant technician and Glenn Ford, of the university business office, will talk to the senate about ASUI finances and the monthly budget reports they are doing for ASUI.

Freund ASI chair

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

University of Idaho Student Body president, Jane Freund, is the new chairman of Associated Students of Idaho (ASI).

This is a state-wide committee composed of the student body presidents of the four Idaho colleges, UI, Lewis-Clark State College, Boise State, Idaho State and four representatives from each of these institutions.

The purpose of the group, according to Freund, is to discuss and help higher education of Idaho. "The idea is that there is more strength in a group."

Freund, who was elected last Thursday by representatives of the four Idaho colleges in Pocatello, will serve as chair until next September. She ran unopposed.

The Vice Chair is Carl Vogt of Boise State.

ASI meets every month in conjunction with the Idaho State Board of Education.

Freund said she does not think the committee is one that will just talk about higher education. All four institutions were thinking about withdrawing from the ASI in 1984, according to Freund. "I admit, I suggested the ASUI senate withdraw from ASI last year but we rewrote the constitution and streamlined the group. I think it can be a useful group."

She said the group is planning future meetings with Idaho State Board of Education members. "We also plan to have more contact with legislators. But we won't just talk. We'll put the information we get from them into developing a plan to get our concerns back to the State Board and legislators."

ASI's first activity is a retreat in McCall, Idaho in October, "to hammer out our policy of opinions and goals," said Freund. "As far as getting ideas of students on higher education, we're working on surveys for students."

She commented, "I'm leaving the ASUI in December, and it's really nice to remain involved. I just love getting involved state-wide."

Freund said she will be busy this semester with politicking. "I'm glad I only have six credits." She philosophized a bit about being a politician. "I guess a politician means to me now someone who knows how to get things done. You not only know how to go through the system but you know how to go around it without breaking the rules."

El Salvadoran refugee tells of plight

By Michael Haberman
Of the Argonaut

Torture in El Salvador and an arrest in the United States were part of the story told by Salvadoran Pilar Martinez at the Moscow Community Center Tuesday night.

Martinez told about 100 people about the killings of a priest and four youths in her community and the abduction, torture and escape of her daughter and herself.

Martinez did not speak of the details of her torture, but they were provided in a written statement.

"I was beaten, raped, burned and given electric shocks to my head and other parts of my body while still hand-cuffed to my child. The torture was constant and my child was beaten as well. We were hand-cuffed together for three months," she said in the statement.

Her daughter Mila, now nine, played amidst the audience while her mother spoke.

Martinez said her community was attacked because it offered shelter to refugees fleeing the effects of the war in the countryside. Her church took care of children whose parents had been killed and offered medicine and shelter. Martinez said the government wanted the refugees kept quiet.

Soldiers came to the community early one morning in 1981, killed the priest and four youths, then put the bodies of the youths on top of the church "...and they put weapons on the bodies. And then on T.V. they put it as if it were the young people who had begun the shooting," said Martinez through interpreter Barbara Hiebert-Crape. She said the only weapons the community possessed were guitars.

"These were honest, good people and these are the people who are dying in El Salvador," she said.

The community tried to recover, but the soldiers had taken a list of the church membership, and the young people had begun to disappear.

One night the soldiers came for Martinez and her daughter.

Martinez was tortured, and then spent three months in prison. She was usually blindfolded when she went out of her cell, but once the guards forgot to do this. Martinez had her left arm wrapped tightly around her chest as she spoke.

"I saw many young people in the prisons being tortured. Some had had their hands and feet cut off. Others had had their faces destroyed," she said.

She was told by a guard that she had seen too much, and that night she and her daughter were put on the back of an open truck filled with bodies, some dead, others badly wounded from torture. Pilar thought she was going to die.

"I was there in the truck with my daughter. I had been tortured, and my daughter no longer responded. There was only one soldier who was guarding us in the back of the truck. The rest of the soldiers were in the front of the truck shouting; possibly they were drunk."

"The soldier then wanted to

Fairness and accuracy needed from both sides

Editor:

It is not often that I feel obligated to respond to any sort of journalistic criticism of the ASUI Senate. In its issue of Friday, September 13, however, I feel that the Argonaut breached the parameters of fairness in its treatment of that body. I take exception to two aspects of that day's coverage.

I believe that any reasonable journalist would agree that every incident spawns at least two separate sides. On the one side will be found a protagonist, and on the other an antagonist; or at least individuals with opposing rationales for explaining what took place.

If the purpose of the press is to inform the public about that incident, then logically all sides of the question must be examined. In order to examine the varying sides of a question, it is also logical that research must be done on all of those sides and this leads me to my first point.

In her "Opinion" editorial Carolyn Beasley charged the senate with breaking both the ASUI bylaws and the Idaho Open Meeting codes by expelling the Argonaut reporter who regularly covers ASUI Senate meetings. The opinion was captioned with some headline asking a question in the nature of "Whose own private Idaho?"

In this opinion, Beasley voices her dismay that the senate would go into executive session, and then expel the reporter. Beasley, to my knowledge, never asked a senator about the incident. If she had, perhaps she would not have so obviously perverted the facts of the issue.

In reality, the Argonaut reporter was not expelled. When the senate quite legally and most appropriately called its meeting to order and moved into executive session, the Argonaut reporter obviously became confused, and informally asked one of the senators if this was when she should leave? The senator replied, "Yeah...I guess so."

This hardly constitutes an expulsion. The reporter was obviously unsure of her standing in that situation, and even though the senator perhaps should have been more familiar with the rules, it is hardly a senator's duty to keep the press posted of its rights.

In that situation the reporter should have appealed, or inquired of the presiding officer at the meeting as to what her rights were. Had she done this, she would have most assuredly been informed that it was her privilege to stay. Find fault if you can, Ms. Beasley, but if you do, and since you did, wouldn't it have been more professional to fault both sides?

You know, it's kind of funny. The morning after the alleged expulsion, two Argonaut reporters came down to the senate offices to argue the issue. One of them informed me that it was the solemn obligation of the media to have a reporter present during executive session so that he or she could testify to any glaring miscarriages of justice on the part of the senate.

If this is indeed the case, it would seem that the Argonaut has an inherent duty to the students of the University of Idaho to ensure that its reporters are competent enough in their knowledge to fulfill this weighty obligation.

The second issue to which I take exception is the Argonaut's choice of headlines for its coverage of senate meetings. At Wednesday's session when the senate listened to the report of Argonaut Editor John Hecht, approved funding for a business trip for the entertainment chairman, discussed living group representation and carried on several other discussions of key issues, what headline covered the events? "Senate has problems."

Now that is accurate and functional headline writing. It does nothing to summarize or describe the meeting, nor does any discussion in the article support such a claim.

It is high time to shrink some heads, on both sides, and strive for fairness and accuracy in student affairs. Besides, between several ASUI departments and the ASUI Golf Course, the ASUI budget hardly is sufficient to provide for the widening of senate and Argonaut doors so that swollen-headed student servants can enter or exit their offices in their attempts to perform their duty to the students — past, present and future — of the University of Idaho.

Ideals not met by national reps

Editor:

Every fraternity has a set of Ideals.

According to the summer issue of the Lambda Chi Alpha national magazine, truth and justice are held paramount.

Former LCA national president Louis Plouro states in that issue LCA was founded "with the primary goal in mind of contributing in the highest measure possible to the pre-eminence of truth and justice and the well-being of humankind" — in a word, fairness.

Plouro went on to say that the business of a fraternity is "to nurture respect for learning and to operation without offense or injury to anyone."

These ideals were apparently forgotten last week by the national consultants of Lambda Chi Alpha. There were here to recolonize the chapter.

One of the consultants was quoted in the Argonaut (Sept. 10) as saying last year's members, who have been placed on inactive status, would be interviewed and considered in the new colony.

These consultants promised to call the old members back — and didn't. They promised to give interviews to these Idaho Lambda Chis — and didn't. In a word it's unjust.

This lack of courtesy does not reflect the fundamental principle of Lambda Chi Alpha, fairness.

Constantly we hear from the Independents that we Greeks don't care about the individual. This example supports that view and hurts the Greek system as a whole at the University of Idaho.

As a Teke, I'm proud of the fact that ten years ago when we reorganized, our national fraternity interviewed previous members individually and accepted those with strong potential.

Most people familiar with the Greek System at Idaho know that there are also some — that means at least one — darn good men in last year's LCA.

National Lambda Chi should reverse their consultants decision, restore fairness, and interview individually any past Lambda Chi who applies — or adopt a new set of principles.

Skiers can start preparing now

Editor:

With winter just around the corner, it's not too early to be thinking about what you are going to do with all of the snow the Northwest is famous for.

I am writing this letter to inform all avid skiers and people who are interested in learning how to ski there is a way to make the best of the snow. The University of Idaho now has a recognized ski club.

The fact that this is our first year as a club does not mean we are not ready for the ski season. We are affiliated with NCSA (National Collegiate Ski Association), which is sponsored by Lite Beer from Miller. We offer both competitive and recreational (cross-country and downhill) skiing.

The club will offer: Low-cost group trips to many of the area resorts; low-cost lessons for beginners; discount coupon books/ski samplers; access to discount rates on new equipment; transportation and/or lodging provided on club trips, and much more.

For more information come to the Ski Club's first meeting tonight at 9 p.m. in the Borah Theatre in the SUB. It's a great way to meet new people and ski at the lowest possible rates. Bring a friend, and we hope to see you there.

Miracle needed to survive AIDS

Editor:

If Mr. Blakely's thinking is the norm, we're in a lot of trouble. He seems to take the same apathetic attitude many people are taking towards AIDS. To date, no one has survived AIDS and unless a gigantic medical breakthrough happens (perhaps a miracle?), no one ever will.

Political interests seem to have over-riden sound medical practice in assuming a cure for AIDS will be developed before it becomes a widespread epidemic. We are fools if we don't take measures against something which could be as contagious as the common cold and more deadly than the Bubonic Plague.

Quarantine does not mean incarceration, it restricts a person to limited public exposure. Epidemic victims of the past were quarantined in their homes.

Contractors of Hepatitis B, a viral infection similar to the HTLV III virus of AIDS, are recorded and monitored by local health officials. None of the over 1.5 million people with HTLV III antibodies in their blood stream are being monitored, although the Center for Disease Control requested permission to do so.

In the fall of 1984, homosexual bath houses and adult bookstores were closed in San Francisco in an attempt to slow the spread of the disease. Public outcry forced them to be reopened after two months.

I fear that our obsession with personal liberties and the endless pursuit of happiness will deny many of us our greatest gift, life.

Jim Corbett

Promise same as barnyard waste

Editor:

"And they call it brotherhood?"

Bob London of Indianapolis, Indiana, national representative of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity was on campus to interview prospective members and recolonize the Lambda Chi chapter last week.

London was quoted as saying in the September 10 Argonaut, "Four former members have expressed interest in joining a new chapter. Their applications will be reviewed individually."

That was a promise. That was a public statement. However, this public promise wasn't kept.

None of the four, including the president, received an honest interview. Not one received an application.

London may call this brotherhood. I call it "Bullshit."

UI provides much excitement in 46-7 yawner

By Greg Kilmer
Of the Argonaut

Somebody must have told Eric Yarber, "Save it for a rainy day."

Before a rain-drenched crowd of 9,500, the Vandal wide-out grabbed 12 aerials for 221 yards and four Vandal touchdowns in leading the Vandals to an easy 46-7 victory over an overmatched but game Mankato State team.

"Last week I got kicked out early," Idaho's "Mr. Excitement" said referring to his disqualification against Oregon State. "I really wanted to get back into the flow of the game."

Get into he did as the speedster grabbed six-point from 48 yards out (the game's first), nine yards, 25 yards and 46 yards.

"It's real hard for a team to go one-on-one with our offense," Yarber said of his exploits. "Their DB was lining up real close, like four yards away from me, he should be around six yards back."

But Yarber was quick to point out that he wasn't the only Vandal to shine.

"Scotty (Linehan) did one hell of a job tonight," Yarber said of his quarterback. "He was picture perfect out there."

Not quite perfect, but real, real close.

The Vandal signal caller threw for 403 yards on hitting on 24 of 29 attempts. Along with running for one score, Linehan threw for four more and did not have an interception.

Yarber wasn't the only one giving out kind words for the Idaho QB.

"Scott played like he can play tonight, last week was unusual for him," Vandal head coach Dennis Erickson said. "He threw more accurate and he didn't try to throw into their coverage."

"They were blitzing alot," Erickson said. "Scott handled it real well, he did a great job of audibling tonight."

After the game, Linehan had praise for his entire offensive side-kicks.

"Our offense did a great job of executing tonight," Linehan

Photo Bureau/Henry Moore. said. "I can't harp enough on how they played tonight."

"Eric Yarber continues to improve," Yarber said of his favorite target for the night. "It sure was great having him back in there, he makes my job so much easier."

It wasn't only Yarber that got into the act as Linehan found nine different receivers on the night, although tight end Scott Auker had only two grabs.

"They were two-timing Scott (Auker) out there," assistant coach Pink Erickson said afterwards. "But that just left everybody else open."

"Our receivers did a real good job of reading their blitz's," Linehan said of Idaho's numerous quick slant receptions. "That's a big part of our offense."

While the offense was busy moving the ball up and down the Kibbie Dome carpet, the UI defense was doing their job in keeping the Mavericks corraled.

The Vandal defenders only gave up 208 total yards to the visitors from Minnesota. The Mavericks could only muster 116 rushing yards, mostly on QB Mike McDevitt's scrambles and 92 through the airways.

In fact, it was at the 9:36 mark of the second quarter that McDevitt scrambled free to get the Mav's their first first-down without a penalty. Mankato could only manage nine first-downs on the evening.

"I'm real pleased with the first team defense," defensive coordinator John Smith said afterwards. "Particularly because we haven't seen their type of option attack."

"We really needed to see how good we are, to see if we can play defense" Smith said of his defensive troops. "They weren't a Big Sky team but they were no slouch."

Smith also had good words for Mankato's McDevitt.

"He's slippery and a very good athlete," he said. "A main concern was containing him, to make him throw. He's more of a threat running."

Idaho must come back to earth as they prepare for their Big Sky opener against Northern Arizona next Saturday.

Mrs. SID latest winner

Seems new assistant Sports Information Director Don Tebeau has been taking his work home with him. And it's paying off as his wife Julie is this week's winner in the Tri-State/Argonaut "Pick the Winners" contest.

Tebeau correctly picked 15 of the possible 19 games including the two tie-breakers, Idaho over Mankato and Arizona over WSU. The UCLA/Tennessee game was thrown out because of ending in a tie.

Tebeau wasn't the only forecaster to only miss four, Mary L. Morris also correctly picked 15 but picked Idaho by nine whereas Tebeau picked the Vandals by 10. Idaho won by 39.

This week's winner's only misses were ISU's win over Portland State, Eastern Washington's upset of Weber State, Northwestern's rare win over Missouri and Colorado's win over the Oregon Ducks.

of forecasting, equalling his last week's effort of 12 for 19.

"What can I say, I stink," Kilmer moaned. "I like to pick a few upsets but nothing is going right. Once again, Notre Dame sticks it in my face and could you believe what BYU did to the Dogs."

Kilmer selected this week's ballgames with an emphasis on the Montana St./EWU game.

"I don't care if you're defending champs or coming off a tough loss to Portland State," Kilmer said. "You're running it up when you beat a team 86-0. I hope Eastern rubs their noses in it, for the second straight year."

"I'm not too sure about the Oregon State and Clemson games," Kilmer said. "But I've got family ties with both so what the hey."

The Argonaut urges all students, faculty and staff to try their luck. Take your entry blank to Tri-State's Sporting Good counter before noon Friday. Good luck!

Vandals suffer through rough weekend

By Chris Schulte
 Of the Argonaut

The University of Idaho Vandals women's volleyball team lost all four of it's matches this weekend in the Wyoming Invitational tournament in Laramie.

Despite a seemingly disappointing weekend, UI coach Pam Bradetich saw many bright spots for her Vandal women.

"We learned a great deal this weekend. Even though we didn't win, we played well," Bradetich said. "This team has lots of character and aren't quitters. We'll come back and be better because of this tourney."

On the opening day, the Vandals faced two Top-20 squads. They first dropped a three game contest to Wyoming, 20th ranked, by scores of 13-15, 13-15 and 10-15.

The Vandals then were faced with the challenge of playing the 5th ranked Cornhuskers from Nebraska. Despite playing a good match; they were still dropped in three straight 8-15, 6-15 and 12-15. Bradetich had praise for the eventual champions Nebraska.

"They definitely deserve their ranking," Bradetich said. "They are big and quick, a very good team."

Because of the double loss, the women played a two of three match against Montana on Saturday. In a close, hard fought match, the Grizzlies dropped the UI in consecutive games, 15-12, 15-11.

In their final outing, United State International dropped the Vandals in three straight, 15-8, 15-9 and 15-5.

The Vandals were led by Nellie Gant and Robin Jordan. "Nellie had a good weekend considering she's only practiced twice in two weeks," Bradetich said.

With the tough tourney behind them, the Vandals will travel to Brigham Young for the BYU Invite this weekend.

Ah, September

Greg Kilmer

Hell, I guess it is getting to be the middle of September. Kinda snuck up on me this year. Better check those syllabi if I have to, god forbid, study here pretty quick.

Guess I've been spending too much attention to the pigskin predictions (as woeful as they have been) to catch on but it came to me during this morning's "Quality Time."

You know the time, that morning constitutional when you grab that eye-opening cup of coffee and whatever bathroom literature that ends up on your door.

Kinda surprised me too, I've always been into the boxscores. When the Sox (the red ones) were hot a lifetime ago, it was the only thing that got me out of bed.

This year is different though, I must admit I gave up on the pale hose when Jimmy Rice and "Oil Can" squawked at each other. I don't care how much Miller he's swallowed, put that No. 8 Carl Yasztremski in your clean-up spot and I might even cheer for Washington State once, maybe!

This year has had it's highlights, 300 game winners, Pete Rose and of course the drug trials. I know they're necessary for the majors to, pardon the pun, keep their nose clean but things are getting a little carried away. Wille Mays, come on, the man's a legend and even legends have to take something for a cold.

I really don't care about Rose.

Sunshine run set

The fall semester Sunshine Saturday Morning Program offered by Intramurals and Campus Recreation kicks off Saturday, September 21 with a mix and match doubles Tennis Social. Play will begin at 9:00 a.m. and is limited to 24 players.

The entry fee of $1.50 includes a continental breakfast of granted when I'm an old fart I can tell the grand kids that I was at the Corner Club watching a little history, but the guy wears Aqua Velva. They give that stuff out at college registration.

1985 is the year I backed the birds, no McCoy not the Baltimore kind, my youngsters are up in the Great White North. Yeah, my Sunday morning prayers are a World Series with Canada's Prime Minister giving his congratulations phone call instead of Bonzo's buddie.

I must admit, I've got extra incentive this season, I chose the Blue Jays and San Diego to be in America's past-time finale with a few of my Boise cronies but how was I to know SD was going to those "Golden Arches" in the sky in mid-season.

I should have gone with that other flock of birds in the National League, those Cardinals.

I've always been into teams that tear the cover off the ball, (wasn't "The Natural" great), but those red-birds really caught my fancy. They've got more speed in that outfield than most pushers in Central Park have in a month.

With three of the four divisions involved in pennant races, the remaining 30 odd ballgames of '85 should be fun even with the Sox out of it.

With the races, the play-offs, and the series still ahead, I'm really looking forward to some real good porcelain literature to keep me happy during my "Quality Time."

Play ball.

fruit, donuts and juices. The social will conclude at 0 noon with a drawing for special prizes. For more information, call IM/CR at 885-6381.

Future Sunshine Saturday Morning events include a 4-person volleyball social Saturday, November 2 and an indoor 16" softball tournament on Saturday, November 9 and 16.

Men, women finish 1, 2 in X-country meet

By Chris Schulte
Of the Argonaut

Led by stellar performances of Tom Bohannon and James Tennant, the University of Idaho men's cross country team opened it's 1985 season in impressive fashion with a victory in the first annual Palouse Invitational.

Bohannon and Tennant finished 1,2 over the four mile course to lead the Vandals to the surprise win over visiting Washington State, Spokane Community College and North Idaho. Final scores were Idaho 29, WSU 33, SCC 96 and NIC 97.

Rounding out the top-five for the Vandals were Tony Theriault 8, Robin Mein 10 and Chris Schulte 11.

The Vandal's women were not quite as fortunate as they finished second behind WSU. Top UI finishers were Sherrie Crang and Cathy Wall at 3 and 4. Others were Janet Beaudry and Jackie Mount in 7 and 8.

Head coach Scott Lorek was very pleased with the team's performances. "We ran very well. Everyone had good races, especially James and Kathy," Lorek said. "The few who did have sub-par performances are the type who I know will be fine. It gives us a good idea of what everyone needs and where they are."

The teams will travel to Walla Walla this weekend for the Whitman Invitational.

Ruggers split weekend

By Tom Liberman
Of the Argonaut

This weekend the University of Idaho rugby club had its first match in Spokane after only one week of practice.

The team began practice only last Tuesday as they headed into their first match of the season against a perennial Northwestern powerhouse, Puget Sound.

While the match may have been a good learning experience for some of the new ruggers it was not a confidence booster as the Idaho club was trounced 22-0.

Forward Steve Hagen said that the major problems were new players who were not familiar with the intricacies of the game.

Although he also said that his own play was not up to the standard that he expects.

He said that the bigger, more experienced Puget Sound club used their experience to great advantage in scoring four tries against the UI.

A try consists of putting the ball on the ground over your opponents goal line and is rewarded by four points.

The second game of the afternoon went well for the UI as they defeated a good Tacoma team by a score of 17-4.

The Idaho ruggers played much better and by controlling most of the rucks managed to control the ball for most of the match.

A ruck occurs when a player is tackled and has to put the ball on the ground. Then the two teams form a group to try to gain control of the ball.

By controlling the ball most of the game the UI had many more scoring opportunities.

The first Idaho score occurred when Rich Moore made a break up field and passed the ball to Mark Pynne who took the ball for the rest of the way.

Idaho's second scoring play came when the backline got the ball out quickly to Moore who flipped a pass out to Deeder Peterson. Buddy Levy added the conversion for the UI.

The final scoring play for the UI ruggers occurred when Erol Kochman dished the ball out to Hagen who took it in for the score.

Campus lights to brighten dark walkways

By Bryan Clark
Of the Argonaut

Lighting the UI to make a safer nighttime campus will take 10 years and cost approximately $1 million, according to Nels Reese, an architect for the Physical Plant office.

"So far the first three years of the University's ten year lighting plan have gone fine; we've been very successful in completing our goals," said Reese.

"The University of Idaho's lighting plan came about in 1982 in response to the concerns of UI students and faculty over three basic issues, and these issues became our guidelines in developing the system that is now being installed," Reese said.

According to Reese, the most important guideline is a safer nighttime campus. "We wanted to fill in some of those dark holes around the school. Especially since, during the winters around here, night can fall pretty early," Reese said.

The second guideline was developing a lighting system that was energy efficient. "The new lights we are installing now use one-third to one-quarter of the electricity of the old lights," according to Reese.

Third, Reese said the Physical Plant needed a more organized lighting plan, with only a few standardized light fixtures and bulb types rather than the many different kinds now in service around campus. "Although, as an architect, I like to see diversity in building design, it is just too difficult for us to keep so many different lights in stock," he added.

The main reason the UI chose a long range program for lighting the campus was cost. At a price tag of about $1 million, Reese said, "The Physical Plant doesn't get that kind of money so we staggered it out over a 10 year period at around $100,000 a year, which has worked well for us."

The main thrust of the plan currently is the lighting of the Administration Building lawn. "Work has already been done to get electrical lines in and prepare the area for installation. The lights themselves should be in in a couple of weeks," Reese said. He added that the lights should be in operation by mid October. "Just in time for the end of daylight-savings time and longer nights."

Reese stressed that, "The lighting of the Ad lawn was a priority project for us because it is a high traffic area, especially at night with students going to the library by that route."

Reese also noted he was pleased with the way the new lights on both the Ad lawn and the new Life Sciences Building are "in step with the architectural feel of the UI's historical core."

Projects already completed in the plan include the exterior lighting on the Kibbie Dome, various parking lots around campus and major student traffic areas such as from Wallace Complex to the Kibbie Dome and along Idaho Street.

EVENTS

Food Fair lacks preparation, enthusiasm

By Michael Haberman
Of the Argonaut

Despite the inspired sounds and dance of Gwinyal-Sukutai, this year's International Food Fair in downtown Moscow was a bit disappointing.

Whether it was the competition from the Latah County Fair, the sometimes threatening weather or the lack of promotion I'm not sure, but there were a lot fewer booths and people in the street than in years past.

By the time the marimbas and drums of Gwinyal-Sukutai provided a real highlight late in the afternoon many people had already left. Those that remained crowded around the stage, leaving the craft and food booths down Main St. deserted.

The marimba band didn't disappoint many of those who waited to hear them. There were a lot of confused smiles at first, but enthusiasm grew for the three adults and four children beating their marimbas and drums. The melody was hard to follow at times, but the rhythm was great.

Feet were tapping and heads bobbing in time, but one of the band members had to run into the audience to coax reluctant volunteers up on the stage to dance. Those who heeded the call seemed to loosen up and have a good time.

But aside from some good music, which also included the Old-Time Fiddlers, Robinson Lake Revival and Mary Hartman, there really wasn't all that much.

And in addition to the relatively slim pickings as far as food and crafts went were some examples of shoddy planning and poor organization.

No chairs were set up near the music stage. People interested enough in the music to stop and listen were forced to sit on the pavement. The performances were never on schedule, and one act was notified that there was no time left for them. That's no way to treat talented performers donating their time and ability.

The booths that did participate seemed too spread out. Maybe things would have been more comfortable if everyone had been closer together.

One can only hope that the Moscow Downtown Association will do a better job next year, and keep this event thriving.

A taste of the orient comes to main street Moscow and University of Idaho students. The Palouse Asian American Association display was one among those at this year's International Food Fair which was held last Saturday.

IMAGE OF WOMEN",
with Media Analyst Dr. Jean Kilbourne.

"Jean Kilbourne's excellent slide presentation demonstrates that what is done to women in the imagery of advertising is a kind of violence; the female self is not simply objectified but literally disintegrates into a collection of disparate and relentlessly judged components."

Russell funny, celebration is success

By Nella Letizia
Of the Argonaut

KUID-TV's 20-year birthday celebration on Saturday night was a smashing success, thanks to the non-stop humor of Mark Russell, political satirist.

No prominent figure was left out of Russell's repertory of satirical jabs and punches during his performance live via closed circuit TV at the Galena Room in the SUB.

Russell first focused his barbs on Idaho politicians. He said give him a state that has such politicians as Frank Church, Steve Symms, and George Hansen and he'd give you a state with a severe identity crisis.

Russell poked fun at Sen. Symms, who was seated in the front row, and the wine made by his business. He said upon drinking Symms' wine he "started thinking these terrible things about Bishop Tutu." He said after taking another sip he wanted the Panama Canal back and then wanted to invade Nicaragua.

About himself, Russell said he enjoyed what he was doing. "I am a political satirist; I enjoy the work," he said. "The politicians provide 98 percent of the jokes and I just finish the work."

Russell then moved on to national prominent figures. He sang a ditty about Vice President George Bush and his brief designation as acting President during Reagan's recent surgery, referring to him as "7-hour George there in the Guinness Book."

Russell said Pat Buchanan, Reagan's new director of communication, was tough.

"He speaks to groups like the friendly Sons of the Spanish Inquisition," he said.

Russell said Washington D.C. is a bottomless mother lode for jokes.

"It's the only place in the world where you can go five miles in any direction without leaving the scene of the crime," he said.

Russell offered an easy solution for solving the U.S. trillion-dollar national debt. "If you have a deficit, you declare it unconstitutional and it's gone," he said.

Russell referred to middle-agers, including himself, as "tired blood." "We believe that macho was an unknown Marx brother," he said, adding they also believe that Fleetwood Mac was a car dealer.

Russell said Actress Pia Zadora was doing the Diary of Anne Frank in Palm Springs, and was so bad that in the last act, that when the German soldiers break in, the audience yelled 'She's in the attic!'

Russell didn't exclude his family from his barbs. He said his daughter majored in "not sure" during college. His son, a freshman in college, "changed majors three times since I've been standing here," he said.

And his 16-year-old son, who just received a driver's license, was the reason "why I've gone back to church," he said.

Russell ended the performance with advice to kids whose parents don't understand the music today. "To their generation, Madonna is a religious statue and Prince," he stopped, breaking down with laughter. "Prince is something that chases cars and has to be paper trained," he said.

After the performance, Peter Haggart, a professor in the School of Communications at the University of Idaho and KUID's first program director, said KUID was started in September 1965 by five or six original members.

They were: Gordon Law, station manager; Peter Haggart, program director; Bill Byrd, production director; Cec Bonduant, chief engineer; Roy O'Brady and Walt Johnson, engineers.

KUID, along with KAIID in Boise and KISU in Pocatello, form the Idaho Educational Public Broadcast System. The expense of bringing Russell live was shared by all three stations, said Cathy Rouyer, program director for KUID.

smoke, and he lit a match, but the wind blew out this match. And so at this moment, I don't know how it happened but I asked God for help. And that was how I was able to push the soldier, and the three of us, my daughter, the soldier and I, fell to the street. And this is how I escaped," said Martinez.

All three had been knocked unconscious from the fall out of the moving vehicle, but Pilar and her daughter woke up first. They escaped into the countryside, where they were sheltered by villagers. After Martinez had recovered from her wounds, she left Mila with villagers and began her trip to the United States.

It was long and trying, and it took three attempts before Martinez made it across the border.

"The road from El Salvador to here is very difficult. Many people have died on this road, and if we take the risk to go along that road it is simply because we want to save our own lives," said Martinez.

Martinez said the people in the U.S. have treated her well, but the government has not. In a crackdown on the sanctuary movement 16 workers and 65 refugees were arrested on January 14 of this year. Pilar was one of them.

"They came to our apartment. We were not treated very well. In our apartment they looked for weapons. And my children all began to cry because they thought we would have the same experience we had in El Salvador," she said.

She said she was not allowed to talk to a lawyer, but was released from prison the same day. She has been subpoenaed to appear in court to testify against sanctuary workers on October 15.

Sanctuary members hope to convince the government to provide extended voluntary departure to refugees from El Salvador and Guatemala. This status would allow them to stay until conditions are safe in their own countries. They also call for the ending of U.S. military aid, the beginning of land reforms and the restoration of the judiciary in El Salvador.

Hiebert-Crape said the University Baptist Church in Seattle has been broken into, and files and letters dealing with sanctuary were gone through. Everything else was left alone, he said. He suspects some members of the movement are actually working for the government.

Until her case is decided, Pilar Martinez will stay with her friends at the University Baptist Church. Applying for asylum in Canada is an option she is considering. Deportation is not.

"If we return to El Salvador they will kill us," she said. Photographers shot pictures only from her back, and Hiebert-Crape said her name is a pseudonym, assumed to protect her children and mother still living in El Salvador.

"As a mother I have defended my children," said Martinez. She appealed to mothers in the U.S. to join her in working to end the horror and torture in the lives of the children of El Salvador.
