

RAs drink too much

By Laurel Darrow
Of the Argonaut

Six resident advisers could have been arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol Tuesday, but since they were only driving a set of chairs, they were let off with a warning.

After drinking three bottles of wine, eleven Rainier "pounders" and 24 shots of vodka, the RAs filed into the Morin Room in Wallace Complex for an alcohol awareness program. As other RAs watched, Gerry Rasch, community relations officer for the Moscow Police Department, gave the six "drunk drivers" sobriety tests. He said the purpose of such programs is to make people more aware that they should not drink and drive, and that it doesn't take much alcohol to be considered legally intoxicated.

The first two drivers were Licia Duren of Houston Hall and Terese Felzien of French Hall, fourth floor.

Laughing loudly they took their places in the car, two chairs at the front of the room. Rasch "pulled them over" and approached the car. He said the first thing an officer would notice is the odor of alcohol.

"It seems to me that you have been drinking a bit," he said to Felzien, who was in the driver's seat. The women giggled.

ASUI Senate gets "something done"

Hall prez's talk to ASUI

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

About nine UI hall presidents including the RHA (Resident Hall Association) President, attended an informal question and answer period with the ASUI president, vice president and senators Tuesday night.

The meeting was called by the ASUI to "let the senate know if the students are getting what they are paying for," according to Vice President Mike Trail. "Hopefully you can relay some of this to your living groups," he said at the meeting.

Tutoring, the ASUI deficit, entertainment offered on the UI campus, were just a few of the topics discussed.

Some hall presidents said they like the ASUI Tutoring Services and would like to see more funding go toward the program.

Trail said, "The problem with the Tutoring Service is not that we don't have enough money, it's that we don't have enough tutors."

President Freund asked if they'd rather see every student receive one free hour of tutoring per week, where after every hour tutored would cost money or that every student must pay a certain percentage of the tutor's salary.

Several responded they would like to see the ASUI give as much free tutoring as possible and liked the idea of one free hour of tutoring per week and be charged for every additional hour.

Senator Kelli Kast said policies will be set for the ASUI Tutoring Services but suggested different halls develop a group tutoring program.

None of the hall presidents and vice presidents said they were familiar with Palouse Performances or the Miller Rock Series, offered by ASUI Entertainment.

Trail asked if students were getting the entertainment they wanted on the UI campus. Little response was given. "The criticism we're getting right now is there's too many oboes and orchestras," said Trail.

Freund said the Senate is thinking about putting out a marketing survey to see what entertainment the students want.

One hall president suggested the senate could see which events are more popular by attendance records.

Some senators said they receive housing complaints from hall members when they visit their living groups and asked what channels to go through to get a housing problem fixed.

Senator Cherri Sabala said a hall member with such a complaint should go to the hall president. The hall president then goes to the RA Coordinator and the complaint is finally forwarded to Jim Bauer, coordinator of the resident hall program.

Trail mentioned an idea of turning the ASUI Golf Course into an ice skating rink during the winter to help make money and relieve the deficit.

A few said the senate should pursue the idea and suggested skating lessons be offered for a price.

Senate makes headway on money woes

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

The ASUI Entertainment Department's deficit was eliminated and $10,000 was given to ASUI Tutoring Services by the Senate at Wednesday's meeting.

Barry Bonifas, entertainment programs coordinator, who spoke at the meeting, requested that the senate "do something" about the $37,000 entertainment deficit. "We've been talking about this thing for a year and everybody has been ignoring it." He added, "Our goal is to provide adequate long range funding for entertainment on this campus. The second part of that is getting rid of the deficit."

He said the entertainment proposal, which consists of about a $2.40 increased student fee (or dedicated fee) to cover the entertainment deficit, is only asking for the amount of money "it takes to retire the deficit".

The senate did something about the deficit. It passed a bill transferring $18,767 from the General Reserve to the Entertainment Administration. The left-over $19,000 will be transferred from the General Reserve to Entertainment next semester. It also amended the bill creating a separate account for the FY 1985 deficit to be put in.

Many senators said students' input on what kind of entertainment they want is needed. They said few students know or care about Palouse Performances. Bonifas responded, "The university is a learning process. We don't just bring in MTV and David Letterman as a lecturer."

Bonifas said he was disappointed the ASUI Senate missed the deadline to contribute money to put together a survey asking students what kind of entertainment they would like to see.

"Before we start talking about getting more student input, I would like to see more serious consideration taken by this group about such matters like surveying," said Bonifas.

The 3-hour meeting concluded with some strong remarks between Bonifas and Senator Elliot Skolnick. Skolnick said, "I realize you're frustrated about the deficit but I didn't come to this meeting to be talked down to." Bonifas said, "With all the backbiting, gossiping and innuendos being done by the senate against Productions, I don't think I need to respond to that."

Judy Wallins, UI Tutoring Services Director, and Jeff Schaller, Clerical Specialist for the Tutoring Service, also spoke to the senate requesting $10,000 from the ASUI. "You really are far and away our largest funding source we have," said Schaller.

Wallins said Tutoring received $8,500 from the administration last year but did not approach them for money this year. "You still have to look at long-term budgeting and we do think it's time for clarification of guidelines," she said.

The reason Tutoring is asking for the money, according to Wallins and Schaller, is there are not enough funds to hire new tutors. Tutoring has been stopped in many subjects because there are not enough tutors and too many tutorees.

Wallins said about 20 percent of the tutorees are receiving multiple tutors right now.

Schaller said, "Better than three-quarters of the people who come through our doors are after math tutors. Even with the $10,000 you're still going to see math crunches."

Wallins said the high demand for math tutoring is because "students are not happy with the math lab."

She echoed Schaller's sentiments that some people wanting tutoring in math may have to be turned away, saying, "Even with the additional money we'll need to put a ceiling on math tutoring."

Senator David Dose worked with Wallins on policies for Tutoring. He asked Wallins, "If we put these policies into play by January, would the $10,000 carry you through the semester?" Wallins said it would.

But the senate passed a bill giving Tutoring the requested money with an intent clause those policies go into effect immediately. They are:

- All students will be entitled to one hour a week of free tutoring as funding permits. The Director will have the option to grant additional tutoring time to any student.

- Students will be assigned to small group sessions whenever possible, and such services will not be included in the one hour per week of free tutoring.

- The Director shall have the option to place any limits deemed necessary on tutoring services offered in Math, Economics, or Accounting.

- All students will have the option to purchase additional tutoring time at the rate of $4 to $5 per hour.

The senate will come out with a bill next week allowing the students who are now receiving more than one hour of tutoring to continue with the additional hours. Starting in January, the Director will have the option to grant additional tutoring time.

Vampires and Werewolves: a matter of chemistry?

By Michael Haberman
Of the Argonaut

Vampires and werewolves may not have been creatures of fiction but victims of a rare genetic disease, a Canadian chemist said Wednesday night.

David H. Dolphin, chemistry professor and associate dean of science at the University of British Columbia, said the disease porphyria may be the fact behind the werewolf and vampire legends. Dolphin's lecture at the UI was part of the Renfrew Oktoberfest honoring retired UI chemistry professor Malcolm Renfrew.

Porphyria is a family of diseases that counts extreme sensitivity to light, increased growth of hair and teeth and terrible sores among its symptoms. It is caused by reduced amounts of certain enzymes necessary to produce the heme molecule, a component of blood, Dolphin said.

The body process manufacturing heme involves several steps, and lacking enough enzyme for one or more of the steps can cause a variety of the disease, Dolphin said.

The lack of an enzyme partially blocks the heme-building process, causing byproducts to accumulate. These byproducts are porphyrins, and can cause symptoms that once led people to label victims werewolves or vampires, Dolphin said.

Porphyrins are light-sensitive compounds that concentrate themselves on the skeleton and in the skin, Dolphin said. In the sun they have the ability to make oxygen highly toxic.

Dolphin said the toxic oxygen could immediately have terrible effects, in some cases causing fingers or even a nose to fall off.

This disfigurement, along with the tendency of victims to avoid light, paints an interesting picture.

"What would you think in the Middle Ages if your neighbor only came out at night, disfigured and hunched over because of pain," Dolphin said. He speculated further.

"There is a possibility that if you drank enough blood enough heme would get into your system to alleviate some symptoms," he said. Heme injections are used to treat symptoms of the disease today, Dolphin said.

Sign-up slated

The Career Planning and Placement Center has released its list of November placement interviews.

Sign up numbers will be drawn by lottery starting at 8 a.m. Oct. 14.

The numbers reserve 30-minute periods between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Oct. 15 and Oct. 16. During the periods, 13 students can sign up for interviews by presenting their numbers.

On Oct. 15-16, each student can sign up for only four interviews. Starting at 8 a.m. Oct 17, students can sign up for additional interviews on a first-come, first-served basis.

In addition, people wishing to sign up must have active placement files and they must meet the requirements specified by the employers.

A list of November placement interviews is available at the Placement Center.

Spouses workshop

To help students and their spouses cope with the pressures of higher education, the UI is offering a free workshop Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Gold Room. No registration is necessary.

"Many times couples are concerned about things like lack of time together because the student has to spend so much of it studying. Or perhaps one of them is substantially underemployed while the other is attending school," said James Morris, counseling psychologist at the UI Student Counseling Center.

The workshop is sponsored by the graduate school. All students, graduate or undergraduate, and their spouses are welcome. Morris said both the student and the spouse should attend.

Felzien stepped out of the car to take the sobriety tests: a balance test in which the driver stands with one leg raised in front of him and counts from 1,001 to 1,030; a recitation of the alphabet; and a heel-to-toe walk in which the driver takes nine steps, pivots and then takes another nine steps back to the starting point.

The exercises test the driver's motor coordination, reactions and ability to follow instructions.

On the first test, Felzien slurred over 1,013 when counting from 1,001 to 1,030. She lost her balance when pivoting on the heel-to-toe test. An additional test convinced Rasch she had been drinking: he held a piece of chalk and told her to follow it with her eyes as he moved it slowly in an arc to either side of her head. The officer can estimate the driver's blood alcohol level by noting when the eyes start twitching.

With Duren, Rasch suspected she had been drinking even before she took the tests. When he approached the car and asked her for her license and registration, she pantomimed as if reaching up into a pocket on the sun visor, and said: "It's in my rear-view mirror."

Lights to go out

For four hours Sunday morning, most of Moscow and the Greek community will experience a power outage.

Washington Water Power Company will be shutting off electric service from 3 a.m. to 7 a.m. in order to install new safety equipment on a sub-station south of town.

The area affected will be most of Moscow with the exceptions of all buildings powered by the UI Physical Plant (including the Wallace Complex, Theophilus Tower, Gault-Upham, McConnell, Shoup, Steel House, Targhee, and the Alumni Resident Center), the Palouse Empire Mall-University Inn area, and areas north of D street.

Renfrew: More to the man than Teflon

By Michael Haberman
Of the Argonaut

It was the morning of the final exam in a freshman chemistry class in the mid 1960s. The professor was concerned. One of his more than 100 students was absent, a student he couldn't believe would willingly miss the test.

He called in an assistant professor to administer the exam, and went in search of the errant student. He knew where the student lived, having talked with him when he seemed to be having a difficult time of it in class.

The professor was able to get through to the Campus Club, a housing cooperative where the student lived. The student's housemates found him collapsed at a desk with his chemistry books, having fallen asleep in the wee hours studying. They woke him, and he made it to the exam only a few minutes late.

The student is now principal of a high school in Nez Perce, Idaho, and the assistant professor who moderated the exam is now the head of the chemistry department at the University of Idaho. The professor who acted as a late alarm clock is Malcolm Renfrew, a member of the team that developed Teflon and a teacher here for 17 years.

Renfrew is also a painter of watercolors and an amateur trombone player, and a person who is not completely comfortable with having a building named after him. The UI Physical Sciences Building will be renamed Renfrew Hall in ceremonies at 2 p.m. today.

"There are so many people on campus who are deserving of having buildings named after them," said Renfrew. "I'm embarrassed when I meet some of my colleagues."

Renfrew and the UI go way back. He was an undergraduate here when the depression broke out, and a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He went on to earn graduate degrees in chemistry and have a very successful career in industry.

Renfrew, who said he was a "backward-shrinking violet type" of person back in his student days, said his fraternity brothers helped his social life. They also gave him the nickname of "Fred Forehead."

"There was this fellow whose name was Birdface Babcock and whenever we'd sit down at the dining table he'd shield his eyes because he claimed the reflection from my forehead was blinding him," said Renfrew.

"I had a high forehead even as an undergraduate, but it became higher with the years," he said.

The years have continued to steal Renfrew's hair, leaving only a white fringe around the edges of his head to complement his white eyebrows. He wears hearing aids in both ears, and his dark-rimmed glasses rest on a large, protruding nose.

His bottom teeth are crooked, and his voice sounds quietly hoarse, as if a small amount of soft gravel were in his throat. His laughs are deep and resonant, the kind that originate deep in the gut, not up in the throat.

Renfrew is a brisk walker, and a person who, according to colleagues, just gets more done than most people.

"I'd always been keen on teaching," he said, explaining why he left an industrial career that included important contributions in the development of underwater coatings in addition to his role in the development of Teflon.

"I'd always thought that teaching chemistry at the University of Idaho would be an ideal job, I really did," Renfrew said. "It just seemed impossible that it ever would happen, and it took an odd set of circumstances to permit it to come to pass," he said.

Renfrew and his wife Carol, another UI graduate, were living in Buffalo, N.Y. in 1959. He had taken a job with the Spencer Kellogg company, a career move he now describes as a "bum choice." He and his wife were both eager for change.

North Dakota State University offered Renfrew a teaching position, and it was while in Fargo discussing the job that Renfrew received a call from his alma mater. He was offered a job.

"It was almost embarrassing how quickly I gave up the Fargo post," said Renfrew with a laugh.

The department he came back to head was not in good shape. There was little research in chemistry and none in physics at the UI. It was the post-Sputnik era, and Renfrew said graduate students in physics were in such demand that few would even consider a low-paying university position.

"I was a half-time teacher and a half-time administrator, but I never had time to do right by the teaching. I always felt the administrative parts were most important to the future," said Renfrew.

"I learned the names of the children of most of the eligible young graduate students in the country in physics, and I chased around trying to get physicists," said Renfrew.

His efforts paid off. He was able to attract talented and dedicated faculty, and with a speech to the Idaho legislature on the need for a new physical sciences building he helped create the facility that now will bear his name.

In 1970 he retired from administrative duties to concentrate full-time on teaching.

"I worked hard at it," he said of his teaching, but said the results were mixed.

"My ratings as a teacher kept going up," Renfrew said. "I don't know whether this was because I was improving my teaching skills or simply that students were sympathetic to a fellow they had to help up the stairs." His eyes were twinkling, and he couldn't hold back a smile.

Harry Fargo, the high school principal Renfrew woke for the final exam 20 years ago, talked about his old mentor. "I was no great shakes as a student, but he knew me," Fargo said.

"Everybody has what, maybe 100 teachers by the time they get through school. There are three, four or five who stand out as the real teachers of your life. He was one of those teachers for me," Fargo said.

Fargo said Renfrew cared not only about the "A" students, but those like himself who had more difficulty. "To identify with that person, to make him Energy production is in an era of dynamic change. New technologies are under constant examination, and SRP is at the forefront. Serving the power/water needs of our dynamic, expanding Phoenix area, our achievements and progressive forward-thinking have made us a leader in electric generation and water storage/distribution.

We are interested in talking with ENGINEERING GRADUATES about our potential career opportunities. We've developed a two-year Rotational Orientation Program available to recent engineering college graduates. Entry level engineers work in six-month rotational assignments in four different operational areas. You'll experience hands-on training in conjunction with classroom briefings. Rotating engineers gain valuable knowledge and practical experience, providing an overview of the utility industry and our organization.

At SRP, we offer excellent compensation, an extensive program of company paid benefits, and the unlimited recreational potential of our state year 'round. Little wonder that many employees begin their career right here. Shine with SRP!

Thanks for a special homecoming Money still needed for all sports

It is the students on our campus who always make homecoming a success for themselves, for the university, and the former students who return to Idaho; and 55,000 alumni say thank you for a truly successful homecoming week. We thank the Vandal football team and Dennis Erickson and his staff for winning the game as the crown jewel for homecoming. For the beautiful weather we need to thank a higher source.

Some students deserve a very special recognition for their own and their committee efforts and in making the special events of homecoming so successful. We take this opportunity through you and the Argonaut to thank them especially: Mitch Sonnen, homecoming chairman; Tom Bonasera, parade chairman; Keith Nyberg, bonfire; Karyl Lolley, royalty; Steve Hatten, living group competition; and Cindy Crow, graphics department. They represent several hundred students who made an all out personal effort to see that the programs during this week were successful.

We would also like to thank you and the Argonaut staff for an outstanding homecoming issue of the Argonaut. The students were able to learn about some of our past traditions, and the returning alums were able to learn about the current student body and their involvement with their university. It was a quality issue.

My thanks also goes to the individual students who did the unrecognized things to make each bit of homecoming week a great experience for everyone.

Flip Kleffner,
Director of Alumni Relations

I want to acknowledge the coverage afforded the Lady Vandals Stride for Gold 1985 in the Argonaut.

I hope you can assist me in thanking our 94 Vandal Striders and their hundreds of sponsors who helped make this first annual women's athletic fundraiser such a success.

I would like to clear up any confusion surrounding this event. The Vandal Boosters work very hard to raise scholarship monies for all Vandal student-athletes. The Stride for Gold was initiated to ease the impact of recent budget cuts in the areas of travel, recruiting, equipment and NCAA playoff expenses. The Stride for Gold should not be viewed as competing with Vandal Boosters, but as an additional avenue to raise funds and generate additional support for the further development of the UI women's program. The Vandal Booster scholarship dollars are needed more than ever before, and their support is very much appreciated as well.

Good to see samaritans in Moscow

On Oct. 8, I was walking down Sixth Street and as I was passing Gault Hall, a young man wrecked on his bicycle. Four people stopped to help him.

I would personally like to thank those people for stopping.

They made my day. When we hear so much about hostage crises here and bombings there it was beautiful to see a little bit of caring in the world.

I hope that the young man is all right. When they put him in a car to take him to the doctor he was afraid that he had broken his collar bone. You can contact me through the Argonaut-please let me know if you are okay.

The Idaho Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They should be limited to one page in length, typed, and double-spaced. For subjects requiring greater exposition, arrangements may be made with the editor. Letters must be signed in ink, and include the name, address, and phone number of the writer. Proof of identity will be needed at time of submission. Letters received by mail will not be run unless confirmation of authorship is made. Names of writers will not be withheld. Letters may be edited for mechanical and spelling errors. The Idaho Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to publish any letter.

Get rich quick schemes — aren't

I would like to warn students and their spouses about advertisements offering payment for mailing circulars or stuffing envelopes. The Moscow Postmaster has told me that such schemes are usually "too good to be true" and not to send money to receive information. Any company that asks a fee for "Association rights and Free Beginner's Package" or something similar, should be investigated. One can do this by calling the Better Business Bureau located in the closest town to where the company is operating. For example, one of the companies currently advertising in the Argonaut is being investigated by the U.S. Post Office for mail fraud, according to the BBB of Rickford, Illinois. A dollar or so for a phone call could save you from being ripped off.

Memorial to be in ballroom

Through the efforts of many, many local people, a very special event will occur this Thursday through Saturday in the UI SUB Ballroom. From Oct. 10-13, a replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington D.C. will be on display daily from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. No admission will be charged.

Many Vietnam Veterans living in this region, and their friends and families, will probably never have the opportunity to visit the memorial in Washington, but this 250-foot-long model is the next best thing. For those who were too young to remember what the Vietnam War was all about this model should help them to realize the extent of the war's impact. An opportunity like this may never be repeated, everyone is encouraged to attend.

Corporate tyranny raids newspapers

David Blakely

Well, "Super Saturday" has come and gone without my receiving the new, much heralded, combined version of "The Spokesman Review" and "Spokane Chronicle." I mention this because at the start of the semester I paid for a six day a week subscription for the duration of the term. Perhaps some of you did also. Now we've learned that in order to give us better coverage the Spokane papers are stopping our Saturday delivery.

Listen to the words of the publisher William H. Cowles III: "The Saturday configuration represents a significant change in our publishing cycle." That, friends, is bureaucratese for: "Sorry pal, we just nixed your Saturday delivery."

Mr. Cowles further says, "But it is a change our readers have told us through market research will be welcomed." Welcome change — who is kidding who? The bottom line here is profit. How many people who are losing their Saturday paper do you think were "researched?"

Carrying this sort of corporate behavior one step further you can expect one day to receive the following computerized notice from your insurance company: "Deep regrets on your house burning down over the weekend. Please be informed that as of last week we are limiting your coverage to weekdays only. Have a nice day."

The point here is not the loss of the Saturday newspaper, which the company has generously offered to rectify by continuing my five day delivery while I'm away on Christmas vacation. The real issue here is corporate arrogance. The newspaper and I in effect signed a contract. For a specified fee they were supposed to supply me with a specified service. I paid and now they've reneged.

What's a poor schmuck like me supposed to do in this case? Hire a lawyer? I can't even afford the $20 fee just to make an appointment. Even if I could their lawyers would probably stretch the litigation into the next century. The sad fact is that there really isn't a lot that the little guy/gal can do except sit back and take his or her lumps.

There is an old saying that "a deal is a deal." It's a simple ethic; perhaps too much so in this complex world of endless extenuating circumstances. Obviously the Spokesman/Chronicle has decided that fulfilling its obligations is of secondary importance to making a greater profit. Those of us who have been cheated are, in today's jargon, "statistically insignificant."

When the people who run today's businesses become more concerned with profit margins than responsibilities we are in deep trouble. Capitalism's moral force rests in the concept of "mutually beneficial exchange." When a company such as the Spokesman/Chronicle acts solely in its own interest it not only violates that principle but damages the credibility of the entire system as well. Capitalism then becomes corporate tyranny.

I would like to believe that the Spokesman/Chronicle's behavior is rare among American corporations. Unfortunately, my experience tells me otherwise.

Something Different

Members of the Palouse received an early taste of the new Prichard Gallery at Fifth and Main last night, with this display of watercolors by Malcom M. Renfrew. Renfrew was honored this week by the renaming of the old Physical Science building, which UI students will now call Renfrew hall. The official opening of the gallery in its new location will be tonight at 9 p.m. with a display by Seattle artist Ann Gardner. Photo Bureau/Randy Hayes

Pajama workers threaten to strike in play

By Laurel Darrow
Of the Argonaut

Playing the "Pajama Game" is time-consuming but fun, according to some of the cast members of the Moscow Community Theater's fall production.

The musical comedy is set in a pajama factory, where workers are preparing to go on strike if they don't get a seven-and-a-half cent raise.

UI music major Dale Maxwell is a factory worker. He said he's had trouble keeping up with his studies while he's been rehearsing, but he is having a good time. And, most important to him, he is getting experience on the stage. Maxwell said he would like a career in theater.

Hugh O'Hagan, a UI political science major, plays "Prez," the woman-chasing union president. He said he's keeping up on his studies by budgeting his time. "It's tight, it's not easy, but it's worth it," he said.

For Lyrisa Messerly, a UI music major, the difficulty is being "up" every night. No matter what kind of day she has had, in the "Pajama Game" she has to be an easy-going factory girl named Popsie. "I'm the dumb blonde. I'm kind of the comic relief," Messerly said. "You can't let her down at all."

Roger Wallins, associate dean of the UI graduate school, plays a singing, dancing efficiency expert named Hines. He joked that the reason the cast does the play is so they can have a big cast party afterward.

Another UI music major, Lisa Willson, is the leading lady, Babe Williams. "I'm the grievance committee," she explained.

Willson has sung with the UI jazz band and with Jazzmania, a combo that performs frequently at the Hotel Moscow. This is the first play she's been in, and she is enjoying it. "I think the cast is really supportive and it's fun. It's not real pressurized. The people are really easy to get along with."

In the "Pajama Game," Babe falls in love with the new factory supervisor Sid Sorokin, played by Robert Newman, a Rupert businessman. Newman is a UI graduate and an opera singer. He studied under UI music Professor Dorothy Barnes, and he was a district winner in the 1984 Metropolitan Opera Competition.

Performing with a community theater group is "a fresh change," he said. "It's really a breath of fresh air." He also praised the cast members: "See P. 1, page 7"

Evans honors Ballet with special month

By Nella Letizia
Of the Argonaut
October is not only the month for pumpkins, witches and Halloween, but also for ballet slippers, spotlights, and American Festival Ballet dancers.

October 1985 is American Festival Ballet month in Idaho. Governor John Evans signed a proclamation making AFB month effective during a special ceremony in his office on September 27.

The governor's proclamation was made in recognition of the service provided by Idaho's professional ballet company as a valuable cultural and educational resource for our state and region.

The proclamation also recognized AFB's 13 years of cultural and educational services to Idaho and AFB's representation of the state on a national basis during its tours to 32 states and Canada.

"I am very pleased and proud of this honor," Marius Zirra, artistic director of AFB, said. "It confirms my intention of making the American Festival Ballet one of the best and most original ballet companies in the country and offering dance to every part of the state and region."

The ceremony at the governor's office was attended by Zirra, General Manager Jack Alotto, Moscow/Pullman Manager Joann Muneta, and eight representatives of AFB's regional board of directors.

The eight representatives are: Dennis Shaver, Paul Rchetto, Lois Smyth, Steven Crook, Esther Simplot, Joanna Wiscombe, Marilyn Ross, and Mack Redford.

Linda Swarouth, a Boise representative of the AFB's board of directors, said Alotto had contacted the governor's office to get AFB month established.

AFB plans several activities for October. A new program called "The Magic of Dance" will be performed in schools, community groups and rural communities.

The program will be presented free for underprivileged children and groups like the Arthritis Foundation, Big Brothers, Big Sisters, and United Cerebral Palsy Foundation. The program is sponsored by Idaho Power and The Whittemberger Foundation.

In addition, a state-wide fundraising campaign will also be conducted, according to Alotto. Activities include a Champagne Benefit in Moscow on October 26, an Oktoberfest in Boise on October 25, and an Idaho direct-mail campaign.

"Our goal is to raise $35,000 for support of company activities for 85-86," Alotto said.

"We hope that everyone will do their share to ensure that Idaho's professional ballet company can continue to exist and to serve our state and region," Alotto said. "The arts depend on the generosity and concern of the public at large. They are everyone's responsibility as well as for everyone's enjoyment."

AFB dancers include Duncan Vere Schute, Monica Mudgett, Alfred Hansen, Marla Hansen, Susan Zirra, Robert Singer, Mark Sonnenberg, Gayle Davidson, Maria Quann, Abigail Drinkard, Christopher Soderlund, Jennifer Liby, Valerie Mitchell, Miryam Estrella, and Monica Martinez Verra.

Swarouth said the dancers come from all over — New York, California, Idaho, Arizona, Colorado, Minnesota, and Mexico.

"Son of Mardi Gras" coming

By Mike Long
Of the Argonaut

"Son of Mardi Gras," a Halloween party, has been scheduled for October 26 this year at the Hotel Moscow from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. according to organizer Charlotte Buchanan of One More Time.

Tickets are available now at the SUB Information Desk for $5 and proceeds from the event will go for the support of Mardi Gras in the spring.

Buchanan suggests that anyone who wants to support

Mardi Gras, but doesn't want to go to the dance, should buy a ticket anyway.

There will be a costume competition with prizes awarded for the best ones. Prizes include $50 donated by the Prichard Gallery, a $25 gift certificate from "One More Time" and more.

Sponsored by Moscow Mardi Gras Incorporated, "Son of Mardi Gras" is into its third year. Music will be by the Fabulous Kingpins, a local group.

"They are ideally suited in their roles. I've enjoyed watching them as much as doing my own work."

Another UI graduate, Idaho editorial page editor Kenton Bird, plays a factory worker. It's a small part, but the worker has a crucial role in bringing Babe and Sid together. After being "shoved" by Sid, Bird's character runs to Babe, the one-woman grievance committee.

At their first meeting, Sid remarks "You're sure the cutest grievance committee I've ever had to deal with."

"It's really a cute play," said Mary Clark, who plays a factory worker. "I think it's going to be terrific."

Other cast members associated with the UI are students Pamyla Stiehl, Richard Jenness, Cerese Vaden, Mary Hartman, Melanie Gerard and Joe Tassinari, and faculty and staff members Tom Jenness, Les Kish, Debbie Scheldorf and Nancy Hackmann.

The play will be presented Oct. 11 and 12 at 7:30 p.m. and Oct. 13 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5 for adults and $4 for senior citizens, children and high school and college students with identification. A family ticket good for two adults and two children is available for $14.

Square dancers looking for more members

By Nella Letizia
Of the Argonaut

A traditional misconception held by some young people today identifies square dancing as an activity for only parents and grandparents.

However, square dancing is nation-wide entertainment for young and old alike and possibly the most popular event as far as participants go, Bonnie Milligan, co-president of the Palouse Promenaders Square Dance Club in Moscow, said.

"Wherever you go, you can almost always find a square dance club," she said.

Because dance steps don't vary in square dancing, people can pick it up wherever they go, and square dancers travel to other states to meet with other clubs and attend their dances, Milligan said.

People who have not been exposed to square dancing often stereotype the music played at these dances as being strictly country western, but there is a variety of pop and modern music modified to fit square dancing, she said.

The Palouse Promenaders are sponsoring square dancing lessons for couples and singles which started on October 9, 7:30 p.m., at Lena Whitmore School on 1st and Blaine Street in Moscow. Lessons are $20 per person for 10 lessons every Wednesday night from 7:30 to 9 p.m., Milligan said.

Don Crisp will be the teacher and caller for the Wednesday night lessons. Milligan said Crisp is one of the best callers, with 25 years experience in calling and teaching square dancing.

People from the Moscow community and surrounding areas are encouraged to participate, especially students. The Moscow club would like to increase its members, she said.

"We really would like a bunch of students going," she said.

Milligan said Washington State University has a student square dancing club on campus called the WSU Whirlers, funded by the associated student body, but the University of Idaho does not have such a student club.

The UI has tried to teach lessons through Continuing Education, but the dance steps taught were not far advanced and the pace was slow, she said. Participation during the lessons was fairly small.

Members of the Palouse Promenaders come from Moscow, Lewiston, Pullman, Potlatch and Troy. Besides the WSU club, Pullman has an additional club known as The Frolickers, Lewiston has about three clubs and the Spokane area has many clubs, Milligan said.

In the future, a state square dance festival for all the clubs within Idaho will be held in June at Moscow, she said.

Friendships can be invaluable

By Karma Metzler
Of the Argonaut

The old saying, "friendship lasts forever" comes true in the play "Androcles and the Lion," which is showing in the Collette theatre tonight at 8 p.m. and tomorrow at 2 p.m.

The play, written by Aaurand Harris, is about a slave (Androcles) who pulls a thorn out of a lion's paw. Later, Androcles is thrown to the lions. However, the lion that is supposed to eat him turns out to be the lion he helped and his life is spared.

"It's wonderful!" said student director Suzie Nelson. "It's a fun, comical play."

The play, which features colorful banners, masks and costumes, stars Steven Taylor as Androcles and Paul Cain as the lion. Other important characters include Hal Nelson as Pahtalone, Kerry Beeson as Isabella, Neil McDevitt as Lelio and Herb Alden as the Captain. The pianist is Shelley Stigile.

The play was chosen because of Nelson's love for children's theatre. "It's really spectacular," Nelson said.

Nelson said the tickets are $1.50 at the door. The Collette theatre is located across from the Journalism Building and next to Morrill Hall.

UI ready for Cats

By Greg Kilmer
Of the Argonaut

Seems you get through with one "Big Game" and along comes another one.

The University of Idaho Vandals face another critical hurdle in the race for the Big Sky Conference crown as they travel to Ogden, Utah to take on the Wildcat of Weber State.

Head coach Mike Price's Wildcats are undefeated in BSC play at 1-0, a 50-36 victory over Montana State last weekend. Weber is 3-1 overall, their only loss being a 19-31 setback to Eastern Washington, this week's Div. 1-AA 10th-ranked team.

Price, who is 3-1 lifetime against Idaho and 2-1 against Erickson, has never lost to Idaho in Ogden. The last Idaho victory over Weber was in Moscow, 35-34 in 1982.

Leading the Wildcat attack is senior quarterback Dave Stireman, this week's Big Sky "Player of the Week." Idaho fans remember Stireman for his performance in last year's UI Homecoming loss to the Wildcats.

Coming off the bench, Stireman rallied Weber from a 24-7 halftime deficit to a 40-37 victory. He hit on 20 of 39 attempts for 305 yards and two second half touchdowns.

Stireman has the Weber offense churning, as they lead the Sky in rushing offense (228 yds. a game), scoring offense (44 pts. a game) and total offense (492 yds. a game).

Weber's offensive front or as they refer to them in Ogden, the "Wasatch Front", has been providing ample time for Stireman and his running mates. From tackle to tackle, the fivesome average 6-foot-4 and an impressive 280 pounds.

Center Craig Dumity leads the group of up-front blockers. Dumity, a Second-team All-Big-Sky lineman, has been called by Price the best offensive lineman since he has been at the Utah school.

Leading the Weber running game is senior running back Freddie Cook. Cook is third in the BSC in both rushing (97 yds. a game) and all-purpose rushing (167 yards a game).

Stireman's favorite target this season has been tight end Craig Slama. The senior from Ogden, Weber's MVP in 1984, has grabbed 21 balls this year for 364 yards and three Weber scores.

The Wildcats return their leading scorer at the kicker spot, Craig Winberg. The '84 honorable mention recipient hit 10 three-pointers last year, including three of 55, 52 and the game-winner from 17 against Idaho.

Winberg has had only one shot this season but took full advantage hitting it from 35 yards.

While the Wildcats have been rolling up the points, the defensive have had trouble keeping their opponents off the scoreboard.

The Cat's are sixth in total defense giving up nearly 400 yards a game. Their pass defense is last in conference while yielding nearly 300 yards through the airways. Weber has given up an average of 27.7 points a game.

Sophomore DB Wade Jacklin leads the WSC defenders with three interceptions, while middle-linebacker Mike Powell has nabbed two.

A person Price calls our "Best

All-Around Athlete" is free safety Kevin Villars. Villars, a 6-4 senior, has played quarterback, wide receiver and defensive back for the Wildcats.

Price has liked the chances for his team for the 1985 Big Sky Conference race.

"This is the best team we have had here. I feel we should be in the hunt," he said. "I just hope our record will show it."

Idaho will again be without the services of DB Mike Johnston, while Eric Yarber is listed as doubtful.

Kickoff for this conference game is set for 6:00 p.m. PST

The toughest job you'll ever love

We admit it. It takes a different kind of person to be a Peace Corps volunteer.

We won't mislead you with glowing pictures of exotic lands. The hours as a volunteer are long. The pay is modest. And the frustrations sometimes seem overwhelming. But the satisfaction and rewards are immense. You'll be immersed in a new culture, become fluent in a new language, and learn far more about the third world — and yourself — than you ever expected.

You'll also discover that progress brought about by Peace Corps volunteers is visible and measurable: Such as health clinics established in the Philippines; Fresh-water fish ponds constructed in Kenya; roads and schools and irrigation systems built in Upper Volta; tens of thousands of people given essential skills in farming, nutrition, the skilled trades, business, forestry, and other specialties throughout the developing world.

Being a volunteer isn't for everyone, and it isn't easy, but to the people of the developing nations who have never before had basic health care or enough to eat, the Peace Corps brings a message of hope and change.

We invite you to look into the volunteer opportunities beginning in the next 3-12 months in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Pacific. Our representatives will be pleased to provide you with details.

UI 'frosh' contributing

"Being a college freshman can be a traumatic experience. Being one of seven freshmen on the Vandal volleyball team can also be harrowing, especially when one is expected to make a quick transition from high-school level ball to the complicated style of collegiate play.

Head coach Pam Bradetich opted to recruit only high school seniors for the 1985 season because she needed to "get some youth on the team." Presently, there are four seniors, two juniors, and no sophomores on the roster. Junior college transfers would serve the team for two years, then leave the program. This is fine when there is a shortage of upper-classmen, but this year's situation warranted a different recruiting approach. Hence the large group of highly talented and experienced freshmen.

Sally Beyer, Keesha Christensen, Dawn Colston, Sue Gillette, Julie Hansen, Terri Plum and Robin Reslock make up the freshmen class for the Vandal volleyballers; all have performed surprisingly well for their young collegiate careers.

When senior Nellie Gant was sidelined with achilles tendonitis, the freshmen were needed to step into big shoes during pre-season tournaments, and did well, according to Bradetich. Sally Beyer, the only walk-on from Sandpoint (which is also Bradetich's hometown), was one of the bright spots on the freshmen squad during pre-season. "Sally has good leadership qualities," said Bradetich, "and she's very mature. Her knowledge level is high, mainly due to her club experience in Sandpoint." Bradetich mentioned that Beyers needs to work on her strength, and a weight program will help alleviate that problem.

Terri Plum has recently been playing well. A 6'2" right-side hitter from Fort Collins, CO, Plum was a strong factor in the Vandals first Mountain West Athlete Conference win Tuesday night over the Eastern Washington Eagles. Plum had seven kills in nine attempts. "Terri loves the game," commented Bradetich, "and her enthusiasm is contagious." When Plum is up at the net, "she can be a dominant blocker."

Keesha Christensen, a middle-blocker from Kennewick, WA, played well as a starter when Nellie Gant was injured. "She's a great athlete," said Bradetich, adding, "she's quick, a good jumper, and has probably improved the most (of the freshman class)."

Sue Gillette, who hails from Denver, CO, has been learning much from setters Joyce Sasaki and Kelley Nelly. When the two seniors leave, Gillette will become the team quarterback. "Sue's one of the quickest on the team, and is a hard worker at practice," said Bradetich, "she's a hustler."

Strong-side hitter Robin Reslock is a former high school teammate of both Kelley Nelly and Nellie Gant. She has been playing well recently, notably in the victorious match against WSU on Tuesday, October 1. Reslock's strength on the court can be attributed to her club experience in high school and her team orientation. "Robin really cares about her teammates," commented coach Bradetich, "and she's real experienced."

One of the girls who has taken on a different position on the team is Julie Hansen. The right-side hitter from Colville, WA, was a setter and middle-back player in high school. Coach Bradetich saw potential for Hansen in the right-front position, hence the switch. Hansen's experience as setter may prove valuable in the future.

Bradetich mentioned her coachability, dedication to the team, and her benefit to the team as a "utility player."

Dawn Colston has decided to red-shirt her freshman year with the Vandals. "She's a strong athlete," said Bradetich, "and very coachable. She has improved enough to be playing now." Dawn will have four more years to complete her playing eligibility at UI.

Bradetich thinks that one of the hardest things for the freshmen to learn is to be able to transfer from "top dog" in high school to the bottom as a freshman in means of recognition. "You have to have maturity, because there can be no individuals on the floor," said Bradetich. She added, "Everything's so new to them. They're being pushed and demanded of a lot, academically as well as athletically. Things aren't as easy for them as they were in high school, but the majority of them have made the transition (to team player)."

The freshman class has been a big plus for the Lady Vandals, because they are all team-oriented. "Their team concept is strong," said Bradetich. "When they have a bad game, they all talk about how they weren't being a team." The freshmen

Women open MWAC with victory over EWU

By Chris Schulte

Behind the stellar performance of the team veterans, the University of Idaho women's volleyball team opened its Mountain West Athletic Conference season in impressive fashion with a four game victory over Eastern Washington, 15-10, 13-15, 15-11 and 15-12.

Vandal coach Pam Bradetich was pleased with her team's performance.

"The match was close. Eastern kept it close, they're improved over last year," Bradetich said.

Bradetich still sees the need for continued improvement to be successful in conference play.

"We didn't play as well as against Gonzaga," she said. "In some ways we were fortunate to come out on top. It's good to get the first win on the road though."

In this close match, the Vandals were led by returning stars Nellie Gant (14 kills, two blocks), Robin Jordan (13 kills, two blocks), Laura Burnis (11 kills, 16 digs) and Kelley Neely, who played a super all-around match with nine kills, three service aces, eight digs and 44 setting assists.

Bradetich was all praises for her senior setter.

"Kelley played a great match," she said. "Her nine kills are great for a setter."

Freshman Terri Plum executed well off the bench with seven kills out of nine attempts and also added two blocks.

"Terri came in and brought energy and enthusiasm, that made a difference," Bradetich said.

The Vandals continue their road-trip this weekend with matches at Idaho State and Weber State. Bradetich feels her team has a good mental attitude going into the crucial games.

"The team is very positive about how they're doing. They have set goals for themselves, one of them being the conference play-offs," Bradetich said. "This weekend we'll need defensive and transition improvements, but the team is improving every match."

Vandal women finish 9th

think that their older teammates have been a big factor for their team-togetherness. Keesha Christensen made a good point about their peers. "We look up to them because they know how much of a commitment it is for them to play."

Bradetich expects a lot from the freshmen. She expects respect for and from the team. She expects them to understand and implement every play of the Vandal offense. But mostly, she expects the freshmen to be able to step on the court at a moment's notice and perform well.

Having respect for one another seems to be a dominant characteristic on the Vandal volleyball team. Without it, a team has no togetherness, and therefore cannot meet its potential for winning. The freshman class has many good qualities, including commitment, caring for one another, and a desire to work hard. This may be an indicator of the future UI volleyball teams...winners.

13th spot. Freshman Kathy Wall ran in 21st and senior Sherrie Crang, in her first race since being ill, ran a strong race placing 29th.

Coach Scott Lorek was very impressed with the performances of his top three runners.

"They all ran super. Janet had her best race of the year. Kathy had a good one, especially with this being her first really big college race and Sherrie ran real tough."

The next three Vandal runners were Jackie Mount, Sissy Monnie and Missy Madsen in 67th, 117th and 131st, respectively.

Lorek said, "These girls ran well also. Jackie and Missy were just over injuries and Sissy ran hurt. I was pleased with the way everyone ran mentally for us. That's really important, coming into the important part of our

The RAs laughed, and Rasch said "a light goes on" when a police officer hears a comment like that. He watches closely for other signs that the driver has been drinking.

In the balance test, Duren's foot was on the floor by the time she counted to 1,005, and she was consumed with giggles at 1,020.

The next drivers were Rich Rogers of Upham Hall, third floor, and John Scriptor of Snow Hall. They said they had six, double-shot screwdrivers each.

Rogers giggled while Rasch gave the instructions for the balance test, and his foot dropped before he reached 1,002. Starting over, he hopped on one foot to keep his balance. He finally gave up. "I can't do it. I'm sorry," he told Rasch.

Even the alphabet was too much for him: "A, B, C, D, E, F, E, H." The other RAs laughed, but he kept going: "H, I, J, (long pause) K." He made it to U but gave up: "Oh, forget it."

After they finished the tests, Rasch had the men blow into a Alcosensor, which is about the size of a walkie-talkie. It analyzes a driver's breath, and a red light comes on if the blood-

Dolphin also had a biochemical explanation of the use of garlic to ward off vampires, but he said he couldn't explain everything. He didn't know how crosses held vampires at bay, or how vampires may have turned into bats.

"I have been assiduously feeding a bunch of rats back in Canada a lot of garlic, but so far none have sprouted wings," he said.

Dolphin said porphyrins, the cause of a terrible series of diseases, may also have a positive use.

He said porphyrins have long been known to have a high affinity for tumors, and recently they have been looked upon as an aid in treatment. Dolphin said if visible light can be shone on tumors loaded with porphyrins, the tumors may be destroyed.

alcohol level is 0.10 (at that level a driver is considered legally intoxicated in Idaho). Although a driver can refuse to take the sobriety tests, without penalty, he will lose his license if he refuses to take a breath test.

The red light went on almost immediately after Rogers and Scriptor blew into it. "That gives the indication they would both be arrested and suspected of driving under the influence," Rasch said.

Ann Schiller of Carter Hall probably would have been arrested, too. She had drunk five Rainier pounders, and although she impressed the crowd by saying the alphabet in French as well as English, she failed the other tests miserably. After doing the heel-to-toe test she said "I know I am not doing this the way I should be doing it. I definitely wouldn't drive."

The final "driver" was Scott Peterson of Gault Hall. He had drunk six pounders, but Rasch said he would be considered "borderline" because he did pretty well on the tests. Rasch said an officer might give him more tests and observe his attitude for signs that he had been drinking.

The first time a driver is convicted of a DUI, he can lose his license for up to six months and he can be fined up to $1,000, Rasch said. "I would encourage you to walk if you're going to go downtown and drink."

Rich Rogers had learned a lesson from the experience: "Don't drink and drive. They'll screw ya."

feel like he really matters, that's different," said Fargo.

Larry McBride, a freshman chemistry student of Dr. Renfrew's in 1963 who is currently assistant to the head in the chemistry department, said Renfrew taught his freshmen with the attitude that any one of them could become the greatest chemist in the world. Yet producing scientists wasn't Renfrew's goal, McBride said.

"He taught freshman chemistry so people understood the world they live in, not so much for the scientists," McBride said. McBride described Renfrew as direct, unflappable, and one not to beat around the bush when something is wrong.

"If you go for advice, he gives you advice," McBride said.

Renfrew retired from teaching in 1976, and now spends his time writing about chemical safety, serving as the volunteer patent director of the Idaho Research Foundation and traveling with his wife. The Renfrews have no children but dote on their dog Marlene.

Renfrew hasn't done much painting lately, but a collection of his watercolors is on display at the Prichard Gallery in downtown Moscow. He also plays trombone in the Vandal Boosters Non-Marching Pep Band and a non-performing group named the Hog Heaven Seven.

Jean'ne Shreeve, currently head of the chemistry department, said that in 1976 Renfrew refused to have a party celebrating his retirement, opting instead to give the party money to a scholarship fund.

Shreeve, the major force behind the renaming ceremony and the entire Renfrew Oktoberfest celebration, said she and other Renfrew admirers were determined to honor him, despite any protests.

"We tuned him out this time," she said.
