Board asks for tuition

By Douglas S. Jones
Of the Argonaut

COEUR D'ALENE — The UI Board of Regents is asking Idaho lawmakers to make the "Institutional Maintenance Fee," which is already being charged Idaho students, legal under the Idaho code.

The $245 IMF, part of the mandatory Registration Fee, has been a legal gray area since its imposition by the board in 1982.

The proposal limits tuition, which forbidden by the Idaho Constitution, to "direct cost of instruction."

"It really defines the IMF as an indirect cost of instruction, not the direct cost," said Kim Phillips, the board's information and procedures officer.

The proposal asks the Legislature to change a section of the Idaho code relating to tuition at colleges and universities. It defines the direct cost not to include "research, public service, maintenance, financing and operation of physical plant, academic support, student services and institutional support."

The proposal passed unanimously. It is part of a legislative package to be sent to the governor, along with the board's higher education budget request.

"I've always thought the words 'cost of instruction' was a very ambiguous phrase," said ASUI President Jane Freund. "Now we are using more ambiguous phrases to define what is not tuition for the cost of instruction."

"I think it's leaving it wide open to interpret that anyway, they want," Freund said.

Cutback effects everyone

By Douglas S. Jones
Of the Argonaut

COEUR D'ALENE — UI officials agreed yesterday to bear a larger share of the current 2.5 percent budget holdback. But they gained in exchange promises for de facto control of two cooperative programs based at, but not part of the university.

The Board of Regents decided to proceed with a holdback option which gave each institution the power to accommodate necessary reductions within their total budgets by exempting cooperative programs.

The UI will have to cutback almost $1.3 million.

The alternative was one of four presented to the board, which sought to cut $10.9 million out of the current budget for Idaho education of all levels. Higher education's share is $2.5 million.

The WAMI medical education cooperative program and the WOI veterinary science program cooperative programs have been administered by the UI. Until now they have been considered state-wide programs, which meant their budgets were not been considered part of the UI appropriation.

Under the option adopted, the UI will need to cut $31,000 more out of its General Education budget that with the three other alternatives. But it has received in return tentative recognition the programs considered the UI's.

"All I want is a clear statement that 'Yes, it's a university program' or 'No, it is not,'" UI President Richard Gibb told the board. "If it is not, then I think other (schools) should share in the reduction. If it is a UI program, then we should assume the reduction."

Council drops incompletes

By Laurel Darrow
Of the Argonaut

UI students can no longer graduate with incompletes on their record, the Faculty Council decided Tuesday.

The council's decision must be approved by the administration and the general faculty before it becomes university policy.

Under the plan approved by the council, a graduating senior's "incomplete" will immediately revert back to the default grade specified on the class roster.

Under current policy, only "incompletes" received in required courses are treated that way. Those received in elective courses remain on the student's record permanently unless he re-enrolls in school and completes the coursework required to remove the incomplete.

At least five times in the past five years, students have graduated with incompletes on their records, and then when they returned to school to complete the coursework, they earned low grades. Their GPAs were brought down below the 2.0 required for undergraduate degrees and the 3.0 required for graduate degrees, said Roger Wallins, assistant dean of the Graduate School.

But the UI cannot take degrees away once they have been awarded, he said. Bruce Bray, faculty secretary, said this leaves the university in the embarrassing situation of having awarded a degree to a student who did not meet its minimum requirements.

Under the new policy, the GPA calculated at the time of graduation would reflect the work the student had done up to that point, Bray said. Students could still return to school and raise their grades above the instructor's default grades "if they have any pride," Wallins said.

In other business, the council decided to appoint a task force to define a university-wide position on computer pre-registration for the UI. Matt Telin, UI registrar, said Brigham Young University has successfully used a program in which students register by contacting a computer over the telephone.

Program to get new equipment

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

The only ASUI department that has been totally self-sufficient for the past eight years received some benefits Wednesday when the senate gave Outdoor Rentals $10,105 for the purchase of new equipment.

The money, which will be taken out of the capital reserve account, will go towards the purchase of skis, ski boots, tents and wetsuits.

Jim Rennie, head of Outdoor Rentals, told the senate he wants the money now so the department can buy the equipment while it's cheaper. He said the money will allow Outdoor Rentals to serve more students and reduce the long-term subsidy to the outdoor program.

"The Outdoor Rentals budget stays the same but we'll be paying $2,000 of the bills for the outdoors program center for next year," said Rennie. "The ASUI will get $2,000 back on the investment each year."

Vice President Mike Trail said, "This is one of the smartest things the ASUI has done to make some money."

In other business, Jeff Friel was appointed chairman of the Political Concerns Committee.

The senate also passed an amended bill providing for the reimbursement of the FY1986 Gem of the Mountains budget for extra costs incurred in producing the FY1985 Gem of the Mountains. The amount of $299 rather than $532 will be transferred from the general reserves to the yearbook. The $299 is the amount of money the previous editor of the Gem of the Mountains overbudgeted, according to Finance Chairman Scott Speelman.

The final appointments for an ASUI Recreational Facilities Board was also passed. The board consists of: Jan Laes, Chairwoman, Pam Gwin, Brian Martin, Chad Nester, Mike Fery, Pat Bivens and Licia Duren.

The transfer of $403 from the general reserve to the operating expenses of KUOI-FM for the payment of an old bill was passed.

The bills creating a governing board for the ASUI Golf Course was also passed.

The bills establishing salaries for the Golf Course Board Chair, the PCC Chair, and the Recreational Facilities Board Chair, were tabled in Finance Committee.

The senate also passed a bill allowing all students who are now receiving more than one hour of tutoring from Tutoring Services to continue with the additional hours until Jan. 1, 1986, when the director of tutoring will have the option of granting additional tutoring time to any student.

The bill postponing all ASUI Senate meetings until the completion of the 1985 World Series was passed by unanimous consent.

Senator Gino White said, "If Jane vetoes this, it just probably proves she's un-American and against Canada too."

President Freund was not at the senate meeting because she was at the State Board of Education meeting in Coeur d'Alene.

Man attacked

A UI student claims he was attacked and struck repeatedly by an unknown assailant near Johnnie's Cafe Sunday night.

According to police reports, Michael Stephen Olding of Sigma Nu fraternity was standing near the cafe when he asked a passerby if he had a light for his cigarette. Olding told police the male struck him several times in the mouth and Friends took him to Gritman and a dentist had to be called in to put Olding's dented front teeth back in place. Olding said that he will have to have root canals done in order to save them.

He described the assailant as about 5-foot-4, having a stocky build and short blond hair.

If anyone has any information as to who the assailant is, please call the Moscow Police Department at 882-5551.

Seminar set

"The Party's Over" is the theme for an alcohol awareness seminar that deals with the possible forthcoming rise in the drinking age and its effects on on-campus socializing.

Sponsored by the Phi Kappa Alpha fraternity, Alpha Phi sorority, Student Advisory Services and Miller Beer, the seminar will feature Moscow Police Chief Dave Cameron, State Sen. Norma Dobler (D-Moscow) and Intra-fraternal presidents from Washington State University and the UI.

The seminar is on Monday. Activities will feature a discussion of the legalities of on-campus drinking, with a question and answer period following. Cameron and Dobler will be the guest speakers in the KIVA at 7 p.m. The public is invited.

Another program for residence hall and Greek house presidents and vice presidents also starts at 7 p.m. in the KIVA.

"Parties are fun, but we're trying to get away from the 'drink, get drunk and fall down syndrome,'" said McCoy, who added that there may be off-duty police officers present, mainly to give sobriety tests for those who want them.

Maurer said he is looking forward to the challenges and opportunities presented by being associated with a land grant institution. "I am especially impressed with the quality of the faculty, administrative personnel and staff. I am pleased to be joining UI."

Members of the search committee for the position screened over 40 completed application files in seeking a suitable candidate, said Roy Fluhrer, chairman of the committee. "We saw a lot of capable applicants, but ultimately Maurer's credentials and interviews made him the top candidate.

Internship slots

The UI Political Science Department is looking for a few good students.....to go to Boise. Several internship opportunities are available for the next legislative session during the spring semester

The positions are not salaried but students will be granted nine hours of upper level Political Science credit for a 2 to 3 month work commitment. In addition, they will gain practical experience in politics, make professional contacts and add an impressive work experience to their resumes

Students should be academically sound but they need not be a Political Science major. The experience would be valuable in most fields

Currently there are vacancies in the Legislature, the Governor's office, the State Budget office and the Attorney General's office. There will be on campus interviews at the end of October for the latter three offices. The budget office is likely to interest those with a business/management type of background.

News bureau has new head

Terry K. Maurer has been named manager of the University of Idaho News Bureau.

He replaces Margaret Scott, who is resigning to live in Kamiah, where her husband is high school principal.

Maurer, 40, is director of News Services for Eastern Washington University. He will begin work at the UI on Oct. 28.

"Terry (Maurer) comes to us as a highly regarded member of the administrative staff at EWU," said Jack Loughton, UI vice president for development and university relations. "From our perspective, Terry is a well-qualified professional. He has a working knowledge of broadcast journalism and will be a welcome staff addition in support of our marketing effort."

the idea, reporting that these would be the advantages of computer pre-registration:

- Better timing. The current system of arena registration in the Kibbie Dome requires that too much be done in too short a time. Computer pre-registration would give students a longer time to register.

- Reduced manpower. Faculty and staff would be freed up to work on other matters.

- Adding class sections. Sections could be added more deliberately because department heads would be able to monitor the demand.

- Off-campus registration. New students could pre-register without having to make a trip to campus.

The sub-committee also identified potential problems:

- Undergraduate advising. Problems could arise with advising transfers and freshmen during their first semester.

- Human contact. The personal contact between students and the faculty at registration would be replaced by a machine.

- Computer resources. It could be difficult to schedule computer time for the pre-registration program. Overload might result.

COMMENTARY

Are civil rights un-American?

It is no small comfort to know that the nation's top lawyer is not completely against civil rights. It is too bad it has taken him over a week to figure out how to say it.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese caused no small furor when he declared in an interview, "Suspects who are innocent of a crime should (have the right to have a lawyer present at questioning). But the thing is, you don't have many suspects who are innocent of a crime. That's contradictory. If a person is innocent of a crime, then he is not a suspect."

Meese was referring to the so-called Miranda warning, a standard set by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1966. The court said officers of the law must inform persons who are being arrested of their legal rights.

The Miranda warning "prevents the police from talking to the person who knows the most about the crime — namely the perpetrator," Meese said.

Some squishy liberals (and worse) interpreted those words to mean our police wouldn't bother to arrest and question people unless they were guilty.

Wednesday, Meese reassured civil libertarians he really wasn't implying defense lawyers and the courts are unnecessary.

"I do not believe that simply because a suspect is being questioned or even arrested, that he or she is necessarily guilty."

Thanks Ed, we needed that.

John Hecht

Just in case... Miranda Warning

1. You have the right to remain silent.
2. Anything you say can and will be used against you in a court of law.
3. You have the right to talk to a lawyer and have him present with you while you are being questioned.
4. If you cannot afford to hire a lawyer, one will be appointed to represent you before any questioning, if you wish.
5. You can decide at any time to exercise these rights and not answer questions or make any statements.

Planting good ideas on campus

This is to publicly thank the men of Delta Tau Delta for their wholehearted effort and hard work in the new Arboretum on Saturday, October 4.

They came out as a group and helped plant over 1,000 bulbs in the new Perennial Garden, 70 trees in the Arboretum, helped cover the new water line and assisted in burning an unsafe shed.

The man hours the Deltas contributed to the Arboretum project made a tremendous difference. The results of their efforts can be appreciated by all next spring when the Perennial Garden (next to the golf course clubhouse) breaks into bloom.

There's still more to be done this fall and any living group or individual interested in helping can either leave name and phone number at the SUB Info Desk, or call 882-0573 for information. Better yet, join us this Saturday morning at 10 a.m. in your grubbies.

Again, on behalf of the Arboretum Associates, thanks to the Deltas for a job well done.

It was just one of those days

I would like to thank those people who stopped to help me on Oct. 8, after I had bit the big one and broken my clavical (collar bone) while riding my bike along Sixth Street.

At the time the pain was rather severe and it was difficult to remember names and faces. But I would like to extend my gratitude to you all for your help, especially to the persons who gave me a ride to the doc-

Counting the lessons of war

David Blakely

"I didn't know him well. He was much older, and I was just a youngster. About all I can remember is him playing football in the street, calling out the names of the heroes of his day...Y.A. Tittle and Johnny Unitas...as he faded back to pass.

His name was on the replica of "The Wall" on display in the SUB last week. I paid it a visit, partly out of curiosity and partly just to find his name.

The first thing I noticed, the most obvious, was the size of the display. It took up a lot of space, almost the entire ballroom. Then there were the names.

As I began reading the names I didn't feel any great revelation. I didn't feel anything, in fact. They were just countless names, a list, sort of like one sees on television at the end of a show. They were people who were a part of someone else's life.

After awhile I found his name, and focused on it. A single name. Someone I once knew — if only vaguely. As I tried to remember him, I became the slightest bit uneasy. Bringing him back to life in my mind seemed so unfair. I could still experience part of his life, long after he had been robbed of the capacity to do so.

I thought of the times I had invoked his memory in past conversations: "Yeah, I knew someone who bought it in Vietnam ... lived just down the street from me." Such remarks seemed so shallow and callous as I confronted his name on the Wall. I felt guilty. I had trivialized his death.

Slowly, I realized the mistake I had made initially — seeing the names as some sort of collection instead of as individuals. An obvious mistake, born of mental laziness. It was easier to try and comprehend the numbers than to feel the names. One name, his name, showed me how wrong I was.

Perhaps this is the problem in all war. We measure gains and losses in military and political terms, and numbers. The names don't count until after the fact. To all those who aren't fighting and suffering, war exists only as an abstraction.

"The Wall" demands that we take another view, that we measure war in terms of its human cost.

Reading name after name it eventually becomes impossible not to visualize one's own on the Wall. "Why am I here...and not there?" one asks. In coming to grips with their mortality, we come to grips with our own.

As I left the exhibit, I thought some more about the man I had come to see. How did he die? And where? In turn, I reflected on these questions regarding myself. "The Wall" had gently driven home its point.

If you missed "The Wall" exhibit while it was here, then go one better and see it in the capital sometime. There are lessons it can teach all of us: 57,939 of them.

Cartoon unfair

I want to register my protest over the cartoon published in your October 4 issue of the Argonaut, about Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, as it is not factual.

There is no financial crisis in this rich, billion-dollar Oregon commune of Rajneeshpurum. If there is one, it is because of rumors spread by a few bigoted journalists.

I would like to tell you that we have ordered only last week six more Rolls-Royces and it is not going to be the end.

We have done very well in the past despite all rumors. We are doing very well at present, and will be doing better.

I invite you to publish material about Bhagwan in the future, but request you to be factual, as this is the essential element of positive journalism.

Cast of Getting Out steps into prison

By Sarah Kerruish
Of the Argonaut

Editor's note: The writer accompanied the UI cast of "Getting Out" on their trip to Orofino. The trip was to familiarize themselves with the prison system. Following are the reporter's impressions of that trip. The writer is a student from the Isle of Man.

"No cigarettes, no money, no keys," said the armed guard who according to his badge had been serving since 1984. "Welcome to Idaho Correctional Institute, Orofino." We submitted identification and the metal gate locked behind us. "Hang tight," said the guard, "somebody will be with you in a minute."

Getting Out is the play UI Theater Arts Department is performing this month. It concerns a woman's prison experience, and the actresses' and actors' visit to the Orofino prison was an attempt to internalize some of the reality of prison life into the production.

The red bricked prison had a peculiar grandeur. White pillars guarded the entrance and at the side of the path were two Dickensian style lamps. At first glance it seemed there were no bars at the windows but closer inspection revealed fine metal grills.

On the left is Christine Drobish who plays Arlie, the past life of Getting Out's main character Arlene, who is on the right and portrayed by Kim Lenz. Arlie is tough, angry and often in solitary confinement. Arlene is the passive ex-con who is trying to adjust to life outside of prison. Both actresses are on the stage simultaneously throughout the entire play. Tickets are now on sale with a special two-for-one offer for opening night until 5 p.m. on Tuesday.

The grounds were surrounded by two rows of wire fencing. The fences were swathed in barbed wire and between them a guard dog lay lazily in the sun. We called the dog and it nuzzled our hands, wagging its tail.

Chuck Miller, a guard serving since 1982, met us at the gate and led us into the reception area. The green tiled floor, white walls and pungent antiseptic smell reminded me of a hospital, but at every stairwell and door there were metal grid doors.

"I was a speech and drama major once," Chuck said laughing. His "walkie talkie" buzzed and he negotiated some prisoner maneuvers. Guards escorted inmates from locked door to locked door. Gray-haired men in blue denim viewed us with suspicion.

"This is a medium custody facility, although we do have one death row prisoner. The average sentence is sixteen months," said Chuck. "We are desperately overcrowded, sometimes we have to put a mattress on the floor and stuff them in.

 "We are a co-ed facility and that causes problems. It's like giving kids a lollipop and telling them not to eat. Our mixed recreation program didn't work. Guards spent their time stopping prisoners from stripping. Orgies are not good for public relations," he said.

 Sharon, serving twelve years for armed robbery, described the frustration. "It was much easier in Nevada where the prison was just women because this is such an abnormal situation. It is so frustrating physically. I've been without for five years now. There are lesbians. It is tough for the new meat on Thursdays but it is essential that you make people believe that you are strong."

 On a guided tour of the prison facilities I was struck by the resonant sound of clanking metal, echoing footsteps and the silence of the prisoners who hovered in their doorways. Chris, the actress playing Arlene the prisoner, smiled at one of the inmates. When she turned away the woman mockingly imitated her.

The women share bathroom facilities, a day room and bedrooms. Cindy, a quiet prisoner, told us how she could never get used to having no privacy. "I try and cover myself with a towel in the shower room. I don't use the T.V. room, I like my bed. I hate people invading my space." "What did you do Cindy?" I asked. "Murder," she said softly.
 The women's rooms are bright and sparsely furnished. They are allowed six square feet of space for personal belongings. Chuck told us that there was no hole room although prisoners were still given solitary confinement.

A hole room was a common feature of the old prisons. There was a hole for light and air and a hole for waste. In Orofino prison inmates are allowed a Bible and one other book. No tobacco is allowed. Sharon asked us, "do you know how long it takes for 30 days to go by when you are on your own?"

 Sharon told us how she liked keeping busy. Both Cindy and Sharon are involved in a braille program, taking classes and working in the kitchen. "The food is good, we make it," confided Cindy.

The prison has education facilities, a church room and a law library. Chuck told us that some of the prisoners become quite proficient lawyers. Sharon said that women often go to church just to see a man.

In the play there are violent scenes between fellow prisoners and between prisoners and guards. "We encounter all sorts of problems," said Chuck, "knives made from scrap steel, garottes, drugs and sqwawky. Sqwawky is a local brew sometimes made with cherry pie filling. We get LSD in writing paper and once I found two lbs. of cannabis in a parcel. A Chapstick lid of dope can cost 10 dollars in here. People kill for it."

Both Cindy and Sharon said there was not much violence in Orofino prison although Sharon has experienced it in a Nevada prison. "They break glass to slash there. Here the violence is mostly verbal." They explained that obscene messages on mirrors were the most common form of abuse.

Some of the guards are good, said Sharon. Some try to help you but inmates will walk on them and use them, she said. Guards will sometimes do you sexual favors. "Two in here got fired for that," interrupted Chuck, "one of them had served seventeen years."

When Chuck first introduced us to Sharon and Cindy he said they are not animals and just because they made errors in their lives that doesn't make them all bad. Sharon was vivacious and animated. She talked openly about her experience.

"I am an alcoholic," she admitted, "but that does not excuse me for what I did." During the course of the armed robbery Sharon fired a gun, although she maintained she had no intention of hitting anybody.

She herself was shot and seriously injured. Asked about her future, she seemed optimistic; "I want to counsel alcoholic teenagers." Sharon has six years of her sentence to serve but she feels she is halfway there.

Cindy was reserved throughout the interview and no details of the murder were revealed. "I am a loner," she said. See Jail, page 7 said. I was struck by her gentle manner. Her pretty blonde hair was neatly tied back in a blue scarf.

 Cindy has served one year of her sentence and comes before the parole board in 1988. "I don't think of the future but I have dreams. You have to have dreams. Time is strange. When I see pictures of my nephews it seems they are growing up very quickly, but time in here drags."

Sharon said that she enjoyed talking to visitors. "In Nevada I used to give tours and once I met a couple I babysat for. That was embarrassing."

Outside the sun was brilliant and we breathed deeply. The gates clanked behind us. I didn't look back.

The normally exuberant thespians were subdued after the visit.

The prison experiences in the play are more traumatic than anything we saw. But the reality of being inside, if only for a short time, forced the actors to become a thoughtful audience.

If any of what we saw permeates the UI production of Getting Out, the drama will assume a disturbing reality.

Foreigner will hit the Palouse tomorrow night

By Bryan Clark
Of the Argonaut

Foreigner will be in concert tomorrow night at the Washington State Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum at 8:00.

Opening for them will be John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band. The concert is the feature attraction of WSU's 1985 homecoming festivities. "We try to just forge on through, to keep a standard going and improve on it. We strive to make the music original and genuine as far as possible. I think the band has managed to survive quite well through some torrid times," says Mick Jones, leader of the rock group Foreigner when describing his feelings on his band's rise to their current position as one of rock's most popular acts.

Foreigner is on tour supporting their latest album, Agent Provocateur. The album is the first studio effort by the band since 1981's multi-platinum 4, which climbed the charts to the number one position during that year.

Although a special effort has always been made by the quartet to keep each new album fresh and new, their latest work is, according to Jones, "an evolution, a natural development of some of the things we were starting on the '4' album. The rock end has become more brutal, and the melodic things have become more refined."

Also evident on Agent Provocateur is a move by the band towards a more rhythm and blues influenced sound. This is especially evident on tracks like "That Was Yesterday" and "Down On Love." Jones said the band has always had an affinity for R&B and soul but that "I think it's surfaced a little more on this album. We've loosened up the reins a little, you might say."

Another departure for Foreigner on their latest album is seen in the song "I Want To Know What Love Is," a ballad that combines a rock intensity with the uplifting feeling of gospel music.

Jones said, "It started out as a simple love song, but as it evolved, it was suddenly more than just a man-woman relationship. By bringing in the choir, it gives the song such an uplifting feeling. It also leaves the song open for interpretation."

Foreigner will be performing that song as well as their old favorites tomorrow night at WSU. Jim Crow, director of the Coliseum, said, "There are plenty of good seats left, so don't miss it." Tickets are priced at $12 and $14.

For more information, call the coliseum box office at 335-1514. Tickets are also available at Process, Inc. in the Compton Union Building, Sound Pro in the Palouse Empire Mall, Discount Stereo in Lewiston, the Chamber of Commerce in Walla Walla, Eli's Records and Tapes in the Tri Cities and M and M ticket outlets in Spokane.

Vandals, Grizzlies to clash

By Greg Kilmer
Of the Argonaut

Two teams coming off Big Sky victories go at it this weekend, as the University of Idaho hosts the Grizzlies of the University of Montana Saturday in the Kibbie Dome.

Montana, picked to finish at or near the bottom by most pre-season polls, surprised everyone with a 35-29 victory over Idaho State. It was the Grizz's first conference win in two years.

Montana is a young team and this year have changed their offensive strategy. Coach Larry Donovan has opted this season for the wishbone attack.

"They are a young team that is learning and getting better," Vandal head coach Dennis Erickson said of Montana. "Their offensive line is getting better every week."

Though inexperienced up front, the Grizzley offensive front lacks nothing when it comes to bulk.

Leading the way for the Montana wishbone attack are the bookend tackles. Seniors Larry Clarkston and Scott Poole both stand 6-foot-7, with Clarkston tipping the scales at 290 and Poole at 274.

"We thought of the wishbone because of our offensive front," Donovan told the media this summer in Sun Valley. "That and the backs we have can block."

The backs Donovan was referring to are two-year letterman, Kraig Paulson and Scott Murray.

"They're very durable type ballplayers," Donovan said. "We look to them for leadership."

While Paulson and Murray tend to the bruising aspect, LeRoy Foster gives the Grizz their speed.

The 5-5, 155 pound Foster is the Grizzley leading rusher with 465 yards on 82 carries.

Along with Foster, JC All-American Mike Rice has added to the Montana attack. Rice, this week's BSC co-offensive player of the week, had 193 all-purpose yards in last week's victory.

On the defensive side, Montana is hurting, as they are last in every BSC stat except one.

"We need the defense to come through for us," Donovan said.

Idaho will be without the services of offensive guard Tom Cable, who broke his foot against Weber. Sophomore Scott Katz will get his first start of the year at the guard slot.

Game time is set for 7:00 p.m.

Women host MWAC duo

The University of Idaho volleyball team will be hosting two Mountain West Athletic Conference opponents this weekend, as Portland State and Boise State make their way to Moscow.

The Vandals, 14-8 overall and 2-1 in MWAC, will be playing PSU Friday night at 7:30 p.m. and taking on BSU Saturday at 4:30 p.m.

The Vandals will be looking to do something no other Idaho squad has done Friday night, that of beating Portland State. PSU, last year's MWAC and NAIA Div. II champions, hold a 9-0 mark against the Vandals. PSU stands at 14-5 overall and 1-1 in conference, the only loss being to Montana last weekend.

Boise State brings a 11-8 and 1-1 record into Memorial Gym with their only league loss also coming at the hands of Montana. Idaho swept BSU in their two meetings last year.

"Our team is excited to be opening our home conference schedule," Idaho coach Pam Bradetich said. "We expect two tough and exciting matches this weekend. PSU is an experienced team with a tradition of winning Mountain West matches."

KUOI-FM 89.3 will be broadcasting both matches, with coverage starting 15 minutes before each match.

Vandal hoops begin

The 1985-86 addition of Vandal basketball got under way this week, as both men's and women's teams opened practice on Tuesday.

After suffering through two years of the trials of teaching young players a new system, third year coach Bill Trumbo appears to have the ingredients to make the Vandals contenders again.

The first ingredient is experience. The Vandals lost only one starter, Frank Garza, from last year's squad.

Back for the 85 version are starters Ulf Spears and Tom Stallick, both forwards. Guards Teddy Noel and Kenny Luckett also return along with part-time starters Steve Adams, Chris Carey and Matt Haskins.

Spears, Idaho's leading scorer last year until injuring his foot, underwent an operation on the same foot and lost to the Vandals until mid-December.

The second ingredient that Idaho will enjoy is depth. With the four starters and capable back-ups ready, the Vandals now have the luxury of letting new players watch and learn before they are called upon to deliver.

The Vandals also added some new faces from last year, both from the junior college ranks and high school.

Leading the way are JC transfers Matt Gregg, a 6-9, 240 pound center, Donald Nelson, a 6-7, 220 pound forward-center and 6-8, 210 pound forward Brain Coleman.

Trumbo also signed two high school standouts in 6-2 guard Barry Heads and 6-5 forward Mike Labat.

While the men look to improve on last year's record, the women will have it tough to improve on their 28-2 season.

Returning for Pat Dobratz's squad include twin 6-4 centers Mary Raese and Mary Westerwelle.

Raese, Idaho's All-American candidate, was Idaho's leading scorer and shot blocker last year, while Westerwelle led the team in field goal percentage.

Idaho also returns guards Robin Behrens, Paula Getty, Netra McGrew, Lynn Nichoals and Krista Dunn. Returning to join the Marys in the Vandal backcourt are forwards Susan Deskins, Kim Chernecki and Kristan Browitt.

Joining the squad this year are newcomers Christy Van Pelt, Sheri Lehmer and Gwen Dighans.

QUESTION: I've developed corns between my toes and would like to know how they're caused and how I can prevent them?

ANSWER: The soft corn is the result of wearing narrow shoes and having excessive foot perspiration. The pressure of the shoe and the moisture help in development of the soft corn. It is painful and usually inflamed. It is best to wear properly fitting shoes and keep the skin between the toes clean and dry. You can decrease pressure by keeping the toes separate with cotton of lamb's wool.

Rifle team 2nd

The University of Idaho rifle team placed second in their first match of the year October fifth in Seattle. Washington State University took first, while the University of Washington was third.

UI freshman Don Irons led all shooters with a 272 out of 300 possible in the three school meet. Vandal Brett Converse place fifth with a 238, while Don Boker hit 203 and Rich Wagner hit 200 to round out the team scoring. Mohamad Nabil also fired for the UI team.

"We generally fire better than that as a team," said Master Sergeant Don Wicks, the team coach. "But most of our best shooters are hunting elk right now."

Though the UI team is sponsored, supplied and coached by the Army ROTC, most of the members are not part of the ROTC program. Last year, the team was ranked in the top ten nationally and among the top five in ROTC schools.

To help defray costs, the rifle team is sponsoring a shotgun raffle. Tri-State and the Army ROTC are sponsoring the raffle for a $250 Remington 12 guage shotgun. Tickets are available at the Army ROTC offices in the west end of Memorial Gym. The drawing is October 31.

'Macklin' is sponsored in part by Twice Sold Tales, dealers in used books (882-8781). Just down from the Micro.

EARN OVER $1,000 A Month And Open the Door to a Top Engineering Job

How many corporations would be willing to pay you over $1,000 a month during your junior and senior years just so you'd join the company after graduation? Under a special Navy program we're doing just that. It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-College Program. And under it, you'll not only get great pay during your junior and senior years, but after graduation you'll receive a year of valuable graduate-level training that is not available from any other employer.

If you are a junior or senior majoring in math, engineering or physical sciences, find out more today. And let your career pay off while still in college.
