

Tutoring service gets allocation, back on its own feet

By Laurel Darrow
Of the Argonaut

According to ASUI Tutoring Director Judy Wallins tutoring is on steady ground again, with $10,000 and new administrative policies.

Tutoring had started the year with a "generous" budget of about $16,200, Wallins said. It was more than Tutoring had been given in previous years, and she had expected it to be adequate for the year. But there was an "unprecedented demand."

More than 300 students went to the Learning Resource Center for tutoring within the first five weeks of school, Wallins said. The average for the fall and spring semesters last year was 300-400.

"It took everyone by surprise. We all started the year thinking the allotment would be enough to meet the demand." Demand is higher because more students are aware that tutoring is available and the new class of freshmen seems to be intent on getting off to a good start academically, Wallins said.

Judging by the rate at which students were coming in for Tutoring at the first of the semester, Wallins projected that Tutoring would spend all but $5,000 of the entire year's allotment by the end of the fall semester.

She said Tutoring not only needed more money, it also needed definite policies to make it possible to limit the amount of tutoring available. At a recent meeting, the ASUI Senate gave Tutoring $10,000 and established new administrative policies.

These are the new policies:

- Students are now entitled to only one hour of tutoring a week.
- Whenever possible, students are assigned to small group sessions rather than one-on-one tutoring.
- Wallins can limit tutoring services offered in math, economics and accounting. Those departments offer free help-labs to their students.
- Students can buy additional tutoring time at the rate of $4 to $5 per hour.

Before the senate implemented those policies, Wallins had already been following some of them unofficially, and she said they slowed the demand.

Tutoring should be able to survive the year now, Wallins said. "We anticipate no difficulties."

All money received by Tutoring is spent on salaries for the tutors, she said. They are paid $4 to $5 per hour, depending on their experience and whether they are undergraduate or graduate students. Lowering their salaries to conserve funds is not an option, Wallins said. They already earn less than private tutors, who get $7 to $10 per hour, she said.

Tutors were given a pay increase two years ago, but the salaries have remained the same since then, she said. In addition to tutoring, the tutors must go through training, attend meetings and keep journals describing their meetings with the students.

Tutoring is definitely a worthwhile service for the ASUI, Wallins said. "It may be the only ASUI service that some students know about. It's a great service to the student."

Although departments such as math, economics and accounting offer help-labs, they do not duplicate the services of tutoring, Wallins said.

Math lab, for example, helps students with specific math problems. Tutoring, on the other hand, is an overall approach to the course.

Tutors are trained to tell whether students are having trouble with study skills or in the content area and provide the appropriate help, Wallins said. Tutors also watch for poor time management and bad reading habits.

Trail, Seid to run as ticket

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

The current ASUI vice president and pro tem announced their candidacy for ASUI president and vice president, respectively, in the ASUI general election to be held Nov. 20.

Mike Trail and Larry Seid decided to run together as a pair this weekend, and now the work begins.

"Petitions go out Wednesday morning," Trail said. "The first step is to get enough signatures to get on the ballot. I don't foresee that as any problem."

They will then be looking for people who would like to help them with their campaign.

"It's not like you have to vote for both of us if you vote for one," Trail said. "It's just that we'll be working together supporting each other's candidacy."

Seid, a junior in business management and a member of Delta Sigma Phi, was elected to the Senate last year. He was a member of the Government Operations and Appointments Committee (GOA) for two semesters, and is now serving as pro tem of the Senate and chair of the Ways and Means Committee.

Trail, a senior in finance/economics and president of Sigma Chi, has two years of ASUI experience. He was elected senator as a freshman and served on the Recreational Facilities Board. After Trail's re-election, he served as GOA chair and also pro tem. He ran for vice president on the same ticket with current ASUI President Jane Freund, and won in the November 1984 election.

Trail said running together on the same ticket has its advantages. "In terms of getting out and meeting people, two people can reach more."

Friel becomes new PCC

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

Jeff Friel, newly elected Political Concerns Committee chairman, says the ASUI group wants to get the Idaho legislators' opinions, not change them.

Friel, 19 and a UI political science major, was officially appointed chairman at last week's senate meeting. "The PCC's job is to get the students' voice down to the Idaho State Legislature in Boise," he said. Friel said his job is to make sure that happens.

His other duties include hiring and firing all PCC members, serving as a non-voting parliamentary head of the committee, spending and allocating the $513 budget and "keeping members in line".

Friel said he and Boyd Wiley,

ASUI lobbyist, have written a survey that will be sent out to all state legislators to get their views.

The PCC is taking a survey of students views on issues that will come up during the legislative session in order to get that voice down to Boise.

But Friel says the students have to do their part.

"Our general course of action for any piece of legislation that may come up is to try and get students to call or write. We want their voice to be personally brought to the legislature," he said. "There's a toll free number right now that very few people are aware of that people can leave messages and we think 10,000 messages or letters left on state reps' desks will be pretty convincing." He added a postcard with a short message of whether you support an issue or not is the best.

A Political Concerns chairman has to get students motivated, according to Friel. "Right now students don't know I'm alive, but I want to hear from them," he said.

He and the 13 other members of PCC will be visiting living groups and listening to students' political concerns. "We want to see everyone voting in the general elections and the ASUI elections.

"In the past UI students haven't been quite active enough," he said. "But when an issue hits close to home like the drinking age or higher education, they get involved."

Friel believes Idaho's drinking age and University of Idaho funding will be brought up during the session, as well as in-state tuition, the split board of education, the chancellorship and PIRG (Public Information Outreach Group).

The split board of education proposal includes having a board of education for lower education and one for higher education, according to Friel. The chancellorship proposal puts all state universities under one board.

"Under the split board, they would be asking for money for higher education as a whole. Under the chancellorship, it would be the chancellor going before the state board asking for money for the three universities and then the three universities arguing it out to see who gets what."

The bill that died in committee during last year's legislative session but came up again this year would essentially replace lobbyists and the PCC with PIRG. "PIRG will affect the students as we will not be able to pay lobbyists and students will be without representation. PIRG would be doing basically what PCC does but on a state-wide level."

Friel said PCC plans to put a poll in the Argonaut to reach off-campus students and a meeting will be called between off-campus students and PCC. "We need to get as many of those students involved as possible as I believe almost half of the student population is off-campus."

PCC members will visit Boise during the legislative session in either late January or February.

Friel said, "I strongly urge any person who is interested in serving on PCC to come and see me because I think it's important every student get involved with the legislature and ASUI."

Both Trail and Seid say they are running together because they can work together. "I don't agree with Larry on everything and he doesn't agree with me on everything, but we can work together well," Trail said.

They agree ASUI experience is important. "You can't just get someone in there who is green and expect them to handle situations decisively," Trail said.

But Seid commented, "I don't think the vice president position should be based strictly on ASUI experience. He needs to deal with interuniversity relations too. I've learned a lot in just this last year as pro tem."

Trail and Seid believe the ASUI has to be run more like a business organization rather than a political organization. "With a budget of almost a million dollars that's a lot of responsibility," Trail said.

"It's important to maximize revenue in departments," remarked Seid.

"Personally, I think we're the two most qualified people to hold the positions," Trail said. "It takes experience to deal with the state board and the administration. I'd hate to see a lot of knowledge and experience lost."

Seid commented he would not run for vice president unless he thought he was qualified for the job.

Trail agreed, "I wouldn't run unless I thought I could get elected."

Trail added, "I'd invite anybody to run and let the students decide who is most qualified."

KUOI needs money

By Nella Letizia
Of the Argonaut

KUOI-FM is in dire need of new equipment to replace some of the old and faulty items already existing at the station, according to Greg Meyer, KUOI station manager.

The student-operated station turned in a proposal to the ASUI Finance Committee on October 10 for $5-7,000 in replacement equipment in an effort to improve overall quality and to get the station back on its feet, Meyer said.

"They're all critical needs," he said. "We're not expanding our operation with this equipment."

KUOI, University of Idaho's 24-hour station, requires a monitor amplifier ($500), four new turntables ($1,200), a production mixer ($4,000), and two distribution amplifiers ($800), according to an assessment made by Greg Clifford, the station's chief engineer.

Regarding the turntables, the normal life expectancy is See KUOI, page 6

KUID loses power

By Nella Letizia
Of the Argonaut

KUID-TV lost its signal for 48 hours when a transmitter on Paradise Ridge burned out last Tuesday.

Russell Spain, KUID manager, said the station resumed broadcasting about 2:45 p.m. Thursday afternoon after repairs were finished on the transmitter.

Spain said the problem began Tuesday afternoon about 3 p.m. when a blower motor that cools the transmitter burned out. Normally, the blower motor has a fail safe circuit that detects a breakdown in the motor and will automatically shut off the transmitter, but the circuit had failed also, he said.

As a result, the transmitter tubes, sockets and finger stock (a ring-like part also connected to the transmitter tubes) overheated until they burned out and oral and visual transmission was cut off, Spain said.

The station already had a spare set of tubes, but the finger stock had to be ordered from New Jersey, Spain said. The parts arrived in Spokane late Wednesday afternoon, and the finger stock was ready by Thursday morning, he said.

COMMENTARY

Regents Review Douglas Jones

Last week's meeting of the UI Board of Regents/State Board of Education in Coeur d'Alene revolved around four issues:

- Effecting a $10.9 million holdback from the board's agencies, including the universities and colleges. This changes the nature of several interstate cooperatives, two of which will become de jure domain of the UI. Also passing a resolution calling for Idaho lawmakers to create a state budget reserve to prevent future spending holdbacks.

- Suggesting a package of four legislative bills to the governor and the law makers. One of the bills would increase the fee areas under which the state could charge students by narrowly defining tuition.

- Approving recommendations, based on a report by the Northwest Association of Colleges and Schools, on the state board's organization and policies.

- Reviewing the draft of the statewide, five-year plan for higher education in the state, sections I, II, and III.

Holdback: the board unhappily trimmed almost $11 million from its agency budgets in order to comply with what has become annual holdbacks.

However the board could not realistically apply the 2.5 percent holdback across-the-board because of contractual agreements it has with surrounding states dealing with interstate cooperative programs.

Two of such programs, Washington-Alaska-Montana-Idaho cooperative medical education program (WAMI) and Washington-Oregon-Idaho veterinary medicine cooperative education program (WOI), are based at the UI.

In the past, those programs, under the control of the board, have been considered statewide programs and hence were exempt from any holdbacks.

This time, however, promises of future control of the programs was given by the board to the host universities. In exchange, the universities would absorb the cut backs through their other operations.

The end result of all this was that the UI will receive control of WAMI and WOI for absorbing a mere $31,000 more in cuts than it would otherwise have had to do.

The UI will have to cut $1.27 million out of its operating budgets as a result of the holdback.

Definition of Tuition: the board is asking Idaho lawmakers to widely define the areas which can be called fees.

This action was taken because of increasing fears that universities might be sued by students for charging fees in areas traditionally thought of as tuition. Resident tuition is prohibited under the state's constitution.

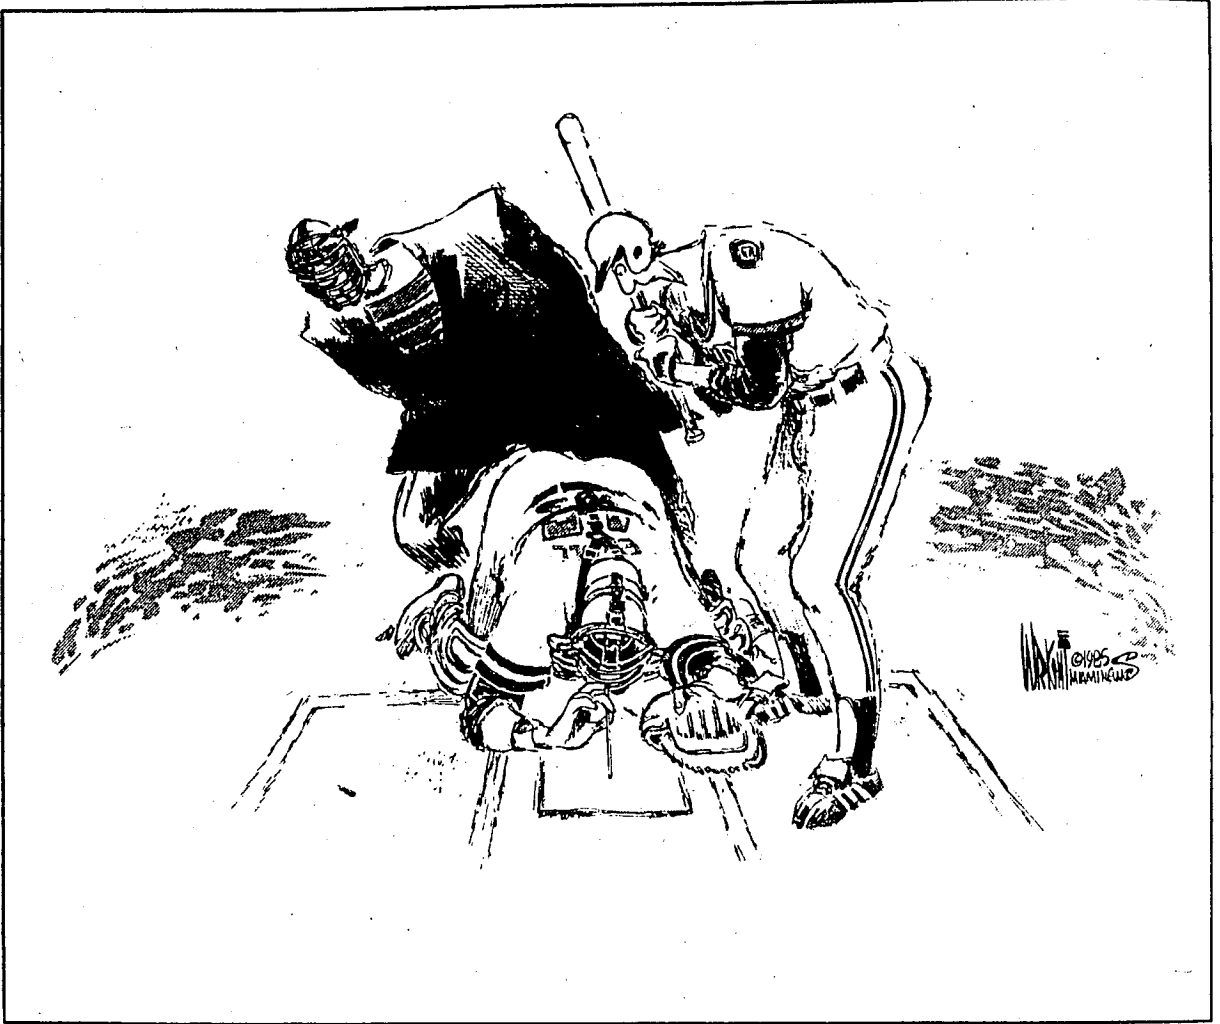

Since 1982, the board has been charging a fee labelled as an Institutional Maintenance Fee (IMF). The fee has come under legal question in recent years, especially last June when State Board member Bob Montgomery said in a meeting that he was surprised that the state had not been sued for its use of the fee.

Hence the board wants the definition of tuition to be the ambiguous and narrow, "the cost of instruction," while widely defining the areas that would be considered fees to include the IMF.

Northwest Association Report: last year the board's own organization and policies came under review by the Northwest Association of Colleges and Schools (NACS). The Report was critical of many aspects, such as the perception that the board's funding formula is based on the number of students enrolled.

For the most part the Board's recommendations (responses) were defensive.

Five-year plan: the board postponed discussion of this until the next meeting.

A thousand clocks ticking away Victoria Seever

Fear encircles your life like a parallel universe — everything from required course you're flunking to dark walkways on campus to which cancer you're most likely to get. There are a thousand anxious things that arise with you and the alarm clock. There are a thousand more in your restless sleep.

Fear with a known face wrinkles with the worry lines we can all trace. But it has always been "fear of the unknown" that sends a bolt of shock through our systems, paralyzing us in its path. A fear we can't counter because we don't know where it comes from or how it moves or how to move against it.

Today, it has a twin. The twin has a face and a name and an evil more malignant than a mere demon might devise. Today, you know a thing so terrible, that like a Medusa, you dare not look upon. A thing that by not looking at it, turns us to stone. And being stone blind and stone deaf and stone cold is desirable compared to squarely facing the thing.

It is not certain who or when conceived the thing, but it is given a birthdate, a birthplace and an unholy christening, twice over. You know it well — July 16, 1945. White Sands, New Mexico. Baptized in a conflagration of nuclear fire and an ever-after global tyranny. Its bloodline is pure terror, and it contaminates the blood of every living being.

Many of you are afraid to really call it by name, and so you just sense that it is "overwhelming." A thing so inescapably bizarre, you shroud yourselves into oblivion. When the final shock comes, your already dulled senses will feign surprise and helplessness to have protested annihilation.

You fear that's all that's left to comfort you.

No wonder so many stand in the path of nuclear holocaust as though its explosive flash had already burned the eyes out of you. Or as though radiation sickness had already chewed up your insides, your minds and the will to stop it.

Here we live in a teeming universe and have too erringly come upon the ultimate face of a weapon. In one everpressing profile, it is outflanking us on every side with planetary extinction. Nothing survives those nuclear fires — not man, not layers of atmosphere, not culture or seeds in the irradiated bedrock under a fallout of nuclear ash and winter.

The only other possibility is for us to disarm it. To purge it out of our sciences and politics. To tear away that one thing capable of worldwide obliteration, where all living creatures would fester over a common grave in a matter of days.

Ready or not, each of us has come of age under a fear that to know even vaguely is horrific. Fingertips are poised at the button where microseconds stand between us and the future. But we still have the power to hold it back, to cast it out. Holocaust does not have to be the last word.

Like a choice between fear and life, White Sands today includes a national monument and a wildlife refuge. Nations may stand apart in a maniacal inevitability of war, or nations may take refuge with each other in peace, and the knowledge there's something better to do than kill.

And where nations stand depends on you and I, standing against a fear with a face we know, and where that knowledge is an equitable advantage against it.

Correction

In the article last week headlined "Man attacked," the assailant was described as being 5 feet 4 inches but it should have been 5 feet 11 inches, short blond hair and a stocky build.

Any information as to who the assailant is, call the Moscow Police Department at 882-5551.

The date for when petitions for the senate, vice president and the president are due in the ASUI office was incorrectly reported in the Oct. 15 issue. It is Nov. 13.

Many made Wall possible to show

The exhibit of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial that took place last weekend in the UI Student Union could not have been more successful. Well over 5,000 people visited the exhibit, and many, many of them had very significant emotional experiences, from families of deceased veterans to Vietnam Vets who were able to discuss their experiences for the first time.

We wish to thank the press for their excellent coverage of this event, and the large crowds that resulted. We also wish to thank the following businesses, organizations, and individuals for their efforts in this project:

Disabled American Veterans of Lewiston Moscow and Coeur

Deficit: Bhagwan v. Ronnie

My first good laugh this semester from the Argonaut letters section finally occurred last Friday when I read Vivek Bakshi's (a/k/a Swami Yoga Chinmaya) letter of protest over a cartoon about Bagwan Shree Rajneesh.

Swami states that their commune is obviously in good financial standing because they're going to buy six more Rolls Royce cars! Wow! I only wish our president would have the wisdom to eliminate our budget problems by buying Rolls Royces. Then it wouldn't matter how big our deficit was because we would have more Rolls than any other country except possibly Saudi Arabia.

However, Swami says these six cars are not going to be the end, and since Bhagwan is already 86 cars ahead of Ronnie, the United States might be hard-pressed to keep up with this international economic power.

Seriously though, folks, I wonder where Bhagwan gets these highly-intelligent members who work to make the commune prosper so Bhagwan can buy more cars. I thought Uncle Sam took too much!

Oh! Bhagwan has a great scam going, though. During the day you work so he can buy cars and other luxuries of life, and at night, you worship him and bow to him. I suspect Bhagwan's IQ is higher than the combined IQ of his commune.

Perry digs digs

Madilane Perry, a UI doctoral candidate in anthropology, digs digs. She will talk about some of her archaeological excavations at noon today.

Over the past 10 years she has studied sites and artifacts found along the shores of Curlew Lake in the Okanogan Highlands of northeast Washington. She will discuss their significance and their relationship to the assemblages at Kettle Falls.

The talk is one of a series being sponsored by the UI Alfred W. Bowers Laboratory of Anthropology. It will be in Phinney Hall Room 200. To find the room, enter Phinney Hall at the arched door facing the Agricultural Sciences Building. The talk is free and open to the public.

It is against the law to nail signs on power poles in both Washington and Idaho.

John Buerger, division manager of the Washington Water Power Company in the Palouse Division, said the problem is more acute in the fall when poles are used for political and other types of advertising.

"The danger to utility crews results from unseen nails and tacks," he said. "On some occasions, linemen have fallen when their climbing spikes slip on nails," Buerger said.

It is a misdemeanor to nail signs on poles, and the prosecuting authorities may file charges if violators continue the practice, he said.

Positions are now available with starting dates between Nov. 1 1985 and April 30, 1986. The deadline for receipt of applications for positions beginning in January and February in Nov. 15. Later deadlines apply for positions starting in March and April and are explained in the application materials. An additional 700 to 800 positions for the 1986 summer and fall seasons will be announced in Dec.

While they are carrying out their assignments, volunteers will also receive an allowance to cover living expenses and travel expenses to and from the area in which they serve. In addition, free housing will be provided at their work area.

Volunteers wanted

The Student Conservation Association is seeking approximately 200 volunteers to participate in educational work experiences this winter and spring at more than 75 national parks, national forests and other conservation areas throughout the United States.

Positions are filled on a competitive basis. Although some positions require volunteers with specialized training in forestry, natural sciences or recreation management, others are open to all students with an interest in participating.

Those interested should send a postcard requesting the "1986 PFRA Program List" and an application to the Student Conservation Association, PO Box 550C, Charlestown, NH, 03603 or call (603)826-5741 for these same materials.

Repairs for the transmitter cost KUID $5,000 and would have cost $17,000 without the spare tubes, Spain said. KUID could have transmitted at 5:30 a.m. Thursday morning, but decided to wait until the fall safe circuit was fixed.

"We didn't want this whole process to happen again," he said. "We can't afford it."

Spain said KUID contacted some cable companies and the viewers to notify them of the problem, but the station still received quite a few calls.

"Normally, the kind of calls we get is 'Why can't I get KUID today,'" he said. "Usually, the viewers are very understanding when we have a technical problem like that."

five years, Meyer said. KUOI has been using their turntables for ten years and two have already quit.

Scott Speelman, chairman of the ASUI Finance Committee, said he would like to see KUOI receive all the needed equipment, but he does not know what ASUI will do. Last spring, most of the senators were not in support of KUOI, but since Meyer became manager, support for the station has increased because of KUOI's apparent improvement, he said.

Speelman submitted a bill Monday morning which would appropriate $7,000 to cover the cost of the needed equipment.

"The equipment needs are critical and I would really like to see this bill go through the senate," Speelman said.

The Finance Committee can not consider Speelman's bill until Wednesday when the Senate send the bill to committee.

ASUI President, Jane Freund, said the recent ASUI shortfall of approximately $20,000 may make the Senate conservative about granting money to departments who request funding. KUOI should get most of the equipment, she said.

ASUI currently has $25,000 in the general fund, $10,000 of which should remain in the fund as a minimum balance, Freund said.

"I think the Senate is very receptive to the needs of KUOI," Freund said.

Last summer, Meyer submitted a proposal for $39,000 in new equipment, before the ASUI shortfall became apparent. Compared to the now proposed $6500 in equipment, KUOI has pared away 83 percent of its original request.

Some of the original equipment requested that is not included in the current request are an IBM-Personal computer with a link to student publications system ($3,000), for catalog and inventory of the record collection; and a remote pickup unit, antennas, and remote coordination package ($5,200), so that KUOI could broadcast from anywhere without a telephone line hookup.

UI splits wishbone for 38-0 victory

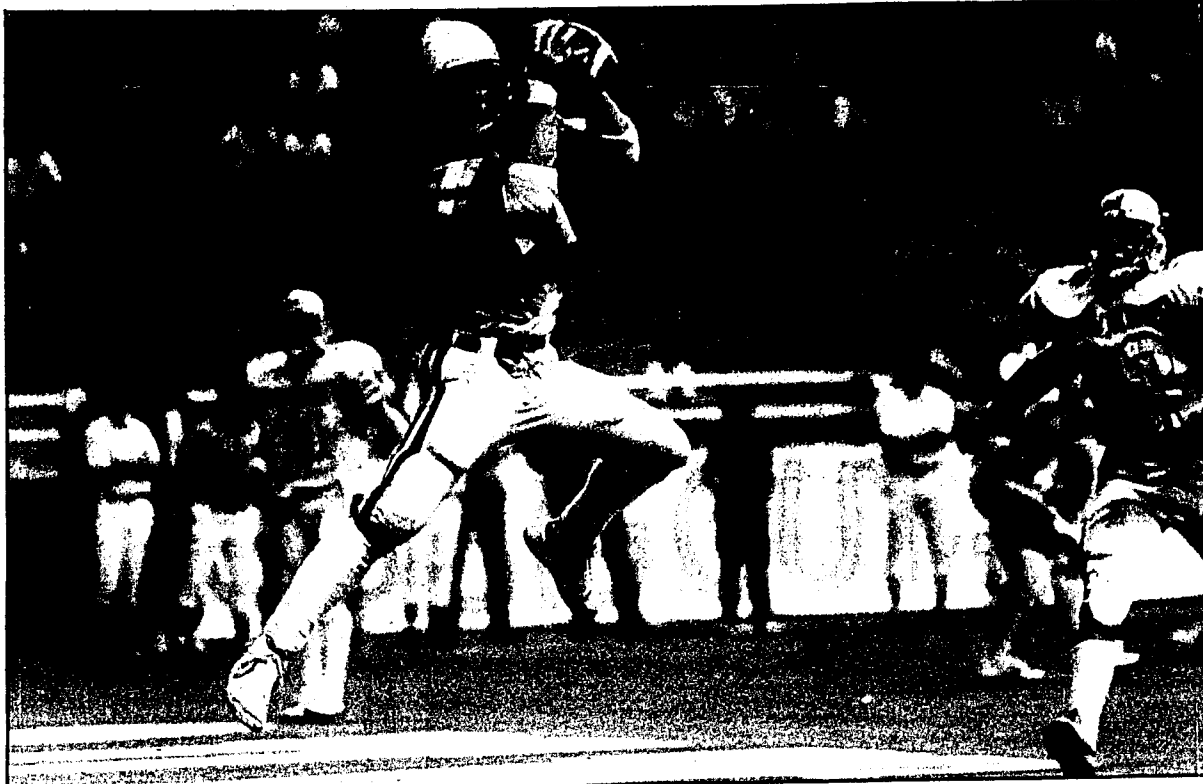

By John Hecht
Of the Argonaut

The fourth-ranked Idaho Vandals continued winning by running and passing over the surprisingly lackluster Montana Grizzlies 38-0 Saturday in the Kibbie Dome. It was Dennis Erickson's 29th victory, making him the winningest coach in Idaho football history, and the first time ever that Idaho has won six in a row.

Idaho tallied 598 yards total offense, becoming the top team in the country (493 yards/game). The defense, led by inside linebacker Tom Hennessey's eight tackles (five unassisted), held the Grizzlies to 201 total yards.

The week before, against Idaho State, Montana's wishbone offense rushed for 350 yards, scoring 35 points. Saturday they managed only 147 yards on the ground, and 44 in the air. This was Idaho's first shut-out of the season, and the first time Montana has been blanked.

Idaho QB Rick Sloan, making only his second start, threw 37 times for 25 completions and two interceptions, and racked up 384 yards. His favorite targets were tight end Scott Auker (nine receptions, 118 yards), and wide receiver Eric Yarber (seven for 135). WR Brent Bengen caught six for 96.

Idaho runners cut through the Montana defense with 211 net yards. Tailback Fred Lloyd, just activated from red-shirt status, ran 16 times for 67 yards and three touchdowns. Greg Dial took the ball 12 times for 73, a 6.1 average.

Neither team scored in the first quarter, but Idaho uncorked 24 points to close out the half. On its second possession, Idaho made it to UM 3-yard line, but a Sloan pass was intercepted and run back to the 20. The other interception was in Idaho's first series in the third quarter when Sloan was tossing from Montana's 17.

Freshman kicker Brian Decicio tied a 1-AA and Big Sky accuracy record when he chipped a 36-yard three-pointer to end the first half. He is now 12 for 12 in the field goal department. Idaho is on top in the Big Sky with a 4-0-0 record (6-1-0 overall). The Vandals meet Idaho State in Pocatello next Saturday. The Bengals' offense is averaging 492.3 yards per game, second in the country behind Idaho.

Vandals run well in Seattle

The Idaho men's and women's cross country team enjoyed good meets at the Seattle Invitational this past weekend.

The Idaho women placed third with 89 points while the men were fourth with 111.

Leading the charge for the women were senior Janet Beaudry coming in eighth place, freshman Kathy Wall with a tenth place finish, and senior Sherrie Crang, 12th. This trio has been the backbone of this year's Vandal cross country team, but have exchanged finishes in each meet. Rounding out the five scoring places for the Lady Vandals are Jackie Mount and Missy Madsen, finishing in 19th and 40th.

Coach Scott Lorek said, "I was really pleased with the running of everyone. We're in a good position heading into our conference meet. Jackie and Missy are both coming off nagging illnesses and injuries, so I'm really proud of the way they both ran. The top three have been doing it all this year and still are."

The men enjoyed their best meet in recent years with the fourth place finish. The top finishers for the Vandals were Tom Bohannon, 16th place, Robin Mein 21st, James Tennant 22nd, Tony Theirault 23rd and Chris Schulte 29th. The key for the men was the close split between top Idaho runner Bohannon and number five man Schulte. The 40 second difference kept the places close together, which enabled the Vandals to keep the point total down.

Lorek, who is coaching both teams this fall, was very pleased with the men.

"This was the best race I've ever seen an Idaho team run, he said. "They ran mentally tough and kept close together. That is really a key in cross-country. I think we gained some respect from this race."

The race marked the first time in history that the Vandals have beaten Oregon State. The top three teams were Montana, Evergreen Harriers and the University of Washington.

The women now have two weeks to prepare for the MWAC championships in Bozeman on Nov. 2, while the men travel to Spokane to run in the Wardesmere Invite this Saturday.

Just passing by

Greg Kilmer

I realize we're not the big time, but I'll take it any ol' day.

I would be more than willing to put up my next month's beer allowance to anyone that can come up with a more exciting conference than our Big Sky. Even those big guys, Pac-10, Big-10, Big-8, SEC, or the ACC (scratch them, they're all basketball) can't touch us when it comes to excitement. Those three-yards-and-a-cloud-of-dust guys are sickening when they're behind and trying to catch up.

The main reason I would be floating in beer for the next month would be simple—the Big Sky Conference puts it up and up and up.

Excluding that dynamic wishbone of Montana, the 1-AA 'Sky lives by the pass. The coaches in this league must know something; look who has been in the championship tilt the last five years or so. The Big Sky has been a headache for ol' Roy Kidd and his Eastern Kentucky boys for years now.

People in this football-crazed nation would be in awe if they got to wake up on Saturday morn and catch three and a half hours of "Sky Ball" on the tube.

Maybe that's why the networks stay away; our games last so long. Those freaks that make up all those wild stats about the gridiron game say that the average game runs three hours and nine minutes. I have a funny feeling that our league bumped up that average a touch.

Although great for the football fan, it's hell on the sports-journalist. I haven't seen guys look at their watches more since the last time I went to a Catholic wedding.

They start Big Sky games early, so that they don't keep those cute little ball-boys up past their bedtimes and those not-so-cute sports writers under their deadline times.

I've been in press boxes from Missoula to Corvallis, sometimes for longer than three and a half hours. That's a lot of hot dogs.

After that a sports writer has to go talk to a real talkative losing coach, a sometimes rambling winning coach and a lot of 250 pound college athletes.

Then he must pick up the game's stats and then put together what the hell happened and send it out over the wire before the dreaded 11:00 p.m. deadline. God, what am I getting myself into.

This past weekend, even though being one of those, "If the Cougars were playing the Russians, I don't know who I would cheer for" guys, I attended the WSU/UCLA game.

After watching the Pac-10 clash, complete with Bill the Beerman of Ranier fame, I returned to 'Scow for the Grizzley game. I know I'm prejudiced, but as far as excitement for the buck goes, the Idaho game is a steal - for paying customers that is. My lovely slowly-getting-to-be-a-football-fan girlfriend treated me to the Coug loss, and my press credentials got me into the Vandal bombardment.

Sorry to all the Coug fans, but the RPMs aren't exactly purring; give me the "L.A.Y. it on 'em" offense (Linehan, Auken, Yarber) anytime.

So, no bitching out there about nothing to do in Moscow, hey guys? We've got two more damn-good home games with the possibility of a play-off game in Kibbie's tax write-off, so let's show the Vandies we appreciate a little excitement.

Plus when those Cougars cross the border and invade one of our watering holes, you can crank up that oldie, but a goodie, "Don't Give a Damn About the Whole State of Washington, I'm From IDAHO".

Wiese week's winner

Pat Wiese is this week's winner of the Tri-State/Argonaut "Pick the Winners" contest.

Wiese correctly picked 17 of the possible 19 contests. The Georgia/Vanderbilt game was thrown out because of the tie ending.

Wiese's only misses were West Virginia's victory over Boston College and Miami's surprise victory over Oklahoma.

Arg sports editor Greg Kilmer went 15 of 19, putting him at 89 for 135.

Kilmer selected this week's pics, putting emphasis on the Notre Dame/USC classic.

"It's always a dandy and even though ND is struggling, they're at home," Kilmer said. "The Irish by eight."

Entries can be turned in at the Tri-State Sporting Good's counter before noon on Friday.

Women gain 2-game split

By Chris Schulte
Of the Argonaut

The Lady Vandal volleyball team split their MWAC conference matches over the weekend, by knocking off Boise State in four games, 9-15, 15-13, 13-15, 15-4, and dropping a tough match to menacing Portland State, 9-15, 13-15, and 13-15. The split leaves the Vandals at 3-2 in conference play and 15-9 overall.

On Friday night the Idaho women gave Portland State three good games, only to come up short in each game. Head coach Pam Bradetich commented, "We found ways to lose instead of finding ways to win. We gave Portland State a little and they took a lot. That's the mark of a good team."

The Vandals were led by freshman Robin Reslock with 14 kills, and senior Kelley Nelly, who played a great match with 38 assists, 7 kills, 14 digs and two aces. Nelly was named MWAC Player of the Week by league coaches.

Despite the loss, Bradetich said, "It was disappointing to not win one game, or take them into five games. We outplayed them in many areas of the game. We'll be anxious to play them again."

Saturday afternoon turned out to be a different story in Memorial Gym. The Idaho ladies came onto the court and immediately took control of the match. The Vandals took games one and two, 15-10, 15-13, but lost momentum and game three, 13-15. The Vandals came out of the huddle in game four to thump the Broncos, 15-4 and win the match, 3-1.

Leading the attack game were Robin Jordan (15 kills, 8 digs, 8 blocks), Laura Burns (14 kills, 7 digs), Robin Reslock with 11 kills and Melinda Varns with 9 kills.

Bradetich had nothing but praise for the senior setter. "Kelley played great all weekend. She's attacking well and setting very consistently." Nelly's total statistics for the weekend were 15 kills, 87 assists, 4 service aces and 25 digs with a .542 kill average.

Bradetich commented on the Boise State match, "We played a good all-around game. We passed real well, had a good transition game, and outthit them." She continued, "We were much more aggressive and also more relaxed."

Fisher to speak on the sexual revolution, evolution

By Nella Letizia
Of the Argonaut

Marriage, family, divorce, jealousy, promiscuity and love are part of a sexual revolution that began eight million years ago, according to anthropologist Helen Fisher.

How this sexual revolution caused human behavior and social institutions to be formed will be discussed in Fisher's lecture and slide presentation titled, "The Sex Contract: The Evolution of Human Behavior."

Fisher will speak tomorrow night at 7:30 in the UI SUB Ballroom.

Fisher's lecture is based on a book by the same title. According to the book, the sexual revolution began when human prehistoric ancestors developed the ability to walk on two legs. With this development, females became increasingly dependent on males, and a "sex contract" was formed.

The contract led to the development of language, government, religion and human social behaviors, according to Fisher.

Barry Bonifas, UI campus program coordinator, said Fisher is taking a more scientific approach to the conventional ideas of love, marriage, family and other human behaviors and how they have evolved.

"This is her specialty," Bonifas said. "This is a topic she's been developing over the years."

Fisher has had good participation and positive responses from students at her past speaking engagements on other university campuses, Bonifas said.

"She has gotten excellent reviews," he said. "I think her presentation will be well received here."

Bonifas said there might be some debate over Fisher's discussion of evolution, but students don't necessarily have to agree with her.

"Any thinking person should be open to ideas and theories," he said.

The UI sociology and anthropology departments are very interested in the presentation, Bonifas said. They are familiar with Fisher's theories and her book is used in some of the classes, he said.

On Wednesday and Thursday of next week, Fisher will hold a press conference and an autograph session. She will also visit a few sociology and anthropology classes, Bonifas said.

Fisher is a research associate at the American Museum of Natural History, chairwoman of the anthropology section of the New York Academy of Sciences, and a professor at New York University.

Fisher received two awards this past fall for her work, the Margaret Mead Award and the American Anthropologist Award, according to Bonifas.

She was also contracted for a Public Broadcasting System series last week, and appears monthly on the "Today Show" to discuss the evolution of human behavior.

ASUI Productions learned more about Fisher from lecture agencies, who send information about speakers working on the college lecture circuit, Bonifas said.

Foreigner, Cafferty find fans in Pullman

By Bryan Clark
Of the Argonaut

As the lights went down last Saturday night for the Foreigner/John Cafferty concert, the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum was still only about three-quarters full. As the opening act, John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band, took the stage, the audience did not seem to have arrived yet.

However, two songs into their set, the Beaver Brown Band kicked into "On The Dark Side" from the Eddie and the Cruisers sound track, and the previously languid audience seemed to finally come alive. All the desirable seats in the arena were filled with cheering fans, singing along to the group's first big hit.

This intensity, which reminded one more of a crowd from Detroit or some other "rockin'" city, continued through the rest of John Cafferty's performance and manifested itself fully when the headline act, Foreigner, came out.

While John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band put on an act that would be decidedly hard to follow, Foreigner proved their mettle in style. They led off their set with several Foreigner classics from the group's early years: "Feels Like The First Time," "Cold As Ice," and "Dirty White Boy," got the crowd into the show again after Cafferty left the stage. After eight years, Foreigner has not lost the initial intensity of those first records when playing live.

With this opening to their show they provided a smattering of material from their latest album, Agent Provocateur, in-

As the last notes of "Urgent," from the 4 album faded, the crowd at the coliseum was obviously not ready to leave just yet. They cheered, stamped, yelled, and screamed until Foreigner came back out for not one, but two encore performances.
