

ASUI gets money back

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

The ASUI General Reserve is $19,000 richer than it was last week.

The new figure of $23,264 follows a meeting yesterday between ASUI President Jane Freund and Financial Vice-president Dave McKinney.

The GR had been $4,264 after the UI budget office took out $38,000 to pay off the ASUI entertainment deficit. The Senate had approved a bill for only $19,000.

Freund's agreement with McKinney to split payment of the entertainment deficit has been confirmed, she said. One-half of the deficit will be paid this fiscal year and the balance of $19,000 next year.

Freund said, "There was miscommunication between Mr. McKinney and Mike (Trail) and Larry (Seid) and I. It wasn't such a horrible miscommunication that the GR could not be put back to the $24,000."

She said the miscommunication was over the matter of how the half of the entertainment deficit would be paid.

"Mr. McKinney came up with some ideas (of paying the debt) that sound really good. I don't want to comment on them until I do some work on them," she said.

In addition, Freund said the Administration has agreed to give the Tutoring Services program an additional $5,000.

Senate may let students vote on 'Star Wars'

By Megan Guido
Of the Argonaut

Students will vote on Star Wars as well as candidates at the election poles next week if the ASUI Senate passes a referendum this Wednesday.

Sen. Elliot Skolnick introduced the referendum which asks students whether or not the UI should accept federal money to research Star Wars (the Strategic Arms Initiative).

It needs a two-thirds vote of approval by the Senate to get on the ballot. If the Senate does not pass it and ten percent of the student population signs a petition in favor of placing the referendum on the ballot, President Jane Freund must call a special election within two weeks. "I think the senate realizes if they don't pass it and ten percent of the student body was petitioned, the president would have to call a special election," Skolnick said. "The referendum is cheaper and easier and people would be going to ballot anyway."

Skolnick said he made the referendum so students can voice their opinion on Star Wars.

"And hopefully, if they're expected to voice their opinion, they'd go out and get some information on it," he said. "Obviously, as our President (Reagan) has been talking the last few weeks, it takes a lot to become informed."

Skolnick said no matter what the result of the vote on the Star Wars referendum, it will be presented to Faculty Council and the Administration.

"I'm trying to make it a local issue, to let people know it will affect the University of Idaho," he said.

Skolnick explained what Star Wars is. "It's supposedly a defensive system that would stop incoming missiles, using several different forms of technology, some that are available and some that are not," he said. "Which in the President's (Reagan) words, would make nuclear weapons obsolete."

Skolnick said students should care about Star Wars because it puts professors and students in what he calls "a moral and ethical dilemma".

There was recently a petition sent to ten departments in Science and Engineering on the UI campus opposing the acceptance of any federal money to research Star Wars. According to Phil Deutchman, UI professor of Physics, 41 people signed the petition.

"Funds can come into a department and there are people in that department that won't accept it, which can polarize the department and ostracize certain people in it," Skolnick said.

He said the results of the referendum may "lend moral support to professors who signed the petition not to accept funds."

"People think if you don't want the money, you're against research," Skolnick said. "That's not my point."

He said much of the research done on Star Wars by universities will be termed classified and will not be revealed in public conferences.

"There's not a large vast hole of money," Skolnick said. "If money goes toward Star Wars, it's got to come out of something else, such as education."

He said the cost of the Star Wars system is equivalent to $4,000 for every man, woman and child in the United States. The latest census report estimates the total population of the United States, including armed forces overseas, to be 238 million. "And some people estimate the cost will rise to one trillion dollars," he said.

Skolnick said, "What's come out in the paper is what we do with Star Wars will be in violation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972."

In addition to the referendum, Skolnick introduced a resolution proposing the Senate take a stand on whether UI should accept federal funds to research Star Wars.

Language barrier: problem for many

By Michael Haberman

Editor's note: this article is the first of a two part series dealing with the problems that foreign students encounter while studying at the UI.

When Li Quanzhi read "B.S. doesn't help your grade" on a test during his first semester at the UI he didn't know what it meant.

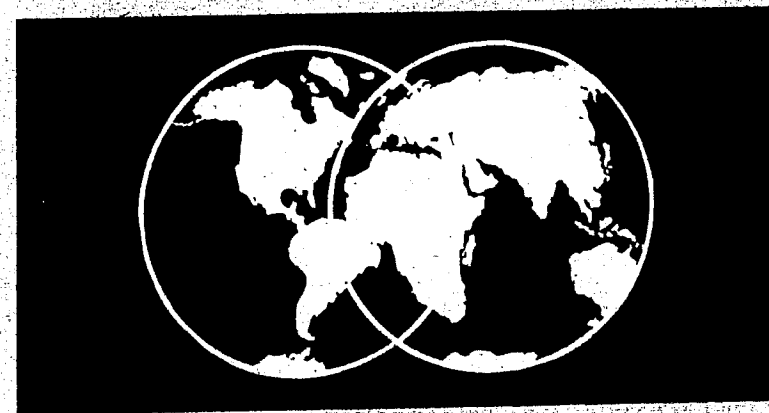

He had to ask the instructor, and the class got a big laugh.

Ahmad Rezvani was drinking tea with English-speaking friends soon after his arrival here several years ago. He burned his tongue, but told his friends he had burned his language. "Tongue" and "language" are the same word in the Iranian language.

Donato Vasques' wife worked as a lawyer in the Dominican Republic. Here her husband must read the mail, pay the bills, and act as her interpreter as she tries to get to know Americans. She is unable to work or talk with her neighbors, and while she struggles her children pick up the new tongue easily.

The barriers of language and culture affecting the 240 UI foreign students and their families run the gamut. Students who have worked hard on their English skills may be unable to understand lectures when they arrive here, and wives unable to speak English at all may live in a world of isolation for the long hours their husbands are in school. There are currently no female international students with dependent families at the UI.

Cultural differences can lead to unnecessary hurt feelings and lack of understanding, but language deficiency can lead to problems with survival, both at the university and in Moscow. All international students must pass the "Test of English as a Foreign Language," or TOEFL, to be accepted here. But many who pass the test still face a tough struggle.

Jack Cooper, UI adviser for international students, said grammar scores on the test are generally excellent, reading scores good and writing acceptable. The problem lies in hearing the language.

"The biggest thing is that their ear is not tuned to English. They just don't hear it," he said. The problem is greatest in the first semester.

Li, a bacteriology graduate student from mainland China who has been at the UI almost two years now, agrees.

"The first half year I had a hard time," Li said. He had trouble understanding lectures and taking exams.

"I knew what the test asked, but if you don't know the language you can't write it out, and you get a big zero," he said. Li made it through his first semester without recording lectures on tape, which he thought would take too much time. He forced himself to understand the instructor, and spent a lot of time consulting the dictionary. He said things come a lot more easily now.

The dictionary of Donato Vasques is also well-worn. The 34-year-old Dominican is a graduate student in forestry.

"All of us (international students) in the U.S. have to make triple the effort of the American students," Vasques said. He also has had trouble understanding professors.

"They talk in jargon. What does it mean?" he asked.

They want your blood

College students have a rare opportunity to be pampered, babied, escorted, and even fed cookies—all for helping someone you will never know.

If this sort of treatment appeals to you, then perhaps you should give blood.

The blood drive is going on today and tomorrow from 12:00-4:00 and on Thursday from 9:00-1:00 on the second floor of the SUB in the Appaloosa Room, just look for a lot of smiling faces and friendly chatter. It is best if you sign up for a time at the SUB Information Desk.

In order to donate, you must be between 17 and 66 years of age, weigh at least 110 lbs., be in good health, and have eaten a good meal within four hours of donating.

In order to avoid the chance of spreading AIDS via blood, some people are asked not to donate. These include any male who has had any sexual contact with another male since 1977, any Haitian who immigrated to the U.S. since 1977, and anybody who has spent time in Haiti or Africa since 1977. Anyone who has travelled to Haiti or Africa should check with the Red Cross Nursing Staff (342-4500) before donating.

The Red Cross wishes to stress that you cannot get AIDS by donating blood, since new needles are used on each person.

The Snake River Regional Blood Service is the total blood supplier for 52 hospitals in this region. They service 35 counties in Idaho, six counties in Eastern Oregon, and three counties in Eastern Washington.

Each day they collect 120 pints of blood from the mobile system and 40 pints in the center. Last year they collected 38,195 pints which made 82,902 different components from these units.

The blood you donate can be divided into four different basic components. The blood can be kept as whole blood which would be used in emergency situations, or the red cells can be taken out and used for surgery patients and people with anemia. The plasma can be separated and used for burn patients or as a volume expander, and the platelets can be used for people with diseases like leukemia.

Star Wars video

The Union of Concerned Scientists (UCS) is presenting "From Trinity to Star Wars", a nationwide video conference on nuclear arms control.

The public is invited to view the recorded version on Nov. 14, 7:00 to 9:00 p.m., in the Forestry building, room 10, on the UI campus. It can also be viewed on Channel 8 at the same time.

The panel consists of Ambassador Johnathon Dean; head of the US delegation to NATO Warsaw Pact Force Reduction Negotiations, 1978-1981; the Honorable Albert Gore Jr., US Senator from Tennessee; Dr. Paul Bracken, author of "Command and Control of Nuclear Forces"; Dr. Henry Kendall, professor of Physicians at MIT and chair of Union of Concerned Scientists.

ASUI election nears

The candidates forum for all senatorial candidates is tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the Appaloosa Lounge of the SUB. The forum for presidential and vice presidential candidates will be held Nov. 14 at 7 p.m. in the Appaloosa Lounge also.

The current list of people who have taken out petitions for ASUI executive offices as of Nov. 11, 1985 is as follows: President: Mike Trail; Gino White; Andy Hazzard. Vice President: Larry Seid; Jim Pierce; David Dose.

The following are those people who have taken out petitions to run for Senate: Paul Allee, Norm Semanko, Kelli Kast, Wade Howland, Paula Evans, Bradley Montgomery, John Vanderpool, Karma Metzler, Reagan Davis; Kim Ackerman; Jaun Butler; Richard Burke; Edmund Orcutt.

All petitions are due in the ASUI office by tomorrow, Nov. 13.

Freshmen get advising

By Erin Fanning
Of the Argonaut

The new freshman advising program is in operation but results will not be seen until spring, according to George Simmons, associate vice president of academic affairs.

The number of freshman back next semester will show how successful the new program is, he said. The cumulative effect of the program will also be monitored over the next 3-4 years, he said.

The program was devised as a result of studies stating that an increasing number of freshman drop out of college. Students with a D or F in any core class were called by their college and asked to meet for advising.

Advisors will discuss ways to improve the student's performance. Helping the students organize their time is one way the advisor will aid the student. A schedule for 7:30 a.m.-11:30 p.m. will be organized by the advisor and student.

Life Science Building nears completion

By Michael Haberman
Of the Argonaut

New and remodeled laboratories, a greenhouse and a large animal housing area will allow biology to be taught here as it never has been before, biology department head Arthur Rourke said last week.

The improvements are part of a $10.6 million construction project to remodel the old Life Science Building and construct a new facility. The two buildings are connected by a glass-enclosed walkway.

The complex will be shared by the Biology Department of the College of Letters and Science and the Bacteriology and Biochemistry Department of the College of Agriculture, Rourke said.

Rourke said safety problems in the old labs prevented his department from teaching science as it wished to. Many experiments and demonstrations could not be carried out because of a lack of equipment and the old, unsophisticated labs.

The project will provide improved venting for gasses, more sterile areas for growing cells and a lot more space. Project superintendant Lynn O'Neal said new and remodeled space totals 86,000 square feet.

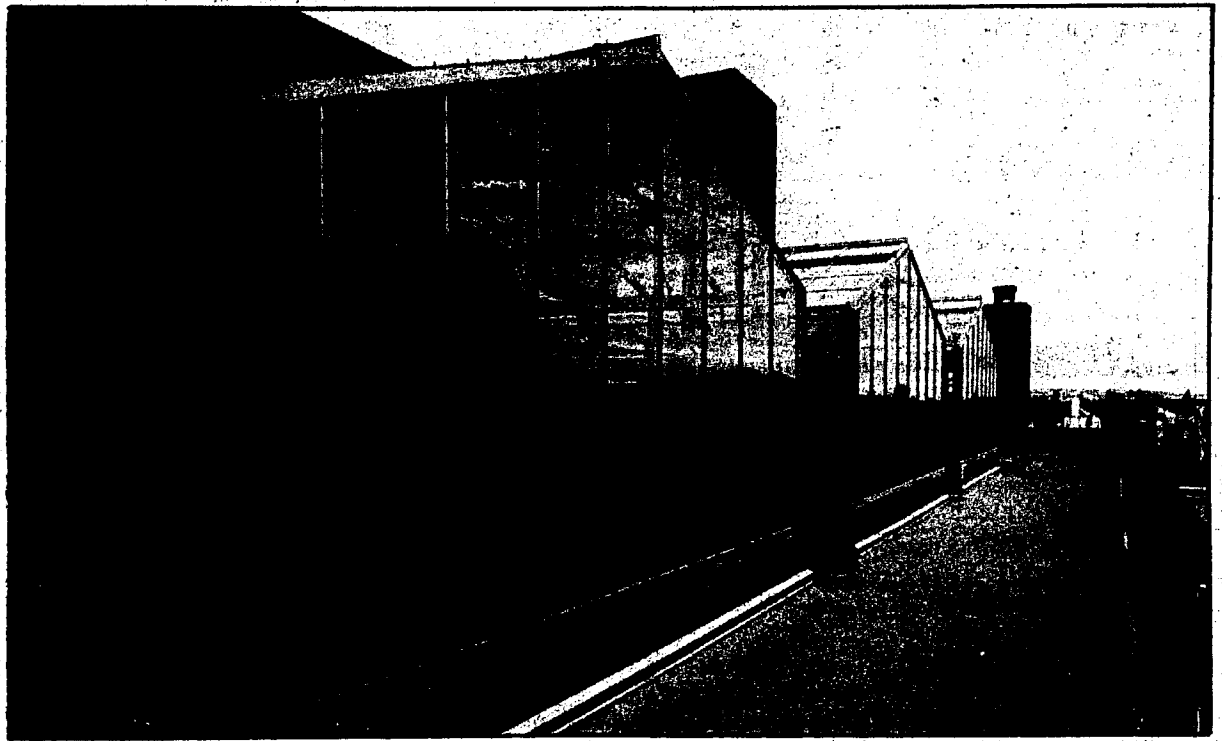

The greenhouse and a large animal lab will also help make the lives of UI biologists easier. Rourke said his department uses greenhouses near the Wallace Complex, but distance is a problem. Plants can't be moved from the greenhouse to the Life Science Building in cold weather.

The new animal housing will allow researchers using animals to more easily gain grants, Rourke said. Research involving animals is sensitive and closely monitored, so an up-to-date animal lab will allow greater freedom in planning projects for teaching and research, he said.

Skunks, rabbits, beaver, muskrats and ferrets are some of the research animals Rourke expects will inhabit the facility. He said there will also be an area for observation of animal behavior.

Rourke said the new building will have a big impact on the more than 600 students who annually take Biology 100, a course for non-majors.

"We'll be able to teach the Biology 100 students differently than we have in the past," he said. Improvements include the use of videotaping equipment, which will allow experiments and procedures to be filmed for students, helping them to understand before they try themselves. If the procedure is too complex for students or if equipment is limited the video will allow students a closer look than they had before.

Younger than ever, KUOI-FM turns 40

Your "Student Stereo 89.3," KUOI-FM, will celebrate its 40th anniversary this Friday. A gala and festive fundraiser will be held Saturday, and you should be there to help celebrate.

The definition of "middle-age" is usually a function of how old the speaker is. It is also a matter of behavior. But like a vintage bottle of cabernet, KUOI is continuing to mature and improve.

Its beginning was humble. It started as a two-watt transmitter, and used WWP lines to carry the signal around campus. In 1968, KUOI signed on the air at 89.3 on the FM education band with a 10-watt mono signal. Finally, in 1978, after several years of politics and construction, the station proudly announced "50-watt stereo with the Dolby difference," which was the most advanced signal in the Inland Empire at the time.

Since 1967, the station has broadcast nightly an album in its entirety. Its late, lamented sister station, KUID-FM, had a similar program. Listeners heard about 700 new albums a year between the two stations. KUOI continues this valuable service.

In 1973, KUOI began broadcasting 24-hours a day, and except for vacation and maintenance periods, the station has been broadcasting continually ever since.

The heart of KUOI's programming has been the music, selected from a library of about 18,000 albums, and played by disc jockeys who are primarily volunteers, and who represent a wide range of majors.

These students also represent an incredibly wide range of tastes and musical interests. No other radio station in the Inland Empire has exposed its listeners to more new groups and styles of music. It is the mission of KUOI to present new musical ideas, to expose and educate its audience to music which can't be, or wouldn't be heard on the commercial stations. It does it extremely well.

KUOI has broadcast live from Blue Mountain music festivals, Renaissance Fairs, ASUI Senate meetings and political forums. Local musicians have performed in the station's lobby, which also doubles as its studio. It has broadcast registration day live. Its disc jockeys have provided music for dances in nightclubs, at regional high schools and for living groups.

And like the Argonaut, all of this has been accomplished without an "official adviser." KUOI is an independent medium funded by students, staffed by students, intended for students.

A community radio station is a singular treasure. It becomes an extension of the imagination and vision of its leaders, its staff and its listeners. Recognize how fortunate we are to have such a station, and join the Argonaut in saying, "Happy Birthday, KUOI. And many, many more." — John Hecht

KBSU should remain a student station

What does it feel like to have a radio antenna inserted in a biologically improbable location? Ask the students at Boise State, where the station they founded, built and continue to fund has been taken away from them by the university president, and placed under "adult management."

KBSU went on the air in the mid-70s, with the mission to serve the students and community with alternative radio. It is now broadcasting 24-hours a day, with a listenership from Mountain Home to Ontario, OR. It is managed by students for students.

The BSU students fund the station with a dedicated fee, $28,000 this year, and its fundraising drive brought in pledges of another $25,000 from its listeners.

But apparently such programming and support does not phase BSU President John Keiser. He has appointed Lee Scanlon, the station's "adviser," to be the station manager. This is in preparation of somehow gathering funds to "upgrade" the station with enough permanent staff (of which none can be students) to qualify for federal money. This money would make it possible for KBSU to become a National Public Radio certified station, and presumably program "fine arts" or whatever.

KBSU management and BSU student leaders have protested this takeover, and are doing what they can to bring back student management. Keiser being the autocrat that he is, it is likely this issue will need to go to the State Board of Education for resolution.

If matters go that far, it will be an interesting test between the board's desire to give its presidents administrative discretion and its historical commitment to student media independence. — John Hecht

Macklin vanishes

Argonaut investigative cartoonist Mac Macklin's luck has apparently run out. Today's strip is probably the last in the long-running dramatic saga of one student's odyssey through the ivy-covered halls of academia.

Biographer Mike Mundt, who claims no knowledge of Macklin's present whereabouts, said there are rumors Macklin received notice he is in danger of graduating this semester.

The UI Registrar's office has declined to comment on the matter, citing privacy regulations and confidentiality of student records.

Poised on the brink of revealing "The Boss" of the UI, the 13-year undergraduate has not been heard from in almost two weeks.

It is unclear whether there is a connection between his reporting and his disappearance.

The target of the Argonaut staffers most recent efforts has been the UI Office of Financial Affairs, alleged base of operations for "The Boss."

Speculation is growing Macklin was ruminating his fate and lost his way in the UI heat tunnels, and then captured by hostile forces under control of "The Boss"

This contention was supported independently by a source who requested to remain unidentified.

The source quoted UI Financial Vice-president David McKinney as saying "We have him [Macklin] in the steam tunnels, and he won't escape our revenge."

The Argonaut will continue to investigate, and fearlessly publish the truth, even if it must be made up.

Let the good times roll

The 60s were accused of being the "Me Generation" because they emphasized introspection and development within the individual.

I believe the self is the primary reference point from which we operate. That does not indicate the self is all-important; rather, it is a serviceable center. And it is your native tongue.

How one interprets experience and understanding is processed through the self, regardless of what inspiration or environment opened one's eyes in the first place. It's not the stuff for which personal statues are made — just a simple foundation. A solid flooring on which to build your stone with others to form walls for a shelter, a launch pad, and a welcome mat.

Firm in the reality and mutuality of life, it is also a landmark from where to reach beyond walls. Beyond the familiar and on to alien landscapes of marvellous additions. Sometimes no more alien than a concept of the future, or an alternative lifestyle. And sometimes, not unlike a Star Trek adventure into the inner nature of men more complex to you than Mars.

All this is not the selfishness of a "gimme, gimme" personality; nor is it the egocentric self-centeredness of a "me first" one. It is just that when your bottom got smacked and a hitherto alien substance called "air" filled your lungs, you have been filtering in the world through an individual body.

I hope this alleviates some of the nagging criticisms of the 60s. Perhaps it directly addresses the 80s as well. This generation's energies are reportedly focussed on individual security and comfort. The top priorities are high-paying jobs, higher credit limits, and a fashionable smartness, glibness, and license in a material world.

Victoria Seever

The "me" psychology is lodged in "just pass the platter my way again." But who is to condemn the 80s to this method of operations, unless it will be the 80s itself? And is there no indication of a broader vision? Nothing in the recent now?

Something did happen this summer. It was Live Aid. It was compared to Woodstock, and indeed, united three generations. It arose out of a field where entertainment is generally lavished on leisure and an individual taste for fun. It was a gold star for those who spent power and wealth for a common cause; and it continues to re-create itself in other Aid programs.

And in no way were the members of the 80s generation absent. It matters less which individual motives merged billions — mass starvation, or mass ecological failure, or mass resistance to political delineations. People participated out of a mass sharing of conscience.

A whole lot of "me's" responded to feeling a closeness between each other and reached to a neighbor across the seas to rebuild a failing future. And in the doing, better shaped their own internal stature. We prove that missiles aren't the only thing to blast across national boundaries.

We prove that a global event can saturate the media with a message of hope. Not just for the survival of a people in Africa, but for the survival of a humanity in modern times, where a stone can still be set into a wall and buttress a window to the world. A window that lets more light in, and a window that opens as a door for us to reach beyond.

LETTERS POLICY: The Idaho Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They should be limited to one page in length, typed, and double-spaced. For subjects requiring greater exposition, arrangements may be made with the editor. Letters must be signed in ink, and include the name, address, and phone number of the writer. Proof of identity will be needed at time of submission. Letters received by mail will not be run unless confirmation of authorship is made. Names of writers will not be withheld. Letters may be edited for mechanical and spelling errors. Only two letters in support of a candidate for ASUI office will be published. Letters which support more than one candidate will be apporportioned accordingly. The Idaho Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to publish any letter.

Gift of blood is the gift of life

The time has come again when a letter from me appears in the Argonaut. It is an important time, a time a few of us do not ignore. This Tuesday through Thursday will be another blood drive. And for all of us, blood is life.

For some of us, this drive is even more. Back in 1971, I was struck by a car on campus. I just about bit it. Twenty-eight people went down to Lewiston (when it had a blood bank), and donated blood for me. I only knew one of them. Because they shared of their life with me, I lived.

I cried when I found this out during my recovery. It troubled me how I could ever repay them for the life they shared with me so that mine could continue. Then a thought flowed in me, what if I also donated blood. Perhaps it would go to someone who would then donate to someone who might donate to one of these people should they at a time also be in need.

My goal was "economically" reached long ago, but I have not stopped. Neither should you. Or, if it is your first time, do not be afraid. You will never feel more strength of heart and mind than from what you will share with another who is in need.

Or if you simply want to think in a more basic way, there are even more benefits. Usually after donating, I will go out and have one beer. That one beer can do what a half-rack can't begin to. Think of the money you'll save by donating.

And Campers, a word to you about a newly-created paranoia. You do not ever get AIDS by donating blood. I repeat, not ever!

Give a little of yourself, no more than 10 percent by volume, so that another may have a chance to live. You've got that much on reserve for times like this.

Charlie Brown

Chairman Drew's Election advice

Elections are fast approaching and it is encouraging to see the number of people that are running for ASUI office.

As Election Board chairman, I would like to pass along some ideas to those may be running for the first time.

- Visit as many living groups as possible. Each person will be able to vote for six candidates for Senate. Often, if you have taken the time to speak at the living groups, your name will stand out in their minds on Election Day.

- Know some of the issue that are being dealt with now, or will be dealt with in the near future. Being knowledgeable about current issues on campus is a big plus when talking to living groups.

- Visit a Senate meeting, or talk to a current senator. Both of these should help you gain insight into current campus issues, as well as making you aware of the responsibilities of ASUI senators.

- When talking at a living group, be clear and concise. Practice what you want to say before you talk to a living group. The more professional you appear, the more respect the audience will give you.

- Be prepared to answer questions from living groups and encourage their feedback. The more you get them involved, the better the chances they will remember you on Election Day.

I would like to wish everyone good luck, and I'll see you at the Candidates' Meeting Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 6:30 p.m. in the Silver Room of the SUB.

Drew Yoder

Prez points out Senate's fiscal voting record

On page 14 of Friday's Argonaut is a copy of the ASUI Senate's fiscal voting record of last Wednesday's (Nov. 6) meeting. Although the Senate's voting record is rarely published in this format, last Wednesday's meeting saw a great deal of fiscal action.

In fact, the ASUI Senate allocated (or released) over $18,000 in student fees to Outdoor Programs, KUOI-FM, the Gem of the Mountains, Election Board, the SUB Board, Recreational Facilities Board and Political Concerns Committee.

With the exception of budget meetings, last Wednesday's session was one of the most financially active meetings in recent ASUI history. Please take the time to examine the voting record. Remember, these senators are your elected officials. If you have any questions about these votes, please feel free to call the ASUI Office at 885-6331.

For the record, I opposed the full amount of the Outdoor Programs allocation, and supported the other legislation.

One last reminder

What is easier for the Argonaut staff is not necessarily good for the students. This is another way of saying the less work we have to do, the less informed our readers are.

Two weeks ago (Oct. 29), the Argonaut announced its policy of how we would publish statements from candidates for office.

So far, only one office-seeker (Norman Semanko) has bothered to submit a statement. For the rest of you, the absolute deadline is still tomorrow at 5 p.m. at the Argonaut office. In addition to that issue of the paper, the questions are also taped to the counter in the ASUI office.

The sign-up sheet for candidates' photographs is with the Communications Secretary on the third floor of the SUB. Photos will be taken only today and tomorrow at certain times. It is the responsibility of the candidates to sign up for appointments. They may supply their own "mug shots" but the deadline for these is also 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Just because you might not care, it doesn't mean the voters will feel the same way. — J.H.

UI Placement ranks top 20 percent

By Shawn McIntosh
Of the Argonaut

The UI Career Planning and Placement Center (CPPC) was declared in the top 20 percent nationally with respect to the total number of registrants receiving service, and the top 33 percent nationally for universities who schedule registrant/employer interviews on campus, said a CPPC annual report.

The report was based both on periodic research projects conducted nationally by the Western College Placement Council and regionally by the Western College Placement Association, as well as the CPPC's own records.

Of last year's UI graduates, 66 percent were CPPC registrants, with 90 percent of the registrants being placed in career positions.

Forty-three percent of the registrants were looking for careers in education-related fields, and 39 percent sought careers in industry or business.

UI CPPC registrants received job offers that either exceeded or fell within 10 percent of starting salary averages in 13 of 15 curriculum areas surveyed regionally and 10 of 15 areas surveyed nationally.

During the year from Sept. 1984 to August 1985, 13,208 career employment opportunities and almost 2,000 non-degree summer and part/full-time opportunities were made available to a UI record 2,238 student and alumni registrants. Another UI record was made when CPPC registrants' had almost 5,000 placement files sent out.

A total of 148 employers made 451 recruiting visits to the CPPC, conducted 2,420 registrant interviews, and evaluated the CPPC staff at 3.53 on a 4.0 scale.

The largest offers were made to graduating registrants in education, engineering, and accounting. On a national level, engineering graduates received 55 percent of the bachelor level offers, business received 27 percent, science 12 percent, and humanities/social science six percent.

At the master's level, business graduates received 48 percent of the offers, engineering received 36 percent, science had 13 percent, and humanities/social science received three percent.

At the UI CPPC, six types of employers extended the greatest number of offers. Public schools ranging from kindergarten to twelfth grade; aerospace, electronics and instruments; federal, state, and local government; public accounting; petroleum and allied products; and merchandising and services.

Anyone who has questions about the CPPC or wants to know more about career opportunities is invited to stop by the CPPC at Brink Hall.

Although students have been contacted it is hard to get them actually in to see the advisor, Simmons said.

"It is a very sporadic thing," he said. Students are hard to contact and the program needs to be continually followed up on, he said.

It is one of the disadvantages of information developed at a central committee then spreading the information out to smaller committees, he said. But most of the departments have been very cooperative, he said.

"The feeling I have gotten back from the students and advisors is that they appreciate the effort we are making," he said.

building as "a big mechanical machine just housed by a shell," but said work has gone smoothly.

Rourke said the construction process has caused some headaches for faculty and students. Faculty were without telephones and computers during the summer, and noise is a problem.

"It's hard to lecture over a jackhammer," he said.

There have been a few other problems. Some cabinets have not arrived on time, and there was an electrical adventure.

"I know the first time they threw the switch everything blew up," Rourke said. But he said such adventures are not unexpected, and workers had the electrical system in working order soon after the incident. O'Neal said the mishap had to do with a transformer hook-up, but he didn't elaborate.

"I don't think it's sunk in yet how helpful this new building is going to be," he said. "It's going to improve our status immeasurably."

After the work is completed will come a period of checking everything out, making sure things work correctly and that everything is where it is supposed to be. That may be a long and somewhat tedious process, but Rourke concentrated on the positive.

Rourke said the details of construction sometimes obscure the long-term value of the work.

"You get excited when you go into teaching labs," he said. "We have a building that isn't going to hold us back."

Electrical And Electronic Engineering Graduates...

Civilian employees of the United States Army Information Systems Command, the USAISC, combine the opportunity for world travel with the chance to work at the forefront of information science technology. As a graduate in Electrical or Electronics Engineering, your skills are in high demand.

The USAISC mission of providing information systems and services to Army elements around the world provides resources that few private corporations can offer. We are currently developing technologies that range from phone systems to microwave links, search-satellite terminals, fiber optics, and computer-based secure communications. The planning of future systems incorporates exploration of linked microcomputers, artificial intelligence, and more.

We are interested in BS and MS graduates who have strong academic records and extensive minor studies in computer science and software development. Entry positions are available at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, Fort Ritchie, Maryland, and Worms, Germany. Many of our openings offer the opportunity for overseas travel to sites around the world.

At USAISC, an excellent training program will help in the transition from academic to applied engineering. In addition to working with some of the best minds in the field, you will find excellent technical resources, competitive compensation and a full program of Federal benefits. For complete career details, please send your resume to: CDR, HQ USAESEIA, ASC-TD-A, Attn: Mr. McMains, Dept. P1112, Fort Huachuca, AZ 85613-5300.

Vandals plow through MSU defense 34-0

By Tom Liberman
Of the Argonaut

How quickly the mighty have fallen (frozen?) was illustrated by Idaho's 34-0 demolition of NCAA Div I-AA defending champions Montana State this weekend.

The Vandals ran up and down the MSU field almost at will, racking up 436 yards in total offense against a stiff breeze and a flexible defense.

"The game was played in conditions that were unbelievable," Coach Dennis Erickson said. "The defense really came through."

The win sets up a Big Sky showdown between Boise State and Idaho in the Kibbie Dome on Nov. 23 for the conference championship.

Quarterback Rick Sloan, the nation's No. 2 passer, was incredible. The senior threw 22 completions in 30 attempts on a day when the wind chill factor reached 15 below.

Idaho took a little time getting started as they waited 14 minutes to post their first score of the game when Sloan hit Eric Yarber in the end zone for a TD.

Earlier the pair had teamed up on a 36-yard pass that made up the bulk of the Vandal drive that began on the Vandal 47.

MSU had trouble with their punting game all afternoon, and that gave the Vandies good field position the entire game.

The next two possessions for Idaho ended in disaster as Erickson elected to go for it on fourth and two on Idaho's 33 and tailback Freddie Lloyd was stopped.

"They were going against the wind if we missed," explained Erickson. "We would not have gone under normal conditions."

The Vandal defense was up to the task and held the Bobcats on this occasion and through out the game as they posted their second shutout of the season.

The last time the Vandies had two white washes in one year was in 1971 when they captured their most recent Big Sky title.

The next time the Vandals got the ball freshman Todd Hoirness, who was coming off a slight shoulder separation, fumbled at the MSU 32 to stop a drive.

But then the 'Cats were stopped on their own fourth down gamble at the UI 33 as linebacker Tom Hennessey made the tackle.

Hennessey was to be the defensive star of the game as he also intercepted two MSU passes and was named Big Sky Co-Defensive Player of the Week.

After stopping the Bobcats, the Idaho squad quickly drove down the field and scored on another Sloan to Yarber connection to put Idaho ahead 14-0.

The 'Cats then drove down to the Vandal 28 with new QB Kelly Sherwin, but were stopped by a bad snap that flew over his head and was recovered by Idaho.

The UI again capitulated on the Bobcat mistake as they went in for their third touchdown with Lloyd taking it the final 2 yards to put Idaho ahead 20-0. The extra-point snap was mishandled.

Starting the second half, the Vandals had the wind at their back as they drove 80 yards for the score with Scott Auker grabbing a 29-yard TD pass.

Late in the game Erickson brought in Scott Linehan in replacement of Sloan. He had been sidelined for almost a month with a stress fracture, but now led the Vandals to their final score on mostly running plays.

The win puts Idaho at 5-1 in conference, and in a tie with Boise State and one game back of Nevada-Reno. Idaho beat the Wolfpack earlier this season, and at 6-1 Reno is finished in the Big Sky for the year.

If the Vandals can defeat Boise in the season finale they will get an automatic berth into the the Div I-AA playoffs.

Vangals 'dig' two needed wins

By Kathy McCallies
Of the Argonaut

Aggressive play at the net and emotional defense are two factors that can pull a volleyball team through to win a match.

The Vandal volleyball team had both of these factors plus some in their turn-around play to defeat Montana State University and the University of Montana on foreign courts last weekend.

"It was a great team effort," bubbled Idaho Head Coach Pam Bradetich, whose 18-13 Vandals are now in sole possession of third place in the Mountain West Athletic Conference. "This shows the belief the team has in themselves... and we can play against anyone in MWAC," she said.

Friday's match against the injury-ridden MSU Bobcats was termed as "aggressive" by Bradetich, as UI rolled by the 'Cats 15-9, 14-16, 16-14 and 15-10.

Idaho's best hitting match of the year was in a grudge match against the University of Montana Grizzlies Saturday evening. The Lady Vandals made a spectacular comeback to down the Lady Griz 4-15, 13-15, 15-5, 15-8 and 15-13.

Game one was "real slow," said Bradetich, as UI fell to the Lady Griz 4-15. Game two started with the Vandals putting more energy into their efforts, but still let UM get by, 13-15.

Perhaps Montana believed the Vandals were history, so they let down in intensity. Idaho took advantage of the lackadaisical Grizzlies and took them by suprise 15-5.

"We attacked the ball aggressively," Bradetich said, noting the fine play of Robin Reslock with 25 kills, Laura Burns with 19 and Nellie Gant, who put down 15. Game four gave Idaho the momentum they needed to tie the match at two games a piece with a 15-8 win.

Bradetich noted that getting into the fifth game didn't satisfy the Lady Vandals. They had to walk away with the match win in their hands. The Griz by then had come out of hibernation, and jumped out to a 3-9 lead. Coach Bradetich called a timeout to give her team a word of wisdom.

The break in play seemed to help Idaho or hinder Montana, as the Lady Griz passed poorly and Idaho hit the ball where needed to catch up. After three or four side outs, the Vandals stole the match with a solo block on point 15 by Robin Jordan. The Vandals are now 6-5 in MWAC play.

Leading the Vandals in league play are Robin Jordan, who recorded a total of 45 kills, Robin Reslock, who put down 43, and setter Kelley Neely, who tied her own school record with 68 assists against Montana, and totaled 121 assists for the weekend.

UI Rugby club snuffs UW, St. Martin

By Tom Liberman
Of the Argonaut

It was an incredible scoring bonanza for the Idaho rugby club this weekend as they took on St. Martins and the University of Washington on Saturday and Sunday.

The ruggers had had trouble scoring in their games thus far this season, but they broke out of that slump with a vengeance in their first league match of the year against St. Martins.

Idaho scored early, late and often as they trounced their opponents by a score of 62-0.

"The whole team executed real well," said Idaho Coach Joe McGurkin of the laughter.

Of the 39 rucks and mauls the UI men won 29 and dominated the ball all game.

The fleet Idaho backs were too much for their bigger but slower counterparts as they ran around them for approximately 11 tries.

The Idaho pack was just as good, although out-weighted. They turned in a great performance as Buddy Levy led the way with three tries.

The match was the first league match of the year for Idaho, and they showed what they are made of.

"We had a rough fall season but when it counted we rose to the occasion and played real well," McGurkin said.

The second match of the day was supposed to be a league match, but UW refused to count because there was not a sanctioned referee at the game.

This seemed to fire up the UI ruggers as they came out storming and quickly proved their dominance.

Deeder Peterson, playing in his last game for the UI, was a picture of intensity as he scored two tries and his kicking game was dead on.

Also playing in his last game as a Idaho rucker, fullback Rich Moore scored the hat trick going in for three tries.

"I really was going for the fourth one," said a happy Moore on the completion of the game.

Also playing well for Idaho was Bill Stockton, who got two scores, and Tom Ryden, who didn't score but played great rugby.

It was a total team effort as the UI dominated play from beginning to end. They led by a score of 36-0 at halftime and finished with a 58-0 win.

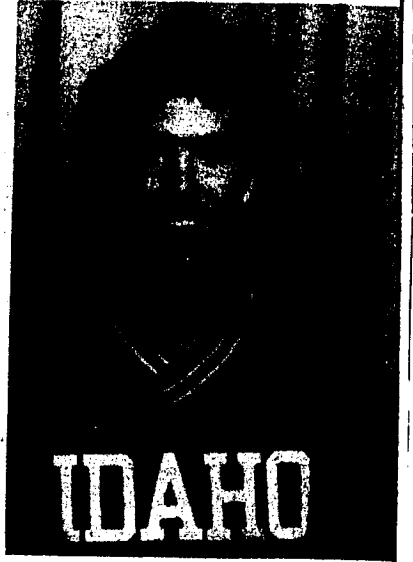

On several occasions three or four Idaho backs steamed down the field unmolested and any one of them could have gotten the score.

Peterson ran several reverses to the weak side that had UW baffled. Brian Jones scored the final points as time ran out and the celebration began.

Idaho athletes honored

Kelley Neely

Tom Hennessey

Idaho Vollyball setter Kelley Neely has been named the MWAC Co-MVP of the week by the conference along with Simone Fritz and outside hitter from Weber.

Neely tied her own Idaho record for assists with 68 against the University of Montana and had an assist percentage of 46.5 with 121 in 260 attempts.

She led the team to two much needed MWAC victories including a triumph over the second place UM squad.

Playing in the freezing cold at Bozeman, Vandal linebacker, Tom Hennessey has been named the co-defensive Big Sky Conference/National Car Rental Player of the Week along with Rex Walters of Boise State.

Hennessey, a Junior from Boise, had two interceptions and had eight tackles on the day including a fourth stop that helped the Vandals preserve their shut-out victory over Montana State.

I Hate Dallas Greg Kilmer

This is it. It is time. THE showdown is here at last. No, I'm not talking the Jeopardy Tournament of Champions; I'm talking Bears/Cowboys. This one is my Super Bowl.

Excuse me, but I've been pretty damn good for 10 glorious weeks, so I'm going to throw out my chest and crow a bit (Hopefully I won't be eating any crow).

THE BEARS ARE 10-0 and the Cowboys are No. 11.

I've been a Chicago fan since I was a little cub and believe me, this one smells as sweet as honey.

CBS, in the most sinister voice since Bela Lugosi, said it best in last week's pre-game hype.

"It's been six straight times and 14 years since Chicago has beaten the Cowboys. The Bears would like to change all that."

"Would like" is putting it way too mildly. The Bears will be as angry as their namesakes wounded by a hunter.

Sweetness, McMahon, Ditka and that defense (127 points allowed in 10 outings) will be ready come next Sunday's Dallass shootout.

The Cowboys are one of those teams that you either hate 'em or love 'em. Guess which column I fall under?

I think maybe it's head coach Tom Landry. You either think he's a God-fearing, stern-faced, football genius or you think he's a boring stick-in-the-mud.

For me, those guys from Dallass have given me plenty of fuel for my "I hate Dallas" fire.

*Drew Pearson showing the hell out of a Viking DB for the TD catch that sent the Cowboys to the Super Bowl.

*Every time Tony Dorsett gains a yard.

*Randy White signing his Dallass contract. I take my hat off to him though, he is a manimal. He might even be able to crack the Bear's line-up — maybe.

*The Cowboys getting the rights to Herchall Walker. The USFL will soon be dead, and I don't need him and Dorsett in the same backfield.

But they have pulled a few boners that have brought some smiles to my face.

*Jerry Kramer drilling Dallass DT Jethro Pugh out of the way, allowing Green Bay to take the NFL championship back in 1965.

*Jackie Smith dropping the Cowboy's potential game winner in Super Bowl XIII.

*Dorsett and his accounting skills. I admit my financial skills are a little lax, but you don't spend more than you earn, Tony.

*The Cocaine Cowboys. Seems every time they mention coke in the pros a Cowboy is the first one mentioned.

*The one that tickled me the most involved Landry and everybody's most exciting guy, Danny White. I loved it when Landry showed us he wasn't Vulcan and screamed at White. "No Danny, no, no, no!" as White ran his patented naked reverse against the Redskins a few years back to cause yet another NFC championship loss.

White had better wear a flack jacket inside his helmet because Steve McMichael, Richard Dent, Dan Hampton, Mike Hartenstein and the 'Frig are going to be in his face all day long.

I hear the Cowboys made a video recently. "I Don't Want To Be Home At Christmas" refers to last year's no-show for the play-offs. They'll be changing that tune to "All I Want For Christmas Is My Two Front teeth" after this weekend's slaughter.

Bears by two touchdowns.

B-ballers challenge Armstrong

By Kathy McCanlies
Of the Argonaut

Terry Armstrong, assistant to the president, has accepted a very large challenge.

He will take on the role as honorable Team Coach and recruiter of the administrators, faculty and staff when they participate in a "friendly" game of volleyball against the Lady Vandal Basketball Team.

The game to 21 points will occur immediately after the Vandal Volleyball match against Eastern Washington, Tuesday, Nov. 12 in the Memorial Gym.

Vandal basketballer Robin

Behrens wrote a letter to Armstrong, who, he suggested "would like to kick our butts." Armstrong diligently accepted.

When asked to specify offensive strategies, a no comment was offered, but a title for the offense was named as the "Missouri roll."

Armstrong did name some of his recruits, however. Top players include Pat Dobratz, Kay Garland, Esther Louie, Pat Owsley, Andy McFarland and Maureen Taylor.

Winners of the match will be treated to ice cream by the losers. "Let's just say they're buying the ice cream for us," added Armstrong.

WIN A SEMESTERS NON - TUITION

The Academic Committee of the 1989 Centennial Commission of the University of Idaho is soliciting ideas for the university's Centennial celebration. We are particularly interested in academic projects that will have a unique and lasting influence on the university for the next hundred years. Thus, we are sponsoring a contest for students only.

PRIZES:
1st Prize: Full-time resident fees for the spring 1986 semester at the University of Idaho.
Second Prize: $100 purchase certificate at the University Bookstore.
Third Prize: $50 purchase certificate at the University Bookstore.

My idea for a lasting academic legacy is:

Attach separate sheet if more space is needed. Drop this off at the Library Loan Desk by 4:00 p.m., Monday, December 2.

Rules: 1. All entries must be submitted at the Library Loan Desk by 4:00 p.m., Monday, December 2, 1985. 2. A maximum of three entries may be submitted by each student. 3. The contest is open only to students enrolled for the fall 1985 semester, whether full-time or part-time, undergraduate or graduate level. 4. Each entry must be written on a separate coupon or sheet of paper. 5. In case of identical winning entries, the winner will be chosen by lot. 6. The judges for the contest are the members of the Academic Committee of the Centennial Commission. 7. Decisions of the judges are final. 8. No entries will be returned. All entries become the property of the Centennial Commission.

Gibson picks 16 / 19 to be this weeks' winner

Mike Gibson of the Ag Engineering Department is this week's winner of the Tri-State/Argonaut "Pick the Winners" contest.

Gibson correctly nailed 16 of the possible 19 contests. The LSU/Alabama game was thrown out because of ending in a tie.

Gibson's only misses for the week were Boise's win over Montana, Georgia's upset of Florida and N. C. States victory over Virginia.

Gibson was not the only one to go 16 for 19, as Scott Ketchum and Tom Holden matched that figure.

Gibson picked up the $25 because of picking Idaho to win by 19. Ketchum picked the Vandals by 17, while Holden had the Vandals by 15.

Probably the biggest reason for Gibson's win was he was the only forecaster to pick Cal's upset of USC.

"I knew (Moscow's Doug) Reisenberg wouldn't be on a team that lost every game," the winner explained. "I had faith

Swimmers take third at Central Washington meet

By Chris Schulte
Of the Argonaut

The Vandal swim team placed third at this weekend's four-way meet by scoring 64 points. The Idaho men finished behind winner Central Washington which had 110, Puget Sound with 94 and ahead of fourth place Pacific Lutheran which scored 58.

Coach Frank Burlison commented afterwards, "The meet was good for the people we took. We were without seven of our top athletes so we have to expect to finish where we did. The people we brought did well, though."

Swimmers sat out for a variety of reasons ranging from sickness to academics.

"No one is in serious trouble either way, health or academically," Burlison said. "I don't want to risk losing any one for health reasons later in the year, and guys need to watch their grades closely if they want to transfer after this season due to the program being dropped."

This meet did have its share of good performances, though. Phillip Burdick and walk-on Jeff Leidy each turned in seasonal bests in their respective events. Leidy was entered in the 200 freestyle relay as the slowest leg and turned in the fastest split of all. Burlison called this "the most pleasant surprise of the day."

Two swimmers-turned-divers for the day Scott Calhoun and Paul BonDestinon performed well in the diving relay. Without them the team easily could have finished fourth in the meet.

The swimmers will be in action this weekend in Pullman against Oregon and Oregon State. Oregon is one of the top teams from the Northwest while OSU and the Vandals are fairly equally matched. Burlison says he is expecting a close meet for his swimmers.

COMPUTER CRIME IS NO PRANK

When I heard in my computer class about an attempt last year to penetrate a University computer account I became curious as to whether they had changed the password. In order to find out I entered the old password and just as I thought, it had been changed. You might think this was innocent experimentation, as did I — but I was wrong. Any unauthorized attempt to access University or user accounts, for any reason, is now a violation of Idaho law. I could have received maximum penalty — six months in county jail and/or $300 fine. Fortunately, I avoided a jail sentence but the next person might not be so lucky.

WSU King Lear has no gimmicks

By Sarah Kerruish
Of the Argonaut

One of the characteristics of Shakespearean tragedy is the tragic hero. This term is used to describe a character who is great but has a weakness which ultimately causes their downfall. Examples of such characters are Anthony and Coriolanus whose deaths assume greater significance because of their stature.

WSU's Lear is tragic but without the hero. Throughout the play Lear is seen as no more than an old man losing his sanity. Lear does have moments, as with Tom, Cordelia and the Fool, when he demonstrates great compassion. His followers, like Kent, attest to the loyalty he inspires. But overall it is a relief when the senile and demented King finally, after three and a half hours of betrayal and disaster, sniffs his last.

William Severson, as the old King, is outstanding. His merest gestures suggest decrepitude. He looks like an ancient lion and often roars like one too, for example when he denies his favorite daughter, Cordelia, her inheritance. At other times he cries like a baby, his voice cracked and distorted.

The King's tantrums create ambiguity at the beginning of the play. The two sisters, Regan and Goneril, almost seem justified in their treatment of Lear because he is so obnoxious and unreasonable. However later on, when Regan is instrumental in the gouging of Gloucester's eyes, we are left in no doubt that the two sisters are evil. Thus the WSU production has combined the early interpretation of Lear, which suggests the sisters are plotting to get rid of the King from the start, and later interpretations

Jazz Pianist

Ramsey Lewis at SUB

A world renowned pianist can be heard this Thursday when the Ramsey Lewis Trio performs at the UI SUB.

Lewis will perform his hits from the 1950s and '60s. Also included in his show will be hits from his new album "The Two of Us."

Accompanying Lewis will be Bill Dickens on bass and Frank Donaldson on drums who complete the Lewis trio.

Lewis has been playing the piano since the age of four, and his work has ranged from performing as a jazz pianist and with symphonies, to writing, arranging, and producing dance records.

Tickets are available at the WSU Coliseum Box Office, the WSU CUB and at the UI SUB.

Lewis' performance is part of the 1985-86 Palouse Performances series sponsored by ASUI Productions and the WSU Coliseum.

Campus may fast Friday

By Laura Bonnett
For the Argonaut

"Give a man a fish, and you feed him for a day; teach him to fish, and you feed him for a life time." Oxfam believes and practices the latter, and the money raised from the Fast for a World Harvest will be used to fund projects that teach people how to help themselves.

This year the fast is on Friday, Nov. 15. Participants pledge to give up one meal or more, or to give up certain foods (junk food or meat for example) on that day. The money they would have been spent to buy that meal or food is then donated directly to Oxfam America.

Oxfam is a non-profit, international agency that funds self-help development projects and disaster relief in poor countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America. In its most recent fiscal year, Oxfam America received more than $6 million in contributions. In 1984, more than 3,000 college groups raised more than $1 million.

The Hunger Action Committee, headed by the Campus Christian Center, St. Augustine's Catholic Center and the LDS Institute of Religion, is the local sponsor for the Fast For A World Harvest.

Students interested in helping the poor and hungry worldwide are invited to meet with the committee, said Stan Thomas, director of the Christian Center. The committee will meet at the center this Wednesday afternoon.

On the day of the worldwide fast, there will be a Thanksgiving observance See Fast, page 14

Taking care of problems is his job

If idleness is the devil's workshop, then Executive Assistant to the President Terry Armstrong, qualifies for sainthood.

Not only is Armstrong President Gibb's right hand man, he is also the coordinator for Student Services and an avid painter and outdoorsman.

As the executive assistant Armstrong handles communications between the people and the president. When he puts on the hat of coordinator, he deals with student programs and the issues that concern them.

"I'm a fixer-upper," he said. "I deal with a lot of problems."

For someone who deals with a lot of problems he manages to keep a good sense of humor.

"What's the office saying, Judy?" he called out to one of the office secretaries. "Time flies like an arrow; fruit flies like bananas," Armstrong said.

Armstrong was born and raised in Twin Falls. He lived what he calls, "an idyllic childhood."

"I did all the things good boys are supposed to do," Armstrong said. He was interested in many of things he is interested in today; fishing, hunting, stamp collecting and playing basketball.

"He genuinely enjoys the students," said Professor Roy Fluhrer of Terry Armstrong. "Not only is he an accomplished educator, he has a great sense of humor...and he loves to interact with the students."

One of his childhood hobbies was FLOR (Filmore Lab of Research). FLOR was a structure located in his best friend's back yard on Filmore street in Twin Falls. It was there that Armstrong and Larry Hovey, who is now a sports writer for the Times News in Twin Falls, spent a great deal of time. Every so often they would put on a magic show for the neighborhood.

"We preformed such brilliant demonstrations as the saw the sparrow in half trick," Armstrong said. The sparrow, he added, always flew away in the end.

FLOR was later abandoned for basketball. Armstrong played basketball at Twin Falls High School and was later recruited to play for Southern Mississippi University. He had planned to play here but the head coach at Idaho moved to USM and offered Armstrong a scholarship there.

After graduating with a degree in biology, Armstrong taught high school and then came to the UI to get his doctorate. When he finished his doctoral studies the school hired him.

Armstrong now spends his time working with the school and the students here.

"He genuinely enjoys the students," said Professor Roy Fluhrer. "Not only is he an accomplished educator, he has a great sense of humor...and he loves to interact with the students."

Armstrong is easily recognized on campus. His 6 feet 9 inch frame is often seen roaming the halls of the Administration Building or walking around campus. As he walks he says "Hi" to everyone he meets or asks them how they're doing. He also looks for money for his Found Money Fund.

The fund is made up of the small change he and the funds' supporters find on the ground or See Terry, page 13 where ever. It began in January of 1981 with three pennies. The fund has since grown and takes in nearly $100 a month. The money all goes into a special account. On the centennial birthday of the school the money will be released to the university.

In his limited spare time, Armstrong reads extensively and paints.

He has always enjoyed reading and each year he picks a topic to study. This year he is studying the conquest of the Plains Indians.

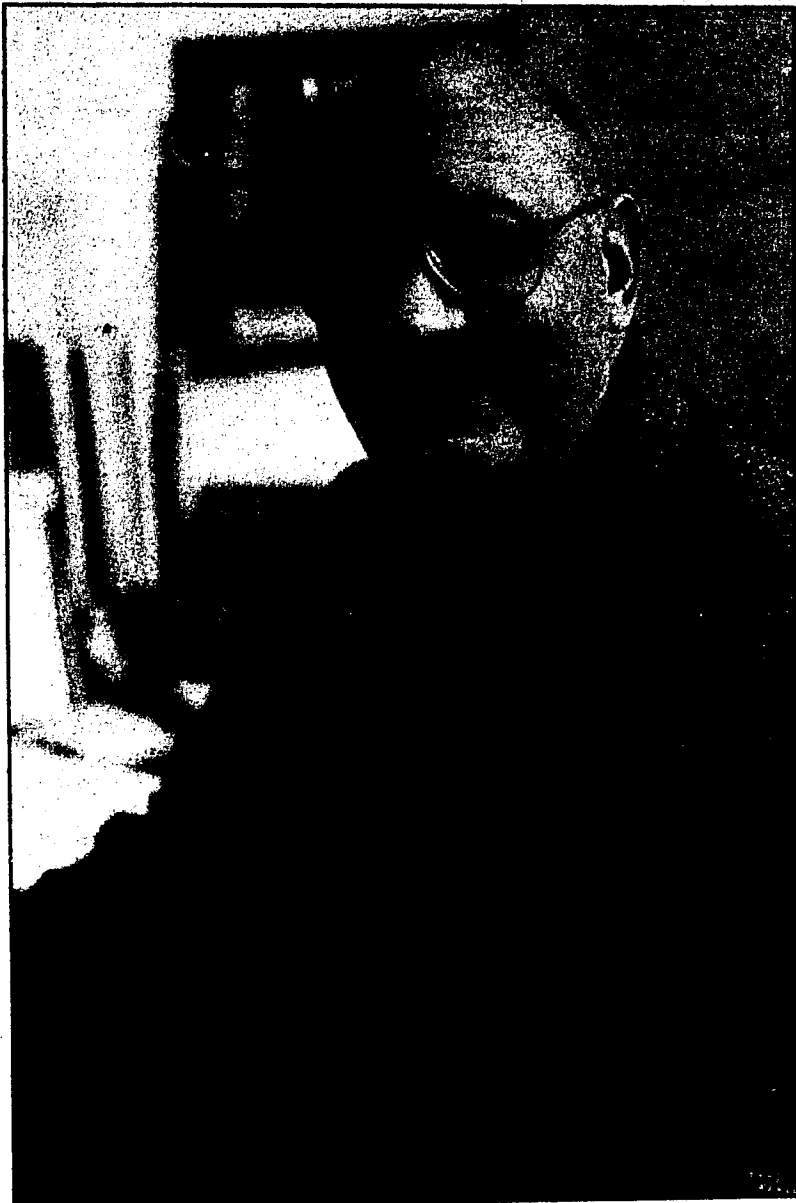

Armstrong has a great love for Indians. His office is decorated with pictures of them, most of which he painted himself.

Art is a form of relaxation for him. He got started in it in college and has pursued it ever since. He is also an extensive doodler.

Most of his doodles can be found on the many notebooks he scribbles in each day. These notes consist of his day's activities. He writes down everything he does and everyone he sees. The notes are used to jog his memory and are records that can be used when he needs to know what he did or who he talked to on a certain day.

Armstrong holds a great love for the university. Each day is spent serving it.

"There is no place I would rather be," he said.

which suggest that Lear's behavior is the cause of their animosity towards him.

The Fool (Alan Wilkie) provides some light relief and sanity in the welter of tragedy that befalls Lear and his court. Wilkie is quite brilliant as the absurd clown. He is fat, bald and has a comical voice, but behind these features he is constantly making astute observations about the various happenings.

Other outstanding performances include John Martin as Edmund, Richard Taflinger as Kent and William Mc Claskey as Gloucester.

Diane Stredicke (Cordelia), Shannon Stanczak (Goneril) and Katherine Osterberg (Regan) are competent as Lear's daughters. Stredicke looks suitably angelic and Osterberg and Stanczak look menacing.

The WSU production is classical. Paul Wadleigh, the producer, said they were looking for a straight reading of the text. The medieval costumes support their conventional production.

The set is cleverly designed. Large blocks of stone, evoking images of Stonehenge and early Britain, are hung from the stage ceiling. They are raised and lowered to denote a change of place.

Although the play has been cut by 45 minutes, many will think it is still too long, but that is the fault of the Bard and not WSU. One almost gets the feeling that Shakespeare himself got tired of writing Lear, thought to hell with it, and killed everyone off.

However, WSU must take the blame for reducing Lear almost to the level of a video nasty, such is the amount of tomato ketchup that flows on the stage. Perhaps they think blood and gore is the only way to hold the audience. Not so. The production is entertaining enough by itself.

at St. Augustine's at 5 p.m. "It encourages people to come together under a central theme," Thomas said. According to Thomas, $6,000 was raised last year on this campus.

"We asked the Wallace Cafeteria to allow students to donate meals," Thomas said. "Over 800 meals were donated at the cafeteria."

Sign-up sheets have been circulated to residence halls and Greek houses. Students have until Nov. 15 to sign the statement of intent to fast and donate those skipped meals.

Thomas said between three and six Greek houses participate in the fast.

"It's growing every year," he said, referring to the number of participants. "We expect a good group this year. It's becoming a tradition."

The Center, along with St. Augustine's, has been involved with the fast for over a year, Thomas said. Two years ago the LDS Institute of Religion joined them, bringing all three UI religious institutes together.

"It's good that we can come together for such a good thing as the fast," said Bill Applegarth, director of the LDS Institute.

"I feel very, very positive about the fast," Applegarth said. "If people fast, they have bought into it," he said, referring to the experience and awareness of helping others.
