Student fee structures examined

By John Hecht Special Correspondent

Boise - Three separate methods of restructuring student fees at Idaho universities could lead to more funds for higher education and larger payments by students.

The proposals were presented to the Finance Committee of the State Board of Education yesterday by fiscal officer Ned Cisek. They were submitted along with a report showing that Idaho students contribute the lowest percentage of their fees to the cost of education of any state in the west.

Cisek estimated that if Idaho students contributed the average percentage of the other states, revenues from students would rise to $24 million from $16 million. However, he said the current fee system would need to be restructured, which would require a multi-year phase-in.

The first proposal would establish a single fee to be approved by the board, and then allow each institution to manage all activities so funded without prior board approval. Fifty percent of all revenue would go to the institutional maintenance fee.

The second method would set three types of fees: IMF, building and activity. Each president would be given authority to approve a budget request of his student government. Currently all student budgets must be approved by the board.

The third method would establish a fee on a "per credit hour" basis period.

Response from the financial vice presidents was cautiously supportive.

Dave McKinney, UI financial vice president, said he liked the "per credit hour" feel system. He said he presumed it would mean that revenues from the IMF would not be pooled but would remain with each institution.

Jerry Evans, superindendent of public instruction and a board member, said he is not convinced that the present structure is wrong.

Regent Mike Mitchell of Lewiston was concerned that such a new structure might be inequitable. "Intercollegiate athletics is a state-wide problem, but the board should be involved with it," he said.

The institutional officers will study the proposals and comment further when the Finance Committee meets in February in Boise. The next meeting of the full board will be in March.

ASUI President Gino White told the Idaho Argonaut yesterday afternoon that the proposals would be discussed Thursday night, too late for Argonaut presstime.

Tuition was the subject of discussion when the Associated Students of Idaho met Thursday night, also too late for presstime.

Ul registration down again

The initial count from dome registration this spring was 6,206, down compared to last fall's initial 6,400, said Registrar and Director of Admissions Matt Telin. A final count for registration will not be released until after January 28, the deadline for UI late enrollment.

A change in the attitude of what women should study is a major cause for increased enrollment of women at the UI, Registrar Matt Telin said.

The fact that more women study traditionally male dominated subjects such as engineering. forestry, agriculture and mining explains why women's enrollment increased 7.5 percent since the early 1970's, Telin said.

Minority and women enrollment has remained fairly constant over the past five years, Telin added.

'Out of 8,848 of the total enrollment, we had 300 minority students register, which is 3.4%," Telin said.

A familiar and frustrating problem for many students who have the misfortune to register late in the day is the closing of classes which they need. This is especially difficult for seniors who have only one or two semesters to complete their degree requirements and need certain classes. It is also difficult for students who need courses that serve as prerequisites to courses they plan to take the following semester, Telin said.

Telin advises these students to go their departments today and next week to negotiate.

"Don't be afraid to go back because students may have dropped courses, and at any rate the departments will try to accomodate you," Telin said.

JI offering $185,000 for Theta Chi frat

By Michael Haberman

Staff Writer

The UI has offered to buy the Theta Chi fraternity house for $185,000, according to university business manager Don Amos.

A Lewiston firm, Western Appraisers, appraised the house and lot at $200,000.

If the sale goes through at the regents meeting in Boise this week, the fraternity plans to start construction of a new $700,000 house this spring.

The Theta Chis will lease property just south of the Alpha Phi house on Elm Street, in the vacant area west of the SUB parking lot. The lease will be for 99 years at $1 per year, the same deal worked out with fraternities and sororities on Nez Perce Drive, Amos said.

Theta Chi Chapter President Elwin Grout said heating bills approaching $800 per month, bad plumbing and general deterioration of the house, built around 1920, led to the decision to relocate. He said the chapter approached the university about selling the present house last May and has been working

Thoughts of a new home have been on the minds of Theta Chi members for a lot longer, according to Grout. "It's been a dream for about 15 years, to get Chi property is attractive to the UI because of its proximity to the SUB. Having control of it would permit SUB expansion in the future, he said. Donald Beckley, Theta Chi alumnus and one of the organizers of the project, said the fraternity decided not to rebuild on the same site mainly because it would put them out of business for a year. He said made to move, the fraternity wanted to give the UI first shot at the property. The university hasn't decided how it will use the old Theta Chi house yet, but chances are that it won't be around for long, according to Joanne Reece, director of facilities planning.

She indicated that problems with the house will most likely limit its useful life to 10 years or since then on plans for a new less. The university might eventually decide to expand the SUB with either an attached wing or a separate building on the property. Reece said.

But Reece said no decisions have been made, even for the short term. She suggested SUBa new house," he said. short term. She suggested SUB-Amos said the current Theta related activities, student residences or office space as possible immediate uses for the house.

> Reece said she has heard no complaints about the new house encroaching on the park area behind the SUB. It will fit into the neighborhood well, and some open space will remain, she said.

Preliminary plans show a house of three floors and a basethat when the decision was ment, with room for about 40 men. It will be a typical fraternity house, Grout said, with sleeping porches, study rooms and a smoker in the basement.

New features include a library and computer room, and handicapped access. Grout said the fraternity hopes the construction will be finished by August.

Gov. John Evans, who was scheduled to appear at the Moscow Hotel Wednesday afternoon, cancelled his trip because of a broken ankle.

Evans was admitted to Saint Alphonsis Hospital in Boise Tuesday night after he broke his ankle jogging in St. Maries.

He was to be here to announce his candidacy for U.S. Senator. Gov. Evans' press secretary said on Wednesday she is sure Evans will be in Moscow again but does not know when. She said his campaign staff is reworking his schedule for stops to northern Idaho cities and towns. She added Evans' family will be taking over some of his assignments while he is in the hospital. He is expected to be in the hospital for three days.

This summer the University of New Orleans (UNO) will sponsor its 11th annual session of UNO-Innsbruck, an international summer school in Innsbruck. Austria.

The Alpine summer school at the University of Innsbruck is the largest overseas summer school offered by any American university, according to Carl Wagner, Assistant to the Dean of the International Study Programs at UNO.

The program attracted students from 51 different universities and four foreign countries last year.

More than 70 courses in 19 different subjects are taught. The courses focus on the economic traditions of Europe. Geology, business and education classes are also taught. All instruction is in English, and faculty from American universities as well as the University of Innsbruck participate.

During the session, which begins June 29 and runs through Aug. 9, students are housed in the Studentenhaus at the 300 year-old University of Innsbruck. An optional threeweek tour of Western Europe is offered before classes begin.

Students can earn up to nine semester hours of credit.

Registration is underway, and interested applicants should apply as soon as possible by writing to Carl Wagner, c/o UNO-Innsbruck, Box 1315, University of New Orleans, New Orleans, L.A. 70148. One can also call (504) 286-7116 for more details.

Fame nominees announced

By Patricia Hatheway Staff Writer

The UI Alumni Hall of Fame is an award given annually to distinguished alumnus who have achieved national or international recognition for work in their specialized field.

These particular alumni are nominated by any alumnus. UI administration officials, deans, department heads or faculty members. The nominations are also solicited through alumni publications and the nominations are then gathered at the Alumni office.

To determine who is nominated, the nominations are submitted to the Alumni Board of Directors in December. This year the recipients will be selected during the January board meeting held January 29 through 31.

Mary Kay McFadden, Coordinator of the UI Alumni Hall of Fame and Associate Director of University. See Fame, page 3

the Alumni Center said, "What we're looking for is people who have received national recognition in their specialized field." The recipient of the award must be an alumnus of the UI. "On the average, three awards are given each year," she said. McFadden also added that this is the highest award given to alumni at the University of Idaho.

Off-campus senator resigns

By Erin Fanning Staff Writer

The ASUI Senate faces the new semester with another empty senate seat to fill. Elliot Skolnick has resigned.

"I don't have time to go to school, go to work, workout and be a senator," Skolnick said. He said that living off campus added an extra burden to the duties that a senator is required to do.

'A lot of the senators live on campus so they do not have to take care of a house, go shopping or take care of those type of responsibilities," he said.

"The commitment asked of a senator is tough," he said.
"There are many meetings and a lot of time to put into the job. It requires a lot of dedication and I am just not ready to do it."

Skolnick will probably be best remembered after his one semester stint as senator as the introducer of the SDI (Strategic Defense Initiative) referendum.

but wasn't getting any attention," he said.

The referendum asked students if they thought "the UI should participate in SDI research and development" and was voted on during the past

ASUI elections. Skolnick said that he was

"It seemed like an issue that should be dealt with on campus disappointed by the results but not shocked. Over 60 percent of the students who voted favored the referendum, while 23 percent were against and 15 percent undecided.

"It was kind of like Reagan getting elected in 1984," he said. "You knew it was going to happen but you were still disappointed when it did."

Skolnick said that he does not have any further political aspirations but he still maintains an interest in politics.

One complaint Skolnick has from observations he made as an ASUI senator is the amount of wasted time that can occur during senate meetings. "Two or three people will say the same thing," he said. "We have a presession on Tuesday which is a time for discussion and then on Wednesday at the senate meeting everything gets repeated again."

On a positive note, Skolnick concluded that he felt he had made some unexpected friendships during his term as senator.

The Master of "Mis-communication

Laurence J. Peter, once wrote: "In a hierarchy every employee tends to rise to his level of incompetence."

One of the best examples of this can be found right where you would expect it: in Boise in our state bureaucracy.

In 1979 the Social Security Administration correctly decided that since most college students were struggling to get through school they should not be required to pay FICA payments, or Social Security contributions.

Nobody's really sure how, but the UI was not informed and hence kept on deducting the contribution from its student employees' pay checks. Not that the UI wants to give this money to the SSA, since the university has to match the students' contrubution; they just were not informed.

office in Baltimore probably wouldn't believe that there is a town called Moscow in America.

Some time later, in 1982, the SSA found Moscow when they performed an audit on the UI. As you can imagine they found out that the university was still withholding FICA from student payroll and told them to cease. In fact, they told the the state auditor's office to tell the UI to fill out some forms so the students could get their money back.

At this time the UI continued to withhold the FICA from students' pay checks. University officals claimed they were never shown the results of the audit — it was given straight to the state auditor, they said.

Finally, last summer — three years after the audit — the UI stopped the withholding and started the paperwork to get the money back.

According to Charles Severn, manager of the State Social Security in the state's auditor's office, he's the one to blame for Probably the foremost philosopher of our modern age, three years of what he calls "mis-communication." In his own words: "If anybody's to blame I am."

It's not everyday that you find a bureaucrat that's so modest about his incompetency. This guy is good — he singlehandedly kept the communications between the state auditor's office and the university crossed for three years so that a small problem with a simple solution grew into almost a million-dollar mistake; that takes a lot of talent.

As it stands right now 8,000 to 10,000 past and present student employees of the university are owed a total of $466,000. And the UI stands to get back $470,000 for its matching contributions.

Not to be out done by his earlier accomplishment, Severn is once again crossing wires. It seems that the SSA officals told That's understandable, most of the bureaucrats at the SSA's the auditor they needed a column of information from the university before they could grant the refund. That's understandable bureaucratic redtape - simple problem, simple solution get the information to them.

Jeff Eisenbarth, UI payroll officer said the auditor's office did not request that information or he would have given it. When Eisenbarth found out that the SSA needed the information he was told by Severn that the auditor's office would take care of it in Boise.

Severn, on the other hand, told the Idaho Argonaut that he was waiting for the university to provide the missing information. This guy is really good.

And he takes pride in his work, too: when asked when he thought the students could expect to get the refunds he said, "Two months to two years to five years." Bet on the money coming back in time for Christmas 1990.

- Douglas Jones

We're just not liberal enough

The Idaho Argonaut skews facts, has a liberal bias and/or is offensive to common sense.

That's what the folks at the Leadership Institute say about us. We placed high in their Innaccuracy in Campus Media contest.

And we're getting congratulated for it. Bill Mitchell, from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee Post called Thursday morning to congratulate us for the award, and he even sounded a little envious.

Our citation is for a column by David Blakely, who wrote about the United States' being on trial before the United Nations World Court. Blakely wrote that our allies are probably wondering what sort of government calls the Soviet Union evil while thumbing its nose at due process (or the lack of it) in Nicaragua.

What really bugs us about this "award" is that we didn't even place in the contest; we were just mentioned in the news release sent out by the Institute. We're also upset because more of our columns were not cited.

After all, Washington State University's Daily Evergreen won second place. And it also got a dishonorable mention for a second article. It just isn't fair.

We had a nicely liberal column by Douglas Jones, about the United States' actions in Nicaragua and how we are probably driving the Nicaraguans toward the Soviets. "Continued military and economic threats by the United States, the largest and most powerful force in the Western Hemisphere, will only materialize our fears by driving Nicaragua into an alliance with the Soviet Union.'

We figure that should have earned us at least third place. But it wasn't even mentioned. Instead, the Institute cited a similar article from the George Washington University Current. It wasn't nearly as punchy (or should we say "inaccurate"?).

We're also upset because the article cited was not a news article but an opinion piece. Opinion pieces are supposed to be biased, so we don't think we really qualified for the award.

Also, the article was written by a columnist, not an editor, so here we are, getting cited for being liberal and the article wasn't even the official opinion of the paper. It's kind of embarassing.

Besides, the contest must have been fixed. The guy who won first place was Holden Lewis from the North Texas Daily, and he wrote that Christian and family-oriented Americans want to repeal the Bill of Rights and restore slavery. Once this is done, he wrote, Americans can sit back in their chairs, watch football games and "have our slaves fetch us drinks."

Obviously that's not meant to be taken literally; readers aren't supposed to think that Christians really want to keep slaves. It's not inaccurate, as the Institute's award indicates, it's satire. Maybe Holden has an uncle on the judging committee:

I wish I could meet the person who nominated us for this award. He probably thought it would humiliate us and make us want to change somehow. But because the Institute is so ridiculous and because we are getting some attention, we're likely to become even more liberal in our columns so we can get first place next year.

Wandering through a Boston newspaper recently I came upon an interesting item. It seems that up in the backwoods of Maine there is a fundamentalist church in the throes of a leadership dilemma. The minister, after 20 years of faithful service, admitted he is an adulterer.

This minister promptly agreed to step down, whereupon no less a personage than Jerry Falwell offered to be the church's minister until a suitable replacement could be found. The story closed with our confessed adulterer requesting to remain as the church's pastor, claiming that he had talked to God and that God had told him to continue his work.

Those of you more cynical than I are probably shaking your heads thinking: "How convenient. He's out of a job so he pulls the old talking to God routine to save his skin."

However, I disagree. I believe this individual, in the midst of a great personal crisis, truly believes he talked to God. I'm sure he genuinely sought guidance and was greatly relieved when "God" responded with an answer in consonance with his innermost wishes. No doubt this is the manner in which many religious people request service from their God.

It is at this point that I always want to ask: "How does one know if he is talking to God? What distinguishes His answers from the murmurings of our own desires?'

The difficulty here, as I see it, is that God is employed by many Christians to answer their prayers; prayers which essentially seek God's stamp of approval for a course of action they wish to pursue but for whatever reason need additional reassurance. Somehow I do not consider this synonymous with genuine guidance.

I also find the frequency with which God is consulted to be problematic. Hindu and Buddhist religious practices require one to ascend through many stages of personal growth before one can even attempt to percieve the nature and wisdom of their equivalent of the Christian God.

In contrast, modern Christianity teaches that its believers have a pipeline to God available at a moment's notice. In efficiency and amount of use it appears to rival Ma Bell. No tells or long numbers to remember, either. God will give you an answer as soon as possible as long as it doesn't conflict with the Bible's ethics. In other words, anyone can claim that God told him it was OK to make a fortune pillaging the environment as long as he doesn't spend his wealth on sex, drugs or rock 'n' roll. Personally, I can not claim to have talked to God. Yet, at certain places and times, watching a sunset in the desert or looking at the night sky among snowy mountains, I have felt things, as I'm sure you have. that one does not feel among more ordinary circumstances. Is this God talking? How is one to know?

If this is indeed God speaking, then I suppose the underlying message is that we should support the preservers of this beauty, such as Greenpeace and the Sierra Club and oppose those, i.e. the Reagan Administration, who would exploit it.

Finally then, how are we to know if we or someone else is capable of communicating with God? If we believe that actions speak louder than words, then we should consider such claims by the Albert Schweitzers, Mother Teresas and Desmond Tutus of this world highly credible while such claims by the Jerry Falwells and James Wattses of this planet would be more than laughable. For the rest of us, all akin to that adultering minister in our fallibility, such a claim is simply misguided.

Jim Fisher, an assistant professor in the Communications Department, will be teaching journalism classes as well as filling in as a columnist for the Lewiston Morning Tribune.

He has been teaching a variety of communication courses at UI this past semester. Fisher is filling in for Sandy Lee, the Tribune's Idaho Legislature columnist while she gets herself acquainted with the legislature in Boise. His column will be an analysis of the Idaho Legislature.

Fisher, 38, worked for the North Idaho Press for one year and at the Kellogg Evening News where he served as a reporter and managing editor. After five years at the Kellogg Evening News, Fisher served as legislative columnist at the Lewiston Morning Tribune for three legislative sessions. Fisher said his experience, both past and present as a columnist, will be valuable to students in that it will show that the instructor can perform as a writer.

The $700,000 price will be paid from a loan from the national Theta Chi organization, the sale of the old house and alumni donations, according to Beckley. He said the chapter plans to borrow between $350,000 and $400,000 from the national organization, which would be repaid over 30

The old house was paid off three years ago, and since then surplus house rent of members has been saved. Beckley said the extra money now amounts to about $85,000 and will probably be used to furnish the new house.

Grout said the poor condition of the present house made it harder to attract new members. "From the outside, let's face it, it's not attractive," he said.

Theta Chi has 20 members now, and Grout said there will be pressure to keep the new house full. But he sees the new house as a strong selling point and doesn't anticipate problems.

When Grout and Theta Chi Vice President Lawrence Fitzgerald were asked what they would miss most about the old house, they resisted sentiment. They talked instead about the things they miss now, such as hot showers.

"You'll be all soaped up, sitting there, and then there'll be no water," Fitzgerald said. Grout said the house is served by a one-inch water main, and one shower at a time is about all the pipe can handle.

"It's a nice old place, but it's seen better days." Grout said.

Moscow's Fitness Unlimited will host an Aerob-A-Thon for cystic fibrosis Jan. 18-25.

Participants do not have to pay an entry fee, but they do need to get sponsors. Sponsors may pledge 10 cents or more an hour.

To find out the times to participate, call Fitness Unlimited at 882-1515. Sponsor sheets are available now and can be picked up at 302 S. Main St. (David's Center).

Cystic fibrosis is the number one killer of children and young adults in America. It is a chronic disease that attacks the respiratory and digestive systems, literally starving and suffocating its victims.

More lives are lost each year to cystic fibrosis than multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, and diabetes combined.

A strip joint where the men grin and bare it.

By Sara Donart Staff Writer

The room was cold but the audience was hot, and chilly or not, the evening's main attraction was being paid to take it off.

In the best of burlesque tradition, it was an evening to leave spouses and sweethearts at home, hook up with a few chums, quaff some brew and admire the flesh.

Tonight, though, there would be no beery baritones in the crowd urging the dancers to peel down to bottom layer, because while the dancers were sure to be topless, most of the admiring eyes would be wearing mascara.

Welcome to the Fun Pac Banquet and Party Center, private club and caberet, where ladies turn out to watch Gentlemen in G-strings.

Attendance, however, was sparse and at 9 p.m. when the action was slated to begin. The crowd was self-consciously sipping beer and trying to stay warm in the chilly empty bar.

Two men fiddled with stage lights, one looking like a natty young Don Ameche with pencil moustache, white ruffled shirt and the short black tacket of a flamenco dancer.

His sidekick, in green baseball cap and worn Adidas, was spreading into a pair of faded army pants, stressing their seams as he climbed ladders, wrestled the footlights.

The $5 at the door included a bottomless pitcher of beer, but the crowd had not come for the draft. When young Don Ameche picked up the microphone and introduced himself as Jack Alley of Alleycat Productions, promoter of the evening's entertainment, a chorus broke out from a ringside table.

"Let's get the show on the

The man with the mike wasn't forking over the goods just yet, however. First it was time to prime the crowd.

Trading in his baseball cap and army fatigues for a pork pie hat and mismatched polyester, Stagehand 2 had become Mick Atkin, the evening's MC, cheerleader and "hometown comic.'

Referring to his checked polyester sports tacket: "This isn't a jacket. It's the seatcover for my '71 Maverick." Addressed to the crowd at large: "Who's already horny?" And, "On the count of three, give me your favorite position!" Then his favorite: "I should live to be so long." He liked it so much he said it three times that night.

Atmosphere thus enhanced, Alley hit the music and unleashed the talent.

Enter Mr. Apollo in tight red sweatpants and shiny red athletic jacket, jiving his way with duct tape and squatted by onto center stage, a matching red bandana holding his blowdried blonde hair into place.

The lacket was quick to go: the body beneath was mostly shoulders. Hoots came from the crowd, rah-rahs from the cheerleader/MC. After a turn or two around the dance floor to show his biceps to their best advantage, Apollo turned his back to the crowd and gave them a bikini-clad moon. Then dropping all pretense, he dropped his drawers. Once. Twice. Three times.

After the sweats, off came two tiny bikinis until Mr. A was left clad in a black G-string and ankle socks. Hard to begrudge him the socks: it was cold in there. "Remember, ladies," the MC pitched, "if you're close enough to tuck a bill in the Gstring, you'll be close enough to touch that...hunk."

So touch they did, obligedly tucking tips into that tiny piece of string and leather that marks the line between sin and titillation. Apollo then produced a bottle of baby oil and invited the willing to spread some around. They did, timid pats growing bolder until Mr. Apollo was more grease than Greek.

His G-string sprouted bills as he passed around lip locks to the eager. Then, taking a moment to pose in front of the strobe light, he picked up his discard-See Strippers, page 9

SUB film series starts today

West Side Story, Spring Break and The Rocky Horror Picture Show, are just a few of the movies SUB Films are going to present this semester. SUB Films, sponsored by ASUI Productions, will be showing a variety of films at the SUB Borah Theater, including classics, cult films, comedies and recent box office successes.

The movie series begins tonight with Theater of Blood starring that maestro of horror, Vincent Price. In it a rejected Shakespearean actor reeks revenge on the critics who have spurned him, turning eight great death scenes from Shakespeare into real life murders.

Next weekend, Jan 24, SUB Films presents the classic West Side Story. The Breakfast Club the will be shown theweekend of the 31st. The first showing of SUB films is at 7 p.m. with a second and sometimes a third showing. Admission is $2.

Two special films, Man of Peace and The Assassin Years, commemorating Martin Luther King's Birthday, will be featured on Monday, Jan 20 at the Borah Theater. They will be shown at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Admission is

His undershirt was blood red against dark skin; his hips were frenetic, and his G-string when he peeled down to it was little more than a bit of Western

It too grew bills as he made his way around the tables, and when one woman found herself too shy to tuck in a one, the MC reassured her, "don't worry; he's not afraid of paper cuts."

On the other hand, seated right up front and looking as wholesome as a high school cheerleader was the evening's most avid fan for whom shyness wasn't a factor. She was first in line with the baby oil and had a seemingly endless supply of bills for the boys.

Her proclaimed favorite was next on deck, "Dr John, the freelance gynecologist." This one perhaps hadn't spent as much time in the gym as Mr. Apollo but he definitely knew his moves, and dropping his bright blue Lycra stretch pants. the doctor began to make his rounds. Flash bulbs popped on trysting silhouettes and one woman tried to give his G-string a revealing yank.

Extricating himself, G-string still intact. Dr J. climbed on a chair and gave an anatomical specific eye-level view of his gyrating pelvis. A moment later while he was busy back on floor level again, a waitress, looking old shoe and jaded, sneaked up behind him, glued her hips to his for some bump and grind, grabbed a handful of exposed cheek, gave it a squeeze and walked away looking bored and nonchalant.

Mr. Goodwrench, Act Four, rounded out the set with hips that rolled like ball bearings, but people were running out of singles and Dr. John was a hard act to follow.

'So what do you say ladies, " the MC asked. "Shall we do this again sometime soon?" The house roared in falsetto.

Album releases '86

By Christine Pakkala

Staff Writer

Cyndi Lauper had better get her 1986 album out soon if she wants the public to remember who she is, and Madonna would be shrewd to lay off in 1986 before overexposure kills her, KZFN disc jockey Steve Shannon said in assessing the album outlook for '86.

Michael Jackson and Lionel Richie are releasing albums in early spring, and Shannon said those will be "monster albums."

'Say You, Say Me" (Richie's hit single) was just the tip of the iceberg for this album, Shannon said."And Jackson's new album might not be anything like Thriller, but it will still be great.'

Guitarist Brian Setzer, formerly of The Stray Cats, recently released his first solo album, according to People magazine. Setzer describes it as 'meat and potatoes with Tabasco sauce....'

Blondie is also recording a comeback album after a threeyear absence caring for her seriously-ill boyfriend, a writer and guitarist for the band.

Duran Duran. whose members formed Arcadia and the Power Station in 1985, plans to regroup early this year.

New songs recently added to tion and keep it. KZFN's play list, said DJ Gary Rhodes, are Midge Ure's "If I Was;" Sting's "Russians;" INXS's "What You Need;" Sheila E.'s "Love Bazaar," Loverboy's "This Could Be The Night," Aretha Franklin's "Another Night" and Freddie Jackson's "He'll Never Love You."

Rhodes predicts a continuation of mid-'70s dance-music influence and a very basic voice and guitar sound also reminiscent of the early '70s.

"Quite a few singles, dance-type songs, made it into Top 40 airplay in 1985 and I expect it to continue into '86." Rhodes said.

Cherelle's new album High Priority

Carol Stavaas

For the Argonaut

The music world of "funk" has become more popular each year. Not only are the musicians themselves becoming more numerous but the listening audience has become more familiar with the danceable styles it provides.

One of the newest releases by Cherelle entitled High Priority is nonstop and upbeat, cut after cut! She uses her versatile, sexy voice to grab the listener's atten-

Side one of the album starts appropriately with "The Opening." a short instrumental of piano strings and drums which leads into the next song entitled "You Look Good to Me." Cherelle uses her voice to maximum effect, enticing everyone to get up and dance. The song is full of emotion clearly aimed at all good looking men.
"Artificial Heart" is directed at the same guys, but in this song Cherelle gives the impression that she thinks these goodlooking men have cold, untouchable hearts. By no means is this song a downer, however. It combines genuine feeling with an upbeat, danceable style.

'New Love" continues the strong beat and the lyrics explain how to entice the good feelings needed to keep the old love alive. "Oh No it's U Again" is another song directed at men, this time humorously. The moral of the song is that if a man wants to keep his women he should listen to Cherelle's words (songs). Cherelle makes it quite clear that she, or any women, needs a strong and secure man to keep her interest and desire alive:

Side two of this album also opens with a short instrumental, leading into a conversation between two men in a club. One of the gentlemen in "Saturday Love" is Alexander O'Neil, a handsome and talented man whose voice blends beautifully with Cherelle's. This song is guaranteed to melt anyone's

"Will you satisfy" makes it clear that love is not a one-sided affair, but that women have needs and desires too. "Where Do I Run To" slows down the pace and is packed with pure emotion. Cherelle's personality and her intense feelings pervade the song.

This album receives an A plus from me. Cherelle has an excellent back-up group of talented musicians. This album is a must for funk fans and even if that is not your style, the album is worth buying for the beautiful cover picture of Cherelle. She says that, "The earth has music for those who listen," and listening to her music one is inclined to agree.

ASUI president tells students to "fight parking"

UI students returning from Christmas break with hopes that the new year also brought new parking spaces will be sadly disappointed.

"There has been no change in White ASUI president said. "My hands are tied right now."

The parking situation changed this past summer when new parking regulations were released. Costs for permits in parking lots designated as gold, red, and blue lots were raised to $60. $30, and $15 respectively.

The gold lots totalling approxthe parking situation."Gino imately 446 spaces of the 3248 spaces available on campus were reserved for faculty. The red and blue lots remained open for faculty, staff and students.

These changes in the parking among others has been a concern of students since the beginning of the fall semester. White said that the best thing UI students can do is to fight to get some of the parking back.

He suggested that students fight the parking situation by getting involved. According to White, "there are only five student representatives on the faculty council which is not even enough to consider us a minority.

There is also no specific legislation regarding parking, he said. He said that he will be looking for student input in order to arrive at that

If everyone got involved there would be no problem, he added. But students have more impor. tant problems to concentrate on

Ul's paper wins liberal rag award

The Idaho Argonaut has been cited for "liberal bias" by The Leadership Institute, a national youth training foundation which conducted a Inaccuracy in Campus Media contest.

27, 1985. The Sept. Argonaut's column titled "The World Court doesn't count" by David Blakely was cited for this statement: "No doubt our allies and potential allies are wondering what sort of government calls the Soviet Union 'evil' and at the same time thumbs its nose at due process.'

Blakely told the Argonaut: "Criticizing this paper for a liberal bias is a joke. I have literally begged for a conservative response to my columns. To those involved in the Leadership Institute, my only response is either shit or get off the pot."

Argonaut editor Douglas

Jones said opinions in columns are not necessarily the official stand of the newspaper. "We try to recruit opinion from both conservatives and liberals and anything in between and anything on the outside," he

The Leadership Institute conducted the contest to explore "the overwhelming liberal bias of official college newspapers. Graduates of the Leadership Institute's training programs from throughout the country were invited to find campus media articles that skew facts, have a liberal bias or are offensive to common sense, Leadership Institute said.

Washington State University's Daily Evergreen won second place in the Leadership Institute's Inaccuracy in Campus Media contest for Joe Hudon's

"winning" article "Will Soviets Take Over World?"

According to the Leadership Institute, the article said: "At the high industrial level in which most countries live in today, (or are going to be soon) it seems inevitable that all countries will have to maintain a system where the working class is somehow subsidized by the government. Socialism."

A second article "Senate Nightmare is Helm's Dream," also by Hudon, won a 'dishonorable mention." It said, "It is a definite contradiction to be taught the Constitution of the United States after being told you have a moment of silence for praver."

Another college newspaper cited for "liberal bias" is the North Texas Daily for a published charge that Christian and family-oriented Americans want to repeal the Bill of Rights and restore slavery.

George Washington University's Current was cited for its article "Blatant Illegality." The Leadership Institute said the article said: "There are Cubans in Nicaragua — some are military advisers, who are needed and the Sandinistas are entitled to have." It said, "Nicaragua is not under Soviet control now. The United States' actions are pushing it in that direction."

The final article criticized was "Pro-Peace march goes from coast to coast" from The South End of Wavne State University located in Detroit. The Leadership Institute said the student paper said the proposed march will be "so captivating, so inspiring, that it just might lead to an end of the arms race.... The UI women's basketball squad will be taking on the Boise State Bronco's in a match-up of 2-0 Mountain West Athletic Conference rivals.

The match-up will take place Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in Boise and will give the improved Broncos their stiffest challenge of the year.

Both teams have defeated Weber and Idaho State for their two conference wins and both have strong overall records; UI is 13-1 while the Broncos own a 10-4 record.

The Vandals handily defeated the first two of their MWAC opponents and are hoping to continue their streak with a win over BSU.

Last year the UI took both games from Boise and they hold a 8-3 lead in the series that began in 1976.

The Broncos have almost equaled last year's total wins of 13 thus far this year and are hoping to upset the pre-season conference favorites.

Idaho's only loss this season came at the hands of the Temple Owls who defeated them by seven points in the first round of the Kangaroo Classic.

Boise lost earlier this year to the University of Oregon in a 82-50 blow-out; Idaho handily defeated Oregon earlier this year.

Men need their first Big Sky win at home

By Kathy McCanlies Sports Editor

Idaho basketball coach Bill Trumbo and the 6-9 Vandals will host the Boise State Broncos for their first home conference game of the year in the Kibbie Dome Saturday night.

"We've been playing well over (Christmas) break," Trumbo said of his team who had compiled a 3-4 record, including wins over U.C. Davis, San Francisco State and Gonzaga. "It's not like the two years before when we lost six straight." he added. "Students will have a better opportunity to see us in the Kibbie Dome.'

The Broncos, sporting a 6-8 record, will be looking for their first Big Sky Conference win after dropping their first two conference games to Idaho State and Weber State.

Boise State is struggling," commented Trumbo, but added that the Broncos will play a tough defensive game, especially at the half court. "To neutralize things we'll have to expose them to keep the pressure off us," he said.

Leading the Vandals will be sophomore guard Ken Luckett, who has been averaging a team high 16.8 points per game, placing him fifth among Big Sky scoring leaders. Junior forward Tom Stalick, with season averages of 11.3 points and 7.9 rebounds, is currently third in the Big Sky for both

Vandals lose at the line

By Kathy McCanlies Sports Editor

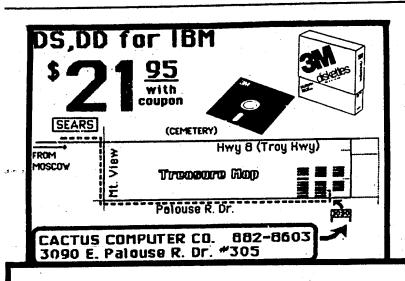

The Idaho Vandals gave the Eastern Washington Eagles the game only by the cold free-throw shooting in the second half of a nonconference game in Cheney Wednesday night.

When the first half buzzer sounded, the game was tied up at 34-34. Idaho Coach Bill Trumbo was pleased with the team's first half performance.

Idaho kept abreast with the Eagles until mid-way into the second half when Idaho was tied with EWU 44-44. Then Eastern scored 16 points to our ten. "We couldn't catch them,' Trumbo said.

Most of the points that Eastern scored over Idaho came from the free-throw line, where 19 of 24 went down compared to the Vandals' 9 of 19.

"The missed free-throws didn't help us," said Trumbo

Netra McGrew: Perserverance pays off for Idaho senior

Idaho guard Netra McGrew dribbles up court as she avoids Cougar Pat Broaden.Photo Bureau/Randy Hayes.

By Tom Liberman

Co-Sports Editor

For four years UI's women's basketball guard Netra McGrew has tried to gain a starting berth. She and fellow senior Paula Getty have bounced back and forth as starting guards for the Vandals since they were sophomores.

Basketball Coach Pat Dobratz said, "Netra and Paula bump each other on and off." Dobratz said McGrew came into this season with a little less weight and more quickness, and this was a factor in gaining the starting spot.

McGrew is from Tacoma, where she played high school ball for the Clover Park team.

"I was all right," McGrew said. "We had a 6-2 girl who was the star. I was a standout guard."

She did not plan to attend college, and the UI was the only school that she applied to. The UI changed her plans when they offered her a scholarship.

She played well last year when the team went 28-2 and expectations for the team were high going into this season.

The competition has been a bit stronger than last year but with McGrew pumping in almost nine points a game the team has lost only one match. In recent games McGrew has been scoring at a faster clip, a change she attributes to her and point guard Robin Behrens working better together.

"Robin and I are finally starting to click together," she said. Coach Dobratz agreed and added that the point total has been going up also because McGrew is driving the basket and getting more free throws.

Along with averaging nine points McGrew has 28 steals and leads the team in assists with 80.

The team is through with the more difficult stage of their schedule and only has Mountain West Athletic Conference foes from here on in. McGrew said that there is a difference in the play of more well known teams like USC and Missouri and the average MWAC opponent.

"The major difference is that the tempo is quicker for the teams not from the Northwest," she said. Idaho's only loss this season came from the Temple Owls, and McGrew said the team played badly with the exception of Mary Westerwelle. "It (the loss) probably helped the team more than it hurt us," she added.

She is looking forward to the rest of the season and hopes to once again make the NCAA playoffs and redeem last years loss to USC.

Her only regret has been the relatively low turnout of fans for the game. "We are a good team, I wish more people would come to our games," she said.

both field goal percentages and rebounding.

Luckett has been experiencing extra pressure put on him in the past few games by opponents, and his performance has suffered. "Teams are setting up plans for Kenny," said Trumbo, "and he's got to bring off the screens and open up. He's gotta move hard without the ball, because when he has the ball in his hands he puts it on the floor and it's easier (for opponents) to defend." Trumbo added optimistically that Luckett has his best games "without the ball."

Trumbo will be looking for guard Chris Carey, center Brian Coleman and forward Teddy Noel to join with Stalick and Luckett for the Vandal's first confrence win that coach Trumbo thinks is a "key game."

"To remain competitive in the confrence you've got to win at home," motioned Trumbo. The Vandals will remain at home for three games over the next two weeks and are looking to gain some valuable fan attendance as well as victories. "In the next two weeks we'll see if we can rally the troops," Trumbo said.

SAE, Upham, Campbell IM leaders Swimmers to host Senior Invitational

By Roger Gaboury Staff Writer

After one semester of intramural play, Sigma Alpha Epilon, Upham Hall and Camppell Hall are leading their respective leagues in the intramural point competition.

At the end of each year, a trophy is awarded to the team with the most points in each of the three leagues: the fraternity league, the men's independents league and the women's league.

The point totals, released by the UI intramural and campus recreation department, include all of the fall semester sports ex-

In addition to the point total awards, the women's division also awards a sportsmanship trophy to the group with the most participants throughout the year and a tournament trophy to the group that has won the most events.

The SAEs are leading the Fraternity League at the halfway mark with 1364.5 points. However, second place Alpha Tau Omega is only 11 points behind with 1353.5 points. Beta Tau Pi is in third place with 1323.5 points.

In the men's independent league, Upham Hall is enjoying a 143-point lead over Graham Hall, 932.5 to 789.5. Chrisman Hall is in third place with 716.5

In the women's league, which includes sororities and independent women's halls, Campbell Hall has a substantial lead over second place Forney Hall, 1018.5 to 672.5. Alpha Delta Gamma finishes the semester in third place with 635 points.

The SAEs, who were in fourth place in their league at the end of the point competition last year, have moved up from their fourth place ranking at the middle of the fall semester. Beta Tau Pi, which won the competition last year over the ATOs, slid down from their No. 2 spot at mid-semester while the ATOs moved up from No. 6. Delta Tau Delta, the mid-semester leader, is now at No. 4.

In the men's independents, Upham Hall has retained its No. Iranking as last year's point total champions and midsemester leaders. Graham Hall and Chrisman Hall have moved up from Nos. 7 and 9 respectively and were fourth and tenth last year.

The second place team from last year, Gault Hall, is now in ninth place and Whitman Hall. last year's third place team, is in fourth place.

This year, the men's independent league includes the offcampus teams with the men's residence hall teams. Offcampus teams were in a separate league last year, with John's Alley winning that division. That team is currently in twelfth place in the men's independents. Another offcampus team, Law School, is in sixth place at the end of the University and community live a dream

By Tish O'Hagan Staff Writer

The UI and the city of Moscow will participate in "Living the Dream" Monday to celebrate the life and civil rights contributions of Martin Luther King Jr.

The day's activities will open with a coffee hour at 10 a.m. in the Campus Christian Center, 822 Elm. St.

From 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. will be a continuous showing of videotapes in the SUB Ballroom, followed by readings and group singing and a performance by the Vandaleers. The session will end with a birthday party and cake for King at 3 p.m.

Car pools will leave the SUB parking lot at 7 p.m. and 7:15 p.m. for the lecture by James Farmer, founder of the Congress on Racial Equality. He is speaking at Washington State University.

Members of the UI and Moscow communities formed the committee sponsoring the "Living the Dream" program, which grew out of a desire for local recognition of the achievements of the civil rights movement and the man who devoted his life to it.

According to committee members Tiajuana Cochnauer and Lynette Carson, the hope is that Martin Luther King Day, a new national holiday, will gain momentum on campus and cause people to remember ideas behind the civil rights movement.

Toward that end, participants in the program will be asked to sign a pledge committing themselves to "loving, not hating, showing understanding, not anger, making peace, not war." The pledges will be sent to Boise with the rest of Idaho's pledges, and eventually to the Martin Luther King Center in Atlanta. Car

Moscow will join the UI in its celebration at noon, when the city's church bells chime with the campus carillon. The mayor will also make a proclamation.

For the future, the committee will work toward an entire week of activities honoring Martin Luther King Day, with more programs and more community involvement.

Transportation passes drinking bill

By Douglas Jones Editor

The first step towards raising Idaho's minimum drinking age from 19 to 21 was made Tuesday when the House Transportation Committee passed a bill calling for the move, over the objections of four Northern Idaho representatives.

The bill calls for the legal drinking age to be upped from 19 to 21 on the first of October this year. No exception is made in the bill for those who are able to drink legally now but will be caught under the line in October.

If Idaho does not pass the bill, Idaho will lose an estimated $8 million in federal highway funds next year under a law passed by Congress two years ago.

The bill's next step to becoming law is its passage through the House, a move that is expected sometime early next week. After House passage, it will be sent to the Senate where it will probably be sent to the State Affairs Committee, then back to the floor of the Senate. If the Senate passes the bill it will be sent to the Governor for his signature.

An attempt by the Idaho

Legislature to pass a similar bill last year failed when attemps were made to amend the bill to extend the time liquor could be sold to 2 a.m.

The bill passed the committee by a vote of 11 to four with representatives Richard Adams, D-Harpster; Dean Haggenson, R-Coeur d'Alene; Carl Braun, D-Orofino and Dorothy McCann, D-Wallace, voting against it.

In 1986 the Leadership Institute will conduct four nationwide Student Publication Schools to train students interested in publishing independent conservative campus newspapers.

Leadership Institute's President Blackwell said, "while most students are much more conservative these days, it's clear most of the official campus newspapers are still firmly in the hands of the hard core left that a former U.S. vice president once called a 'effete corps of impudent snobs."

Campus keeps getting better

By Michon Harb Staff Writer

New lawn lights, remodeling of the Administration Building and a new classroom are just some of the changes that occured at the . UI during the Christmas break.

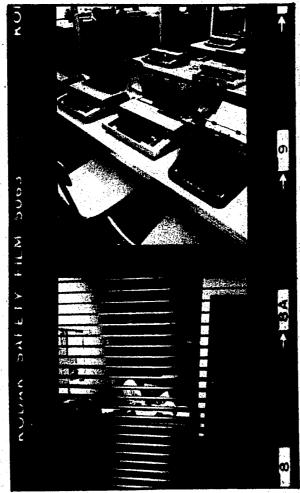

According to Joanne Reece, director of facilities planning, many major improvements were completed or will be completed within months.

One of the biggest projects was the installation of the Administration Lawn lights, which cover the lawn and the adjacent areas. The lights have been on for three weeks, but the project will not be completed until February, Reece said. The lights eliminate what was a major dark area on campus, she said.

Another project close to completion is the remodeling of the Administration Building auditorium. Reece said such changes as an increase in the slope of the floor for better sight lines, an extended stage, new seating and acoustical changes are in their final stages. She said she expects the auditorium to be reopened in late February.

A new classroom will be opening up in the Administration Building with new lights, carpeting and paint, Reece said. Room 204 will be a general classroom with a capacity of 48 students.

Reece said these three major improvements were funded by the General Education Capital Improvement Funds of the UI. Projects are decided upon by the Dean's Council and the Central Administration. A projects list is See Better, page 6

Choosing a long distance company is a lot like choosing a roommate.

It's better to know what they're like before you move in.

Living together with someone for the first time can be an "educational" experience.

And living with a long distance company isn't any different. Because some companies may not give you all the services you're used to getting from AT&T.

For instance, with some companies you have to spend a certain amount before you qualify for their special volume discounts. With some others, voice quality may vary.

But when you choose AT&T, there won't be any surprises when you move in. You'll get the same high-quality, trouble-free service you're used to.

With calls that sound as close as next door. Guaranteed 60% and 40% discounts off our Day Rate—so you can talk during the times you can relax. Immediate credit for wrong numbers. Operator assistance and collect calling.

So when you're asked to choose a long distance company, choose AT&T. Because whether you're into Mozart or metal, quality is the one thing everyone can agree on.
