BORAH SYMPOSIUM

Moderator Philip Habib and Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs Rony Milo discuss the Palestinian issue at last night's Borah Symposium. Photo Bureau/Tina Old-Mouse.

"Land for peace" seen as only solution

By David Blakely
Associate Editor

"Land for peace" was the overriding theme of last night's Borah Symposium. This concept, which calls for Israel to return the occupied territories of the West bank and Gaza strip to the Palestinians as a means to secure peace in the region, was stated by both Ryan Crocker of the State Dept. and Judith Kipper of the American Enterprise Institute.

The discussion, which was moderated by UI graduate Ambassador Philip Habib, also included Mr. Hanna Siniora who is the editor of Al-Fajr, a Palestinian newspaper in East Jerusalem, and Mr. Rony Milo, a member of the Israeli Knesset.

The discussion opened with short statements from each of the participants and then moved on to a question and answer session with the audience.

Mr. Siniora stated that the P.L.O. was the legitimate and democratically chosen representative of the Palestinian people and should be so recognized by Israel. He also claimed that the Palestinians were prepared to recognize Israel's right to exist and enter into peace negotiations in the near future.

Mr. Milo responded that "terror is the aim of the P.L.O." and that Israel would never enter into negotiations with a terrorist organization.

Ms. Kipper underscored this problem, and drew criticism from Mr. Milo, when she stated that although terrorism was reprehensible and unquestionably criminal, we nevertheless needed to come to grips with the problems that cause people to engage in such drastic measures.

She further highlighted the growing crisis in the Arab world with the observations that 60 percent of all Arabs are under the age of 20 and have known nothing but a life of war. She also noted that the Arab world is in an economic recession as a result of the fall in oil prices.

Mr. Milo, speaking stridently at times, illustrated his opposition to negotiations with the P.L.O. by asserting that the P.L.O. had never in its entire history attacked anything but women, children, and unarmed civilians. Mr. Siniora did not challenge this claim.

For his part Mr. Siniora continually stated the Palestinian position that they were willing to negotiate with the Israelis. He further said that even should the Palestinians receive the occupied territories it would only amount to 20 percent of the land that was taken from his people by the 1947 United Nations resolution establishing the Israeli state.

Mr. Crocker and Ms. Kipper elaborated the Reagan administration's position by stating that the different countries and factions in the Middle East would only achieve real and lasting peace when they are able to deal with each other face to face without using America as a go-between.

Ms. Kipper also stated that a major obstacle to peace was Israel's refusal to establish any permanent national boundaries.

In the question and answer session the majority of questions focused on terrorism. Mr. Milo received a number of questions which asked him to distinguish between the terrorism practiced by the Palestinians and that practiced by the Israeli leaders Begin and Shamir during their fight against British rule in the 1940s.

Mr. Milo responded that these leaders only attacked military targets. Mr. Siniora replied that nonetheless, these men did terrorize Palestinians during this time.

High schoolers can go to college through quest

UI News Bureau

Gifted and talented students who will enter grades seven through 12 next fall and the UI can get together again this summer in the Idaho Quests program.

The two-week summer residential program is designed to bring bright, creative students together in an atmosphere where they can share experiences and stimulate each other's thinking and creativity. Idaho Quests exposes these students to the kinds and levels of academic experience not commonly found in their schools.

The program will run from June 15 through 27 on the UI campus. The application deadline is March 30.

Students will experience regular campus living and attend classes in such areas as mathematics, science, medicine, engineering, architecture, computer science, philosophy, forestry, anthropology, time and money management, music, visual and performing arts, foreign language and law. Each student takes three classes.

School days are about the same number of hours as a regular school day.

In addition, there will be field trips, special lectures, visits with mentors, and recreational and social activities planned for the interests and ages of the students involved.

There is supervision by qualified personnel at all times.

The fee is $300 for room, board, educational materials, instruction and recreation.

Arrangements for payment will be made at the time of selection.

Students must be nominated to be considered for acceptance to the program. Criteria for nomination include:

- Scores at or above the 98th percentile on an individual intelligence test and on an achievement test.

- Evidence of outstanding ability and creative or specific aptitude or interest.

- A recommendation based on observation of student performance.

- Documented opinions of recognized experts as to the student's ability in producing a project.

- A letter from the student stating why he or she wishes to participate in Idaho Quests.

Legislative Bill Update

The following bills that affect student life and/or the university are being considered in the Idaho State Legislature.

- Senate Bill 1364: Defines tuition and fees. The bill was drafted by the Senate Education Sub-Committee on the Definition of Tuition. It seeks to define the fees currently charged at the universities and colleges in order to remove the question of constitutionality of the charging of the Institutional Maintenance Fee. The Governor signed the bill into law.

- Senate Bill 1245: Allows the State Board to grant tuition waivers for nonresident graduate students. The bill's passage will clear the way for reciprocity agreements with other states. The Governor signed by the bill into law.

- Senate Bill 1335: Establishes a State Department of Higher Education with an executive officer called the chancellor of higher education. The chancellor, who is responsible to the State Board of Education, has in his service the presidents of UI, ISU, BSU and LCSC. This bill is in the Senate Education Committee where it will likely be left in the committee.

- Senate Bill 1336: Establishes a University of Idaho System of Higher Education, with an executive officer who is the president of the UI. That officer would be called the chancellor, and he would be responsible to a new Board of Regents (for higher education only). In his service would be the presidents of ISU, BSU, and LCSC. This bill is in the Senate Education Committee, where it will likely be held in committee.

- Senate Bill 1224: Extends the drinking hours to 2 a.m. and allows bars to be open on Sundays except holidays. This bill is expected to be acted upon soon in the House.

- House Bill 428: Raises the legal drinking age to 21, extends the drinking hours to 2 a.m. and allows bars to be open on Sundays as of Oct. 1, 1986. The bill does not provide a grandfather clause for those who may be drinking legally now but who would be too young if the age is raised in October. The bill does allow people between the ages of 19 and 21 to continue selling, serving or dispensing alcohol in the course of their employment. this bill is in State Affairs Committee and will likely not be reconsidered because of House Bill 686.

- House Bill 519: Provides for a college student to be a non-voting member of State Board of Education. This bill is being held in the House Education Committee.

- House Bill 686: Raises the legal drinking age to 21, extends the drinking hours to 2 a.m. and allows bars to be open on Sundays as of Oct. 1, 1986. The bill does not provide a grandfather clause for those who may be drinking legally now but who would be too young if the age is raised in October. The bill does allow people between the ages of 19 and 21 to continue selling, serving or dispensing alcohol in the course of their employment. This bill failed on the floor of the house on March 7, by a vote of 39-43-2.

- House Bill 700: Raises the legal drinking age to 21. The bill does not provide a grandfather clause for those who may be drinking legally now but who would be too young if the age is raised in October. The bill does allow people between the ages of 19 and 21 to continue selling, serving or dispensing alcohol in the course of their employment. This bill was referred back to the Ways and Means committee.

Hamilton chosen Idaho's Cherry Blossom

Ann Hamilton, UI student and member of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority will represent Idaho at the Miss Cherry Blossom U.S.A. in Washington D.C. this April.

By Tish O'Hagan
Staff writer

A UI freshman has been chosen to represent Idaho in the '86 Miss Cherry Blossom contest.

Ann Hamilton, a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority, will travel to Washington, D.C. in April to compete with 51 other women from every state for the title of Miss Cherry Blossom, U.S.A.

The annual contest is sponsored by the Japanese Embassy as part of the Cherry Blossom Festival, which is held in Washington to honor Japan's gift of cherry trees to the city. It takes place every year when the trees are in bloom.

Hamilton, whose sister was a representative for Idaho in a previous contest, was contacted by the contest's director and asked to send in a resume. She said she was unsure at first because she has never been in this type of competition before. "I'm not the beauty queen type. I don't think. But what they want is a real Idaho girl, someone who can actually milk a cow," she said.

Hamilton will spend the week of April 6-12 in Washington. During that time, she will meet President and Nancy Reagan and the political leaders of Idaho, visit the capital's tourist attractions and attend a ball and other functions celebrating Japanese and American culture.

If she wins, Hamilton will be Miss Cherry Blossom, U.S.A., and will receive a paid trip for two to Japan. Hamilton said she sees the contest as a chance to meet new people and see the capital. "I can get a lot out of Washington in one week. I'm going to make the most of it," she said.

Hamilton was born in Buhl, Idaho, and has lived there all her life. Five of her brothers and one sister have also attended the UI.

First off-campus meeting on own-turf

By Erin Fanning
Staff writer

Off-campus students can meet with their ASUI Senate representatives Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the Garden Lounge.

Sen. Paul ALee said he hopes the Garden will provide an informal atmosphere for the meeting. Sen. Richard Burke also represents off-campus students, and he will be at the meeting.

This is the first senate meeting of this semester for off-campus students.

The meetings will be held once every two weeks, and the Garden management has agreed to have all the off-campus meetings at the lounge, ALee said. People are more likely to attend the meetings if they are kept at the same location, he said.

ALee said that in the past meetings were held once per semester at the SUB. He said that holding the meetings in an area other than the SUB allows students to meet on their "own turf" (off campus).

ALee said the first meeting will last only 15-20 minutes, and the main goal is to get a good turnout from off-campus students.

He and Burke plan to discuss current ASUI Senate issues and look for input from the students.

ALee said he hopes the meetings will give off-campus students "more of a voice than before."

The two senators were assigned to represent off-campus students during the Feb. 19 senate meeting, when a bill was passed to provide specific senators for off-campus students.

During that meeting Burke said the bill was dealing with off-campus representation which "had not been adequately dealt with in the past."

Senate committee holds drinking age bill

By Matthew Faulks
Legislative Correspondent

BOISE- The Senate State Affairs Committee voted 5-4 on Friday to hold House Bill 724 in committee, an action which will likely spell the end of efforts to raise Idaho's drinking age to 21 this year.

The Idaho House is making another last-minute effort to raise the drinking age in order to avoid the loss of between $4 million and $5 million in federal highway funds this year.

The new bill passed by the House approves a drinking age raise to 21 for only two years, instead of the previous bill held in the State Affairs Committee that made the change permanent.

In stating his reasons for voting to hold the bill in committee, Sen. Bruce Sweeney, D-Lewiston, said "I don't respond very favorably to federal blackmail." He added that he hoped this would help to put pressure on Congress, and on Idaho's Congressional delegation in particular, to work against blackmail of this type.

Sen. Sweeney also said that he was not convinced that a solution to the drunk driving problem lies in making illegal for 19 and 20 year olds to buy and consume alcohol.

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, said that there was relatively little discussion about the bill in the committee. Sen. Peavey, who also voted to hold the bill, indicated that the bill was brought before the committee and acted upon within minutes.

Those who voted to hold the bill included: Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grandview, Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, Sen. Kermit Keibert, D-Hope, Sen. Bruce Sweeney, D-Lewiston, and Sen.

John Peavey, D-Carey. Those opposed were Sen. James Risch, R-Boise, Sen. Vearl Krystal, R-Lewisville, Sen. Mark Ricks, R-Rexburg, and Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs.

Reagan's Unraveling Accusations

Last week's vote in Congress to not send military aid to the Contras has saved us from a possibly costly and embarrassing foreign policy mistake.

With the second round of lobbying hot in the air, let's hope that someone takes the president aside and tells him that his misinformation has started to unravel.

Reagan pulled out all the stops last week in his effort to gain $100 million in lethal aid to the Contras fighting against the elected government in Nicaragua.

But the first casualty in last week's lobbying showdown, as it is in most battles, was truth.

Last Sunday night Reagan said that Brazil, Colombia and Uruguay were among the targets of Nicaragua's "outlaw regime."

This came as a surprise to Brazilian leaders who said that there is not any present insurgency that they know of and have asked for an explanation of Reagan's remarks.

The administration of Colombian President Belisario Betancur told the U.S. press that it was "completely satisfied" with the response of Managua to queries about Reagan's involvement in a guerrilla-army shootout in Bogota last November in which more than 90 people were killed.

Uruguayan officials say Reagan's information is somewhat outdated, since the Tupamaros — the rebel organization of the '60s and early '70s which Reagan said is linked to the Sandinistas — are now "rehabilitated" after long years in prison, with some of them now involved in Uruguay's new democratic government.

Last week Reagan was also repeating charges which he had been making for the last two years, saying that "top Nicaraguan government officials are deeply involved in drug trafficking."

But the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration says it knows of no evidence to support that.

On the other hand, evidence has been accumulating that the Contras — Reagan's moral equivalent of American's founding fathers — are directing cocaine deals themselves. Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams acknowledged to Congress that one of the Contra groups operating out of Costa Rica is being investigated on that charge.

The president also said past U.S. efforts to negotiate with the Sandinistas had been rebuffed. The Nicaraguans, other Latin American nations, many U.S. churches and a large number of congressmen say that the administration never negotiated seriously.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., pointed out that it was the Reagan administration, not the Sandinistas, that cut off peace talks in Manzanillo, Mexico, between the U.S. and Nicaragua on Jan. 18, '85.

Reagan has repeated charges that the elections which placed the Sandinistas at the helm of the Nicaraguan government were fraudulent. But the Swedish observers, many international organizations, and even U.S. observers said that the Nov. 4, 1984 elections were more fair than any other national elections in Central America (including the U.S. backed election in El Salvador) with the exception of Costa Rica whose elections are hailed as the most fair in Latin America.

On the other hand, U.S. observers pointed out that Reagan's administration encouraged at least two opposition leaders to withdraw from the elections in hopes of making the elections one sided — hence fraudulent.

Reagan says that Nicaragua is the next Cuba in the western hemisphere. That may be true if the Reagan administration continues to attack the Sandanista's militarily and economically, forcing them to align with the Soviet Union to gain security and markets. They could be likened to the U.S. Cuban policy in the early '60's.

Pat Buchanan's remarks topped off the lobbying effort by stating that anyone who did not vote for Contra aid was in favor of communism. That's the kind of rhetoric McCarthy used to scare America into jailing thousands for merely mentioning the name of Marx.

If Reagan does not want to see another major foreign policy defeat in congress, he should start by leveling with Congress and the American people. It's '86 and the lawmakers and the American population are not going to stand for misinformation and scare tactic as a way of achieving a passage in legislation.

Who's Our Ally?

Kirk Nelson
Columnist

U.S. and Israel relations have had some odd moments in the past — odd in the sense that they are not the sort of thing that one would expect of such close allies.

The recent case of Israel spying within the U.S. is one such example. Obviously they felt a need to know something which we were not ready to tell them. An even more tragic and bizarre event occurred in '67, and it, too, was related to spying, but this time it was the U.S. spying on Israel.

In June of '67, a U.S. intelligence gathering ship, the U.S.S. Liberty, was sailing off the coast of the Sinai in the Mediterranean Sea. Israel was preparing to launch a sneak attack on Syria in which Israel intended to seize the Golan Heights. What was of major importance to Israel was that no one should know of their preparations because they believed the element of surprise was of critical importance.

Israel had already dealt Egypt a crushing military defeat in the three days before and now they wished to settle an old score with Syria. The Liberty, however, presented a problem. The ship could and did monitor Israel communications and because of this any upcoming surprise attack on Syria would become known by the Americans.

The Israelis chose an odd way of dealing with the problem. They decided to sink the ship. On June 8th, the Liberty was attacked by jet aircraft which rocketed and strafed the ship. Next they sent another wave of aircraft which napalmed the ship. The Liberty refused to sink, so they sent in motor torpedo boats which put a 40 foot hole in the Liberty's hull. The torpedo boats then machine gunned the life rafts which had been cast off.

Attack helicopters loaded with troops were sent in for the coups de grace, but American aircraft arrived in time and the helicopters withdrew. The Liberty had been under attack for two hours and in this time 34 Americans were killed and 171 were wounded.

Now the story gets even stranger. Israel claimed it believed the ship was Egyptian, but the trouble is the Egyptian navy possessed no ship which even closely resembled the Liberty. Furthermore, the Liberty flew a huge U.S. flag throughout the attack.

The U.S. also behaved quite strangely. The U.S. court of inquiry suppressed testimony of the U.S. sailors involved and issued outright lies as to the events which had occurred. Both sides went to great lengths to deny access to reports and documents involved in the case.

To a large extent, they were successful in keeping the whole affair out of the public eye. Even when an Israeli source strongly implied that the attack was no error, nothing happened. To this day, nothing more has been said on the matter. Israel apologized and the U.S. accepted that apology.

In the end, one is left wondering just what type of ally we are supporting to the tune of $3.7 billion per year. It also raises some serious questions as to just what the hell our own government is doing. To date these questions remain unanswered.

Off-campus meeting

Dear Editor and Off-Campus Students.

Unlike the All-New Price is Right Show, you aren't likely to win big bucks by attending an All New ASUI Off-Campus Student Meeting, but you certainly don't have anything to lose. Held in the relaxed atmosphere of Moscow's Garden Lounge (commonly known as "the Garden"), the All New Meetings promise to be anything but boring.

Hosted by the nutty Richard Burke and myself (your newly designated Off-Campus Student representatives), the All New Meetings promise to be more fun than Jello pudding.

The meetings will be held every other Wednesday at 4:30 p.m., beginning March 26. Please plan on attending, and thank you for your time.

Bill 1335 will be interesting study

Dear Editor.

I note with interest that bill now pending in the Idaho Senate, -1335, which would establish a state Department of Higher Education with a Chancellor of Higher Education as its chief executive officer. The State of South Dakota for some time employed a similar arrangement. In fact, both UI President Gibb and ISU President Bowen served at one time in the capacity of Commissioner of Higher Education for South Dakota. Their experiences in that office, and efforts to unify the institutional structure of higher education in South Dakota would, I am certain, be of interest to your readers. In fact, Dr. Gibb left the State of South Dakota under less than the most favorable circumstances as a result of that effort.

While the creation of an overseeing chancellor for Idaho's higher education network has much to recommend it from an organizational and management standpoint, it will be difficult to implement and operate in light of the parochial political pressures which will undoubtedly come to bear on the legislature. The obvious concern is to what extent, if any, the chancellor system will distinguish the individual identities of each particular institution.

The outcome either way will undoubtedly make for an interesting case study of the politics of higher education, some of the most intense which may be found.

Men from the boys, guns used as toys?

Dear Editor.

My bubble has burst and I'm mortally wounded. At first I was outraged that the Chief of Police would lower himself to such an unprofessional letter to the editor (3/21). But after some thought and a great deal of counsel with friends, clients, and lawyers, I want to thank Police Chief Dave Cameron for the free ad. Gotcha Games is no more of a "violent crime" than the good-guy/bad-guy games children play with the pop guns and squirt pistols their parents buy them. These are as much "firearms" as are the Paint Marking Pistols we use in Gotcha Games. Chief, the way that you tell the men from the boys is how responsible they are with their toys. I find it hard to believe that the Chief of Police for the city of Moscow would greet new business to the city in such a manner as to call them "violent crime." And then to suggest that the business should be run for anything other than profit is foolish and un-American.

Yes, I'm in the Wildland Recreation profession, and recreation is defined as any leisure time activity that is enjoyable and rewarding. Perhaps the Chief thinks Gotcha Games is neither enjoyable or rewarding. Since you have never played my games, how do you know if they fit this definition?

Chief Cameron, there is something to be said about those who choose law enforcement for their vocation. Don't take me wrong, Moscow has some really outstanding law enforcement personnel. But when your officers go undercover, or enter an unsecured business in the middle of the night, they are running on a 100 percent natural high (adrenalin). Upon microanalysis it can be proved that this high is very enjoyable. It has to be the enjoyment of this type of work that keeps your officers happy because it is not the pay. You don't pay them even close to what they are worth. So you see, there is some thrill and enjoyment in what you call "vile and inhumane." You know, the great thing about Gotcha Games is that we don't kill anyone or anything, it is just a game. You can't say that for hunting, war, or police work. Does Chief Cameron hunt and have trophies on his den wall? Is there anything vile in stalking game of a lesser order by hanging around its feeding areas and watering holes during mating time, and then shooting it from 1/4 mile away and letting it suffer until you get to cut its throat? And then bragging about your deed by stuffing the remains for all to see. You can't explain this away by claiming that it is done for meat only. It is enjoyed because of the hunt, and then the kill. But in the case of hunting both parties don't walk away like they do in Gotcha Games. As for the law that you cite, what adults do on private property as long as they are responsible parties, and don't involve those who are not involved, should be their business and not yours. If we had less government controls and laws, and more personal responsibility, I think that your crime rate would go down. Then your time could be better spent going after violent criminals instead of after local business people. This way you need not hold enforcement of some misapplied law over the heads of your fellow citizens. If a citizen fails to exercise their responsibility, then they should be subjected to our justice system.

Learn and Earn through special summer program

By Patricia Hatheway
Staff writer

With summer approaching, the idea of summer school and working to earn money for the fall semester is entering the minds of students. The problem arising is that many students want to do both — earn money for the fall semester and graduate sooner.

The University of Idaho has solved this problem by creating a summer program called "Learn and Earn." This program lets a student earn six or more credits while employed by the UI in one of the many job opportunities on campus.

As a participant in the "Learn and Earn" program, a person could work a 10-hour shift from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. during the days between May 19, when the program begins, and June 10, when summer session begins.

During the summer session, the work schedule would be modified to an afternoon/evening schedule of six to seven hours per day. The program would then end with summer session on August 1.

Through the "Learn and Earn" program, in addition to earning credit hours, there is the opportunity of earning over $1,000 that may be applied to fall semester educational expenses. This amount is based on the assumptions that the student works 440 hours at approximately $4/hour, less tuition and fees for six credits and estimated housing and food costs from May 19 to August 1. The university's residence halls are offering a package room and board contract for $440 for the length of the program.

"I think anyone interested in going to summer school should check out this opportunity. Not only does it help a person further their education, but it also helps them earn money besides," said Don Harter, director of personnel. The program was defined last fall by Vice-President McKinney, who is the originator of the concept of "Learn and Earn" said Harter.

This program is particularly for students who are planning to attend the summer session and further their education, said Harter. The program redirects job opportunities and prioritizes them to assist summer school students, he said.

As of Monday, about 44 applications had been received by the Personnel office. "We'll continue to accept applications as long as positions continue to be listed with our office," said Harter. "However, it is unlikely that positions will be listed past April 19," he added. Harter also said that the office was hoping to be able to notify students about jobs by April 19.

It is expected that the program will exceed the job opportunities. If this happens, students who are unsuccessful will be encouraged to go to other job referral sources, such as the Moscow Job Service. Also, the Moscow Chamber of Commerce is cooperating with the University by asking their members to list jobs with the university that will conform with the needs of the program, said Harter.

Priority will be given to those students who enroll for at least six credits in the summer program, are enrolled in the spring 1986 session, are continuing their education next fall and are available to work full-time. Students are encouraged to fill out applications as soon as possible.

CHAMPIONS:

Women capture NIT crown

By Tom Liberman
Assistant Sports Editor

Amarillo, Texas was good to the Idaho Vandals this weekend as the women swept three games to capture the National Invitational Tournament.

In the finals, Idaho swept by the "Run and gun Lady Demons" of Northwestern Louisiana 100-91. Tournament MVP Mary Raese scored 27 points in that contest and led the UI in scoring in all three games.

The second game, the Notre Dame matchup, might have been the best of the tournament as the Vandals blew a 14 point lead and let the game go into overtime. They then scored the final six points in the last minute to capture the win.

Sunday afternoon a crowd of almost 100 gathered at the Best Western to greet the returning Vandals. Netra McGrew, who set one record and tied another in the Tourney, led the team and carried the first place trophy.

McGrew set the three game assist record at the Tourney and also tied the single game record. She said she carried the trophy because "I was the first one off the van; it was my turn I guess," she said.

Head Coach Pat Dobratz was not able to attend the reception because she is in Kentucky watching the women's NCAA final four, but Assistant Coach Ginger Reid was there.

"All season long we've said if we can get all five playing at once we would be unbeatable," said Reid.

Five players were in double figures for both the Notre Dame and the Northwestern games. Robin Behrens came out of a season long slump to score 39 points in the three games.

"I wanted the ball and I wanted to shoot," she said. "I felt different."

Making a contribution for one of the first times all season was Junior Paula Getty who came off the bench to score 31 total points, including 10 in the Notre Dame game and 13 against the Demons.

She said, "I knew this was it, and I should go out there and make the best of it."

Raese was especially pleased to beat the Notre Dame team who she said was cocky going into the game. "They had no respect for anybody."

Coach Reid agreed and said, "The first night they (Notre Dame) played excellent. People didn't think we could put two good games back to back."

Many of the women who had been to the NCAA tournament last year said that the NIT was a better tournament and that they had enjoyed it more.

"This tournament was far better than the NCAA; they waited on us hand and foot," said McGrew.

The tournament win might bode well for Idaho's future in recruiting. "We're iffy on two recruits," said Reid. "Hope they'll give us another look anyway."

At the reception, a telegram from the Mountain West Athletic Conference director was read that congratulated the team on the win.

The win marked the end of Idaho careers for Raese, Behrens, McGrew and Mary Westerwelle. Westerwelle was the second highest scorer for Idaho in the tournament and her last points set a record.

Since the NIT has gone to women's Division I, no team has scored 100 points in a game until Idaho did it. Westerwelle made that the last point of her four year career at Idaho.

Mary Raese is heads above the crowd during Sunday afternoon's victory reception for the Lady Vandals, 1986 NIT champions. Raese, named tournament MVP, was joined on the all-tournament team with Mary Westerwelle and Netra McGrew.

UTEP assistant Floyd new basketball coach

By Kathy McCanlies
Sports Editor

The announcement for the new UI head basketball coach came earlier than its expected date of April 1. Last Saturday, UTEP assistant coach Tim Floyd was named as Bill Trumbo's successor.

Floyd, 32, from Hattiesburg, Miss., was on campus Thursday afternoon as one of the three candidates considered for the position left open when UI athletic director Bill Belknap fired Trumbo with a three-year record of 28-59.

Floyd was the third candidate to be interviewed and according to UI Athletic Director Bill Belknap, that was all he needed to see to make the decision.

"He was selected because he did such a fine job when he was here on campus selling himself and what he'd like to do with the program," Belknap said of his number one choice for basketball coach. "Of all the people who talked to the candidates and who had an opinion, every one of them said that he's the best choice," he added.

The decision to announce the new coach before the April 1 date came with respect to time factors, notably the time left for spring recruiting and the time Floyd will need to arrive in Moscow. Floyd is currently on the recruiting trail for the UI.

Floyd is highly regarded for his recruiting abilities at UTEP ("Everyone said that he's a supreme recruiter," Belknap said), and he proved worthy as a leader of the

"Of the 30 athletes in the program that he had recruited, all but three have received degrees," said UI Athletic Director Bill Belknap team this season when UTEP head coach Don Haskins was ill for a game against the Oregon State Beavers. Floyd and company beat the Beavers 64-49.

Floyd was at UTEP for nine years as assistant coach for the Miners under Haskins, seven as the number 1 assistant. In six of the seven years at UTEP, the team has had six postseason bids. This season the Miners played in the NCAA tournament, but fell in the first round to the Bradley Braves, who then lost to Louisville, one of the final four teams.

Belknap said that another factor that led to Floyd's selection was the emphasis on academia. "He'll place a good deal of emphasis on academics," Belknap said. He also mentioned the high graduation rate the Miner basketball team has had over the years Floyd has been recruiter and assistant coach at the school. According to USA Today, UTEP had the second-highest percentage of graduating seniors in Division I basketball teams.

"Of the 30 athletes in the program that he had recruited," Belknap said of Floyd's nine year stint at UTEP, "all but three have received degrees."

Floyd will receive $43,000 in salary this year in a one-year contract with the UI. Floyd has a verbal contract of three years to turn the basketball program around, which was the same time Trumbo had. Trumbo was fired for the low income brought in from ticket sales and for the three years the Vandals spent in last place of the Big Sky.

The formal announcement will be made Friday morning when Floyd will be introduced to UI boosters and to the press at the University Inn Quiet Bar.

Summer Sess

Summer School options varied

Why should you attend the University of Idaho Summer Session? More than ever, it is an attractive option for students because it offers advantages not available during the regular school year. Students can choose from more than 400 courses ranging from standard core curriculum to special, high-excitement classes offered only during the summer. Sound exciting? Here are eight more good reasons to attend Summer Session.

■ Summer Session offers flexible scheduling. You can attend one of six terms offered, including a three-week Pre-session immediately following the spring semester. The wide selection of calendar terms allows you to pick the one that best fits your summer plans.

■ Summer Session offers fair fees. No out-of-state tuition is charged during the summer, so you pay the same rate regardless of residency. Also, because summer fees are based on the number of credits taken, rather than on a flat fee, you pay only for courses you take.

■ Summer session offers the opportunity to accelerate or keep abreast of graduation plans. With more than 400 introductory and advanced courses, including 27 core curriculum courses, Summer Session lets you speed up your graduation or allow for fewer courses taken during the regular school year. Summer Session can therefore be a sound financial and time management decision.

■ Summer Session offers concentrated study in one or two subjects. Summer is a good time for you to bear down on a tough course because you don't have four or five other courses to deal with.

■ Summer Session offers special, innovative courses that cannot be offered during the regular school year, including the award-winning "On The Trail of Lewis and Clark," "Glacier Park Field Study," the four-week "American Studies Institute," and "Study Tours to New York City and Japan."

■ Summer Session offers an average class size of only 18 students. This high teacher-student ratio gives you a greater opportunity to work with your professors.

■ Summer Session offers the warm days and cool evenings that make summertime the best time of year on the Palouse.

■ Summer Session offers a variety of recreational opportunities — rafting, kayaking and backpacking — all available through the UI Outdoor Program summer trips.

Overall, students will find Summer Session at the University of Idaho an enjoyable, exciting and rewarding experience. Few other summer activities offer so much.

Learn and Earn offers credit and money

The University of Idaho has created a special opportunity for students this summer — to learn while you are earning. You can participate in regularly scheduled summer program credit courses and be employed by the university in one of the wide range of job opportunities on the campus. The "Learn and Earn" program will start on Monday, May 19th, and end at the close of the summer session around August 1st. Some work opportunities may continue beyond that date; but, these are to be developed separately between the student and the department.

Pre-session leaves summer fun time

Okay, so you don't want to spend most of your summer going to school. You would much rather be tanning yourself on a sun-kissed beach, or exploring a national park, or just watching TV for that matter.

With the brand new University of Idaho Pre-Session, you can earn three credits and still have the entire summer for other pursuits. The Pre-Session runs from May 19 through June 6. Most offerings last the entire three weeks, although others are shorter.

You can register for the Pre-Session during the pre-registration period that begins April 15 or by May 14 in the registrar's office.

One of the "high-excitement" offerings during the Pre-Session is a home economics course titled "New York Fashion Merchandising Tour." The two-credit course involves a nine-day trip to New York City that offers students in design, retailing and merchandising a behind-the-scenes look at the fashion industry.

Students will meet "name" designers, buyers and marketing experts, and tour Fifth Avenue's department stores, fashion salons and costume collections. Also included are trips to two Broadway musicals, visits to Soho boutiques, a tour of the Fashion Institute of Technology, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Bluegrass, Rendezvous highlight Moscow

Moscow and the University of Idaho reach out a cultural arm and embrace the community with concerts, theatre, arts and crafts fairs and various other cultural events.

For the 2nd consecutive year From BRASS to BLUEGRASS, a series of Wednesday noon brown bag concerts are offered on the lawn to the North of the Administration building. The concerts begin on June 25 and run through July 30.

All concerts are open to the public at no charge and in case of rain will move.

The city of Moscow sponsors its annual summer arts festival, RENDEZVOUS in the Park, featuring Rafael Druian, Professor of Music, Boston University and former concertmaster of the Minneapolis Symphony, Cleveland Orchestra and New York Philharmonic.

The Idaho Repertory Theatre brings the excitement of professional theatre to the Palouse and Inland Empire beginning July 8; through August 2. Four productions will be performed at the Hartung Theatre. The 1986 season opens with "The Fantasticks" by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt. This simple, yet complex musical, full of memorable tunes, is a playful variation on the Romeo and Juliet theme, and will run July 8, 9, 10, 22, 25, 31 and Aug. 1.

Dracula by Deane and Balderston, is intended for all who love theatrical thrills. It was an enormously successful revival of the classic production performed on Broadway in 1927, and will run July 11, 12, 23, 26 and 30 and August 2.

Arms and Man by George Bernard Shaw is a satire on war and the professional fighting man with typical Shavian touches throughout to lighten this serious subject. This play will run July 15 - 17, 24 and 29.

The fourth production written by America's leading comedy playwright, is a portrait of the writer as a Brooklyn teenager.

Because this play is still in production on Broadway, watch for the announcement of the play's title on June 1. The production will run July 18 - 19, 21, and 27 - 28.

From rafting to kayaking

People attend the University of Idaho Summer Session for different reasons. But for many, the primary attraction is summer itself — the delightful warm sunny weather that makes the summer season the most enjoyable time of the year to experience Moscow with its easy access to the nearby rolling hills, mountain lakes, rivers, and wilderness areas.

If you're the type who likes climbing down the side of a mountain or jumping into a raft, kayak, or canoe to head downriver, the University of Idaho Outdoor Program is just the thing for you.

This summer the Outdoor Program is offering a mountain series and a water series of adventure. Included in the former are backpacking, rock climbing, mountaineering and the Mount Rainier Summit Climb, featuring techniques in glacier travel and crevasse rescue.

If water is more to your liking, the water series will feature beginning kayak trips, canoe trips, and the Salmon River paddle raft trip. Special emphasis for the whitewater kayaking trips is a session in the UI swimming pool, where students learn paddle movement, wet exits and the Eskimo roll.

The Salmon River trip is the Outdoor Program's most popular. Everyone helps guide the rafts down one of America's most scenic rivers.

"On the Trail of Lewis and Clark" and "Glacier National Park"

Got a touch of Indiana Jones in you? The University of Idaho Summer Session has a couple of high excitement courses that may be right up your alley.

The first is titled "On the Trail of Lewis and Clark," to be held July 7 through 13. The other is "Glacier National Park and the American Experience," which will run from July 6 through 12. Because each course is limited to 25 students, advance registration is a must.

The Lewis and Clark course offers students the opportunity to study the Lewis and Clark Expedition of 1804-06, including retracing the explorers' route across Idaho from Lolo Pass to the confluence of the Snake and Clearwater rivers. Students and their instructors will go to the sites visited by Lewis and Clark and attempt to observe discoveries made by the adventurers nearly 200 years ago — plants, terrain and Indian culture.

Students may earn two natural history, or a credit from each area.

The Glacier National Park course, one-week, interdisciplinary, covers the environmental history and significance of American National Park System.

It is part of the award-winning Cooperative American Studies Institute that examines the history and cultural perceptions of America, with particular emphasis on the Northwest frontier. Jointly developed by faculty members from the English, environmental studies, and comparative American culture departments, the institute offers three to four credits each.

King: Outdoor Programs

Besides offering the trips, the program rents a wide variety of outdoor recreational gear, including rafts, camping equipment, and climbing gear. Located in the basement of the Student Union Building, the Outdoor Program can be reached at 885-6170 for more information about their upcoming summer activities.

Numerous other recreational opportunities are available at the university and around Moscow for those who prefer something not quite as adventurous as climbing or white water rafting. The UI sports a championship, 18-hole golf course and many tennis courts strategically located around campus.

Within minutes of the city are opportunities for hiking, fishing, bicycling, canoeing and picknicking. Boyer Park and the Illia Dunes offer swimming, sunning, water skiing and surf boarding.

On the food front, barbecued chicken, baron of beef, baked salmon — they're all part of the summer barbecue program.

Beginning Tuesday, June 17, each barbecue is held in the beautiful Shattuck Arboretum with the serving line open from 6:00 - 6:30 p.m. Tickets must be purchased in advance from the Intramural and Campus Recreation Office located in room 203 of Memorial Gym. but don't involve as much travel are "Computer Application for Professionals" (July 11 and 12) and "Computer-Aided Design for Professionals" (June 27 - 28 and July 18 - 19).

The first offers students a general view of micro-computer geographic information systems (GIS) and their benefits in land planning, including environmental and resource management. It will include demonstrations of diverse GIS applications ranging from data base management to various mapping and graphic options.

The impact of computer-aided-design (CAD) on the design process will be scrutinized in the second course. Topics include office automation, system configuration and selection, and cost-benefit analysis with hands-on exposure to several CAD systems and related programs.

Advance registration is the key to all these courses.

Summer Session has five terms

If you thought summer school terms were too rigid, you haven't heard about the versatility of the UI Summer Session.

Students can select a three-week Pre-Session, a six-week term, an eight-week term, one of two four-week terms, a Post-Session — or any combination. Best of all, no matter what term they choose, they'll still have plenty of time for other summer activities.

The Pre-Session is new this year. It begins May 19 and ends June 6. During that time, students can earn up to three credits in courses ranging from education to law.

According to Sid Eder, Summer Session director, the big advantage of the Pre-Session is that it allows students to earn needed credits with minimum disruption of their vacation.

The first of two four-week terms runs from June 9 through July 3, while the second opens July 7 and continues through Aug. 1. Students can earn up to six credits during either term and choose from a varied menu of courses.

One of the largest selection of courses is offered during the eight-week term that starts June 9 and ends August 1, including core classes and special high-excitement classes that involve travel and study abroad. Students can earn 10 credits.

What do they offer that I have to take?

Face it, they don't call them "core curriculum" courses for nothing. You must complete your core requirements for graduation. So why not get a jump on the fall semester and consider getting some credits under your belt this summer?

Classes will be smaller, so the chances are much greater your instructor can give you the extra time and attention you feel you might need. Also, you can complete some of your core requirements without seriously affecting any vacation plans you might have.

The UI Summer Session offers nearly 30 core courses in five areas this year — communication; social sciences; natural and applied sciences; mathematical, statistical and computer science; and humanities and social sciences.

Some specific classes include essay writing, fundamentals of speech, introduction to biology, and world regional geography.

Advanced Registration saves you money

April 15 may be the day you have to pay Uncle Sam his due, but it's also a "red-letter" day for the UI Summer Session. That's when continuing student advance registration begins, continuing through May 20.

Just five simple steps are involved in registering for the Summer Session if you are currently enrolled in the 1986 spring term:

Pick up preprinted registration form at your college dean's office.

Meet with your advisor, arrange your course schedule, and get the signature of your advisor or major professor. Graduate students must also get the signature of the graduate dean, as must nonmatriculated students or seniors taking 500-level courses.

Go to the controller's office and pay the $25 deposit or full fees.

File the completed Official Registration Form with the registrar's office.

Receive from the controller's office a confirmation of your class schedule and fee statement.

Students not currently enrolled at the UI may register in person or by mail until May 20 at the registrar's office, room 104 of the Administration Building Annex using the convenient Summer Admission/Application form contained in the Summer Bulletin. It is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday through May 16, and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. after that date.

Besides avoiding the hassles of waiting until the official registration day of June 9, students who pre-register may save themselves some money. If you pay your fees in full by May 20, you are guaranteed the per-credit hour fees listed in the UI Summer Bulletin, avoiding any increases after the bulletin is published.

Beyond United Nations Resolution 242: Reagan's Chance for Peace

By Cinda Thomson

The following are excerpts from UI student Cinda Thomson's winning essay "Beyond United Nations Resolution 242: Reagan's Chance for Peace." The essay contest was sponsored by the Borah Foundation Committee. The Borah Foundation sponsors the state-wide essay contest each year as part of the annual symposium on the causes of war and peace.

Thompson was awarded $200 at the Borah banquet last night.

Second prize was awarded to Marcia Taylor of Boise for "A Step Forward: U.S. Policy for Peace in the Middle East."

Currently, President Reagan's policy in the Middle East is to wait for the principal nations involved to progress to direct negotiations before the U.S. enters into the process. Since time alone is not likely to resolve the problems impeding the negotiations, Reagan should break the deadlock by opening diplomatic channels to all parties without holding them to prior acceptance of United Nations Security Council Resolution 242. By doing so, the aims set forth in his 1982 Peace Initiative become attainable, and fresh ideas will be infused into the peace process.

Resolution 242, adopted in November 1967, calls for the exchange of territories for peace, the full recognition of all sovereign states in the area, an end of war in the region, a just resolution of the Palestinians' problems and the help of other nations in ending the conflicts. It has been the cornerstone of U.S. policy in the Middle East ever since. In settling disengagement difficulties after the 1973 war, a promise was made never to negotiate with the PLO until it accepted Resolution 242, which it has not done.

Reagan, by suspending the requirement of prior acceptance of 242, could achieve two important ends at once. He could widen the gap between the Syrian-affiliated extremists and the PLO, which, at a recent demonstration for a slain West Bank mayor, received a showing of 50,000, the largest expression of support yet given the PLO in the West Bank. This is an important step in the maturation of the PLO, which has been trying to outgrow its reputation as a terrorist organization. Secondly, he could succeed where the Soviets have failed, in paving the way for a more constructive role in international politics for the PLO.

The Palestinian moderates run a serious risk in their willingness to negotiate with the U.S. and Israel at all, and a prior acceptance of 242 without any concessions would probably be fatal to the person who agreed to it. As recently as Sunday, March 2, 1986, Mayor Zafer al-Masri was shot and killed outside his West Bank office. Al-Masri was considered to be a moderate, not adverse to working with Jordan. Claiming responsibility for the slaying were two pro-Syrian Palestinian groups, the Popular Front of the Liberation of Palestine and the Abu Nidal group. They considered al-Masri guilty of selling out Palestinian interests to Israel.

come, of course, from the Israelis. However, they can have no doubt as to U.S. loyalty. The amount of military and economic aid received from the U.S. in 1981 alone totaled $2.2 billion. Reagan added his personal support to his official backing in the televised address discussing the 1982 Peace Initiative with the American public. He said "the United States will oppose any proposal — from any party and at any point in the negotiating process — that threatens the security of Israel. America's commitment to the security of Israel is ironclad. And, I might add, so is mine."

To avoid the certain outcry from the Israelis, the U.S. could move behind the scenes as Robert G. Neumann suggests, to contact the PLO in secret, possibly relying upon individuals with "private yet authoritative" status, who are known by the Arabs to possess influence with the U.S. government but who are not bound by the government's pledge to hold all negotiators to 242. While this would hold off Israeli objections, it would do nothing to solve the Palestinians' two great problems with 242: 1) their intransigence on 242 is the only power they have, and 2) any prior acceptance of 242 by a Palestinian puts him in danger of losing his life.

President Carter's peace efforts were immeasurably enhanced by the participation of Anwar Sadat, but it is incorrect to think President Reagan lacks any such advantage. He has at his disposal the power of a gesture similar to Sadat's journey to Israel to begin the peace process. By a bold act of statesmanship Reagan can open the door of discussion to 1.3 million people who have so far been unrepresented at parleys discussing their fate.

Boeing to help WSU recruit minority teachers

The College of Education at Washington State University is launching a program to solve the minority teacher shortage in Washington. Two of the state's major firms, Boeing and Seafirst Bank, have agreed to help.

Boeing and Seafirst have each agreed to provide scholarship support for two capable minority students throughout their undergraduate studies. Stephen Lilly, Dean of Education, announced at a news conference last Friday.

"Our goal is to have the first group of 10 freshmen enroll in the program this fall, and we are talking with other firms for additional support," he said. "We want to enroll academically capable and personally committed minority students who aspire to be teachers."

According to Lilly, there is no more important step the college has taken in the last two years than this one.

"This new program puts WSU on the forefront in addressing a major social issue

TIME OUT

Out on a Louisville limb

Greg Kilmer
Sports Columnist

They're like Marcos' millions, they're everywhere.

You know what I'm talking about, those spidery looking things that look like molecule structures. You probably guessed, I'm talking about the NCAA pairings brackets.

I mean it, they are everywhere. I've seen them hanging on refrigerators, (not William), sides of television sets, on walls of about every tavern around, in businesses and I even saw one on the side of a bin of clams at Pike Street Market in Seattle when I was over there (at $1.19 a pound, delicious clams I might add).

People get excited about the NCAAs, it must be like spring training, you know spring is on the way.

And I love the guy (or girl) who gets his brackets and proceeds to fill them out as religiously as a guy on death row or a future groom marks off Xs on the calendar.

I know quite a few of these type of people (not the cons or grooms).

I've got a friend with a bracket's chalkboard. Each year he dusts it off and chronicles the tournament's progress. He's got copies of the NCAAs since the Vandals were in it back in the good old days. I've even got a friend in Boise, who even with the most meticulous wife in the world, drew in the brackets on his shower walls. He told her he thinks real good in the shower.

Well, I've got to admit, I'm one of these type of guys. But I always grab three of the empty brackets before the gala event gets cracking.

With the first one, I fill out according to my heart. That one always gets blown out of the water. In 1982, I had Idaho going up with Memphis State in the finals. Yep, we beat Oregon State, Georgetown and Dana Kirk's boys to grab the title.

The second one I always fill out with my brain. I go through 32 games, I go through 16 games, I go through eight games, I go through four games and then I fill out the fabulous final four games. My heart gets a little involved, but I try to restrain myself.

On the third one, grabbed from the middle of my new Sports Illustrated subscription (thanks again Meg), I just chart how things progress.

Funny thing happened this year though, my No. 2 chart and my No. 3 charts look pretty damn similar, like .816 similar. I'll put that batting average up against any ol' Packer, McGuire or Vitale.

I went 27-5 in the first go-round, 11-5 in the second, 7-1 in the quarters and 4-0 in the tickets to Dallas. Excuse me for puffing out my chest, but that's not bad for a sports writer on my salary.

And I'm not through yet, I've got the final three games mapped out to a T. All you out in Argonaut land can go ahead and fill out your brackets, here's how it will go.

Although LSU surprised Georgia Tech and Kentucky, (both nailed by yours truly) they're done. They gave everything to finally knock off Kentucky in four tries. Louisville is rolling, 16 games rolling. Denny Crum is back in the finals.

The other side is a little more sticky. Even though No. 2 Kansas needed a little something extra (like 25 seconds) to knock off Scott Skiles and Michigan State, I pick them to knock off No. 1 ranked Duke. The March 17 edition cover page of SI says "Duke's the team to beat." The SI curse comes out, Kansas is the team to do it, although Duke beat the Jayhawks in the pre-season NIT final. Duke is a senior dominated team, they were as good then as they are now. Kansas has been getting better and better, just like their sophomore star, Danny Manning, quite possibly the best player left in the Final Four field.

Trackster split squad for wins

The UI men's track team split forces this weekend as half the squad traveled to Eugene for a meet while the other half made the trek to Pasco for its competition. Both groups has successful meets.

In Eugene, the Vandal sprinters showed their stuff as they swept the 100-meter dash and placed second and third in the 200-meter.

In the 100, it was the trio of Everton Wanliss, Patrick Williams and Chris Stokes that dominated the field while Stokes and Wanliss each came back in the 200 to do more damage.

The duo of Stokes and Wanliss teamed with newcomers Jeff Collins and Dayo Onanubosi, both freshmen, to come home with second place in the 400-meter relay.

At the Pasco meet, hurdler Creigh Lincoln lead the Vandals with a first-place finish in the 110-meter high-hurdles. Other top places were turned in by Chris Schulte who placed second in the 1500-meter and came back to place fourth in the 5000.

Rounding out the Vandal placers were a third place finish in the 400 hurdles by John Fahey and a fourth place in the 400-meter by Rob Simpson.

On the women's side, Julie Helbling enjoyed a successful meet by placing second in both the shot put and discus. Kirsten Jensen was the only other women placer as she captured third in the 100.

Women's Coach Scott Lorek taught the college men something in the men's 5000 as he out-kicked the field over the final 200 meters to capture the victory.

The women will be back in competition this weekend at WSU while the men will be in action at the Idaho championships in Boise April 4-5. The women will also be in action in that meet.

Co-Rec Volleyball Results: First-Six pack; second-Bears.

This will set up a sort of final game rematch, Denny Crum vs. Larry Brown, Louisville vs. UCLA. It was back in 1980 that Crum's Cardinals took Brown's Bruins in the finals. Look for the same conclusion. Take it to the bank, the crown is going back to Ali's stomping grounds.

That's what the my brain says, with a little influence from my wallet. I've got Louisville on two NCAA bracket boards. I could use the change Denny.

Ride 'em cowboy

The Fourth Annual Best Western rodeo turned out to be a disappointment for the UI rodeo club as it placed only one competitor in the weekend's activities.

Jeff Skinner, a freshmen from Montpelier, was the lone placer for the Vandals as he picked up a fifth in the calf-roping competition.

According to rodeo club President Mark Pratt the Vandal cowboys couldn't catch a break all weekend. "It seemed that in every event something stupid would happen and really hurt us. It's pretty disappointing," he said.

The top teams were Blue Mountain Community College from Pendleton, Ore., and Walla Walla Community College.

The rodeo as a whole was viewed a success by Pratt. "The crowds were probably the same as last year but they really participated and got into the competition. That makes it more enjoyable for everyone involved."

Any financial success of the event was not known at present but Pratt said he thinks the rodeo should make money for the second consecutive year.

Tennis team busy

By Kellie Gravelle

The Vandal tennis teams both reached midpoints in their seasons and with each game appear to perform better, said head Coach Patrick Swafford.

The men's team seems to be split into two teams. The top three, according to Swafford, are playing good solid tennis. "We could win every match," he said.

The bottom three started out weaker and therefore had further to go. "They are a lot better," Swafford said. "I anticipate that we can win more as we get better. They're working hard and I feel good about them."

The women, on the other hand, "have a real good chance to win every match no matter who they play," he said. "We have individual slumps but as a team we haven't. They just don't get down as a team."

On March 20 at WSU, the men lost 8-1, with Efre Del Degan the only UI competitor to win. "Washington State is, at this time, a little stronger. We could have won two more matches but they beat us. They played better than we did," Swafford said.

The women were playing short, as two teammates were left in Moscow to take examinations. "We couldn't get out of it," he said.

But it was these two matches that could have made a difference in the overall team match, which was lost 5-4. Swafford said, "It hurts with only five players. It would have been 4-3 otherwise, but they got the two free wins."

March 17, the tables were turned, however, when the UI men defended their home courts successfully against Gonzaga 8-1.

While UI students were on spring break, the tennis team traveled the coast playing teams from Oregon, California and Nevada.

The trip began March 8, when they traveled to Eugene to take on the University of Oregon. Both teams lost, with the men losing 9-0 and the women losing 5-4.

At the onset the women lost four matches. They then won the next four, which put them in a tie. Said Swafford of the final match, "It was tight. We just

UI exhibit combines cans, clothes and mirrors

By Matt Helmick
Staff writer

What do aluminum cans, women's clothing and bathroom mirrors have in common?

They are all subjects in the M.A./M.F.A Thesis Exhibit that is taking place March 21-28 at Ridenbaugh Hall. The show exhibits the art of Michael K. Wilson, Sally Graves Machlis and B.J. Hargrove.

Wilson presents the subject of aluminum cans. He exhibits several mixed-media pictures of aluminum cans in various bent and distorted positions.

Wilson said the statement in his pictures is simply about drawing. He wanted to come up with a format that dealt with basic compositional elements rather than deal with subject matter. He said that is why he used the crushed aluminum cans, so he could present these compositional elements by using the object and the open space around it.

Machlis presented clothing as her subject in various oil paintings. She made such a seemingly mundane subject interesting by presenting clothing of various countries and historical periods without using human figures to display or model them.

Machlis explains her works on a piece of paper hanging at the exhibit. It reads: "My interest in women's roles and the constraints of culture led to the works in this thesis show. I feel these concerns are personal and at the same time universal among women. I wanted to portray female figures in a symbolic and metaphorical way, and experimented with removing faces, heads and hands.

"Eventually, I omitted entire bodies, leaving only the moving garments to represent the original figures. Without the common cues of facial expressions, age, and racial identity, viewers can complete the images from their own visual memories."

Hargrove's work was with video. She presents a show called the Pre-Ramble which consists of four videos: The Chewing Scene, In the Bathroom Mirror, The Shower Fantasy and Michael Singer, Environmental Artist: A Parody.

The interesting thing about these short films is that each is actually two different films played at the same time on two separate VCRs while being displayed on two different screens. The films initially seem to be the same, but while they are playing you begin to notice deviations in content.

In the Chewing Scene for example, you notice that different people are being shown during the film although the two separate films are being played at approximately the same synchronization. This is an interesting idea, and to my knowledge, a new one.

Other outstanding features of Hargrove's films are the subject matter and content. The Chew-

Colonel Redl is a rather dry psychological study of treason. Apart from the brilliant performance of Klaus Maria Brandauer as the Colonel Redl and some beautiful photography this movie probably does not justify the two and a half hours required to watch it.

In the opening battles of World War I, the Austro-Hungarian Empire lost half a million men. It is almost universally thought that tens of thousands of these men died because of the treachery of Alfred Redl, a colonel of the Austrian General Staff and a top-level intelligence officer. Chronicles of the last days of the Hapsburg Empire, as well as historians of espionage concur in calling Redl an arch-traitor.

Colonel Redl is portrayed in the movie as a very complex character. From a very early age he is a staunch supporter of the ruling Hapsburg family and as a child he joins the army. Redl, who is from a poor peasant family, makes friends with another boy from a noble family and consequently strives to better himself. This dissatisfaction with himself and his station pervades Redl's life.

Redl's loyalty and ability in the army cause him to rise quickly in the ranks but he becomes increasingly disillusioned with his colleagues who are disparaging of the Hapsburgs. Thus Redl's intense devotion turns into massive betrayal.

Hungarian director Istvan Szabo, who won an Academy Award in 1981 for his Mephisto, acknowledges having taken many liberties with the Redl story. Referring to his role as co-writer with Peter Dobai of the screen play for Colonel Redl, he added, "I don't want to be handed a story written by someone else...I want to shape the whole story. What drew me to the Redl story was that Redl didn't like himself. He wanted to be someone else."

Colonel Redl is one of five nominees for Best Foreign Film so perhaps I overlooked something. In fact on reflection the film would have been tolerable if I hadn't been freezing to death in the Micro. (6:30 and 9:30 p.m.)

the past. They perform concerts and festivals utilizing chamber music from Haydn and Mozart through Bartok and Shostakovich as well as the most challenging works of the twentieth century.

UI student wins poster competition

By Sara Donart
Staff writer

A poster design by UI senior Karla Fromm was selected by the Renaissance Fair organizing committee to announce and advertise this spring's annual celebration in the park.

Fromm, a Spokane native majoring in graphic design, also had a hand in the '86 Mardi Gras poster, collaborating with faculty member David Giese on the poster's black and white depiction of costumed revelers.

Her Renaissance Fair poster will lean to the greens of spring. The poster will soon be sprouting up around town and campus, heralding not only the coming fair but the passing of winter's grey and dreary weather as well.

Jed Davis of Moscow, one of the fair committee members who helped select the winning poster, said it was tough to choose one design from among the many excellent ones entered. Poster proposals were submitted by about 35 people, many of them graphic design students from both Moscow and Pullman.

Davis said it was the "quality of spring" evoked in Fromm's poster that finally made the committee decide that her design best suited the spirit of the season.

"The poster is well designed," Davis said. "She knows what she's doing."

The poster, which is being printed by the News Review Publishing Company of Moscow, will make its debut on the walls and billboards of the Palouse soon after April first. The fair is scheduled for May 3 and 4.

Fromm, who will graduate in May with a bachelor of fine arts, hopes to remain in Moscow after graduation and find work doing graphic design.

in education," the dean said. "The decline in numbers of minority teachers is a social problem we cannot ignore."

"This new program is also our first attempt to build a partnership with businesses in Washington, and we are most appreciative of the leadership support of Boeing and Seafirst," Lilly said.

Lilly said two major factors are leading to a decline in the number of minority teachers.

One is the introduction of competency tests which have a disproportional impact on minority teachers.

"Another major cause is the increasing attractiveness of other careers to minority students," Lilly said.

"At one time, education was the favorite major of both minority and women students, but this is no longer true," he said. "We need to compete effectively for top minority students in Washington to attract them to the teaching profession."

The problem of low numbers of minority teachers will become increasingly critical over the next five years as the percentage of minority students in Washington schools climbs dramatically.

The minority student population grew from 7 percent of all students in '70 to 14 percent in '80. By '90, it is predicted to be as high as one out of three students in Washington schools.

In contrast, slightly more than 5 percent of Washington's teachers are minority individuals. Similarly, about 5 percent of the teacher education graduates at Washington's public colleges and universities from '80 to '85 were minorities.

In the '82 WSU graduating class, minority students amounted to 5.2 percent of the graduates, but just one percent of the graduates who had earned teaching credentials.

Currently, minorities comprise 11 percent of the total population in the state.

According to Lilly, the shortage of minority teachers results in a lack of minority role models in the education profession. In addition, efforts to increase cross-cultural understanding will be hampered and the cultural needs of minority students will not be met.

The college is seeking to raise $35,000 in corporate support this first year to provide funds for room and board, books, and modest program support for the first 10 students. However, additional support from existing WSU student financial aid and parental support totalling $2,000 per student would still be needed.

Although the subjects and mediums are varied, the M.A./M.F.A Thesis Exhibit offers a truly impressive selection of works from all three of the artists.

The UI Faculty Council will discuss its options today concerning the State Board of Regents' recent changes in the university's financial exigency (critical emergency) policy.

Council Chairman David Walker and a chair appointed committee will present their conclusions on what course of action the council should take.

The meeting will be held at 3:30 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge of Brink Hall.

The bathroom mirror between the two video screens is in fact a two way mirror and during the reception Hargroves filmed people watching her videos and looking at themselves in the mirror.

Michael Singer, Environmental Artist: A Parody is amusing in its depiction of an artist explaining the art in nature and everything mundane.

couldn't pull it out. We dug the hole just a little to deep." The Vandals then began their tour of California, when they first met Santa Clara University. The men were defeated 7-0 and the women's matches were rained out. Menlo College was the next opponent. The tables were reversed, however, with the men being rained out and the women playing, to win 6-0. At this point, Swafford was exasperated with the weather. He said the rainouts were "very typical of the trip."

Two days later the Vandals played the University of California. The men lost 7-2 against a top NCAA division III team. The women played both St Marys, winning 5-3, and Santa Clara University, losing 4-2.

The next day, Sonoma State destroyed the men's team 8-1, while the Idaho women won 9-0. "Their women's team was so weak that between the two teams it was like night and day," Swafford said.

The sun finally shone on March 14. Despite this, both teams lost at the hands of the University of California-Davis, both losing 7-2.

Snow then began to fall and the team traveled to Reno. Both teams again lost, the men 5-1. "We played indoors on the worst courts. It wasn't indicative of the quality of either team," Swafford said.

The women played at the MGM Hotel losing 5-4. Swafford said, "With seven hours of play, I'm not sure it was indicative to the team. It was a long trip and we had to sit around all day. Had we played under normal conditions, we would have done better."

Another question dealt with Israel's invasion into Lebanon in 1982. Mr. Milo claimed that this was to prevent the Palestinians from shelling Israeli towns and villages. This brought an immediate response from Ambassador Habib who stated that "not one shell" had crossed this border in the year before and that the invasion had been conducted for "other reasons."

Mr. Siniora debated the claim by Mr. Milo that Israel was the only democratic country in the region. He stated that Palestinians living in Israel were subject to six months imprisonment without a jury trial if accused of a crime. He elaborated other restrictions that the Israeli government had put on Palestinians and concluded that "Israel is becoming another South Africa."

Mr. Milo took issue with the plight of the Palestinians in Israel by stating that despite the Arabs immense wealth they had done virtually nothing to ease the plight of Palestinians in refugee camps in Arab countries. Mr. Siniora did not respond.

Regardless if any problems were directly solved by the exchange of opinion it did provide an "outstanding educational forum for those not acquainted with the details of the conflict in the Middle East. We should all hope that direct negotiations and strong consideration of our government's "land for peace" proposal will occur in the not too distant future.

El Salvador releases prisoner Antonio Quezada

Editor's note: This release was compiled by Wade Bilbrey from information received by Advocates for Peace in Central America.

Antonio Quezada was released by El Salvador's National Police yesterday morning after being arrested last Thursday, March 20 in San Salvador. Quezada was held for investigation. No charges were filed.

A representative of a three-person delegation from the United States which had flown Saturday to San Salvador to seek Quezada's release said yesterday that Quezada's condition was not too good, but not horrible. Many people had called the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador and the National Police offices asking for his release.

Quezada was arrested and detained in accordance with Decree 50, a state of emergency order, which allows the police to detain someone for up to 15 days without filing charges and without allowing legal representation.

On Thursday, March 20, Quezada was arrested and taken from his home in San Salvador presumably by government security forces. Quezada is an outspoken critic of the administration of El Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte whose Christian-Democratic Party has supported the placing of Quezada's name on a Secret-Anti-Communist Army death list.

Amnesty International was concerned about Quezada's arrest and put out a national call in the United States for the Release of Quezada. Jesse Jackson and former Ambassador to El Salvador Robert White joined the call for Quezada's release. The Pullman group, Advocates for Peace in Central America, requested that telegrams be sent to either/or/both President Duarte or Colonel Reynaldo Lopez Nuila and recommends wording of the telegram as follows: DEMAND IMMEDIATE RELEASE ANTONIO QUEZADA RESPECT PHYSICAL INTEGRITY FROM (name(s) of sender(s)). President Duarte's address is Casa Presidencial, San Salvador, El Salvador. Colonel Lopez Nuila's address is merely San Salvador, El Salvador.

Antonio Quezada and Rodolfo Rosales, both University of El Salvador students, visited Pullman and Moscow in early November of last year where they spoke on the civil war in El Salvador. Rosales also met Congressman Tom Foley (R, Wash) and other congressmen and presented Congress with testimony on the human rights abuses at the University of El Salvador.

Quezada is a prominent leader of the popular movement in El Salvador. He is president of the student body of the University of El Salvador, and he is active in a broadly based worker group (Untes) which has asked: 1) that President Duarte's economic crisis package be rescinded; 2) that government dialogue be established with the rebel forces; and 3) that no further U.S. military aid be given to El Salvador.

A three-person delegation has gone to San Salvador to seek the release of Antonio Quezada. Those delegates are Jim Russell, a professor at Lewis and Clark College, Portland, Tim Marshall, a campus minister of Evergreen College, Olympia, and Pedro Novillero, president of the student body of the University of California-Berkley.
