

Board passes the bucks

The UI Board of Regents has relinquished its power of approving activity fees and given the responsibility to the university presidents.

In a surprise move yesterday the Board transferred limited authority to the university presidents to raise student activity fees and determine the areas in which the fees will go. This action cleared the way for a $15 per semester fee increase at the UI.

In a four to three vote, the Board instituted a policy which authorizes "the presidents (of the universities) to establish activity fees within an overall limit."

The policy, forwarded by Board Member Cheryl Hymas, defined "reasonable limit" as one in which total activity fees combined with the building fee does not exceed the Institutional Maintenance fee by ten percent.

Since UI students currently pay an IMF of $245 per semester, a building fee of $118.25 per semester, and activity fees of $141.75 per semester (activity fees plus building fee equals $265 or exceeds the IMF by 6 percent) it only left the UI room to increase fees $9.50.

The new policy was then amended to allow the UI to charge $15 more in student activity fees, or 12 percent over the IMF fee.

Boise State University, Idaho State University, and Lewis and Clark State College were held to the 10 percent ceiling but it is less stringent on the other institutions since their overall level of activity and building fees are lower than at the UI.

BSU can increase its fees $35 per semester, while ISU can increase theirs $55.75 and LCSC $10.50. The BSU figure is twice the total amount requested by the school.

Originally the UI officials sought to raise student activity fees by $23 asking $15 for Intercollegiate Athletics, $5 for Student Union operations, $2 for Student Accident Insurance, and $1 for Intramurals/Lockers/General Recreation.

But UI Athletic Director Bill Belknap asked that the UI's requested increase for Intercollegiate Athletics be lowered to $10 after the Board rescinded earlier action which would have dropped state support for athletics by ten percent.

That made the UI total requested fee increase $18.

At the onset of the hearing and debate it appeared that no increase for athletics would be forthcoming since three of the four student government's leaders expressed opposition to the athletics fee increase.

ASUI President Gino White told the Board that although the student senate had not taken a stand on the fee increase issue he felt that he could not support the requests because "it was damn time we give students a break (from annual increases)."

The student body president of Boise State University and LCSC's student vice-president told the board that their students did not support the fee increase.

The athletics director for BSU criticized the newly formed student senate and president, who had just been sworn in to office Wednesday, as not understanding the fee issue and said that if he had been allowed a chance to present his information to them they would not oppose the increase.

The Board's Finance Committee Chairwoman Roberta Fields told the board at the beginning of the debate that her committee had no intention of increasing athletics fees.

State Board member and State Superintendent Jerry

Evans disagreed and moved for BSU to be allowed to increase its athletics fees.

Evans told the Board that not increasing student athletics fees would make enemies out of university and college supporters who wanted the increase.

Board member Mike Mitchell told Evans "I don't see how we're going to improve our reputation with the students when their governmental entities come forward and only one says they're for it, and we'll accept that, and other institutions say they're against it but we ignore them."

Instead of increasing the fees now, Mitchell advocated that the Board study the issue of athletics funding and come back with proposals later.

At that point Hymas moved to turn the fee raising authority over to the institution's presidents.

New Argonaut editor named

By Douglas Jones
Editor

Shawn McIntosh, the managing editor of this newspaper, was appointed Sunday night by the ASUI Communications Board as next fall's editor of the Idaho Argonaut.

The board also appointed news editor Megan Guido as the editor of the summer Argonaut.

McIntosh, a junior in bacteriology, has been a member of the paper's staff since the spring of 1985 when he was both a writer and co-creator of "Brain Tumors," a comic strip.

He served as a copy editor last fall and is co-paste-up coordinator as well as managing editor this semester.

Guido, a sophomore in journalism from Pullman, has worked at the paper since the fall of 1984 as both a news and entertainment writer.

Guido will be responsible for the weekly summer paper for eight weeks. The summer Argonaut is in its second year.

Both editors will begin selecting their staffs after their appointments are approved by the ASUI president and senate.

Douglas Scott, chairman of the board, announced the appointments after a unanimous vote of the board on both appointments.

Both McIntosh and Guido were unopposed for their positions.

Greek Week 1986

Greek Week a success

By Shawn McIntosh
Managing Editor

Mark Chapman, the Intrafraternity Council (IFC) advisor, called this year's Greek Week "the smoothest one so far", with all 25 houses participating in a variety of fundraising and fun events.

The proceeds from many of the events will go to various charities, said Drew Yoder, the outgoing public relations chairman.

Greek Week started with the Phi Delt turtle derby and will continue until tomorrow with tree plantings in the arboretum and an all Greek exchange at Rathskellers.

Yoder said that there will be between 150 and 200 people to plant trees tomorrow. He said that despite the "just-for-fun" events like the egg spoon relay, the egg toss, the keg toss, and the mattress race, the organizers put a lot of energy into fundraising.

The events that were also fundraisers were the turtle derby, the M.D.S. bowl-a-thon, and the bake contest. The newspaper The Greek Times also made money this year, Yoder said, adding that it looked better than ever thanks to Sue Perry. He said that money from the Times will go to the leadership fund.

Yoder said that the Sigma Chi won the Greek Bowl, which is like the College Bowl games except High School Bowl questions are used to make the competition go quicker and so houses can earn points easier.

Last night the houses had a progressive dinner, in which fraternity members would go to one sorority to have an appetizer, then go to a different sorority to have dinner, and then to yet another sorority for dessert.

The amount of participation by the houses was excellent, said Yoder. He said he was happy that even the Lambda Chi participated even though they are not completely recolonized.

Mike Trail, from Sigma Chi, received the Greek Man of the Year, and Paul AlLee, also from Sigma Chi, received the Greek Pledge of the Year. Kristi Hanson, Alpha Phi, won Greek Woman of the Year, and Vicki Renfrow, from Kappa Kappa Gamma, won Greek Woman Pledge of the Year.

Outdoor program offers trip up Mt. Hood

By Christina Frantzen
For the Argonaut

The UI Outdoor Program is planning a mountain climb/trip for May 2, 3 and 4.

The instructional trip will be held on Mt. Hood in northwestern Oregon about 35 miles east of Portland. This is a cooperative trip, in which participants are responsible for equipment and food. Transportation cost will be shared.

For beginners there will be a mountaineering workshop on April 23. At that time, Mike Beiser, director of the Outdoor Program, will go over equipment needs, food for the trip and mountaineering techniques.

The outdoor rental center has camping gear and all the equipment for climbing available. The rental center is in the basement of the SUB and may be reached at 885-6170 for information about rental prices.

A planning meeting will be held May 1 at 5 p.m. in the Outdoor Program Office for all those signed up for the trip.

The transportation cost is $26 and must be paid before you sign up. For more information about the trip, Beiser can be reached at the Outdoor Program office, 885-6950.

Campus Network debates student concern

By Tish O'Hagan
Staff writer

Two representatives from Campus Network visited the UI for the first time on Wednesday to brainstorm, meet their representatives for this campus and gather feedback on the national debate on the abortion issue presented Wednesday night by the network.

Beth Pinskey, affiliate promotional representative for Campus Network on the west coast, and Kathy Conway, also a west coast representative, were at the UI to meet their contacts on campus, and to garner some feedback on the debate Wednesday, which was the first debate sponsored by the Campus Network.

The debate, which was shown nationwide from Washington, D.C., generated an overwhelming amount of interest, according to Pinskey and Conway.

It was between Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood, and Dr. John Willke, of the National Right to Life Committee. The response has been encouraging from both sides, as well as from the campuses receiving the program, Pinskey said.

"We did surveys when we first thought of doing a debate, and the topic the students were most concerned about was abortion," she said.

After the promotion for the debate began, the network was swamped with calls from churches, women's organizations and campuses.

After the debate, Willke and Wattleton answered questions which were phoned in from all over the nation. Conway said she thought this was an important aspect of the program because it allowed people from all over the nation to communicate and express their ideas.

The nationwide debate is an example of how Campus Network provides services to its campuses. "None of the topics, programs, etc., are personal ones; we present what the students tell us they want to see," Conway said.

Other topics that were second to abortion were feminism and apartheid. Conway said that if the turnout for this debate was positive, the other topics could be next in line for production.

Campus Network is comprised of two sections. The first, National College Television, is on cable channel eight in Moscow, and offers such programs as Audiophilia, Adult Cartoons, The Spike Jones Show and NCTV News, a news show featuring news, events and trends of interest to American campuses.

The Video Center Events, of which the abortion debate was part, is responsible for the installation of video theaters on campuses and their programming. The UI has received both these services for two years.

In the two years that Campus Network has existed, it has become enormously popular. Pinskey said this can be attributed to the fact that Campus Network offers a product that is diverse and appeals to many different audiences.

She said another reason is that the representatives for this service are constantly alert to new ideas and possibilities for programs; they provide an accurate cross-section of the things that are happening on campuses nationwide.

Senate does not support fee increase

By Erin Fanning
Staff writer

A resolution that would have supported a fee increase for UI student accident insurance was shot down by the ASUI Senate during its Wednesday meeting.

The vote was 9-1 with Sen. Mike Felton abstaining and Sen. Mike Cobble making the lone "yes" vote. Sens. Reagan Davis and Richard Burke were absent.

According to Cobble, he, President Gino White, former President Jane Freund and Bruce Pitman, dean of students, were part of a committee that reviewed the current insurance plan and identified problem areas in that plan.

Cobble said the insurance plan has to be renewed every three years.

He said the committee rewrote the plan and it was sent to 10 insurance agents. Six proposals were sent back to the committee, which chose the one best-suited to the needs of all the students, Cobble said.

The chosen insurance plan would increase the mandatory student insurance fee from $1 to $3 and the optional insurance plan would decrease from $118-$116, he said.

The intention of the resolution was to submit it to the State Board of Education this week while the Board decides on other proposed fee increases such as $15 for intercollegiate athletics and $5 for student union operations, he said.

White said the resolution would not "make or break the board's decision" but he said the ASUI senate is supportive of the health insurance fee increase.

Sen. Holli Crawford said it is wrong to come out supporting fee increases unless living groups are consulted first. Sen. Brad Montgomery said as an off-campus student who has his own insurance plan he does not want to pay more for insurance he does not use.

In other business, the senate passed a bill transferring $500 to the general administration account to replace two defunct typewriters in the ASUI and senate offices.

Another bill was passed that also transfers $1300 to the general administration budget.

Sen. Cherri Sabala said the money is needed to pay for ASUI advertisements and paper for the copy machine that were not included in last year's budget. She said the bill keeps the general administration budget from running a deficit.

Sen. Paul ALee said it is a case of either "pay it now or later."

Communications Board wants to improve KUOI's image

By Michon Harb
Staff Writer

The image of KUOI will change soon, if the Communications Board's ideas become reality.

"We want to improve the station's image," said Rob Gleiser, a member of the Communications Board.

And there are some various steps on how they plan to do this. First, they hope to build a new relationship with the School of Communications, possibly by having students in the various communication classes working at KUOI for credit, said Gleiser.

Secondly, the Comm. Board wants the disc jockeys to be more professionally trained. They hope to have them learn better public relations, especially with the people who call in.

In the future, they want to do a survey about KUOI and find out just what the students think of the station and what they want to listen to. The Comm. Board then hopes to change the format of the programming to fit accordingly, said Gleiser.

He also said this was all up in the air and if these steps do come through then it won't be until next semester.

Greg Myer, station manager of KUOI, said he felt the idea of working with the School of Communications needed to be implemented all along and that the project will probably be worked on over the summer.

Mercy's 3.97 GPA wins her scholarship

By Tish O'Hagan
Of the Argonaut

A junior majoring in chemical engineering at the UI was one of only 18 people nationwide to be awarded a $1000 scholarship in engineering.

Leanne Mercy was notified Saturday that she had received the scholarship given by SAMPE, the Society for the Advancement of Material and Processes Engineers. She was the only person in the Pacific Northwest to receive the award, as well as the first student in UI's chemical engineering department to receive it.

"It's an honor, for me and the chemical engineering department," Mercy said. "I work pretty hard, and there's a lot of pressure, but all the chemical engineers are going through the same thing, and we all try to help each other." Mercy's 3.97 GPA attests to that hard work, and she said she studies upwards of eight hours a day.

Where Will be the Student Input?

Thanks to the State Board of Education, students now have about as much chance at stopping a fee increase as they would have at stopping a speeding bullet coming straight at them.

Thursday the Board decided it will no longer make decisions regarding fee increases. It will no longer listen to university officials' pleas for bigger increases and students' pleas for smaller increases.

The Board washed its hands of responsibility for fee increases and passed the buck to the university presidents. They will be able to raise fees up to a "reasonable limit."

That means that UI students will pay $15 more next fall. Be glad you don't attend Idaho State University. There, the president could decide to raise the fees by $55.75. Boise State University fees could go up by $35, and Lewis-Clark State College fees could increase by $10.50.

As you see, we northerners won't get such a bad deal, but no matter where you go to school, you should be raving mad about this.

This decision may cost you only $15, but it is a big slap in the face for all students. By giving presidents the right to raise fees, the board took away the chance for students to plea with the board for more reasonable fee increases.

As Board Member Mike Mitchell put it, students will only be able to react; they will not be able to have input.

Since the Idaho legislature has give the Board a wide definition of the fee areas that they can charge (places until now that have been considered tuition; which is prohibited by the state constitution) every time the Board raises those fee areas it automatically calling for the presidents to increase the fees to there new limit.

Presidents can set the fees as high as the limit, and students won't get to appeal it until the board examines the presidents' budgets at its June board meeting. But June is too late.

The fiscal year begins July 1. By June, the trigger has already been pulled, and the bullet isn't going stop just because there's a student in its path, saying "Fees are too high."

Students will feel the bullet right in their wallets, and the board of education will just shrug, saying "It's not our fault. We didn't pull the trigger. The presidents did."

Some might argue that the presidents will be nicer than that, that the presidents will not raise fees to the limit just because they have the power to do so.

But why shouldn't presidents go for the highest increases they can get? The only reason they didn't impose higher increases in the past was because they had to answer to the board.

But now the presidents are like boozers set loose in a bar: they can get as much as they want, and what they want is a lot.

The Price to Pay

Our attack on Libya will not end terrorism; it will, however, go a long way in making regimes that support international terrorism realize there is, and will be, a price to pay for their actions.

Nor, as some of our allies have claimed, was the U.S. action borne out of frustration.

It was borne out of necessity to attach real economic and military cost to the sponsorship of international terrorism.

Until last Monday, any nation engaging in such an activity need not have worried about paying for such cowardly attacks on innocent people.

The United States at first tried to inflict real economic penalties on Libya last year by calling on Western nations, the targets of Khadafy's attacks, to cut off economic trade with Libya.

The United States alone, of course, could not inflict any real costs on Libya. So when our European allies failed to join our attempts to punish Khadafy, we failed. Khadafy laughed, and said he would continue his attacks on American targets "on a hundred fronts."

And he did. Two days after Christmas, terrorists attacked travelers at both the Rome and Vienna airports, killing 20 and wounding more than 110 others. Libya was found to be involved in the attacks.

The United States again called on European allies to isolate Libya both economically and diplomatically. And again they did not.

Do we wait while people are being gunned down in airport terminals? Do we falter while aircraft are being blow up in mid-air? Do we mumble while nightclubs frequented by American servicemen are attacked? Do we wait to see if other plans like the ones discovered by the French police go undetected? Libyan terrorists were planning to handgrenade people standing in line at the U.S. embassy for visas.

The only move left was for us to act alone. If the United States could not count on allies to help impose economic costs on Libya's actions, we certainly could not expect them to assist us in a military response.

We did what we had to do. We did what we sought to do economically — attach a cost to the sponsorship of terrorism.

We know that our actions will not stop terrorism, just as we know that punishment for murder is not 100 percent effective.

But despite a lack of total deterrence, we know that countless violent deaths have been avoided because would-be murderers knew they would be locked up if they were found guilty of the crime.

We can not lock up Col. Khadafy but we can instill some realization in him, and those who help him carry out his murderous plans, that a price will be paid for their actions.

Yes, it is true that Libya is not the only nation supporting terrorism. Both Iran and Syria have been indicted on the same charges as Khadafy. The argument could be made that we are not solving the problem because the others are left undaunted.

But are they? Will not our actions of Monday night run through the Iranian and Syrian minds when they contemplate more terrorist attacks?

Terrorism will always exist, mostly because of its economical nature and its shock value. But terrorist attacks supported and controlled by nations need not continue if we attach a high cost to such sponsorship.

Video killed the record thieves

Dear Editor,
Video stars are born... and they don't even know it.
Last week at Murdoc's the alarm activated video camera on our rear exit door observed several individuals making a magnificent exit (just like on TV) with about 80 of our record albums from the storage closet.

Identification will be sought by use of Greek composites and yearbooks from WSU and the UI. Blowups of the film will be posted at all local entertainment establishments.

If the records are returned in good condition before identification is made — Murdoc's will not press charges.

"Political Hardball"

Kirk Nelson
Columnist

So we've gone and done it. Now begins the hue and cry from all the "hand-wringers" and "doom-sayers," those creatures of inertia and pacifism who believe that doing nothing is the highest form of action. They will, no doubt, be queuing up to say the U.S. bombing deliberately killed Libyan civilians. Of course, that's what the Libyan press would like you to believe. The truth can probably be found in the fact that the Libyans are employing an old North Vietnamese trick used to baffle the bleeding hearts. When you shoot a surface to air missile at an airplane and miss, then the law of gravity does its thing and the missile falls back to earth and explodes. That's probably what fell on those civilian area; and the Libyans, like the North Vietnamese, would like you to believe it was U.S. terror bombing and not their own stupidity which caused their problem. So I don't buy the Libyan argument and if you have any more brains than a pound cake, you won't buy it either. If, on the other hand, it was a U.S. bomb that did the damage, then I can only say, tough luck. They wanted to play political hardball, but couldn't handle the serve—so maybe they should get out of the game.—

Another argument you're sure to hear is that the bombing will only increase terrorism. That is a possibility, but if someone is going to shoot at us, I would just as soon return the fire, if for no other reason than venting frustration. Nor have I ever known there to be a moral or spiritual benefit gained by standing still for an ass kicking. Possibly a stray masochist can dig it, but I see little justification for making it a national policy.
You've got to admit that it does the heart good to see the opposition get drop-kicked into the hereafter. I'll tell you one thing, those terrorists who were in the impact zone of those bombs will not be heading anywhere but to the boneyard and we can stamp "case closed" on their dossiers.
The Russians, of course, will play this for all the propaganda points they can. Their refusal to meet with the U.S. only means some U.S. diplomat will be spared an earful of commie rhetoric. If the Russians really gave a damn, they would not have pulled their warships out of Tripoli harbor in the days before the attack. Nor would they have called off their ships that shadow the U.S. 6th Fleet and could have warned Libya when the U.S. launched their attack. So show some brains and don't buy the Russian moral indignation. They'll be back, you can bet on it.

As for the European reaction, who cares? We've had a full-time job in the twentieth century pulling their fat lazy asses out of the fire and once again they're too busy counting their bank receipts to see the hand writing on the wall. Thank God the British have some backbone, otherwise the whole lot might be mistaken for the spineless jellyfish they are.
Finally, we come to the deciding factor in all of this. What is up with Moammar? When he's been turned into a puree of Libyan by a 2,000 pounder, then it's Salaam to his hijinks. Whoever takes over will have to ask himself, "how keen am I on getting turned into tomato paste?" This has got to be a major damper on the fun factor.
Since Moammar is still alive, he's got to be thinking that no matter how hard he wants to strike back, he had better sleep lightly because he'll never know when the bombers will be back to collect their fee.

Dear Editor,
Moscow NOW invites the public to attend an evening showing of the highly acclaimed documentary, "Pink Triangles." This 35-minute film is a look at the pervasive prejudice against lesbians and gay men.

Taking its name from the insignia gay men were forced to wear in Nazi concentration camps, "Pink Triangles" is a synthesis of historical research from a myriad of sources. Health care professionals, educators, authors and political activists share their insights on the phenomenon of homophobia. While examining discrimination against gay men and lesbians, the film is a study of the very nature of discrimination and oppression.

"Pink Triangles" considers both historical and contemporary patterns of persecution in which racial, religious, political and sexual minorities are singled out as "different" or "inferior," becoming the victims of the scapegoat mentality of societies under stress.

"Pink Triangles" is for all who are interested in examining some of the common roots of oppression of any group considered to be "out of the mainstream." The film is free, open to the public, and will be shown Tuesday, April 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Borah Theatre.

Asbestos tiles in UCC to be removed

By Becky Bailey

For the Argonaut

The UI Safety Office plans to remove 2,000 square feet of asbestos-filled ceiling tile from two rooms in the University Classroom Center by June 5, according to Safety Officer Robert MacPherson.

The UI asbestos abatement crew found varying amounts of asbestos material in UCC ceiling tile after conducting a mass sampling program, according to a memorandum released by the Safety Office in March.

Asbestos, commonly used for insulation, is a known cancer-causing agent. It is most dangerous when released into the air, where its tiny fibers can enter human lungs, MacPherson said.

The amount in UCC ceiling tiles is relatively low, and well bound in a matrix of tile, MacPherson said.

"The air (at the UCC) is safe as long as the ceiling tiles are not disturbed," he said.

Air samples taken from the UCC show air quality is "well within" the permissible exposure level determined by federal and state agencies, the memorandum said.

The permissible exposure level for asbestos, as designated by the State Department of Labor and Industrial Services, is two fibers per cubic centimeter of air, averaged over an eight-hour work day, MacPherson said.

The Safety Office has a long-term plan to remove all asbestos-containing material because of the health hazard, the Safety Office memorandum said.

The UCC is not a high-priority area for the removal, but all asbestos will be removed within a year or two, MacPherson said. The reason asbestos is being removed from these two rooms is that the Physical Plant plans to remodel them. "We don't want the asbestos tiles to be disturbed," MacPherson said.

"Asbestos removal can be a dangerous process if not done properly," he said.

He said the seven-man abatement crew must take precautions such as enclosing an entire work area in plastic, running a large air filter within the work area and wearing protective clothing, boots and respirators.

"In this way we are able to remove asbestos from areas that are normally occupied," he said.

He said the public does not understand that elimination of asbestos is a monumental task.

UI buildings currently contain 18 miles of asbestos-filled pipe lagging and 250,000 square feet of flat surfaces containing varying amounts of asbestos, MacPherson said.

"Almost every major building on campus has asbestos in it," he said.

Memorial design competition

The ASUI, in an expression of gratitude to those who served and those who died in Vietnam, is building a memorial on campus in honor of these people.

To accomplish this goal, the ASUI is holding a design competition open to all UI students. Preliminary designs will be due October 1, '86. Preliminary design finalists will be awarded prizes. Preliminary entries must consist of a detailed sketch or drawing. Finalists will be required to submit a working model by November 3, '86. From these models, the grand prize winner's model will be chosen and he or she will receive $500.

All entries become property of the ASUI.

More information concerning the contest can be obtained by calling Loren Orr at 885-6676 or Brad Montgomery at the ASUI senate office or at 882-8605.

Picnic in the Park

Picnic in the park. The Main Street Dance Co. will be performing at East City Park on Sunday at 4 p.m. in celebration of International Dance Week. Photo Bureau/Tina Old-Mouse.

By Sara Donart
Staff writer

Palouse area dancers will point and pirouette their way across the stage at East City Park on Sunday during a free afternoon dance concert celebrating International Dance Week.

The concert, coordinated by Moscow's Main Street Dance Company, will showcase a variety of dance styles ranging from belly-dancing to a tennis shoe ballet on point.

Performers will include members of the American Festival Ballet's Junior Company, the Main Street Dance Company and several young dancers from area schools and dance academies.

The purpose of the event is to celebrate dance and to make it easily available to the public, said Jerri Davis, business manager for the Main Street Dance Company and one of the concert's coordinators.

She encouraged people to "bring a picnic lunch, your dog, whatever" and enjoy an afternoon of dance in the park.

One of the highlights of the concert will be an African tribal dance, which Davis described as "very aerobic and exciting to watch." The dance, performed by the Main Street Dance Company, has evolved from its original form but still includes brightly colored costumes and African rhythms, Davis said.

On a more classic note, dancers from the American Festival Ballet's Junior Company will perform "Thistle and Amber," said to emphasize the grace of ballet.

Davis will fill in the middle ground between classic and experimental dance with her solo piece, "Love Those Shoes," in which she dances on point in tennis shoes, an exercise which she says leaves her "pretty sore."

The concert will begin at 4 p.m. and will be rescheduled for April 27 in case of rain.

Consort's concert

By Sarah Kerruish
Arts & Entertainment Editor

How can words, black scribbles on white paper, convey the mood and magic of the Paul Winter Consort's music?

It is a fragile and superficial identity being a reviewer — the subjective judge. Can I write anything of value to you, the reader? I can tell you the Paul Winter Consort's music is inspired by, and incorporates aspects of, nature, but that statement fails in any way to capture the sound of an alto saxophone mingling with the haunting cry of a whale.

Paul Winter said about his first encounter with a wolf: "Words cannot describe what I felt. I am glad I have music to express the experience."

With this in mind, and unfortunately no music to express my feelings, I am going to make formal sentences redundant and let my consciousness stream. The following is an impressionistic review of the Paul Winter Consort.

Blue lights and five musicians creating a sea of serenity and harmony. The lullaby from the great mother whale to the baby seals...echoing and entrancing. Piercing clarinet with mellow, rich autumnal cello. French horn solo from Bedrock Cathedral in the Grand Canyon... evoking space, distance and time. Percussionist drumming up previously unheard textures, tones and rhythms with one tambourine and 10 fingers. Piano player who looked like a dentist but who did a different type of filling. Wolf music... audience howling with wolves. Bach's "Air on a G String"...classical, jazz with ethnic undertones. Uplifting...the joy of the music and the harmony, both of musical notes and people everywhere.

Alas I have failed to do them justice with my second-hand writing. To anyone who loves music I would recommend you get one of the Paul Winter Consort's records and let the music speak for itself.

Band in the Hand

By Roger Jones
Staff Writer

Band of the Hand uniquely combines the jungle survival contest with the Miami street crime wars.

But, unfortunately, it doesn't quite justify or live up to the potential of either scenario.

What they've got for a plot is five juvenile criminals who are thrown into the middle of the Florida marshlands and into the hands of a Rambo-type trainer who tells them, "Here you learn to live, or you die."

It is a radical sort of juvenile reform program. Train the kid punks to fight, kill, survive (oh yeah, and learn self esteem), and then turn them loose in the streets of Miami and let them clean up the filth for you.

OK, to be fair it's not all that bad of a film. It's from the makers of Miami Vice and every so often you'll get a short burst of filming style and music that is worthy of that small claim.

Overall Band of the Hand is similar to a collage of a Miami Vice episode, the film Scarface and a dime store comic book adventure.

Unfortunately, this film's dealings with realism are a little stretched, reminding me of its comic book nature more than any other part.

It is a well-meaning film that tries to make some statements about racism (the band of five all come from contrasting nationalities and backgrounds) and that crime isn't the best business to be in (new one there).

This "Breakfast Club meets Rambo and takes on Miami organized crime" show is filled with action, violence, spurts of humor and a rudimentary form of entertainment.

Film Festival

Lewis Clark State College is having an international film festival. The two films featured this weekend are Kagemusha on Saturday and La Strada on Sunday.

Winner of the 1980 Grand Prize at Cannes, Kagemusha is an epic tale of survival and a flawless portrait of two men who shaped history in the 16th century. Tatsuya Nakadai is superb in a demanding dual role and Kurosawa's genius has never been more apparent. The film is stamped with the director's trademark: monumental scenes, magnificently photographed, are combined with a poignant story.

La Strada, one of Fellini's most powerful and poetic films, marks his break with the neo-realistic tradition of filmmaking. Guilletta Masina's deeply moving performance as Gelsomina, the tragic waif who is enslaved by her love for a circus strongman, has been universally acclaimed.

All the films in the series will be shown at 7:30 p.m.

Jazz concert

By Sara Donart
Staff writer

Jazz will fill the Administration Building Auditorium Friday when a UI choir and three bands pour on the hot licks during a free evening performance.

Jazz Choir One, with close to 70 members, is directed by associate professor of music Dan Bukvich and will perform several vocal arrangements, including an original composition by UI student John Brownell, titled "Together Tonight."

UI students also wrote arrangements for two of the pieces on the program, including "You Made Me Love You," arranged by Hal Logan, and "Home" from the musical "The Wiz," arranged by Greg Harrel.

Junior voice major Lisa Willson will be featured in a solo performance of the song "Old Times."

Jazz Band One, under the direction of assistant professor of music Robert McCurdy, will play four pieces, including a blues number titled "More Nerks" by Neal Finn. Jazz Bands Two and Three will fill out the program.

The concert starts at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public.

UI Track: Women run in Bob Gibb; Men go 3-way at WSU

By Chris Schulte
Sports Writer

The Vandal track teams will both be in action this weekend. The Lady Vandals will travel to Boise for the Bob Gibb Invitational while the men will travel to Pullman to participate in a tri-meet with WSU and Oregon State.

The women are coming off a good meet at All-Idaho meet two weeks ago and coach Scott Lorek is looking for continued strong performances from his ladies. "This meet will give the girls a chance to run against some good competition," Lorek said.

The meet in Boise will include teams from all over the Rocky Mountain area including Mountain West rivals Boise State and Idaho State. Lorek sees the meet as just another "stepping stone" to the conference meet to be held in May. "It's getting to the time of year where the performances are going to start to improve," Lorek said.

The top women performers all year are once again expected to shine. Sherry Schoenborn will compete in her specialty the javelin while sprinter/hurdler Bobby Purdi will compete in the 100 meter high hurdles. The meet will also include a host of distance runners lead by freshman Cathy Wall.

The men will be traveling to WSU to take on the Cougars and Beavers of OSU. Men's coach Mike Keller is expecting the men of WSU to come at them full strength because of the breaking of their 58 meet win streak by Oregon last week. "I don't see us beating WSU but we can beat OSU if we have a good meet. It's a good chance for good competition for us running against two Pac-Ten schools together," Keller said.

The men are coming off a trip to Montana last week in which they were snowed out. Keller added concerning the trip, "It was a big waste of a weekend; the guys should really be ready to go this weekend and hopefully the weather will be good, but around here you just never know."

The only change for the Vandals will be in the 400 meter relay where freshman Patrick Williams has been inserted and will run the third leg. "The team should go faster with Williams since he has been our best sprinter this spring so far and against WSU we will have the competition to run a good time," Keller said.

The meet will begin at WSU at 12:00 noon.

Vandal baseball 3-1 in Big Sky

By Roger Gaboury
Staff writer

The UI Baseball Club won three of four games over the weekend, boosting their record to 5-7 for the season.

The team travelled to Missoula, Mont., last weekend and defeated Montana State University twice, 6-4 and 10-3, and split with the University of Montana, 8-6 and 3-5.

The wins also raised the team's record among the Big Sky clubs to 3-1. The other clubs in the league are Montana St., Montana, Boise State University, Idaho State University and Eastern Montana University.

The Vandals will travel to LaGrande, Ore., this weekend to take on Eastern Oregon.

Vandal player/coach Luke Aldrich said that good defense and pitching won for the team during the weekend.

A dramatic first game started off the weekend for the Vandals with the 6-4 win. Greg Hines pitched a complete game for the Vandal win and Tim Burdick went 3-3 hitting, with a home run, a double and a single.

With the game tied 4-4 in the bottom of the seventh inning, Mark Carbon hit the game-winner after Steve Nash had reached base on an error and Burdick had been intentionally walked.

Golfers chip for 1st win

The UI golf team looks for continued success when it travels to Portland this weekend for the Rippling River Invitational.

The men beat out Goanaga on home turf Tuesday afternoon with a 300-337 win over the Bulldogs.

UI low man Steve Johnston carded a 1-over par 73 to pace the Vandals to their first win of the season. Johnston was followed by teammates Bo Davies, 75; and Darren Ball, Mike Hamming and Brad Harper, all with 76.

Ball is in second place in individual scoring leaders in Big Sky standings with an average of 74.4. His low round was a 68.

NIT on TV 8

The UI lady NIT Champions can be seen in their winning performance on cable channel 8 next week.

The final game in which the Lady Vandals beat NW Louisiana 100-91 will be shown Monday shortly after 8 p.m., Tuesday between 6 and 8 p.m. and again on Thursday shortly after 8 p.m.

The game, held in Amarillo, Texas, on March 22, was the last performance for All-American Marys Raese and Westerwelle, and Robin Behrens and Netra McGrew. Raese was named tournament MVP.

Palouse Triathlon set for Saturday

The second annual Palouse Triathlon, boasting a record 110 entries, will be held tomorrow throughout the Palouse area.

For those not hearty enough to partake in the 1500-meter swim, 40-kilometer bicycle ride and the 10-kilometer run, there will be plenty of opportunities to watch along the biking and running routes.

The race will begin at 7:30 a.m. Saturday at the UI swim center. From there the participants will hop out of the pool and onto their bikes and head north on Rayburn to Sixth to Perimeter Drive to the intersection of the Palouse Highway. The bikers will then head to the Moscow-Pullman Airport, take the loop twice and return to Moscow and the Kibbie Dome where the last trek on foot begins.

The runners will head back towards the Palouse Highway via Perimeter Drive, but will go straight through the stoplight at the highway intersection. The route proceeds to KRPL road and continues in that direction to a railroad trestle, the turning point. The runners will then retrace their steps towards home, where avid fans will be awaiting at the finish line at the west end of the Kibbie Dome.

UI women's tennis at MSU

By Buddy Levy
Staff Writer

The Idaho women's tennis team will be in action this weekend at the Montana State Invitational in Bozeman, while the Vandal men travel to Seattle to play in the Husky Invitational.

The Idaho men split their matches last week defeating Idaho State (5-4) and Northwest Nazarene (5-4) and losing to Montana State (0-9) and Boise State (3-6). The Idaho women defeated Portland State (9-0) and Eastern Washington (8-1) before losing to Idaho State (0-9).

In overall conference rankings, the men are now in 6th place, with a just below 500 win-loss percentage in overall matches. In Big Sky matches, Idaho is (2-2).

The number one singles player for UI, Efre Del Degan, has a 15-7 match record and is leading the Vandals in matches won. He is followed by Shane Ristau whose record is 11-10.

Dave Scott, the women's assistant coach, says that the teams chances are "pretty good" and that they "should beat MSU." He added that "ISU is the team to beat."

Facts on AIDS revealed

By Jim Jacobs
For the Argonaut

"Dispelling the Myths: Facts on AIDS" is the topic of a conference to be held May 6 at the Moscow Community Center, 206 E. Third St.

Gritman Memorial Hospital is sponsoring the event. Cheryl Hudson, R.N. and education coordinator at the hospital, said the conference will be divided into two sections. The first session, from 3 to 5 p.m., is intended for health care workers — doctors, nurses, dentists and substance-abuse counselors. The second session, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., will be devoted to public awareness of the disease.

Dr. L.R. Bernard and Kathleen Caldero, R.N., will speak at both sessions. Bernard is a virus specialist from Spokane. Caldero, an infection control nurse at Spokane's Sacred Heart Medical Center, will address issues such as prevention and cleaning blood spills.

Hudson said there are no known cases of AIDS spreading except by contact with contaminated blood or semen. People most at risk are intravenous drug users who share needles and those who engage in anal intercourse, she said. According to Hudson, anal intercourse with AIDS carriers is dangerous for both men and women because the lining of the rectum is fragile and bleeds easily, allowing the AIDS virus in semen to infect the receptive partner's bloodstream.

According to a December '85 article in Johns Hopkins Magazine, AIDS has victimized more than 15,000 people in the United States. The number of AIDS cases doubles each year. In addition, an estimated 1 million people are carriers of the virus.

The second session of the conference is free and open to the public. The person to contact for more information about the conference is Cheryl Hudson at Gritman Memorial.
