

Questionnaire reveals student attitudes on South Africa, Libya

Should the United States economic sanctions against South Africa be increased? According to the Argonaut's poll of the UI students 52 percent support such action.

Thirteen percent felt sanctions should be lifted and 10 percent supported decreasing the sanctions. Twenty five percent did not vote.

Of the women voting, 49 percent voted for increasing sanctions while 54 percent of the men supported such action.

The student support for such action would seem to contradict the ASUI senate's position that this is a topic with which the senate need not concern itself. The Senate voted on April 24, '85 that it would not consider a resolution calling for UI disinvestment from companies doing business with South Africa.

Concerning sanctions against Nicaragua, 17 percent supported lifting sanctions, 37 percent favored an increase, 14 percent would have sanctions decreased while 32 percent did not vote.

The breakdown according to sex went: 31 percent of the women vs. 41 percent of the men supported increasing sanctions, while 36 percent of the women voted to decrease or lift sanctions vs. 30 percent of the men.

The next question dealt with sanctions against Libya. It should be remembered that these responses were given long before our current military involvement with that nation.

Fifty-eight percent supported sanctions while only 17 percent chose to have them reduced or eliminated. Twenty-five percent did not answer this question.

Men supported sanctions against Libya significantly more than women by a 63 to 48 percent margin.

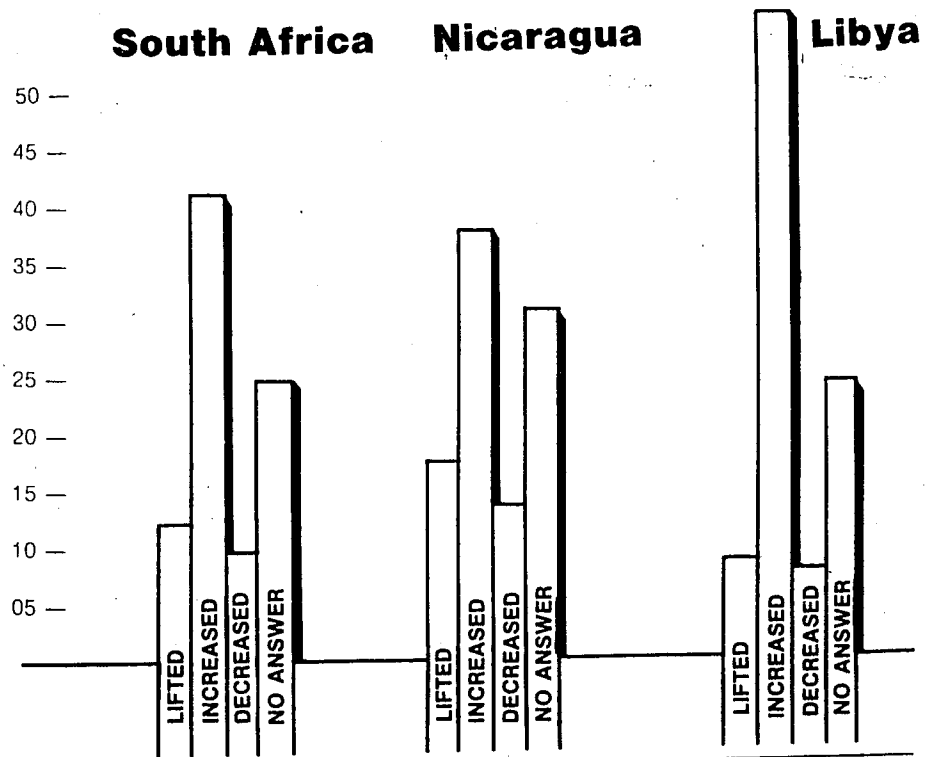

Regarding "Star Wars" a substantial majority of students felt that UI scientists should engage in such research. Fifty-eight percent supported research while a mere 22 percent were opposed. Twenty percent did not vote.

Once again, men supported this action substantially more than women. Sixty-four percent of the men approved of research while 49 percent of women were in agreement.

In a good-natured response to Gault Hall's annual formal "Snow Ball", Snow Hall created its own "Gault Ball" where the theme was dress down. The whole East Side of the Wallace Complex took part in the party last Friday night. Here Ted Unzicker was crowned as Gault Queen for the 1986-87 year. He was given a beer can crown and a leg of meat for a scepter. After he won, the DJs played "Given the Dog a Bone" by AC/DC.

UI student wins Truman scholarship

A UI student, for the fifth consecutive year, has been awarded the Harry S. Truman Scholarship for 1986, it was announced this week.

The award carries an annual maximum of $7,000 per year for four years of study.

Cynthia Long, a sophomore foreign languages major from Boise, was named Truman Scholar on the basis of her academic performance and community activities, according to UI Political Science Professor Amos Yoder.

The award is granted each year to at least one student in each state who has demonstrated an outstanding potential for leadership in state, local or federal government, Yoder said.

Long, who plans to study in France for the next two school years, believes she won Idaho's Truman Scholarship because she was consistent and "interviewed well" during the personal interview in Seattle which preceded the award.

"A lot of political science majors try out for this award, but I think they were looking for people who are interested in all types of government work, not just politicians," Long said.

"I kind of feel that maybe it was the effort I put into it, and not so much all those snooty things that look good on the application."

Long is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority, Intercollegiate Knights and the University Language and Culture Association.

She plans to use her scholarship for an education which will lead to a career in the foreign service.

The scholarship provides a total of $28,000 for two years of college and two years of graduate study.

One student from Idaho is awarded the scholarship each year, and the winners for the past four years have been from the UI.

Recent Truman Scholars from the UI are Mike Trail, James Pierce, Kamala Shaddock and Clare Henriksen.

FWR students and professors honored

The achievements of 12 UI College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences students, alumni, and faculty were recognized at the college's annual Awards Banquet.

Each of the college's five departments selected students for recognition as 1985-86 Outstanding Seniors. Selected as Outstanding Senior for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources was Patricia May Crawford, a wildlife resources major who will graduate in May. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil E. Crawford of Omaha, Nebr.

The Department of Forest Products selected two Outstanding Seniors. The first is David H. Cohen, the son of Saul and Miriam Cohen of Toronto, Ontario, Canada. Cohen will graduate in December. The second is Ronald T. Hinthorn. Scheduled to graduate in May 1987, Hinthorn is the son of Ray and Alice Hinthorn of Bonners Ferry, Idaho.

Bryce R. Romig is the Department of Forest Resources Outstanding Senior. A May graduate, he is the son of Donald Romig and Edith Powers of Santa Fe, New Mexico. Outstanding Senior for the Range and Resources Department is Kirk H. Nilsson, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jon Nilsson of Kendrick, Idaho. He will graduate in May. Brent J. Nixon is the Department of Wildland Recreation Management Outstanding Senior. Originally from Broadview Heights, Ohio, he will graduate in May.

By a ballot of all departments, the college also chooses an Outstanding Senior for the college as a whole. The student chosen typifies outstanding leadership and scholarship qualities. The 1985-86 Outstanding Senior for the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences is Cecilia Lynn Kinter, a wildland recreation management major who will complete her studies this summer. Kinter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Kinter of Vienna, West Virginia.

Presented also at the banquet were awards recognizing the accomplishments of college alumni and friends. This year's recipient of the college's Honor Alumnus Award was Harold R. Heady, a 1938 forestry and range bachelor's graduate who is currently professor emeritus of Range Management, the University of California, Berkeley. Heady is past president of the international Society for Range Management, an active participant in international rangeland management, and the author of textbooks and many scientific articles.

Receiving the college's Alumni Achievement Award, presented to one who has made significant career advances and is less than 10 years from graduation was Stephen D. Hobbs, a 1977 Ph.D. graduate in forest science. Hobbs is associate professor of forest science at Oregon State University, and administers the university's nationally recognized Forestry Intensified Research (FIR) Program.

The Honor Associate Alumnus Award confers college associate alumnus status on one who has supported college programs. This year's College of Forestry Honor Associate Alumnus is John Faulkner, a southern Idaho rancher and past president of the Idaho Wool Growers' Association, who helped establish the Department of Range Resources internship program.

Outstanding faculty awards were presented to Professors Brian C. Dennis and Gary E. Machlis. Dennis, a specialist in statistical ecology, received the Outstanding Researcher Award.

Machlis, whose primary area is the sociological aspects of natural resources management, received the Outstanding Teacher Award. Both are in the Department of Forest Resources.

All recipients received a plaque and will again be recognized at the college's commencement exercises in May.

Freund named one of the outstanding women

Jane L. Freund, former ASUI president and senior computer major, has been named one of the outstanding young women in America and will be recognized for her achievements in the '85 edition of the Outstanding Young Women of America.

Now in its 21st year, the Outstanding Young Women of America program is designed to honor and encourage exceptional young women between the ages of 21 and 36 who have distinguished themselves in their homes, their professions, and their communities.

Freund was named along with approximately 26,000 fellow outstanding women from across the United States.

Legal questions answered

For those who are baffled or intimidated by the American legal system, a public panel discussion scheduled in Moscow April 30 may help.

The discussion, entitled "Access to the Justice System," will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Church, 420 E. Second St., Moscow.

A judge and lawyers will speak about problems people have in getting access to the courts and legal help, and some of the solutions that are available to them.

The discussion is being sponsored by the Moscow committee of the American Civil Liberties Union as part of the National Law Day. There will be no charge, and members of the public are invited.

Speakers include: Magistrate William Hamlett; Kent Merica of Lewiston, a public defense attorney; Bill McCann of Lewiston, a private attorney who participates in the Idaho State Bar service that refers cases for people who cannot afford legal fees; Neil Franklin, director of the UI College of Law's Legal Aid Clinic. The clinic supplies legal help to low-income people in Latah County.

Special guests at the discussion will be Moscow students who recently attended the state Future Problem-Solving Bowl in Boise, where the topic was "Problems with the Legal System."

Joint reading by local schools

The Division of Literature and Languages at Lewis Clark State College will host a joint reading by creative writing students from Washington State University. The UI and Lewis Clark State College on Thursday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m., in room 130 of Meriwether Lewis Hall on the LCSC campus.

Participating students are Eric Ellis, Jim Marks, Melissa McCann, Melissa Medley, and Rhonda Rieseber, from Alex Kuo's classes at WSU; Murray Anderson, Ruth Bull, Pete Cruz, Randy Huntsberry, and Jamie Sheperd, from classes taught by Tina Foriyes and Rob Moore at UI; and Neidy Messer, Kim Johnson, Robert Johnson, and Mark Williams, from Robert Wrigley's classes at LCSC.

A number of these students are already actively publishing their work in such journals as Snapdragon, Wind Row, New Letter, Yankee, and The Wisconsin Review.

This year's reading will be the sixth such joint effort by WSU and UI students, and the second in which LCSC students have participated.

The public is invited and admission is free.

We Can't Print It All

The Argonaut has been called many things in the past, but there needs to be some definition as to what we are not.

The Argonaut is not a community bulletin board.

Perhaps if a comparison could be made between a company and the Argonaut, some readers can understand more about our paper and appreciate the workings.

Any business, organization or student newspaper must have guidelines and goals to follow in order to maintain a healthy, possibly profitable entity. These guidelines are established to guide the corporation in a successful direction. One could hardly imagine a president of a corporation acting on suggestions of a bag lady, perhaps, and maintaining the healthy business over the years.

If that president did everything requested from outsiders, instead of following the policies of the corporation, the business would more than likely fold in the near future.

Now think of that example in relation to the Argonaut. Many people have requested that story ideas and events be printed in this paper. If those ideas aren't published as requested, that person may become perturbed and accuse the paper of not giving that club or organization (there are 57 clubs at the UI, not including the fraternal organizations) the coverage it deserves. This has been true especially in the sports and entertainment sections.

Perhaps some things can be cleared up about our paper here.

First, the paper and each section thereof, has a formula of stories to cover, beats to reporters and space allotted to community events.

Sports, for example, devotes an average of 75 percent of the section to varsity events. Why? Because most of the readers of the paper are interested in the UI's sporting events, not to a road race in Deary. Since the paper is published twice weekly, many of the stories are not as recent as a daily paper, where the sections cover as much community-oriented events as possible. Hence, the Argonaut prints many feature-minded stories that may be more in-depth than newsbreaking.

Second, there is just so much space the sections are allotted to print stories. Many of the papers have been small, eight to twelve pages small, and only so many things can be put into the sections. Even though the editors appreciate story ideas, only so much can go into so much space.

Third, many more events can be placed in the paper if complete information is given to the editors. Please write the event in press release form, where the Whos, Whats, Whens, Wheres, Whys and possibly the Hows, are provided. There should also be plenty of time between the date the release is given to the editor and the event itself so the editors can plan to place the news in the section.

Perhaps now those readers who accuse the Arg of neglecting to give their group or organization publicity may understand what our paper needs to operate. We aim to provide the information needed to keep the students and faculty of the UI informed and interested in what they read Tuesdays and Fridays.

Remember, nothing is guaranteed to be published in any paper. That is, unless you buy an ad.

Policy Toward Athletics is Obscene

collegiate athletics to match that of the Marching Band, and turn the remaining funds over to the Library.

The Library here at the UI is by collegiate standards pathetic. I have been in the libraries of University of Arizona, Portland State University, WSU, Boston University, University of Oregon, Oregon State, University of Portland, Marylhurst College, and several community colleges. Our library here at the UI does not hold a candle to any of them. Why is it then that intercollegiate athletics is getting a 32.8 percent increase when the library is in much greater need, and is far more important to the function of this university?

I am convinced that it is because the priorities of Richard Gibb and the Counsel of Regents are not centered around scholastic excellence. The condition of the library is not the fault of the library staff, who work very hard. It is the fault of Richard Gibb and the Counsel of Regents. They are directly responsible.

I do not believe that Richard Gibb can justify any of this to the scholastic community. If he feels able to do so, I am sure that many of us would like to hear it. It would be good for a few laughs, except that it is not at all funny. It is obscene. This is, however, idle talk. Richard Gibb does not have to justify any of this to any of the students, faculty or Board of Regents, as he is well aware.

Who among us can make him answer for this? Not the ASUI Senate. The Senate is nothing more than a pacifier, a teething ring to keep all us children quiet while Richard Gibb and the Board of Regents give us a royal screwing. The Senate is made up largely of "wanna be" politicians, most of whom will mercifully never make it in politics.

Some of them, I will admit, mean well. Young people with token power and eyes that blaze with impotent idealism. Since politicians in this country are largely corrupt, constantly abusing the trust of their constituents (a rare commodity), and are essentially prostitutes who will stroke anyone who pays them enough, I must ask these boys and girls of the Senate: why do you want to be politicians when you grow up? Isn't there any honest work?

My objective here is not to put down the Senate. It is merely to make clear to anyone who will listen, that we cannot count on the senate to do anything other than to sit on their thumbs. If any of you are truly interested in doing something about this proposed rate hike, you should make appointments to speak with Richard Gibb at his office and make sure he knows how you feel about it. We should not be intimidated, as a middle aged bureaucrat is not a thing of which to stand in awe. While we are at it, we should suggest to him that he alter the Mission Statement so that people do not come here thinking that education is a priority, which it clearly is not.

Is it the policy of this university to enable students to obtain a good quality education at reasonable cost, or is it to have the students pay for collegiate farm teams for the Major leagues? The mission of this university is becoming increasingly unclear. I have heard people say that because intercollegiate athletics generates so much revenue for the university, it deserves our support (money). If this is the case, why is it necessary to raise fees to pay for it?

In these days of budget cutting, when nearly every department is wondering where next year's funds are coming from, how is it to be justified that athletics in any form should receive a 32.8 percent increase? The proposed increase of the budget of intercollegiate athletics increases the fund by approximately $120,000 per semester, from approximately $400,000 to approximately $520,000 per semester. I think a better idea is to cut the allotment of inter-

Who Asked Us, Anyway?

Tom LeClaire
Guest Columnist

I was shocked when I saw the front page. A friend of mine asked me to read last Thursday's Idahonian. The university administration is taking control of the ASUI Golf Course by decree.

I'm still not sure I believe it. No public hearing is to be held. No open meeting has been scheduled. No input has actively been sought from the students, the general public, or even the Regents of the University of Idaho. Not one student living group will be asked. Furthermore, no faith in or respect for the intelligence of our student leadership has been shown by the administration.

This proposal and the way it has been presented is a blatant attack on the integrity of our student government and should be opposed.

More importantly, this seizure of the control of the golf course is undemocratic. But the democratic principle of due process was disregarded in the Lois Pace case, why should we expect it to be upheld by President Gibb's administration now.

Unfortunately, the current ASUI Senate may have already sealed the golf course's future. By voting to dissolve the ASUI Golf Course Board and give its responsibilities for management of the course to the Recreational Facilities Board, the senate has changed the governing body of the golf course three times in the last four years.

This move alone has had a lot to do with the void of continuity within this student governing board. How can an ASUI President recruit good student leaders for a governing board that existed only on paper six weeks ago and may not exist at all next year?

This senate tinkering may destroy future student involvement in decision-making at a golf course that student fees almost completely built and maintained for fifteen years.

Of course, these reasons alone hardly justify the administration's decision to take over the golf course. Their proposal has rather striking timing. Right now the golf course is on its way to recovering from its 1985 deficit. The beautiful weather we are enjoying this spring has undoubtedly helped the course's revenue outlook. Is this why the administration wants the golf course?

Another underlying factor in this question of golf course governance could be alcohol-related. You see, ASUI leaders for years have been planting seeds publicly and privately with alumni, vandal boosters, and Regents of the University of Idaho for the idea that it would be a great asset for the university if alcohol could at least occasionally be served at the golf course.

This idea has been researched and generally supported by the students for at least seven years, to the best of my memory. I believe those seeds have found fertile ground throughout Idaho and the administration may be closer than ever to supporting the sale of alcohol on the golf course. We know that surveys of Moscow businessmen have been supportive for the plan developed by former ASUI President

Andy Artis. By nearly every study, alcohol sales would drive the course's budget into the black to the tune of tens — some say hundreds of thousands of dollars. The only problem is that a student government governs the management of the course.

What about the other ASUI-budgetted departments that might fail the auditor's "litmus test of success?" Why the administration doesn't propose new boards of control for the Idaho Argonaut, KUOI, and, most glaringly, the Programs Department is beyond me — Lord knows more ASUI departments than just the golf course have suffered from inexperienced management and deficits in the history of the ASUI. Some people call it "hands on" experience. I call it student government. I call it a waste of my money.

The other thing about student government is that hope springs eternal in the constant new minds that tackle problems like this one. I sincerely hope that someday the administration will listen to the students and let them run the golf course the best way they can.

The ASUI Golf Course has always had tremendous potential under student control. We've run the course for fifteen years, since the days of David Leroy and Larry Craig. What did we do to cause us to lose the ability to manage the course last week?

After all this time and hundreds of thousands of dollars of student fees invested, we deserve better treatment than this!

LeClaire is a former ASUI President and Senator.

Opinion

God Bless America?

Buddy Levy
Columnist

I'll be the first to admit that when it comes to politics, my dabblings are infrequent and not altogether inspired, but occasionally an event or world situation will arise that moves me to elocution. Dropping bombs on people is such an event.

Do people really believe that America did the right thing? Really? I'm not convinced. I'd like to think (and this is probably just optimism) that American people have their own minds and can do some independent thinking. But in the wake of our actions against Libya, these hopes were dispelled. Watching t.v., and seeing the polls on American reaction, I was devastated. The public was "backing the flag" without using their frontal lobes. Maybe they have been listening to "Born in the USA" too much.

My point (you were wondering when I'd get to it) is that there is a distinct line between patriotism and pigheadedness. I watched Ronbo give his post-bombing speech which included such lines as "they counted on us to be passive, well, they counted wrong." Great. Eloquent and all, but that doesn't convince me that another kind of terrorism, which, in my estimation includes bombing innocent women and children, is the way to combat terrorism.

Our Mr. President spoke of "irrefutable evidence," which once again sounds nice and convincing and seems to sway the public, but I'm still waiting to see some of it. On Donahue, I watched women screaming things like "we did the right thing, only we should have hit them harder." Now, this rhetoric sounds like something they heard the night before on the news, not something original. Would a mother who saw the footage of the devastation we did wish that on her children?

The American people are allowing themselves to become pawns to propaganda. We are supposed to be a free thinking society, but judging from the support Ronny was able to muster, I wonder how much of their own thinking these folks are doing. Are people just afraid to go against the grain? Are we becoming sheep?

It is my contention that bombing Libya was a mistake. I don't believe that America should be lenient about terrorism, but was our action any more ethical? Did we think about the ramifications? What about the people who live on military bases around the world, and who are now targets as a result of America flexing its muscles?

America has made its move, and justifies it as "defending ourselves in the fight against terrorism." Will it help? The reality is that travel abroad is more tenuous than ever. People are cancelling reservations for their summer trips to Europe. Is all the tough talk in backing our government really just a way of glossing the fear people are feeling?

The other day there was a very pronounced sonic boom, and from beneath my desk, trembling, I heard my professor joke nervously, "I hope that's one of ours."

A big enough boom, and it won't really matter.

Triathlon thanks

Editor,

A tremendous "THANK YOU" to all the volunteers and staff who worked the Palouse Spring Triathlon. Without your help, this event could not have taken place.

For the 104 participants and the Intramural and Campus Recreation office, I would also like to thank the Moscow Police Department for directing traffic at the intersection of Perimeter Drive and the Pullman Highway. Your assistance provided necessary safety for the bikers and runners.

Finally, I would like to thank the merchants who generously donated gift certificates and merchandise for awards.

Cooperative efforts of this nature can only enhance University-Community relations.

Thanks again for the great teamwork!

Greek Week memories

Editor,

Well do I recall the first Greek Week Banquet held on the UI campus. It began in 1958, if I'm not mistaken, and was given at the Elks Temple. This was necessary for it included the athletic awards as well as those of last night and the size of the Blue Bucket, forerunner of the SUB, was not large enough.

Guy P. Wicks, my husband, was then the Associate Dean of Students just home from sabbatical leave from which he brought this concept. The present quick recognition of leadership is a good outgrowth of that first event for it molds into campus life in being faster and more selective.

The Order of Omega was first organized during the year of 1958-59, I believe, and replaced the shadowy, illegal campus organization of the "men who ran things". It was both Dorm and Greek, and was called, in whispers, TNE. It was considered a social group which meant that any fraternity man proven to belong, lost his pin automatically, for no one is allowed two social Greek affiliations. This is much better, holding honorary status.

I'd like to thank the Student Advisory Services for including me. It was fun to go with Farmhouse who usually are my hosts.

Joint summer institute looks at American land

An innovative look at the American sense of the land will be offered this summer by faculty members at the UI and Washington State University.

The program is the American Summer Studies Institute, a joint UI-WSU endeavor to be held June 10 through July 3. It will feature four team-taught courses of four weeks each, with each course offering three credits.

Courses will be taught by faculty from WSU and the UI departments of English, history, environmental science and comparative American cultures. Instructors will explore the literary, historical and cultural perceptions of the land in America, with emphasis on the Northwest frontier.

To complement the classes, the institute also includes a film series, field trips, and a sequence of speakers to highlight major issues relating to the American sense of the land.

An optional, week-long field trip to Glacier National Park from July 5 through 11 is also available.

Sid Eder, UI Summer Session director, said, "This program is a fine example of a cooperative effort between faculty members from different universities. Through this cooperation, we are able to offer a program that will be not only challenging to the faculty members professionally, but stimulating to their students."

The course descriptions, instructors and locations are:

- "The Land and the American Imagination." Perceptions of the American landscape through the windows of art, literature and social history from the 16th century to the present. Taught by William Swaggerty, UI, and Joan Burbick, WSU, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. in Room 334 of the UI Administration Building.

- "Idaho and the Pacific Northwest History." A look at the history of the Pacific Northwest from early times to the present, with emphasis on the relationship between the inhabitants and the land. Taught by Carlos Schwantes of the UI from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. in Room 301 of the Administration Building.

- "The Pacific Northwest: Its Landscape and People." Study of the history and literature of three groups — Native American, Euro-Americans and Asian-Americans — focusing on how each group lived on the land in the Pacific Northwest. Taught by WSU faculty members Susan Armitage, Alec Kuo, J. Jameson, Jackie Peterson and Stephen Sumida from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Room 104 of Van Doren Hall at WSU.

- "Glacier National Park and the American Experience." A one-week, interdisciplinary field trip to explore the environmental history and cultural significance of the national park system, with emphasis on Glacier. Taught by Alfred Runte of the UI and Gerald Young of WSU from July 5 through 12. The special $150 fee covers transportation, camping fees and tours within the park.

More information about the American Summer Studies Institute can be attained by contacting Joan Burbick at WSU, 335-2581, or William Swaggerty at UI, 885-6533.

Blood donations drop

By Megan Guldo
News Editor

A total of 337 pints of blood were donated at last week's ASUI and Red Cross blood drive, 65 pints less than the 402 pints donated at the last blood drive in February.

About 118 pints of blood were given on Tuesday and 97 were given on Wednesday, according to Andy Dunnam, student chairman of the drive. About 122 pints were donated Thursday.

Dunnam said fewer students donate blood during this time of the year because they are busy studying for finals.

"It was still a successful blood drive," he said. "We made our goal two out of the three days," Dunnam said.

The daily goal set by the Red Cross is 120 pints of blood.

Dunnam said, "We had a lot of people signed up but they didn't keep their appointments."

He said almost 100 percent of the people who did donate blood were students.

"We had a few community people come in," he said. "We don't get hardly any faculty. They never seem to come in."

One pint of blood is taken per person at the drive.

The blood is spun down into platelets, packed red blood cells and plasma and sent to hospitals around the Northwest, according to Dunnam.

The shelf life of platelets is seven to 14 days, Dunnam said. The shelf life of packed blood cells is 41 days and if frozen, the cells can be stored up to three years.

Platelets are used for hemophiliacs, said Dunnam, to help clot their blood.

"Plasma is basically the fluid that makes up the bulk of your blood," he said.

Dunnam said the next ASUI-Red Cross blood drive will be in November.

"I'd like to thank everyone who donated and helped out," he said.

Gandhi's philosophy examined

A course that examines the philosophy of Mahatma Gandhi will be offered during the UI's Pre-Session May 19 through June 6.

It will be taught by Rashmi-Sudha Puri, distinguished visiting professor from the department of Handhian Studies at Punjab University in India.

To be held from 9 to 11:40 a.m., the course will look at Gandhi's philosophy of non-violence, inspired by and imbedded in his cultural roots, and affected by his experience and the impact of Western religious and philosophical tradition.

The class offers three credits in either philosophy or political science and will be held in Room 204 of the Administration Building.

Registration for this and other Pre-Session offerings is now in progress and may be accomplished by contacting the Summer Session Office, UI, 885-6237.

It may be Spring time but its still a little chilly for golf. The UI hosted the Idaho Invitational this weekend despite the cold spell. Photo Bureau/Henry Moore.

Linkster's capture third in tourney

By Buddy Levy
Staff Writer

The UI Invitational Golf Tourney was held last weekend here at the UI golf course, and a total of eight teams competed. Washington State finished the 54-hole tourney in first place followed by Columbia Basin Community College, which nipped Idaho by only two strokes.

Idaho Coach Kim Kirkland said "the guys played pretty well over 54-holes, but we really should have beaten Columbia Basin." He mentioned that Idaho was forced to play with only four players on Saturday, one short of the standard five allowed.

This may have adversely affected the team, as the total is drawn from a team's lowest four out of five golfers. Idaho was forced to count all four, having no fifth to drop. Kirkland said "it hurt us, but that's the way it goes."

Top individual Idaho golfer was freshman Steve Johnson from Trail, B.C., who entered the clubhouse with a score of 220 for the three rounds, which left him in third place overall. He was seven over par for the tourney.

Darin Ball and Bo Davies both finished at 228, and Kirkland said "They didn't play their best, but their coming along." Brad Harper of the UI shot a 239.

Ahead for the golfers is the Big Sky Conference Championships which are to be held May 9th and 10th at the Lewiston Country Club. Kirkland said all the Big Sky teams will be there, except for Northern Arizona and Montana State, neither of which have teams.

It will be the first head to head tourney for Idaho against Both Weber State and University of Nevada-Reno, but Kirkland is aware of the competition. "Both Weber and Reno should be tough," he said. "Weber has won the Big Sky thirteen of the last fourteen years, and they have a travel budget of $80,000. They've seen a few courses."

Jensen leaps to UI school record

By Chris Schulte
Sports Writer

The UI men's and women's track teams enjoyed successful meets this past weekend. The women competed at the Seattle invitational while the men traveled to Pullman for a five way meet with WSU, Montana, Montana State and Boise State.

In the women's meet sophomore Kirsten Jensen continued to improve in the triple jump as she placed second with a school record jump of 36-2. This is Jensen's first year of competition in the event. Jensen also collected a third place finish in the long jump.

Other women who placed high were Bobbi Purdi (third, 100 meter high hurdles), Cathy Wall (third, 5000 meter) and Laurie Askew (sixth, 400 meter hurdles).

Women's Coach Scott Lorek also enjoyed a good meet as he placed second in the men's 10,000 meter run in a personal best of 30 minutes 14 seconds.

Lorek was once again pleased with the efforts of his ladies as he said, "The girls really ran well. We only took a few over but the ones we did really had good days."

On the men's side, the Idaho 400 meter relay team narrowly missed qualifying for the N.C.A.A. championships while avenging last week's loss to the Cougars. The relay team of Dayo Onanubosi, Chris Stokes, Pat Williams and Everton Wanliss ran a time of 39.97.

The rest of the team enjoyed good meets and numerous seasonal bests were set. Field events athletes Dwain Fagerberg, Stefan Wikstrom and Dan Martin were among them. Fagerberg went 6-8 3/4 in the high jump, Wikstrom threw a 227-0 in the javelin and Martin enjoyed a 54-10 3/4 heave in

The thrill of a "softies" victory

Greg Kilmer
Sports Columnist

Got home a little early Saturday evening and checked out "25 years of the Wide World of Sports." It was a pretty moving show for me. I guess that's what got to me, the "moving" part.

I'm not talking about the "AGONY." How does that guy do that every week without getting himself hurt? I'm talking about the other agony.

I know everyone out there in that wide world cringes every time they see it: Greta Moss' death walk to the finish line in the Hawaiian Ironman Triathlon. I was speechless when Donna DeVarrona was trying to justify Ms. Moss' trying to get to the finish line. I don't know who suffered more, her or the millions watching.

There are many, (104 entrants in the Palouse Triathlon?) that will say that completing the race was a great triumph but I say there was a damn good chance of permanent damage, physical and mental.

But I must admit that Tri-athletes do mystify me: why do they do it? It's beyond me and I'm not talking about my rationalizing. I couldn't make it out of the first leg, the swim.

When I was a little tadpole, I could have knocked off the swim but now a days I would need an Evinrude. And then to think of jumping on the bike for God knows how long with a wet swim suit to sit on. Where's the talcom powder? And then polish it off with a nice little marathon jog, maybe in my dreams.

Well, if those health gurus can have their own little contest, I think they should start up a triathlon for us out of shape "athletes." You know, those guys that break a sweat getting out of the pool pillow to get another beer.

I guess we could call it the Idaho Jelloman's Slugathon.

The events are up for debate but here are a few for considerations.

We'd need to get a VCR and hire Alex Tribeck for a day.

We would need ol' Al because he has the best job on TV right now: hosting Jeopardy. We would tape Jeopardy, $1,000,000 Chance of a Lifetime, Sale of the Century, Press Your Luck and Wheel of Fortune. I think inviting Vana White would be a nice touch too.

We would have a game show marathon. First place gets 100 points and so on down the line, right Don Pardo.

After this demanding competition I guess we would need something to do with the water. We want to show those tri-athletes it's safe for us to go back to the water.

We would have to rent a few hundred "Battleship" games from the Mattel company for some good nautical battles. The new electronic ones, of course. It's too easy to cheat at the old one. I know, I used to move that PT boat all over the board.

The next competition is still up in the air with me. We would need a competition that lasts forever and then some. A good game of Monopoly or Risk would be good or maybe a rousing game of poker. I've spent many a finals week evening playing all three, it can make an all-nighter quite bearable.

For the final event though, we want to show that even we can go to the great outdoors and have an exhilarating competition.

A great competition that I have tried is lawn darts. All that we would need are lounge chairs, (you didn't think we'd stand), the darts and Vana to get us a cool one for quick energy. It would be a great final competition. I don't know if the crowd could take it.

After the final tallies were figured and the contestants could rest after the grueling day of competition, the champions would be crowned at a seven-course cocktail buffet. First prize would be a La-Z-Boy recliner, second prize would be an automatic channel changer and third prize would be a date with Vana. I've always been fond of bronze; I'm shooting for third.

I got seven replies from my trivia questions last week; nobody got all five. Answers: 1. Pete Rose 2. Black Betsy 3. All switch-hitters 4. Fives 5. Rick Barry the shot put. All three were good enough to capture third places in the meet.

Senior Everton Wanliss enjoyed his best meet of the year with seconds in the 100 and 200 meter races. Wanliss' 200 meter time of 21.16 is the best in the Big Sky this year. Other sprinters who had a good meet were Chris Stokes and Pat Williams. Stokes collected two thirds (100 and 200 meter) and Williams a fifth (100 meter).

Rounding out the placing for the Vandals were Kurt Schneider (second discus), Trond Knaplund (third 110 meter hurdles), Rob Simpson (fourth 400 meters) and Chris Schulte (fourth 5000 meters).

Vandal coach Mike Keller was pleased with the efforts of his team and he stated after the meet, "The guys really competed well. We had alot of P.R.'s today which is good because its getting to that time of year. There's still room for improvement though."

Passer hot at scrimmage

Senior quarterbacks Scott Linehan and Darel Tracy tallied 182 passing yards and two touchdowns as the pair led the team in an annual spring scrimmage.

Linehan tossed one touchdown pass to sophomore wide receiver Nelson Washington and Tracy ran for a TD himself. Other scoring on the afternoon came when senior tailback Fred Lloyd ran for a 3-yard score, Dan McCanna's 27 yard interception return and Brian Decicio's 34 yard field goal.

The best approach, when driving in five o'clock traffic, is to keep from becoming part of the six o'clock news.

Fish might be stupid, but no fish ever got a sunburn while sitting in a boat trying to catch a man.

Oklahoma opens tonight

By Christine Pakkala
Staff Writer

The winds of Oklahoma! will sweep down the plains of the Hartung Theater at 8 p.m. tonight and "hokey" as the play is, it will be a great show, according to director Fred Chapman.

The light-hearted musical opens tonight and continues through Sunday. The show begins at 8 p.m. today through Saturday and begins at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Chapman chose the classic Rogers and Hammerstein musical, Oklahoma!, because audiences love it and therefore it is a money maker, he said.

"We have to make our nut," Chapman said. "In the days of traveling theater, innkeepers would steal the nut from the performer's carriage wheel so they wouldn't leave without paying," he said.

But the main reason for putting on this 26 or 28 (Chapman wasn't sure) cast-member musical is "for the students," Chapman said. The musical allows a large number of UI theater students to perform.

Chapman said the theater students' need is a priority in choosing what play to present.

"I mean we are not going to do Hamlet unless a Hamlet walks through the door," Chapman said.

Chapman said next year the UI Theater Department will do several shows "predominantly for women" because the department will have many female actresses ready for major roles.

Some of the plays the department will present with mostly female casts are The Trojan Women, Tea and Sympathy, Agnes of God and Once Upon A Mattress.

For Oklahoma!, Tom Richardson, former head of the UI music department, will conduct a 16-piece orchestra. Orchestra members are drawn from the community, Chapman said.

Cindy Albers choreographed the show and plays Laurie in the dream-dance sequence.

The lead characters of Curly and Laurie are played respectively by senior theater majors David Borrer and Lori Taylor. The set, which Chapman describes as "gorgeous," was designed by UI theater Professor Bruce Brockman.

Tickets are $3 for students and $4.50 for adults. Tickets are available at the UI Theater Arts Department or at the door.

"This show is 100 percent full of energy," Chapman said.

Grown up girls guide to boys

Ahhh, spring. Warm nights. Gentle breezes. That time of year when otherwise rational adults turn their thoughts to romantic love. In a new publication The Grown-Up Girl's Guide to Boys, Lesley Dorman and Mark Zussman take a long, hard, tongue-in-cheek look at the how and why of an ancient, formidable truism: "Boys will be boys."

Yes, the '60's taught them how to get in touch with their feelings. Yes, the '70's taught them how to bake. But the sad truth is, they're still leaving wet towels on the bathroom floor. They're still telling each other "The blond one's mine." What is a girl to do? Apart from the obvious drastic alternative of becoming a nun, one could buy a copy of this book which confronts the loaded questions that have plagued women for centuries: Why do boys spit?, why on a last date, do boys say "I'll call you" etc.

Boys might do well to take a gander at this hilarious volume too. Your inability to understand why women expect what they do is not an isolated experience. The book explores your most basic boy experiences: What boys really think about relationships, boys as brothers, boys and beer etc.

As self-help books go The Grown-Up Girl's Guide to Boys is amongst the most hilarious. As for its practical application, who knows? I think boys will always be boys and I hope it stays that way.

SCREEN

Smooth talk

By Buddy Levy
Staff Writer

Smooth Talk isn't so smooth in the beginning, employing short, truncated editing cuts which, though disturbing to watch, serve to emphasize the conflict on screen.

The film owes its existence to the short story by Joyce Carol Oates, Where are You Going, Where Have You Been?, a story about a young girl's blossoming sensual awareness. Laura Dern is excellent in the female lead, combining a nice naivety with just the right amount of vulnerability.

Not a lot happens in the film, and it is very much like the short story in terms of movement and scene development. Treat Williams is convincing as the swaggering, saucy Arnold Friend, an older man who has his sights set on Dern. The main scene between the two is powerful if disturbing; there is a horrific quality to it in which the viewer assumes terrible things are about to happen. It is a sensually suspenseful scene.

People interested in action or fast paced films need not attend, but for viewers who prefer more pensive, well acted films, Smooth Talk is worth seeing. The direction by Joyce Chopra is well done, and James Taylor's music helps provide tone. Like the good short story from which it springs, Smooth Talk's conclusion drives home the point with disquieting effectiveness.

Showing at the Micro at 5:00, 7:00, and 9:15 through Wednesday.

'Not soup' a success

By Sarah Kerruish
Arts & Entertainment Editor

Daahlings, if you missed Craig and Jamie's art exhibition 'Not Soup' then you missed what may in the future be regarded as one of the most important exhibitions in the history of art. Craig and Jamie thoughtfully provided a glossary of terms appropriate for their diverse, quintessentially, juxtaposing works, so the most ignorant viewers could feel at home with the critics.

Craig modestly said they paint for 'fun.' His lighthearted attitude belies the intensity of the paintings. Jamie's 'Favorite Panties,' an ingenious collage of lace and paint is simple but stirring, as many men at the exhibiton attested. Craig's favorite painting, which he describes as his Picasso because of its cubist, expressionist influence, is pictured above.

The philosophy behind the exhibition is reflected in the choice of venue. A sterile white-washed airy gallery (MOMA) was rejected and instead a crowded, claustrophobic corridor in the UI English Department was chosen to display the remarkable and revolutionary paintings.

Shattuck Arboretum: Greeks help build the future

By Michon Harb
Staff Writer

Students of the future will walk along the paths of the UI Shattuck Arboretum, look at the full grown trees, and their parents and grandparents can say that they planted those trees.

One of the final events of Greek Week was the creation of the Shattuck Arboretum. Over 400 students showed up to plant trees, clear out debris, and section out special areas. Only 100 were expected to show up to work.

Drew Yoder, a Theta Chi, said why so many people showed up was probably because the weather was so nice, the planting of the arboretum was one of the final events of Greek Week, and it was the idea of doing something different.

"It was a chance to do something worthwhile," said Yoder.

Over 250 manhours of labor was completed said Dean Vettrus, general manager of the SUB.

The arboretum is 63 acres and extends from the 18th hole of the golf course to the Johnson cutoff road.

"The shape of the arboretum looks like a reverse Idaho," said Vettrus.

The plans for the arboretum started eight to ten years ago. The project costs are 6.8 million dollars said Vettrus, but the only source of money is through donations and free labor, which has been very generous. Many garden and supply businesses in the Northwest have contributed and donated plants and building materials.

The arboretum is for the students use, for people to walk through and enjoy said Yoder. Vettrus said he hopes the improvements on the arboretum continues for the next ten years.
