

Senate appoints Price

By Erin Fanning
Staff Writer

The two week controversy concerning the new KUOI station manager, Rosellen Villareal Price, came to a close Wednesday when the ASUI senate voted 8-4 in favor of the appointment during the last senate meeting of the semester.

A group of interested students attended the meeting held at the Hotel Moscow Garden Lounge due to a senate regulation that one meeting per semester be held off-campus to hear the final decision on the appointment.

Sen. Richard Burke began debate on the issue moving that the bill be tabled. Sen. Regan Davis said she needed more time before making a decision on the reappointment that has stirred so much controversy.

"My mind is not made up," she said.

Sen. Brian Long said that Price has repeatedly proven her abilities to be station manager. He said he does not think it is fair to ask a qualified applicant to go through another week because the senate does not feel they have enough information.

Sen. Paula Evans said there were 600 plus students who support reopening applications for the position (referring to a recent petition) and the senate has to listen to those people.

Long questioned if the applications were reopened if the process would be objective.

He said new applicants would have a major edge because they would be going into the process already knowing what Comm Board and the senate wants.

If Price was voted down by the senate and decided to reapply she would be going into the process with a vote of unconfidence from the senate, he said.

Burke said he has researched the appointment and wants one more week to make sure the senate makes the best decision.

"Price is good," he said, "but I want to make sure she is the best candidate."

Davis added that by waiting a week on the decision is not a question of Price's ability, it would allow the senate to do their job by making the best possible decision.

Other appointments made Wednesday are the following: Shawn McIntosh for fall editor of the Argonaut, Rich Kuck for ASUI Attorney General, Jennifer Levanger for ASUI advertising manager and Megan Guido for summer editor of the Argonaut.

The senate also reappointed Darrell Anglen for the position of Lecture Notes administrator and Jon Erickson for Gem of the Mountain editor.

A resolution was also passed protesting the recent removal of student control on the ASUI golf course. The resolution states that the proposal by the administration did not allow for student input on the issue.

Sex survey changes attitudes

By Michon Harb
Staff Writer

Most people believe women bring sexual assault upon themselves, but after being informed about acquaintance sexual assault, they put aside such stereotypes.

That information was discovered after a year and half of preparation and presentations for a UI research project on acquaintance sexual assault.

The project began with volunteer college students from Alternatives to Violence of the Palouse going into various living groups. They asked students what is rape and handed out a questionnaire.

The questionnaire measured the attitudes and sensitivity to rape. It had 19 scenarios of sexual actions and had a scale from one to seven asking if a rape has positively occurred or not.

"Unless the scenario was clear cut, most couldn't define it as rape," said Mark Covey, assistant psychology professor and a leading activist in the research project.

After hearing presentations on sexual assault and after two weeks, the groups were asked to complete the questionnaire again. The change in the attitudes was strongly different, Covey said.

The people were less likely to hold women responsible, after the presentations. They were less likely to see sex as a motivation for rape but rather power as the motivation. They were more likely to recommend punishment.

And people were less likely to think that women brought it on themselves for being attractive or wearing certain clothing.

People were more likely to see that an acquaintance sexual assault is more common than expected. They were more likely to see the women who have been raped in a favorable light. And people were more likely to agree that a woman should resist.

Statistics from a survey taken on a similar campus found that women were more likely to be sexually assaulted by someone they knew. Fifty percent of the assaults were in the victim's home and 75 percent of the time the victim and the perpetrator knew each other, Covey said.

"Twenty-five percent of the women on this campus will be assaulted, and that's a conservative estimate," he said.

If one member expresses unwillingness for sexual activity then that constitutes an acquaintance sexual assault, Covey said. Yet few people saw this as an assault.

Amid controversy, GOA recommends appointment

By Erin Fanning
Staff Writer

The ASUI Senate Government Operations and Appointments (GOA) committee began the official process of appointing Rosellen Villareal Price as KUOI station manager by recommending her appointment 3-1 Tuesday night.

The four man board met before about 25 concerned students Tuesday to discuss the controversial KUOI appointment officially for the second time. Because of student concern GOA decided to have a second hearing for Price.

Concern in the form of a petition that asked for the reopening of applications for station manager was introduced at last week's GOA meeting. Since that time, according to nighttime disc jockey B.J. Hargrove, about 300 more signatures had been added to the original 300. Hargrove said it was not only students who had signed the petition but also members of the community and faculty and staff of the UI. She said there were some sections of the petition that people did not agree with but everyone who signed the petition did agree with reopening applications for station manager.

Hargrove also asked Price what exact changes she planned on making at KUOI.

Price said she had not at this point any definite plans. She said she could not make that judgement until she spent more time at KUOI.

But among the changes she has been considering include adding mainstream and possibly christian music to the station's format. She said she would also consider cutting back hours at the station.

Price said she would conduct a professional survey on what the public wants before making any major decisions concerning KUOI's music format.

Elliot Skolnick, former ASUI senator, said he wondered if having a christian radio show on a public radio station was not a question of keeping church and state separate.

He said he doubted it was possible to strike a balance between the several different religions represented on campus and also keep "the atheists happy".

Pat Murphy, a concerned student, said that D.J.'s can basically play any kind of music they want but for a station manager to make it policy to play christian music goes against the purpose of public radio.

Sen. Paul AlLee pointed out that all changes at KUOI must go through the ASUI Communication Board. He said this provides a form of checks and balances in the system.

According to Sen. Brian Long, another system of checks and balances within the actual bill appointing Price is a provision that the ASUI Attorney General must confirm the appointment in accordance with ASUI rules and regulations.

Cass Davis, speaking in defense of reopening the position, said according to the ASUI Comm Board rules and regs that Price did not meet all the requirements to be KUOI station manager.

He said therefore according to the Comm Board Rules and Regs she is not applicable.

Doug Scott, Comm Board chairman, told the Argonaut last week that the interviews had been handled professionally using the Comm Board rules and regs as a standard.

ASUI President Gino White said that Comm Board had taken the best person according to rules and regs. He said the process of following Comm Board rules and regs had not been "betrayed".

He said he is in total support of Price.

It was also questioned if the Comm Board had checked Price's references or professional background.

A member of the Comm Board told the Argonaut that references had not been checked but that the Comm Board rarely checks references on an application.

Sen. Cherri Sabala added that the station manager must also be able to work between the two floors (KUOI on the third floor of the SUB and the administrative offices on the first) and she thinks Price is capable of doing that.

Greg Meyer, current KUOI station manager, said he had tried to tie the first and third floors together but very few senators visited the KUOI station.

Amendment gives more faculty representation

By Susan Bruns
Staff Writer

The UI Faculty Council gave final approval Tuesday to amendments to the faculty constitution which will extend faculty membership and give representation on the council to the academic deans and university staff.

Another of the approved amendments will decrease student representation on the council from three undergraduate students to two.

The amendments were part of a series proposed by an ad hoc committee appointed by the council to review the constitution. They must now receive approval by the Board of Regents and UI President Richard Gibb.

The council met Tuesday and Thursday last week to consider each proposed amendment individually.

Article two of the constitution on faculty classification was amended to enfranchise senior instructors, senior lecturers and cooperative extension agents with professor status at the university. The change will give these employees the right to vote at university faculty meetings as well as their college and departmental meetings.

The constitution's article on faculty council membership was amended to give both the university's Council of Academic Deans and Staff Affairs Committee one voting representative to the council. These representatives were designated one-year terms.

The same article was amended to reduce student representation on the council to two undergraduate students and one graduate student representative. The constitution currently calls for three undergraduate representatives and one graduate representative.

Also at the meeting the council considered the tentative finals schedule for the 1986-87 academic year prepared by Matt Telin, director of admissions and registrar for the university.

Student representatives Russ Larocque and Holly Rickett pointed out that the spring semester schedule assigned all 10:30 morning classes to a Friday final at 3:30 p.m.

Rickett noted that the final was scheduled the same time as the conflict final. She said because many students enroll in 10:30 classes the scheduled final time would not give those students the option of a conflict final.

Faculty Secretary Bruce Eray said changing the final could throw off the rotation schedule the registrar uses to determine final times.

Council member Raymond Dacey said the poor final time is the price that has to be paid for the optimum class time.

The council agreed to postpone approval of the schedule until its next meeting to allow Telin to comment on a possible change.

Summer program teaches instructors PE skills

Physical education instructors will find help for administration of recreation and leisure services and teaching dance in two UI summer programs.

Professional development for recreation and leisure service administrators will build skills and give hands-on experience with microcomputers, risk and liability management, promotion and advertisement and nursing home and hospice programs.

The class will run from May 19 through 23.

The other physical education offering is a two-week aerobic dance instructional workshop in teaching and theory of aerobic dance. Included is course work in nutrition, weight control, strength, flexibility, cardiovascular efficiency and stress reduction. Current research techniques in weight lifting as applied to aerobic dance and choreography; fitness evaluation in aerobic dance; weight control and stress reduction will also be covered.

The class meets from June 9 through 19.

More information about these or any other summer offerings and registration for the Summer Session courses can be attained by calling Summer Sessions, UI, 885-6237.

Logger sports competition combines rollerskating and sawing

By Judy McDonald
Staff Writer

Birling on roller skates will highlight the annual Logger Sports Competition May 2 and 3 at the UI.

The meet will be held at the logger sports site on Perimeter Drive west of the Kibbie Dome.

In commemoration of the site's 10th anniversary, a special competition between faculty and alumni will be held Saturday, said Jan Pence, forestry student.

Sawing events will be emphasized in this competition because they were the mainstay of meets in the past, Pence said.

An added attraction will be a demonstration of birling on roller skates by Bill McGarry, a senior physics student who is also a professional logger. Birling is a game in which competitors try to keep their balance while revolving a floating log with their feet.

A springboard chop will be demonstrated by two professional loggers from Bonners Ferry and Spokane, Pence said. This method was used to fall timber 50 years ago, she added.

A total of eight teams from British Columbia, Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana will participate in the competition, which is the collegiate level of events held at Orofino's Lumberjack Days every fall.

Participants at Orofino are all professionals, however, said Pence.

About 10 students from UI will compete with the other teams in ax throwing, crosscut sawing, pole climbing, choker setting, single buck and birling, which will be the last event each day.

Other events include hard hit and speed chops and the obstacle pole buck, the only chainsaw event. All events are timed except for the hard hit chops.

Preliminaries will be Friday, with finals Saturday. A concession stand will be available both days from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The competition is sponsored by the UI Associated Foresters in cooperation with WSU. Spectators are welcome at no charge.

Next year's meet will be at WSU.

Counselor workshops offered

Among summer programs at the UI are a series of intensive workshops for counselors.

They are designed for practicing school counselors, agency counselors and psychologists interested in refreshing or developing skills in specialized areas.

The workshops will cover some of the problems gifted and talented students encounter; eating disorders, stress management; adolescent substance abuse counseling; how to counsel families of exceptional students; integrating school psychology, special education and counseling; hypnosis for helping professionals; test administration; computer applications; and others.

The sessions are scheduled for different dates and times so that students may register for any number, depending upon their interest and background. The series begins with June 10 programs and ends July 28.

More information about the offerings and a complete schedule are available by contacting Summer Sessions, UI, 885-6237.

Notice of Public Hearing

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to Idaho Code 33-2806, the University of Idaho will hold a public hearing on proposed increases in the dedicated activity fee portion of the Uniform Full-Time Student Fee for 1986 -87. It is proposed that the total fee be increased from $505 to $520 per semester. The $15 increase includes a $9.50 increase for intercollegiate athletics, a $4.50 increase for student union operations and a $1.00 increase for intramurals/locker/general recreation.

The athletic fee increase is needed to ensure a balanced budget for the athletic program for FY 1987 that includes raising the grants-in-aid allowance from 31 to 34 for the women's program and to cover increases in insurance costs.

The student union operations fee increase is needed to provide support for additional student services being offered at the SUB, to include the computer center cluster site, the microcomputer facility, and an expanded stereo lounge/TV viewing center.

The intramurals/locker/recreational services fee increase is needed to provide additional support services in response to increased use of recreational facilities resulting from a more student interest in physical fitness. Providing additional supervision is necessary both for the safety of users and the security of facilities.

Interested persons may present their views at a public hearing to be held at 3:00 p.m. Thursday, May 8, Chiefs' Room, Student Union Building, 6th & Deakin, University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho. Written testimony will be accepted at the Office of Financial Affairs, 201 Administration Annex, University of Idaho, any time prior to the hearing.

Opinion

Countdown to Meltdown

David Blakely
Associate Editor

Do you remember years ago reading the magazine ads placed by the power companies? You know, the ones that said there was less than a one in a trillion chance of something going wrong with a nuclear power plant.

Well, if recent history is any indication, the nuclear power industry isn't an even bet to prevent a major malfunction once a decade.

I wonder if nuclear engineers observing the recent meltdown of a reactor in Chernobyl, USSR and the probable deaths of hundreds or even thousands of people would choose to call this tragedy a "normal aberration" as one of them did at Three Mile Island.

The nuclear industry in this country, while avoiding killing anyone yet, has had more than its share of normal aberrations.

In October this year we observe the 20th anniversary of a partial meltdown that occurred at the Enrico Fermi plant outside Detroit. This occurred when one of those "infallible" cooling systems jammed. Although Detroiters didn't know it at the time, plans were being made to evacuate the entire city.

In April '75, a total meltdown was barely avoided at the Browns Ferry plant in Alabama. It seems that a workman was making an inspection in a dark area with a candle and accidentally set the place on fire. All those non-flammable materials of which our Nuke plants are constructed promptly ignited and blew out every single backup system.

A disaster was avoided only when engineers were able to divert the only working plumbing in the facility — the toilet system — into the reactor core.

And, of course, we all know about Three Mile Island and how a hydrogen gas bubble formed between the reactors core and the steel containment vessel.

This bubble, which no nuclear engineer had imagined could occur, threatened to blow the roof off the plant and expose the east coast to untold fallout.

As if this litany of mistakes wasn't enough, there is actually a Nuke plant at Diablo Canyon, California which sits just 2.5 miles away from a major fault. Somehow, Pacific Power Gas and Light didn't discover the Hosgri fault until the plant was in its third year of construction.

The plant has since been reinforced to withstand the largest predicted shocks from that fault. One wonders if the geologists making that prediction were the ones who missed the fault in the first place.

Through it all, our community of nuclear engineers has insisted that such disasters can't occur in America. They calmly told us that their gauges don't fail — as they did in Dresden, Illinois — and that their plants are of superior construction — forgetting about such trivial details as the falsified welding documents discovered at the Boston Edison plant.

Nowadays though the estimates are more pessimistic. Our own Nuclear Regulatory Commission states that there is a 45 percent chance of a complete core meltdown occurring in the US before the year 2000.

Well, why are we letting this happen, you ask. Well, the simple fact is that Nuclear Power is big business and big business seems to be getting just about everything it wants lately. Development of solar power would give the world a free energy source — and that's not so good for profits.

Therefore, its not so amazing that the administration which asks you to believe in Star Wars also concludes that Solar Power is not a feasible alternative to energy from nuclear and coal plants.

In the meantime, more and more nations will be building nuclear plants in countries far less technologically sophisticated than ours.

The long term forecast would seem to resemble what one Harrisburg, Pa. radio station reported a few years ago: "Partly cloudy, with a 40 percent chance of survival."

The Religion of Technology

Kirk Nelson

greater problem. What we are now seeing is the dark side of our slave — technology — who has risen up to smite us in our folly.

We can do little about the totalitarian nature of the Russian government. However, we can do something about our headlong rush after "glitter tech" which promises paradise, yet produces hell. In the early days of atomic energy, the promise was "it will be too cheap to meter," but now we're finding out it is "too costly to calculate."

Technocrats are too ready to supplicate before the altar of their creations. Worshipping the creations of man, they lose sight of what man is and what man's place is in the whole.

Since the rise of Christianity, man has set himself apart from and above nature. Nature in man's view is to be exploited for the benefit of mankind. What we must work toward is to change this attitude about man and his place in nature.

We must understand that many other creatures share this earth and they, too, have a vested interest in what happens to it. Be they snail darters or blue whales, they each have a niche in life and as sound a moral right to existence as we do. Too often man believes his own interest to be dominate, not realizing that all our interests are, in a subtle way, linked.

The problem lies in balancing the short term greed with the long term consequences. Capitalists and Communists share equal guilt in this aspect.

Sure, we can clear out the rain forests and we'll probably make some fast bucks in the process. When we're done, what will be left? A fistfull of cash owed to Yankee bankers and land title to a wasteland.

We can turn the Serengeti into a banana patch, but if the birth rate continues at 4 percent per year, there won't be enough shovels to bury the dead because the population will double every 20 years and no one can grow that much food.

Lots of people think we can just harness up that old boy, technology, to pull us through. Not so. It is only a short term placebo at best, and a two edged sword at worst.

Our natural optimism leads us to put technology on line before it has been thoroughly checked for safety. From Dalkon Shields to nuclear reactors, the technocrats will swear that they are safe. Experience shows us that in many cases, they are not.

In these days, when mistakes can cause such catastrophic personal as well as ecological effects, one would think it would be time to increase the wait time before technology comes on line.

But, even more important, there must be a fundamental change in our outlook concerning our position on this globe.

The earth owes us nothing and we owe it everything. If we do not learn this, then our children will curse our names from the ruins we have left them.

Golf Course: not a "fairway" to do it

IN THE SENATE
SENATE RESOLUTION -20

Editor,

First they took the Dome, then the S.U.B., parking went next and now the administration is taking the ASUI Golf Course. I am increasingly amazed that instead of outcries against this untrusting act of the administration, all I hear from most students is, "Let them take it, it only costs us money anyway". Do you really think that the administration wants a program that will lose them money? Don't kid yourself.

In the past, students have made a great investment in the ASUI Golf Course. I say investment, instead of debt, because we've bought most the equipment necessary to run a good golf course.

Now, when the course is ready to make money, the "helping hand" of the administration is reaching out to take another piece of student property. Not only are they doing it right before finals, when most students don't

WHEREAS, The recent proposal by the University of Idaho Administration concerning the transfer of control of the ASUI Golf Course failed to seek general student input; and,

WHEREAS, The timing of the Administration's proposal did not allow for student input so close to the end of the academic year; and,

WHEREAS, A large number of student dollars have gone toward the improvement and maintenance of the ASUI Golf Course over the past few decades; and,

WHEREAS, The process used in transferring control of the ASUI Golf Course was consummated in a very brief period of time with limited publicity; and,

WHEREAS, The Board of Regents of the University of Idaho was not informed of this proposal at the recent board meeting in Moscow; and,

WHEREAS, Student management at the golf course, or any other ASUI department, should be encouraged and advised, rather than taken over by, the University Administration; and,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED BY THE SENATE OF THE ASSOCIATED STUDENTS, UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO THAT: The ASUI opposes the methods used in transferring control of the ASUI Golf Course to the University of Idaho Administration,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT: The ASUI Senate supports a public hearing before the Board of Regents prior to their considering the University of Idaho Administration's proposal to take control of the ASUI Golf Course.

have the time to express their point of view, but they're also doing it without soliciting any kind of general student input. The administration didn't even take the time to inform the ASUI Senators of their proposed action.

As a student, I am outraged that the administration does not respect us enough to ask for our point of view. I for one, have two questions to ask of them. First, why isn't the administration reimbursing the students for the money we have invested in "their" golf course? And second, if they have the knowledge necessary to make a profit from the operation of the ASUI Golf Course, why aren't they willing to share that information with the students? This is, after all, an educational institution, and for once I would like to learn something from our "teachers" other than disrespect and distrust.

KUOI petition ignored

Editor,

I would like to personally thank the approximately 600 UI students, faculty, business people and citizens of Moscow who signed their name to the KUOI Petition which I initiated and authored. Like most of us, I feel my name is my most valuable possession and I lend it with discretion and integrity. Thank you for lending yours.

The Petition, which recommended "reopening the position for KUOI Manager, was presented to the ASUI Senate on two occasions. In the words of one senator, "I don't think this Petition merits any effect on our decision." Seven senators, of the same opinion, chose to disregard the concerns of the 600 signatories. The ideas and methods of the candidate chosen by the Communication Board have been controversial and the Petition was drafted as a viable protest and solution. The final ASUI senate vote as eight for the appointment; four against.

I would like to express my appreciation to ASUI Senators Holli Crawford, Regan Davis, Paula Evans, and Richard Burke for their consideration of the Petition. And again thank the 600 people who took the time to read and sign the Petition. It is regrettable that eight student "leaders" didn't take the time to listen.

Aministration has no regard for student input

Editor,

For the last 15 years students have placed their money and support into the ASUI Golf Course may actually turn a profit this year.

Now the Administration feels it is time for them to take it over. Interesting timing after all these years, eh?

It reminds me of last year when the students fought to keep parking fees from going up. We were initially successful and the Administration waited. Yes, they waited until Summer Break to railroad it through Faculty Council when most of the student population was gone.

Look at Withdrawal Dates — they used to be the week before Finals Week in the late 1970s. The Administration and Faculty have inched them (or was it drove them?) with each new change until now they are just after SPRING BREAK. Do you suppose any new college freshman forgot to drop a class they were doing poorly in the week after they got back from vacation? It's great timing!

All three issues have been pushed through without any student referendum at the polling booth.

It seems the Faculty and Administration do not think much of the students' ability to make decisions, much less give their input on the policies that affect their lives.

Obituary

Peter Sparling Soderlund, 24, UI student

Peter Sparling Soderlund, 24, a UI psychology major from Boise, died of carbon monoxide poisoning April 26 while on a camping trip on the Highway to the Sun in Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park.

Memorial services will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at Clover Dale funeral home under the direction of Gibbson Funeral Home, Boise.

Soderlund, of 4023 Del Monte, Boise, was born May 1, 1961, at Boise. He attended Boise schools and graduated from Capital High School in 1979.

"Peter was an avid fisherman and golfer, he particularly loved the mountains and lakes," his family said. "His family and friends will remember him as a young man who always brought happiness into the lives of others."

Survivors include his mother and stepfather, Donna and Allan Shepard of Boise; his father, Peter G. Soderlund of Blue Springs, Missouri; his brothers, Matt Soderlund of Oxford England and Chris Soderlund of Boise; his step-sisters, Ann Shepard of Boise and Lynn Shepard of Eugene; his stepbrother, Paul Shepard of Boise; and his maternal grandmother, Ruth Sparling of Boise.

The family suggests gift memorials to the Peter Sparling Soderlund discretionary athletic fund, Moscow, Idaho 83843.

The family requests that no flowers be sent.

Students' art on sale at fair

By Judy McDonald
Staff Writer

A group of UI art students will be selling their creations at Moscow's Renaissance Fair May 3 and 4 in East City Park.

The students have worked long hours to produce the functional pottery and stoneware, as well as Raku pottery and sculpture that will be offered for sale. One example of the items to be sold are extra-large, round stoneware bowls produced by Randy Erickson.

Other artists participating in the sale are Ken Ketterer, Tim Mosgrove and Vince Carlson. All are enrolled in the advanced ceramics class taught by Frank Cronk, art professor in the College of Art and Architecture.

Paintings by Dave Purviance will also be available at one of the two booths rented by the group, Erickson said. Purviance received a juror's award for one of his paintings at the undergraduate art show held earlier this semester at Ridenbaugh Hall.

UI alumnus nutritionist Hegsted to lecture on his subject today

D. Mark Hegsted will speak on "Dietary Standards" at 1:30 p.m. today in room 125 of Renshaw Hall on the UI campus.

Hegsted, an internationally recognized nutritionist, is returning to UI to join in class of 1936 50th reunion activities.

Born in Rexburg, he holds a B.S. degree in agricultural science from UI.

He is famous for his pioneer research on the relationship of diet to cardiovascular disease in Americans. His studies laid the groundwork for nutritional recommendations aimed at preventing the development of cardiovascular disease in American adults.

He has over 350 research papers, scholarly articles and reviews on subjects relating to nutrition research and application of nutrition to the world human population.

His research areas include iron, calcium and protein requirements and cholesterol metabolism.

A professor of nutrition emeritus of Harvard University, he has served as associate director for research for the Harvard Medical School's New England Regional Primate Research Center; chief scientist-nutritionist, United States Department of Agriculture; and as administrator of the USDA Science and Education Administration Human Nutrition Center. He has also had teaching assignments at Harvard University and the University of Wisconsin.

Some of his many honors include election to the National Academy of Sciences, the Osborne-Mendel Award and the Elvahjem Award, for outstanding basic research in nutrition and for distinguished public service, respectively.

Freshmen start right

Making the academic and social transitions from high school to college can be stressful for many high school graduates.

But the UI's Summer Start program is trying to make that adjustment a little easier.

Sid Eder, Summer Session director, said, "We know approximately 40 percent of the nation's college-bound students do not make a successful transition from high school to college. As freshmen, too often they get lost in the shuffle or find themselves in academic difficulty because they lack the personal maturity, self-discipline or study skills needed for a successful adjustment."

Eder stressed that the UI's College of Education began the Summer Start program last year because the university wants all its incoming freshmen to have productive, satisfying college careers.

"It's also important to note that the Summer Start program, while designed primarily for entering UI freshmen, is open to any college-bound high school graduate," Eder said.

The eight-week program runs from June 10 through August 1. Students live in dorms and take two or three classes, selecting from more than 40 subject areas.

In workshops, they learn writing and study skills, and they attend seminars on adjusting to college life, financial planning and how to use the university library.

More information is available by contacting Summer Start Program, Summer Session Office, 885-6237.

Snapdragon available

The spring issue of the local literary magazine Snapdragon will be now on sale at Bookpeople of Moscow, Bookworld No. 2 in the Moscow Mall, the UI Bookstore, and the Bookie at WSU for $2 per copy.

This issue is 72 pages long and includes poetry by Lori Ann Wallin, Chris Schreiber, and Kandy Short. Art for this issue has been provided by Curt Porter and Judith Widener.

Snapdragon is sponsored by the Department of English, the University Library and the School of Communication

Oklahoma hoe-down brings house down

By Christine Pakkala
Staff Writer

The audience at the Hartung Theater loved Oklahoma! just as countless civic theater and high school audiences have loved it throughout the years.

Oklahoma! is a play that depends on good music, good dancing and lots of energy. In that respect, the UI Theater Department's effort is a success.

Some of the characters were colorful and lively, others overpowering and one or two were insipid in comparison.

Mark Bryan's portrayal of the surly hired hand, Jud Fry, is accurate: he makes Fry the bad guy, but he also makes you feel just a little sorry for the lonely fellow.

Physically, Bryan is perfect for the role: big with a booming voice, and bearded, although the character describes himself to Laurey as one time not having

"shaved for two days."

Lori Taylor, as the sweet but sturdy heroine, Laurey, is sickeningly saccharine. She is too poufy and coy; the girl never stops swishing and swaying. She does have a wonderful voice; she trills easily through all her numbers.

David Borrer as Curly also has a strong, unflinching voice and he is good as the cocky, bantering hero, if a trifle bland. And Borrer has curly hair!

Caroline Granger has a big role to fill as the scrawny, gutsy Aunt Eller and she just doesn't do it. I didn't believe she was a hardy pioneer woman who could joke with the boys or offer pearls of wisdom to Laurey. She doesn't seem old enough; she's almost as coy as her niece Laurey.

Lou Sumrall as Will Parker and Pam Stiehl as Ado Annie are great. Sumrall is very believable as a classic (gawsh) country boy, and his sweetie, Ado Annie, is endearingly fickle. Charles Miller steals a few scenes with his comical expressions of dismay at being trapped in marriage.

The sets are fantastic, with gorgeous sunset colors. The lighting also seems especially good, highlighting the happy moments and casting a gloom during Laurey's dream (nightmare).

The dancing is average most of the time, but always spirited. Cindy Albers, who choreographed the show, is the exception. Albers plays the dream Laurey and she is outstanding.

Oklahoma! is a great entertainment value and it's fun to sing all the songs from the show for the next few days (you can't help yourself). This particular production shouldn't be missed if somehow you have managed not to see it yet.

The curtain goes up at 8 p.m. tonight and Saturday night and a matinee follows at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Fair offers tempting treats

By Sara Donart
Staff Writer

The list of reasons for attending this weekend's Renaissance Fair in Moscow's East City Park is long and weighty with temptation, according to fair organizers.

- Gifts. Shopping lists for graduation, weddings and mothers' day can easily be filled from the crafts offered at the fair by over 100 Northwest artisans. The selection will include jewelry, ceramics, stained glass and handmade clothing, with each craftsperson available for questions and comments.

- Performance. Entertainment to cheer the dead-week doldrums will fill the park's new Dragonback Memorial Stage both Saturday and Sunday from mid-morning until late afternoon. This year the main stage events will include a mix of music, dance and drama, featuring the cast of the UI's "Oklahoma," The Bottom Dollar Band and Johnny Vee and the Surf Bums, among others.

- Food. Meals, snacks and sweets from a variety of ethnic origins will be offered at over a dozen food booths sponsored by local non-profit community groups. Hot coffee and pastries, burritos and a variety of Asian food are but a few of the edibles on this weekend's menu.

- Price. Free admission makes this event affordable even for the most impoverished student.

- Relief. Perhaps the best reason for attending, from the student-facing-finals point of view, is the ready made and legitimate excuse the fair offers to would-be book-crackers. Whether for an hour's breather from the books or for an entire afternoon of avoidance, the fair promises relaxation and entertainment no matter what the weather.

In fact, fair organizers promise that "rain, sleet, snow or ash, the fair still goes on." Fair activities officially started on Thursday with the traditional Maypole dance performed in Friendship Square. The fair itself will begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday with a parade around East City Park led by the Border Highlanders. Stage entertainment kicks off at 10 a.m. with Renaissance Fair veteran performer Lisa Lombardi.

Architecture exhibits impressive

By Matt Helmick
Staff writer

If the architecture students of today have it their way, there will be some terrific buildings built in the near future.

Just take a look at the architecture plans on display at Ridenbaugh Hall for the B. F. A. Architectural Thesis Show.

I mean there is some really impressive stuff here. Large shopping centers, a subway station, a maritime museum and a zoological garden are just some of the things that one can find here. All this and monorails too!

Yep, monorails. As a kid I was always impressed by these darn things, but I never seemed to have the opportunity to ride one. Well, Robert Lake increased my appetite for a ride on one of these amazing machines with his architectural thesis, Westlake Arcade.

Lake's thesis is a design for a shopping center in Seattle that has a monorail running inside it. That is not the only impressive feature about the center, however. Because the shopping center is large and has a lot of inside space, Lake utilizes that space to bring back the romance of shopping as if you were in an old shopping square.

Shops in the center are in the open as opposed to being stuffed in "boxes" as you find in many of today's malls. The center also sports a fantastic skylight as well as a skylight dome. To appreciate the design you really have to see Lake's model of the center which is impressive in itself.

Maybe I simply have a fetish for moving objects, but I also found William Turek's design for a subway station in Denver, Colorado to be quite interesting. The station is cleverly designed, with yet more overhead skylights.

I think the most impressive thing was the model in which Turek displayed a section of the subway station. The model actually lies within a box. There is a peep hole provided for one eye in order to see the station from the proper viewpoint. When viewing through the peephole, one can see the rail system and the overhead skylights that have actual light provided from outside the box.

Two interesting building ideas for Moscow were presented at the thesis exhibit. One was "a city, county, and community center" by Ty Buck. This formidable (for Moscow anyway) building sports three stories and contains sheriff and court house facilities as well as retail and residential areas. This building has skylights also.

The other Moscow-oriented design was an elementary school. The school was beautifully designed and had ramps for the handicapped.

Other architecture design dealt with buildings around the Spokane River. One such design was a zoological garden with various types of foliage planted outside a park complex.

Another design was for a large scale museum of architecture to be constructed on the riverside. This museum, designed by Matthew J. Walker, consists of architecture from various periods. The most eye catching parts, I felt, were those of classical architecture. The dome and columns were well included in the framework of modern architecture.

The most eye-catching part of the museum for me, however, was the outdoor, columned veranda that overlooks the river. The overall design and execution of the varied parts was well done.

There are many other designs as well. I can honestly say that I found all of them impressive and interesting to look at. I think the imagination present in these works was the vital ingredient in making them so interesting. Perhaps in the future one of these designs will take form as an actual building, but until then, check out the exhibit.

throughout the day include demonstrations by the Palouse Akido Club, a juggling workshop, a paper making demonstration and a special exhibit of Renaissance projects by students from Lena Whitmore school.

The Renaissance Fair information booth will dispense information, sell t-shirts, buttons, post cards, balloons and serve as a first aid station for minor mishaps. KUOI will cover the event, and long time Moscow resident, DJ and community organizer Peter Basoa promises to be back in town as Special Guest.

Mr. Yarber goes to NFL's Washington

By Kathy McCanlies
Sports Editor

The suspense was heavy. The final rounds of the National Football League's draft were nearing and the telephone hadn't yet rung in Eric Yarber's dormitory room.

But nearing the eleventh hour the phone did ring — and the news was good. Yarber was drafted in the twelfth and final round by the Washington Redskins.

Two Redskins representatives, Dick Daniels and Bo Bennett, called to inform Yarber, "Mister Excitement" to UI football fans, that he was drafted into their camp, and to report to a mini-camp May 11th. Now Yarber must wait to hear of contract stipulations, including a bonus for signing, from his agent Paul Passno.

"I was getting pretty nervous when they (Redskins) traded away their tenth round pick," said the audibly ecstatic senior who was the sole Vandal to be chosen by the NFL this year. "I felt that things were starting to slip away."

The 5-foot-9, 150 pound wide receiver beat the odds by being drafted despite his size, and he acknowledged the Redskins for giving him the chance to prove his prowess on the field.

"I'm glad that the 'Skins took a chance with me," Yarber said, adding "They said that my size didn't bother them at all."

Keith Gilbertson, UI's first year head football coach, had praise for the newest Vandal to join the ranks of the pros. "He deserves to get drafted," said Gilbertson. "He's a quality football player and a good guy."

When Yarber was asked how he felt about his fellow seniors being overlooked by the draft, Yarber turned solemn, especially when he spoke of second-team All Big Sky tight end Scott Auker.

"I feel that since the NFL didn't draft Scott they didn't know what they missed," said Yarber. "I was with him throughout the whole thing, and I feel that they passed up a good guy. It's not complete with him not signing," he said. Yarber added that Auker, along with Rick Sloan and Tom Cable will likely try out for NFL teams as free-agents. He also mentioned that USFL teams were interested in Cable and Joe Smiley.

Gilbertson said that Sloan, third ranked as a NCAA Division I-AA quarterback, signed with the Oakland Raiders Thursday.

Yarber was offered a contract with the Canadian Football League's Toronto Argonauts in March, but he said he would stay in the U.S.

"Now that I have my foot in the door, there's no need to go up there. Besides, I'd get taxed in both countries."

Eric Yarber said that he'll take with him some of the bits of knowledge he learned under former coach Dennis Erickson, now at the University of Wyoming.

"I'll carry him with me to the pros," Yarber said of Erickson and his philosophy. "Like one of his mottos: 'no matter what it takes to do it, find a way to get it done.' I'll take that to camp with me and it'll come in handy when things get rough."

Yarber said that his knee injury has cleared up. "It's 100 percent now," and he has been working out with Sloan and Auker daily.

Will the former Vandal that thrilled Kibbie fans remain loyal to his Alma Mater in the future? Definitely.

"I'll always be a Vandal at heart," he said.

Silver and Gold scrimmage tonight

The results of the spring training efforts in the Vandal football camp will be on display this evening as the annual Silver and Gold scrimmage takes place in the Kibbie Dome starting at 7:30.

Keith Gilbertson said the scrimmage will be a way to look at the total Vandal team at one time and analyze the problem areas that need work.

"We've got some depth problems with the offensive line," he said.

The notable omission from the starting lineups will be quarterback Scott Linehan. Gilbertson said that Linehan knows everything in the playbook, and keeping him out of the game will enable other players a chance to show their stuff.

Admission is free.

Tracksters at Oregon/Pepsi Relays

By Chris Schulte
Staff writer

Stefan Wikstrom and Kirsten Jensen have been selected Big Sky and Mountain West field athletes for the week.

Wikstrom, a freshman from Hagersten, Sweden, was chosen for his javelin throw of 227-0 at WSU last Saturday. His throw gives him the top mark in the Big Sky this year. The selection gave Wikstrom his second consecutive award in as many weeks.

Jensen was named for her triple jump of 36-2 at the Seattle Invitational last week. Her mark established a short lived stadium record but still enabled her to take second at the highly competitive meet. The jump also bettered the jumper from Kendrick's school record.

Both the men and women track teams are in action this weekend in Eugene, OR. The meet is the Oregon/Pepsi relays and should be one of the more competitive fields most of the athletes will see this year.

Highlights should include the mens 400 meter relay team. This team of Dayo Onanubosi, Patrick Williams, Everton Wanliss and Chris Stokes should come very close to qualifying for the N.C.A.A. championships after narrowly missing the mark last week at WSU. Coach Mike Keller sees the chances as very good if the weather is nice.

Del Degan and company at the Big Sky Championships

The UI women's tennis team traveled to Walla Walla Wednesday to play Whitman College. Idaho defeated their opponents 5-4 in a closely contested match that came down to the wire.

The team score was tied at 3-3 coming into the final two doubles matches. Anna de La Cueva and her partner had lost their number one doubles match in a tough three-setter. According to assistant coach Suresh Menon, "our girls should have won that match."

Idaho was able to pull out the win by victories in the number two and three doubles spots. Jane Strathman and Kathy Benson won at number two, while Idaho's number three team of Pam Waller and Jody Farwell were also victorious. Menon attributed the close matches to the improved Whitman team, who he said "are the best they've been in years."

The men left Tuesday for Boise to compete in the Big Sky Conference Championships. According to Scott, their main competition will come from Weber State and University of Nevada-Reno.

Reno has reportedly "come alive" under their new coach. The Reno team recently beat the University of Utah and Brigham Young University, both strong tennis teams. Scott said, "we were able to beat Reno on our spring trip, so we'll be confident going in."

UI batters in last home stand

By Roger Gaboury
Staff writer

The UI Baseball Club will play their last home game of the season this afternoon at 2:30 on Guy Wicks Field, across from the Wallace Complex.

They will play Spokane Falls today and then go to Spokane to play them again tomorrow in a double-header starting at 1 p.m.

The Vandals now own a 6-7 season record. But they have won 5 of their last six games after starting with a 1-6 record.

Player/Coach Luke Aldrich credits the team's defense and good pitching to pull out the wins for the Vandals in the second half of the season.

Historically, the club has done better in the second half. Last year, the one-year-old club had a 5-10 record, but they had finished the season 5-3 after starting out with seven losses.

GOOD EVENING, AND WELCOME TO "HEADLINE NEWS". OUR TOP STORY TONIGHT ... 27 FOREIGN EXCHANGE STUDENTS WERE INJURED AT THE UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO WHEN THEY WERE FLUNG FROM A GRANT SLINGSHOT SET UP BETWEEN TWO MAPLE TREES ON THE CAMPUS.

A GROUP CALLING THEMSELVES "U.Y.A.K." (UP YOUR ASS KHAOFY) CLAIMED RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE ACTION AND ISSUED THIS STATEMENT: "WE DON'T WANT NONE OF THEM LIBYANS AT OUR SCHOOL."

...WHEN TOLD THAT THEY WERE SLINGSHOTTING INNOCENT SPARROWS AND NOT LIBYANS, THE GROUP'S LEADER REPLIED... "OH, WHAT THE HELL... I'M SURE KHAOFY GETS OUR MESSAGE."

TRAIN WITH THE NUCLEAR INDUSTRY'S LEADER, AND YOU COULD END UP LEADING THE INDUSTRY.

Over half the nuclear reactors in America are operated by one organization. The Navy. The technology is the most advanced in the world. The men in charge are the industry's best. That's why the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidacy Program is the most sophisticated training available.

It has to be. College juniors and seniors who qualify for the program can earn $1,000 a month while still in school. In addition, you get a $3,000 bonus upon entrance into the program, and an additional $3,000 when you complete your Naval studies.

And, as an officer in today's Nuclear Navy, you receive a year of paid graduate-level training - gaining the experience and credentials that can put you at the forefront of the nuclear industry.

You must be a U.S. citizen, 26½ years of age or younger upon commissioning, working toward a bachelor's or master's degree. You must also have completed a minimum of one year each of calculus and calculus-based physics with a "B" average or better.

So if you've started thinking about a career in the nuclear field, think about starting at the top. You can apply after your sophomore year. Call

MADD's campaign gets tough with drunk drivers

MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) announced last week it will launch a nationwide television campaign against holiday drinking and driving. "With the rapid approach of school prom and graduation events, as well as the traditional summer holidays," said Norma Phillips, national president of MADD. "MADD will make a special effort through its public service announcement videos to increase awareness concerning the dangers of drinking and driving. With over 23,500 alcohol related traffic fatalities each year on America's highways, we cannot overemphasize the need to drive responsibly, and guard against those who insist on committing alcohol and drug impaired driving crimes."

Holidays and graduation time are regarded as periods of greater potential risk for alcohol related traffic deaths. For example, the latest study by the US Department of Health and Human Services between '78 and '84 showed both the number of traffic deaths and the proportion of alcohol related traffic fatalities were markedly higher over the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving released five public service announcements last week scheduled to air between May 1 and New Year's Eve of this year. The spots target Graduation/Prom Night, Memorial Day, July 4, Labor Day and the Christmas Season, all of which are believed to be heavy drinking and driving occasions.

WANTED - Advertising Manager for local weekly newspaper. Must have Advertising Sales experience. Automobile needed. Layout experience helpful. Local accounts. Call for appointment, 883-0688. Whitman-Latah Republic.

Scholarships available for English, language teachers

English and language arts teachers interested in either of two UI summer courses on poetry and writing have an opportunity to apply for scholarships.

A class on poetry and culture offered at the UI from June 16 through July 3, and at the Coeur d'Alene Center Northwest Inland Writing Project, July 7 through August 1, both have some Grace V. Nixon scholarships available.

The scholarships cover course fees, books and, in some cases, travel and/or on-campus housing.

The writing project is open to any teacher, kindergarten through college, who uses writing as part of a student's learning experience. Early application is advised since only 25 students from Idaho can be accommodated.

The poetry and culture course will include information on poetic technique, how to help students understand and enjoy poetry, poetry from different cultures and how to develop poetry units on the basis of student strengths and interests.

Students interested in the poetry and culture course can contact Walter Hesford, Department of English, UI, 885-6156. More information about the Northwest Inland Writing Project is available by contacting Elinor Michel, NIWP Director, College of Education, UI, 885-6586.
