Newest lighting plan 'excludes Elm Street'

BY DAWN BOBBY

A final university plan for lighting campus streets could be finished as early as the end of this week, according to ASUI President Brian Long. But Old Greek Row's dimly lit Elm Street won't be part of it.

The draft is only one section of an overall lighting improvement plan, which will cost the university more than a million dollars to implement, said Ken Hall, university Physical Plant director.

"We're looking at about $150,000 to $180,000 of work on this go-round," Hall said.

The current lighting plan covers Nez Perce Drive and the residence hall areas, but not Elm Street. It was announced Wednesday that Elm Street lighting was the responsibility of the City of Moscow. Since the university does not control lighting on the street, jurisdictional problems have made it difficult to improve lighting there.

But that is not the only reason Elm Street has been left without recent improvements, Hall said.

"It's not a high priority area," he said. "We analyzed the campus and came up with about 32 problem areas, and the top five or six on that list are on the plan. (Elm Street) isn't one of those."

Hall said, however, that if a high need can be determined, his department would work with Washington Water Power officials to arrange temporary measures to improve Elm Street lighting. The university could even consider taking complete responsibility for the street's lighting, he said.

Long and Sen. Brad Cuddy met with Hall, President Richard Gibb and other university officials Friday to discuss the problems and concerns facing implementation of lighting proposals.

"THE top five or six (problem areas) on that list are on the plan. (Elm Street) isn't one of those."

- Ken Hall

"They showed us the tentative plan, which is on hold for the time being," Long said. "Right now, President Gibb has some questions as to whether there is any need to light the area between the (Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity) house and the golf course."

Long said that those questions might be answered by survey questionnaires released last week to students, asking which areas they considered "danger zones" — areas too dark to be safe.

The surveys, however, may come too late for the "formalization" of the lighting plan, which will take place later this week. Gibb, Hall, Facilities Planning Director Joanne Reese and Controller Jerry Reynolds are expected to finalize the lighting plan by Friday.

Long said that although campus rape and assault statistics are low here, he believes there is still a need to protect the students who must walk to campus study areas late at night.

"A lot of incidents go unreported, and statistics can't reflect that," Long said. "I know a lot of women who absolutely refuse to go to the Art and Architecture Building at night without an escort. Nothing's been reported, but they still refuse to go."

In the interim, Long plans to introduce an evening "escort service" that the ASUI will fund.

"We'll probably contract it out," Long said. "We've contacted the Air Force ROTC and they've expressed an interest."

"We recognize that construction takes a long time. Maybe this will help in the meantime."

If jurisdiction can be obtained, Long would like to do a little trading and compromising.

"Say the area between the Teke house and the golf course doesn't need lighting. Maybe we can move the fixtures that would have gone in there to Elm Street."

Students 'bail-out' classmates

BY ALAN SOLAN

University of Idaho law students have come to the aid of fellow classmates whose notes, casebooks and other personal property was damaged Oct. 10, when a broken water pipe flooded the first floor and basement of the College of Law.

A student study area in the basement of the building received extensive water damage. Dennis Weigt, a law student whose study carrel was located about 10 feet directly below the break in the line, said every one of his casebooks had been severely damaged.

Weigt's biggest concern however, is the damage to 144 of his computer disks. Weigt said his "entire undergraduate career," as well as all his law school notes and outlines, were on the disks.

Weigt has sent about a third of the the most important disks to a company in Texas that specializes in retrieving data from seemingly ruined disks, he said. The university will pay the $25-$100 per disk to have the information recovered, Weigt said.

Tom Widman, a member of Weigt's study group, said he lost about $100 worth of books and outlines in the flood.

"I was lucky. Most of my casebooks were at home," Widman said.

According to Widman, four of the five students in his group suffered "claimable damage."

The water, which he said flowed into the basement for about three hours, also damaged many items like carpet and photographs — items that Widman said could not be assigned a monetary value.

Weigt said that Carol Grupp, UI risk management officer, is working closely with the affected students. He said she will bring lists of damages to the University's insurance adjuster.

"Carol Grupp is trying her best," Weigt said. "I really think she is working in our favor."

Alcohol Awareness Week begins

BY JILL BECK

Student Advisory Services will be taking part in the National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week (NCAAW). Although the week is officially set for Oct. 19-25, SAS plans to hold off on activities for another week because Homecoming week has just ended.

"Since Homecoming week was so busy, we decided to sponsor only one program during the official NCAAW to give students a break," said Dianne Milhollin, coordinator of disabled student services and director of the university's NCAAW program.

"We're kicking it off during the official week," said Milhollin referring to a program Chuck Morrison, counselor for SAS, will be giving on Thursday, Oct. 22.,

"How Do I Help a Friend in Trouble." The program will focus on seeing the warning signs of alcoholism and learning how to help.

The program will be held from 7-8 p.m. in the Appaloosa Room at the SUB. Other programs to be held the following week include "Legal Liability for Student Leaders," "How the Law Affects You" and "Recovery From Substance Abuse."

"WE'RE not talking prohibition. We're talking responsible drinking and hosting."

- Dianne Milhollin

Also, individual living groups have been asked to give programs, and a luncheon will be held for BACCHUS (Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students). Invitations have been sent for the luncheon, which is scheduled for Oct. 30, but those interested may call Student Advisory Services to see if space is still available.

"We're definitely promoting responsible drinking," said Milhollin. "We're not talking prohibition. We're talking responsible drinking and hosting."

"For the individuals who find they have a problem with drinking, we're trying to make available some information on recovery programs," Milhollin said.

Part of NCAAW is making students aware of area groups which help people with drinking problems. Students can contact either the counseling center or SAS, which acts as referral service to get students in contact with the appropriate agency.

Library slates booksale

The University of Idaho Library Book Sale runs Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 22-24.

Some 1,500 volumes will go on sale in the reserve reading room at low prices. Books with a wide range of subjects will be sold at prices starting as low as five cents. While many of the books going on sale Thursday are old and/or physically tired, a good number of them are donated volumes which are in good condition.

"The library simply needs to make room," Paul Conditt, acquisitions officer for the library, said.

Conditt has been the acquisitions officer for the last 19 years. Conditt's new title is fiscal officer.

"It's easier to just consider me part of the library staff," he said.

The last sale of this type was held in April, 1985. The library usually holds these sales every two or three years. Usually the sales last one day, with the best items selling quickly; this year's sale will last three days.

"I'm going to need a lot of enthusiastic book buyers to make a dent in the material we have," Conditt said.

College author gets UI update

Lisa Birnbach tours campus for latest 'College Book'

BY CHRISTINA LATTA

The Organizational Communication class patiently chattered as they awaited her arrival on Thursday. Finally, in a flurry, the door opened and in swept Lisa Birnbach and her escort, Karma Metzler.

Birnbach gained national fame in the early '80s as the author of "The Official Preppy Handbook" and "The College Book."

She had last visited the University of Idaho five years ago to do research for "The College Book," a manual containing descriptions of the 186 institutions of higher learning Birnbach had visited. She geared the book to the interests of college students in the 1980s. Her descriptions included facts about which majors were most popular, which dorms were the best, what the campus' favorite drink was, the campus' gay situation and trivial facts students might want to know.

Now, Birnbach is adding institutions to the updated edition of "The College Book." She had visited Washington State University Wednesday for its inclusion in the latest edition, and because she was close, Birnbach decided to make a second visit to UI.

Regarding allegations that Birnbach gave UI a bad review in her first college guide she said, "I liked that chapter. I had a good time before. I like it (UI) just as much this time. Growing up in New York, I didn't really know about Idaho."

Birnbach gathers her information by observing the students and classes at an institution and then asking questions of selected members of the campus society. When asked in the communication class about how she concluded that the majority of UI students were of the Mormon religion, it was suggested that Lisa may have picked up on anti-Mormon sentiment within some of the students. "It's good that I'm back for that reason," she said.

Birnbach also spent time in the President's Office where she donated a dollar found in a New York taxicab to the Found Money Fund. She also met with UI President Richard Gibb and other university officials.

Birnbach's third book, "Going to Work," will be released next June. It examines working conditions at 50 different companies nationwide. In the meantime, the second edition of "The College Book" will be released sometime in September of next year.

Sex: WSU students need cold showers

Have you heard about the latest controversy at Washington State University? The institution of higher learning that brought us "Bigfoot" now proposes to bring us condom vending machines in the dormitories.

People who have hardened their consciences are saying "so what" to the WSU condom pushers. People who believe the social and medical lies perpetuated by the government schools, believe that condoms will save the community from AIDS. People who have retained morals, in spite of a university education, are alarmed at the stupidity of the WSU condom proposal.

If there is nothing else you get out of this column, please understand that condoms do not protect you from the AIDS virus. I am not a medical expert but here are some thoughts to consider.

United States Surgeon General, C. Everett Koop, is spending millions of dollars in advertising which promotes the use of a condom for "safe sex." The message is that if you carefully use a condom during sex with an AIDS carrier, you will be protected from death.

C. Everett Koop is also sending our literature to medical personnel telling them how to protect themselves from AIDS. He recommends that a dentist and dental assistant wear gloves, protective eyewear, face masks and scrub suits when working on all patients. If we believe the surgeon general, it would be easier and safer for medical professionals to simply wear condoms.

All across the country doctors and nurses are refusing to treat AIDS carriers, but C. Everett Koop says condoms permit you to have safe sex with them.

Bruce Skaug
Commentary

Condoms are designed to prevent pregnancy and, incidentally, protect the user from non-viral diseases. According to the American Medical Association, a single AIDS viron is 500 times smaller than a single sperm cell. In fact, according to Dr. Margaret A. Fischl in the Journal of the American Medical Association, nearly one in three will contract AIDS from an infected partner, even with 100 percent condom use.

What do the prophylactic companies have to say about their wares?

Schmid Products Company puts a disclaimer on the inside of each box of condoms sold. It says that condoms are designed only for normal sex, and that condoms will not protect the user from viruses. AIDS is a virus!

Should Washington State University put condom machines in their dormitories, promiscuous sex will be encouraged and many students will ruin their lives because they thought that using a condom was "safe sex." One of those students, harmed in the future, is going to get a lawyer and sue the university for putting a condom machine in his dormitory. I hope he wins.

The university is considering what type of sign to place on the condom machines — a sign that reflects their philosophy. The following would suffice: "This condom machine is dedicated to the proposition that WSU men have the morality of dogs in heat, and WSU women are shameless whores incapable of uttering the word 'no.' The university condones and encourages the right of fornication for all its students."

No doubt some at WSU really believe condoms will save the world from AIDS. However, the majority of those supporting the machine installations in the dorms are imposing their personal immorality on the university.

LETTERS

Work for peace instead of WWII

Editor:

I'm sorry this letter isn't about homosexuals, V.D., or illegitimate bastard sons, but since your "editorialists" can't deal with the real issues, I will.

In 1941, as Hitler moved across Europe through the Mideast in quest of Africa and then the world, Roosevelt and Churchill signed the Atlantic Charter. This document affirmed "the right of all people to choose the form of government under which they may live," if not in fact, at least in principle.

Forty years later, another champion of the great white race, Bonza Raygun, decided that our little brown brothers to the south, in Nicaragua, shouldn't have the right to choose their own form of government. So, here it is six years later, and his rapist minions haven't claimed one foot of sovereign soil yet.

The Administration's Policy is a mirror image of the 19th century Open Door Policy in China: "To stabilize a situation and subordinate a non-white population so that racist exploiters could manipulate those people according to their own selfish interests."

It was this kind of thinking that led to WWI and WWII. This same attitude will lead to WWII, but the delicious beauty of WWII is that you won't have to leave the comfort of your own living room to be counted as one of the fallen heroes.

I urge you to please get in touch with your U.S. Representatives and tell them to work out a peace plan and not a war plan.

Fred Wallin

Buy good jogging shoes or insurance

Editor:

Dr. George Sheehan has stated that about 85 percent of all runners and joggers are forced to stop their joyous activity due to stress or pain (The Physician and Sports Medicine - November, 1978).

Although the causes vary, injuries surely lessen the joy of the activity. I was one of those daily joggers who encountered stress injury four months ago due to improper footwear. And now, after paying hundreds of dollars (through insurance) to doctors and hospitals, I'm still unable to do any exercises on my feet.

Proper shoe selection is of utmost importance in preventing these injuries. In addition, there is a newly invented shock-absorbent shoe-pad (sorbothane) which greatly reduces the impact of the ground on the joggers' feet. Jogging on track and soft ground (as opposed to asphalt) is also very helpful in preventing such injuries.

EWU sneaks by netters

BY ROBIN JORDAN

The University of Idaho Lady Vandals volleyball team was defeated by Eastern Washington University Saturday night in Memorial Gym in three straight games. The scores were 14-16, 10-15, 10-15.

In the first game, Idaho let it slip away. The Vandals, however, were encouraged with the great play of Susan Deskines and Julie Hansen. Idaho's Marianne Moore came in and had two ace serves to make the score 14-13. EWU rallied back to win 16-14.

In the second game, EWU was in control most of the way, winning 15-10. The strong hitting of Leslie Bishoff and Dawn Colston kept the Vandals close, but it wasn't enough to pull the Lady Vandals through. A lack of communication caused a few costly points against the Vandals.

"The difference in the match was the mental errors and mental breakdowns which caused missed serves and reception errors to lose their momentum," Coach Pam Bradetich said.

In the third game, EWU started out strong, running the score to 4-0 before Idaho scored. Leslie Bishoff quickly served two points to get Idaho close. After a few plays, the Vandals were still losing 8-10. EWU slowly added to the lead, then Leslie Bishoff again served for two straight points, making the score 14-10, EWU. A hit by Julie Hansen kept the Vandals alive, but EWU used their strong hitting attack to win 15-10.

Gridmen boot Nevada-Reno 38-28

BY ERIK SIMPSON

Idaho quarterback John Friesz heated up Saturday to take his team to a 38-28 win over 11th ranked Nevada-Reno in front of a Homecoming crowd of 15,100.

"John was really zeroed in this week," said Vandal Head Coach Keith Gilbertson.

Friesz, a sophomore, threw five touchdown passes, giving Idaho a 25 point lead in the third quarter. Brian Decicio added yet another three points with a field goal to give the Vandals a total of 38 points, the most that Idaho has scored against the Wolf Pack in 14 meetings.

Saturday's game was the second time in the last 10 meetings that the Vandals have been able to defeat the tough UNR Wolf Pack. Nevada-Reno fell to 2-2 in league play and 3-3 for the season.

John Altenhofen, Neosia Morris, Eric Jorgensen and John Jake (twice) caught touchdown passes from Friesz's accurate throwing arm. Friesz hit 35 of 51 passes for 363 yards.

"It's a surprise to me, that's by far the biggest day I've had," Friesz said. "We knew if we wanted the conference, we couldn't lose this game."

Idaho was in control of the game from the opening kickoff, scoring on their first drive of the game, covering 74 yards in 12 plays.

Friesz, from the Reno nine yard line, lofted a pass in the left corner of the end zone, which Jake snagged to give Idaho an early lead.

Reno, on their first possession, moved the ball very effectively down to the Idaho five; however a clipping foul brought the ball back to the 20, setting up a Marty Zendejas field goal from 31 yards out. Idaho led at the end of the first quarter 7-3.

Idaho scored their second touchdown early in the second quarter on a two yard pass to Altenhofen. Reno returned the favor with a touchdown by Lucius Floyd, bringing the score to 14-10, Idaho.

Friesz, narrowly escaping a sack, added to the score with a five yard toss to Neosia Morris, which put Idaho up 21-10 with 2:56 left in the half.

Reno's last possession of the half could have brought the Wolf Pack within reach of Idaho. Reno was looking at a first and goal from the Idaho one, but running back Harry Williams was dropped for a loss of 12 by Idaho's Kord Smith as the clock ran out.

Early in the second half, Reno's Charvez Foger fumbled the ball and Smith came up with the recovery for Idaho.

Smith's key play set up Idaho's next score, which came on a 47 yard pass play to Jorgensen, while Decicio's boot added another point, putting the game further in the Vandals' favor at 28-10.

On the kickoff, Decicio kicked a "squib" to UNR's running back who couldn't hold on to the ball. Altenhofen recovered the ball for the Vandals, which set up another Idaho touchdown.

The Wolf Pack scored on their next possession and completed a two-point conversion which brought the score to 35-18.

The Wolf Pack's final drive ended with an interception by Kevin Johnson, which put the icing on the Homecoming cake.

Now at 5-2 for the season and 3-1 in the Big Sky Conference, the Vandals hold on to second place in the conference. Idaho will host Eastern Washington University, currently 2-2 in conference play, this Saturday in the Kibbie Dome.

The University Dance Theater will offer a Brown Bag Preview of its fall concert "New Works" Oct. 20 at 12:30 p.m. in the Dance Studio (PEB 110) and on Oct. 22 at 12:30 p.m. in Friendship Square, Moscow.

"New Works" will be presented at 8 p.m. Oct. 30-31 and at 3 p.m. Nov. 1 in the Hartung Theater. Reserved seats are available at Ticket Express in the SUB. General admission is $4-5 and student prices are $3-4.

Hank echoes country gold

Country music's Entertainer of the Year rocks and kicks Pullman

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

The sounds of solid country gold echoed throughout the coliseum, as the man epitomized by a wide brim hat, sun glasses and a family tradition brought the crowd to its feet over and over again.

Hank "Bocephus" Williams, Jr. exposed a loyal following of 4,700 at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum Saturday night to a lesson in country rock, solid country gold, boogie woogie and even some blues.

Bocephus followed a heated stage set by the up-and-coming group, Georgia Satellites. The Georgia Satellites, on tour for last 14 months, hooked up with Hank Williams, Jr. at the end of his tour starting last summer.

The Satellites opened the show with a southern accent, but lacked a country sound as they sang some all too familiar hard rock renditions. It was definitely an eye-opener, but not what most were expecting. Beasley Coliseum staff counted more than 100 people leaving the concert in search of a less disturbing atmosphere. The only song that seemed remotely country rock was their only hit, "Keeps Your Hands To Yourself."

The volume, sound quality, stage structure and aura of the coliseum changed dramatically when Hank Jr. erupted on the stage. The smooth twang of the steel guitar, a battling fiddle and electric guitars of the Bama Band combined with the deep Alabama drawl of Hank Jr. to produce a variety of tunes that enticed kickers to stomp their boots and sing along.

Swedish film runs emotional gamut

BY KIRK LAUGHLIN

Director Lasse Hallstrom's My Life As A Dog journeys magically through four seasons of childhood. The sweetness and apparent humor would have made a great film in and of themselves but Hallstrom mixes hilarity and sadness so effortlessly that the film lingers in the mind. Its too emotional to be just a comedy and too appealing to be just a serious exploration of tragedy.

Anton Glanzelius gives My Life As A Dog its fantastic emotional range by being so expressively charming as twelve-year-old Ingmar. Leering, smirking, and putting like a pre-adolescent Dennis Quaid, Glanzelius makes every bit of life in 1958 Sweden seem like loads of fun. He jitters when nervous, speculates about the needless tragedy of train accidents, and worries about the Russian space dog Laika. His wry sense of humor always undercuts the sentimentality, making this journey out of childhood even more telling than Rob Reiner's

Stand By Me.

My Life As A Dog's playful positioning of unhappy events with odd, humorous ones resembles some kind European distillation of the works of John Irving (author of The World According To

ON the Screen
MY LIFE AS A DOG
MICRO MOVIE HOUSE

Garp.

The sickness of Ingmar's mother leads to him being sent to live with his uncle (played by Thomas von Bromssen) who is just one of the many village eccentrics. There is a man who is continually fixing his roof, an ailing old gent who likes to have the lingerie catalog read to him, and the tomboy Saga (feistily portrayed by Melinda Kinnaman) who tries to keep her emerging breasts concealed so she can continue to out-kick the soccer team and out-box her friends.

But the oddness isn't just for humor's sake (although it does produce laughs in abundance). The unpredictable quality of these people is also the unforeseeable quality of the future. As Ingmar endures crippling sadness, it is this atmosphere of fun, friendly living he must immerse himself in to escape his grief.

Hallstrom's camera sets every mood well, capturing the merry side of Sweden (boisterous family and friends) as well as the impersonal (cold, public hospitals) that echoes of Ingmar Bergman's Fanny and Alexander. The magic in My Life As A Dog never reaches beyond the natural world as Bergman's film does. Instead, it sticks with the lively exchanges of the finely drawn characters.

Without a doubt, young Glanzelius makes My Life As A Dog as wonderful as it is by either building laughs or handling the serious emotions. All the performances, however, are great. They give just the right blend of drama and understatement. Far from being a cult film or an "arty" foreign success, My Life As A Dog is overwhelmingly real and universal human.
