BSU College of Technology

Proposed tech degrees called 'dead end'

by PAUL ALLEE

A plan by Boise State University officials to rename and expand their vocational technical school could mislead students to pursue "dead end" technical degrees, according to University of Idaho officials.

The plan, under which BSU would create a "College of Technology," would allow the school to double the length of some of its vocational technology programs to offer four-year bachelor of science degrees. But according to UI Dean of Engineering William Saul, both the name change and the new degrees could be misleading to students.

"Professionally, one would have to wonder how wise it is to use the words 'College of Technology,'" Saul said. "I hope it won't mislead students into thinking its an engineering school."

Unlike an engineering degree, students holding four-year technical degrees would be unable to be registered as professional engineers, Saul said.

"You can't get into graduate school with one, either," he said. "It's sort of a dead end."

BSU's proposal was presented at last week's State Board of Education meeting in Boise. Final consideration of the plan is not expected until January.

BSU currently offers a two-year pre-engineering program for students seeking engineering degrees. Students enrolled in that program will still be able to transfer to the UI to complete their engineering degrees, Saul said.

According to UI President Richard Gibb, both BSU and the UI are working together to provide better educational opportunities to the Boise area.

BSU Executive Vice President Larry Selland announced last week

plans for his university to conduct a statewide survey to determine what courses need to be offered in the Boise area. He said BSU has already interviewed officials from 12 Boise-area firms, including Hewlett-Packard Co. and Ore-Ida Foods, to determine what type of training needs to be offered.

"There's no question that there is a need for engineering and technology programs in Boise," Gibb said.

However, Gibb stressed that only the University of Idaho is certified to teach engineering courses.

"We don't have any problem with the name change (to the College of Technology)," Gibb said. "We would have a problem if programs developed (at BSU) conflict with our programs in engineering."

Tom Bell, vice president of academic affairs, said the UI is now involved in expanding its services to Boise through its Video Outreach program.

Currently, program participants can choose to view videotaped class sessions in any of 23 course areas. Offerings include courses in electrical engineering, computer science, mechanical engineering, civil engineering, mathematics, and agricultural engineering.

300 kids expected at Tower party

BY JILL BECK

Hundreds of area children have been invited to trick-or-treat at the Theophilus Tower this Halloween. Youngsters will be escorted through the Tower Saturday by designated hall residents, while other hall members answer doors and give out candy.

"We wanted to do something really fun for our community project," said Cassie Davis, French Hall resident adviser. "I thought it would be fun, if we could get enough support, to open it up to the whole community."

"It's inside, it's warm and I don't think it could get any safer," she said.

Parents of the trick-or-treaters will also be entertained during the Tower Halloween celebration.

"We will have refreshments for the parents while they're waiting for their kids," said Davis. "Or parents can walk through with (their children)."

"A lot of people are homesick for their little brothers and sisters. It's a neat way to get to meet some of the kids."

- Cassie Davis

Davis estimates that 300 to 500 children will participate in the trick-or-treating. Children 12 years old and younger are invited to take part in the event, which is scheduled Saturday from 5-7 p.m.

Local businesses were asked to donate to the project by Tower Resident Advisers. Merchants have responded by donating candy, refreshments for the parents and money for various items.

"The Moscow businesses have been really responsive," said Davis. "We wouldn't be able to do this without them."

Davis said that residents of the Theophilus Tower are very excited about the event. Many are planning to dress up for when they escort the children or answer doors.

In years past, individual halls have sponsored such projects, but on a much smaller basis. Groups of children were invited to trick-or-treat on one certain hall only.

UI President Richard Gibb told bystanders attending last week's State Board of Education meetings that he's still stewing over a recent Argonaut article that revealed UI plans to ask J.R. Students urged to fast for hunger

BY ALAN SOLAN

Members of the University community are invited to take part in the 14th Annual Oxfam America Fast for a World Harvest, on Nov. 19, according to Campus Christian Center Director Stan Thomas.

The fast day is held each year on the Thursday before Thanksgiving and is organized through cooperation of the Campus Christian Center, St. Augustine's Catholic Center and the LDS Institute, Thomas said.

A meeting for those interested in being on this year's Hunger Action Committee has been set for 4 p.m. on Oct. 28 in the Campus Christian Center. All students, faculty and community members concerned about world hunger are encouraged to attend, Thomas said.

On the fast day, Oxfam America encourages Americans to fast a meal or for the entire day and donate the money saved to Oxfam.

Thomas said the local Oxfam hunger drive was given a big boost a few years ago when a plan was worked out with the university to allow students using the campus food service to fast meals and make donations.

The food service reports 500-600 students donating each year, Thomas said. Several fraternities and sororities have recently become involved as well, he said.

While the primary purpose of the fast is to raise money for Oxfam, Thomas said an important part of it is to allow people to know what it is like to be hungry.

A special event the Hunger Action Committee holds every three or four years is the "Hunger Banquet," Thomas said.

Participants each pay the same amount to get into the event and are given a certain color ticket. The color of the ticket places the participant in the first, second or third world, Thomas said.

As in the real world, only about 10 percent of the people are in the affluent, first world category. Those 10 percent sit at a table and are served food such as steak, potatoes, vegetables, coffee and dessert. The second and third world people sit on the floor. The second world people eat a meal of rice with some sort of sauce on it and water. The third world group gets plain rice and water.

The banquet is intended to give people an idea of the great inequity in the dispersal of the world's wealth, Thomas said.

Oxfam stands for the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief and was founded in England in 1942. Oxfam America was established in 1970. The UI has been associated with Oxfam America since 1974.

Thomas said the university has stayed with Oxfam America over the years because of consistently favorable reports of their work.

"Oxfam is one of the most efficiently-run relief organizations in the world," Thomas said.

Noting that Oxfam America neither seeks nor accepts U.S. government funds, Thomas said its primary focus is to fund projects that will help people solve their own problems.

"If we are going to invite the whole campus to give through one channel, we are going to make sure that organization is a good one," Thomas said.

ACLU examines issues in recent UI lecture

BY ALAN SOLAN

Gara LaMarche looks back with nostalgia to the Carter years when one of the biggest problems the American Civil Liberties Union had to deal with was fair housing.

LaMarche, Executive Director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said Friday that because of the kind of people who came to power in 1980, the ACLU's agenda underwent a radical change.

At a seminar at the University of Idaho College of Law, LaMarche said although in seven years President Reagan has not been able to push through his social agenda, he has kept the ACLU very busy.

LaMarche was on the Palouse last weekend for meetings with local ACLU chapters to assist them in recruiting new members and to discuss the lessons of the fight over the nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Bork's nomination was rejected by the full Senate Friday by a 58-42 vote.

Asked what lessons were learned from the defeat of Bork's nomination, LaMarche said, "We found a public repudiation of a strict view of the Constitution." He said the defeat showed an affirmation of the Court's role as a protector of individual rights.

"Now that we have public support, we should capitalize on it," LaMarche said.

He said it is important for the ACLU to take the enthusiasm stirred up by the Bork nomination to expand on civil liberty work such as privacy, limiting polygraph and drug testing and civil rights.

LaMarche said the ACLU did not expect a defeat of Bork's nomination and had viewed it as a symbolic fight. He said in the end it became clear that the defeat was due more to a realization of the danger Bork presented to American civil liberties than to liberal propaganda.

LaMarche pointed out the polls were running 2:1 in opposition to Bork and the fact that many conservative senators voted against Bork in the end.

The conservative Senators who had initially favored Bork's nomination became convinced that their constituents were opposed to him, LaMarche said.

He also said if the next appointee is more a mainstream conservative and is scrutinized as closely as Bork was, he/she will probably be appointed.

However, LaMarche said, "If Reagan thinks we are all spent from the Bork fight and that now we will roll over and play dead, he's in for a big surprise."

AIDS and mandatory drug testing have become the major issues of the ACLU in the past two years, LaMarche said.

Help that department

The University of Idaho should either adequately fund School of Communication programs, or close them down altogether. And instead of limiting student internship credits, the college should start requiring students to have "real world" experience before getting a degree.

That may not be the recommendation of the Allied Daily Newspaper Association's evaluation team, but it is exactly what about a dozen students told them during an informal Friday afternoon discussion.

The Allied team, an assembly of journalism experts representing newspapers from the Northwest, spent several days on campus last week observing classes and studying the UI's communications curricula. But it took less than an hour for an informal student panel to tell them what was wrong with this university's School of Communication.

Students at the meeting said they felt bad that they had so many negative things to tell the visitors, who probably would have rather heard good news about the UI.

Perhaps university administrators should feel worse for cheating communications students out of a better learning environment.

The student's main gripe? Why in the hell is it that while the Colleges of Engineering and Agriculture have some of the most up-to-date, technologically advanced equipment in the nation, our School of Communication is living in the technological dark ages? While students at Yale, Brown, and even WSU have for years been using PCs and other electronic information systems to enter news copy and learn computer graphics and design, the UI's biggest recent battle (and it took five years) was to replace manual typewriters with electric ones.

Is anyone out there listening?

Communications majors in the panel said they don't expect to have this week's newest technology, but it would be nice to have equipment that was invented during the past decade. Students at the Law School have received more electronic equipment this year than Communications majors could dream of.

Panelists were careful to point out that although they didn't have the equipment needed, the faculty worked extra hard to try to make up for the department's shoestring budget.

But how is a faculty member supposed to teach electronic database management when the word "electronic" doesn't appear on any classroom machines?

We can't blame these problems on the department faculty or School of Communications Director Gary Hunt. But while they are waiting for a much deserved budget increase, panelists came up with a great suggestion to help improve their school.

Students said that Communications majors should be REQUIRED to log more internship credits. No, not an option, but make it a requirement.

It is an embarrassment to the school that past advertising graduates have grabbed diplomas without ever having to sell an ad, that journalism majors have gone into the job market without having worked for an area newspaper, and that public relations people have skated out of the department without ever seeing a press packet.

In short, it will be a while before the Allied Daily Newspaper Association's report is "federal expressed" this way. But it shouldn't take an outside evaluation group to tell university officials what's wrong with a program.

Just listen to the students who are in it.

Nicaragua: Better dead than Red

Two weeks ago, I had the privilege of watching a slide show on Nicaragua which was narrated by Lt. Col. Oliver North. If only a fraction of the facts presented in the film were true, the country of Nicaragua is in sad condition.

The information below is from sources of both liberal and conservative leanings. I present the following information with the presumption that the reader believes communism to be the greatest enemy of freedom. A person who has a soft spot for the communist system of government understands neither communism nor freedom.

In 1946, only the Soviet Union was under communist rule. Now, there are 23 countries occupied by communism, and these countries contain more than 1.7 billion people in a world of 5 billion. The last nation to fall prey to communism was Nicaragua in a 1979 revolution. For seven years, the liberal democrat politicians and media told America that the new government (Sandinistas) in Nicaragua was not communist. This was the same brand of politicians and media who told us Fidel Castro was the George Washington of Cuba. Today all but the greatest of fools must concede that Nicaragua is under the control of a Marxist-Leninist communist government.

There is growing military resistance to this government. The resistance movement is called "Contras" by communists and liberal Americans, and "Freedom Fighters" by conservative Americans. The Freedom Fighters call themselves the Nicaraguan Democratic Front and are led by a man who used to be a Coca-Cola distributor before the Sandinista takeover. The NDF have grown into a 27,000-man force, with the aid of the United States. The aid from the United States is in constant jeopardy because of a democrat-controlled congress in this country.

Bruce Skaug
Commentary

Nicaragua is becoming nothing less than a communist military base, as is evidenced by the 65,000 Cubans now stationed there. Also, there are advisers and military hardware from the Soviet Union, East Germany and Libya. The Nicaraguan army is larger than all the armies of Central America combined.

Nicaragua is now a Soviet-Cuban puppet and the freedoms of Nicaraguan citizens are non-existent. Thousands of lives have been ruined.

On January 9, 1987, the Sandinistas announced a new constitution. Three hours later, they proclaimed that the freedoms and rights in that constitution were suspended. When the Sandinistas took power, there were two prisons in all of Nicaragua. Now there are eleven. Why? Because the Sandinistas need places to put between 8,000 and 10,000 political prisoners. Political prisoners exist in countries where freedom of thought is not permitted.

More than 500,000 people have fled Nicaragua since the Sandinista takeover. People have been arrested, tortured and murdered for their beliefs.

University of Idaho law student John Keenan spoke with a Nicaraguan pastor whose church was burned by the Sandinistas. Those same soldiers cut off this pastor's ears, cut his throat and left him for dead. His experience is common.

What about freedom of religion? All Moravian churches serving the Miskito Indians were burned. Officers of Campus Crusade for Christ were arrested. Virtually all churches, except those approved by the government, have either been destroyed or confiscated by the Sandinistas. But not all churches have been closed down violently. Recently, 300 church ministers were given draft notices to serve in the Nicaraguan army. Also, there is no longer a Jewish community in Nicaragua because of political ties between the Sandinistas and the Palestinian Liberation Organization and Libya. A Jewish Synagogue was bombed by Sandinistas and is now a Marxist school.

Here in remote North Idaho, we can banter over military statistics and motivations. But the indisputable truth is that Nicaragua is communist; in Nicaragua there is no real freedom; people are suffering because of the government; and the Soviets are very happy about their newest comrade nation.

The only thing keeping communism from spreading in Central America is 27,000 men who have a hope for freedom. How it must hurt them when they hear that Americans, the champions of freedom, are squabbling over whether or not to send military aid to the Freedom Fighters. If America will not stand for freedom, then who will? I for one still believe the anti-communist motto, "Better dead than Red."

BSU band better than Vandal band

Editor:

How dare you print such regionalism and one-upmanship in the Argonaut's front page story, "Vandal band 'better' than BSU." We spent a hell of a lot of money to put the Blue Thunder Band together; money that, of course, could fund library acquisitions, parking improvements or a host of other campus necessities. But we didn't because our priorities lie with our hearts and our public relations department, not with our minds.

Also, it is implied that the Vandal band members are somehow more committed, more worthy as human beings because they joined, not for money, but for Vandal Pride. And our band consisted of hired hands or recruits that came to BSU for the scholarships and that's all. You might have a point. Nevertheless, we do have a band with all the pomp, pageantry—and job security—plus benefits, that we deserve here at BSU, the fastest-growing university in the state.

By the way, we have more pinball and video machines in our SUB than you, so NEAH, NEAH, NEAH.

Intern positions now available

Editor:

Ten legislative internship positions are available during the 1988 Idaho legislative session. Students receiving internships will receive excellent experience with legislative committees and the governor's office doing research, bill-tracking, and other work. They will also receive nine credits in Political Science 459, legislative internship. The internship will last from the second week of January through the second week in March and the intern can gain additional credits the spring semester through accelerated direct study courses after they return to the University of Idaho.

Students interested in legislative internships should apply to Professor Sydney Duncombe, Room 201 Administration Building. Those applying for internships will need to fill in an application, submit a grade transcript and get two short letters of recommendation. In past years, nearly all of those applying for internships have been accepted.

Perverted groups control society

Editor:

I applaud Bruce Skaug on his article last week on the issue of condom machines at WSU. For far too long, we have been led like sheep along the path of destruction. The greatest country in the world, founded upon the principles of true representative government, has fallen to the point of being dictated to by a few special interest groups and a few men and women in the media. The whims of the minority have been elevated above the welfare of the majority.

Humanists have been able to teach us in our schools that we are no better than dogs or penguins; we evolved to fit a niche. Television has convinced us that everyone's doing whatever the Fonz or J.R. Ewing is doing. And now government (being controlled by interest groups like NOW, NEA, and the homosexual minority) is trying to dictate to us what we are to believe and practice. How have we lost so quickly that which took many years and American lives to obtain? Why are we allowing a perverted minority to abuse us?

The condom issue just shows what we have come to. The liberals must believe that since there is no cure for AIDS, we should be protected and allowed to force our burden on others. This is sort of like having your home destroyed by a man on a bulldozer, and then being forced to pay for the gasoline he used.

Military spending suspicious

Editor:

Well, enough is enough. And 25,000 American soldiers in the Persian Gulf seem like a lot of flushing toilets. We're there to keep the peace, and with enough firepower to blow the tops off several thousand sand dunes, or in layperson's terms, enough to make two to three Rambo sequels, you'd think we'd get some RESPECT. But there've been twice as many "incidents" as in the same period before the valiant reflagging effort, and things are getting serious.

Yes, it's a tense situation. But, as General MacArthur used to say, "when the going gets tough, bring in the dolphins," and that's exactly what we're doing. Pret-ty serious, because these are no ordinary dolphins. These are trained military dolphins, five of them, working as a crack demolitions crew to defuse hostilities in the Persian Gulf, having been led to believe they'll receive electronics training and big fat pensions when this assignment is over.

And not just dolphins, either. Whales and seals are also conscripted for military service.

Why I can almost envision the day when clumsy energy costly transport boats used in amphibious landings like Normandy will be replaced by a literal wave of highly-maneuverable sunglassed surfers in camouflaged jams, each with an M-16 cradled in one arm and the reins to the three bottle-nosed dolphins towing the surfboard in the other, zig-zagging their way to the shores of, oh, let's just say for the purposes of prolonging the life of this sentence, NICARAGUA, while their commanding admirals, miffed because their parents forbade them to shoot off fireworks as kids, stand staunchly in the distant horizon, silently hoping for some belligerent fishing boat to row by and provoke them, but meanwhile making important command decisions like whose Stratego board they will use after lunch, from the bows of their giant but highly maneuverable skiffs, sloops, dungarees, swarthies and schooners, which are being pulled by neutered sperm whales.

But, as is the trend with such formerly civilian domains as NASA, I'm suspicious of the increasing militarization of mammalian exploitation. It's enough to make the true pioneers, old timers like Flipper and Shamu, rue the day they ever signed those first TV contracts.

Unclaimed bikes stack up

BY JULIE HARTWELL

There have been more than 60 abandoned bicycles impounded by the Campus and City Police since Jan. 1, 1987. According to Community Relations Specialist Dale Mickelsen of the Moscow Police Department, they have more than $17,000 worth of bicycles in the "bike pound" right now.

"The bikes are left in somebody's yard, at the bars or abandoned by the creek somewhere," said Mickelsen.

He said many of the bicycles impounded are nearly brand new.

Campus and city police have been on a prevention campaign for some time. The bikes would not be stolen if they'd simply have been locked up, Mickelsen said.

"Many of them actually have the locks wrapped around the seats," he said.

The most important thing, according to Mickelsen, is that lost or stolen bikes should always be reported.

"That's the only way we can do our job," he said.

In the hopes that some of these losses can be prevented, there are now licenses available to any bike owner. The licenses are metallic tags with a number, much like a car license plate. They cost $1 and are valid for a lifetime. They are on sale at the City Police Department or at Campus Police.

Every spring the Police Department has a bike auction to get rid of all the bikes impounded that year.

"The City makes quite a lot of money on it," Mickelsen said, "but we'd be happier if the bike owners would just come and claim their bikes."

Computer guidance system aids students in job placements

BY ALAN SOLAN

A career guidance program made available at the Student Counseling Center last semester has been updated to more efficiently give students information on specific jobs or guide them in a career search, according to SCC psychometrist Steve Saladin.

Saladin, a test supervisor at the counseling center, said the original program, called "Discover," and the update were both developed by the American College Testing Program.

The first part of the program is called "information only" and provides general or detailed information about a specific job. The second part of the program is designed for users who have not narrowed their career search to a single job. Called "guidance and information," it is further divided into seven modules.

In module, one a test is given to determine how far along the user is in his job search. Based on the analysis of the answers, the program refers the user to one or more of the remaining modules.

Module two explains how different occupations relate to each other in what is called "the world of work." This module explains the "world of work" job map which contains related careers which are grouped into "job families." Saladin said that job families are categories such as: business/organization, applied arts/visual, or vehicle operation/repair. Each type of job is classified as to how it relates to people, data, things or ideas.

Module three is a test of the user's values, interests, abilities and experiences. The results of this evaluation are analyzed and the user is referred to appropriate areas of the world of work map.

Module four provides options to look at four different job lists derived from the analysis of the user's values, interests, experiences or abilities.

Saladin said that if a job someone is interested in does not appear on any of the lists, the program has a "why not" option. The user enters the job title into the computer and receives an explanation as to why it is not listed.

Module five gives specific job information about as many as 10 of the jobs on the four lists.

Module six provides information about training needed for any of the 10 jobs chosen and module seven gives detailed information about specific schools to receive education in a given occupational interest.

Saladin said the program can be used by joining a vocation group at the SCC or by appointment with an individual counselor at the center.

Saladin said the "information only" part of the program, which provides data such as salary, training and expected growth of the career, can be used on a drop-in basis. Information from any part of the program can be printed out at any time, Saladin said.

Creation of new park under debate

BY CHARLIE RICE

The question has been raised as to whether or not a Sawtooth Mountains National Park will become a reality and Idaho Congressman Larry Craig has proposed some possible answers.

Craig said he feels that creating a new national park out of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area will bring tourists and their money to central Idaho. He said he feels that as timber and mining dollars are declining, tourism is an alternative source of money for Idaho and a national park would be the best bait to lure tourists.

"Congressman Craig has asked the Congressional Research Service, which is a part of the Library of Congress, to go through past studies done on the area and give him a report by the end of the year," John Barclay, Craig's spokesman at his Boise office, said.

"There has been no change in the geological features and very little change in the timber or other plant communities. The number of people visiting the area is the only thing that would differ from the earlier data," he said.

Barclay said that Craig plans to appoint an advisory committee to analyze the data from the earlier studies, current visitor-use data and advise him on the possibility of creating a park in the Sawtooths.

The Sawtooth Mountains are located north-east of Boise, and are thought to be by some one of the most scenic areas in Idaho.

The Sawtooths are a wilderness area, but not by official act of Congress. They are protected from development by their designation as a national recreation area, but mining and timber interests have wanted to build roads into the area for 20 years or more.

Many of the people who fought to keep mining and logging out of the area say they are concerned that a national park status for the area would also destroy the pristine quality of the area that Craig's attitude amounts to development at any cost.

Since the fragile granitic soils of the area erode easily, there are many problems associated with human use of high mountain areas. Increased use of the trails could lead to major erosion problems. Litter is a problem in any area, but the "pack it in, pack it out" rule helps to decrease this problem. Conflicts between horse packers and backpackers occur even at low levels of use. Increased amounts of people will increase the probability that the two groups will compete for the same campsites.

Craig said he feels that the Idaho economy is in need of major infusion of cash. Traditionally, the three big sources of cash in Idaho have been mining, agriculture and timber. Recently these industries have had many problems, and the future does not look good for any of them.

Spikers have it tough on road

BY MICHAEL LEWIS

The Lady Vandals volleyball team again came away from a weekend series without a win. The netters lost to Boise State on Friday night and to Idaho State Saturday night. The Lady Vandals fell 12-15, 3-15 and 8-15 to Boise State and 5-15, 3-15 and 4-15 to the Mountain West Athletic Conference champion Bengals of Idaho State. Idaho is now 5-17 on the season, 1-9 in the Mountain West Conference, and in sole possession of the Conference cellar.

The last time the Lady Vandals met the Broncos and Bengals earlier this year at Memorial Gym, they were able to at least salvage one game against both teams, but still dropped both matches. Friday night, however, the Lady Vandals had trouble doing anything, especially serving. They were unable to put twelve of their serves in play.

"The difference in the match was our inability to get our serves in," Lady Vandal Coach Pam Bradetich said.

A bright spot for the Lady

Vandals was the play of hitter Karen Thompson. In the match against Boise State, Thompson recorded 10 kills, tying the club's season high which she has matched three other times.

"A strong point for us was the play of Karen Thompson. She attacked well and blocked well," Bradetich said.

Stacey Asplund held her position on the team's blocking list, getting three to raise her total to 73, along with seven kills, and Susan Deskines had eight kills and eight digs in the contest, keeping her atop the team leaders in kills with 170.

"THE difference in the match was our inability to get our serves."

- Coach Pam Bradetich

Idaho did not "compete hard and play well" at Idaho State as Bradetich had earlier said she hoped they would. Instead, they failed to score 15 points in the entire match, let alone a game, and the Bengals beat them easily in three games.

"Idaho State is a very good team," Bradetich said, "They came out and played with a lot of confidence."

Against the Bengals, Karen Thompson had five kills and four blocks and Susan Deskines had seven kills, three blocks and a service ace. Setter Kellie Morgan had 40 assists in the two matches, raising her season total to 573.

The Lady Vandals traveled to Ogden to take on the 5-2 Bobcats of Weber State, but the results of the match were not available at press time.

The Lady Vandals have begun the second half of their season and have only six matches remaining, against Montana, Montana State, Nevada-Reno, Northern Arizona, Washington State and Eastern Washington, before the Mountain West Conference Championships get underway. The Lady Vandal squad will return home for their final conference homestand next weekend, when they take on Montana and Montana State. When they met earlier this season, the Lady Vandals lost to the Grizzlies of Montana before beating Montana State in four games.

Eagles fly the coop

Vandals nail third straight victory

BY MICHAEL LEWIS

A boisterous Idaho home crowd of 11,500 cheered the Vandals to an emotional 31-24 victory over their Inland Empire rivals Eastern Washington Saturday night in the Kibbie Dome. The fans were able to rile up the Eastern squad several times, including an instance deep in Eagle territory, when EWU quarterback Eric Snider was forced to take a timeout and wait for the fans to quiet down enough for the players to hear the snap count.

"For the most part I'm pleased, I'm just real happy to win this game," Vandal Coach Keith Gilbertson said. "We were real fortunate to win."

The crowd did have its reasons to be heard from, as the game was hard-hitting from start to finish. Unfortunately, the Vandals may have lost that battle, as Eric Jorgensen left the game in the first half after suffering a concussion and possibly a separated shoulder, after being "rocked" on a pass pattern to the end zone. The Vandals' leading receiver going into the game, tight end Craig Robinson, was also injured, as he suffered torn ligaments in his left knee, which will require surgery to repair. Robinson will be out for the remainder of the season.

Surprisingly, the pass-oriented Vandal offense was much more balanced than in past weeks, as the Vandals took to the ground for much of the second half, rolling up 81 yards in the last 30 minutes. Todd Hoiness and Bruce Harris had impressive outings, scoring two touchdowns and rushing for 116 yards as a duo. Neosia Morris had an outstanding game also, setting the Vandals' season record for most catches with nine for 93 yards.

Penalties hurt the EWU attack in the second half, particularly on an Idaho fourth down, when they were called for too many men on the field, giving the Vandals a first down, setting up an Idaho score, to make it 31-17.

Eastern had the first scoring opportunity, but an Eric Stein field goal attempt missed wide midway through the first quarter. After safety Ernest Sanders recovered an EWU fumble at the EWU 43 with 4:12 to go in first quarter, quarterback John Friesz capped a scoring drive by hitting Todd Hoiness for a five-yard touchdown pass. Friesz completed 32 of 48 passes for 327 yards on the night. EWU tied it up after taking their first second quarter possession downfield for Tony Jackson to score on a two-yard run, making the score 7-7.

Idaho promptly retaliated with a 74 yard march that featured a 32-yard pass completion to John Jake, as Harris ran in the touchdown from the two, with a Brian Decicio PAT making it 14-7. EWU scored late in the half on a pass to Jamie Buenzil, evening the score at the half at 14.

Idaho's 55-yard drive at the onset of the second quarter was cut short by a Quintin Blythe interception of a Friesz pass in the end zone. However, the Eagles returned the favor, fumbling on their 30-yard line with 10:33 to go in the third. Hoiness later again scored on a 10-yard touchdown run, his sixth of the season. With 6:04 to go in the third, the Vandals again scored, this time on a Brian Decicio field goal, stretching the margin to 24-14.

EWU capped a third quarter drive with an Eric Stein field goal with less than three minutes gone by in the fourth quarter. Those would be the last points the Eagles posted until they scored with four seconds remaining in the game, to make the final score 31-24.

Ruggers go for 7-2

Ruggers scrum against border rivals

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

The ruggers returned to the home scrum field this weekend riding on two solid wins of last Saturday, Oct. 17. The team traveled to Missoula Saturday, Oct. 17 for an opportunity to spank the Missoula Maggots, 10-4 and kick the University of Montana Rugby Club, 28-0.

Allowing all members of the 30-man club to play the "A" team met arch-rival Washington State University Rugby Club in the second match of the double-header weekend Sunday, Oct. 25.

The Sunday match could be analogous to the weather during the early afternoon — unpredictable.

WSU took the liberty of kicking off only to borrow the hide from the Idaho offense and dropping it over the try zone for a smooth four-point lead in the first 12 minutes of the match.

Idaho scrummed the two 45 minute halves in second gear yet pulled a win with a few key plays. Countering the Coug try, UI ruggers brought the ball to the Coug lower 40. In an attempt to gain some yardage, Idaho dropped kicked the ball within yards of the Coug try zone and James Dahl escorted it over the try line.

UI kicker Buddy Levy booted the hide through the uprights for the two point conversion and an Idaho-lead 6-4.

In the second half, Idaho continued in second gear with sporadic attempts at revamping some offensive strategy in giving Dave Gordon an opportunity to drive over the Coug try zone to guarantee an Idaho win. The match ended with UI 10, WSU 7.

"The guys have played better, but WSU wasn't that sharp either," said team captain, Matt Hansen. "It is the final outcome of the game that really counts."

The win ups the Vandals record to 7-2 on the season, 4-1 in the Big Sky, as they are currently in second place in the Conference behind Weber State, who they will meet next week in Ogden. That game may mean life or death for the Vandals, concerning their post-season possibilities.

OUTDOOR CORNER

THANKSGIVING IN CANADA? CHRISTMAS IN MEXICO?

If you don't already have plans for Thanksgiving or Christmas Break and you are looking for that perfect moment, the Outdoor Program may be your answer. The UI Outdoor Program is sponsoring a ski mountaineering/hut hopping trip to the Canadian Rockies. The trip is planned during the Thanksgiving holidays. This is an advanced trip which requires skiing 2,000 vertical feet to reach Bow Hut. From the hut, one can search out the deep powder while skiing to one of the other huts.

The Christmas Break trip is a sea kayaking expedition to the Sea of Cortez in Baja, Mexico. This 10-day excursion offers some of the best coastal kayaking in North America. It is approximately an 80-mile trip along a rugged, isolated coastline. For this OP adventure, previous sea kayaking experience is not necessary. However, you must be able to paddle 10-15 miles on flat water some days. There will be time to explore the desert hillsides, hike along the beach, snorkel in fascinating tide pools, or catch a fresh dinner - fishing is excellent.

These extended expeditions require much more preparation than the weekend trips offered by the Outdoor Program - so plan now.

This is your opportunity to catch that perfect moment of the great outdoors.

For more information about either of these trips stop by the Outdoor Program office and talk with one of the staff.

Soccer club goes 1-1

BY ERIK SIMPSON

The University of Idaho Soccer Club, after taking a 5-0 beating by the WSU team at Pullman Thursday night, rebounded to beat Central Oregon Community College 2-1 at Bend Saturday. The Oregon team had been undefeated in conference play.

The Idaho club took the lead in the first half against COCC and never looked back. The first goal was scored by wing forward Troy Reynolds with midfielder Gerry Snyder on the assist.

Fullback and team president Rob Kirschenmann made the next goal with the help of Enrico Moens' set-up pass after Philippe Michel's direct kick.

The club then traveled to Walla Walla on Sunday to take on Whitman College's varsity team, losing by a score of 6-0.

An eclectic musical mix

San Francisco's Kronos Quartet comes to UI

For the avid fan of Thelonious Monk, Aaron Copeland and Jimi Hendrix, the repertoire of one group will encompass works by all three of those artists.

San Francisco's Kronos Quartet will be at the University Auditorium Nov. 1 for an 8 p.m. concert highlighting their contemporary version of classical new wave.

Making up the 14-year-old quartet are David Harrington and John Sherba, violins; Joan Jeanrenaud, cello; Hank Dutt, viola.

The four musicians spend nearly 200 days on the road every year, Harrington says, spreading their gospel of new music and earning money to finance the commissioning of even newer works. Using the earnings of the Kronos Quartet organization and grants the group receives, they can provide funds to new composers to produce music for the quartet and other groups.

Reviews of the group's live appearances stress the professionalism and seriousness they bring to the stage in spite of the very untraditionality of their material. According to Harrington, all music is their source, and they evidently are not afraid to tap every part of it.

Monday morning, the Kronos will host a workshop at the Lionel Hampton School of Music where students will be able to question them and see the process of assimilation the group goes through to prepare music for their next series of performances. The concert and workshop are sponsored by ASUI Productions and PACE, with Sandy Burr and George Parisot managing the events.

Tickets for the Nov. 1 performance are $4 for students and $6 for general admission. They are available at Ticket Express in the SUB.

Defenders make stand at WSU

Jamaican reggae will rock the Washington State University CUB Wednesday night when the Caribbean group The Defenders come to Pullman from Seattle for an 8 p.m. show.

The band, formerly the Gladiators, is best known for its work with Jamaican reggae star Albert Griffiths, who founded the band 18 years ago. Since then, they have formed the core of his backing band as the Gladiators.

In April, the group came to the United States for an East-coast tour, following which Griffiths returned to Jamaica and the new Defenders came to Seattle to try it out on their own. Next month, the band will rejoin Griffiths to finish arranging their latest LP, Back in Town.

Expect the group to bring a large collection of originals and reggae standards for tomorrow night's concert-dance. In Seattle performances, the Defenders have been known to play everything from Jimmy Cliff to Dave Brubeck in a single night.

Tickets for the performance are $5 in advance and $6 at the CUB Ballroom door. It is presented by the ASWSU Dance Committee.

SEATTLE'S Defenders will bring their Jamaican reggae to the CUB Ballroom Wednesday night.

Journal prepares for publication

BY KIRK LAUGHLIN

The University of Idaho English Society has started production of a student-run literary magazine titled Paradise Creek Journal, which will be a voice for student creative work. The first issue will be available at spring registration in January.

Authors eligible for publication are undergraduate or graduate students from the UI or Lewis and Clark State College. Poetry, fiction or non-fiction essays may be submitted.

Submissions can be dropped off in the Creative Writing Box in the main English Department Office (Brink 200). Queries for further information can also be left there. The deadline for submissions is Nov. 20. No manuscripts will be returned.

The PCJ editorial staff consists of UI undergraduate English majors.

Ethnic artist featured today

Sculptor and filmmaker Camille Billops will be the debut artist for the 1987-88 National Endowment for the Arts lecture series at the University of Idaho.

The series is titled "Mixing Metaphors: The Ethnic Artist Today," and will feature artists working in a contemporary style and drawing upon their own cultural traditions for their art.

Billops explores the urban black experience in her sculptures and two films, Suzanne, Suzanne and Older Women in Love.

In this examination of the urban black condition, Billops takes a personal viewpoint. Much of her cubist-influenced sculpture involves members of her family or those around during her childhood. For example, in The Kids from Red Bank, Billops' 'kids' are adults, characters from Red Bank, New Jersey, where her parents moved from South Carolina. Smoke and Blue on a Stairway to the Stars narrates a romantic story about Billops' parents.

Her films are similarly as poignant and close to home. In Suzanne, Suzanne, she develops the story of her niece's struggle as the victim of child abuse and as a teen-age drug addict. Billops described the film as a reward to Suzanne for making it through all right.

"Through the film, I think the family arrived at some very important conclusions about itself," Billops said. "The safeguards and trappings of middle class life do not make us immune to the troubles of living."

NEW York artist Camille Billops visits the UI today. She is seen here with her works Remember Vienna and The Story of Mom.

In her latest celluloid effort, Older Women in Love, Billops again draws on her own family experience for a subject.

"It was inspired by my aunt out in Brooklyn, who has a lover in his late forties. She's in her eighties."

Billops was able to make the second film after receiving a grant through the critical success of Suzanne, Suzanne and again worked with her husband Jim and his son Dion in producing the motion picture.

In 1978, Billops co-authored

The Harlem Book of the Dead, which chronicled the spiritual practices of the New York borough through art and poetry.

Billops says all her forms of expression relate a common element in her personality. She sees herself as a storyteller in her art.

"I'm a visual storyteller," Billops said. "All of my work is the celebration of family, my private stories and personal vision."

Billops will meet with graduate art students today after an informal sack lunch in the SUB. Tonight she will give a public lecture where she will show portions of her films and slides of her sculpture at 7:30 p.m. in UCC 112.

Kubrick stresses realism

BY KIRK LAUGHLIN

If Oliver Stone's Platoon, with its mix of battle horror and good-evil morality, could be described as Vietnam from the heart, then Stanley Kubrick's Full Metal Jacket is that experience from the brain.

There are questions of "What are we doing in Southeast Asia?" and of morality, but Kubrick gets to them by spiraling into actual combat rather than wading in right to the hips as Stone did.

Full Metal Jacket follows a Marine nicknamed "Joker" (played by Mathew Modine of Birdy and Vision Quest) from the hazing of boot camp to the confusion and heavy-handed violence of battle.

simple-minded barbarity of military indoctrination.

The second part places Joker as a reporter for Stars and Stripes, giving him a distance from real combat so he can reflect and laugh at it.

This moves, rather choppy, into Joker's involvement in an actual platoon sweeping through the ruins of a city.

The divisions themselves make it rather hard to feel empathy for the characters because it puts the audience at a distance. Suicide, manipulation of the press, prostitution, cold-blooded snipers and gallows humor are all portrayed evenly in Kubrick's passionless composition of shots, making the audience think about the irony rather than reaching right out and grabbing for emotional response.

This echoes Kubrick's cerebral journey into terror in The Shining, where Jack Nicholson's slowly twisting personality is the producer of chills rather than any conventional slashing.

Within the constraints of this thinking-man's frame, the performances are all well done, especially the dry-witted Modine.

And where Platoon gives a rather goody-goody climax to its story of morals, Full Metal Jacket gives, perhaps, a more realistic view that it doesn't matter what a person's disposition is when it comes down to cold bloodedness versus survival.

Don't expect John Wayne types to be passionately storming hills from Kubrick. Expect a brainy, stylish experiment in violence instead.

On the Screen

FULL METAL JACKET
MICRO MOVIE HOUSE

There are actually three parts to Jacket. The first is the training sequence in which Kubrick proves that his interesting visual style can make even cliched drill sergeants and old-as-the-hills exercise sequences entertaining. And the slow, insanity-like descent into becoming "born to kill" casts an interesting shade onto the actual Vietnam scenes later on. Although he ponders on boot camp too long (how many times do we need to see guys marching and singing?), Kubrick makes good use of the

16. LOST AND FOUND

FOUND: We couldn't believe it, but we found an abandon female Doberman puppy. We'd love to keep it but one of us is allergic to it. She seems to be 4 - 5 months old, her tail is clipped and she's pretty well trained. Call us (Kurt & Eric) at 332-8594 or Sue at 885-6371 when we're not home. If she's yours or if you know a good home for her.

FOUND: Scissors. Call 883-4504.

FOUND: 1 pair eye-glasses at corner 6th and Deakin near traffic lights. Found on sidewalk Mon. Oct. 26 at 10:45 am. Call 882-4597.

FOUND: Set of Keys (3) by Benchland Apts. 882-8884.

LOST: A pair of glasses around 6 - 8 am 10-26-87 along 6th street. If you found please contact 883-4474.

LOST: Blue nylon wallet. Any information please call Dave at 885-7590.

18. PERSONALS

WRITERS, WRITERS, WRITERS! We need your submissions for the Paradise Creek Journal no later than Nov. 20. The journal is the new voice for UI and LCSC students creative writing. Drop off your samples of creative genius at the English Dept. office in Brink Hall, Room 200. Remember: Nov. 20!

Hey No. 20- Let's not be so shy. You haven't called but I'm looking forward to dinner Wednesday eve. Look sharp - I'll be dressed to kill!

Hey Dick and Dork- Frick has rallied with Dork and Frack has rallied with dick, so why not Frick n Dick and Frack n Dork??? -Frick n Frack

Scott- I wish you'd change your mind. I miss you. -CJ

MISSING: One Pledge Dance Date. Last seen on a bathroom floor clutching a crumpled letter in one hand and a Rubik's Cube in the other. If found please call the Lonely Guy.

To this week's Poozie-Winners- Congrats! You've really earned it! From... could it be the journalist form Hell???

L.G.- Thanks for the perkiest pledge dance ever. Boy can you dress a sated! And those eyes... -B

Eric- Never had it. Never will.

Attention Architecture Students- Architecture students against drunk drafting (ASADD) will have an organizational meeting this Friday, 6 pm., Art and Architecture East. Be there. Velum is a terrible thing to waste.

Hey Stud Puppet- Meat is murder and McDeath serves bloodburgers. But we know that one day the animals will be free. Now, about those fish carcasses that you slice up for a living... -your ever-socially conscious flatmate

J. Owen- We have a controlling factor in Mountain Dew and we are taking out the caffeine. -your parents

Boo Boo- Hey you turkey face, sweetie pie, ding-dong, assistant secretary to the big Act-20!! I LOVE YOU! Happy Birthday beautiful! Isn't nice to be big and tall? -Love, Me (the friend from Hell)

Pam S., Michele F., Tie C.- Thanks for listening. -KM

SP- Are the drinks still on? -JP

OX is a fox. -the women of Idaho

MFIM- I would like your "package." -Secret Admirer

To Cookie's "Little Dumpling"- That wasn't so bad, now was it? Next time "dad" takes us to the club, tell him NO HEIDELBERG BEER! Take it light. -Love, "Cookie"

UI Repent!

Mr. Moscow- I heart your style, you clever thing you. Does it help to sleep with the manager? Remember: "All Things Cynical Imply Futility." Wherever you go, don't forget your towel - especially for water rights. Jane-Watch for HERR's, they're especially insidious at this time of year. No one will miss us if they're looking for headlights. Even the prancing fluids follow a curved plane. Wish I could sleep 19 and a half hours a day. Estimo, butterfly. -Alcon

Gordie- So now you swear, drink, and... (sleeping, isn't that what you call it?) -the Lance and the Pizza Man

Thor- Repent and give it back.

Skittle Man- You're a smooth watering, succulent hunk of human flesh! I want to kiss your perfect thighs! -Anonymous

RUBES by Leigh Rubin

"I'd like to call the House Committee on Ethics to order, but apparently someone has stolen the gavel."

Grand Wiz- Don't forget the gasoline. -Dragon

Sasha (PWS)- Thank you from 3rd floor. Good luck on 4th.

Vicent- See you in the stands.

Card Woman- Hope your polyester fits super sweet. I've you've already been proudly wearing it around campus. Sounds like a new fashion trend. -the Exorcist

Mark and Jo-An from "New York"- I thought you lived in Hempstead. And what's this about getting a new typesetter? Sounds like they teach more than success at Hofstra - they teach grand theft type! -Paul from Idaho

Humper- We'll be missing your action big guy. Please come by sometime for movies. -The Pat Hotel

EM- You are an oxymoron.

TOP 10 THINGS YOU CAN DO AT HOFSTRA UNIVERSITY, NEW YORK, THAT YOU CAN'T DO AT THE UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO: 10. Ride the subway. 9. Walk by strangers without saying "hi." 8. Get stuck in a traffic jam. 7. Pass up a second helping of tater tots. 6. Name your yearbook after hair-care products - "The Mess." 5. Steal things from old people. 4. Admire Hofstra Alum Susan Sullivan, star of CBS's Falcon Crest. 3. Commit sodomy (legally). 2. Act Jewish. 1. Get mugged by Harlem Street gangs.

Brent-Bob- What do you mean, you don't get personals? I may have to send the CABLE PEOPLE after you. Good luck on your test and remember the beer-fest test, too! Bash-hah-hah! -K-BOB

KLS- The cat fight was too sassy, but where did the booger come from? Friends? -Fluff
