3 die, 2 injured in Halloween car crash

BY ERIK SIMPSON

Two University of Idaho students and a Moscow man were killed Saturday in a head-on collision that left two other students injured and in critical condition.

Killed in the accident, which occurred at 13 miles north of Moscow on U.S. Highway 95, were UI students Anthony J. Evans, 18, of American Falls; Luke J. Buckley, 19, of Dietrich; and Moscow resident Bruce R. Haynes, 26.

Injured in the accident were students John G. Buffa, 19, of Post Falls; and James L. Dunnigan, 18, of Mullan.

According to Bruce Pitman, dean of students, all four students were suitmates and members of Snow Hall.

"This is one of the most significant accidents that I can remember," Pitman said Monday.

Both injured men are suffering from multiple injuries, including fractures. Dunnigan received internal injuries in the crash.

Monday evening, a Gritman Hospital spokeswoman said that Buffa remained in stable condition. During the weekend, Dunnigan improved from critical to stable condition.

Haynes was driving alone in his 1984 Dodge pickup south on Highway 95 when his vehicle crossed the center line and struck Dunnigan's northbound 1979 Subaru station wagon head-on, Moscow Police Department officials said. All four students were in Dunnigan's vehicle.

The accident occurred at 4:16 p.m.

Police officials failed to say whether any of the accident victims were wearing seatbelts.

In the past three years, only two other auto accidents have resulted in multiple deaths of UI students.

Black South Africans can get more control over their own country, says ASA

South African students at the University of Idaho are calling for more control over their own country. The ASA (South African Students Association) is a student organization that has been active in the U.S. since the late 1970s. It has a strong focus on social and political issues, particularly those related to South Africa. The organization has been instrumental in raising awareness about the apartheid system and the human rights abuses in South Africa. It has also been a vocal supporter of the anti-apartheid struggle. The ASA has a long history of organizing protests, rallies, and other events to draw attention to the issues in South Africa. It has also been a key player in the development of the Sullivan Principles, a set of guidelines for multinational corporations operating in South Africa. The ASA has a strong presence on campus and is a well-respected organization. It has a large membership and is active in many areas of student life. The ASA is committed to the goal of a free and democratic South Africa. It is a proud member of the Interfraternity Council and the Associated Students of the University of Idaho.

Fraternities offer rush weekend

BY JEFF STUCKER

Dorm and apartment residents will have a chance to check out Greek living this Thursday through Saturday, during School Year Rush.

Each type of living group has its advantages and disadvantages, said Mike Gotch, rush weekend coordinator.

"School Year Rush gives students a chance to look at the advantages of a Greek house without having to wait until regular rush starts next August," he said.

Although this weekend's events are not being formally sponsored by the Interfraternity Council, 13 of 17 campus fraternities are participating.

Each participating fraternity will sponsor an open house or house tours, and will have an open luncheon or dinner during the three days of events. Rush schedules also include house parties, little sister socials, casino nights and other activities.

Unlike regular fraternity rush, some houses will serve alcohol.

Those interested may attend a registration today from 10 a.m.-noon and 1-3 p.m., on the UCC lawn. Registration is optional, Gotch said.

Gotch said he anticipates a large turnout for this weekend's events.

"I expect around 100 people will go through School Year Rush," he said.

UI enrollment increases Reflect national trend

BY ARIC TAYLOR

What's new at the University? It's probably students, said University of Idaho registrar Matt Telin.

Telin said that this is the first year since 1983 that the university has experienced an increase in enrollment.

This increase in enrollment isn't restricted to the incoming freshmen, but encompasses all students, full time, part time, graduate, undergraduate, and transfer students, Telin said.

"This year, there was a 5.2 percent increase in total student enrollment and a 5.7 percent increase in full-time students," Telin said. "This shows a healthy enrollment base."

"In the past two years the Idaho Legislature has supported higher education with less cut-backs and has had a positive effect on enrollment," he said.

Some of these enrollment increases are amazingly high, Telin said.

"New freshmen direct from high school totaled 1,220, that's a 6.3 percent increase from last year. The freshmen have ranked above the state and national averages in GPA and SAT scores."

Telin said that with more than 9,032 students enrolled at the university, 8,005 of them live on campus.

Enrollment statistics show that there is a slightly higher percentage of males on campus (59 percent) to females (41 percent), an increase from the past four or five years when only 38 percent of the student population was female.

In addition to the increase in the amount of incoming freshmen, graduate student enrollment is up by 11.7 percent.

Telin said that these trends not only show an increase in students, but an increase in graduate studies. He said that more students are staying in school longer and getting higher degrees.

Telin said that these trends can be seen all over the country, and that with greater opportunities being offered the student with master's degrees, one could expect an even greater student enrollment in the years to come.

DUIs among college students high

ANALYSIS BY JEFF STUCKER

One-fourth of those arrested for drunk driving in Moscow and Latah county are ages 19 and 20, the Moscow Police Department reported.

Entering college students are in the highest traffic risk group age, one reason federal pressure compelled Idaho to raise its drinking age to 21.

In Idaho, it is illegal to drive with a blood alcohol concentration more than 0.10 percent. An average adult (150 pounds) can drink one ounce of alcohol per hour with food and still drive responsibly, highway safety officials report. One ounce of alcohol is one beer, one glass of wine or one shot of distilled spirits.

Responding to the deadliness of drinking and driving, Idaho laws provide strict penalties for driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

The first DUI requires no driving for 180 days, as much as six months in jail and up to a $1,000 fine.

The second DUI levies a minimum of 10 days to one year in jail and no driving for six to 18 months, with a fine up to $2,000.

The third DUI is a felony, requiring up to five years in jail, a fine up to $5,000 and no driving for a minimum of one to six years.

A person guilty of DUI must pay for an alcohol evaluation which the court will use to order an alcohol education course or treatment program.

Injuring another while driving under the influence is a felony.

Statistics from the State Police and the Office of Highway Safety reveal the seriousness of drinking and driving:

- 20 percent of the Idaho driving force is under age 25;
- 40 percent of Idaho traffic accidents involve people under age 25;
- 29 percent of Idaho nighttime accidents involve alcohol;
- More than half of Idaho's fatal traffic accidents are caused by drunk drivers.

U.S./Japan trade seminar scheduled

U.S./Japan trade relations will be the topic of a seminar given by Japan's Consul General, Shigenobu Nagai, Nov. 4 at the University of Idaho.

Titled "U.S./Japan Trade: Challenges and Opportunities," it is the second in a series of international seminars sponsored by the UI International Trade and Development Office and the College of Business and Economics.

The presentation is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. in room 336 of the UI Administration Building.

According to the International Trade and Development Office, Nagai began his career in international relations more than 30 years ago with the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs. He has been a university lecturer and has served in the Japanese embassy as a secretary, counselor and minister in Indonesia, New Guinea and Australia. Based in Seattle, Nagai has been Consul General for the past year.

The seminar is scheduled to last an hour and is free and open to the public.

Bacteria aids in hazardous waste disposal

BY CHARLIE RICE

Hazardous waste disposal is becoming a major business in the United States. Americans have been using chemicals for farms and industry for years and are now faced with contaminated soils and groundwater resulting from improper disposal of these chemicals.

A University of Idaho research team headed by Ronald Crawford has isolated a bacteria that will help dispose of Pentachlorophenol, a common ground water and soil contaminant. This chemical, which is known as "penta" or PCP, has been used to prevent rot in fence posts and telephone poles.

"PCP is commonly used all over the world to preserve wood products that are in contact with the environment, said Crawford, head of the Department of Bacteriology and Biochemistry.

There have been thousands of small wood-preserving operations all over the United States and Europe for as long as 50 years. These companies dispose of their wastes, including contaminated wood and sludges from their treatment baths, usually in low spots on their property or in a landfill.

In recent years, it has been discovered that this leads to contamination of ground water. There is a great need to clean up these areas and do something about the ground water.

Many farms here in Idaho have used penta as a post-preservative. The commercial grade of penta contains only 80 percent PCP. The other 20 percent is a mixture of other chlorinated phenols. Crawford's bacterial discovery also digests these chemicals.

"There is no danger of this bacteria destroying the penta in standing fence posts because it cannot live in the high concentrations found in the treated wood," Crawford said. "It can live in soil for as long as three weeks if the conditions are correct. This aspect of the bacteria may lead to the treatment of soil contaminated with penta, but there is no process at present."

Biotrol Incorporated, a Minnesota firm, is marketing a process using Crawford's bacteria. The contaminated water is filtered through a column containing the immobilized bacteria. The PCP and other chlorinated phenols are converted to carbon dioxide and chloride ions, which are much less toxic. This process is used to decontaminate ground water. The water is pumped from the site and returned to the ground after decontamination.

Crawford and his research team are working on developing custom-designed systems to deal with specific waste problems.

Lecture highlights health issues

BY STEPHANIE KUCK

Assistant Professor and Director of the University of Idaho exercise and physiology lab and the Wellness Program, Dennis Dolny, and Jennifer Groberg, a sport science student, gave a presentation on osteoporosis, exercise and health in pregnancy at last Tuesday's lecture in the UI Women's Center.

Groberg, who recently attended a conference on nutritional concerns for women in Seattle, began by emphasizing the importance of checking the accuracy of the articles and statistics one comes across when looking for keys to good health.

"The thing that I noticed more than anything that they (the speakers at the conference) reinforced in every lecture was that you have to read the references of the articles you read and see if the information is valid. We have to realize that every bit of media is not reliable," she said.

In speaking on health and pregnancy, Groberg and Dolny clarified some common misconceptions on caloric intake, weight gain, vitamin A toxicity, alcohol consumption and exercise.

According to information derived from the conference she attended, Groberg said that pregnant women do not need as many calories as was believed in the past.

"The main point that they emphasized was that we don't need as many calories as we thought we needed when we are pregnant, we only need about 2100 calories," she said.

She also said that dieting was okay as long as you don't go under the 2100 calories.

"We also don't need to gain as much weight as we thought, although being underweight is really bad. We only need to gain between 25 to 35 pounds, and stay at the lower range of that," she said.

For women under 18, however, the figures are a little higher. They should gain between 35 and 40 pounds, with higher caloric intake, more protein, more vitamin C and more folic acid.

Groberg said that for women underweight there was a significant amount of premature babies, with most of them under six pounds.

Although vitamin A is effective in trying to control acne, it can be extremely dangerous if used by a pregnant woman. Groberg cited a case where a pregnant teenager took Accutane (an acne medicine with concentrated vitamin A) for less than a week, and the baby was born with severe facial deformities.

"Vitamin A toxicity is really something to stay away from," Groberg said.

The normal intake is fine, but a pregnant woman should not take supplements.

A pregnant woman should also avoid alcohol.

"Even a woman that goes on an occasional binge, when she actually did get drunk once every two weeks, risks having a baby with fine motor defects," Groberg said.

This means the child would have trouble grasping things. The child would also have the flat ridge across the face characteristic of babies whose mothers drink.

Exercise can be beneficial to the expectant mother. Groberg said that a woman who engaged in moderate exercise before, during and after pregnancy tends to have an easier pregnancy than one that did not exercise at all. Heavy exercise, on the other hand, is not good.

"There are a significant number of miscarriages within this (heavy exercise) group, even occurring in the last trimester," Groberg said.

For the moderately active mother, the benefits are substantial. The active woman may have a slightly smaller baby by 100 to 200 grams, but, according to Dolny, the difference is not significant. Also, the delivery is much less stressful.

Another advantage of being active while pregnant is, Dolny said, that "Glucose training is improved with exercise training, so that there is a possibility that women who may be prone to gestational diabetes as they go along during pregnancy, exercise training may be able to help these folks handle their blood glucose levels."

This is also true for the population in general.

"Any trained individual has improved glucose tolerance than an untrained individual. That's been shown over and over. And that's why exercise is therapy for diabetic children and adults," Dolny said.

Groberg said that the onset of diabetes while pregnant is in direct connection with becoming obese (being at least 130 percent above optimum body weight).

She also said that during pregnancy, according to the latest figures and contrary to popular belief, "you can actually increase your fat cell number."

The next issue they covered was osteoporosis. Groberg said that the main point of note is the difference between calcium from cow's milk and the calcium from supplements.

"The best source is the milk and cheese. It has a 100 percent absorption rate — you get it all."

Calcium carbonate as a supplement is second best.

Groberg also said, "We don't need any more calcium than the recommended daily allowance."

The best way to meet that recommendation is to have two cups of milk or drink one cup of milk and eat a slice of cheese. Dolny pointed out too that being active can also help prevent osteoporosis, by promoting bone mineral density.

"Older active women when they have their bones scanned for bone mineral content will have a higher density of bone mineral than inactive older women," he said.

"What's important is developing a lifestyle, a pattern of living, so that you can handle that aggravation that creeps up on you without your heart rate jumping up, or your blood pressure rising abnormally," Dolny said. "There are tons of data that suggest that a regular exercise pattern will allow you to achieve that. The best thing exercise can do for you is to help your body resist the onset of older age type diseases and diseases normally associated with physical inactivity."

Consistency and moderation are the two pillars for supporting an exercise program. Without consistency, there can be none of the benefits of good exercise. The body must be regularly active to prevent the backsliding that occurs from inconsistent exercise. Dolny said that 50 percent of the people who join a regimented exercise program are no longer with it in six months.

This is either because they expected too much or they did not like the exercises. Therefore, you have to be patient and realistic, and choose an activity you like. That will help you keep up with the program. For Dolny, his running has become so enjoyable that he uses it as a reward, or a way of celebrating.

Moderation means "keeping the intensity of exercise at a lower rate — not pushing yourself to your limit," Dolny said.

In search of the perfect dream girl

Editor's note: Bruce Skaug spent this weekend in church meetings and was unable to submit his weekly column. This week's commentary, which we call THE BEST OF BRUCE, is reprinted from the Nov. 4, 1984 Argonaut.

During the past few decades, it seems college girls have consistently sought and attained one degree more than any other: No, not a B.A. or B.S., but an MRS.

That's right. It's no secret that almost every girl in college wants to get her MRS before her B.S. I admire the honesty of the girls on matrimonial matters. They are usually quite open to discussion on "tying the knot."

College boys, on the other hand, like to present an image of indifference or even dislike of marriage. Let me tell you, girls, that nothing could be further from the truth. In strictest confidence, when among the closest of friends, college guys admit their desire for a wife. It often takes up a large part of their conversation.

So you're asking, "If all college girls and guys want to get married, why aren't they?"

Bruce Skaug Commentary

Because guys and girls have trouble finding somebody to fit their personal shopping list of qualities. I believe that looking for a husband or wife like you would look for a new car is wrong, but nonetheless, it is the prevalent and popular path in selecting a spouse. I don't know what what might be on a college girl's list other than "red-blooded male," but for the fellows, I can draw from my own list as well as from friends who have confided in me.

1. I have never met a man who said, "I want to marry a feminist."

2. Many guys, whether Christian or heathen, say they want to marry a "nice Christian girl." However, that's not the type of girl they date until considering marriage.

3. The ability to cook and serve a good roast beef and mashed potato dinner usually ranks in the top three.

4. Financially-strapped students such as myself, hold the philosophy that a good wife should be able to appreciate the finer things in life and do without them.

There are other qualities that college fellows seek which are best represented in their "dream girl."

Most will say their dream gal is Suzanne Sommers, but in actuality, most guys prefer a non-cover girl. My (former) news editor, Gary Lundgren, goes for the Geraldine Ferraro type. One friend in great sincerity told me he wanted a wife as smart as Edith Bunker, and as loyal as Lassie. (He was a liberal Democrat)

As for me, there is a very specific girl on my list: June Cleaver from my television show "Leave It To Beaver." Yes, I've had a crush on Mrs. Cleaver for years. Some are looking for Mrs. Right, but I'm looking for Mrs. Cleaver. What a gall!

Editor's P.S: Since writing this column in 1984, Bruce has been happily married. Although his wife isn't Mrs. Cleaver, Bruce says that she does indeed make a mean pot roast.

Questionnaire to aid instructors

Editor:
On Nov. 2, I circulated to the living groups a questionnaire focusing on the subject of foreign teachers who are having problems with the English language.

The questionnaire asks each living group president to write down how many people in that living group have had or are currently having problems understanding instructors because those instructors hail from a non-English speaking country.

In no way is this questionnaire meant to injure such instructors in any way. Rather, its purpose is to help those instructors who have problems with the English language so that they can teach their students to their full potential. This is only fair, since the vast majority of students at the UI work hard to be able to attend school at the university.

In closing, I would just like to add that although I am a student representative of the Faculty Council, this questionnaire is for my own information and for any other person on campus who could use this information to the benefit of the students of the ASUI.

Lady Vandals: silence is gold

Editor:
Recently, I was asked to pledge some money to the Lady Vandals Stride for Gold. I figured that it was a worthy cause so I pledged some money.

The other day, I was studying in the library when the ladies basketball team came in. They sat in a group at the end of the first floor and began to converse freely, disturbing the entire floor.

After many unsuccessful attempts to quiet them, they still refused to allow others to study in quiet. If the ladies want to have a ladies chit-chat, they should reserve a room at the UCC where they won't be disturbing those students who are trying to get some decent grades.

If the Lady Vandals want contributions toward their efforts to win, then they should respect the wishes of those students who gave to their cause. I decided that if the Lady Vandals want my donations, then they had better realize that they are here to learn. If they study their playbooks the way they study in the library, then I wish them luck in their attempt to have a winning season.

The Lady Vandal harriers traveled to Pocatello Saturday to compete in the Mountain West Conference meet. Behind a 14th place finish by Paula Parsell, the team finished fifth with 132 points behind Northern Arizona, Montana State, Montana and Boise State. Idaho beat out Weber State, Nevada-Reno, Idaho State and Eastern Washington.

"The altitude really killed us," Coach Scott Lorek said of the nearly 2,000 foot elevation difference. "The altitude combined with how tough a course it was really took its toll on the team."

Missy Madsen finished 20th in 19:40 for the Lady Vandals, followed by Kari Kresbach, 20:22; Anna Foreman, 20:31; and Pat Monnie, 20:41; in 30th, 32nd and 36th places.

Who leads Big Sky? Vandal capers cork Weber State

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

The Vandals scrapped to defeat the Wildcats, who now exist only second to the Vandals as leaders of the Big Sky Conference. Weber drops in the NCAA I-AA polls from seventh to 13th while Idaho upgrades their position from 12th to 10th.

Furthermore, Idaho makes the advantage streak a little wider with plus-three and edges another mark on the left side of the series stat box with Weber, bringing the total to 12-10-1. To top it off, Weber fell to the "Friesz air and ground" attack on its homecoming weekend by a field goal 41-38.

If Weber had so much at stake, how could this happen? In a season with more than its share of close calls, injuries, ups and downs, Coach Keith Gilbertson finds no difficulty in explaining why.

"We have had a real difficult year," said Gilbertson. "They're great scrappers - they fight like hell. It's kind of an Idaho way, we'll just find a way to compete."

Idaho opened up its first series after allowing Weber to wet the board with a 47-yard field goal with a tuck to Bruce Harris, followed by a series of passes and one carry to finally score with a short pass to Allen from Weber's 13 for an 11-play scoring drive.

Throughout the game, Idaho played catch-up to keep the game tight, while Weber was left guessing what play Friesz was to pull off next.

In the first quarter, Idaho attempted to make a spread with 3-13 after a TD pass to Slater, but Weber was quick to respond with a series of their own strategy of run-then-pass plays. Weber racked the next two TD's in the end of the first and beginning of second quarter to lead 17-13 before Idaho scrapped to keep an advantage going to the lockers with 39 seconds left in the half.

The second half proved as tight as the first, with both teams trading touchdowns in the third quarter. Friesz continued to prove he is one of the hottest quarterbacks in the conference as he hit 15 of 25 for total of 185 yards.

Friesz nailed Jake twice in the second half, once on a 38-yard right sideline pass in the third quarter, and then another for good measure at the start of the fourth. The only other Vandal scoring drive in the second half was a 16-yarder to Allen to conclude a nine-play 75-yard drive in the third quarter.

Idaho offered Weber an opportunity to play catch-up, as Weber ended the game with the one legitimate scoring drive of 88 yards and an interception picked off at the Idaho 46 and ran 53 yards for a TD by backfielder Vernell Quinn.

Soccer club drops last of season

BY ERIK SIMPSON

The University of Idaho Soccer Club wrapped up the fall season with a pair of losses against the University of Oregon Saturday on Guy Wicks Field.

The Idaho club rallied with the Beavers in the first game. The teams were tied 2-2 with goals scored by Troy Reynolds and Enrico Moens of the Idaho club. However, the OSU club scored a goal late in the half to give them the victory.

The second game didn't go any better for the Idaho club as they lost by a score of 1-0. Rob Kirschenmann, Soccer Club president, said that OSU scored the winning goal with only 30 seconds left in the game.

Kirschenmann said that his team played more defense in the second game, but lost because of a goalie mishap.

He said that his team will probably attend the league cup on Nov. 7-8 in Bend, Oregon. All teams of the Northwest Intercollegiate Soccer League are invited to play if they post the $100 entry fee.

Kirschenmann said that the teams will also meet in Bend to discuss the possibility of a spring league schedule.

He said that his team is in need of some talented midfielders and forwards who are interested in playing with the team this winter in the Kibbie Dome. Those interested contact Rob Kirschenmann or Larry Cobb.

OUTDOOR CORNER

THANKSGIVING IN CANADA? CHRISTMAS IN MEXICO?

If you don't already have plans for Thanksgiving or Christmas Break and you are looking for that perfect moment, the Outdoor Program may be your answer. The UI Outdoor Program is sponsoring a ski mountaineering and hut-hopping trip to the Canadian Rockies. The trip is planned during the Thanksgiving holidays. This is an advanced trip which requires skiing 2,000 vertical feet to reach Bow Hut. From the hut one can search out the deep powder while skiing to one of the other huts.

The Christmas Break trip is a sea kayaking expedition to the Sea of Cortez in Baja, Mexico. This 10-day excursion offers some of the best coastal kayaking in North America. It is approximately an 80-mile trip along a rugged, isolated coastline. For this OP adventure, previous sea kayaking experience is not necessary. However, you must be able to paddle 10-15 miles on flat water some days. There will be time to explore the desert hillsides, hike along the beach, snorkel in fascinating tide pools or catch a fresh dinner - fishing is excellent.

REGGAE group Kutamba brought its marimba-based rhythm to the SUB Ballroom Halloween night. (ARGONAUT/John Fritz)

Students pitch in for Kronos

They took the stage in everything from metal-flake shirts to black spandex pants, but the music they played had the corner on the untraditional market.

Sunday night the Kronos Quartet played to a full University Auditorium for the fourth concert on their latest tour. They treated the audience to the striking and vigorous performance that was as first violinist David Harrington said before their arrival in Moscow, "not as much to be enjoyed as to affect."

In addition to their performance, the group involved students in their appearance in Moscow. Beginning last Friday, promotional posters of the Kronos Quartet were featured in a poster exhibit displayed in the SUB by the Art Department.

The exhibit spotlighted both the Kronos concert and the growing graphic design program at the UI. Five senior graphic design

GRAPHIC arts students tried their hand, and brush, at promotional posters for the Nov. 1 appearance of the Kronos Quartet. Cindy Thompson was one of those displaying their results in the SUB. (ARGONAUT/Brian Duffy) majors developed a design: Jeff Ebel, Linda Griffiths-Harper, Gena Lambert, Mike Semick and Cyndi Thompson.

Monday, the quartet gave students at the Hampton School of Music a chance to see the process involved when the group adapts a new composition to their own style. The group, Harrington said, tries to keep at the edge of new music
