Student survey results:

Leave the bookstore on-campus

BY PAUL ALLEE

Students from University of Idaho on-campus living groups overwhelmingly oppose moving the campus bookstore downtown, according to a report being released today by ASUI President Brian Long.

But the report, which reflects the student government's official bookstore position, has been compiled without direct off-campus student data.

"STUDENTS have been shouting from the hilltops since May that they want the bookstore either on or very close to campus."

- Brian Long

Off-campus students comprise more than 50 percent of the student population here. Despite those statistics, student government leaders say they believe the report accurately represents overall student opinions.

"Students have been shouting from the hilltops since May that they want the bookstore either on or very close to campus," Long said. "I think if I had 10 more surveys the results would be the same."

According to the Long, the report is based on surveys completed by one-fourth of the 13-member ASUI Senate. Senators consulted about 25 percent of those students living in 16 on-campus dormitories, fraternities and sororities, he said.

"There is a clear pattern of what the students want," he said.

The report, which will be delivered to Terry Armstrong, executive assistant to the president, says:

- Of the 12 bookstore site proposals, students strongly oppose moving the store downtown to the old J.C. Penney building.

- Students would like administrators to take a second look at proposals to remodel and expand the bookstore's current facilities.

- Students who support efforts to build a new store on one of six on-campus sites generally oppose proposals that would raise student fees for construction.

- If current facilities cannot be improved, students would look favorably on proposals to place the bookstore by Sixth Street adjacent to campus. Two bar and grill sites, the Mirage and Murdoc's, were listed as acceptable alternative bookstore locations.

Plans to move the bookstore downtown were put on hold last June by President Richard Gibb, after student leaders complained that the administration was moving too quickly to relocate the store.

Most students had left Moscow for the summer, and little effort had been made to find out what students wanted done with the store, Long said.

Since then, the administration has made a point to gather more student input, he said.

White appointed to legislature

BY JILL BECK

In January, former ASUI President Gino White will become the youngest member of the Idaho state legislature.

Nominated by the North Idaho Democratic Committee, White, 24, was appointed Nov. 3 by Governor Cecil Andrus to serve in the Idaho House of Representatives. He will represent the five Northern Idaho counties in the Fourth Legislative District.

White will replace Representative Steve Herndon of Sandpoint to participate in the state's legislative session. Herndon succeeds Senator Kermit Kiebert of Hope, who was recently appointed director of the Department of Transportation.

According to White, he hopes to be appointed to the transportation committee, and especially wants to serve on the education committee.

Gino White

Appointments to the various committees is based on seniority, so White does not know which committees he will serve on.

"I'll put my preferences (for committee membership) in," White said.

When asked what his goals for the upcoming session were, White said, "It'll depend a lot on which committees I'm assigned to."

"As a mid-term Freshman, I don't think it's my place to put the plow too deep. I plan to learn a lot and work hard for the people in the northern counties," he said.

White, who served as the ASUI president for the 1985-86 term, received his bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Idaho in 1986.

He also worked as an ASUI senator, as well as being a member and later chairman of the Political Concerns Committee. Last spring, White served as the ASUI lobbyist in Boise.

THE MILL

In the wake of next Tuesday's ASUI elections, some candidates have received criticism for neglecting their elected offices while on the campaign trail. But the most "invisible" senator isn't running for office at all. Sources say although Senator Wende Welsh-Porter has drawn $100 salary during the past month, she's skipped out on all recent ASUI meetings and officials don't know how to get in touch with her.

Former athlete speaks out

BY ALAN SOLAN

Former Miami Dolphin football star Eugene "Mercury" Morris, who spent three and a half years in a Florida prison on drug charges, will speak at the University of Idaho SUB Ballroom Nov. 17 at 8 p.m.

Morris has seen two distinct sides of our society and will share his perspective and anti-drug message in his talk on "Success, Drugs and Society."

In August 1983, Morris was arrested for acting as a middleman in the sale of cocaine to an undercover narcotics officer. Under Florida's mandatory sentencing laws for drug offenders, Morris was given a 20-year prison term. In March 1986, he was released by the Florida Supreme Court and given a re-trial on the grounds that his lawyers had not been able to present evidence of police entrapment. In June 1986, Morris was freed by a Florida circuit court judge.

After graduating from high school in Pittsburgh, Penn. in 1965, Morris was named All-American as a tailback at West Texas State University in 1967 and 1968. During his college career, Morris broke three of the school's rushing records.

In 1969, Morris was drafted by the Miami Dolphins. He began his professional career as a kick-return specialist and on his first NFL attempt returned a kickoff 105 yards for a touchdown.

In 1972 and 1973, Morris played on back-to-back world championship teams for the Dolphins. In 1972, he rushed for 1,000 yards while Miami boasted a perfect 17-0 record for the season.

In 1976, Morris retired from the game due to injuries.

Having kicked his drug habit at the age of 39, Morris is traveling the country with his anti-drug message.

Admission for the lecture, which is sponsored by ASUI Productions, will be $2 for UI students and $3 general admission.

Library to undergo remodeling

BY TRACY RANDALL

There are some major changes in the works for the University of Idaho library; the remodeling of the basement and the extension of hours.

According to Eileen Hitchingham of the library staff, "The remodeling of the basement should be invisible to the student — hopefully."

The books that are now in the basement will be moved to a separate location. This location will need to be within a 24-hour turn-around point, meaning that if a volume is requested, it will be retrievable within 24 hours.

Certain volumes such as older government documents that aren't in great demand will be inaccessible during the time needed to finish the remodeling. Finding adequate space with easy accessibility for the large number of books in the basement poses a problem.

At the moment, it is hoped that moving of the books will take place during Christmas break.

Remodeling will take place after the asbestos abatement crew checks the area and removes any asbestos found. The actual remodeling will then get underway with a tentative completion set for the spring of 1988.

The remodeled basement will be more storage-efficient, with movable shelving capable of storing some 275,000 books.

A committee has formed that will be geared toward making the library more integrated and responsive to the needs of the student.

This task force will review the libraries of other land grant institutions to see how the UI measures up and what can be done to make improvements in the library system.

Exit rates will be monitored to find out when the library is the busiest. From there it will be decided when hours should be increased.

This expansion in hours will call for an increase in funding. Eileen Hitchingham said she anticipates a second phase of funding for im-

The University of Idaho Delta Gammas invite everyone to come watch the Seventh Annual DG Anchor Splash.

Attend the pseudo-swim meet between men's living groups guaranteed to be zany and outrageous.

The splash starts at 10 a.m. Saturday in the UI Swim Center. All proceeds will be donated to sight conservation and aid to the blind.

Ball to be held this weekend

University of Idaho Naval ROTC midshipmen will hold their annual Navy/Marine Corps Ball Saturday, commemorating the birthdays of the two services with a full command function at the University Inn.

The 6 p.m. event includes a dress dinner, ceremonial cutting of the Navy and Marine Corps birthday cakes and an address from visiting Rear Admiral Lyle F. Bull, commander of Carrier Group Seven.

Nov. 11 and Oct. 13 saw the Marine Corps and the Navy reach their 212th birthdays respectively, having been formed the year before the start of the Revolutionary War.

Following dinner, toasts and RADM Bull's speech, midshipmen and their dates will devote the rest of the evening to dancing in the hotel's ballroom.

UI PRSSA to print Forum

Three University of Idaho students will co-edit the next issue of Forum, a national magazine for public relations majors, it was announced in Los Angeles Tuesday. Elizabeth Culley, national chairman of the Public Relations Student Society of America, said the group's fall conference that she, Rena Johnson, Mike Kerner and Ania Kerner would join to produce and edit the February issue of Forum.

The publication, circulated to more than 1,600 readers nationwide, has been produced by Idaho students for two out of the past three years.

"Having publication production at the UI has brought a lot of attention to our chapter," Mike Kerner said. "The big challenge now is to put all of the fun that we did in L.A. into the next issue."

The conference, titled "Get Into the Act," featured more than 50 professional guest speakers from Hollywood PR firms and other regional entertainment companies.

ASUI Candidates Forum Students take stand against mudslinging

BY JULIE HARTWELL

Candidates for the ASUI presidency and vice presidency don't like all the "mudslinging" that has been going on during this year's student body elections; and their counterparts running for the Senate don't like the idea of raising university fees, unless the majority of students approve of the raises.

That's what they told listeners tuned into KUOI-FM Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The student-run radio station coordinated live broadcasts of political forums sponsored by the Political Concerns Board.

According to presidential candidate Norm Semanko, there is no place for mudslinging in an ASUI campaign.

"I'm confident enough in myself to run a positive campaign. Wise people who make wise decisions will look at the facts rather than the rumors," he said.

During the past two weeks, candidates have been accused of doing everything from ripping down each others signs to bouncing bad checks.

"Jeff (Friel), Norm (Semanko) and I are all good friends, and we're all unhappy that other people are dragging dirt into this campaign because it reflects poorly on all of us," said Brad Cuddy, presidential candidate. "I am above slinging any mud back."

Jeff Friel said he agreed that such rumors should be completely discouraged.

When asked to address questions of where the bookstore should be located, all candidates, including vice presidential runners Scott Carter and John Vanderpool, supported on-campus sites.

Another question was telephoned in to the forum concerning the touch-tone registration system. The question was directed at Brad Cuddy.

He explained the system, in which students use the telephone to pre-register for classes.

"The whole process would take about five minutes, compared to one to three hours in the dome. That's the beauty of it," Cuddy said.

Students would send a check before classes begin in the fall or the spring," he said "but would be registered from the time they did the telephone registration."

"All responses so far to the proposal have been unanimously in support of the system," he said.

Candidates also discussed their views on the issue of increased computer access in the university, and the possibility of having a study area that is open 24 hours a day.

For more information about the candidates, see pages 8-9.

provements, also to be examined by the task force.

Hitchingham said she is concerned with making the library more user-friendly.

She said that many students equate the library with feelings of dread, such as putting off that term paper until the very last minute and then despairing when they are unable to find the information they need.

Hitchingham said that the University library can be an intimidating place for all students, from beginning freshman who have never worked with large library facilities to graduate students who have become comfortable with a different system.

Learn the art of tolerance

The lady looked and talked like Margaret Thatcher. She walked across her living room, talking about nothing in particular. She sat down in her couch as the camera zoomed on her face.

"Let's talk about sex," she said.

She then goes on a discourse about the spread of diseases such as AIDS, where she points to a rather big box, full of condoms. She pulls one out of its package and holds it up to her face.

In Thatcherese fashion she continues: "Now I know a lot of you don't like the looks of these things, but they're really quite easy to use, and wouldn't you rather play it safe? So please put this on." She pauses as she looks at the condom longingly and then back at the camera, "I would."

You won't see this ad for safe sex in America, but it — and others like it — are common fare in Great Britain.

I didn't see anybody rioting in the street because of the immorality of condom ads, I didn't see English schoolchildren lining up at the local drugstore to buy condoms because they had lost their values — indeed, people seemed to take the ads for what they are — informing people about a situation that needs to be dealt with.

The British don't seem to be as concerned with "morality" as Americans are, probably because most of their religious fanatics left for the New World in the 17th and 18th centuries.

So here we are, descendants of people who couldn't handle the moral situations back then, so it's no wonder so many Americans have such problems dealing with situations when someone brings up the issue of "morality." We can't help it, it's in our genes.

Another case where our inability to deal with practical issues when a question of morality comes up is the recent withdrawal of Douglas H. Ginsburg in the ongoing battle to find a Supreme Court justice. Ginsburg withdrew after he admitted to smoking marijuana as late as 1979 when he was a professor at Harvard.

Of course some Congressmen grumbled and complained about a Supreme Court nominee who had used illegal drugs in the past. "As a college professor, he's supposed to be a role model," they said.

I'm sure he didn't light up in class or even in the mens' room of the Harvard Law Library, and I would hazard a guess that his students didn't even know about his activities.

I find it ironic that some Congressmen (and state legislators) don't see anything wrong with showing up to work (i.e. legislating) intoxicated, sometimes so much that they can't function properly. That's Okay, but if you show up stoned — or even tried it in the past — you're automatically a candidate for the Anti-Christ Award.

Marijuana use, along with AIDS, homosexuals and other activities and diseases that "shouldn't exist" are going to have to be dealt with. I'm not talking about changing laws, although that is a manifestation of change.

I'm talking about changing attitudes. Get rid of the "this is immoral so therefore it shouldn't even be happening" mentality and start accepting things and people as they are (placing no labels), and you'd be surprised at how many conflicts disappear.

'I hate BSU' Contest

The Argonaut is proud to announce the first "I hate Boise State" Contest. In 25 words or less, tell us why you hate BSU and you could win a $30 gift certificate for dinner at the University Inn-Best Western Broiler. The top 10 entries will be printed in the Nov. 20 issue of the Argonaut. The winner of the "I hate Boise State" Contest will be announced during the Idaho-BSU football game Nov. 21.

So come on, let out all your frustrations about "River-side Tech" and enter the contest of the year. Entries must be filed at the ASUI publications receptionist's desk on the third floor of the SUB by Nov. 18, 1987 at 5 p.m.

ASUI Elections: stop the muckraking

We certainly are good students — we even run our political campaigning just like they showed us how to do it at the national level.

If we don't like a candidate, we just dig up some muck and spread it around. If that doesn't work, we make up some nasty lies — they spread just as quickly and effectively.

Tuesday's guest column in the Argonaut, "ASUI President: making the choice," was a prime example of such slime. Nobody but nobody could do as many rotten things in 21 short years of life on earth as that writer suggested.

Let's look at this election from the other side — the brighter side. It's for our own good, as we have a lot at stake. The ASUI has been on the right track for some time now. Every year we get better and better at serving our students. This year has been outstanding. The ASUI's finances are solid, our senate is service-oriented and our administration has gained campus-wide respect as effective student leadership.

So many things have been accomplished because of good student government and we can't afford to lose that. Contrary to the popular muckrakers now making headlines, I think all the candidates are well-meaning and qualified to serve the students.

Some of the candidates I know

David Dose Commentary

better from working with them in the past. I know these individuals will serve us well. They have made plans to continue heading the ASUI in the direction it is now moving — more student services for the same dollars.

Instead of insulting and putting down people like this, try voting or something constructive.

I personally am voting for our current finance chairman in the presidential race as he has continually shown that he can do what he says.

I am wholeheartedly behind my current assistant, who's an ex-senator and a main driving force in the ASUI right now. People like that who put action in their words deserve our votes.

All of the senators running for re-election are doubly suited to fill those auspicious offices. They have been doing a fantastic job in student services — why not let them continue?

There; I've done it. I wrote an entire political commentary without insulting one single candidate. And that's what they deserve. Anybody willing to try their hand at serving the students' interests can't be all that bad — no matter what the rumor of the day is. Unlike some of the rumor-mongers, I know exactly what I am talking about. I have had the privilege of serving three and one-half years in our student government.

We've come a long way, and with the candidates we have to pick from in this election, we can't help but keep on going.

Editor's Note: David Dose currently serves as ASUI vice president.

For student voice vote Friel

Editor:

I am writing this letter in support of Jeff Friel for ASUI President. Jeff has always put the students' opinions in front of his own in the ASUI Senate. Jeff gets results for the students. Jeff fought for and got us additional hours in the weight room and Kibbie-ASUI Dome. He also fought successfully to stop the purchase of an ASUI mini-party-van, thereby saving us more than ten thousand dollars.

Jeff is a strong advocate of student rights, and has made our voices heard on the Parking Committee. He will make sure our voices are heard in the Administration, the State Legislature and the Governor's office. Jeff will be an effective voice for the students in the ASUI presidency.

Dale Renfrow

Choose Cuddy for student action

Editor:

Once again election season is upon us and we are afforded an opportunity to choose the direction our student government is to take in the next year. I am writing this letter in support of the candidate for ASUI president that I believe can lead us in the right direction. Brad Cuddy has been active in student government since his arrival at the University of Idaho two years ago.

He was elected to the ASUI Senate last year and served as chairman for the Senate Finance Committee. While acting as chairman, he was instrumental in taking an ASUI budget running a perennial deficit and turning it around. Last year the ASUI cut its budget by $100,000 without any substantial decrease in services and ran $88,000 in the black.

This impressive feat is bolstered by Brad's outstanding voting record on such issues as tutoring and campus lighting. Thanks in large part to Brad's efforts, we will now have lighting on Elm and Nez Perce Streets where little or no lighting existed before.

It is this commitment to action on the students' behalf that sets Brad apart from the other candidates. For a leader who is willing to lead, I urge you to vote Brad Cuddy for ASUI President.

Scott M. Gipson

Let Norm put his ideas to work

Editor:

I don't take stands in student government elections often, but in this election I think I need to. A lot of candidates promise things and then never deliver. A lot of them also come up with ideas which sound original and pertinent, but really aren't that exciting.

Norm Semanko does have some great ideas for the ASUI and ones that I think students can appreciate. Norm came up with the idea to have the ASUI newsletter, "From the Senate Floor." This will go a long way in informing students. Norm also has plans to create a much needed PR director for ASUI services. Financial aid is always on students' minds and Norm recognizes that. Providing more money for scholarships, not just for new, but also older students is something Norm wants to pursue. Norm wants to begin a long overdue ASUI Judicial Council to handle possible disputes. It is already required by the ASUI rules. Norm would appoint the board, nobody else has said they would.

Finally, Norm has one idea that is not so original. He wants to keep student fees down—no matter what it takes. School costs enough as it is.

Norm has great ideas. Let's put them to work. Norm has worked hard for us in the student government for more than three years now. He gets things done, he cares about students, and he is excited about the University of Idaho. Let's vote for Norm and we will be voting for a better student government, something we would all like to see.

Molly Weyen
ASUI Senator

Informed voters choose Friel

Editor:

For the last two semesters, Jeff Friel has represented our hall as an ASUI Senator. He worked hard to bring us the latest information on such issues as parking and the Memorial Gym weight room while representing our views in the senate. I feel he will make a good ASUI President because he knows the ASUI and he knows how to get things done.

The informed voter will choose Jeff Friel for ASUI President because what a candidate promises isn't important unless he has the experience and the energy to do the job right.

Bob Nolan

Carter cares about the ASUI

Editor:

A qualified candidate for ASUI vice president is, in two words, Scott Carter. Carter is currently a member of the ASUI Senate and actively represents his living groups, as well as participating on the Finance Committee, Productions Board and the Communications Board.

A sophomore, Carter has a long list of accomplishments in his short time at the University of Idaho. Aside from his involvement in the ASUI Senate, he is a member of SARB, Intercollegiate Knights, Interfraternity Council and like his opponent, an active member of FarmHouse Fraternity. Last year he received the honor of Greek Pledge of the Year.

Carter is also an active community member, taking part in Friends Unlimited, Stepping Stones and March of Dimes events.

All these areas show that Carter is a well-rounded, involved, and dedicated individual who cares. The students of the ASUI need someone like Scott Carter as vice president of the senate to ensure that we are being represented fairly and actively. Scott Carter is the obvious choice for ASUI vice president. Give him your vote on Nov. 18.

Terryl Sharples

Friel's leadership skills are clear

Editor:

There is one ASUI Presidential candidate who is not afraid to become involved: Jeff Friel. Jeff's accomplishments as an ASUI Senator, legislative intern for Gov. Andrus and a recent city council candidate have proven that he is responsible, dedicated and hard-working. Jeff's leadership abilities are clear, he has my vote and I hope he has yours.

Deborah Giovanelli

McCurry deserves an ASUI position

Editor:

I usually don't make it a policy to support or not support a candidate running for ASUI Senate, but there is one candidate I feel strong enough about to support.

Craig McCurry is that candidate. I think we all know people who have joined clubs just to have it on their resume or just to say they're in a club. I've known Craig for three years and he has been active in every organization he has joined. Everything from IFC to Idaho State Intercollegiate Legislature. Craig has been an active officer of his living group as well as a past member of Political Concerns Committee. There's a difference between being active and actually giving a rip about the organization. I think anyone who has worked with Craig knows he's not there for the resume-padder, he's there to make the organization work and to work for the organization.

Having the privilege of being an ASUI department head, I've worked with senators on various issues. I have always felt well represented by the senate and I know Craig would continue this strong representation, not just for department heads but for all students. Craig is objective and fair, but most important, he listens.

So why is listening so important? Because a senator is there to listen and then take your views and get something done. Craig is a "get things done" kinda guy. Craig is running on a platform of active representation. He doesn't want to represent himself, he knows that isn't the job of a senator. Craig knows the job is to represent you...you the individual, not you the mob of blurry faces. A vote for Craig is a vote for yourself.

In closing, I encourage everyone to whip out their ID card this Wednesday and waddle down to a polling booth and vote. I ask you to vote for Craig McCurry, for I can think of no other senatorial candidate more deserving of a senate position.

Vote Danielson for enthusiasm

Editor:

For the past four years, I have seen the ASUI elections come and go, and I have never been compelled to publicly endorse a candidate running for a position in the ASUI. But this year there is a candidate you cannot overlook on the ballot Nov. 18. Her name is Leslie Danielson and she is running for a position on the ASUI Senate. I have known Leslie for many years and she has proven she will give an outstanding performance in all that she pursues. Her performance as an ASUI Senator would be no different.

Leslie has served internships in both state and federal government. One of her more notable accomplishments—she was elected the first female president of our hometown chapter of FFA. No small accomplishment considering we are from a small, conservative farming community. Leslie went on to become a state FFA officer.

Choosing Leslie to represent your ideas would be a choice for dependability, diplomacy and enthusiasm. Leslie's enthusiasm would not end with the elections—it will carry through in all of her duties as an ASUI Senator. Leslie Danielson would bring with her a new, refreshing perspective into the ASUI Senate. If you are looking for an enthusiastic and dedicated senator, Leslie Danielson is the right choice on Nov. 18.

ASUI elections are for you

Editor:

As if all the signs weren't enough, I wish to tell everyone that it is again ASUI election time. I attended a senator candidate meeting on Monday, Nov. 9 and would like to stress some of the points made to the voting public.

First of all, I would like everyone to take the elections seriously. The ASUI government controls many things, including where your registration funds are spent and whether your registration fees will be increased. So I ask you to think about the candidates and their views, for it will effect you. I also request that you don't tear down candidates' posters. Doing so denies their first amendment right to free speech.

Eleven voting booths will be set up about campus. This does not mean that a person can vote at all booths. A $200 fine can be assessed to anyone who votes at more than one booth. There will be six positions available for senatorial positions, but candidates' views should be examined before voting. There are political statements in today's Argonaut. I ask that you read them. Remember, a vote for someone whose views you don't know could be a vote for someone with views opposite to yours.

For those of you who want to vote but won't be able to on voting day, there are absentee ballots available at the ASUI office in the SUB. These must be turned in before the office closes on Tuesday night to be valid.

Remember, the ASUI is your government and you need to take part in it for it to work. Please vote on Wednesday for you and your government.

Phonathon closes in on set goal

Editor:

I would like to thank all of those people who have been participating in the Annual Fund Phonathon and have raised $121,452 in pledges. With the Phonathon just at the halfway point, we are coming closer to our goal of $250,000.

There are so many groups who have been doing a fantastic job and I would like to mention just a few of them. The top one-night callers are the Alpha Phis with $5,022. The top women's living group is Hays Hall with a total of $8,720. The top men's group is Kappa Sigma with a total of $8,943 (Come on Fijis!).

The Phonathon still has two more weeks of calling, but I feel that with the great support we have been getting from the Foundation Office (as always) and from the university students, this is going to be another GREAT year for the Phonathon. If there is anyone who would like more information, please contact Linda Williams or Keith Nyberg.

Faculty Council bury their heads

Editor:

I am puzzled about last week's letter from a Faculty Council student representative which sounded somewhat apologetic for a survey concerning the adequacy of instructors' spoken English. As an alumnus, I recall this as a very legitimate issue and one in which I hope the Faculty Council is actively interested.

Obviously, communication skills are critical for all teachers. It is doubly important when English is an instructor's second language. The Faculty Council should implement an ongoing program to help these instructors continuously improve their communication skills (both in English usage and in dealing with students having difficulty). Simply having lived and taught in the U.S. for a number of years does not mean that there is no room for improvement. Who knows how many students have become discouraged because they literally couldn't understand these instructors' English and so it appeared they couldn't understand the subject material?

I hope this issue is not so threatening to the faculty and administration that they have to bury their heads!

Skaug gains a WSU supporter

Editor:

I support Bruce Skaug's view about WSU's little problem. In fact, his commentary was, in a way, good news from a distant land. (I'm referring to his WSU-published article).

I appreciate your (Skaug's) stand and encourage you on. My best wishes to you.

A special thanks to blood donors

Editor:

I would like to give some very special thanks to all those who participated in the recent American Red Cross/ASUI Blood Drive. The drawing was held last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the SUB. We had a goal of 120 pints per day. Unfortunately, we did not reach our cumulative goal of 360 pints for the three days, but the blood drive was still a success thanks to those who took the time to give blood and help at the drawing.

Congratulations are in order for those who have reached the one gallon donation mark. Those people are Mike Courtney, Pam Soward, Aaron Atkinson, Patty Lohman, Barb Anderson, Galen Lee, Mark McMulkin, Rob Hursh, Brandon Lever and Ann Bennett. Along with these people who have donated one gallon of blood, John Mundt has now donated four gallons.

Among those who took time out to help were members of Intercollegiate Knights, Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity, Linda Adams and all the adult volunteers who live in the Moscow area. I would also like to thank my brothers at FarmHouse Fraternity who helped me out with publicity and set-up. Finally, and most of all, thanks go out to all those who donated blood. The blood you give can do more than any amount of money can—save lives. The need for blood is always growing, so new volunteer donors are also needed.

Knowing that you had a very crucial part in saving a life is a feeling of self-esteem well worth the time it takes to donate blood. Once again, I would like to express my sincere thanks to all those who helped out.

Week designated to help people better understand geography

How would your geography awareness rate on a scale of one to 10?

If you would score at the low end of the scale, join the club. You are with at least 5,000 high school seniors in eight major cities, says a survey conducted in January 1987.

Realizing this problem, the U.S. Congress has declared Nov. 15-21 to be Geography Awareness Week.

A University of Idaho geographer says National Geography Awareness Week, is planned to make U.S. citizens more aware of the importance of geography to our everyday lives and create interest in improving the level of geographic knowledge of the U.S. populace.

Harley Johansen, head of the UI Department of Geography, said national and state activities are planned to draw attention to the fact that there is a national problem. He said he hopes it will also point out some of the things which must be done.

Johansen points to a widespread lack of understanding of our own country's geography. Most of us know very little about the geography of other nations.

"This is totally opposite of other developed countries," he said. "The Soviet Union requires four years of geography in their high school system. Here we are lucky to get a semester of it and that's probably mixed in with political science, sociology and history."

A general lack of specific geography classes in the nation's public schools is the main thing Johansen said is contributing to "geographic illiteracy" in the U.S.

He points to a study that reports two-thirds of the teachers of geography in Tennessee schools have never had geography in their college education. "Consequently, it is poorly taught. It is not attractive to students, so they don't know what it is about. It's kind of a false picture of geography or it's an inadequate coverage."

"So we have a problem in retraining."

Teachers in the public schools with little geography background need to have their awareness and understanding of geography improved, he said.

Geographers at UI are working with educators at Lewis Clark State College to prepare a proposal to National Geographic Society to fund a teacher-training institute in Idaho.

If the funding is approved, financial assistance would be available to public school teachers who want to be trained in geographic concepts and techniques.

Dredging research leads to sediment problem solution

BY CHARLIE RICE

Sediment flowing into the Lower Granite Reservoir may cause flooding of the Port of Lewiston during times of high water, if the sediment is not removed by dredging.

The University of Idaho's Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is studying the effects of dredging and is finding ways to improve fish and wildlife habitat by properly disposing of the sand which the dredges clean off the reservoir bottom.

Another concern of the study was finding times when dredging and disposal of the dredged sediment would not disrupt the aquatic ecology by lowering water quality.

Professor David Bennet and Research Associate Frank Shrier have discovered a number of facts that will affect the disposal of sediment.

"Salmon and steelhead do not feed in deeper waters as much as they do in mid-depth or shallower waters," Bennet said in a recent interview. "They and other fish find more variety of feed near the surface."

Their study of fish feeding habits in the reservoir has led to using the dredged sediment to create shallow water habitat and may lead to the creation of islands in the reservoir.

Islands and the shallow water surrounding them would create nesting sites and feeding areas for waterfowl, as well as supply of land insects that would flow into the water and supply food for fish.

The sandy sediment, which is mainly contributed by the Salmon River, from the Snake River well above Lewiston, is the home of the dipteran fly larvae.

The dipteran fly larvae hatch at the correct time to provide food for the young salmon and steelhead which pass through the reservoir on their way to the ocean.

Another finding of the study was that there was a high rate of predation on the young salmon and steelhead by smallmouth bass, channel catfish and northern squawfish.

The northern squawfish is active during the colder months and consumes a much greater number of young salmonoids than the bass or catfish.

Bass and catfish are not native to the Snake river drainage. They were brought from the eastern United States by fishermen who wanted to increase the number of sport fish available in this area and have adapted to the warmer waters available in the reservoirs and larger rivers of this area.

Lower Granite Reservoir is used for many purposes. It allows barge traffic to haul forest and farm products, it provides water for fish and boats loaded with fishermen, and it stores water used to generate power.

Studies like the one being done by Bennet and Shrier contribute to these uses.

Questions Answers

ASUI • ELECTIONS • 1987

Eight compete for six vacant ASUI Senate slots

Why do you want to be an ASUI senator?

Mac Scott Brandon - Student opinions matter a lot and their voices should be heard. An ASUI Senator must find these opinions and act on them. If I'm elected, not only would I benefit from serving the students, but the campus benefits from effective representation.

Leslie Danielson - The ASUI is a vehicle that helps and provides programs for students. I want to part of this process because I feel I can make a difference. I have the experience, qualifications and most importantly the desire to work hard to make a difference for the students of this university.

Michael Gotch - I feel like we got a lot accomplished last year and I would like to finish my effort to get core accelerated classes available for students who need to drop a class at mid-semester and pick-up an accelerated core class to maintain their 12 credits so they can keep their financial aid.

Tina Kagi - As an appointed ASUI Senator of two months, I feel I have accomplished a great deal. However, I have many more projects and goals that I would like to pursue during a second term. I enjoy involvement in the decisions that affect the UI and in promoting the growth of our university.

Brett Klefner - Three simple reasons: I would see to it that the recreation area was amply supported and represented by myself. I feel I am an elaborate communicant of my ideas. More importantly I strive to understand the ideas of others. I have the selfless commitment to the work.

Craig McCurry - There are three basic and fundamental reasons why I want to be an ASUI Senator. First of all, I have always been in student government and have always enjoyed it. I enjoy taking care of the things that I care about, and student government is a good means of doing this at the UI. Secondly, I think that with the upcoming Centennial celebration, it is a good suggestion for everyone to get involved. Last, but definitely most important, is my desire to represent the students at this institution.

Sean Wall - I want to be an ASUI Senator for one very simple reason. In the recent past, the senate has evolved into an organization that is very unresponsive to the concerns and desires of the voters; for $62.50 per student per year the senate should be directly interacting with the students.

Johnathan Williams - I desire to be a senator because I am different in my background and perspective. The student will benefit the greatest by my actions, not others in the system. This enthusiasm in that service will make me a great senator for students.

What experience do you have in student government, clubs or organizations?

Mac Scott Brandon - I have no previous experience in student government. However, living in a fraternity, I know what a strong government can do. In both Greek and GDI governments, if things are not run smoothly the organization of the house or hall could fail. I can contribute to a strong government.

Leslie Danielson - I have been involved in government on the local, state and national government. I served as a page for the speaker of the house, the House Education and Agriculture Committees, several offices within my living group and as Idaho FFA secretary. Most recently I was an intern for Congressman Larry Craig.

Michael Gotch - I have three years of ASUI experience, including an active part in the ASUI budgeting last year and chairman of Government Operations and Appointments Committee in the senate.

Tina Kagi - I held student government positions throughout high school (including ASB Senator, secretary and representative to the Spokane Inter-High Student Senate). I also represented the students of Spokane at the Spokane City Council meetings and worked closely with Mayors Chase and McNeil. I have always been very active in my community and school.

Brett Klefner - I have been an active member of Beta Theta Pi for three and a half years, including presidency in 1986. I played varsity football for two years (1984-1986) and varsity basketball last winter. I am currently a proud member of the Recreation Club.

Craig McCurry - I have just finished a term as the state auditor of the Idaho State Intercollegiate Legislature (1 year). As auditor, I worked with former Lt. Gov. Dave Leroy in aiding the arrangement of the fall session in 1986. I have also served as the secretary of the Interfraternity Council for the past year.

Sean Wall - During the 1987 Idaho State Legislature, I served as an intern for the JFAC and Education Committees. This summer I moved to Washington D.C. where I worked as a congressional intern for Congressman Larry Craig. Since then, I have spent a semester as the president of my living group.

Johnathan Williams - I have a plethora of experiences, including hall and club leadership, ASUI committees, full-time employment, Vandal Marching Band, professional involvement, Campus Recreation, writing for the Argonaut, in the community and in the Greek and residence systems. I know the system and how to use it for students.

Should students be asked to pay additional fees to help raise money for the UI Centennial?

Mac Scott Brandon - The UI Centennial is an important function. It's a celebration that will bring the campus together. Putting a fee of $1-$2 per registration form would give enough to have a good Centennial. Anything higher, though, would be too much to ask of the students. Fees are high enough.

Leslie Danielson - The students should be asked to pay additional fees to pay for the centennial. I feel the additional fees should be optional. If it was presented as an option, I feel the response would be much more favorable.

Michael Gotch - A fee increase for the UI Centennial should be put on the ballot in the spring so that each student can vote on whether they want it or not.

Tina Kagi - I would like to see a dedicated Centennial fee put to a student vote; I have received positive feedback from my living groups on this issue, however, the opinion of the student majority should prevail in the final decision. If a Centennial fee fails at the polls, we could investigate an optional "check box" on registration forms.

Brett Klefner - Yes, but there is a limit to the amount. If every student were to pay a small fee, the benefits would be tremendous. We as a university only have one 100-year birthday. I feel we can capitalize on a "golden" opportunity to unify and beautify our campus and enhance alumni support.

Craig McCurry - I believe that the university's Centennial is a great celebration of the history of this great institution, but I shy away from a student fee increase. I believe that the administration is doing a good job of obtaining financial donations for the celebration. I am, however, receptive to student views, and if they begin the action for a Centennial fee, I'll support it wholeheartedly.

Sean Wall - I find it acceptable for the students to pay a minimal fee to help raise money for the UI Centennial. I would support a one-time fee increase of one or two dollars.

Johnathan Williams - I don't think that students should pay for a centennial program that hasn't been explained to them. The people raising money haven't informed the students and I don't think those individuals should be able to legislate a forced support. Go rally support so we want to pay a little extra.

Five seek top ASUI spots

Why do you want to be elected?

Brad Cuddy - During the past year and a half I've worked hard to make the ASUI a better organization by stretching student dollars to eliminate deficits and position the ASUI to seriously look at expanding student services. I feel my efforts in this direction will be more productive as ASUI president.

Jeff Friel - The job of ASUI president is more than endorsements and Argonaut advertisements. It's hard work and advocacy. I have always sought to serve and represent the student, and I could do an excellent job in the presidency.

Norm Semanko - With the university's Centennial celebration right around the corner, I think there needs to be a lot of emphasis on improving the ASUI. As president I would want to implement existing services and bring new ones. The ASUI newsletter, From the Senate Floor, an expanded ASUI scholarship program, and appointing an ASUI Judicial Council are all original ideas of mine.

Scott Carter - I'm excited about continuing the projects and programs I've been working on this last year as a senator. I feel the ASUI did a great job, but there is still a great deal more that needs to be worked on and started up.

John Vanderpool - I have served as the vice president's assistant for the past year, and during this time the vice president's office has started new and innovative ideas. I want to continue this tradition and solicit student input on: 1.) building hours 2.) language barrier difficulties 3.) credit status to Chemistry 50 and Math 50 4.) resolve the common final complaints.

What experiences do you have in student government, clubs or organizations?

Brad Cuddy - I feel my experience in the ASUI where I have served as Finance Committee chairman and a member of Rules and Regulations Committee, Activities Board, Communications Board, SUB Board and Political Concerns Board has given me the insight to tackle internal problems while keeping students interests in mind.

Jeff Friel - I was chairman of the Political Concerns Committee 1985-86, administrative assistant to ASUI President Oino White during spring 1986 and elected to the ASUI Senate in the spring of 1986 and 1987. While on the senate I have served as Rules and Regulations Committee member and vice chairman.

Norm Semanko - I have been involved in ASUI government for more than three years. For the last two years I have been an ASUI Senator, serving the past two semesters as president pro tempore. I have served on various boards and committees, including the student Centennial Committee.

Scott Carter - This last year as a senator I served as Rules and Regulations Committee chairman and served on the Finance Committee as well. I'm very active in a number of clubs, including Intercollegiate Knights, Student Alumni Relations Board and a member of the UI Golf Board. I also served as a legislative page in Boise.

John Vanderpool - I have served in the ASUI for the past three and a half years as a senator, faculty council representative and vice president's assistant. My experience in campus clubs includes serving as president of three fraternities; Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Sigma Society and Alpha Zeta; and I am a member of Silver Lance. I have served offices within my living residence, too.

What changes, if any, should be made to improve ASUI Activities Board?

Brad Cuddy - Activities Board appointment dates need to be changed so that the ASUI can begin each semester with a functional board. In addition, the board's funding process and guidelines need to be more clear and accessible to student organizations.

Jeff Friel - The Activities Board needs its rules and regulations tightened up and enforced. The board will do fine once these improvements are made.

Norm Semanko - Activities Board needs to be streamlined. The rules and regulations regarding the board need to be rewritten. An ad hoc committee is presently working on the problem. The Activities Board also needs to realize that its budget was given for student services. They need to allocate student funds, not sit on them.

Scott Carter - As Rules and Regulations Committee chairman, I'm currently working to better clarify and simplify the rules concerning the Activities Board. In a nutshell, the board should set guidelines at the beginning of each fall, submit those to the presidents of clubs and organizations, and then accept requests.

John Vanderpool - The Activities Board should have a clear and explicit format of regulations for donating monies to those groups requesting funds. Moreover, the president of each registered club should receive information on how to apply for funding.

Should the ASUI president and vice president be required to reside in Moscow during the summer?

Brad Cuddy - Effective representation of student interests during the summer is what should be required. Forcing a president to hang his hat in Moscow doesn't ensure this. It also eliminates many students from running for president as most of us must work at home to save enough money to attend college.

Jeff Friel - The current situation warrants having the president on campus during the summer.

Norm Semanko - When someone runs for ASUI president they are making a commitment to serve the students, first and foremost, for an entire year. I think it is important that the president be somewhere close to Moscow during the summer. There are a significant number of students here, and things do come up. Being elected in November, the president has plenty of time before June to find a good summer job somewhere close to or in Moscow.

Scott Carter - Yes, one or the other should be required to stay on campus during the summer. I agree things slow down, but one of the executives should remain on campus in case an incident such as the bookstore moving should arise. Students can't predict what will happen over the summer.

John Vanderpool - The ASUI president should be required to stay in Moscow during the summer. We need the president to represent the students on important university decisions - i.e. the bookstore move and parking. The vice president has never been required to stay in Moscow. The vice president should plan trips to attend important meetings and correspond with senators.

What, if anything, should be done with the campus bookstore?

Brad Cuddy - Above all, the bookstore should remain on campus. However, in addition to the expanded services a new bookstore may offer to students, it should also offer better accessibility to everyone - whether they live in the residence halls, the Greek system or off-campus.

Jeff Friel - The bookstore should not move off campus. The ASUI president needs to work with bookstore management to improve services and lower prices.

Norm Semanko - Quite honestly, I like the bookstore where it is. However, if the university has the money to build a bigger and better store without cost to the students, I say go for it. Let's just keep it on campus, where most students are centrally located. Downtown just isn't practical.

Scott Carter - The bookstore should definitely stay on campus. The bookstore is for students, so why should students have to travel downtown to use it. The administration is being very considerate of students' wants at this time, so I believe it will remain on campus in one of the proposed sights.

John Vanderpool - Most students do not want the bookstore moved off campus where business will be lost to local merchants. On campus sites have been proposed; each site needs extensive research on expenses. Remember, construction of a new building will mandate increase student fees and the SUB will lose rental space. I do not want a fee increase.

Ice show captivates

Disney on ice melts hearts in Pullman

REVIEW BY
M.L. GARLAND

A childhood fantasy with all your favorite friends offers adults and children alike an entertaining escape from daily existence. Goofy brought the whole gang with him in a sports spectacular presentation of Walt Disney's Disney on Ice.

The Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum was transformed into a wonderland of ice and carnival booths for Disney's extravaganza. The Magic Kingdom on Ice proved the enduring quality of Disney for every age group. The show had something for everyone.

Performances by six-time Scandinavian champion and Olympic competitor Kristina Wegelius and 1983 world professional champions Michael Nemic and Penny Booth captured the audience with their spectacular choreography. Particularly memorable was a Nemic and Booth sultry duet to "42nd Street" containing fabulous lifts and spins.

The chorus worked around the plot of Goofy and other favorite Disney characters (Mickey and Minnie Mouse, the Big Bad Wolf, Donald and Daisy Duck, etc.) as they searched to discover a perfect sport for Goofy. The delight of the "younger crowd" was Goofy's comedic gestures and his continuous falling down.

During the football game between Donald's Macho Ducks and Goofy's Gladiators, cheerleaders motivated crowd support for their teams. Select audience members also participated in attending the baseball game where Goofy was "Up to Bat" by riding in motorized trolley cars to the game.

Goofy was able to finish the evening by illustrating the often-forgotten philosophy of the American Dream, "You can do anything if you set your mind to it," by overcoming his clumsiness and winning an Olympic gold medal for ice skating. With this attitude firmly intact, everyone left the coliseum feeling happy and content.

Tickets for the two and a half hour show are on sale at all G&B Select-A-Seat locations.

Band to 'rock for the Rock'

By Jeff Stucker

Edgar Bogart and Christian Lite Band will bring their "rock for the Rock" to the Lionel Hampton School of Music Recital Hall Sunday at 3 p.m.

The Pasco-based band released their first album in December 1985. The band plays a light rock sound with Bogart's lead vocals and arrangements hinting of country influence.

The music is basic, no-frills: bass, drums, keyboard, guitar and lead vocals. Styles on the album range from mellow to motivating.

Christian Lite is introspective and its position in the rock and roll business debate. They realize some condemn rock music, Christian plays or not, but they play it anyway, with a little humor (Some people they don't like the music... But Jesus is the Rock, so let's Rock the Nation — "Rock the Nation").

Their songs talk about the band's beginning, ("We're a Christian Band"), God's calling to people ("At Your Door") or more play on words ("Place in the Sun").

With its rock medium, Christian Lite seems unashamed in letting its Christian light shine through.

Tickets for the Saturday concert are available for $5 at the University of Idaho Bookstore, at Cross-Town Bookstore and at the door.

ARTIST Judy Pfaff discussed her work and how to break into the art world Tuesday during a seminar and slide show. (ARGONAUT Loren Orr)

KUOI to host fundraiser

Saturday night at the KUOI Fundraiser Boogie, $5 will net you all the beer you can drink and all the dancing you can survive, as well as keep student radio operating in Moscow.

"There will be some of the most intense dance music available at the fundraiser, in addition to door prizes," Station Manager Leigh Robartes said. "Some of the prizes we're offering are a dome tent, newspaper subscriptions and movie passes and rentals. All the prizes are donated and there is no purchase necessary to be eligible."

John's Alley in downtown Moscow will be the scene of the 8:30 p.m. gathering, which Robartes said he hopes will provide funds for a new mixing board and a cassette player.

"The only overhead we have for the dance is the beer, John's Alley is providing the room," Robartes said.

Entertainment In Brief

Winefest uncorks at CUB

Wines from Washington State will occupy center stage in the Cascade Room of the Compton Union Building at Washington State University tonight when Sigma Iota, the Hospitality club, hosts Winefest '87.

The event will run from 7-10 p.m. and tickets are $8 at the door. Proceeds help fund guest speakers and field trips for the club, which assists students in training for a career in the hospitality industry.

Conti to direct symphony

Bill Conti, composer of themes for "Rocky" and "Dynasty," will conduct the Spokane Symphony Orchestra Saturday night in the Spokane Opera House.

Tickets for the 3 p.m. performance start at $8.50 and are available at G&B Select-a-Sear outlets, including Cavanaugh's Motor Inn in Moscow.

300 strings to play SUB

One of the largest symphony orchestras ever assembled in the Moscow-Pullman area will appear Saturday night in the SUB Ballroom as part of the UI's 20th annual String Festival.

More than 300 strings and 20 wind ensemble and percussion players from 17 high school orchestras will assemble for the concert, which starts at 7:30 in the ballroom.

Directing the combined group will be UI Music Professor William Wharton, who will lead them through Telemann's "Don Quixote Suite," Franz Waxman's "Carmen Fantasy," Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," Khachaturian's "Gayane Suite" and Mussorgsky's "Great Gate at Kiev." Soloist for "Carmen Fantasy" will be internationally-known violinist Oswald Lehnert.

In addition to performing with the combined symphony, Lehnert will conduct a master class for violinists at 1 p.m. in the University Auditorium. Also in the University Auditorium, Alan Rawson will lead the UI Orchestra in an afternoon performance. Admission to both performances is free.

Film a thriller wanna-be

Acting saves heavy-handed horror of Fatal Attraction

REVIEW BY KIRK LAUGHLIN

Call it glitzy garbage, call it sensational, call it manipulative — all that'd be correct, but it doesn't preclude Fatal Attraction from making its audience sweat cold bullets for two hours.

Let's get it out in the open right off the bat — director Adrian Lyne is a schlockmeister worthy of no artistic consideration. This is the guy, after all, who swallowed any pride he might've ever had and insulted everyone's intelligence with the film-length video Flashdance.

But Fatal Attraction's screaming jealousy of a plot bloats itself on this trashiness, making it into a decadently entertaining descent into sexuality and terror.

The film kicks into gear almost from the first frame, taking only minimal time to set the background. The successful lawyer (Michael Douglas) has a lovely wife (Anne Archer), and while she and his angelic little girl are out of town, he has a very graphic affair with a publishing firm's representative (Glenn Close).

Close, though, is not satisfied with only a weekend and starts to intrude on Douglas' life with demands to stay at her apartment, phone calls at home and by showing up at the office. And finally, she goes deeper and deeper into her neuroticism until . . .

Well, most of the fun of Fatal Attraction comes from following its murderously simple plot. And Lyne cranks up the fright machine with complete abandon of subtlety. The camera zooms claustrophobically close to the ringing phone, to Douglas' face, to pictures of his family and on the dark, rainy streets of New York. Lyne is simply not ashamed to have his film writ on people's nerves no matter how heavy-handed the technique is, such as cross-cutting from the playfulness of music and activity at a carnival to Archer driving panicked and reckless through traffic.

According to reports, screen-on Elm Street and Friday the Thirteenth terrorized the primal drives of youth.

Her dizzying performance actually gives a human, lonely core to the woman who lets her neurosis finally get the best of her. Even during her most sadistic actions, it is hard not to feel pity for her character because of the empathy Close gives her.

The character considerations are part of the fun, but at its heart, Fatal Attraction wants to be a thriller. Lyne merrily borrows from Psycho, Dressed to Kill, and in its final scare-fest, even Friday the Thirteenth. Close's insane gibberings even are lifted a bit from Jack Nicholson's descent into madness in The Shining.

That Nicholson is brought to mind is ironic because a broad similarity exists between Fatal Attraction and this summer's Witches of Eastwick. In both these films, all the parts fit well and are fun, although by the end some of them come to represent exercises in quality filmmaking rather than contributing to the whole of the movie.

But the artistic weakness has already been pointed out and discarded. Lyne's not concerned with the brain of his audience. He's more interested in making a ringing phone seem threatening, in backlighting silhouettes, in breaking glass and in squirting some blood around.

Fatal Attraction is fast and slick with drops and twists so sudden it makes you gasp. See it ready to spend some quiet time afterward to let your ragged nerves untie themselves.

On the Screen

FATAL ATTRACTION

writer James Dearden changed the ending to the violent climax we get after a test audience rejected a more psychological one. Perhaps it discards the humanity of the action in lieu of shock piled on shock, but it fits perfectly with the rest of the cliff-hangers.

Lyne, actually, gets a better film than he deserves because of the high caliber of the acting. Douglas, more of a full presence here than he's been before in Jewel of the Nile and Romancing the Stone, makes good use of his role as a concerned family man who's haunted by his indiscretion. Archer gives the wife a compassion which makes Douglas' actions even more despicable.

It is Close, though, that keeps Fatal Attraction from becoming a mere horror movie which punishes adult passion as A Nightmare

JAMES Tennant battles with WSU competition at the Vandal Invitational. Tennant will represent UI at district Championships this weekend. (ARGONAUT/John Fritz)

CC runs to district

BY MICHAEL LEWIS

The men's and women's cross country teams will be ready to go on Saturday as they travel to Salt Lake City for their final meet of the season, the NCAA District VII Championships. For the men, the meet will also serve as the Big Sky Championship Meet.

The men will be relying on sophomore standout Mark Esvelt, who figures to have a good chance at a top ten finish.

"I think Mark has a good chance to crack the top ten in the Big Sky if he runs like he is ready to," men's Coach Mike Keller said. "He tends to run better on flat courses and this one is quite flat."

Esvelt has won two meets already this season, the most recent was the Wandermere Invitational two weeks ago, where he finished the five-mile course in 25:11. Other Vandal harriers to keep an eye out for include James Tennant, Mitch Drew and Sean O'Connor, who finished 18th, 22nd and 30th at the Wandermere Invitational.

"If James (Tennant) runs as well as he's capable, he too could be in the top ten," Keller said.

Keller said that Weber State College is "far and above" the best team in the conference and will be tough to beat, followed by Montana, Northern Arizona and Boise State. He said that the Van-

"It's not something that people want to hear," Keller said, "but somebody's got to be last, and it looks like it's going to be us."

The team will be competing not only against Big Sky schools but teams from the Western Athletic Conference and some independents as well. The Big Sky scoring will exclude those teams.

On the women's side, Paula Parsell looks to be the one to beat, as she finished 14th at the Mountain West Championships. However, Missy Madsen, who finished 20th in 19:40, was not far behind. Women's Coach Scott Lorek said he expects a competitive meet.

"We've been real consistent all year, except for the (Mountain West) Conference meet, but the week off helped and I expect the whole team to have a good race," Lorek said. "The conference meet was a disappointing race; some of the runners didn't handle the altitude well but understood that that was something they had no control over."

The men's team will be competing on a 10,000 meter course (about 6.2 miles), while the ladies will run 5,000 meters (3.1 miles). The races are set to begin at 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. PST.

Spikers host Cougs, head to see Eagles

BY JULIE HOHBACH

The spikers' last home game ended in defeat last night against Washington State University. WSU won in three games 15-8, 5-4 and 15-13.

Although Idaho had a booming start with a 6-1 lead in the first game, they could not hold off the Cougars.

Susan Deskines led the playing with nine kills and seven digs. Junior Kesha Christensen rallied with the best defensive match of her season with 17 digs.

"Our inability to block against them was the difference in the match," Coach Pam Bradetich said. "They were hitting and using our blocks more effectively."

Bradetich said the Lady Vandals out-served and out-passed WSU, but Idaho could not stop their attack.

"Kesha had an outstanding match from the back row and we served much better than we have in the past," Bradetich said.

She said Stacey Asplund and Dawn Colston had good offensive nights and the back row defense was good.

"Susan Deskines got the crucial kills for us, we depend on her in offensive pressure situations," Bradetich said.

The spikers face the last game of the season tomorrow as they play Eastern Washington University in a Mountain West Conference match.

"This is an important match for us because it is the last one of the season," Bradetich said. "It is also an important match for EWU because if they win it will give them an 8-8 record and all teams like to reach that 500 mark."

Eastern Washington is a senior-dominated team and this is their last home match of the year. Bradetich said they will be prepared and excited to play.

Bradetich said she is not glad the season is coming to an end and some important improvements could be made if they had more time.

"We're struggling constantly with changes in the line-up and inconsistency with skill," she said. "The team is suffering from frustration and they don't know how to deal with it."

"We want to play hard and well, and by beating Eastern it will help relieve some of the frustration," she said.

Bradetich said they want to win as badly as anyone else but the team needs to take care of some problems. She said they have a lot of work ahead of them.

Bradetich said the team is not a quitting group but they have some things to improve before next year.

"We haven't achieved some of the goals we set at the beginning of the season," Bradetich said. "Our roles are better identified now, the whole season was spent experimenting with position changing and new players learning the game."

"Karen Thompson, a freshman, understands the game better and she has improved overall," Bradetich said. "She understands what it takes to be better."

Two of the Lady Vandals are out with injuries. Julie Hansen, a leader on the floor, had been suffering from knee problems all year. Marianne Moore has an achilles injury.

Bradetich said the injuries are part of the cause of frustration experienced by the team.

Wednesday night's game will be broadcast on Idaho Television channel 8 tonight at 7 p.m.

Rugby closes with UO, OSU

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

IN the last home match Dan Brennan attempts to evade oncoming tackles from WSU players.
 (ARGONAUT/Henry Moore)

This weekend marks the end of the 1987 fall season for University of Idaho ruggers as they host two tough teams from the coast to close the season.

Come rain or shine Saturday, the University of Oregon will face an Idaho Rugby Club thirsty for a strong closing win, while Oregon State University will be given the same treatment Sunday.

UI, with its 1-1 league stat box, needs to win over both UO and OSU in league matches this weekend.

"These two are the most important games of the season," team captain Matt Hansen said. "This weekend is a must-win."

Although the fall season comes to a close Sunday, the league stat boxes are carried into spring '88 when rugby continues.

Idaho lost a tough league match to University of Washington by two fluke tries and two interceptions during a Halloween visit to the coast.

Hansen said the team is as strong as it has ever been and the overall season record exemplifies this, but they will be challenged to the limit this weekend.

"We lost last year to both clubs and it is traditional that OSU is the stronger side in the league," Hansen said.

Saturday's game is slated for 1 p.m. and Sunday's action at noon. Both matches are at the Intramural Field.

Vandal in the Spotlight Kari Krebsbach competes like veteran

BY JULIE HOHBACH

There is as much spunk in Kari Krebsbach's personality as there is in her running. Not only is she second best on the Lady Vandals cross country team, but she is running like a veteran at the meets. Funny thing is she is only a freshman on the team.

Coming from Vancouver, Washington, Krebsbach has proven herself to be a great asset to University of Idaho.

Head Coach Scott Lorek said her best race was at the Washington Invitational. She placed 14th, running the five-mile course in 18:26 at the race on Oct. 17.

"It was a really hilly course and Kari ran it the best she could have," Lorek said.

Krebsbach, on the other hand, feels she will run better in the future.

"I want to feel really good because if I feel really good then I know I can run a good race," she said. "I'm always looking out to do the best I can."

"Kari came in and hasn't had adjustment problems of college competition," Lorek said. "She came in and ran to her potential right-off, while some freshmen suffer from adjustment shocks."

Lorek said Krebsbach was anxious to prove herself in a positive way. He said she wanted to prove herself right off.

"She had a high desire to run well, so she trained hard and she mentally well-trained herself," Lorek said.

"I have always been confident of her. I never worried she would have a bad day. Because her freshman year was such a success, her next four years here should be an outstanding performance."

Being a freshman requires a lot from a runner. Krebsbach claims the studying is the same as any other student, but the practicing is unique.

"I really like college running better than high school because you can work out alone," she said. "You are more on your own so you have to be more dedicated to yourself and the team."

"Nobody tells you what you have to do, you really have to want to run." Krebsbach must love to run because she has really pulled through and become a top runner on the team.

About her coach, Krebsbach said, "he's the greatest!" "I couldn't have asked for anything better."

Grid Machine takes a bye

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

The sixth-ranked University of Idaho Vandals will take their first bye of the season this weekend.

Although UI will not be racking wins towards the 25th Silver Anniversary Big Sky Conference Championships, tension will still mount as Weber State faces Nevada-Reno.

If Weber, who is just one notch behind UI, loses to Nevada Saturday, then UI will be guaranteed the title along with the automatic playoff berth that comes with a Big Sky championship.

However, if Weber defeats the Wolf Pack, then Nov. 21 will be the big day in the Big Sky as both Idaho and Weber play conference games to determine the Big Sky question!

Sportshorts

VOLLEYBALL

Spikers will be closing out the season Saturday in the second meeting with Eastern Washington University Eagles this season. The last match of the fall season will take place in Cheney at 7:30 p.m. Tonight, volleyball fans will have another chance to view Wednesday night's match against Washington State University. Broadcast time will be 7 p.m. on Cable Channel 8.

VANDAL FOOTBALL

The Idaho Grid Machine will be on vacation this weekend in preparation for what could be called the biggest game of the season when Boise State Broncos come calling Nov. 21.

RUGBY

The ruggers will see two of their more important matches of the season this weekend as they host league matches with the University of Oregon and Oregon State University. Saturday, UO will face Idaho at 1 p.m., while Sunday will bring an exciting match with the OSU powerhouse at noon. Both matches will be at the Intramural Field. NOTE: This weekend marks the end of the fall season for UI ruggers. Last chance to catch Idaho rugby action until spring 88!

Dearest UPS- Yours is the only decent tract I've appraised in ages. Interest rates are low. The market is wide open. Advise if a purchase on my part is in order. Any good packages since we last met. -Mr. Real Estate

Mischa- Get lost in any red-bush lately? We're glad you found your way home (but I'm jealous). Tell us if you develop any ant bites. -the sisters from Hell

Timmee- I didn't know that werewolves had such big organs. Thanks but now we're developing liver spots! -the ghouls

Ryan- Can't wait till next year! -Ollie

Sweet No. 16- Nice Move! Wishing you luck and lots of playing time against BSU. -Love, your greatest fan Alpha Gams love their house mom - Hazel! Thanks for everything you do.

Dvoire- Doc's was fun but next time we wear the boots! No bruises. They're evidence. -Yip!

Yip!

Dara- if you really want to roll in those blue sheets, you'd better go find a new Greek. We're watching over our boys! -some TKE sisters; PR and KM

To the Delta Sigs- The ouija board is gonna get you. -Madison

Happy 22nd birthday, Brian H!!!! Hope yesterday was great!! -Love, Little Sigmas

The president of Snow Hall and one charming guy- I'm sorry I tried to interfere with Utopia Friday night. Don't think I'm evil. But you still owe me five!

Hey first floor Campbell Hall! Bonjour is dead! Services will be held today at 3 p.m. Tissues will be provided.

Ken, Clay- Can't you fill your prophylactic with something besides booze? -MA

DM- You're no poot. Please don't leave the family though. We love you and want you to stay, but you have to behave yourself. Stay cool and tell those men to mind their manners. -BKA

Skittle Man- Let's get some counseling! OK? What did that cuff link have to do with anything? Can I climb on a pool table this weekend too? -Love, Gunter

Hey No. 20- I heard your name 58 times on the radio Saturday! Does this mean you're HOT? I always knew you were! Great game Todd! -Love, your greatest fan

LaVonda- No booze, no class-skippin', NO men!!! No wonder we're shouting from the back lanal "Hark, the happy roomies shout five more weeks till we get out!! Are we turning Japanese? -Sincerely, ZoElla

Hey God of Metal- Happy 24th!! Look forward to celebrating with you!! -Affection and leather, Nance

My Darling D- A thousand thanks. As always your words of wisdom came at a most opportune time. As a result my head rests securely above my shoulders and my body inhabits not a padded cell. -Celestial Kisses...K

Comm 431- We'll B.C.ing you!

BURP!...oh, excuse me Catherine.

Weiser and Girls- Good luck in the Big One. Watch out Salt Lake.

Looking Good, Brad!!! -KLS

Hazel- Congratulations, you infamous flirt! You are the greatest house mom. We love you very much!! -Love your AGDs

Hey Lindley Stud-Muffin- You know and I know you aren't perfect and not all the girls on campus love you. How about going out to buy some underwear!?!? -The Canuck

BSCBDL- The fivesome hot tubbin' action was way fun! Better than "vegetables," that's for sure! Thanks for the eve 'o fun and thanks for being such a swell guy! Love you! -KLS

Yes, I like Pina Colada and getting caught in the rain. I am not into health foods; I am into champagne. I've got to meet you by tomorrow noon, and cut through all this red tape. At a bar called O' Malley's where we'll plan our escape.

Norm, I love you lots and I wish you the best of luck! -RN

Remington- so glad you're here! It's great to see someone from that wonderful school up here! I'll call you soon! -your ACO friend

Leis- Thanks for the articles last week. They opened my eyes! I guess that's life! I will miss you. -EX Apt. 5 Dweller

Godmom- I luva luva luva you! Glad to see you're sticking around, have to keep an eye on your business interests! Expect lots of visits. -your assistant

Gewie Weenie- Thanks a bunch for the party. Jackie Jr. loves you! -Hugs and kisses

TFH- This one is just from me. I "like" you. -Greg Pookie- Love slave is becoming too possessive don't you think? I deserve at least one night a week. -The Hand

Greg- Thanks for all the fun on third floor. I'll miss you, but at least I'll still be in Moscow! -your partner in crime

Hey Fool- Here is your personal! Now I hope this brightens your week! By the way, how's Lisa?! -Fetto from Hell

Little Muff- Hey baby! I need you as a roommate to make me clean up my act. You're a joy in my life! -Super Senior Stob

Thomas from Hell- You can run but you can't hide. You wouldn't really leave the three of us would you? Just try! No sacrifice is too great! We have Vays! -T and A and LS

Darry- Thanks for five great moments on the Band Trip! Want five cigs, five beers, and five mashes. How about five trays with five plates and five deep fried burritos? -Five flags

Cath honey- I'm glad you remembered where you live, however your feet belong on the floor. You can't walk on air forever! I did make note that you were home by 11:30 p.m.

Punkin'- Sorry to see you go but I understand and you are released from your promise. Plan to see and talk to me lots! Love you! -your second semester pledge sister Boss- Despite all pleas to the contrary, I missed you. I'm glad you're back! -"Super" A.

FAST FOR WORLD HARVEST

THURSDAY NOVEMBER 19th

Millions are starving right now in Africa, and you can help by simply giving up a meal. Oxfam America — give up a meal or a whole days worth of meals and donate your food money to Oxfam America for self help development and disaster relief programs in Africa, Asia, and Latin America.

HERE'S HOW TO MAKE YOUR DONATION WORK:

- If you live in the Dorms, all you have to do is sign up on your hall. Then go to the cafeteria and have your ID card punched once.
- If you live in a Greek house all you have to do is see your president for a donation.
- If you live off campus simply drop off your donations at the Campus Christian Center, the L.D.S. Institute, or St. Augustine's Catholic Center.
- Even if you are not a student, you can still donate to this needy cause.

HUNGER IN ACTION AT THE UI

Sponsored by:

Campus Christian Center, LDS Institute, St. Augustine's Catholic Center and the ASUI:

Brian Long, ASUI President

David Dose, ASUI Vice-President

And these ASUI Senators: Brian Allen, Geianne Blick, Scott Carter, Brad Cuddy, Anissa Faddis, Jeff Friel, Mike Gotch, Tina Kagi, Lynn Major, Wende Porter, Norm Semanko, Robert Watson, Molly Weyen.
