Cuddy, Carter take top ASUI spots

BY DAWN BOBBY

After waiting two hours for the final four tallies, candidates saw Brad Cuddy win a strong 164-point lead against Norm Semanko in the ASUI Presidential election Wednesday night.

When the first precinct tallies (the absentees and the Administration Building) came in, Semanko garnered a 64-24 lead.

"I'm really surprised," Semanko said. "The (Administration Building) is mostly New Greek Row — that one and Wallace (Complex) were the ones I was worried about."

Semanko was in for an even bigger surprise when the Agricultural Science Building tallies gave Cuddy an 111-point jump. Last year, there were about 50 total votes from the Ag Science precinct. This year, the turnout tripled.

"We had a feeling that maybe they got those two mixed up (the Administration and the Ag Building)," Cuddy said in a later interview. "Of course, it doesn't matter now, but then we were really wondering."

Cuddy did not spend Wednesday evening in front of the SUB Information Desk. He left right after the Administration tallies came in, saying, "I don't know, it doesn't look good." But he continued to call the Senate office at regular intervals to monitor his progress.

At midnight, an hour after all spectators except candidates and the media had been evicted from the premises, the four biggest precinct tallies started coming in: the Library, Wallace Complex, Renfrew, and the SUB.

The final results were:

PRESIDENT

- Brad Cuddy — 698
- Norm Semanko — 534
- Jeff Friel — 226
- Bruce Skaug — 49

VICE PRESIDENT

- Scott Carter — 836
- John Vanderpool — 623

SENATOR

- Tina Kagi — 1,133
- Mike Gotch — 1,036
- Craig McCurry — 985
- Leslie Danielson — 947
- Brett Kleffner — 862
- Sean Wall — 754
- Mac Scott Brandon — 725
- Johnathan Williams — 643

A LETTER from the EDITOR

Love is a many-splendored thing. But if you really want to have some fun, just ask students here what they hate about Boise State University.

That's exactly what the Argonaut has been doing for the past two weeks. And after sorting through more than 30 entries, we're printing the top responses to our "I hate BSU" (in 25 words or less) contest.

The winner of the contest, who will be announced Saturday during the Idaho-BSU game, will receive a free $30 dinner at the University-Inn Best Western Broiler.

The top finalists entries are:

• Kari Harder

"Blue and orange. The last thing I saw that was blue and orange was a to-go cup at Zip Trip. I can't respect that."

• Diane & Lois Griffiths

"Our hatred for BSU is a genetic trait inherited from our UI alum parents, who still refer to it as BIC (Boise Junior College)."

• Harvey Griggs

"Although I have only just arrived from Australia, I hate Boise State because they are all that stand between the Vandals and a playoff berth."

• Karen Scharbach

"I was manager for three seasons and the coach won't let 'em wash their jocks! Look, I'm not supposed to tell anybody this."

• Rob Norwood

"I hate Boise State because it's the right thing to do."

• Michael Ferron

"Ninety-nine percent of the BSU student body is an apathetic flock of jello-headed sheep who wouldn't know a meaningful social issue if it bit them..."

• Sean Wall

"Orange jerseys and blue turf are two signs of BSU's negative worth. I don't know why they mess with us, because Boise's problem is obvious!"

• Heidi Borgen

"I hate Boise State because they suck."

SAY what! Team Borah won the GDI Week airband competition. Snow Hall got first place with the song "I Hate BSU" (ARGONAUT/ Tim Bankquist)

Halls battle for GDI Week title

BY ERIK SIMPSON

The fourth annual GDI Week, which began Monday with a scavenger hunt and airband competition, is winding down and will end Saturday with a fun run through campus.

Teams will not know until this weekend who won the six-day celebration.

Kicking off the events Monday, Borah Hall won the scavenger hunt for the third year in a row, while Whitman Hall took second place also for the third continuous year. Chrisman Hall finished third in the event.

Borah Hall president Mike

Fleming said his team won because all team members know the campus real well.

"We were really organized because a lot of us had been on the team before," he said.

For the women's halls, Olesen finished first, French took second and Forney Hall ended up with a third place effort.

A paper airplane toss, a new event in the GDI Week competition, took place Tuesday. Snow, Shoup and Borah Hall finished in order while women's halls: Houston, Olesen and Carter placed in the top three.

On Wednesday, students had the opportunity to bring back childhood memories with a tricycle race in the upper level of the Kibbie Dome. For the women, Campbell Hall took first while Houston and Steel came in second and third. Shoup, Snow and Graham Hall finished in the top three for the men's halls.

The GDI Games also took place on Wednesday in the Kibbie Dome. The games involved events in pyramid building, tug of war, obstacle course and keg toss.

For the men, Targhee Hall dominated the pyramid building and obstacle course. The women of Steel House also finished first in two events — the keg toss and tug of war.

Thursday evening events included a skit competition.

Controversy about this paper's "I Hate BSU" contest has been growing since early in the week, when Idahonian publisher James Shelledy balked at the contest's wording. Since Monday, Argonaut employees have been contacted by reporters from as far away as Hayward, Calif., and have had on-camera news interviews with Lewiston's KLEW Channel 3 and Boise's KBCI Channel 2.

Instructors cancelling class: Administration has mixed views on subject

BY DAVE JOHANSON

Thanksgiving break doesn't begin until next Wednesday, but this does not necessarily mean that all classes will be held up until that date.

According to certain students, some professors have decided to take an early break and not hold their classes on Monday or Tuesday.

Freshman Todd Doane said that one of his instructors said she might not be there on Monday and hopes she doesn't get in trouble for it. Doane said that there is an assignment due that day but students were instructed to drop it off at their instructor's office.

Freshman Paula Kilmartin said that one of her professors told the class that "class will be held but attendance will not be taken on Monday" and that they could consider it a Christmas gift.

Director of Admissions Matt Telin said of the cancellations, "Professors should not be cancelling their classes at all on Monday or Tuesday because those days are not holidays and they should be holding their classes as usual."

In contrast to Telin's view, Faculty Secretary Bruce Bray said, "Professors are in charge of their own classes."

He said that from his experience in the classroom, it's very difficult to plan the class around the students because half of them leave for vacation early and then want to know what they missed when they get back.

Despite the contrasting views of the administration, freshman Scott McCoid said the same thing that most students did when asked about their professors cancelling class, "I wish more of my classes were cancelled next week."

Morris says users to blame, not drugs

BY ALAN SOLAN

Former Miami Dolphin football star Eugene "Mercury" Morris said Tuesday night there is no such thing as drug abuse.

Morris addressed a crowd of about 400 at the University of Idaho SUB Ballroom. He has been on the lecture circuit since being released from the Florida prison system in June 1986.

"Mercury" Morris

Morris, 40, was arrested in August 1983 for his role in a cocaine sale to an undercover police officer. After three and a half years behind bars, he was released on the grounds that he had been entrapped by the police.

The problem is with people and the choices they make, not with the drugs, Morris said. What is known as "drug abuse" would more correctly be called "self abuse," he said.

"Drugs are symptoms, not problems," Morris said. "We've lost the concept of what the drug problem is about."

The drug problem in America, Morris said, could be referred to as "the house of abuse." He said it is impossible to get to the house of abuse without travelling down the "road of use."

IF they (drug users) are led to believe that the drug is more important than they, we've got a problem."

- Eugene "Mercury" Morris

"We gather around the house and say, 'hey, we've got to do something about that house' when we should be doing something about the people on the road."

Morris said it is wrong to blame the drug problem on the drug rather than on the user. People are free to make their own choices, he said.

"If they are led to believe that the drug is more important than they are, we've got a problem," he said.

Advice is better than a command in dealing with the drug problem, Morris said. If a person sees a sign that says "do not enter" they want to enter just because they are commanded not to. A sign that says "wrong way" is more effective, he said.

ONLY in the last five years have I realized the necessity of growing up as I'm growing old."

- Eugene "Mercury" Morris

Advice about drugs that says "wrong way" rather than a command of "don't do drugs!" will do more to combat the drug problem, Morris said.

He said he disagrees with having anti-drug spokespeople such as Nancy Reagan who have no personal experience with drugs.

"I've been there," he said. Morris said his way of looking at life has changed.

"My mindset when I was in the pros was, if I have a car that goes 150 mph, I might as well drive 150 mph."

Morris ended the evening by telling the crowd they had the power to choose to be their own best friend or their own worst enemy. Morris said he has made the former choice for himself.

"Only in the last five years have I realized the necessity of growing up as I am growing old," he said.

Cars cancel concert

Promoters for the rock group The Cars have canceled the group's Jan. 20 concert at Washington State University.

According to WSU Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum officials, ticket refunds can be obtained from outlets where the tickets were originally purchased.

Physics group honored

The University of Idaho chapter of the Society of Physics Students has been given outstanding chapter recognition by the national organization office.

The UI chapter is one of only 30 chapters across the U.S. to receive the designation for 1987.

Mike Browne, adviser for the UI chapter, said the award is based primarily on the chapter's ongoing activities and the achievements of Michael Watrous, who was one of three students selected nationally to receive a scholarship recognizing his achievements as a physics major.

UI Prof receives Fulbright

Edwin Krumpe, associate professor of wildland recreation management at the University of Idaho's College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences, has been awarded a Fulbright Senior Scholar Award to study recreation decision-making in Australia.

Krumpe is the college's first Fulbright scholar. He was chosen for one of 16 Fulbright posts in Australia from among some 200 applicants.

Thanksgiving library hours

The library will be open for the following hours during Thanksgiving break:

Nov. 24-25	Tuesday, Wednesday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Nov. 26	Thursday CLOSED
Nov. 27	Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Nov. 28	Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Nov. 29	Sunday Regular hours resume

Corrections and Clarifications

In the Nov. 17 Argonaut front page photo, Houston Hall member Shannon Krasselt was incorrectly identified as a hall president. The actual Houston Hall president, Anne Funke, said Wednesday that her hall's "Screw Your Roommate party" should not be viewed as an "early kickoff to GDI Week activities." The Argonaut regrets this error.

Top executives teach course

BY JEFF STUCKER

If you are interested in corporate business you may have a chance next semester to attend a class taught by top executives.

The World of Corporate Business, a three-credit class open to students above junior standing in any major, will be taught by 15 executives from 13 companies ranging from Albertson's to Wang Laboratories, said Larry Merk, coordinator of the course.

"Dialogue with the speakers is one of the key features of the course," Merk said.

Students in the class will have a chance to meet the instructors in small-group luncheons and receptions held before or after the class, which meets 3:30 on Mondays and Wednesdays.

Corporations pay for the cost of sending the executive and sometimes add a little extra, Merk said.

"Last year one of the corporations hosted a reception for the entire class down at Best Western," he said.

Executives will teach on Mondays, and class is extended to one and a half hours to allow for thoroughness.

Merk will teach on Wednesdays, which will be for summary and transition between the wide range of topics.

Starting a business, the international arena, why corporations fail, corporate culture and politics and human resources are some of the topics planned for discussion.

Some executives Merk listed include John Fery, chief executive officer of Boise Cascade; John Kucharski, president of EG&G — from Boston, the prime contractor for the Idaho Nuclear Engineering Laboratory — and Dan Nelson CEO for Moore Financial Group — the company that owns Idaho First National Bank.

Merk said enrollment for the class is limited to 75 students.

"First come, first served," Merk said.

Interested students may contact Merk at the College of Business and Economics.

SAR seeks ASUI affiliation

University of Idaho Navy ROTC midshipmen will use their field training skills to search and save this year as members of the newly-formed university Search and Rescue (SAR) team.

"Five years ago there was an SAR team from the university, so we are just reviving that organization," junior Dave Waterman said. "As soon as we are an officially-sanctioned university activity, we may be eligible for funds that would allow us to buy more equipment and have more training events."

Currently, the team uses equipment loaned from the Naval ROTC unit and personal gear of the members. After affiliation, it will be eligible for funds and equipment from the county.

The group's training is something Waterman also wants to expand.

"Two weeks ago, we had a training session with the Palouse-Clearwater Search and Rescue team," he said. "We covered rappelling, rope management and high-angle rescue techniques. Hopefully, we will be able to continue learning new skills."

The organization, consisting of 12 UI NROTC members, will assist other area search and rescue teams in the event of a rescue operation. They will be responsive to the Latah County Sheriff, just as other local teams.

"Latah County has one of the best search and rescue organizations in the state," Skip Stratton, new adviser for the team, said. "It consists of the Explorer and Snowmobile teams, the Mountain Rescue Association, the horse posse and now us."

Members of the UI group are divided into three-member teams in which they will train and possibly hit the trail in search of a missing person.

"Basically, we're the ground-pounders," Waterman said. "We take care of the ground-search stuff and assist the other teams."

When we have more training, we'll be able to participate more."

Training is the main goal of the team for now, and they will study land navigation, mountain rescue and tracking in coming months.

Put an end to Prohibition

The University of Idaho is a decade behind the times, at least as far as alcohol consumption policies are concerned.

And Wednesday, a Latah County magistrate told local security officials that to their faces.

Judge William Hamlet said that security officials were out of line when they tried to use a 1917 law to prosecute a Kennewick woman who allegedly tried to smuggle a couple of beers and a wine cooler into the Kibbie Dome.

The "prohibition era" law, which allows facility managers to prescribe rules of conduct, requires that those managers clearly post the rules for everyone to read. Technically, the State Board of Education controls the dome, and must approve or reject dome rules before they can go into effect.

But in the courtroom Wednesday, UI officials could not produce a recent board-approved dome alcohol policy.

In fact, the most recent board-approved policy they could conjure up was 10 years old. And although the UI has a more recent policy, university officials could not prove that it had the State Board's okay.

So how does that affect your life?

Well, it means that barring further developments, dome security forces probably won't be able to arrest students trying to smuggle alcohol into the game Saturday.

But they can still confiscate any alcohol, and police will still be on hand to issue "open container" citations (covered by Moscow City law) to anyone caught drinking alcohol in the dome.

In the meantime, you can bet that administration officials will be scampering to make sure that the State Board passes a dome alcohol policy at their December meeting.

And that's really unfortunate.

Because instead of trying to re-ratify campus prohibition, its time that university officials listened to what students and alumni have been telling them for years: IT'S NOT 1919 ANYMORE.

Its time for President Gibb to bring the UI out of the dark ages. Allow the consumption of alcohol in the dome.

- Paul ALee

FACT: THIS DECEMBER, IRAN WILL OFFICIALLY PROHIBIT ALL AMERICAN TOURISTS.

Racism: Senators slant the issue

A short while ago a young man of Asian descent told me he had visited a fraternity house (which shall remain nameless) in order to see a friend of his from high school.

Upon exiting the house, the young man was shocked to find a group (mob, if you will) of fraternity "brothers" looking towards him with their fingers pressed against the outside corners of their eyes in order to mimic what first-graders refer to as "Chinese eyes."

Not ones to let such a good joke die, the clever "frat" boys then started speaking a gibberish which no doubt sounded a lot like Chinese or Japanese.

The young man said he was shocked to find such a crass display of racism on the UI campus, a place he assumed would be inhabited by intelligent individuals of a greater mind-set than that displayed at the fraternity.

I told him I was afraid that he would find such bigotry (in varying degrees) in other areas of the campus as well. I added, however, that there are a lot of decent human beings on the UI campus that are a great many steps up the evolutionary ladder than those he encountered.

Still, he asked how he should handle such encounters. Unable to come up with any other solution, I told him to "ignore it." We were both unsatisfied with my answer.

The next day, however, I was astounded to see that the ASUI Senate, in their infinite wisdom, had already attacked the problem!

Matt Helmick
Commentary

In the Nov. 2 ASUI (public relations) Newsletter, From The Senate Floor, there is a headline reading, "Senate Takes Stand Against Bigotry." Under this bold proclamation we find that the ASUI Senate has a resolution which states "that the Associated Students of the University of Idaho condemn the actions and ideologies of the Aryan Nations and all Neo-Nazi organizations."

Now, this is all well and good and certainly earth-shattering, but it hardly solves any of the UI's own bigotry problems.

Especially those caused by the ASUI Senate.

The ASUI Senate this week is issuing a survey to UI students in order to identify foreign instructors with problems speaking English. The survey, narrowed to foreign speaking instructors, is unfair because it targets foreign instructors and does not attempt to deal with the communication or instructional problems of all instructors in general.

It is a stupid issue. If a student is having a problem with his instructor, he or she can always approach the dean of his or her particular school or college and issue the complaint. It only takes a little initiative (all right, call it balls!). There is no need for a survey.

Aahh, and about that resolution. I don't suppose it could have been a reaction against the negative press the ASUI Senate has been getting about their silly little survey, could it?

NOTE TO OVERLY-SENSITIVE SENATORS: Please note that I didn't call anyone a bigot in this commentary. That is not to say, of course, that there aren't any bigots in the ASUI Senate.

Arg editor ad contains racism

Editor:

For at least two weeks the Argonaut has been advertising for the position of editor. Assuming the Argonaut is an equal-opportunity employer, it disturbs me to see an ad which appears to depict a faceless caucasian male in a 3-piece suit with the words "Your Face Here" spelled out over his blank expression.

Well, believe me, not everyone's face will fill the space provided, but I hope when it comes time to select a new editor, that all potential candidates are considered equally.

David George

Skaug should be very 'red'-faced

Editor:

Calling someone a communist in public is like yelling "fire" in a movie theater to get the seats you want (no wonder it goes through a renaissance every two years or so). Some people's heads perk up like a hungry ferret's at the mention of the word. Communism? WHERE??

As Bruce Skaug would probably say, just in most areas of the planet, where people have not asked for U.S. approval, have never even seen a TV evangelist, have only a rudimentary understanding of the concept of crew-neck sweaters. Places like Angola, where the U.S. government funds, along with South Africa, the UN-ITA rebels (like you need a hole in the head...). Were people die of starvation because the alternative might be having your legs blown off by a rebel-laid mine, a Freedom Fighter mine, while trying to cultivate your field, and THEN starving.

It's in Chile, too, where the anti-Marxist government has done away with the messy business of torture and its built-in public relations headaches in favor of decapitation; where the Ronald Mc-Reagan freedom fighters are conspicuous in their absence.

Hell, Bruce, there's probably a couple of closet commies right here on campus. But that's the price we pay in a free society for growing up on fluoridated water.

It's an epidemic. I wonder why? Even in areas of the country where people still think of a Trojan as a USC player and have never seen our TV president on the networks cuz he's always on opposite of "Wheel of Fortune" (but know for a FACT that communists' children are taught how to play dominoes even before they've been electrically prodded to say "comrade"). Yes, our telepresident Ronald Wilson Reagan, who may not grasp the more subtle nuances of foreign policy, like putting a period after the W when signing important foreign policy documents, but at 76 years, and even with a twinge of neck bob, can still command free air time to prey on the drunken passion of generations such as his, nursed on the Evil Empire rhetoric, who've seen all the movies and know that communism is not a product of poverty and injustice - it's an evil vision of world destiny. But reading between the teleprompter lines opens up a whole nuther can of worms - independent thought - and there's no room for that in a black and white world (that's red all over).

Do the Russians or Nicaraguans love their children, Bruce? I imagine their kids are so busy with their communist party youth leagues (especially in rural Nicaragua) that they rarely see each other.

Better dead than red? Is there no blush of embarrassment for splattering such sloppy pseudo factual drivel (65,000 Cubans?? Who said that? Ollie North?? Of course you probably wouldn't trust the account of someone who actually LIVES there) under your byline?

Bill Grisby

Norm says thanks to his supporters

Editor:

Just a short note to thank everyone who supported me during the campaign. I'm sorry the result wasn't different, but we did the best we could! I'm looking forward to working during the remainder of my term as a senator next semester. I hope we get some good things accomplished. Finally, to the few students that bothered to vote, thank you for expressing your opinion. It is because of people like you that the ASUI continues to thrive.

Norm Semanko

Campaign posters stem CACA action

Editor:

This letter is in protest to the excessive campaigning that has taken place the last few weeks. With the high number of posters, letters to the editor and countless hours wasted on getting their name known, this campaigning has gone too far.

Recently, a brave group of individuals took it upon themselves to protest in a silent manner. The group calls themselves CACA (Coalition Against Campaign Advertisements). If you didn't read last week's personals in the Arg, CACA took responsibility for "cleaning" up the UCC. Good going, CACA.

About the political letters to the editor, isn't it rather odd that "student-minded individuals" wait until election time to tell students what has been done for them? Why don't the candidates tell the students what's going on while they hold the offices, in addition to when they seek re-election?

Finally, the amount of time, money and effort being spent on this campaign is crazy. Case in point, Mr. Semanko, just how many news letters compared to campaign fliers have you personally put in the Wallace Cafeteria? Another example is of Scott Carter trying to win votes by sliding supposedly hand-written letters under students' doors. Just how many letters have you personally paid for and delivered which stated what you were doing for students?

In conclusion, I am not gunning for any particular candidate with this letter, but rather took two examples of candidates crossing the border of over-advertising. In the future I suggest that campaigners be given a set amount of materials to campaign with such as posters, fliers and a set number of Arg ads. That way all campaigners would have equal representation, the Arg wouldn't be full of propaganda, and most of all, the UCC wouldn't look like CACA.

Believe in death and safety belts

Editor:

Some people seem to think that when they die they will go to heaven and that when others die they will go either to heaven or to hell — more than likely to hell. Have they not considered the possibility that when you are dead you are dead? Perhaps they are not familiar with the Bible.

"As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away, so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more." (Job 7:9). "The dead know not anything, neither have they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise." (Is. 26:14). The bulk of the Old Testament writers do not even hint at an afterlife, let alone promise of heaven or threats of hell.

Just the other day, a couple from Pullman who are atheists were in a car accident in which their vehicle rolled over several times, totaling it. After they were pulled from the wreck, unhurt except for a few scratches, they were asked if they now believe in God. They replied: "No, but we sure believe in safety belts."

Hate BSU contest shows insecurity

Editor:

About your "I Hate Boise State" Contest: it sucks. So do the Vandal fans who support that attitude. I guess in Northern Idaho where hate can be a religion, hate can also be a school paper function. And you're going to announce the winner at half-time. What a neat-keeno, ignorant, no-class idea. The Argonaut's, and some faculty member's inability to discuss BSU or WSU without putting them down only shows your insecurity as an institution. Why don't you re-title your contest with a little something more to the truth of the matter, such as: "Why I'm Envious of Boise State and Just Can't Get Over It" or "My Team is Tops in the Big Sky but I Dwell in the Bottom of the Bush League"?

Poor sportsmanship in general bothers me, but school-sponsored or condoned poor sportsmanship infuriates me. Come on Broncos. Jim McManus

Peace keeping or destroying?

Editor:

Caspar Weinberger has been considered one of the most controversial figures (perhaps the top one) in the Reagan Administration. His wise and timely decision of resignation leaves no room for controversy regarding his wisdom and opportunism (mice are the first ones to leave a sinking ship). After his recent visit to the Persian Gulf and having acquired first hand knowledge of the situation there, the "wise man" realized (better late than never) the U.S. made a mistake in sending forces to the Persian Gulf. His exit from the administration confirmed that there is "no way out" for the Reagan Administration. If it stays, it loses; if it leaves, it loses; and so Weinberger decided not to be a partner in the aftermath dominations (he has already won more than enough).

The resignation of Weinberger may be as much an effect as the cause of all the uncertainty. In the time of his resignation, one perceives some combination of his wife's health (an excellent idea) and his own battle fatigue.

Having striven for almost seven years to keep the President focused on building against the Soviets and shunning their arms control enticements, he sees a faltering Reagan, stumbling in dealing with Gorbachev on limiting nuclear arms and dealing with Congress on limiting spendings, including defense spending. Forced into deficit reduction negotiations with Congress, President Reagan after two weeks has not produced budget medicines strong enough to calm the stock market, which renewed nervousness.

Nothing has shaken confidence in Reagan's leadership more than the market crash (I hope my talking about economics doesn't astonish Charles McKetta). The confused twilight of this administration seems not to be a good time for an absolutist.

The President has also chosen to test his ebbing strength by nominating Judge Douglas Ginsberg to the Supreme Court, taking the advice of Attorney General Meese rather than the Chief of Staff Howard Baker. At the first sign of trouble over Ginsberg, the Senate Republican leader Robert Dole told the President that automatically committed to leading the fight for confirmation.

Nothing seems automatic anymore. That's how it is: when a spell is broken, presidential authority has started draining away. With the resignation of Defense Secretary Weinberger, much time is devoted to speculate on changes in policies and style under the new Frank Carlucci/George Schultz/Colin Powell national security constellation. The underlying premise which once would have seemed shocking is that whatever the center of gravity, President Reagan would not determine it.

Not only Reagan is startled by Weinberger's decision (who had been the greatest supporter of Reagan's universal vandalism and his insatiable desire to reintroduce neo-colonialism); but it has also perplexed the Reagan's peace-keeping forces (peace-destroying would be a better word), too (I trust they somehow knew Weinberger's decision). In extreme confusion the administration is shooting its own shadow and the mariners unarmed fishing boats. The shooting of Arab Emirates fishing boat is the U.S.'s recent effort to affirm that "fishing boats of other nations have no right to fish even in their own territorial waters." Reagan's blundering boats have the universal right to fish in troubled waters (mostly hunting for human lives).

Personals get "too personal"

Editor:

I must express my anger and distaste over some of the recent Argonaut personals.

It seems the editor can't find enough quality news on this campus to write about and resorts to making up personal ads that are not only rude, but hurtful as well.

Get your act together, Paul. There are plenty of people and things to cover around here. There really isn't any reason to take out your frustrations on people that were once your friends. Are you envious of their success, Paul? You seem to be picking on people that have the guts to do and stand up for things they believe in. If you don't have the balls to slam them face to face—don't even slam them at all.

For the first time, the Argonaut is beginning to look like a real paper. Yet, rather than trying to achieve some journalistic integrity, the Arg has fallen to a local version of the National Enquirer. If I wanted the National Enquirer, I would buy it at the local grocery store.

I am also disappointed in the student body. It is pretty sad that when the readership numbers of the Arg go up, it is because of a personals column and not because of quality of the reporting.

I am issuing a challenge to the students of the University of Idaho. REVOLT!! Ask for quality in your student newspaper. The Argonaut is sent to colleges, universities and businesses across the nation. Do we really want what has been printed in the past semesters' Args to represent the students here? We have so many outstanding programs on this campus—the UI is nationally ranked for many of its academic programs. It is frightening one of the main attention getters for the state has to be of such poor content.

Paul, your term is almost over. How 'bout, in the next issue you leave the personals to the love birds and come up with a quality way to spend you office hours?

LETTERS POLICY: The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They should be limited to one page length, typed, and double-spaced. For subjects requiring greater exposition, arrangements may be made with the editor. Letters must be signed in ink, and include the name, address, and phone number of the writer. Proof of identity will be needed at time of submission. Letters received by mail will not be run unless confirmation of authorship is made. Names of writers will not be withheld. Letters may be edited for length, mechanical errors and spelling errors. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to publish any letter.

PERSONALS POLICY: The personals section is free to all University of Idaho students. Personals which contain advertising, surnames, phone numbers or addresses will not be printed. Publication of all personals is subject to the discretion of the staff and space limitations. Used and unused personals will be discarded after publication. Personals should be left for submission in the personals box at the Argonaut, Suite 301, Student Union Building, 620 S. Deakin St., Moscow, Idaho, 83843. Personals are randomly selected for publication.

ARGONAUT SPORTS AND FITNESS SECTION

BOBCAT quarterback John Tetrault resembled an octopus as Vandals Charlie Oliver, Peter Wilkins and John Pleas all wrapped their arms around him and sacked him in the Idaho 14-7 victory over MSU. (ARGONAUT/Stephanie Worley)

Rivals UI-BSU face-off

BY ERIK SIMPSON

The Vandals are just one step away from the Big Sky Conference title, however, they must first beat arch rival Boise State University at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow afternoon in Kibbie Dome.

The fifth-ranked Vandals, currently 6-1 in conference play, will attempt to dominate the Broncos for the sixth straight year. Although BSU is struggling with a 4-3 record in the conference, don't write them off just yet.

Boise recently had impressive victories over Nevada-Reno and Northern Arizona. The Broncos beat the UNR Wolf Pack in Reno 36-31 and added another victory last week in Boise by slaughtering the 17th ranked Lumberjacks of Northern Arizona 48-18.

"I think they're probably the most-improved team in the conference and right now maybe the best team in the conference," Vandal Head Coach Keith Gilbertson said of BSU. "They're really proficient on offense, and I don't think they've fallen off on defense as much as people have said."

The Broncos owe much of their improvement to the play of tailback Chris Jackson and quarterback Vince Alcalde.

Jackson has rushed for 1,150 yards this season after playing in just five games last season with a knee injury. Alcalde has also racked up an impressive number of yards this season. He has thrown the ball for 2,218 yards after playing in only four games last season before being benched.

The Broncos are averaging 453.8 yards in total offense this season while the Vandal offense averages 429 yards per game. Expect an "air express" game from both teams on Saturday.

Last year Idaho defeated the Broncos in Boise on the infamous "Smurf turf" by a score of 21-14. The victory clinched a NCAA Division I-AA playoff berth for the Vandals, but they lost in the first round against the then-number-one Nevada-Reno.

Perhaps the most impressive win that the Vandals have had over the Broncos in recent years came in 1983 when Idaho crushed BSU 45-24. Quarterback Ken Hobart went airborne, throwing for 440 yards and four touchdowns.

The Vandals should be in good shape for tomorrow's game since they had a bye last week following the Nov. 7 conference game against Montana State.

However, Idaho had their hands full against the Bobcats, down by 7-0 at the half, the Vandals pulled it together to come away with a not-so-pretty 14-7 victory. Montana State, 1-10 this season, occupies the conference cellar.

Idaho is 1-3 in games which have followed the bye week. Last year the Vandals fell to Nevada-Reno 17-13 following a bye, but broke the BSU Broncos 44-27 the year before.

Those games followed a 45-43 loss to BSU in 1981 and a 34-14 loss to Idaho State in 1977.

Hunting for Bambi Rites of Passage, Idaho style

BY ROGER FERRIT

I was born in Northern Idaho during the tail end of the Baby Boom. As I grew up there were certain expectations placed on me. One of those was when I turned 12 years of age, I would go to face the "Wily Bambi." Being a properly socialized youth, I thought this was going to be great fun...and I was on my way to becoming a man!

The previous Christmas my father had saved the extra pennies to buy me a new Winchester model-94 30-30 lever action carbine. For almost an entire year, I had pampered, cleaned, and oiled this instrument of destiny. I could recite the velocities of my bullet at any range. I knew how many foot-pounds of energy (whatever they were) there was from the muzzle, out to 250 yards.

My box of "hunting loads" had been handled so much that my father worried that I might have "worn them out." On those all too-rare-times when I was allowed to go target practicing, I wore the bruises as badges of honor. Besides, if you did complain, that meant that you were a pansy!

The fateful day finally came, and my father and I were off to hunt the Wily Bambi. Unfortunately, reality started to creep into the picture. I had to be up, fed and ready by 4 a.m. (until this point in my life, I didn't know there was another four o'clock). It was a typical November in Northern Idaho. There was about 10 inches of wet snow on the ground, and there was a steady cold drizzle.

Soon we were out in the field and the effects of exposure had started to set in. My feet were so cold that I couldn't feel my toes. Everything I owned was wet, and unfortunately the rest of me wasn't numb. After what seems to have been days instead of hours out I was just about ready to plead with my father and admit I was a "pansy." I couldn't hack it and I was an abject failure without hope of redemption. Then it happened...

Standing in a clearing about 40 yards away was a Bambi. My heart started to pound, my pulse must have been near 200. My respiration was labored and fast. If I had these symptoms 30 years later I probably would be en route to cardiac unit in the company of paramedics. My hands were shaking so badly I could barely cock the gun.

My father stepped behind me and whispered into my ear: "Do you see it, son?"

I thought to myself, "Of course I see it. Why else would I be leaving little yellow trails in the snow?"

Then he said "Just like we practiced all summer. Get a good solid rest...Pick your target...and remember, SQUEEZE the trigger."

I started to panic. I had done all the things I was supposed to and nothing was happening. I levered another round into the chamber, and nothing happened. I did this again and again. Still nothing happened. There was a tap on my shoulder, and I turned to look to see if my father could explain what was going wrong.

There was an expression on his face, that to this day I shall never forget. He said with a smile, "Wouldn't it help if you pulled the trigger before you ejected the shell?" I looked down at the pile of unfired cartridges at my feet.

Reaching down, I grabbed three shells and loaded the gun again. By now any self-respecting wild beast should have been in the next county. But no, I had found a Bambi with a death wish. She hadn't moved more than a few feet and she stood there looking at me. This time I remembered to SQUEEZE the trigger. Bambi went down with a great thump. There was some blood on the snow and I had just fulfilled one of the rites of passage to manhood.

Ski trip cancelled OP flounders in lack of snow

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

"How can we get our fixes?" Outdoor Program Director Mike Beiser asked.

The OP is feeling the impact of regional weather changes and is cancelling the traditional Thanksgiving trip to Canada this year. Outdoor junkies are left without a challenge, much less Thanksgiving dinner in a quonset hut at 8,300 feet.

The Thanksgiving ski/mountaineering trip has been offered by the OP for five consecutive years. This will be the first year that outdoor junkies won't meet the new seasonal snow with freshly waxed and tuned skis in the Canadian Rockies.

The whole idea of the Thanksgiving trip came about four years ago as an opportunity to get an early season ski trip. The best place to get some challenging mountaineering skiing and a hut within feasible traveling range is near Banf Canada on the Wapta snowfield. Banf National Park is about a nine-hour drive from the Palouse.

Some of the junkies have decided to try a Thanksgiving at home. However, Beiser, an outdoor die-hard, is planning to hold out.

"As the week develops and the snow flies I'll try to work up a trip to ski," Beiser said.

If that is not possible there are a handful of alternatives to enjoy the extension of the fall. Perhaps a last hike through the Willows or another low elevation hike is in order before the "real season" kicks in.

Then again, maybe a Thanksgiving at home with a Warren Miller ski video is the answer to the floundering season blues.

The group usually packs their Thanksgiving dinner up the six mile/2,000 vertical feet of gain to the hut by ski.

"Even in low snow years we have been able to get to the hut and have excellent skiing," Beiser said.

There is just enough snow to make foot travel but not enough for skiing. Also, it is impossible to predict changes in the weather.

Rugger's to do bars

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

The University of Idaho Rugby Club ended the fall season last weekend as they kicked around University of Oregon 30-0 and Oregon State University 22-0. Now the rugger's are playing a new game, "fundraising."

In the off-season between November and February, the rugger's will attempt to raise some of the money necessary to continue competing through a variety of fundraising activities.

Friday night, the rugger's will be kicking off a bar run to begin their activities. However, this isn't your typical bar run where you find the nearest bar take a seat, relax and move not a muscle until you are sure you can't feel them any longer.

The rugger's will start at the Garden Lounge, have one beer, then run in the cold to the second bar, have one beer and so forth until the 10th bar has been reached and the 10th beer drank (provided they make it that far). The final destination will be Sit-n-Soak. Each rugger is collecting pledges to sponsor the event.

Rugger Jon Olson, who can vouch for the validity of this fundraiser from first-hand experience, said he has set high goals.

"I did it back in Illinois and it was real successful," he said. "I figured if we get 25 bucks a person that'll be 750 bucks."

Other activities planned between now and the beginning of the spring season are a slave sale and a lingerie show featuring rugger's.

Runner's survey Nike and road named favorite

BY JOHN BEE

The Road Runners Club of America, a national organization of more than 100,000 long distance runners, has released the results of a wide-ranging survey.

More than 1,700 members of the club, which has more than 450 chapters, returned questionnaires for the survey.

Highlights of the survey include:

- Nike was the favorite shoe with 26 percent of the vote and Tiger and New Balance both earned about 16 percent. Also showing significant shares were Saucony (12 percent) and Brooks (11.5 percent). Reebok and Avia combined accounted for 5 percent.

- 88 percent run predominantly on roads; 10 percent run on grass or in parks.

- 98 percent take part in races during the year; 45 percent run in more than ten races a year.

- 44 percent of households have incomes of about $50,000; 8 percent have incomes of $100,000.

- 42 percent were formerly smokers.

- 62 percent eat in fast food restaurants at least once a week.

- 40 percent are morning runners; 28 percent run in the afternoon and 32 percent run at night.

- 23 percent of those responding were females, 56 percent were 40 or older and 80 percent were college-educated.

Cross-state rivals

Big Sky conference scenario

ANALYSIS BY CLAYTON HAILEY

As the players take the field and the fans begin to cheer at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, more than just the average football game will go down.

The Vandals, who are tied for top dog in the Big Sky with Weber State University (both boasting 6-1 records), will have not only a silver opportunity to walk away with the 25th Anniversary Conference title, but a chance to kick around our cross-state rivals the sixth year in a row.

Along with a Big Sky Conference title comes an automatic berth into the 1987 NCAA Division I-AA Collegiate Football Championship playoffs. The championship playoff provides for the winner of the seven conferences and the nine other outstanding teams in the division to compete for the 1987 Division I-AA title.

Both Idaho and Weber have shots at the conference title and that coveted playoff spot.

Here's the scenario: (1) If Weber loses the Poky showdown Saturday, UI would be automatic conference winners. (2) If Idaho wins over cross-state rival BSU, then Idaho would receive the automatic playoff berth. (3) If both WSC and UI tie, then UI would still take conference because we have already defeated WSC in season play. (4) However, if WSC wins and UI loses, WSC would take the Big Sky title and automatic playoff berth, but there is still a possibility Idaho would be offered one of the nine playoff invitations.

Although not essential that Idaho shred BSU Saturday, it would still be nice to win over BSU for the sixth straight year.

The Vandals, under Coach Erickson's Air Express, began the winning streak in 1982 with 24-17 threat of the years to come.

Sanders shoots to tackle

ERNEST Sanders attempts to block a pass during the last grid machine showdown at MSU. (ARGONAUT/Stephanie Worley)

BY ERIK SIMPSON

Ernest Sanders came to Idaho in 1983 on a basketball scholarship, but will end his athletic career as a Vandal by attempting to intercept passes and drop opposing ball carriers.

Sanders, a senior majoring in special education, left the basketball team and joined the football program spring of 1984 as a walk-on during the Dennis Erickson era. He received a football scholarship that year.

"I was tired of basketball and things didn't work out," Sanders said. "I wouldn't have stayed here if it hadn't been for Dennis Erickson."

He returned to the basketball team last fall to play five games because several of the Vandal starters were benched due to injuries.

However, he said, "Basketball is going to be a recreational sport from now on."

As a strong safety, his favorite thing to do on the turf is "run right through someone. I don't want to sound sadistic, but I play hard and I play to win, a big hit will do a lot," he said.

Sanders has come up with numerous big hits this season; he has dropped opposing quarterbacks five times, intercepted two passes and follows Jerry Medved in unassisted tackles with 55 after 10 games.

He said he does have some regrets, however.

"I wish I could have played a lot better earlier in the season," he said.

He said he also regrets Idaho's only Big Sky Conference loss this season against ISU.

Rather than dwell on the past Sanders is thinking ahead to Saturday's game against arch rival Boise State University.

"This is going to be a big game for us, we have the conference title on the line," he said. "Boise is a good team and they've been playing damn good."

A little respect

COMMENTARY BY
 JESS SPENCER

You would think that after being beat the last five years in a row by the Vandals that Boise State would have a little respect for the fifth-ranked division I-AA team in the nation, but then Boise State isn't known for their respect or class.

All week long Boise State coaches and players alike have been making their views and opinions of Idaho available for any one that would like to hear them. Leading this verbal trashfest has been the one person who should know better, Head Coach Skip Hall.

Skip and the rest of the Broncos have said such things as "Idaho is a fading program," "Idaho has the worst defense in the Big Sky," "John Friesz is a good one dimensional quarterback," "Idaho has no running game," "Idaho recruits old fashioned players." And the list goes on.

This verbal assault on the players and the integrity of the Idaho football program is in stark contrast to what has been said by the Idaho coaches and players about BSU, but this is the difference between a class act and a classless one.

Instead of babbling about what they think they can do, the Vandals have quietly taken the Big Sky by force on the arm of the best young quarterback in the conference, a group of tough and sure handed receivers, a running game that was there when it was needed and a defense that bent, but never broke.

I have a feeling that 16,000 screaming Vandal fans, a number which will include the largest group of UI students ever there for a football game, are going to enjoy watching Boise State get schooled in life's most educational class, Humility 101.

We've got the right Impact!

High Impact: Traditional, epitomized by lots of bouncing and the appearance of energy. In actuality, very little muscular work is being done. Momentum and movement caused by elastic ligaments. Very little control. Impact transferred to bones and joints. Very dangerous.

Low Impact: A fairly new form of exercise designed to protect bones and ligaments. Its one rule "keep one foot on the floor at all times" is elementary and simplistic. Because of limited types of movement (most of which involve knee bending) high repetition and lots of wild arm movement epitomize this style. Very often weights are used in an effort to increase energy expenditure. The result is damaged knees and pulled shoulder muscles. Research shows little gain in cardiovascular fitness.

Controlled Impact: Our style, borrowed from professional athletes, dancers and martial arts. Human bodies are taught how to absorb impact with their muscles and to move effectively with their entire body. Movement is fluid, balanced and controlled. Requires a lot of energy. Can be used for any type of movement from calisthenics to jogging. Muscle imbalance, joint stress, and bone stress is greatly reduced. Think about this. Have you ever seen a marathon runner bouncing down the road, a dancer with breasts and hair falling wildly or a Bruce Lee landing like an elephant? Why should these types of movement be perpetuated in the exercise classroom? We have the expertise to teach you to move effectively and safely.

Men, women open season with tourney

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

The men's and women's basketball teams will officially open the 1987 season in separate tournaments over the Thanksgiving break.

To introduce the fall season, the Ladies, under second-year head coach Laurie Turner, will host the eighth annual Mark IV Classic.

Among the teams invited to the tourney will be Colorado State University, Southern Methodist University and Portland State University.

The tournament slated for Nov. 27-28 will begin Friday at 6 p.m. It features CSU and SMU, followed by a face-off between UI and PSU at 8 p.m.

The losers will meet Saturday in a consolation match at 6 p.m. while the tournament championship match starts at 8 p.m.

The women, coming off a 8-19 overall season and 3-9 in conference play, will be led by four veterans from last season. Topping the list of returning players Kim Chernecki is the lone senior this year.

Other returners include juniors Sheri Lehmer and Christy Van Pelt and sophomore Lori Elkins. Among the returners, Lehmer tops the stats in scoring with 11.5 points per game, while Van Pelt leads the rebounds with 7.3 rebounds and averages 8.1 points per game.

In their first match of the season, the ladies will face PSU who is led by two returning starters, junior Sandi Howell and senior Cathy Kuntz. Howell put away 6.5 ppg and 5 rpg last season, while Kuntz, the sole senior for the Vikings, racked 13.7 ppg and 5.7 rpg.

ANDREW Jackson, Idaho's leading scorer, pulls another one out of the air. Idaho opens the season at the Inland Northwest Basketball Classic.

(ARGONAUT/Tim Dahlquist)

"Portland State is a young team like us," Turner said. "Against them we will start a little shorter quicker lineup because they aren't quite as tall as we are. They beat us twice last year, but in a matter of a year, things change. Cathy Kuntz hurt us the most last year and she is out, so that will hurt them a lot not to have her."

The men's team will officially crack the season on the courts of the Inland Northwest Basketball Classic Friday, Nov. 27. The tourney, in its second year, is sponsored by Rosauers and Alpo and will host the area's four Division One basketball teams.

The men's team, coming off a 16-14 season under second-year coach Tim Floyd, will also see four returning lettermen from last season. Among them are junior Andrew Jackson, Idaho's leading scorer with 14.1 ppg and senior Kenny Luckett, who averaged 13.7 ppg.

Other returners are junior James Fitch and sophomore Dan Akins. Fitch, who dropped 4.5 ppg average last season, was named Idaho's most improved player of the '86 season.

Other players that will be contributing to the men's stat box will start with two transfers that were picked up last year but were redshirted because of NCAA rulings. Raymond Brown, a 6-8 center from Atlanta, Ga. saw action at Mississippi State before an opportunity to become a Vandal came up, while Altonio Campbell of St. Louis, Mo. contributed to University of Kansas before becoming a Vandal last season.

Idaho completes the roster with the talents of guards Jerry Carter of Crisfield, Md., who is coming off a seven year stint with the Army; Clarence Ward of Columbus, Ohio, a transfer from Northern Oklahoma Junior College; freshmen Ricardo Boyd of Ellisville, Miss.; Joe Northrop of Richland, Wash.; and junior Lorenzo Nash from Chicago, Ill.

Other players that will contribute to the Vandal cause include freshman Patrick Holbert, from Inglewood, Calif.; freshmen Robert Blair of Lapwai, Idaho, Robb Stanley of Morton, Wash. and junior Victor Wells of Chicago, Ill., who recently transferred from John Logan Junior College.

Idaho has added a handful to the men's roster this season and how they will compete and compare is yet to be seen.

"In judging our new players it's easy to speculate on paper, but really the true test comes after they've been here a while," Floyd said. "We needed to improve our guard play and put the major emphasis in that area in our recruiting."

how we played at Montana State," Gilbertson said. "The week off was good for us from a morale standpoint in that we kind of got fresh again. Our legs are fresh and our minds are fresh. Now we're just looking forward to playing the last big game."

Incidentally, several Idaho players could break records this weekend against BSU. Quarterback John Friesz needs 365 yards and 26 attempts to break single-season passing records held by Ken Hobart in 1983 with 3618 yards, averaging 328.9 yards per game while attempting 477 passes. Friesz already holds the UI single-season record for completions with 281.

Defensive end Pete Wilkins needs only one more tackle for a loss to equal the 1980 record of 22. Kicker Brian Decio needs two more field goals to equal the single-season record of 15.

As many as 16,000 fans are expected to attend Saturday's game. The Kibbie Dome record is 16,400, set in 1983 against Montana. The Vandals boast a 5-0 record in games of excess of 15,500.

Is it too early to talk baseball?

COMMENTARY BY JOHN BEE

Show us a red-blooded American who doesn't know baseball, and we'll show you someone who can't find his way home.

The true baseball fan never tires of stepping into a ballpark and seeing a meticulously-manicured (or vacuumed) diamond glistening in the bright sunshine or sparkling beneath the lights. Nor does he tire of wallowing in the columnous statistics of the game or fanciful facts of the sport even though the season has ended weeks ago.

But whether you're a dedicated fan already anxious for spring ball, a casual observer or heaven forbid a baseball hater, the following unusual facts will amuse and entertain you. And one might even win you a bet.

- The official major league baseball weighs between five and five and one-fourth ounces, is between nine and nine and one-fourth inches in circumference and may be covered in either cowhide or horsehide. The balls, which are handmade in Haiti, contain 108 individual stitches.

- The 26 major-league teams use more than 250,000 baseballs each season.

- Although the official rules of baseball limit the length and diameter of the bat to 42 inches and two and three-fourths inches respectively, there is no restriction on weight.

- Numbering uniforms was optional until 1931 when the American League made it mandatory. The National League followed two years later.

- In 1976, the Chicago White Sox put their players in short pants and jerseys with long floppy collars. This attracted plenty of attention, most of it negative, and the Little Lord Fauntleroy duds were soon mothballed.

- When Detroit Tigers' second baseman Lou Whitaker arrived in Minneapolis for the 1985 All-Star Game, he'd forgotten his uniform. He solved the problem by purchasing a replica Tigers' jersey from a souvenir vendor and inking his number one on the back with a black marker.

- Rules prohibit a player from running the bases in reverse order "for the purpose of confusing the fielders or making a travesty of the game."

- In a 1986 game between San Francisco and New York, a hard smash by Mets' slugger Keith Hernandez was fielded by Giants' pitcher Terry Mulholland. The ball got wedged in the webbing of Mulholland's glove and he couldn't pry it loose. He tossed the glove with the ball in it to startled first baseman Bob Brenly, who caught it for the out.

- In the event of fire, panic or a storm, the umpire does not have to wait for the pitcher to have the ball on the mound to call timeout. Thank goodness for small favors.

- In a seven and one-half month period last year, catcher Ron Hassey was traded from the New York Yankees to the Chicago White Sox and back to the Yankees.

- A walk hasn't always been four balls. At various times it has been nine balls, eight balls, seven balls, six balls and five balls. Walks were once counted as base hits and for a brief time as errors on the pitcher.

- Grover Cleveland Alexander, who won 373 major league games and was played by Ronald Reagan in the 1952 film, "The Winning Team," never threw a no-hitter. On the other hand, Charles "Bumpus" Jones won a grand total of TWO major-league games, one of which was (you guessed it) a no-hitter. Don't hold your breath waiting for that movie.

- Batters were once allowed to ask for either a high or low pitch and pitchers to throw underhand.

- The spitball was a legal pitch until 1920 when it was banned. But there was a clause in the new rule allowing each team to appoint two designated spitballers for the season.

- Wrigley Field, home of the Chicago Cubs, is the only major-league park that does not have lights for night games.

- Foul poles are in fair territory.

VANDAL TIDE

The Vandal Tide will ebb and flow at the Boise State game Saturday as the UI cheerleaders attempt to start Idaho's first tide.

Since the dome is not designed for the typical football wave the Athletic Department in cooperation with the cheerleaders has decided to start a new tradition at Idaho.

The student section will be asked to help get the Vandal Tide going. The cheerleaders will announce to the crowd that the Tide is ready to begin. The Tide will begin from the west end and continue through the student section.

The Tide will consist of everyone standing up, shaking pom poms and making lots of noise. Approximately 2,000 shakers will be passed out during the game.

VANDAL BASKETBALL

The men will officially open the 1987 season when they meet Gonzaga Nov. 27 on the courts of the Rosauers/Alpo Inland Northwest Classic in Spokane. On Nov. 21 the team will host a scrimmage in the Memorial Gym prior to the Boise State football game.

The ladies will officially open the season by hosting the Mark IV Classic Nov. 27-28 in the Memorial Gym.

CAMPUS RECREATION

As of Nov. 1, the PE Building and Memorial Gym will be open until 8:45 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Saturday, the weight room will close at 2 p.m. because of the football game with Boise State.

Lost and Found articles can still be claimed in Memorial Gym from spring semester 1987. See the locker room attendant located on the first floor.

New York's Fido Dido hits other coast

"Thank you for calling Dial-A-Dido. This is the Fido Credo. Fido is for Fido. Fido is against no one. Fido is youth. Fido has no age. Fido sees everything. Fido judges nothing. Fido is innocent. Fido is powerful. Fido comes from the past. Fido is the future. Follow this credo and you'll still get cavities and colds, but you won't mind them as much."

This statement of principles is the basis for the marketing of the latest east-coast fashion trend, Fido Dido (pronounced FID-doe Dee-doe). The idea was first imagined by Susan Rose, a former art director at the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency in New York. Rose happened upon the black and white Fido while doodling on a cocktail napkin.

they made certain to define their relationship right from the start.

Fido is an abstract-looking character with an upside down triangle for a head and hair that stands on end. He has a tall, lanky body with enormous feet.

Rose said Fido was invented because "I always wanted to do something my parents could relate to. And art with humor is something everyone can appreciate."

This also led to the Fido philosophy, "the ability to handle any situation with a sense of humor," Rose said. "It doesn't mean you're not serious, it just means you laugh a lot."

The same philosophy holds true for Fido's counterparts: Danger Dido, Fido's Fido, and 12 other variations.

Fido Dido now appears on clothes, greeting cards, watches, stationery, invitations, post cards, bumper stickers and pads. Before year's end, he will be seen on towels, boxer shorts and posters. He has already prompted a contest in New York called the "Who Looks Like Fido Dido Da Most" contest.

Then came the Fido nights at New York clubs. A book will be released next March called "Fido Dido 101, or Living Life in the Third Lane."

Fido Dido is now being sold on cards at One More Time in downtown Moscow. Owner Charlotte Buchanan said she has a source to get shirts and sweatshirts of the collection and expects to have them sometime around Christmas.

Buchanan said Fido Dido is "kind of an East-coast concept and it usually takes a couple of years before East-coast concepts are popular in the West."

She added, "When I look for something to sell, I like to find a good graphic or a fun design. Fido Dido has that. Our sales of the cards have gone well, which is why I ordered the shirts, which should be in any day now."

Buchanan said she will wait to see the success of the shirts before marketing other items in the character's repertoire.

FD., the yuppie Fido and the original Fido Dido are among the 15 Fido characters available on reversible thermo sweatshirts. The shirts, soon to appear at One More Time, feature the words "Fido Ditto" on the inside.

'Running Man' delivers action

BY KIRK LAUGHLIN

No one is going to accuse TV actor-turned-director Paul Michael Glaser of intruding on the artistic territory of Ingmar Bergman, Alfred Hitchcock or Francis Ford Coppola.

"The Running Man" may infringe on the territory of Stan Lee, though. Lee, by the way, is the general editor of Marvel Comics, the company responsible for creating Spider Man and the Incredible Hulk.

Glaser, the former of "Starsky and Hutch" has created a colorful and cleverly punchy comic book of a film which zips along merrily and entertainingly from its first frame to its last.

The "running man" of the title is an unjustly-accused outlaw (aren't they all?) named Benjamin Richards, played with usual depth by Arnold Schwarzenegger.

In the police state of the future, it seems that it makes great rating sense to put convicted criminals into a 14-block walled area (destroyed by the Great Quake of 1997) and have them hunted down by much-worshipped Stalkers like Buzz-Saw, Professor Deep Freeze and Dynamo. This game show is called "The Running Man."

This amiable cross between "Escape From New York" and "Max Headroom" doesn't win any prizes for credibility, even within the constraints of its own fantastic plot, but it does move along just as fast as the Richard Bachman (a.k.a. Stephen King) novel on which it is based.

Not only does Steven deSouza's script move its action along like a house on fire, it also satisfies with plenty of blood-splattering violence.

Even more surprising, though, is the clever wit infused with the fighting. DeSouza pokes fun at politics (one line goes: "Get me the

on the screen

THE RUNNING MAN
CORDOVA THEATER

Justice Department's Entertainment Division. And the President's agent."), at the television culture (other programs include "The Hate Boat" and wildly distorted news broadcasts ala "RoboCop") and at the big goofballs that become "commentators" and competitors on TV's Big Time Wrestling.

Schwarzenegger chews up his lines in true Austrian fashion but he does have nice comic delivery now and then. Backing him up are Maria Conchita Alonso ("Moscov on the Hudson") and Yaphett Koto ("Alien") who give good performances with what little they have to do. Former MTV vee-jay Dweezil Zappa runs around looking very stupid in a beret and has exactly one funny line.

The stroke of brilliance in this film, though, is the casting of Richard Dawson as the fascist game-show host. It's almost unbelievable that the man who once starred in "Hogan's Heroes" and hosted "Family Feud" would be able to turn out such a sarcastic, impressively-portrayed villain.

"The Running Man" loses its momentum by the end when Schwarzenegger gets mixed up (again, none too logically) with an underground movement. Apparently Glaser just couldn't resist getting Arnie into para-military gear. By the final shoot-em-up, "The Running Man" begins to resemble "Rambo Meets Wheel of Fortune" with rather lackluster results.

Even with the final faltering, though, Glaser should have a goofball bloodbath hit on his hands.

BEST BETS

Organ Recital, Music School Recital Hall, 4 p.m. Sunday:

Internationally-known organist Norma Stevlingson appears at the University of Idaho for a program including "Tocatta and Fugue in d minor" by Bach and "Choral No. 2 in b minor" by Cesar Franck. Admission is $4.

Amsterdam Guitar Trio, Lewiston High School Auditorium, 3 p.m. Sunday:

This classical guitar group from Holland will provide the second LCSC artist's series performance of the season. The trio arranges all its own music for guitar, starting with traditional classical pieces. For the concert they will play Bach's "Bradenberg Concerto No. 3." Tickets are $8.

Ballet celebrates season

Peter Tchaikovsky, composer of the music for "The Nutcracker," never knew or guessed at the great success of the masterpiece he had created. On Dec. 8, Palouse patrons can see his achievement on stage at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum, courtesy of the American Festival Ballet.

"The Nutcracker" had a lukewarm reception when it premiered in 1892 in Russia and Tchaikovsky died never knowing the holiday tradition he had begun when he adapted the E.T.A. Hoffman story to the stage.

The American Festival Ballet has given more than 100 performances of the ballet, each year changing some features to keep the production fresh.

New dancers in lead roles of the performance include Beth Morgan as Clara, Nadya Zybina as the Sugarplum Fairy and Luis Astorga as the Cavalier. In addition to the professional dancers of the American Festival Ballet, 36 local dance students from the area will fill the roles of bonbons, lambs, Chinese dancers and candy canes.

Cougar gets subtle on 'Jubilee'

John Cougar Mellencamp
The Lonesome Jubilee
(Riva/Polygram)

Rock critics love artists like John Cougar Mellencamp who allow them the opportunity to trot out their highly articulate theories about the "Artistic Development of Rock and Roll." It's not that Mellencamp's so great, just that because of time and circumstance, his career has followed easy-to-discern paths that reflect both his impressive growth as an artist and the changes that the music went through in the past two decades. If you wanna know how rock and roll functions, J.C. is the perfect man to put under the microscope.

J.C. is from a rock generation that has a great many heroes, but he's never been one, yet. His more recent work has certainly proved that he's just as talented as Tom Petty or Chrissie Hynde (and much more talented than Pat Benatar or Huey Lewis), but Cougar Mellencamp neither did his best work first (like Hynde), nor started out good and stayed there (like Petty). Rather, he started out bad, terrible, rotten and got only marginally better by the time "Hurts So Good" hit and he started to draw attention. He had to grow up in public, quickly, before he lost his chance to make the music of which he was capable, but he had already lost his chance at being a modern-rock hero (like Petty, Hynde, Costello) or even a retro-rock hero like Mark Knopfler. Only now, 10 years into his career, has he any chance of being a major artist.

Mellencamp didn't hit until the '80s, but he's 35 years old and steeped in the music of a time several years earlier than that which influenced most '80s acts. Springsteen, Robert Palmer, Jackson Browne and Kenny Loggins were all working musicians in 1968, writing songs and paying their dues; and Bryan Adams, Jon Bon Jovi, Michael Stipe and Prince were all rug rats, too young to know the world was turning in circles. But J.C. (along with the

off the Record

BY MICHAEL GREGORY

acts mentioned earlier) was 16 years old then, when youth was king, all the doors were open, and rock and roll was at its peak.

The weight and possibility of artists of that generation isn't hard to appreciate. Jon Bon Jovi grew up listening to Uriah Heep and Styx, so if he can be as good/bad as those not-so-hot bands, he can go to bed at night feeling he has attained a respectable degree of artistry. But J.C. grew up with the Stones and CCR and the Who and the Byrds and Motown and Stax and of course the Fearsome Four-some...these are the acts that made him want to be a musician, and if he cares at all about quality, he can't feel fulfilled until he can at least see the plateau occupied by these and other deities.

All of which makes it easy to see how frustrated he must have felt being John Cougar, Leather Stud. Combining an overbearing management team with an ambitious rock act is a sure-fire recipe for rock disaster, and J.C. got a bad case of disaster in the early part of his career. I remember seeing him in 1981 and thinking he was absurd—a leather-clad dwarf shot up on speed and male hormones who tried to get personal with his audience without giving them any of his personality in return. I was not alone. Other writers said things like "Meat Head, the coldest, meanest, dullest son-of-a-bitch ever to rule the airwaves" or "This record ("Jack and Diane") is three and a half minutes of hateful falsehood broken up by lousy guitar playing." An early fadeout seemed inevitable.

This treatment must have hurt deeply because his next two albums are among the best of the decade. Both Uh-Huh and Scarecrow show a lyrical intelligence, an intensity and quality of performance and a sensitivity to production values and atmosphere that are wholly absent (or at least scarce) in the three albums preceding. This change also safeguarded his commercial stature—it has become easier and easier to buy a Mellencamp album without worrying "Will I hate it? Will I ever play it again? If it sucks, will the record store take it back?"

The Lonesome Jubilee is the product of a different kind of challenge facing Mellencamp—the classic challenge of maintaining one's standard of success. Now that we know he's good, smart and fun to hear, we expect it from him, and if this album isn't good enough, he will fall into the abyss recently occupied by Heart and Dire Straits, waiting for the chance to change his approach (again) and make a comeback before his hair falls out.

This album is not as good as Scarecrow, nor is it really as much fun as Uh-Huh. A certain spontaneity, an excitement of self-discovery that permeated those two albums is lacking here. Nevertheless, the quality of what is here is high enough to allow J.C. to buy the Jaguar with confidence. "Paper in Fire" is all over the place now, as well it should be—it's a first-rate song, combining a little Mississippi Delta ambiance with a whole lotta Exile on Main Street, and it is the best thing on this record. There are several other good songs that could hit, but it ain't like Scarecrow, a wall-to-wall set of killer tracks. But this shortcoming isn't an indication of this album's Suck Quotient, which is actually pretty low. It's just one of those quieter, less immediate records that you like a little more each time you play it.

The other songs that could hit include "Cherry Bomb," a fantastic recollection of being 17 in his small Hoosier town "when a sport was a sport/And groovin' was groovin'"; "Rooty Toot Toot," basically the same good-times story, updated, featuring a picnic and a state trooper getting in J.C.'s face; and "Down and Out in Paradise," a wild houserocker with an irregular rhythm track (no two bars sound alike), screaming women in the back, and J.C. wailing in a way he never has before, sounding like Jagger but also like no one but himself. It's about the Reagan Hell, with various losers asking Mr. President to help them out—"Looks like the milk and honey/Done run out on me."

These themes—the cracks in the American dream, the effects of time on perspective, the decaying simplicity of the heartland and the metaphysics of a good time—dominate this record, which in the most part flows from one warm, acoustic-based setting to another the way Beggar's Banquet does. The only other standout track is "We Are the People," which has the same stirring viciousness as "Rain on the Scarecrow" but is more general than that farm-crisis anthem; it's an affirmation of pride, a message to the forgotten and the isolated that "our thoughts are with you," that there are at least a few Average Americans who care—"We are the people/We live forever..."; contrast that with "Jack and Diane"—"Oh yeah, life goes on, long after the thrill of living is gone." Really makes you happy to be alive, doesn't it?

The album speaks to you in a voice whose effectiveness largely depends on your background and willingness to hear about women named Suzanne and cars and long stretches of highway. I have a feeling that many of you would be very receptive, but many of you won't. This sort of relative greatness is not, in the long run, what makes a record worthwhile.

I don't think any of you will be disappointed by The Lonesome Jubilee, but the Mellencamp here is a more sedate and poetic one, and the poetic element of John Cougar Mellencamp is not one that has great meaning for everyone. I'd take the risk, but don't be expecting heroics—yet.

Orchestra hits concert trail

BY KAZI MAMUN

The University of Idaho Orchestra left the confines of campus for the first time early this month when it went on a multi-city tour of the Northwest Nov. 1-6.

The group made stops in Twin Falls, Boise, Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Rexburg and played in the Montana cities of Helena, Great Falls and Butte.

Orchestra director Alan Rawson said there were several benefits to members of the student ensemble from the tour.

"It is experiencing the same music they played before, except in many different acoustical environments," he said. "They also have the chance to see what it's like to be a real concert performer on the road and play to a different audience every night."

The orchestra's programs included works from the Baroque, Classical, and Romantic periods, featuring student and faculty soloists. In addition, Rawson and his orchestra conducted workshops for high school orchestra students at each stop on the tour.

The idea of touring with the group came to Rawson last year as he interviewed for his current position. He said the tour is a chance to expose high school students to the orchestra program, showing them it is exciting and beneficial to them.

The first concert for the UI musicians was at McCall High School, where they performed for more than 200 people.

"That performance got us off to a good start," Rawson said. "The McCall Music Society hosted a potluck dinner for us before the concert, so the community got involved in our arrival too."

"It's good to play the same music at least six times, like in a tour situation," Vicki Muscarella, a UI student on the tour, said. "I also really enjoyed working with high school kids during workshops."

Muscarella said that the tour put her behind in her classes, but it was worth it.

"I had to catch up on a ton of school work that piled up," she said. "Missing school is difficult, but because it is not an individual event its overall effect is good. I felt I did something worthwhile. I believe I am a performer, and from my point of view it gave me a taste of a performer's life. It gave me a good sense of direction as to what I am going to do about my career in music."

The tour exposed the members of the orchestra to different audiences with varied tastes in music, something which Rawson was aware of when he selected pieces for the tour.

"Our programming was filled with light, popular music, and it wasn't too long," Rawson said. "We tried to stay away from too heavy a concentration on one style."

Rawson said he sees the orchestra doing more tours in the future around Idaho and the Northwest.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING

Because many families celebrate Thanksgiving in the month of November, a lot of time is spent planning and preparing a special and nutritious feast. Perhaps one of the nicest parts of this traditional day is that families sit down to eat together. What a nice change it can be to place the importance on the company, rather than on the foods involved.

Foods digest better when eaten in a calm, relaxed manner. This Thanksgiving, decide ahead of time to make it a pleasant day—a day to relax and appreciate life itself.

Entertainment In Brief

Guitar trio to perform

A guitar trio from Holland will give the second performance of the Lewis Clark State College Artists' Series season Sunday at 3 p.m. The performance will be held in the Lewiston High School auditorium.

The trio has adapted many classical works to the guitar, which has only in the last two centuries become a highly developed concert instrument. In Lewiston, the group will perform Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto No. 3," which was written in 1717 after Bach arrived at the court of Prince Leopold as Kapellmeister.

Tickets for the performance are available at Myklebusts in Moscow and at the door. Prices are $8 for adults, $5.50 for students.

Organist to pipe-in at UI

Norma Stevingson, from the University of Wisconsin-Superior, will give a pipe-organ recital Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Lionel Hampton School of Music Recital Hall.

Her program will include "Tocatta and Fugue in D Minor" by Bach, "Choral No. 2 in B Minor" by Cesar Franck and works by J.G. Walther, Deitrich Buxtehude, Alain and Gigout.

Admission to the concert is $4 and tickets may be purchased from the School of Music or at the door.

Local artist appears in SUB.

BY BRYAN CLARK

A show featuring the work of local artist Erna Stubbs will appear on the SUB gallery wall through Dec. 17.

The exhibit begins tonight with a 7 p.m. reception in honor of Stubbs in the SUB Vandal Lounge. Folk musician Doug Olson will provide accompaniment at the coffee house-style gathering.

A Wisconsin native, Stubbs came to Idaho in 1943 after attending art schools in her native state, including The Normal. She has since studied watercolor, her current interest, under Alfred Dunn and began painting in oil under Audrey Barr, Norah Tisdale and Marcia Anderson. She has also attended four workshops, including two Workshops on Wheels.

Stubbs' work currently decorates the walls of Good Samaritan Village in Moscow.

As a background to Stubbs' opening, Olson will provide his mix of Stan Rogers and John Prine style folk. He is on the way to Seattle to advance his 13-year career in that area's music industry.

The reception is the first of a new style of event which ASUI Productions Assistant director Sandy Burr is trying to institute for next semester.

If plans made by Burr and Bruce Brockman, chairman of the Theater Arts Department, are successful, the "coffee house" style of performance will appear in a new theater behind the U-hut. At that venue, students will be able to gather in the coffee house to practice skits or watch the university's cabaret. Burr said, though, that the program is still in the planning stage.

Dickens classic comes to WSU

"A Christmas Carol," Charles Dickens' classic that made famous Scrooge and Tiny Tim, will come to Washington State University at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum Nov. 30 at 8 p.m.

This production, performed by the Nebraska Theater Caravan, began 10 years ago when the executive director of the volunteer Omaha Community Playhouse scripted his own version of the classic for the group.

Since then the group, which is the professional branch of the Omaha Community Playhouse, has toured the United States with its production including 36 people, 200 period costumes and numerous sets.

In his works, Dickens went back to his harsh childhood to expose the suffering of the working poor in England during the Industrial Revolution. Yet he packaged his message in the warm sentimental setting of Christmas.

"A Christmas Carol" reveals Dickens' belief in the brotherhood of man and the necessity of goodwill.

From his poverty-stricken childhood, Dickens worked his way into London's social-literary set of the mid-19th century by age 31.

Tickets, available at the coliseum box office 10 a.m.-5 p.m., are $9-$14 for adults, $8-$11 for senior citizens and $6-$8 for students.

Jazz Bands hold concert

University of Idaho Jazz Bands I, II and III will present a concert tonight featuring soloists Dan Carlson, Jeff Pierce and Ed Ulman.

The 7:30 p.m. performance will be held in the Lionel Hampton School of Music Recital Hall. Robert McCurdy directs Jazz Bands I and II while Al Gimberling conducts Jazz Band III.

Jazz Band I will perform "Just Friends" by Rob McConnell and "In Case of Emergency," with Carlson, Pierce and Ulman soloing.

The program for Jazz Band II will include "Big Dipper" and Thad Jones and Jazz Band III's schedule will feature "The Cutting Edge" by Greg Yasinitsky.

Beebe- Seriously, come see me! We still love you! -FFM

To the cheerleader and track star who look about the same, it's always hard to tell. Is Bill or Bob your name? The shower is always running, we've counted more than four. So just how many people are living there next door? We know this is kind of corny but at least it's full of tact. There is NEVER any hot water and that, my friend, is a fact. -With much love, the Dos Amigos

Erik- You're always there when I need a friend like a bright ray of sunshine to brighten my day. Thanks for the hug on Tuesday, I really needed it. Love you! -Kimberly

AM Peel III- Now that the cold weather has hit, Brr...F'ing Brr... We think of you often. Is school still from hell and your days crappy? Oh, and by the way, are any of your mashes leaving skid marks? -psycho and projectie woman

Mei- Are you out there? Please forgive your best friend for her emotional state of being. I miss you! Cake in the dark isn't the same! -Delinquent

J-Rae- Life's not the same without you! -Fetto and Greg TFH- Take off hoee! Have a great time! Please forget us - just for five days. Big surprises when you get back - you oldie! Love you! -T and A

To the Prodigal daughter- HIS rent gets paid by we know who. If Daddy found out, what would he do? His little girl knows how to lie, but the truth is the best so please tell us why you must act this way. All we've to say is...we've had it, we're finished, good try! FED UP. P.S. You forgot the beanbag chair!

Land classification symposium discusses vegetation issues

BY CHARLIE RICE

The University of Idaho played host to a group of land managers, resource educators and researchers at the University Inn Best Western this week. The group was in town for a symposium about land classification based on vegetation.

Land classification by vegetation types is a tool used by land managers to predict the results of various management decisions. This is done by computer modeling of natural systems.

The speakers included forestry, range, wildlife, soil and geological researchers. They gave nearly 50 different talks over the three days of the symposium.

They discussed the different methods of gathering data, the different programs available to analyze the data by computer and the limitations imposed by human subjectivity and the complexities of natural systems.

The symposium was planned by Penelope Morgan, coordinator of the Continuing Education and Outreach for the UI College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. The speakers were welcomed by Dean John C. Hendee of the College of Forestry and Larry Lassen of the Intermountain Research station.

Six staff members of the College of Forestry speaking at the symposium were Frederic D. Johnson, professor of forest resources; James M. Peek, professor of fish and wildlife resources; Edwin W. Tisdale, professor emeritus of range resources; Edward O. Garton, professor of fish and wildlife resources; Minoru Hironaka, professor of range resources; and James L. Kingery, associate professor of range resources. Professor Maynard Fosberg and Kent Houston, graduate student of the Department of Plant Soil and Entomological Sciences, also spoke at the symposium.

More than 250 registrants from the 11 far western states, British Columbia, Alberta, Alaska, Wisconsin, North Carolina, South Dakota, Florida and the District of Columbia attended the symposium.

The symposium included talks on the effects of logging, fires, grazing by domestic and wild animals and natural disasters on forests, grasslands and riparian zones. Riparian zones are the boundary between land and water.

They also discussed the succession of species as a land area recovered from disturbance by human or natural means. Each forest stand or range site has a climax group of plants.

The succession goes from pioneer species, which are adapted to disturbed soils and open sunlit sites, to the final group of species which are a shade tolerant and adapted to competing with other plants.

On some sites, this succession is quite complicated and involves intermediate stages. The site is named for the dominate species in the climax situation. Succession types cannot be accurately predicted by current models.

Many areas have been disturbed in the last hundred years by human activity and fire. The Mt. Saint Helens eruption disturbed a large area and provided a large amount of data on the recovery of natural systems after a major disturbance.

Wilderness areas, natural areas and national parks provide undisturbed sites for the study of climax zones. Logging, grazing, fire, and natural disasters provide disturbed sites for succession research.

Research is continuing on many of the different aspects of land classification by vegetation. As research fine tunes the methods and uses of classification it will become a more accurate predictor of results of management methods.

Moscow called retirement haven

BY JULIE HARTWELL

If you have ever considered Moscow as a community rather than merely the town that houses our university, you would notice that it is a perfect town for retirement.

The University of Idaho has contracted with a firm from the San Francisco Bay area, consisting of three UI alumni, to assess the feasibility of building a retired alumni residence facility on campus.

The three alumni came to the UI Administration with the idea last spring and were commissioned by Facilities Planning to do a study. They spent a week on campus talking with health care facilities in the community, developers, real estate agents, Chamber of Commerce and university officials and others to see if the idea made sense and if there was sufficient support to justify the construction of such a facility.

According to Joanne Reece, director of Facilities Planning at UI, the consultants said that the on-campus residence would provide a perfect environment for retired alumni. They would be surrounded by a stimulating intellectual and cultural life, access to recreation facilities, including the Kibbie Dome and the UI golf course, and easy access to travel throughout the Northwest and Canada.

They concluded that the on-campus facility would strengthen ties between students, faculty and alumni. The university could extend the use of its facilities to alumni and would have a new captive audience for all university activities. The alumni would be a supportive and loyal group, boosting the image and morale of the university.

The proposed site for the facility is the west farm area on campus, west of the Kibbie Dome. It is walking distance from all the main facilities the retirees would be using.

Along with this proposal is a program called "Emeritus," which would attempt to attract the alumni back to the university, Reece said. It would also make the proposal more balanced. To help make the alumni feel at home, they would be encouraged to participate in university academic programs, either as students or as faculty. They could contribute to enrichment of academic life through conferences or lectures or join the university as adjunct faculty.

The first part of the study has now been completed and is being evaluated by UI administration. The questions under consideration are whether the university can afford to follow through with the idea. The program would undoubtedly be an excellent one to begin in the Centennial year.

"We have a shot at beating Boise for six straight years...the crowd will play a big part in this game."

Although Sanders said that a win against BSU is very important to him, he has other goals in mind as well. Graduating and becoming successful in the field of special education is a high priority.

He said that he would also like to return to school and get a degree in physical therapy.

He said that he would like play pro ball as well. "I'd like to get a shot at it, if not, it's not the end of the world," he said.
