Long says 'No nutty buddies'

BY PAUL ALLEE

You don't have to go home alone tonight.

You won't, that is, if you are one of more than 50 students expected to participate in tonight's first trial run of the ASUI's Escort Service.

The service will be temporarily available on weeknights through finals week, according to ASUI President Brian Long.

Under the program, five members of the Air Force ROTC will be on hand to walk students home or to campus study sites, from dusk until midnight.

"The escorts can walk students to living groups or walk people to their cars," Long said. "But they're not going to be able to go far from campus."

According to Long, a similar service was first proposed last year by then-ASUI Sen. Cherri Sabala. Sabala's plan, the "Buddy System," called for the establishment of a fleet of volunteers who would provide students protection while walking alone at night.

But because ASUI officials were concerned that it would be difficult to monitor the activities of volunteers, the plan never got off the ground.

Under the current temporary agreement, the student government will pay the Air Force ROTC unit $300 for their services.

Long said that contracting with the Air Force ROTC unit eliminates the risk of hiring unscrupulous escorts, which he last year called "Nutty Buddies."

"We wanted to have the (Air Force) ROTC do it. We thought they'd be a credible group of trustworthy men."

Students who would like to use the Escort Service can call 885-6129 during evening hours.

Long said he expects that the service's trial run will reflect student interest in the program.

"I think it will be used by women more than men," he said. "If anything, finals may inflate the numbers."

Final evaluation of the program's effectiveness will be made in January.

Search for financial VP winds down

BY DAWN BOBBY AND BETH HOWARD

President Richard Gibb is expected to announce who will become the University of Idaho's next financial vice president within the next few weeks. His decision will be based on recommendations by committees that interviewed the four top candidates last month.

In November, students and faculty were encouraged to meet with the candidates as each visited the UI campus.

"They definitely should (have been) there," Controller Jerry Reynolds said. "This affects them, too."

Reynolds currently holds the vice president position, temporarily filling in for David McKinney, who left to assume a similar position at the University of New Mexico in August. Reynolds did not seek to retain those duties.

The four finalists include:

- Kenneth Dobbins of Kent, Ohio, who is assistant director of financial affairs and bursar at Kent State University;
- Richard Norman of Wilberforce, Ohio, who is vice president of finance, business affairs and treasurer at Central State University;
- Dale Alldredge of Lewiston, manager of the Port of Lewiston and former finance vice president of Lewis Clark State College; and,

- Jerry Wallace, the current UI Budget Officer.

The four finalists for the administration spot emerged from approximately 170 applications.

The selection and interviewing processes have progressed smoothly for all candidates, Reynolds said.

"I have nothing to do with the selection committee," Reynolds said, "I only do the one-on-one interviews, so I can't speak for the whole. But from what I've seen, everything is going well."

Alldredge kicked off the final series of interviews which began Nov. 16 and ran through the Nov. 24. His interview was followed by separate meetings with Wallace, Dobbins, and Norman.

JI Arabs dispel stereotypes

BY ALAN SOLAN

There are about 160 million Arabs in the world, and contrary to the picture many Americans have of them, most are not greedy oil baron sheiks, crazed terrorists or belly dancers.

The University of Idaho Political Science Department and the Malcolm Kerr Scholarship Committee sponsored a video and slide presentation Nov. 18 in the Borah theater to help dispel some of the stereotypes Americans have about Arabs.

Malcolm Kerr was president of the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped and killed in 1983. A scholarship has since been established in his memory by the National Council on Arab-U.S. Relations. The scholarship is used to send high school students to the Middle East to study Arab culture.

The program was part of a visit to the Palouse by Michel Nabti, former regional director of the League of Arab States; Mohammed Hallaj, editor of "Palestine Perspectives" in Washington D.C.; and Dr. Houria Hassouna, professor at the Michigan State University Medical School.

The trio gave lectures and workshops on U.S.-Arab relations at the UI and area high schools Nov.

Following the presentation, three UI Arab students gave their views of Arab issues and answered audience questions.

The slide show, which was produced by the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee in Washington D.C., claimed the only ethnic stereotype still tolerated by Americans is of the Arab. Everything from children's books to television to advertising still portrays the Arab as a camel-riding, lazy nomad, it said.

This Crested Hill: pictorial history due for distribution

BY JILL BECK

As part of the University of Idaho's 100th birthday, the publication of a special pictorial history has been commissioned. This Crested Hill, written by Keith Petersen, features the history of the UI from its beginning in 1889 up to the present.

"We're going to have a book that will set the standard for these kinds of pictorial histories," Roy Fluhrer, UI Centennial coordinator, said.

Petersen spent almost two years doing research for This Crested Hill. The 256 page hardbound book features over 330 photos, some of which date back to the 1890s.

"I narrowed that down from about 20,000 (photos)," Petersen said.

"The thing that's interesting about the book," said Fluhrer, "is not only the content, but the way Emily Silver (the book's designer) and Deb Moloshok (project coordinator) have designed the book."

"I'm very pleased with the book design," Petersen said. "It's top quality."

"It's a visual feast," Fluhrer said. "There is something new and arresting on each page."

"It's the first history that's been done of the University since 1960," Petersen said.

"It was a fun project," Petersen said. "I hope people will note that the book does take in 100 years."

This Crested Hill was originally slated for distribution in mid-November, but due to complications in the publishing process, it won't be available until sometime in January said Jim Heaney, director of the UI Press.

"There have been some delays in the process of proofing," Heaney said.

Copies of This Crested Hill are available from the UI Press for preorder for $24.95. After January 30, the price will be $29.95. Autographed copies, with both President Richard Gibb's and Petersen's signatures, are available for $49.95.

Petersen is a free lance historian. He is the former director of the Latah County Historical Society. Petersen has recently finished work on his book Company Town written about Potlatch.

UI Press, which is in charge of sales of This Crested Hill, hopes to sale copies through out the Northwest.

Hemingway to speak at banquet

Idaho author Jack Hemingway will be the speaker at the annual University of Idaho Alumni Awards for Excellence banquet Dec. 2 in Moscow.

Hemingway, an internationally-known sportsman and conservationist, is the author of "Misadventures of a Fly Fisherman: My Life With and Without Papa." He is the son of Ernest Hemingway and makes his home in Sun Valley, Idaho.

The annual Awards for Excellence banquet honors forty of the University of Idaho's top student scholars. Nominated by their various academic colleges, the students are required to meet stringent academic standards, including a minimum grade point average of 3.5.

The students, along with the professors they have chosen as the most influential in their college careers, will be honored at the banquet at the University Inn, Wednesday evening, Dec. 2.

C.S. Farrar: Cartoonist combines major with hobby

BY ERIK SIMPSON

Chris Farrar, the man behind the Dweezil comic strip, is probably the only UI student who can get away with insinuating that UI President Richard Gibb has been busted for a DUI.

Of course this episode was a mere fabrication; however, some of his ideas are based on real happenings like the high price of text books and the far-out antics of Bruce Skaug, alias "Loose Kaug."

Farrar has also taken his major, political science, and his interest in cartooning and combined the two into political cartoons which have appeared in the Argonaut and Idahonian.

"That was the idea behind political science, that I'd eventually evolve into political cartoons," he said.

He also writes about sorority girls such as "Betsy Boopner" and her big doorknobs, a drunken fraternity boy named "Chad Hansen" and "Burt Revert" who is a typical student fighting against the school system.

He sometimes draws a strip on something that irritates him. Last semester a student wrote a letter to the editor of the Argonaut insulting Farrar's comic strip. Farrar dedicated a strip to the author of the letter to evoke a response; however, he never heard from the dissatisfied reader again. "I've tried to get people involved... even bad attention is attention," he said.

Farrar, a junior, has been drawing for the Argonaut for two years and has had 140 different episodes published in the newspaper. He said that he spends an average of 2-3 hours drawing each episode and that sketching is a "definite outlet."

He will continue to draw for the Argonaut next semester, but would like to focus a little more on political cartoons and of course, would like more feedback from students.

"Controversy is always good for readership," Farrar said.

FFA memorial established

The National Future Farmers of America Foundation has established a memorial fund in memory of two Idaho FFA members. They lost their lives in the Continental 747 crash at Denver's Stapleton Airport when flight 1713 flipped on its back, killing 26 people and injuring 56 others.

Sherry Nelson and Janine Ledgerwood, members of the Melba, Idaho FFA, were among those killed in the crash. They were returning from the National FFA Conference in Kansas City, Mo.

Also killed in that accident was Tammy Daniel of Melba, wife of the Melba High School vocational agriculture instructor and FFA advisor.

Nearly 150 Idaho residents were attending the FFA convention. Of those, most had traveled by car or bus. Others took flights on other airlines.

Memorial contributions may be sent to the National FFA Foundation, P.O. Box 5117, Madison, WI. 53705.

All contributions will go Melba High School to be used at the discretion of the FFA Chapter there, said John Mundt, University of Idaho associate professor of agriculture education and former Idaho state FFA adviser.

ask him about his country and culture to get beyond the common myths about Middle Eastern people.

Salem Sharata, from Libya, is studying for a doctorate in geology. He said there definitely problems in the Middle East, but that many people tend to "look at the surface rather than at the core of the problem."

The picture of Arabs and the Islam religion we see on television is not accurate, the students said. Saeed told the audience that after the 1979 Islamic Revolution in Iran, many Americans assumed all Muslims were terrorists.

"All Arabs are just human beings like everyone else," said Salem Rashrash, a Libyan student seeking a doctorate degree in hydrology. He said while there are instances of terrorism by Middle Easterners, often Palestinians, it is not representative of an entire culture.

On Nov. 19, Nabti, Hassouna and Hallaj presented a workshop entitled: "The Arab Perspective on the U.S. Role in the Middle East."

After Nabti began the evening by telling the audience of the traditional good relations the Arab world has enjoyed with America, Hallaj explained how that has changed, because "America has become a partner of Israel in the Arab-Israeli conflict."

However, Nabti said America "no longer sees the need to press for self-determination-especially with Palestine."

The Arabs are now being given a new image of America, Hallaj said.

"Most Arabs now know America through Phantom jets and cluster bombs."

Hallaj called America's support of Israel a good example of "welfare corruption."

There is legislation pending in Congress that would make it a felony to be a Palestinian or to aid Palestine in any way, Hallaj said.

How well can Cuddy cut it?

ASUI President-Elect Brad Cuddy is going to have some big shoes to fill — or at least some LONG ones.

That's because although he will take over President Brian Long's office next week, the office doesn't come with instant charisma.

Although students gave Cuddy a 164-point lead in last November's ASUI elections, the people who work with the Senate Finance Committee chairman (and may know him best) haven't rallied around Cuddy like they did when Long cheered his way into office last December.

As Finance Chairman, Cuddy has been accused of withholding financial information from other senators, working behind people's backs and being less than up-front about his future plans.

Brian Long, on the other hand, has been credited for doing an excellent job of being up-front with people and gathering others' opinions before making final plans.

That's not to say that Cuddy deserves the bad rap that some people are giving him. But in a political area, where perception is reality, having a bad "rep" is bad business.

If Cuddy is going to get the cooperation he needs to get things done, he's going to have to have to be ultra-sensitive toward his co-workers.

Vandals stomp Broncos but who could see?

There he goes from the 50-yard line heading towards the end zone.

He stops at the 40, looks up and down the student section, then moves on to the 30. Then to the 20, then 10, then the end zone, then....

Wait, there is nowhere else left to go!

Nowhere?

If you could peel your eyes from the game to watch students pacing the stands, this would have been a typical sight during the University of Idaho-Boise State University football game Nov. 21.

In fact, the sickening thing about the game was not just the horrifying orange tights that the BSU drill squad paraded in during halftime. Nor was it the corny song that the BSU band played 38 times over.

Rather, the biggest fumble of the game was the fact that students were forced to act like football players just to get decent seats.

The ticket office has a normal Kibbie Dome seating arrangement of reserving two entire tiers for general admission on the student side, with the remaining tiers reserved for students.

And although the Boise game was the biggest match of the year for student attendance, no effort was made to make sure there would be adequate student seating.

How could it be that students pay registration fees which include admission to the home football games, but can't seem to find a seat when they get there?

Easy, if you, like the ticket-takers, are more concerned in gate totals than the comfort of the students who indirectly pay your salaries.

Is it necessary for students to pay ASUI fees, athletic fees and building fees and still have to shell out nine bucks to be guaranteed a seat in the Dome?

It certainly was a week and a half ago.

Let's hope that the ticket office will remember to leave the entire North side of the Dome open for students the next time the Broncos come calling.

- Clayton Hailey

Arms control: Thank the Soviets

Mikhail Gorbachev, embarrassingly enough, will be the one to thank for any arms reductions that come out of the December summit meetings.

Secretary of State George P. Schultz said that his meeting last week with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze resulted in "complete agreement on all of the outstanding INF (intermediate-range nuclear forces) issues." President Reagan said he expects the summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to be just as successful.

This agreement, if successful, will eliminate a small fraction of the world's nuclear arms. Although this is certainly a step in a good direction, we should note that we have the Kremlin leaders' patience to thank. It is hard to believe the Soviet Union even talks to us, let alone negotiate an arms treaty after all the ill treatment it has received from the Reagan Administration.

Lawrence T. Caldwell, in the October 1987 edition of Current History outlines the recent arms control attempts of the Soviet Union. Caldwell points out that Gorbachev has taken initiatives, made concessions and been repeatedly snubbed by the Reagan Administration. Here are a few examples:

- In late July 1986, Gorbachev announced a five-month unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing beginning Aug. 6, despite the fact that the Reagan Administration made it clear it would not be a participant. In March, Gorbachev extended the moratorium until "the United States resumes testing." The United States resumed testing nine days later, and still the Soviet Union did not break the moratorium. The moratorium was extended again, until Jan. 1, 1987. The United States again refused to join the moratorium, and the Soviet Union resumed testing on Feb. 26, 1987.

"It would be highly surprising," Caldwell said, "if this policy had not made Gorbachev and other advocates of the policy vulnerable to opponents in the Kremlin."

Matt Helmick
Commentary

- The Soviet Union made a detailed proposal to reduce strategic offensive systems in a major statement on Jan. 16, 1986. Dramatic cuts in Soviet ICBMs were offered. The Soviet ICBMs were precisely the weapons the United States had been attempting to constrain during a previous summit in November 1985. This represented a major concession by the Soviet Union. The United States, however, refusing to parallel the constraint with limits on its own SDI (strategic defense initiative or "Star Wars"), merely let the concession ride to use as a "baseline for further negotiations."

- Caldwell notes that during the spring and summer of 1986, the Reagan Administration began a complex series of bureaucratic squabbles about the interpretation of the 1972-1973 ABM (antiballistic missile) treaty in a way that would permit testing of SDI components. In May, Reagan threatened to exceed the limits of the unratified 1979 SALT II treaty.

- It was Gorbachev who initially tried to make headway regarding INF. In April 1985 he suggested a mutual moratorium on INF, but the proposal was quickly rejected by the United States and NATO because of obvious Soviet superiority in this area. However, Gorbachev in August 1985 offered to reduce its SS-20 forces to a level equal to that of the United States, Britain and France. The United States refused the offer.

- After a visit by Senator Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) to Moscow, Gorbachev announced that he was prepared to negotiate reductions of United States and Soviet INF if he received assurances that Great Britain and France would not increase their own nuclear forces. Again, the United States, refusing the implicit linkages with Britain and France, refused.

- Gorbachev made another major compromise in eliminating its SS-20 forces to a "global zero" in order to comply with the United States' "zero option." NATO however had another reservation. It wanted the Soviet SS-21's and SS-23's in East Germany and Czechoslovakia reduced. Although these weapons had not been included before in any negotiations, Gorbachev made the concession and agreed to a "global double zero" in July, 1987.

- In the Nov. 9 U.S. News and World Report, it is reported that Secretary of State George Schultz cut off talks with Gorbachev when the Soviet leader insisted on restrictions on SDI. Gorbachev was reportedly startled by the walkout.

After all this Gorbachev is still cooperative. Ironically, we may have the Soviets to ultimately thank for the elimination of the nuclear threat— should it ever come about.

Unlock SUB doors for study space

Editor:
During the past semester the SUB has run into problems concerning the availability of space for students. As always, the demand for study space has exceeded the supply.

Unfortunately, lack of space seems to be more prevalent this year than in the past. There are four large meeting rooms on the second floor of the SUB that are intended for the use of recognized clubs; the Chief, Appaloosa, Galena Silver and the Galena Gold. Currently, the rooms are used only by recognized clubs with reservations at least 24 hours in advance by the club's president. These rooms provide a valuable and conducive atmosphere to those clubs. Unfortunately, the rooms are unoccupied a great deal of the time, and the management of the SUB is wasting this space and depriving the students of more room to spread out in a study atmosphere. If the rooms are not reserved, then the SUB should open its doors for the students during all operating hours of the semester.

The three small conference rooms and the barely larger Dipper Room in the basement are insufficient to hold the overflow of the main floor. It is a waste of the student's time to attempt to study at the SUB when in fact there is room for hundreds more that is made unavailable because the doors are locked. The conveniences our student union offers is rendered useless if there is not a table in the house to put your books on. Access to computers, copy machines and the benefits of Campus Quick Copy and the cafeteria are why the SUB is crowded in the afternoons and evenings. The result of the space demand is that students must find alternative areas to study.

I am in no way suggesting that student-affiliated clubs be denied their right to use these rooms. They should have priority if the proper arrangements have been made. Also, they should be expected to kick students out of a room that has been previously reserved. However, if a room is not reserved for any period during the day or there is ample time to allow students to study after a reserved period, then there is no reason the doors should not be unlocked to the students.

The last straw breaks or saves

Editor:
There is a statement from Jesus who has said, "Carelessness in little things means carelessness in larger matters." This is a very profound statement, and we don't have to be Christian to realize the importance of it. If we prove the roots of anything which is wrong - anything which does not work - we would find "small carelessness" in its development. It seems that small carelessnesses are the building blocks of human decline and misfortune. There is another statement, though not from Jesus, which signifies the same concept - killing a camel with a straw. How can you kill a camel with a straw? Well, you put so many straws on the camel's back that if you put one more straw, the camel will kneel down and die. If you don't put that extra straw the camel will still be alive, but with one extra straw you can kill the camel!

Man, as Pascal has said, is just a brittle branch. The difference between breaking the branch and saving it, many times, is just an extra straw. A straw of advice, a straw of knowledge or awareness, a straw of care or help, a straw of understanding and a straw of hope can make the camel of our achievement die or live, the branch of our success break or grow.

Hossein Latifi

I speak for only myself, not God

Editor:
One last letter this semester. I won't be writing again anytime soon. I will not be writing because I have no desire to convert anyone to my point of view, and if I did, a letter to the Argonaut would not be the most effective way. Because I don't believe in God or an afterlife, I don't see that it makes much difference what people believe in (or who they sleep with), provided that they do not infringe the rights of others. I feel I have no real right to try to convert others to my way of thinking, because some people need the solace of religion to keep them from despair or worse.

I was asked in a letter from a Christian fundamentalist who claimed to speak for God (for the sake of argument, he said), "For whom do you claim to speak?" I will not name my inquisitor here as I have in the past, because he will know who he is, and I do not wish to offend. The question once again, for the sake of clarity: "For whom do you propose to speak?" The answer is that I speak for myself and myself alone. I often think it would be much easier for me to get through life if I believed in a god or something else I could accept on the basis of faith alone. But I have no such belief. For me to profess such a belief would be a pointless sham.

I have also been empowered (as a senior member), to speak for the League of Atheist and Agnostic Students. You have probably not heard of us because we are quiet and do not seek to convert others. Also, we are not ASUI-affiliated because of restrictions that such an affiliation would place on us. As I have said, I am empowered to speak for the league, yet I choose not to lest I misrepresent any other member. I speak only for myself. The only thing I would ask of readers, is that they not infringe the rights, or insult the integrity of others because of beliefs which cannot be substantiated this side of death.

Rancid contest causes a stench

Editor:
Over the span of 20 years of college coaching, I have seen, heard and read a lot of questionable material from student newspapers. I can honestly say that I have never seen such poor taste as what you encouraged and published in your paper in preparation for the BSU versus Idaho game. A distinct lack of maturity and an obvious jealousy is evident. The hate BSU contest is rancid. It's amazing to me that the Vandal football team, which had a great year, had to be handicapped with classless actions by its own paper. The world doesn't need any more hate.

As far as the article, "A Little Respect" written by you, Jess, it is totally false and you have violated one of the first rules of a writer - to print the truth. Wherever you got those quotes (probably fabricated) they were most definitely not from me or any of my players. The only thing I mentioned was the one-dimensional concept, which is not negative, but which is pretty obvious to anyone who knows anything at all about football.

It may come as a total shock to you, but Coach Gilbertson and I are good friends and try to act and coach our teams like professionals. We are in this profession to coach and teach not only football, but intrinsic values to the student athletes who participate. We encourage competition at the highest level, but certainly not the hate. We certainly don't need hate contests at a time when both administrations and coaching staffs are trying to promote cooperation.

I have nothing but pity for you and your readers who enjoy this type of literary trash. If you think this is what college life is all about you are sadly mistaken. It's people like you who do so much harm to the name of college athletics by sacrificing principle for your own morbid enjoyment. You are giving a fine university and a great football team a stenchful odor.

Gridmachine takes cake but not frosting

ANALYSIS BY
CLAYTON HAILEY

How does Weber State College spell revenge?
59-30, that's how.

Those in Moscow Saturday during break and attending the first round of the 1987 National Collegiate Division I-AA football championships hoping to get their Vandal "Gridmachine" fix for the week were left short.

Idaho entered its third straight playoff berth Saturday as a result of kicking the Bronco's 40-34 in a "packed-dome" nailbiter the previous weekend, clinching the Big Sky conference title and automatic playoff berth.

Of the 16 slots for the I-AA playoffs, seven are delegated as automatic berths to the seven conferences in the division, while the other nine are reserved for invitations selected by the NCAA Division I-AA Football Committee.

Weber, unlike the Idaho veterans having seen playoff action four times in the past six years, have yet to see a I-AA playoff.

Furthermore, the playoff selection and bracket pairing allowed the Wildcats an opportunity to match wits with the Vandals again, this time perhaps on different terms.

"When we got the selection we were cheering that we were going to play Idaho again and Idaho was probably going 'Weber again, we already beat them once,'" said Wildcat Head Coach Mike Price.

Idaho and Weber both finished the regular season with a 7-2 conference stat boxes and 9-2 overall records. However, Idaho cut the conference edge over Weber during the Wildcat homecoming on the Wasatch front in Ogden.

Idaho slipped past the Wildcats on Halloween 41-38, considering Friesz racked six touchdown passes.

The Vandals, riding high after the emotionally draining Boise stomp, were brought to quick reality Saturday when Friesz was tackled in the back field at Idaho's 37 in the first Idaho possession just three minutes into the game.

scooped up the fumble to set up the Wildcat first that was to set a lead that Idaho could never overcome throughout the game.

The Wildcats scored with a series of short passes and hand-offs to running back Fine Unga who set up Sean Sanders for a short jump into the end zone.

On the next Vandal possession, Idaho scrambled to the 20 for the kick-off return, then produced three first downs in seven plays for a 73-yard gain to Weber's seven-yard line, only to have the touchdown pass intercepted by cornerback Ken Beazer.

Idaho drove hard again on its final two possessions in the first quarter to no avail while Wildcat QB Carlson utilized the services of Unga to move the ball downfield until Sanders was ready to drop the ball for a six-yard run into the end zone.

This same Wildcat offensive strategy allowed Sanders to rack four more touchdowns following Unga's set-ups. Sanders gained a playoff record for the six touchdowns.

The left side of the scoreboard lit up for Idaho in the first series of the second quarter when Decio traded Wildcat kicker Patterson field goals back-to-back, despite interceptions on Carlson and Friesz back-to-back between the field goals.

It wasn't until Weber had Idaho by a 14-point spread in the last few minutes of the second quarter that Friesz dropped a solid pass to Slater for a touchdown from the Weber one-yard line.

Idaho reduced the 14-point spread after a seven-play series resulting in a Pleas punt only to be returned to Idaho because WSC had 12 men on the field.

Idaho rallied another seven plays, totaling 86 yards in six minutes of possession time for a 10-17 score.

It was plays like this that allowed Idaho to look as impressive as always this season as far as statistics are concerned.

Idaho proved once again that it was a passing-oriented offense

Whitman floats to sixth year

BY ERIK SIMPSON

A last second-touchdown catch capped the sixth intramural championship for the Whitman Hall Ultimate Frisbee team over the Delta Chi fraternity team just before Thanksgiving break.

With only 30 seconds remaining in the game, the two teams were tied. As the Delta Chis moved the disc down the field, Whitman Hall middle Terry Evans slapped down a pass to give Whitman Hall possession. Evans picked up the disc and rifled it 65 yards down field to striker Steve Krakenberg as the clock expired to give Whitman Hall a tough 12-11 victory.

"I felt we met our best competition in the championship game, although we didn't have a great night," Dan Moore, one of four Whitman Hall team captains, said.

Moore said that his team had very little playing time prior to the championship game because many of the other scheduled games had been forfeited. He also felt that fatigue was a factor during the championship game because both teams had to play three nights in a row.

According to Delta Chi member Mike Walrath, his team also didn't compete against any other team until the third round.

The Delta Chis were also undefeated during the season. "It (the championship game) was the toughest game we had all year," Walrath said.

The championship game itself was very close; only one point separated the two teams. The Delta Chi team scored three quick points at the beginning of the game; however, the Whitman team rallied to end the half one point up.

At the start of the second half, the Delta Chis once again came out hot and tied the score. Throughout the rest of the game the two teams swapped leads.

Krakenberg, who has been with the Whitman team for six years, was crowned MVP by the team members.

Ladies break season opener

BY MIKE LEWIS

The Idaho Lady Vandals basketball team kicked off their season in the Mark IV Classic over the weekend, and although they lost the battle, they have plenty of time to win the war. Idaho fell to Portland State 83-63 Friday night and lost Saturday night's consolation game 69-52 at the hands of Southern Methodist University. Idaho was unable to put many points on the board in the first half of Friday night's matchup with Portland State, shooting a paltry 33 percent from the floor, which combined with nine points earned on the free throw line, were good for only 25 points to PSU's 35. The Lady Vandals pulled it together in the second half, but their 38 points were not enough to put down Portland's well-lanced offensive attack. Four Idaho Vikings cracked double-digits in the scoring column, while Sherry Peterson, Lori Elkins and Sabrina Dial were high-scorers for Idaho with 13 each.

"We need better performance out of our front line," said Idaho coach Laurie Turner, "as well as rebounding." Things were not much better for Coach Turner's squad Saturday, as they again shot terribly, hitting only 27.8 percent of their field goal attempts and yielding a bucket to every player but one on the SMU team. Turner's wish for more rebounds came true however, as the Lady Vandals wiped the glass for boards, led by Lori Elkins with 11, and guard Sherry Peterson with nine. Elkins was the Idaho high-scorer with 14, only one behind SMU's Jeannia Nix, who had game high 15 points. Turner was impressed with the play of her starting guards Jennifer Ballenger and Sherry Peterson, both freshmen.

FRESHMAN guard Sherry Peterson checks a two-point attempt by a Portland State Viking during Friday night action of the Mark IV Classic. (ARGONAUT/Stephanie Worley)

This season's Classic marked the seventh year of its existence, with Idaho posting a now 10-4 record in Classic play. In the past, they have won four Mark IV titles, with a second and a third. Turner takes her squad on the road next weekend to Cheney, Washington, for the Cavanaugh's Wheatland Classic in which they will clash with Palouse rival Washington State in the first round.

with no surprises, but consistent plays.

Friesz passed for 431 yards on 54 attempts, 31 of which were completed. This was two shy of the six touchdown passes Friesz reeled in on the Wasatch Front.

Adding the total net yards, Idaho statistically played as a close game as the Boise game the previous weekend, but the final score on the score board is what counts.

The Vandal offense also racked up 26 rushing attempts for 75 yards gained.

Comparatively, Carlson chalked up 284 net yards rushing with 51 attempts among the 75 offensive plays, 24 of which were pass plays for 213 yards.

Idaho never did overcome the lead the Wildcats set in the first quarter that spanned from seven points to 29 by the end of the game.

The turning point of the game came finally in the third quarter.

It was halfway through the third quarter (11:20), Idaho was down 31-10.

Idaho received the kickoff on its 39 and in four plays brought the game to the Weber 48. Friesz found John Jake for a smooth touchdown, then Decicio pulled in his consistent extra point to bring the Vandals within two touchdowns of a tie.

The momentum of the crowd finally kicked in with the chance that Idaho might have been on a roll with enough juice left to catch up to the Wildcats.

The momentum of the fans didn't drop, even though WSC countered our TD with another Sanders run to keep a 38-17 lead because Idaho rallied another Friesz-to-Jake pass to stay in the running.

Weber pulled to 52 in the last 47 seconds of the third quarter to drain the Idaho momentum and juice to catch up.

The Wildcats set a goal and reached it: to beat Idaho.

"We executed what we wanted to do," said Wildcat QB Carlson. "We executed our game plan and they didn't stop us."

Actually, Idaho was drained even before the game began. The Boise kicking and winning the Big Sky was the climatic point for the Idaho gridmachine.

And Idaho showed it. "I felt flat," said defensive tackle Kord Smith. "I felt flat after coming off a big game with BSU." The Boise game was and always is the big game of the year for Idaho.

Idaho rumbled in a record packed dome of 16,500 to kick the Broncos in a nailbiter Saturday before Thanksgiving, and most Idaho fans are happy with just that, including Coach Gilbertson.

"For us, it is the 10 game season, play Boise and win the Big Sky," Gilbertson said. "Anything after that is frosting."

Weber now heads off to visit Marshall, who like WSC also made its first appearance in the I-AA playoffs.

Marshall University, of Huntington, West Virginia defeated James Madison University Saturday 41-12 while rolling 499 yards of offense behind sophomore quarterback Tony Petersen.

In our four playoff opportunities, Idaho only once has made it past the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

In 1982 Idaho defeated Montana 21-7 in the first round of the playoffs only to be beaten by Eastern Kentucky 38-30 the following week.

The 1985 playoffs saw Idaho get skimmed by then Big Sky wannabe Eastern Washington in one of the most frustrating games in recent Vandal action. EWU slipped by 42-38.

Last season Idaho was sunk by the Wolf Pack 27-7.

Robertson burns on comeback trail

Robbie Robertson
Robbie Robertson
(Geffen)

This is probably the most eagerly anticipated album of the year, not only because of Robertson's undisputed status as legend, genius and god, but also because of the current visibility of his and the Band's influence, what with the '60s revival (spurred by the soundtrack of The Big Chill, which featured Robbie's "The Weight"), the rise of roots rock and the world-domination appeal of a certain band from Ireland that owes more to Robbie and the Band than they care to admit. In sum, the Second Coming of Robbie Robertson is upon us.

A brief review for the uninitiated: Robbie Robertson was leader

ANGEL FLIGHT

WHAT IS IT? Angel Flight is a professional, honorary, service organization that supports the community, campus, and aerospace power (specifically, the U.S. Air Force and Air Force ROTC), without military obligation.

There will be an information session with a question and answer period, on December 13 in the SW Ballroom at the SUB at 8:00 p.m. If you have any immediate questions, contact Cadet Dale Williams, at 335-4321 in the ground floor of Thompson Hall at WSU, or at home at 332-6052.

of the Band, nee' the Hawks, history's greatest backup band (behind Bob Dylan) and one of the most important bands of the '70s, inspiration to that guy from New Jersey, that guy from Florida, that guy from Indiana and a host of others. After the Band went kablooney (leaving behind the greatest concert film ever made, The Last Waltz, as a document) Robbie embarked on a nine-year odyssey in wild living, frustrated dreams of movie stardom and general willful obscurity, before deciding to make this album, his first as a solo. That decision came three years ago, and he's been working on this album all that time. As of this writing, Robbie Robertson is the second-most costly album (to produce) of all time, after Fleetwood Mac's Tusk. One would expect it to be good.

It is. Very good. Great. Even better (dare I say it?) than the last album from that Irish band. A friggin' masterpiece. Definitely worth nearly a million dollars of David Geffen's net worth.

This album is full of surprises. Those of you expecting the Band's bucolic, folk-rooted excursions into Americana had best stick with Bruce Hornsby—this record is ultra high-tech, completely modern, very '80s. Those of you expecting guest artists like Joni Mitchell and Neil Young best keep listening to the soundtrack from The Last Waltz—Robertson is backed up here by such artists-of-the-moment as the BoDeans, Lone Justice's Maria McKee, Peter Gabriel (and his incredible drummer, Manu Katche) and, yes, That Band From Ireland.

Gabriel and TBF are here because they share a producer, Daniel Lanois, with Robertson, and because Robbie took so damn long to get his act together that Lanois had to produce So and The Joshua Tree in his spare time. One presumes he said "Hey guys, why don't I bring Robbie with me, and maybe we can record some tracks while Bono's out savin' souls." Or something like that.

(By the way, Robbie's ex-bandmates Garth Hudson and Rick Danko are also on the disc, but they really aren't that noticeable. Another interesting sessionman is drummer Terry Bozzio, of Missing Persons.)

The album's lead-off track, "Fallen Angel," is an elegy to another Band member, the late great keyboardist-vocalist Richard Manuel, whose suicide last year killed a voice of a generation and put an end to his own prolonged misery. Katche's drums and Gabriel's own keyboards and vocals make the song sound a hell of a lot like "Red Rain," but they also add perfect counterpoint to Robertson's truly beautiful lyrics album is full of truly beautiful lyrics and plaintive voice that is like the keening of an old woman, or the high lonesome of the best traditional African music). Robertson will win any prizes for the quality of his voice, but it certainly isn't and it's perfect for this and all other songs on this album. It's exciting to discover what until now an unknown artist—Danko, Manuel and Helm, great voices all, handle the vast majority of Band Plant), the song bears their stamp—but Robbie's awesome guitar playing and pungent lyrics, far more concrete and even more evocative than anything Bono ever has come up with, make the track as good as both acts combined, which is about as good as rock gets. (Don't miss the Edge and Robbie's shared solo at the end—it will truly blow your mind.)

The other Yoo Too song, "Testimony," also features the Gil Evans horn section (prominent on Sting's "Little Wing") and tells the story as much as any song here—"Come bear witness, the half-breed rides again/In these hands I've held the broken dream." Both an autobiography and a call to arms ("Are you ready to take the heat/Are you ready to blow the steam/Are you ready to bag the street/You got nothing to lose but your chains"), "Testimony," which closes the album, leaves you certain that Robbie is ready to make himself heard, and felt. (In case you're wondering, Robertson's mother is a Native American, hence the "half-breed" bit.)

In between "Fallen Angel" and "Testimony" are a bunch of great rock songs, the kind that make you glad to live in a country where this is allowed to exist. "Broken Arrow" is not the Neil Young song but an immeasurably better one, a brilliantly imagistic love poem with a sinuous beat and steamy lyrics ("I want to breathe when you breathe/When you whisper like the hot summer breeze/Count the beads of sweat that cover me." Try that on a sorority girl sometime.)

To conclude, Robbie Robertson has everything rock should have—passion without posing, power without preaching, message and meaning and hot licks galore. And you can dance to it. I would shell out the beer money on this one.

Def Leppard hits Palouse

Fans can plan on getting "hysterical" Wednesday night when the hard-rock band Def Leppard comes to the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum.

The 8 p.m. concert backs up the release of the group's fourth album, Hysteria, which was more than three years in the making.

Tickets for the concert are available at the coliseum box office or through G&B Select-a-Seat outlets.

CUB hosts final fall show

The Compton Union Gallery at Washington State University is closing out its fall exhibition season with "Art in Contrast," works by Shawn Langley and John Renn. The exhibit runs through Dec. 11.

Langley is an Idaho native who studied fine art at the University of Idaho and William Patterson College in New Jersey. Although she has lived in the East, she still considers herself a westerner and tries to inject that element of her interest into her art.

Renn is from Washington state and studies architecture at WSU. Working in oils, acrylics and monoprints, he draws on his Pacific Northwest and European experiences in his art.

WANT TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF AIR FORCE ROTC?

Not all colleges and universities offer Air Force ROTC. If you want the advantages of Air Force ROTC and your school doesn't have the program, you still may be able to participate. Ask about the "crosstown" program. You may be able to take Air Force ROTC at another college in your area.

We have four- and two-year programs that lead to an Air Force commission. You may also apply for a scholarship that pays some college expenses, plus $100 tax free per academic month. Contact:
