

State Board approves budget, considers proposal

By Beth Howard
Editor

The Idaho State Board of Education approved a $122 million annual budget for higher education as Idaho's four college and universities met in Boise last week.

The budget, $7 million less than the amount requested by the institutions, is a 13.5 percent increase over last year's $105.9 million budget. The University of Idaho felt the pinch as its $50.5 million request was cut to $47.7 million.

The board also discussed a proposal which would seek to finance building around the state through a $45 million bond package which the board hopes to present to the Idaho state legislature.

The proposal, although still in the formative stages, concerned some student leaders who fear fee replacement may come up as an option for payment on the bond if the legislature were to fail to appropriate the necessary funds.

ASUI President Brad Cuddy said, "I don't dispute the fact that the buildings are needed, but the area in which the students might part company with the state board and administrators is on how the buildings are going to be funded".

In other board business, UI President Richard Gibb and Lewis Clark State College President Lee Vickers protested a proposed job description that would give the board executive director more power over college and university presidents.

"I don't see any difference between this and a chancellor system. It should be done directly instead of what is being done indirectly" Gibb said.

After extended debate, the board passed the proposal strengthening the role of their chief executive officer with a slight modification to the proposed job description — the deletion of a section which would have required presidents to report all contact with individual board members to the executive director.

The new job description includes the responsibilities of:

— Recommending the dismissal or hiring of higher education presidents and board agency heads.

— Exercising "control" to insure board policies are carried out between all institutions in budgeting, curriculum, research, extension and public service.

— Announcing all board policies. Presidents may not announce any board policy until authorized by the executive director.

Frats help farms

By Shery Deal
Staff Writer

Six UI fraternities and a group of ROTC members and staff spent one weekend this month loading hay to send to farmers back east.

On Saturday, Sept. 11, Navy and Air Force ROTC members and Army staff, along with the Sigma Chi fraternity, spent most of the morning in the fields. According to Captain Ken Firoded, there were about 180 ROTC members and 25 Sigma Chi members there.

Firoded said the young men got to meet farmers from Iowa and North Dakota. Although his group was there primarily to help the Iowa farmers, he was able to send 25 men to help the North Dakota farmers since he had so many volunteers.

Firoded compared the activity to an old fashioned barn raiser. The volunteers had a good time, and it was for an absolutely worthwhile cause. "I think that it was probably one of the best things that we've been involved with as a unit since I've been here," Firoded said.

Last Saturday, Sept. 18, the Delta Tau Delta, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Theta Chi, and Lambda Chi Alpha fraternities bucked bales.

Debate program slated

International and American students, and members of the community will get a chance to view part of the American election process Sept. 22 and 25.

The occasion is a program titled "The 1988 Presidential Debate: A Cross-Cultural Look." It will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 22, and tentatively from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Sept. 25. Both sessions are in the Silver Room in the Student Union Building.

Gleanne Wray, program coordinator for the UI International Trade and Development Office, said the general idea is to give international students, American students and community members a chance to get together to view the TV debate between George Bush and Michael Dukakis. Afterwards, a discussion will be held and a vote will be taken to see whom the audience thinks "won" the debate.

"Our interest stemmed from questions directed to us by wives of international students during last spring's primaries. International students' perceptions of the American political process are very interesting, and we think the program will be a good experience for everyone."

A key program goal is to provide international students a better understanding of the American political process, especially the presidential election, in hopes America will be understood by the international community.

The Sept. 22 activities consist of a pre-debate workshop. It will start with an overview of the American presidential election process, and how earlier debates affected the elections.

Videotaped highlights of earlier debates will be used to illustrate key points, followed by a discussion.

Barring unforeseen changes, the Sept. 25 session will feature the first television debate between presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis, the post-debate analysis, and the poll to see which candidate "won." Afterwards, the audience will split into smaller groups to discuss the debate's significance.

Program leaders will be Al Rouyer, professor and chair of the political science depart-

Asbestos removal at UI continues

By Alan Solan
Staff Writer

In response to a heightened awareness of the health hazards of asbestos, the University of Idaho has developed an ongoing asbestos abatement program and established policies and procedures for the management of asbestos in all university facilities.

In 1986, the Environmental Protection Agency proposed an immediate ban on the major uses of asbestos and a complete ban on all asbestos products within the next decade. But according to UI Risk Management Officer, Carol Grupp, the UI Physical Plant has been working at removing asbestos from UI buildings for about four years.

Since the inception of this program, the UI has identified various forms of asbestos in most buildings on campus and in many off-campus locations. Where asbestos has been positively identified in a form that could be easily pulverized and thus released into the air, labels indicating its presence have been affixed. A program of inspection and testing continues.

"We have a lot to do yet," Grupp said Saturday.

Grupp said the UI Physical Plant has about $6 million available to spend on asbestos abatement on the UI campus. The university has spent about $500,000 so far, she said.

Asbestos is obtainable by various underground mining methods, but the most common method is open-pit mining. Only about six percent of mined ore contains usable fibers.

Many man-made fibers are manufactured in single-fiber form. Asbestos on the other hand, occurs naturally as bundles of fibers. In addition, asbestos continues to split into smaller and smaller bundles as it is mined and manufactured. This characteristic, combined with the fibers ability to remain suspended in air for long periods of time makes the material easy to inhale once it is airborne.

There are three main asbestos related diseases. The first is called asbestosis. Asbestosis is caused by heavy, and usually long-term exposure to asbestos. It is a progressive disease, resulting from scarring of the lung tissue. Victims experience shortness of breath and are more likely to develop lung cancer.

The latency period for asbestosis is from 15-35 years following initial exposure. Victims usually die of heart failure because of the the extra stress put on the cardiovascular system.

The second, and most prevalent form of asbestos-related disease, is lung cancer. More than half the deaths attributable to asbestos exposure are from lung cancer. Asbestos workers who smoke one pack of cigarettes a day are 50 times more likely to contract lung cancer than non-smoking workers.

The third asbestos-related disease is mesothelioma, an inoperable cancer of the lung lining and abdominal cavity. Linked almost exclusively to asbestos exposure, the disease is usually fatal within a year of diagnosis.

Asbestos is the fibrous form of several minerals and hydro-

Fair: a prelude to homecoming

By Mike Lyon
Staff Writer

Saturday at noon, Moscow's skies will be filled with 10,000 helium balloons containing a University of Idaho Centennial message. The balloons will be released prior to a speech by President Gibb about the upcoming UI Centennial week, said Student Centennial Celebration Chairman Eric Debord.

Centennial week will be a pre-function of events that gear the campus up for the 100th homecoming. UI Centennial Week begins on Saturday, Sept. 24 and will continue through the end of homecoming.

According to Debord, this weekend's centennial fair will consist of hot air balloon rides on Saturday from 12 p.m. to 3 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; horse and buggy campus tours 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday. There will also be a kite flying contest on Sunday from 1 to 2 p.m. and various student and professional booths with arts, crafts and food all weekend at Guy Wicks Field. Housing groups wishing to enter a money making booth should call Shelley Watson at 885-6646. The cost of entering a booth is $15.

During centennial week, campus musicians will be performing at the Memorial Gym, or between the library and the UCC building from 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. from Monday through Friday. On Sept. 29 there will be an all-campus exchange between a Greek house and a residence hall.

About 275 men were present. Lance Armstrong from Phi Gamma Delta, estimated that the fraternities together donated 600-700 man hours to the cause.

The fraternities also had a good time while loading hay. According to Scott Shern, a Delta Tau Delta member, three of the houses had a competition to make things more fun. They had a race to see which house could load a boxcar with hay the fastest. Shern said the Delta Tau Delta fraternity won the race.

None of the house members had the opportunity to meet any farmers from Iowa or North Dakota, but all of them had very positive attitudes about the project. "I feel it is unique that this community can call upon the Greek system for help and get a good turnout," Shern said.

All of the fraternities seemed to share the idea that we are located in a prosperous area where farmers are able to raise successful crops, and it gives one a good feeling to be able to help out those who aren't as fortunate.

About three weeks ago, members of Farmhouse fraternity and students from the College of Agriculture, also helped in the fields hauling hay.

Panel discusses Palestine

A discussion of the Palestine issue will initiate the first "Lunch and Learn" noon-hour seminar today.

"The Palestinian Question-A Panel Discussion" will take place at 12:30-1:30 p.m. in the KIVA/UI Education Building today. The panel discussion is the first of a series of the "Lunch and Learn International Seminars" sponsored by the UI International Trade and Development Office.

Today's panelists are Shaikh Ghazanfar, professor of economics and Amos Yoder, Borah distinguished professor of political science. Al Rouyer, associate professor of political science, will serve as the moderator. The event is co-sponsored by the UI Political Science Department.

All individuals from the UI and local communities are invited to the seminar. This is a "Lunch and Learn" seminar so persons attending may bring a sack lunch if they wish.

The following topics and presenters for future "Lunch and Learn" seminars have been announced: "Japanese Culture" will be the topic on Oct. 5, presented by Hiroyuki Ariyoshi, senior consul of the Japanese Embassy in Seattle. This seminar will take place at Renfrew Hall, room 126.

Visiting scholars, Song Bingyu and An Ning from the People's Republic of China will present "China's Education System" on Nov. 17 at the KIVA/Education Building.

Any individuals with suggestions for spring semester topics and departments interested in co-sponsoring a seminar may contact ITAD at 885-8984 or Frank Leonhardy at 885-6189.

the fibrous forms of calcium and iron. Asbestos fibers can be molded into various fabrics.

Because it is non-flammable and a poor heat conductor, asbestos has been widely used to make fireproof products such as safety clothing for firefighters and insulation products such as those used on pipes, hot water heaters and boilers. Floor tile, rolled linoleum, ceiling tile, roofing materials, and building siding may also contain asbestos.

Any these materials found on campus are considered suspect and should not be disturbed until positive identification by means of laboratory sample analysis confirms the absence of asbestos.

If asbestos is found to be present, UI policy requires special precautions to be taken, and in most cases, for any work involving these materials to be performed by asbestos abatement personnel.

UI asbestos abatement personnel are specially trained and are certified according to the standards of Washington state, Grupp said.

During a full-scale asbestos abatement project, the area is enclosed in plastic to prevent particles from escaping. Workers wear masks and disposable Tyvek suits that asbestos fibers cannot penetrate. The workers shower and dispose of the suits before leaving the enclosure. Since asbestos containing material is not considered a toxic waste, it is legal to bury it in a landfill provided it is triple bagged, Grupp said.

Asbestos insulation is typically white, light grey, or light brown. Fiberglass, which has silicates of magnesium. The name may also be applied to replaced asbestos as pipe insulation material in recent installations, is usually a pink or yellow fibrous insulation and can be visually distinguished from asbestos.

When suspect materials are encountered, persons are urged not to touch or otherwise disturb them. Persons may call the Safety Office at 885-6524 for help in identifying or managing the material.

Removal or disturbance of asbestos by unauthorized personnel is in violation of university policy and creates a safety hazard. The person responsible may be subject to disciplinary action.

Increased enrollment in ROTC

By Christy Kretschmer
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho has seen a considerable increase in its number of ROTC army recruits this year.

According to Major Tim Cannon, a "scout" for the UI, there are two main reasons for the increasing popularity of ROTC programs at Idaho. The main reason seems to be the financial incentives offered by the program.

Other than paying for the cadet's schooling as planned, an additional scholarship has been offered for the past two years to out-of-state recruits who are shopping for schools. This is a $1,000 scholarship and has no strings attached, but is usually used for room and board. The other attraction for the cadets is the obvious value of going in the service as an officer.

But why the increase now, when it seems that most people are complaining that the American youth is indifferent? And why Idaho? Cannon believes that "we've had the potential at the university for a wide spread program, but have only recently realized it".

The military science course here is purposely non-threatening for the new cadets. In addition, the program is geared towards things that the students enjoy, such as adventure training and rappelling. They also visit Fort Lewis, an army installation in Washington, to "get the feel for real military living".

The army has also invested a great sum of money in hiring Young and Rubicomb to do their advertising. Cannon does not think that this is a deciding factor in the swelling of UI's ranks, though. Idaho's ROTC

OPINION

Reason be praised over traditional values

By Todd Harper
Commentary

Lets talk about "traditional values." What exactly are they? Conservatives are always blathering about how this country needs to return to them, but an exact explanation is never offered. Generally, if we want to return to something, we first have to go back to wherever it was we started from. How far does our society have to regress to return to traditional values? That question is usually answered with the typical obscurities about returning to a "family centered" society and bringing God back into the classroom — although it's anybody's guess as to whose version of God should be included with the three R's.

Perhaps those proponents of traditional values want us to return to the days when women were expected to know their place in the home and in society. What this usually meant was that women were expected to be submissive to their husbands, keep quiet and raise the kids. If this isn't "traditional" enough, we can go back father to the days when sex was considered repulsive, when women couldn't vote and could not own property. Still not traditional enough? OK, let's go back even farther to the days when America was still an agricultural society, when there were no telephones, no TV, no instantaneous communication; women were little more than slaves to their reproductive systems and considered the "property" of we've managed to survive in spite of it and those who oppose it. Reason be praised.

their husbands. Perhaps by traditional, conservatives mean we should return to the Middle Ages when medicine was based on superstition and when plagues and natural disasters were thought to be the work of demons or God. If we want to get really traditional (and ridiculous), we can go all the way back to when humans lived in small hunting and gathering bands and every day was a struggle to just survive.

So how far do we have to go before we've returned to the so-called "traditional values?" Not even conservatives know. It's just a convenient ideology to tout with conviction — especially if you're a presidential candidate in a country full of irrational people who are afraid of the future. The call to return to "traditional values" is not unique to this part of the twentieth century. As long as there's been progress, there have been those who opposed it. Conservatives can be happy that at least one aspect of our culture hasn't changed too much over the last 300 years — capitalism and the greed that it spawns.

Today's conservatives are not unlike those of the Middle Ages. Back then, they couldn't bear the fact that the Earth was not the center of the universe and that ape-descendant life on the planet was but an insignificant happenstance in the vastness of space. As a result, they too fought progress and the new knowledge and called for a return to comforting ignorance. There is a lesson to be learned from history for those who are willing to study it. It's human nature to be uneasy with change but as a race,

Harper a "religious fanatic"

Editor;

Todd Harper is a profoundly religious individual. While he seems to enjoy ridiculing what he labels "religious fanaticism", his reasoning mirrors the very thing he seems to detest. In Harper's religion he doesn't worship the God of the Bible, nor does he apparently serve the god of any other theistic religion. But he does worship a god.

Since he has removed the transcendent, all-powerful, omniscient God from the picture, he can now be his own god, deciding for himself what's right or wrong, being his own absolute authority. The god he worships is himself and his own peculiar brand of reasoning.

This raises a few questions. Can Mr. Harper prove scientifically the existence of his god? What proof does he have that his god is trustworthy? Can his god make a mistake or be inaccurate? My point is this: Todd Harper's god leaves him with both feet firmly planted in mid-air. He appeals to reason and rationality but has nothing to reason from other than his own thoughts and opinions (his god).

Therefore, any means of understanding his god will be totally subjective and will require blind faith. That makes Todd Harper by his own definition a "religious fanatic".

Antiperspirants and mud wasps

Editor;

This year the mud wasps are the worst I've seen in 10 to 15 years. Mud wasps need no provocation, they attack at will. Yesterday I got my sixth sting in 5 days.

Then it flashed on me, the number one first aid for bee or wasp stings: antiperspirants. The drawing action of the antiperspirants will draw the venom before it enters the body.

Thought I'd let you know.

Invest, don't divest !!!!

Editor;

In Beth Howard's editorial (Sept. 2) and Greg Meyer's letter to the editor (Sept. 9), they insult the UI student mentality. I feel I need to defend the intelligence and integrity of my peers and myself.

Some would have us believe that the divestment of our schools funds in companies dealing in South Africa will show our social intelligence, conscience, and somehow strike a blow against apartheid. Beth Howard supports divestment by calling the UI too greedy to pull its investments and Greg Meyer, a "teaching assistant", goes as far as to call us shameful and having no conscience. This is the way they support their arguments. Greg, Beth, pull you heads out of the sands of conformity for just a minute and look at the issues.

Assuming the divestment proponents are right, forcing our companies to pull out of South Africa will cripple the economy, causing large scale unemployment and starvation. Realize, please, that the unemployment and starvation will be of the black factory workers, not the white elite. Also, the only present political voice of the blacks, the labor unions, will be powerless.

Having our companies healthy and strong and in South Africa is the best way to fight apartheid. Our example of a nonsegregated work force will speak where our absence will not.

South Africa is the last country we should undermine. The respected Freedom House yearbook listed 30 countries in Africa as less free than South Africa. We pick on South Africa because it is fashionable to be "anti-racist". The black work force owns more private automobiles than the whole population of Russia. More than a million illegal black immigrants overrun South Africa each year to get in to the country. I guess they figure a vote is a good sacrifice for the chance to work and eat. Let's not destroy that option.

Apartheid is bad. Let's be rational about our action against it. Instead of rashly striking out, let's take a positive step in the right direction. UI Foundation, invest, not divest in South Africa.

Palouse aid for the Nicaraguans

Editor:

Nicaragua has been at war with the U.S.-funded contras for seven years. Many people including me, feel this war is unjustified; others disagree. But one fact remains: in war, civilians suffer.

By 1987, the Nicaraguan war had orphaned 8,000 children and displaced 270,000 people. Many had fled, taking with them only what they could carry. The rural poor, as well, have borne much of the brunt of this war. These people's need for basic supplies is great.

Since 1984, Quixote Center, a Roman Catholic-based peace and justice organization, has taken the lead in coordinating the shipment of clothing, food, medicine and other humanitarian aid to these Nicaraguans. Over 630 other organizations — civic, political and religious — are co-sponsors of this effort.

The aid is shipped by boat to Nicaragua, where it is distributed by the (Jesuit) Institute of John XXIII and the Nicaraguan Red Cross. Aid goes to those who need it, regardless of religion or political preference. This true humanitarian aid is legal, since it is exempted from the U.S. economic embargo against Nicaragua.

From now until September

28th, local residents can contribute directly to Quixote Center's efforts. The Coalition for Central America is sponsoring a drive for the following supplies: summer-weight cotton and cotton-blend clothing in good condition, for men, women, and children (no women's shorts, please); children's sports equipment, soccer balls, frisbees, dolls and washable stuffed animals; and fabrics and basic sewing supplies.

The materials should be in containers marked "Nicaraguan aid" and can be delivered to the Campus Christian Center, University of Idaho or 1118 King Road, Moscow (leave in carport).

Contributions are also needed to cover the $2.50 per cubic foot shipping cost. Checks should be made out to Quixote Center and mailed to the Coalition for Central America, Box 9032, Moscow, ID 83843. Donations are tax-deductible.

For further information, please call Joan Brigham, 332-4295, after 3 pm.

A taste of chocolate

Editor:

Let's cut the bull. You and everybody else in Idaho knows that the state Human Rights Commission was created to battle the growing want for an all-white state led by Richard Butler and the rest of the Idaho super-christians. Furthermore, if you want abortion to be on the commission agenda why don't you go work with them? It is a democratic organization. It is obvious that you are trying to discourage people from listening to commission points of view.

Your racial views are very thinly veiled. Chocolate and vanilla ice cream? Give me a break. What you are really worried about is if your sister got a taste of chocolate she might like it. Next thing you know she would want a taste of red cherry, then yellow banana, neopolatin, or creme 'd coaco. I guess one would say that she had some really pluralistic taste buds. Although, you attend a virtually all white school I think that perhaps a cultural exchange semester at the University of Pretoria might be a gratifying experience for you.

— Fred Wallin

Law should enforce!!!

Editor:

Why is it that whenever a football player steps out of line in his private life everyone jumps on the coach? A football coach, by the definition of the term, is responsible for his players only. If a football player breaks the law on his own time, the press should not go to the coach for comments, nor should the coach be expected to punish him. That's why we have a judicial system and a police force. They are the enforcers of the law, not the coach.

When a non-athletic student is arrested you don't see the press hounding his professors or advisors for comments, and neither are these professors or advisors expected to punish the student in anyway.

Also, I don't see why this incident of two people being arrested was on the sports page. Stealing is not a game, and these people were not acting in their capacities as sportsmen. It is a completely legal matter and should be handled as such.

But, should any special treatment be awarded by the legal system on the basis of their identity as football players, that would be another matter completely.

program has never been very influenced by the army advertising schemes. The university seems to succeed at a more personal level.

The exact number of cadets at Idaho is now at 144 but the freshman and sophomores are not obligated to the program until their junior year. For this reason, Cannon sometimes refers to these students as "tourists". In this respect, this is probably the first time Moscow has been invaded by such a large group of "tourists."

Idaho 0-2 after tough weekend play

By Mike Lewis
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho volleyball team lost six straight games en route to losing their first two conference matches of the season last weekend. The Lady Vandals lost to Boise State Friday night 17-15, 15-10, 15-11, and to defending conference champion Idaho State 15-12, 15-11, 15-12 Saturday.

With the two losses, Idaho slips to 5-5 overall this season, and 0-2 in conference play. Boise State and Idaho State are tied for the conference lead with Montana, each team with a 2-0 conference record.

"Boise State should be credited for their ball control," Idaho head coach Pam Brade-tich said. "They are living up to their pre-season ranking. Idaho State simply outplayed us. They dictated the tempo of the game and we didn't play our game."

Susan Deskines led the Lady Vandals, though not with her usual dominating style, with 18 kills and 11 digs.

Idaho holds off UOP

By Joe Hughes
Sports Editor

It seemed a little too close for comfort by the end of the game, but the University of Idaho Vandals held on in the fourth quarter to defeat the University of the Pacific Tigers 36-26 and boost their record to 2-0.

Bruce Harris and John Jake were bright spots for the Vandals as Harris rushed for 160 yards in 20 attempts and Jake returned a kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown.

Harris' performance was the first time a Vandal running back has rushed for over 100 yards in 28 games dating back to 1985. He also scored a touchdown and now holds the top four rushing performances in the last 28 games.

Jake broke many tackles and criss-crossed all over the field during his kickoff return and finished it by diving into the end zone from exhaustion. "John Jake got us going," head football coach Keith Gilbertson said. "What a super-human effort that was. It got us rolling and we scored a lot of points and got a lot of yards."

Quarterback John Friesz finished the game 17-35 for University of Idaho Rugby Club player Dave Bear kicked a last-second, game-winning penalty shot Saturday in the Vandals 9-8 victory over Spokane at Guy Wicks field.

The Vandals A team, 2-0 in exhibition play, trailed Spokane for most of the contest, but pulled out the win with Bear's three point penalty kick, which was the last play of the game.

"It was really exciting," said rugby coach and president Matt Hansen. "I was impressed with Dave's kick. It won us the game."

Hughes named academic advisor

Ed Hughes, an English lecturer at the University of Idaho, has joined the UI Athletic Department as a part-time academic coordinator.

The position was created by UI athletic director Gary Hunter, who arrived in Moscow this past summer and was the need for an academic coordinator. Hughes will work in the athletic department on Tuesdays and Thursdays each week.

Hughes said his position is "to foster the academic success of the student-athlete and increase his or her potential for graduation and future career success. This mandates the coordination of academic advisors, coaches, student services and the student-athletes themselves."

Originally from New Jersey, Hughes has received degrees from the University of California-Berkeley and the UI. He has taught literature and writing classes at the UI since 1983.

"Having taught in the English department several years, I've seen the problems students have in balancing athletics and academics," Hughes said. "My sensitivity for the student-athlete emerges from a love of athletics, as well as an understanding that academic success is the key to personal success.

"I hope to make them understand that education is a life-long process," he added. "I have a desire to continue becoming, as well as motivate the student-athlete to want to become, a well-rounded person of which the university can be proud."

Hughes will maintain office hours all day Tuesday and Thursday in the east end of the Kibbie Dome in room 235W. His office phone is 885-0200.

team's defense against Spokane. "We played on Spokane's side of the field most of the game," said Hansen. "Our efforts made it hard for them to score."

Center forward Paul Reisenburg was impressed with the Vandal's physical condition. "We played 40 minute halves instead of the usual 30 minute halves in this game," he said. "We played well and found out we are in pretty good shape."

In addition to Bear's game-winning kick, he and Will Halstead accumulated the rest of the Vandal's points.

The Vandal B team, comprised mostly of rookies, also fared well by beating Gonzaga 20-6, improving their record to 1-1.

"A lot of the old vets on the A team will be graduating this year," Hansen said. "It's good to see the young players on the B team play so well. It's encouraging for the future of the club."

Hansen said the exhibition games are helping the teams get back into the swing of things and preparing them for league play, which begins in October.

"It's tough for the new guys to improve without playing," he said. "Experience is the name of the game, and the exhibition games are giving us experience," Hansen said.

The Vandals, who will be playing on the road for the next 3 weeks, will travel to McCall, Id. this weekend and compete against Snake River on Saturday and Boise State University on Sunday.

Cross country teams place fourth

By Sharon Bloomsburg
Staff Writer

University of Idaho's cross country teams are off to a running start.

The first meets of the season for men's and women's cross country were Sept. 17 in Walla Walla where both the UI men's and women's cross country teams placed fourth. Women's track and cross country coach Scott Loreck described his women's performance as "pretty solid for the first meet of the season."

Men's cross country, track and field coach Mike Keller said "We could have done a lot better, we were too spread out. We should have had at least four people in the top 20."

According to Keller, the top finisher in the 8,000 kilometer run for Idaho was senior Mark Bechtel who placed seventh with a time of 26:01.2. The next UI team member, sophomore Keith Sandy came in tenth with the time of 26:11.5. The third UI finisher was senior Mark Esvelt at 23rd place; fourth was freshman Wayne Buncie in 24th place; fifth was Dan Emery who placed 40th; sixth on the team was sophomore Sean O'Connor at 56th place.

"All we can hope for is that everyone will improve a great deal if we are going to stay out of the cellar in the Big Sky conference," Keller said.

According to Loreck, the women's top finisher in the 5,000 kilometer was senior Paula Parsell in fifth place with a time of 18:03.0. Second UI women's finisher was senior Patricia Monnie in 15th place with a time of 19:09.7. The next UI woman was junior Anna Foreman at 22nd place with a time of 19:51.9. Fourth was Louise Mainvil at 33rd place; fifth was Kristy Klason at 37th place; and sixth on the team was junior Monica Langfeldt at 38th place.

According to Loreck, his team is fairly well balanced between experienced athletes and incoming new athletes. "We've got a good group of distance runners that are finally hitting their stride. Pat Monnie and Anna Foreman are starting a really good season. Paula Parsell is also on top of the UI list," Loreck said.

"Everyone has really improved on themselves, so I feel pretty confident about this year, even though the Big Sky conference is a really tough conference to compete in," Loreck said.

The Sports Scene: An Olympic View

The Olympics. For some, the stepping stone to stardom and prosperity. For others, a disappointing time when expectations and dreams are not met.

But there's another group of people that is affected by the Olympics that won't be featured on any NBC networks. This is a group of low-income people that have been booted out of their homes in order for Seoul to be "beautified".

Recently on CNN Headline News, I saw a report in which the South Korean government tore down low-income houses near the Olympic Village in a massive project of re-development. The problem was, they failed to give these hundreds of homeless people new homes, or even compensation for their loss of a place to live.

The report showed a mother sitting in the street, wailing as the construction equipment leveled her home. An elderly man watched as his neighborhood was demolished.

These people resorted to building homes of wood and plastic tarps, only to have government officials tear them down because the buildings didn't measure up to zoning specifications. The only buildings that do measure up are ones they cannot afford to build. It's remarkably similar to the student dilemma of getting a job to obtain experience when no one will hire because of the lack of experience.

As far as the South Korean government is concerned, these people don't exist. They're more concerned with changing the image of Korea from the country seen on MASH to the improved, economically sound Korea that we all see via the Olympics.

When I see circumstances like these, I have to ask myself how important has "sport" become. Have our civilizations evolved to the point that we now care more about looking good on TV rather than taking care of our fellow man?

And aren't these still called the Olympic Games? According to Webster's, a game is amusement, a contest, sport, or fun. I don't believe the homeless are having much fun thanks to these games.

Controversy comes along with every Olympics. NBC devoted several hours of coverage to the disqualification of an American boxer because he was late for his match. Another infinity of hours have been filled with student protesters throwing fire bombs.

But what of the story of these new homeless? Shouldn't the network dedicated to the most "total Olympic coverage to date" cover a story that gives a dark side to the Games? Well, showing homeless Koreans doesn't make for high ratings.

I enjoy watching the Olympics just as much as the next person. I love sport. But when human beings are cruelly exiled from their homes just because they don't fit into the "pretty Olympics" image, then the priorities of the Games need to be seriously questioned.

232 yards and two touchdowns, but threw a first quarter interception to cornerback Ruben Harper who returned it for the game's first touchdown.

The stage was set for Jake's return which spurred the Vandals on to a 23-7 lead in the second quarter. The Vandals led 23-13 at halftime.

By the fourth quarter, UOP cut the Vandal lead to 23-20, but Idaho scored two more touchdowns to pad the 36-26 final score.

The Vandal defense was led by Kord Smith who racked up ten tackles including three sacks. The defense is giving up 324 yards per game but has been able to stop their opponents when they've needed to.

The defensive line has already accumulated 15 quarterback sacks in only two games.

"We saw Pacific at full strength and I thought we held them down," Gilbertson said. "We have to get out of more drives, but we have a good defense and we're playing good defense. I'm pleased."

Volleyball from page 6

Karen Thompson came back from what Bradetich called "one of her most frustrating matches this season" against Boise State — in which she tallied just five kills and eight digs — to lead Idaho against Idaho State with 14 kills and 10 digs. Setter Kellie Morgan, who has been perhaps the most consistent of the Lady Vandals, contributed 68 assists and 11 digs in the two matches.

Boise State was led by Rebecca Richards with 15 kills and 16 digs, and Idaho State's Susan Opitz had 13 kills and five digs against the Lady Vandals.

Idaho had little problem playing competitively in each of the matches, but has had difficulty in not finishing games strong enough to get the win. Idaho has lost 11 of its last 15 games spanning its last four matches.

Despite their 0-2 start, the Lady Vandals continue to lead the Big Sky statistically. Idaho is in the top two in six out of seven categories.

The Lady Vandals take to the road next weekend, taking on 5-5 Montana in Missoula Friday, and 4-8 Montana State in Bozeman Saturday.

Centennial crafts fair open to student artistic endeavors

By Serena Poovey
Staff Writer

Guy Wicks field will be covered with the handwork of student artists Sept. 24 and 25 at the Centennial Arts and Crafts Fair.

The event, sponsored by the University of Idaho Centennial Committee, will involve some professional artists as well as students. According to Shelley Watson, organizer of the fair, crafts will be coming from all over the region.

"We have artists coming from all over the northwest: Idaho, Montana and Wyoming," Watson said.

This diverse array of artists will be matched by a varied selection of crafts, according to Watson.

"These artists bring various crafts to the Palouse," Watson said. "We'll have painting, jewelry, handmade sweaters, t-shirts, wooden toys, just about everything."

Watson also encouraged further student involvement. Individuals and living groups are welcome to set up booths at the fair to display crafts.

"It's really a quick money-making thing," Watson said. "Fifteen dollars secures a booth and the profits are yours."

A local sorority will be donating its profits from their tie-dyed t-shirt booth to start a scholarship fund.

"I'd encourage living groups to do anything they want at the fair," Watson said. "Game booths, carnival type booths, do something fun!"

According to Watson,

there is access to a large buying crowd. People from the community and the northwest region will be attending the fair.

"It's not just for people to see arts and crafts," Watson said.

Food will be as abundant as artwork during the fair with more than forty booths boasting a variety of fast food, ethnic food, and lots of sweets.

A Centennial Balloon Launch at 11:30 a.m. Saturday will be a visual feast to accompany the food. Ten thousand black, white, gold, and silver balloons will represent 100 balloons a year for the 100 years since UI was founded.

There will also be surprise entertainment groups performing periodically and a rock concert Saturday, according to Watson.

The Centennial Committee is providing free advertisement and security to guard the booths at night in an effort to encourage participation.

If a group or individual is interested in having a food or craft booth, arrangements can be made by contacting Shelley Watson at 885-6646 or Student Advis-

Taking their art to the streets

Artists to demonstrate techniques with Art in Action

By Julie Clark
Entertainment Editor

Canadian sculptor Dudley Carter, whose art will go on display at the SUB Sept. 23, will be on campus for an Art in Action demonstration Sept. 26.

Carter works in massive cedar and redwood timbers, creating his sculptures with an axe and a chisel. Most of his inspiration and raw material comes from the Pacific Northwest, where Carter has spent his 97 years.

The exhibition of Carter's work, sponsored by ASUI Productions, will open Friday. The SUB will not, however, be filled with the imposing sculptures. Instead, Carter's life and art will be represented by a series of photographs.

Accompanying the exhibition will be a one-hour documentary by Abby Sher and Carter's own comments on life, health and longevity.

Carter was profoundly influenced by his early experiences on a pioneer homestead in British Columbia, where he lived among the Northwest Indians when their culture was still vital and active. There he saw them carving their massive totems, houses and canoes out of the giant timbers of the area.

Logging and frontier work gave Carter his technical expertise in woodwork as he mastered the use of double-bitted axes and other tools. His life among the Northwest Indians provided artistic inspiration, especially when he realized the crushing impact of modern white society on their culture.

Carter's sculpture, which he began as a means to preserve the Indian tradition of carving in cedar, has gained national attention.

Diego Rivera, a prominent Mexican muralist, was impressed by Carter's carving of the thirty-ton "Goddess of the Forest" at the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition and subsequently featured him in a mural. The mural, a huge fresco, symbolized the union of ancient culture with modern industrialized society.

Carter in many ways epitomizes that union, as he has adapted ancient Indian woodcarving techniques to his own abstract modern expression in a career spanning more than seven decades.

The Art in Action demonstration will be in front of the Vandal Lounge from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. In addition to Carter, the action will include appearances by Beth Rimmelspacher, Will Leaton and Arthur Bell.

Rimmelspacher's landscapes of the Pacific Northwest are currently on display in the SUB and will be replaced by the Carter exhibit Friday. Leaton will be carving wood with Carter, and Bell will be creating chalk pictures on the sidewalk in front of the Vandal Lounge.

In conjunction with the opening of Carter's exhibition, there will be a reception Sept. 24 at 7 p.m. The exhibit and Art in Action will be free of charge.

ory Services at 885-6757.

The fair will be open Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A fairy tale brought to life

Ballet to start season this weekend with "Cinderella"

By Kirk Laughlin
Copy Editor

The performance of "Cinderella" this Saturday will be more than just the retelling of a classic fairy tale. It will also mark the first time the American Festival Ballet has presented the story and, according to AFB Moscow Manager JoAnn Muneta, it will capture the interests of all ages.

"Whenever you do a fairy tale ballet, you have to be sure that it's entertaining on many levels," Muneta said.

The fantasy element has worked well for the company. AFB's first productions in the last two years have been fantasy-oriented. The works "Giselle" and "Copella," Muneta said, found very receptive audiences.

"(The public) just loved them," Muneta said.

Part of the effect "Cinderella" will have, will be due to the direction and choreography of Marla Hansen. Hansen choreographed last season's "The Firebird," has been the recipient of a grant from the Idaho Commission on the Arts and will act as AFB artistic director this season.

"I'm excited about the chance to choreograph this ballet," Hansen said. "It combines humor, magic and romance with some fantastic dancing."

The other important element supporting the dancing itself will be the music. Muneta finds the score by Prokofiev "very grand; it's a challenge to have choreography for the wonderful music."

The AFB often tours with their productions, according to Muneta. These travels have taken the company to 32 states and Washington D.C. where they were featured at Kennedy Center.

For "Cinderella," mobility seems important because, according to Muneta, the AFB is the only company in the state to perform classics.

"One of our goals is to take ballet to the people, wherever they might be, Muneta said. "It's a measure of our success that we're invited back to communities."

"Cinderella" will be performed in Idaho Falls and Denver, Colo. as well as in Utah and Oregon.

Although Muneta is not sure which of the two full casts for "Cinderella" would be performing this Saturday, she is sure everyone is enjoying their work on the production, especially Fred Hansen and Carl Rowe, who are playing the stepsisters.

"The dancers are having a good time with the roles of the stepsisters," said Muneta.

Hansen is an AFB dancer whose work could be seen last year in "The Nutcracker" and "Snow White." Rowe is a former dancer and artistic director of the Idaho Dance Ensemble.

The rehearsals in general are going well, Muneta said, even though "Cinderella" posed a problem with personnel which had to be solved by acquiring a larger than usual number of dancers.

"We have 19 dancers for 'Cinderella,' where we generally have around only 12 or 13," Muneta said.

The professional dancers have also had their efforts supplemented this semester by two apprentice dancers, one of whom is Toni Morgan, a University of Idaho sophomore dance major.

Despite all the concerted effort, Muneta believes the "magical nature" of the production will be apparent.

"One of the special things about 'Cinderella' is its mix of humor, dancing and drama,"

Dancers in the American Festival Ballet perform a scene from "Cinderella," which will be performed Sept. 24. The ballet is the opening performance for the "Magical Season," and will be on stage at the Beasley Coliseum in Pullman.

said Muneta.

"Cinderella" is part of the "Magical Season" series and will be performed at Washington State University Beasley Coliseum, Sept. 24 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at the Coliseum Box Office and the Depot in Pullman, Cavanaugh's Value Inn in Moscow and Albertson's in Lewiston.

I WAS IN THE PEACE CORPS

A recent study, presented to the American Psychological Association, revealed some interesting facts about former Peace Corps Volunteers. For example:

- Over a five-year period, college faculty with Peace Corps experience averaged almost double the salary gains of Fulbright scholars.
- 250 Congressional aides and 10 percent of all Foreign Service officers are Returned Peace Corps Volunteers.
- From 1980 to 1985, former Peace Corps Volunteers outperformed national average salary gains for health service workers by 40.1%, educators by 13.5%, and public sector employees by 10.6%.

PEACE CORPS SERVICE IS A WAY TO HELP YOURSELF BY HELPING OTHERS. Working at a professional level that ordinarily might take years of apprenticeship back home, volunteers find the career growth they're looking for and enjoy a unique experience in the developing world. International firms and government agencies value the skills and knowledge mastered during Peace Corps service.

THERE ARE MORE OPENINGS THAN EVER in today's Peace Corps -- not just for farmers or technical specialists, but for skilled "generalists" and Liberal Arts graduates as well. To learn more about overseas opportunities with Peace Corps, contact:
