

Student journalists get a taste of Soviet press

By Len Anderson
Staff Writer

A Soviet journalist spoke to University of Idaho students Wednesday about changes in Soviet life and the differences in journalistic styles between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Michael Nakoryakov, chief American correspondent of the Novosti Press Agency, spoke to students in a UI communications class about media in the Soviet Union compared to media in the United States.

Nakoryakov said that one of the style differences in writing he noticed between the two countries was that the American journalists do not take a stand or stress their own point of view, while Soviet journalists try to put their own position in writing.

After talking for fifteen minutes, Nakoryakov allowed students to ask him questions about Soviet media. Students asked him various questions ranging from punishments of journalists to education and even the Soviet coverage of the 1988 Presidential Elections.

In response to the question asked about punishments of journalists, Nakoryakov said,

"Maybe (The journalist) will be asked to look for a new job."

Nakoryakov said that before the current changes in the Soviet economic system, people were educated somewhat about everything. Since the changes have occurred, the U.S.S.R. is becoming more like America in that there is a need for specialization in one particular subject.

Nakoryakov is part of an exchange program where journalists from both nations visit and experience the media of the other.

"I am really happy that such an exchange with newspapers is here," Nakoryakov said, "because it is a unique experience for a Soviet journalist to feel exactly as an American reporter feels."

James E. Shelledy, editor and publisher of the Idahonian, returned from the Soviet Union earlier this year, where he wrote columns for a Soviet newspaper.

"The Soviets have made great strides in freedom for their journalists," Shelledy said, "and that certainly makes the Soviet system more palatable to western journalists."

Nakoryakov had been in Idaho since Sept. 30 writing for the Idahonian and remained until Wednesday.

This is the fourth time the 29-year old Soviet journalist has visited the North American continent. Since that time, he said he has not ever received any hostility here.

One student asked Nakoryakov whether he had ever thought of defecting to the United States. He replied that he had never thought of defecting, and even though he liked to visit America, he did not want to live here.

Turning the world around

Pierre Salinger to address global relations at WSU

By Alan Solan
Staff Writer

Pierre Salinger, ABC News European editor, will speak about global relations during the 1988 Washington State University President's Convocation address today at 3 p.m. at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum in Pullman.

His address is entitled, "1988: The Year the World is Turning Around."

Salinger, 63, who has won many awards for foreign affairs reporting, is credited as being the American journalist "inside" the Iran hostage story. Salinger set up U.S. and Iranian negotiations, which led to the Jan. 1981 release of 52 American hostages who had been held captive for 444 days.

His resulting ABC-TV documentary and a spin-off book, both titled America Held Hostage: The Secret Negotiations, won much acclaim and many awards.

Salinger joined ABC News in 1978, became head of the ABC Paris news bureau in 1979, and its chief correspondent in 1983. Recently, he was named European editor, working out of the London bureau.

Salinger graduated from high school at age 11 and entered college at 15. He served in the U.S. Navy during WWII and graduated from the University of San Francisco in 1947 with a history degree.

An author of several novels, Salinger also worked for the San Francisco Chronicle, Collier's magazine and the French news weekly, L'Express. He first came to national attention as press secretary to president John F. Kennedy.

His political background includes roles in the presidential campaigns of Democrats Adlai Stevenson, George McGovern and Robert Kennedy. He lost in an election to the U.S. Senate from California after serving briefly in the position.

Salinger is one of the few American members of the French Legion of Honor. He has served as chairman of the American College of Paris board of trustees and holds an honorary doctorate from the college.

The WSU President's Convocation is open to the public without charge.

U.S. ignorant of Canadian concerns

By Beth Pettibon
Staff Writer

According to a University of Idaho communications professor, U.S. citizens are ignorant of Canadian stands on issues of mutual concern between the U.S. and Canada.

Roy Atwood, associate professor of communications at UI, taught part of a week-long course at Washington State University last week which focused on the culture and people of Canada.

Atwood said the course was to be an inaugural for a Canadian Studies minor at WSU. Atwood and several other UI professors are offering courses this year on different aspects of Canada.

"The big question everyone asks is 'Why Canada?'," Atwood said. He explained that the U.S. and Canada share a lot of similar concerns, including the fact that the two are the largest trading partners in the world and share the longest unprotected border between any two countries.

"People should be more concerned with what Canada is doing," Atwood said. "We should have some awareness of our biggest neighbor. We flood them with an enormous amount of information and we're dismally ignorant of Canadian stands on issues."

Because the Canadian market is flooded with American products and images, such as McDonald's and Coke, Atwood said the government feels as if it were in bed with an elephant.

"The U.S. is the elephant," Atwood said. "When it rolls over, Canada is definitely going to move."

As previous UI professors have done, Atwood spent two and a half months this summer on a faculty-development grant sponsored by the Canadian government. He visited places such as Vancouver, Edmonton and Toronto, which was holding the economic summit while he was there.

Several ways that Canada deals with the continuing increase in American influence is through broadcasting. Atwood said that while the government directly finances 75 percent of Canada's largest broadcast company, the CBC, it acts more like a network such as NBC or CBS than a public station like PBS.

Atwood's course, Media and the Canadian Experience, is a description of Canadian media and relation to the U.S., Atwood said.

"There's a whole series of courses to get people interested in Canada," Atwood said.

Sister city show slated

A slide show of recent visits to Moscow's sister city in Nicaragua and an opportunity to decide future projects for Moscow Sister City Association are planned for Columbus Day, Wednesday, Oct. 12, at the Unitarian Church of the Palouse.

The annual event, sponsored by the Moscow Sister City Association, is the group's way of involving current and new members in health care, educational, agricultural and cultural exchanges with Villa Carlos Fonseca, Nicaragua, Moscow's sister city.

Two members of the association visited Villa Carlos Fonseca in June and returned with slides and project ideas for the upcoming year, such as providing recreational equipment to the municipality schools, equipping a birthing room in a clinic and helping with construction of classrooms. The gathering will be an opportunity for those attending to hear about the trip to Villa Carlos Fonseca and offer suggestions on these and other possible projects. The presentation will begin at 7:30 p.m.

An ambulance, the association's first project, packed with supplies for Villa Carlos Fonseca recently arrived in Nicaragua. Donation to the Moscow Sister City Ambulance fund from the Palouse topped $5,000.

Membership in the Moscow Sister City Association is not required to attend the free presentation. Refreshments will be served.

Correction:

There were a few errors and misleading statements in the article, "Soviets Send UI Photos" in the Friday, Sept. 30, 1988 Argonaut:

1. The American commercial satellite company is EOSAT, not Landsat.

2. The American remote sensing satellite is called LANDSAT.

3. The "photos" are not true photographs taken with a camera but "images" created with a solid state detector.

4. The resolution of the systems on LANDSAT is 30 meters and 80 meters, not 100 meters.

5. Resolution of the system is not restricted ("only allowed") by the military or government, but by the technology at the time. Ours is older than the Russian or French systems. Our new series of satellites will have 15 meter or better resolution.

6. The Soviet price of $450 is more than our price for the same area coverage.

7. The SPOT satellite has a resolution of both 15 and 20 meters.

Another Sept. 30 story, "Fundraiser on Track," incorrectly stated the purpose of $7 million the university has received from the federal government. The money is intended to go toward a Center for Strategic Research Laboratory, not the Engineering Advanced Technology facility as reported in the story.

UI Library water contaminated

Water supplies in the University of Idaho Library have been shut off due to problems related to remodeling work in the facility's basement.

Potable water for patrons is being provided from other sources and restroom facilities have been closed. Other restrooms are available in nearby campus buildings such as the University Classroom Center.

The problem is isolated to the library and involves no other university buildings.

Routine monitoring showed higher than allowable bacteria counts in the library water supply late last week and use of drinking water from water fountains was immediately suspended. Checks of the system late Sunday night revealed what is apparently a design or construction problem with the system, which led to suspension of the water service to the building.

University officials say they hope the inconvenience can be corrected within the next several weeks.

Program deals with stress

The University of Idaho's Center for Business Development and Research is sponsoring a workshop dealing with the management of stress.

The workshop will be held on Oct. 17 and 19 from 6:30 to 9 p.m. both days in the Appaloosa Room in the SUB.

The sessions will cover the dimensions of stress, the stress-prone personality, and stress management. Jim Morris, a licensed counseling psychologist, and counseling professor at the UI will lead the sessions.

According to Morris, a decrease in productivity, loss of work days because of illness, and an inability to make decisions are all signs of stress.

To register for the workshop, or for more information, contact the Center for Business Development for Research at 885-6611.

Fijis celebrate 75th

The 75th anniversary of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity was celebrated last Sunday morning with a special donation of a grove of aspen trees to the University of Idaho's new arboretum.

The dedication was in honor of the diamond anniversary of Alpha Kappa Epsilon, the local fraternity which became Phi Gamma Delta in 1921. Alpha Kappa Epsilon was granted permission to charter as a local fraternity on June 1, 1913.

Present at the dedication were UI President Richard Gibb, Vice President Terry Armstrong, AKE President Bob Melgard of Spokane and Major Rick Taylor of the UI Army ROTC. Phi Gamma Delta fraternity member Brendan Armstrong presented the plaque to Melgard on behalf of the fraternity. Melgard then presented the plaque to president Gibb to signify the gift of the grove to the university.

Vice President Armstrong congratulated the Fijis for their outstanding campus leadership, the work with the UI Honors Program and the tradition of excellence that has endured for 75 years. President Gibb said he was pleased to accept the plaque and told the audience of 200 that he could think of no better way to conclude the "Homecoming of the Century" than to be celebrating with the Fijis. Gibb encouraged the fraternity to continue being the leaders of Idaho and to keep up their tradition of excellence.

After the ceremonies, the fraternity and their guests joined in a champagne salute to the contributions of AKE and Phi Gamma Delta to the UI. A breakfast reception followed.

Minority enrollment up

By Tracy Peel
Staff Writer

Minority enrollment at the University of Idaho has increased 11 percent from last fall. Minority students are enrolled in every college, and in graduate and law school.

Tiajuana Cochnauer, Educational Development Specialist and head of the Office of Minority Student Services said, "There are several programs on campus which actively recruit minorities. The College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences has been trying to increase its enrollment of Native American students. Also, Navy ROTC has a program called BOOST which enables enlisted personnel, including large numbers of minorities, to go through college to become officers."

Because her position as Minority Services Advisor is only part time, Cochnauer cannot provide all the services that were available when there were three minority counselors on campus. However, Minority Services does publish a monthly newsletter which is sent to self-identified minority students, prospective minority students and interested faculty members. The office also monitors minority students' academic progress, provides scholarship information, and works with the Career Planning and Placement Center to help minority students find jobs upon graduation. A minority student lounge has been opened in room 301A of the Continuing Education Building (on Blake Avenue). Cochnauer also acts as an advocate for minority students. She says, however "There haven't been very many on campus problems."

Senate seats filled

By Christy Kretschmer
Staff Writer

The final seat of the ASUI Senate and two other committee positions were finally filled at this week's senate meeting, along with approximately 10 seats at the Eastern Washington University homecoming game that the senators gratefully accepted from the student government at EWU.

Also discussed was the founding of a campus Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) organization, the reasons why the temporary weightroom still doesn't exist, a basketball party in Memorial Gym to kick off the season, and the possibility of penalties for senators who do not visit their living groups.

Mike Mick was elected by unanimous consent to fill the last senate seat. A motion for unanimous consent was put to the floor once, but was voted down. Cuddy argued on the behalf of Mick, calling him "an asset" and saying that the senate has probably not had a more experienced person run for office.

After Cuddy's pitch, the motion for unanimous consent was once again made. This time it was successful. A recess was called and Mick was sworn in by Cuddy.

Also voted into new positions were Paul AlLee as Communications Coordinator and Kristi Vargas as Recreational Advisory Board Chairperson.

Senator Jason Albrecht discussed the idea of starting a SADD organization on campus. The idea is only in the planning stages now.

Senator Mike Gotch said

there was not a weightroom to house all the new equipment that UI has bought. It seems that many buildings on campus, including the soon-to-be-created weightroom, have an asbestos problem.

In order for a temporary weightroom to be constructed, a suitable place would have to be found and established before the real weightroom is finished. The Wallace Complex basement would not be a suitable place due to the adjustments that would have to be made, such as creating better ventilation and access routes. Such improvements would cost approximately $10,000.

According to Senator Steve Smart, athletic director Gary Hunter has planned a pre-season basketball party. The party will be held in Memorial Gym, but the dates and times are not yet verified. A scrimmage and slam-dunk contest are scheduled for the finale of the pre-season bash.

Vice President Scott Carter mentioned the possibility of penalties for senators who do not visit their living groups. Each senator is supposed to visit their designated living groups on a regular basis and bring back to the senate living group suggestions or recommendations.

During the communications part of the meeting each senator presents projects and problems, occasionally those that pertain to their individual living groups. New senator Mike Mick had only one thing to say during his presentation, "Do I have living groups?"

Reagan; Campus Democrats chose subjects about education and the environment.

Marangelli said that the debate will get students to take a look at what they think about the election.

"Our Campus Democrats are going to go into the debate well-prepared and well-informed," Marangelli said.

Tim Kelly of the College Republicans said that the Republicans are doing fine with the organization of the debate. "The teams are selected and the issues briefed," he said.

Pete Johansen, Shane Brown, Shawndra Gair and Chris Williams plan to be the debaters on the Democrats' side; Kelly, along with Craig McCurry, John Landreth and Lee Mangus will lead the Republicans' view of the elections.

Also during Voter Awareness Week, Campus Democrats plan to have registration booths located at the Palouse Empire Mall where citizens of Latah County may register; they also plan to have fundraising projects initiated for the newcomer ASUI club, including a raffle.

Kelly said that their plans for Voter Awareness Week are already off the ground. Republicans have already begun their Voter Registration Drive and have registered 382 people so far.

"We have not even reached the Greeks yet, and we expect a real response there," Kelly said.

The College Democrats also met to discuss other items:

* Various plans for activities, speakers and rallies will be scheduled throughout the year.

* A meeting will be scheduled for Tuesday evening to further the organization of the debate.

OPINION

Paradise Creek — asset or eyesore?

Paradise Creek. Ah, that charming little waterway — or is it?

Well, if you've looked at it lately it has become more of a slimy little reminder of a creek gone bad.

Paradise Creek is a microscopic example of a macroscopic problem — no one wants to take the initiative, much less the responsibility, to take care of a community problem.

What with all the money that has been put into the "Centennial"— the stairstep effect in the SUB parking lot, the yet-to-be finished concrete monoliths marking the entrances to the university, etc.— why hasn't any effort been spent to clean this waterway which runs right through campus?

According to Tom Sawyer at the Physical Plant, the banks of Paradise Creek are owned by whoever owns the land, but the water itself is owned by the State of Idaho.

So here we go — the buck is passed.

Why should the State of Idaho, headquartered in Boise, care about a stinky little creek in Moscow?

Because it's a potential health hazard and an eyesore as well, that's why.

Paradise Creek, while running its now slimy course along Deakin Street, runs perpendicular to West Park Elementary. Why is this a concern? Well, as the law puts it — the creek creates an "attractive nuisance" to the children who walk across and by it each day. In other words, water attracts kids like tacks to magnets.

OK — getting down to the point. Paradise Creek can either be a community asset or an eyesore.

The university as well as other local businesses can and should take an interest in maintaining the creek — if not for the obvious health reasons, at least for the sheer aesthetics.

Paradise Creek is a community problem — so instead of passing the buck — "It's their responsibility"— work together and either clean up the creek or change its name.

Bush bumper stickers hot item to libs

Editor:

Enough is enough! For the fifth time, some zealous Democrat has ripped off my George Bush bumper sticker! I had no idea that the Democratic Party of Latah County was so fearful that George Bush would win the upcoming election. Now they have stooped to censoring!

I don't know what you folks are afraid of. Do you think that some mindless liberal will see the name "Bush" and retain that name recognition long enough to carry it to the voting booth? Perhaps the name Bush carries more positive connotations than "Do—Tax—Us". Or are you afraid that some swing voter will consider the position the country is in today compared to our dilemma eight years ago? Will they compare the 21 percent interest rate of the last administration to inflation that families struggled with before to the greatest period of economic growth in our nation's history? Will they look at America's position as the helpless giant under Democratic leadership to our present strength today?

Let's face the facts. The Reagan—Bush Administration has brought us more jobs and buying power at home as well as growing peace around the globe. The peace between Iran and Iraq, the Soviet pull out of Afghanistan, the easing tensions in Angola, as well as the complete elimination of a class of nuclear weapons are all the results of strong Republican leadership!

Yes, my liberal friends, you do have reason to fear. Your fear is that the country will continue on this present course of strength. Your goal is a return to the weakness we experienced eight years ago. But I fear that your policies would result in the destruction of our country. The policies of Mike Dukakis are the proven policies of failure. It is for this reason I will continue to support George Bush and keep replacing my bumper stickers. You, on the other hand, will probably continue ripping them off.

If there was a Federal law against the stealing of bumper stickers, I would have you prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. But don't fear. President Dukakis would let you out on furlough so you rape, murder, and steal bumper stickers to your hearts content.

Read the whole chapter!

Editor:

Regarding the letter published in your Sept. 23 column, "Bible Contains False Promises?", I would like to help clear up any confusion that this might have created concerning the validity of the Bible and even Christianity itself. The article claimed that Christ taught and that Paul believed that Christ would return for the final day of judgment while some of the apostles were still alive, and that because this didn't happen, the Bible is just a "waste of time". Not only is Christianity not just a waste of time, it is not true that either Paul or Christ taught this doctrine.

The Scriptures that were cited to support this lie were grossly taken out of context and would have to be severely distorted to imply what the author of that letter thought they meant. One of them said that some of the disciples would "not taste of death until they had seen the kingdom of God come" (Mark 9:1). Interestingly enough, this is exactly what happened to John on the island of Patmos, and is recorded in the book of Revelations.

Christ made it clear that the end of the world wouldn't come until many other signs were fulfilled (see Luke 21:8—19). Paul also warned us on this: "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first . . ." There are dozens of examples to this effect, of which, lack of space forbids my mentioning. Claiming that these few twisted scriptures discredit the Bible is as foolish as using Proverbs 5:19 to justify feeling up your girlfriend: "let her breasts satisfy thee at all times; and be thou ravished always with her love." Next time read the whole chapter!

GDI Week changed to spring

Editor:

The Residence Hall Association would like to announce that GDI Week has temporarily been changed to the spring semester for the 1988-89 school year. The official dates for GDI Week are March 27 — April 1. The change is due mainly to the combination of the homecoming and centennial celebrations this year. Also, in the past, the GDI chairperson has only been a part of the RHA until GDI Week was over. This year the council has decided to make the GDI chair a one year office. Therefore, when GDI Week is completed this year, the committee will then begin work for next year.

changing GDI Week to spring is that the week is usually the first "unity builder" for the residence halls. This year, we've concentrated our efforts to unite on the homecoming and centennial celebration. In doing so we have promoted campus-wide unity as well as unity within our individual halls. Now that homecoming is over, we are beginning our work on GDI Week. If you have any ideas or questions, contact your hall vice-president (who is on GDI Week committee), your hall president, or the GDI chairperson, Julie McCoy at 885-8497.

As RHA President, I am really excited about our organization this year. Residents should be proud of the outstanding group of presidents they have elected. If you have any questions about RHA, our office is in the basement of the Wallace Complex next to the old computer cluster site. The phone number is 885-8967, and there will almost always be someone there on Sundays from 3:30 p.m.-5:30 p.m. and Tuesdays from 6-8 p.m. Also, all RHA meetings are open session and anyone interested is encouraged to attend. We will be telling you more about what we're about as the semester progresses. Thank you to all those who participated in homecoming activities this year; it was a real success. We're looking forward to a GREAT year!!!

Productions underway

Editor;

We, the Theatre Arts students of the University of Idaho, would like to extend an invitation to the next production held in the Collette Theatre located on the UI campus.

The Collette Theatre, located across the Administration Building lawn, next to the Women's Center, is a student produced theatre which is designed to give theatre students hands-on experience in all aspects of theatre.

Laundry & Bourbon by James McClure is a hilarious comedy about three women who live in memories, both bitter and sweet. Through pent up anger and much laughter, secrets unfold and choices are made to determine their future.

Cabin 12, by John Bishop, is a drama set in a motel cabin. A new approach has been taken in that the play is seen solely through one character's eyes as he remembers the harbored anger and pain that was unlocked in Cabin 12.

It proves to be a fun, exciting evening of entertainment and we invite you to be there.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Oct. 6-8, with a 2 p.m. performance on Oct. 9. The box office opens at 7 p.m. each night before the performances or tickets may be purchased at Ticket Express at the UI SUB.

Hope to see you there.

Restoring the Pride

Editor;

The recent shuttle victory reminds us that even after a tragedy, the pride in the U.S. space program and in our country can be restored. Jeanne Givens, candidate for the First District of the U.S. Congress, has embraced this spirit. Her campaign theme is: Restore the Pride.

One of her top priorities is to improve education in Idaho. As law students we appreciate the high value she puts on the classroom. Children are our future and without a rich, diverse learning environment intellectual growth slows and our future prospects dim.

The people of Idaho have a tremendous amount to offer and it is time a representative with Jeanne Givens' drive and effectiveness restores the respect we demand and deserve on the national level.

Jeanne Givens would change Idaho's reputation for irresponsible, unpopular, and non-representative conduct that Larry Craig has perpetuated.

Jeanne believes in ALL the people of Idaho, old and young, and she knows we deserve more than we've been getting from Larry Craig.

Jeanne Givens is approachable, she listens and she works hard. She has a proven record of effectiveness.

Vote to modify the madness

Editor;

After reading Tim Kelly's commentary in the Oct. 4th edition of the Argonaut a couple of questions came to mind. Have Tim and I lived under two completely different presidential administrations, or was this just another right wing defense to a failed administration? I find it hard to fathom the thought that our nuclear proliferation was the underlying reason for the INF treaty.

Give me a break, Tim — the main reason that the Soviets signed the treaty was because they are trying to modernize their economy and building nuclear weaponry at break-neck speed simply won't allow them to do so.

It was also hard to believe that Tim had the audacity to claim El Salvador as a democracy. I wonder if he has ever heard of the death squads. I do not define democracy along with oppression and by saying El Salvador is a democracy is doing just that. I did agree with Tim on one point however. He's right, SDI is a defense system that threatens no one. This is because 18 billion dollars of research has produced nil.

When casting your vote this November consider the illustrious accomplishments of the Reagan-Bush team; incidents (remember Deaver and Meese?), the Noriega catastrophe, Iran-Contra, social service depletion, environmental deregulation, educational divestment, and turning the U.S. into the biggest debtor nation in the world. Vote to modify this madness. Vote Dukakis.

'Facts' take expression from primitive sources

Exhibit's power in mythical images

Ritualistic art created from unconscious and primitive sources is the theme of "Facts of the Imagination," the new exhibit at the Washington State University of Art. The exhibit, featuring work by 11 artists from throughout North America, will run until Oct. 30.

The featured works are by artists who attempt to instill a sense of magic, power or spirituality derived from the realm of the imagination. According to Museum Director Patricia Watkinson, who curated "Facts," that sense was the dominant criterion.

"Although we had formal, aesthetic, and intellectual criteria, when it boiled right down if the work made the hairs on the nape of your neck stand up, then we felt we were on the right track," Watkinson said.

The artists are bound by a common element in their disassociation from the mainstream of commercial galleries and their emphasis on the imagination as a source for potency and impact. The exhibit will be featured only at WSU and the Whatcom Museum in Bellingham, Wash.

The works are also linked by the concept of bricolage, from the French bricoleur, describing artists who use materials from many different sources, often found or borrowed, and piece them together in completely new ways to create art.

With bricolage as its theme, the exhibit features an eclectic mix of materials and styles. Washington artist Frank Munns, for example, uses steel frameworks with additions of bones, feathers, paper pulp, rope, cloth, net and jewelry to create mythical creatures.

Another Northwest artist, Fernanda d'Agostino of Portland, takes a different approach. According to d'Agostino, "I use fleece-like felt and bone-like ceramics to create powerful, ritualistic installations, altars and ceremonial clothing."

Domingo Cisneros, an American Indian, combines skins, animal parts and wood found in the Canadian bush into totem-like assemblages.

Canadian artist Tom

Knott finds matters of connection, meaning and relationship in the human spirit. The key premise of this process "is that the conventions of mind on which our culture is based deny the existence of and expression

Step into Collette's trap

Performances engaging and entertaining treatments

Review By Kirk Laughlin
Copy Editor

Prepare to be caught in an irresistible dramatic trap by the plays Laundry and Bourbon by James McLure and Cabin 12 by John Bishop which opened last night at the Collette Theatre.

The word "trap" is appropriate because the two works begin in understated fashions which don't prepare the audience for the power and imagination they will exhibit.

The first striking quality of the plays is the extent to which they utilize the Collette stage. The directors (Kelly Dawson-Mousseaux on Laundry and Bourbon and Colleen Katen on Cabin 12) have minimized scenery, making it possible to imagine the same setting to be both the back porch of a house and the interior of a motel room.

The second arresting quality of the plays is apparent as soon as the first production, Laundry and Bourbon begins; the performances of everyone involved are solid and diverting.

Even if it didn't have a point to make, the comedically skyrocketing Laundry and Bourbon would still be worth the admission price. Its action centers on an afternoon in the life of Elizabeth (played by Sara Hansen), Hattie (Synde Selvig) and Amy Lee (Rozlyn Simmons), three products of a small-town high school in the Southern United States. Although they are the only members of the cast, the lives they've led and are presently leading come through in idiosyncratic details that the three actresses display very well.

The main story deals with Elizabeth's struggle to face up to loneliness in the face of a life in which she is surrounded by the less-than-gracious Hattie and the less-than-honest Amy Lee.

O.K., O.K. I'll admit that we've all seen these characters before, most recently in the play-then-film Crimes of the Heart. Elizabeth is the calm center to the wide points of animosity present in Hattie and Amy Lee.

For the most part, though, the sensitive performances overcome the familiar sense we might have of these characters. As the part is written to be, Selvig's Hattie is the one people will go away remembering. She definitely has most of the funniest lines and Selvig handles 85 percent of them expertly. The other 15 percent are over written to such an extent that probably no actress could've overcome their obviousness.

Amy Lee's part, also handled well by Simmons, suffers from the same overkill tendency but the lines that are on are dead on. Only one rampantly slapstick scene between Selvig and Simmons completely breaks down into idiosyncrasy.

It is Hansen's performance, though, that has to move Laundry and Bourbon beyond its differing levels of comedic success and the quiet energy she exudes accomplishes this task easily. Despite all the laugh-inducing squawking going on, it is Hansen who states the little truths that the play has to offer.

Although quite sober in comparison to the play that precedes it, Cabin 12 also delivers truth. Playwright Bishop seems to have spawned his play from cross-breeding Death of a Salesman and The Big Chill but it is still an affecting piece of Americana where a father (Roger Jones) and son (Steve Taylor) are forced to communicate with both themselves and each other in face of the death of another son (John O'Hagan).

Jones and Taylor both give convincing performances, capturing the audience off-guard with the power and anger of their grief.

As I already mentioned, the direction is interesting but, unfortunately, it breaks down at a certain point as the inclusion of not only one flashback but also a flashback within the flashback seems, at best, needlessly artful and, at worst, a point on which to resist the entire play.

The strong performances, though, exclude the possibility of anyone leaving Cabin 12 unaffected. As a whole, the two plays seem linked not only in their enjoyably featured players but also in their attempts to reach some kind of honesty in regard to human relationships.

The plays will be performed at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow in the Collette Theatre, and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Exhibit explores Islam

A new exhibit on Islam, one of the world's five major religions, has opened at the Museum of Anthropology at Washington State University.

The exhibit provides insight into some basic beliefs of the Islamic religion, which has more than 800 million followers. Along with the history of the rise of Islam, the display illustrates some of the contributions by Islamic scholars to the fields of art, science and literature.

The museum is open Mondays through Thursdays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Fridays 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Small circus to entertain

The Royal Lichtenstein One Quarter Ring Sidewalk Circus will perform one show Oct. 10 at noon on the Compton Union Building Mall at Washington State University.

Billed as "The World's Smallest Complete Circus" the 70-minute free performance will feature rollicking clowns, precariously perched acrobats, trained animals and pantomime.

The program also includes two narrated mime fables, "Ploughsharing" and "Kari."

Biafra to speak on censorship

It's not a musical message that Jello Biafra, former lead singer, lyricist and chief songwriter for the punk rock group the Dead Kennedys, will bring to Boise State University Nov. 16. Instead, Biafra will speak on censorship.

Censorship has had a big impact on Biafra's music, however. He was charged by the Los Angeles City Attorney's office in 1986 with distributing harmful material to minors because of a poster in the Dead Kennedys' Frankenchrist album.

Biafra was ultimately acquitted but not before spending $70,000 in his defense.

Because of the experience, Biafra helped form the San Francisco-based No More Censorship Defense Fund. He now tours the nation giving talks on censorship and performing "spoken word" readings of his poetry and music.

to other facets of the human psyche."

Other contributing artists are Sarah Teofanov, Valerie Bechtol, WSU professor Ross Coates, Rachel Dutton, Ronald Gonzales, Brig Spies and Eric Stotik.

The new facts created from the imaginations and relics of the artists ultimately contain the exhibit's power and impact. The non-traditional nature of the works makes this a unique presentation.

The museum is open Tuesday through Friday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge to the "Facts" exhibit.

Watercolors vitalize gallery

By Dena Bandazian
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Ridenbaugh Gallery is awash with color in the current exhibit of work by the Idaho Watercolor Society.

There are seven different displays scheduled for the Ridenbaugh Gallery this year. Usually the exhibits are student and faculty works but for the next month the Idaho Watercolor Society will be showing its colors.

The IWS juried membership exhibition runs through Oct. 22. The exhibit displays 25 paintings that were selected by the juror to tour the state.

IWS has supported and promoted the aqua media for the last nine years, according to Linda Wallace, IWS Northern region representative.

"Our aim is to educate the public about watercolor expression and encourage artists to pursue their interests in watercolor," Wallace said.

"We want to develop a love for the medium. People who see our exhibits are always impressed with the expertise of the painters and the variety of what can be done with watercolor," Wallace said.

IWS participates in two types of shows. The first is an open show in which all members show their work and there is no jury or judging involved. The second is a statewide competition, at which there are three local jarring or selecting processes. Slides of the top paintings are sent to Boise for the juror to select a winning painting.

This year's juror is Cheng Khee Chee, whose watercolors have been displayed extensively in mainland China. According to Wallace, Chee is internationally recognized for his work.

As well as judging works, the juror gives workshops which include studies of style, technique and "paint outs."

"We try to hold regional meetings in conjunction with the workshops since the North region, from the Canadian border to Riggins, is so large," Wallace said.

Currently, Debra Davis is the only UI student in IWS. Davis received an IWS scholarship last year.

"Debra was interested in the medium and we recognized her as a promising member of the society," Wallace said. "So she was awarded the scholarship to foster her love for watercolor."

Davis' work will not be in this exhibit but will be shown in next month's open show at Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston.

Other displays around the state this year include Art on the Green and the Capital Rotunda Show, both in Boise.

"The Capital Rotunda Show has a centennial theme," Wallace said.

"I encourage everyone to go see the exhibit," Wallace said. "The pieces are wonderful, from traditional to abstract. The works display a wide range of style, technique and subject matter. It really shows what can be done with the medium."

If anyone is interested in becoming an IWS member, contact Linda Wallace at 882-3975. IWS is an interest-based group and degree of expertise is not a factor in membership.

"We just want to foster their love for watercolor," Wallace said.

Vandals host Big Sky leader

By Joe Hughes
Sports Editor

The Montana State Bobcats may have started their season with a 0-2 record, but they're winning when it counts: in conference play. The Bobcats are unbeaten in the Big Sky Conference with a 2-0 record and face the Vandals tomorrow night in the ASUI Kibbie Dome.

The Bobcats were trounced by nationally-ranked Florida 69-0 and beaten by Mesa College (a NAIA team) 41-7 and appeared to be heading down the same path which led them to a 1-10 record last season. But MSU bounced back to defeat Eastern Washington 35-13 and Idaho State 45-37 last week to post a 2-3 record. Although MSU's 0-8 conference season last year was a disappointment, they played the Vandals tough in Bozeman. The Bobcats led 7-0 at halftime before Idaho quarterback John Friesz tossed two touchdown passes in back-to-back drives in the third quarter.

The key to last season's 14-7 win was the Idaho defense which allowed the Bobcats to score only once in 12 possessions. MSU was forced to punt four times, threw two interceptions, fumbled once, missed two field goals and turned the ball over on downs twice.

Idaho head football coach Keith Gilbertson was disappointed in last year's Vandal performance. "We did not play with any emotion," he said, "dropped the football, threw interceptions, fumbled. We played without any emotion or any sense of urgency. In defense of our players, it had been quite a grind. It was a six-week grind up to that point where we were stressed to continue to win to compete for a title. We're going to have to play better because they've improved offensively from a year ago."

Volleyballers defeat LCSC, face Weber

By Mike Lewis
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho volleyball team gets back into conference action tonight and Saturday night in Memorial Gym against Big Sky opponents Weber State and Eastern Washington after defeating Lewis Clark State Tuesday night. The Weber State match begins at 7:30 p.m. while the Eastern match starts at 4:30 p.m.

The Lady Vandals are now 7-8 overall this season and 1-5 in the conference. Weber State was 17-5 overall before playing Eastern Washington last night. The Eagles entered that contest with a 4-7 overall record and 2-4 conference record after falling to Washington State Tuesday night.

The Wildcats are leading the Big Sky Conference with their 4-0 conference record and are ranked 18th in the nation. WSC is on a six-game winning streak after defeating Utah State, Idaho

State and Montana last week.

Kim Benesh, last week's Big Sky Player-of-the-Week, leads the Wildcats with her Big Sky-leading hitting percentage and kills average. Kathy Nickel, too, will give the Lady Vandals all they can handle. Nickel is sixth in conference hitting percentages and ninth in kills averages.

The Eagles are led by outside hitter Juli Argotow.

The Sports Scene: Tyson's biggest problem

And now back to the continuing saga of the Days of Mike Tyson.

Anyone read anything about the heavyweight champion of the world in boxing? It has been extremely hard to miss since he has been in the headlines virtually every week since his last match. The problem is that very few of the articles have been about Tyson, the boxer.

All these articles have proven to me that Mike Tyson has some personal problems outside of the ring. And his main problem is his wife, Robin Givens.

Givens seems to be surprised that Tyson is a violent person. What? A boxer, violent? I think that anyone who makes a living by trying to pummel a sporting opponent into unconsciousness would tend to have a violent streak or two running through his veins.

Only a few years ago, Tyson was the young turk knocking everyone out on his way to the top of the boxing profession. He made the cover of Sports Illustrated and his closest friends were his manager and his trainer. Everything seemed fine.

At the end of his road to the top, Tyson knocked out Michael Spinks in 91 seconds. But the top was shaky.

Somewhere along the path, something changed in Tyson's life that diverted his focus from boxing. The change was that Tyson married Givens.

Shortly after his last fight, Tyson had an auto accident at Catskill, N.Y. Anyone who witnessed the television coverage of the immediate aftermath near the ambulance saw Robin Givens pushing, shoving and yelling at cameramen and reporters because she felt it was something that shouldn't be covered. If Givens dislikes the media coverage, maybe she should have considered the consequences of marrying the heavyweight champion of the world while she was also in the public eye weekly on the television sitcom Head of the Class.

It seems that Givens' main defense of her actions would be their right to privacy, yet she went on ABC's 20/20 national broadcast last Friday and invited even more coverage of their private lives by stating that Tyson is scary and he shakes, pushes and takes swings at her.

I'm not advocating Tyson's actions against his wife, but should it be such a surprise to see this type of behavior coming from a boxer? And if Tyson is so "scary", why has Givens refused to file charges against him? If he indeed is brutalizing her, why not let the courts rectify the situation instead of hanging dirty laundry out for all to view? If Tyson is guilty, let him pay. If he isn't, let him be.

What it all boils down to is this marriage was not a match made in Heaven. Tyson should go back to doing what he does best: boxing.

Givens should do likewise: go back to playing make-believe roles on TV. Givens, of all people, should recognize a part in which she has been miscast.

— Joe Hughes

who is ranked 20th in the nation in digs average with 3.885 per game despite missing Eastern's matches with Whitworth and NAU last week with a thigh injury. Debbie Sperling is a major force in Eastern's hitting attack, averaging 3.3 kills per game and leading the team with 127 kills.

Idaho has had trouble remaining focused mentally, according to head coach Pam Bradetich. The Lady Vandals had 17 service errors in Tuesday's match with Lewis Clark. Bradetich also said that she is still seeking the elusive "knockout punch" that Idaho needs to be able to put opponents away late in the game.

"Our serving (against LCSC) was an example of how our team is not focused mentally," said Bradetich. "We need to be able to concentrate on playing on our side of the net."

Bradetich said the key to the Weber match will be whether Idaho can hit well and block well.

"They (WSC) are doing what people expected them to do," said Bradetich. "They're winning in conference. Their strength is their outside hitting, so we will have to try to match their firepower and try to shut them down with our blocking."

The Weber State game will be televised on IIV 8 on a delayed basis Sunday night at 7 and Monday night at 8.

Quietly working to the top

By Scott Trotter
Staff Writer

Outside hitter Debbie Thayer is a newcomer to the Lady Vandals' volleyball team, but that hasn't kept the Olympic Community College transfer from seeing her share of playing time.

Thayer, a two-year letter winner in volleyball at OCC, is in her first season as a Vandal this year and is challenging her teammates for a starting outside position.

"It's been hard coming into a new program and learning a different style of play in a few months," Thayer said. "But my skills have improved and I'm adapting to this program."

Thayer, who respectfully is not one to gloat, said she has been "sort of starting" in some of the Vandal's recent matches and enjoys getting more playing time and hopes she can obtain a permanent starting position as the season progresses.

"Yeah, I'm happy about the way things are going," she said. "I hope my starting becomes more permanent."

As a team captain and most valuable player her freshman and sophomore season at Olympic College, Thayer brings plenty of leadership and experience to the Lady Vandals. She was also a first team Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges All-Region performer last season and averaged 3.7 kills and 6.5 digs per game during 1987 league play, while attending OCC.

After leaving OCC, Thayer ran into current UI volleyball coach Pam Bradetich when Karen Lamb, Washington State University's volleyball coach sent Bradetich a tape of Thayer's play.

"At the time she (Lamb) had an overabundance of outside hitters at WSU," said Thayer.

"So we contacted Pam (Bradetich) and everything fell into place.

Thayer has played in all 15 of the Lady Vandals' matches this year and is among the leaders in statistics, with 78 kills and 95 digs as of Tuesday night's win over Lewis Clark State College.

But Thayer would like to do better. "I'm definitely not satisfied with the way I'm playing," she said. "I don't think anyone is ever satisfied with how they play."

Thayer hopes to help the Lady Vandals (7-8 overall and 1-5 in Big Sky Conference play) earn a spot in post-season play.

"At the beginning of the season we had a lot of individuals," she said. "We are now coming together as a team.

"We keep on improving and I think we've gotten to the point where we are going to turn the season around," she said.

Debbie Thayer
ARGONAUT/Stephanie Worley

As a Vandal, "I travel a lot more and miss a lot more school and that makes things kind of tough," said Thayer, who is a junior majoring in psychology and education. "But after spending two years at OCC, it's nice to get away."

start for injured quarterback Shaun Shahan, who is out with a kneecap injury. Tetrault contributed to the rush-happy offense of the Bobcats with 122 yards on 27 carries last week against Idaho State. He also completed 6 of 12 passes for 92 yards and three interceptions.

Runningback Bob Wilkinson led MSU with 164 yards, part of the 417 rushing yards compiled by the Bobcat offense last week. The Bobcats finished with 509 yards of total offense.

"I think a key is that our defense can't let them stay on the field all day," said Gilbertson. "Our defense has to get in and out of drives. Last year one of the problems that hurt us playing them was that we didn't get very many chances offensively. I think they got 360 yards in total offense and most of it was on the ground. That means they kept our offense off the field. I think that's a key."

Idaho has won the last three games in the series with the last MSU victory during the 1984 season 34-28 in Moscow. MSU went on to win the NCAA division I-AA title that season. Idaho has also won five of the last six meetings including two shutouts of MSU.
