Students flocking to Idaho campus

By Christy Kretschmer
Staff Writer

Enrollment at the University of Idaho is booming. According to the registrar office's latest figures, the total enrollment is 9,444, a 4.5 percent increase from last year.

According to Mr. Matt Telin, the director of admissions-registration, this is the largest enrollment in UI history. It is also the largest freshman class since 1965, which happened to be the year that most of the baby-boomers entered college. Telin said the reasons for the boom are unclear. He said that the increase may be due to better government funding for higher education in the past two years. Colleges nationwide are also experiencing a surge in enrollment.

On campus, student enrollment is up by 4 percent with 6,848 full-time students and 1,481 part-time students registered. The ratio of men to women is about the same as last year though, which was approximately two males to every female.

All of the individual colleges also experienced an enrollment surge. Agriculture had the biggest increase, one of 11.6 percent. The General Studies department had an 11.4 percent increase and Art and Architecture was close behind with 11.1 percent. Letters and Sciences increased its headcount by 10.8 percent, while Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences experienced a 7.9 percent increase. The College of Business reported a 6.2 percent surge and the College of Mines had a 3.7 percent increase.

A significant increase in the enrollment of new freshman was also noted in the new figures. There are 1,361 new freshman this year. This is a 11.5 percent increase from last year.

An important figure to watch is the percentage of continuing students. UI's retention rate seems to be increasing steadily over the years, with a 5 percent increase from last year.

Also reflective of the university's growing attraction to students is the 14 percent increase in out of state student enrollment.

ASUI President, Brad Cuddy was sure that the increase in enrollment will increase ASUI funds, but does not know by exactly how much. He warned the student body against getting too excited, as some operations are experiencing budget trouble. Cuddy went on to say that it is "way early to tell if we'll have additional revenue or not."

Cuddy thought that the ASUI has had a direct influence over the freshman retention rate because they have been helping to fund the tutoring services. In doing this, Cuddy feels, the ASUI has helped many freshman better adjust to college life.

Cuddy thought that the inflation in enrollment might have a positive affect on the amount of tuition students might have to pay next year, but would probably not stop the alleged increases.

Cuddy opposed the increase in tuition. He said the question that should be asked is "Is it going to buy us a better education?" Cuddy thought that such an increase would not affect the quality of education at UI.

Possible vendors announced

The Marriot Corporation and Morrison's Custom Management are the finalists in the University of Idaho's search for a private food vendor.

One of these companies will take over food services at the Eating Element in the Wallace Complex, at Joe's in the Student Union Building, at ASUI—Kibble Dome concessions, at catered functions and at the Satellite SUB, if the university should decide to switch to a private food service.

The university has not yet made a decision. In Monday's Idahontan UI Controller Gerald Reynolds, who is chairman of the advisory committee, was quoted as saying "The decision on whether or not we go to a private vendor will be made by top administration, after receiving input from students and faculty."

Student leaders intend to have input. The Residence Hall Association is conducting a survey to determine student satisfaction with the present system and to see if they would prefer a private food vendor.

Reynolds said he would try to accommodate students. "When we get . . . a recommended vendor, we'll have them on campus, hopefully prior to the first of November to allow input from students and faculty," he was quoted as saying in the Idahontan article.

Student Fee increases just a rumor says Board

By Beth Howard
Editor

The rumors of a fee increase which have been circulating recently are just that, rumors, says State Board of Education Chairman Dr. Charles "Tiny" Grant.

"We (the State Board) are studying various aspects of student fees, but nothing has been presented to us," said Grant.

Grant said that although he feels that the Board needs to examine the tuition situation, as it stands now he does not expect to see a proposal on fee increases until sometime next spring.

The concern over a possible fee increase arose after State Board of Education's Chief Fiscal Officer Ed Cisek made a presentation examining the student fee structure in relation to that of other states.

Representative James "Doc" Lucas speculated that an increase in student fees would mean several million dollars in increased revenue for the State.

"It's almost a foregone conclusion that they'll raise student fees at some point,"

Lucas said.

Lucas maintains that he opposes an increase in fees and that under the Idaho State Constitution a fee increase would be unconstitutional.

"The constitution (state) says we're going to have free schools — we should do that."

"I think the student should oppose fee increases — the sooner the better," Lucas said.

The rumored fee increase has ASUI leaders concerned and somewhat leary of next week's State Board meeting in Sugar Salem, Idaho.

Salinger emphasizes U.S. "image problem" ABC editor stresses remedying foreign perceptions

By Alan Solan
Staff Writer

The U.S. has a serious "image problem" abroad and it is imperative that the next man in the White House deal effectively with it, Pierre Salinger, ABC News European editor told a crowd at Washington State University Friday.

Delivering the 10th Annual WSU President's Convocation address, Salinger said changes that are taking place in the Middle East, Soviet Union, Western Europe and the Third World will have global effects and the next U.S. president cannot afford to ignore or underestimate them.

And because of U.S. economic problems, Europeans are seeing "an America in decline," he said.

"They see the only solutions to America's economic difficulties are to raise taxes and for Americans to cut back on their buying spree," he said.

Europeans look at the U.S. and fear that military cutbacks will lead to "cutting the umbilical cord" of U.S. military protection that Western Europe has enjoyed since the end of World War II.

Salinger said the "zero option" INF Treaty signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, that would eliminate all intermediate range nuclear missiles from Europe, is frightening to Western Europe because "there is no such thing as a military or political Europe — there is only an economic Europe."

No European country will raise its military spending because they are spending all their money on social programs, Salinger said.

"Either we care about protecting Europe or we don't," he said.

The fact that Gorbachev accepted the terms of the INF Treaty shows that he is indeed sincere about achieving change in the Soviet Union, Salinger said.

The new Soviet policy of glasnost or "openness" cannot be denied, but Gorbachev's perestroika — his plan for economic reform — "has been a disaster," he said.

"Gorbachev has realized that if he doesn't change the political system, he will never be able to change the economic system."

This helps explain the Soviet Union's recent pullout from Afghanistan and its moves in Angola and Kampuchea (Cambodia). The Soviet Union was using up valuable resources that Gorbachev would rather use for domestic programs, and the Soviet relationship with the Vietnamese in Cambodia was hindering the establishment of relations with China.

A dialogue was started between President Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev and between Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev that ended with Kennedy's death and Nixon's being driven from office. Salinger said it is important that the moves toward understanding made by Reagan and Gorbachev

1989 calendar dedicated to women's tastes

By Beth Pettibon
Staff Writer

Ladies, no longer must we idly tolerate Palouse Empire calendars that cater to the typical male point of view. This November, the UI and WSU campuses will be treated to 12 (count them, 12) gorgeous men in the first annual all-male campus calendar which is yet to be titled.

How did this idea for an all-male calendar come about? Producer Shari Miller says it's her answer to the annual W.S.U. girl calendar.

"Girls aren't offered what guys are," said Miller, owner of the Cuttin' Loose hair salon and producer of the male calendar. "Never before have the girls been offered a calendar of all college guys."

Miller said she found the models simply by telling one student from each campus about the calendar. Currently she has 16 models and plans to cut the number down to 12 before the shoot on October 15 and 16.

"I'm having some girlfriends over to help me decide," Miller said. "There are some W.S.U. models that knock me dead! It's going to be tough."

Each of the models will pose with a car. Cars will include a '56 Chevy, a '56 Ford, a Corvair convertible, and a couple of Porsches.

"This calendar is not going to be all flesh...it's going to be seductive," Miller said. "What we don't see will be left to the imagination." Miller also said she promises that the title of the calendar, not yet decided upon, won't be something tasteless like 'Beefy Buns'. A group of men available for a new escort service will pose with a limousine on the front cover.

Miller's new service, called "Shari's Escort Service", will provide girls with the opportunity to call up and receive, for a fee, a male escort for the evening. Miller feels this will be useful for dances, dinners, and sorority functions. "It will be run very professionally for people that want this service," Miller said. "It's a convenience, nothing sleazy. And there will be a real neat selection of guys."

Miller, who has coordinated style shows at Ratz and Chaser's and also gives in-sorority beauty consultations, plans to continue producing all-male calendars if this year's is successful.

500 calendars will be available at each campus November 9th for $7.50 each. The escort service is scheduled to start the first of November. Those interested can contact Shari at the Cuttin' Loose hair salon.

Unique Japanese labor practices subject of lecture

By Roger Lee
Staff Writer

A group of about 40 people attended Tuesday's international seminar on Japanese culture, which featured Japanese Consul Hiroyuki Ariyoshi.

Ariyoshi began by explaining the bottom-up decision making policy of his country. He centered his talk on manufacturing and enterprise. Many decisions are based on the individual requests of the "lower" working class and not necessarily on the wishes of management, he said, noting that implementation of policies "is not limited to choosing the best plan, rather, assembling many parts of many different plans." Ariyoshi pointed out that this policy has been successful in recognizing and analyzing situations, but that it is very time-consuming and needs to be streamlined.

He also provided, through an outline of labor practices and culture, possible reasons for current Japanese success in the world market. First, he stressed the strong union-management relationship in Japan, and how both parties strive to resolve problems (much more than most U.S. labor unions.) Due to over-population, job security receives prime emphasis from workers and labor unions.

Ariyoshi also outlined Japanese culture. He refuted the misconception that Japanese people were strictly "economic animals" overworking themselves in pursuit of profits, by explaining that their work ethic has been a result of Buddhism. The Japanese people thrive on devotion to work and the intrinsic value of work. "Extra work does not necessarily mean higher pay."

Now is a critical time in U.S.-Soviet relations because the Soviet Union is changing rapidly under Gorbachev and George Bush or Michael Dukakis will face some important decisions about future relations between the two superpowers. It is important that moves toward a better understanding of each other's countries not be halted again, Salinger said.

On the Third World debt and the U.S. budget imbalance, Salinger said countries have been paying on the interest of their loans from the U.S. — but of the $1 trillion in principle owed, "not one penny of it will be paid back."

"In 1988, the U.S. can no longer just sit around about the Third World debt crisis. Without growth in the Third World, there will be a major impact on the U.S."

In addition, the U.S. has been treating its own debt problem "as if it will just go away," he said.

On Dec. 31, 1992, 12 European countries will open their borders to each other, forming an economically powerful "European Community," and the next U.S. president will need to be able to deal effectively with that force, Salinger said.

The most serious problem in 1988, however, remains the Middle East situation, Salinger said. Having spoken to both Jews and Arabs in Israel, Salinger is convinced the problem is a complicated one that will only be solved by international negotiation. To accomplish that, "the U.S. must once again reinforce its influence in the region to bring Israel to the bargaining table," he said.

Switching to a private vendor could result in a $2.5 million dollar contract for Marriot or Morrison's. Marriot already has contracts with several schools in the region, including Lewis Clark State College, Boise State University and Idaho State University. Morrison's provides food service for several schools in the Midwest and is currently trying to expand into the Northwest.

If the university decides to contract food service, the Idaho Board of Education will review the contract at its November meeting and a private vendor will begin providing food services in January.

We can't afford the Republicans

By Todd Harper
Commentary

In view of the farce that is this year's presidential election campaign and for those of you who are wondering who to vote for consider the following: Most of us agree that neither Bush or Dukakis represent great choices for president. Although most any write—in candidate would be preferable, write—ins don't usually make it to the oval office. Thus, it boils down to choosing the lesser of two evils — Bush or Dukakis.

it was good old Uncle Ronnie who claimed that trees accounted for 90 percent of all air pollution.

We can also credit the Ray—gun administration with spending billions on that bastion of peace (?) and false security — SDI. Assuming that Star Wars ever makes it off the ground (which is assuming a lot!) it will prove only to be the most expensive and ineffective piece of junk that has ever cluttered a geosynchronous orbit.

Historically, neither political party has had a great track record of a monopoly on common sense. Admittedly, the present administration can be credited with taking steps to thaw US — Soviet relations and slow the insanity of the nuclear arms race. While these are certainly no small achievements, the voting public should remember some pertinent facts before "pulling those levers."

Always the defenders of privilege and the status quo, conservatives can be proud of these Bush statements: "You can't strengthen the weak by weakening the strong" and "The meek may inherit the earth but they don't increase market share." Consider also that George Bush once thought that the Marcos regime was a model of democracy and you begin to get a clear picture of who's representing the right in this year's presidential race. Indeed, if George Bush is what it means to be a "conservative" then he's doing Dukakis a favor by labeling him a "liberal".

It took the first 39 American presidents a little over 200 years to bring the national debt up to 1 trillion dollars. The current administration (read Reagan, republican and conservative) more than doubled that debt in less than eight years and this after a balanced budget was promised by 1985. This very same administration also turned student financial aid into taxable income and instituted a "tax reform" that was supposed to make the tax process both easier and fairer—neither have become reality.

Despite of all this, many Reagan/Bush supporters are claiming victory for George Bush and painting a rosy legacy for the Reagan administration. What is the real legacy for the Reagan administration? The following sums it up quite nicely: "An administration that has spawned more incompetence, illegalities, thieving and contempt for the laws than any other administration — this is the legacy the Reagan administration leaves to the people of this nation."

The current administration is responsible for the national hysteria known as "the war on drugs", a program designed to stamp out the use of illegal (read "immoral") drugs but which, in reality, succeeds only in wasting billions of tax dollars and putting billions more into the pockets of organized crime. Speaking of crime, over 200 Reagan appointed cabinet members were investigated for illegal or unethical acts and of that number, nearly half have resigned. And yes,

There are many more examples of the present administration's blunders but the point has been made. Again, Michael Dukakis is not what many would consider to be a great choice for president. Yet, when we consider that the alternative means the perpetuation of the Reagan administration's foolishness and fiscal irresponsibility, it's clear that Dukakis is the one.

Republicans oxygenate!!!!

Editor:
Well, it appears the young republicans have loosened their neckties. Good. Now that the oxygen flow has resumed to their "think tanks", maybe the crows in their memories will come home to roost. And now let me continue the list of Reagan/Bush accomplishments that Tim Kelly so courageously began.
Is George Herbert Arthur Bush willing also to take half credit for the 230 some servicemen killed in Beirut? The 38 killed on the USS Stark? The 290 killed aboard that "belligerent" passenger jet?
The terrorist babies killed in the retaliatory attack against Moammar Qaddafi's family compound? The tens of thousands killed in the latest U.S. funded civil war in Nicaragua? The CIA salary paid to General Manuel Noriega? The innocent farmers in Angola who've had their legs blown off by "freedom fighter" mines? The total lack of progress in a South African solution?
Will he rescind his statement made during this administration that the Marcos regime was a model of democracy? Will he admit that the opposition to Soviet occupation in Afghanistan was a bipartisan effort (as opposed to some nameless Nicaraguan countries where our government breaks the law to show how democratic and peace loving we are)? That SDI ("$inkhole for Defense Industries") is no longer designed to protect the civilian population (so THAT's why he wants to be president)?

That creating a "peace dome" frees up billions to research on how to destroy it? And that destroying 90 percent of the Soviet nuclear arsenal would still mean a measly 3,000 missiles coming to a fallout shelter near you?
That Grenada, upon closer inspection, turned out to be a giant floating car manufactured by the Ford Motor Company (it has since been recalled)? That popular anti-American sentiment fueled the pro-democratic riots in South Korea? That American dollars crushed a popular resistance movement in El Salvador? That for every zero in the star wars $13 billion cost (according to Tim) to date there are 333,333 safer (?) Americans who can't afford housing of any kind? That the Reagan/Bush alternative to tax and spending has been to borrow and spend?
"Gloom and doom" mentality, Tim? That's what I'd ascribe to an administration that claims a country of 3 million (which, like the U.S., can't even feed and house all its citizens), on the backs of killer bees, is going to invade the U.S. of A. And democracy in Guatemala cannot influence our country's election process as four government has theirs, because George Bush would not only lose — he would probably be forced into exile in the back seat of a Grenada.

And by the way, has anybody read George Bush's lips lately when he so courageously repeats the pledge of allegiance? Upon closer inspection, he doesn't appear to be saying:
I pledge a grievance,
To the wag,
One of the basket cases of hysteria,
And to the public,
For wishy stands,
One ration, under claws, invisible,
Of liberty; and justice forestalled.

LETTERS

To all you "experts"

Editor:

There's an interesting couplet in the book of Proverbs: "Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him. Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit." Prov. 26:4-5 This illustrates perfectly the heads you win, tails I lose situation one is in when dealing with someone who is "wise in his own conceit". It doesn't bother me in the least to see somebody make a public spectacle of themselves by trying to show us how smart they are and how dumb we Christians and the Bible are. The ones that get to me are the "Bible Experts". Ninety-nine percent of these self-appointed "Bible Experts" are Bible Dunces. Most of the time they read a Bertrand Russell book or some other prominent atheist's book and are then an authority ready to straighten out us poor dumb Christians out.

I'm writing this letter for the sake of those few who are searching and who are sincerely interested in what the Bible says and who may have been misled by our recent "experts". Let's start with Numbers 31:17-18. It was claimed that these verses constitute an order from God to rape young girls. This assertion is so lame it's a joke. First of all it's Moses that is speaking not God. "And Moses said . . ." verse 15. Talk about taking a verse out of context, this "expert" couldn't even get the speaker right! Next, nowhere in the passage is anything sexual stated or implied. The young girls were taken for the purpose of later becoming wives to Israelite men. There were laws governing their treatment, see Deuteronomy 21:10-17 and Exodus 23:9 among others.

The remaining assertions made by this individual are of the same caliber as the first. Even a casual reading of the passages cited by him will show that he has no credibility at all when it comes to the Bible.

Our next "expert" makes the claim that the Bible contains false promises regarding the return of Jesus. The verses cited are Mark 9:1, 13:30, Matthew 10:23, Luke 21:32 and 1 Thessalonians 4:17.

Mark 9:1 says not a word about his second coming. The verse is about the Kingdom of God. Why it was cited in the first place is beyond me. In the next verses "the false promises" turn out to be the result of someone's inability to read plain English.

Mark 13:30 made reference to "this generation". This is not referring to the people present because in verse 26 Jesus said, "And then shall THEY see the Son of man coming . . ." Here "they" refers to another generation and it is this generation which will see his coming and experience ALL the calamities described.

In Matthew 10:23, a careful reading of the whole chapter is required. But, when do our "experts" ever bother to read the whole chapter? At the beginning of chapter 10, Jesus tells his disciples NOT to go to the Gentiles (verse 5). Later in the chapter (verse 18), he is talking about someone being a testimony against the Gentiles. Somewhere between verse 15 and 18 the group he is addressing has changed. It is this second group that will see his coming.

Luke 21:32 is a parallel passage to Mark 13:30. Note the "they" in Luke 21:27. Again, a reference to a generation other than the current one.

In 1 Thess. 4:17, the "we" refers to the body of believers at large. It applies equally well to Paul's generation or some future generation. Real Hard.

For those who want to study the Bible for themselves, you would be amazed at how much you can learn with nothing more than a Bible (Authorized Version only), a concordance, a dictionary, and a humble heart. The last element is the most important.

"God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble." James 4:6.

Answer to empty promises

Editor:

On September 23, 1988, the Argonaut published a letter by Ralph Nielsen. Mr. Nielsen is of the opinion that Jesus Christ gave empty promises to his disciples and those who follow him. In this letter it is my desire to follow this Biblical principle: "But sanctify Christ in your hearts, always being ready to make a defense to everyone who asks you to give an account for the hope that is within you, yet with gentleness and reverence." (1 Peter 3:15)

I believe that scripture references that Mr. Nielsen refers to are: Matthew 16:28, Matthew 24:34, Mark 9:1, Mark 13:26, Luke 9:27, Luke 21:32, and 1 Thessalonians 4:17. Without quoting these scriptures verbatim, I will attempt to condense them and state their intent. Matthew 16:28 and Mark 9:1 are essentially the same statement. The gist is, "some of you will not die until you see God's kingdom come with power." Mark 13:26 says "they will see the Son of Man coming in clouds with great power and glory." Again Matthew 24:34 and Luke 21:32 are essentially the same saying, "this generation will not pass away until these things take place." First Thessalonians 4:17, the words of Paul the Apostle, say to the effect, "that we (followers of Christ) will be caught up in the clouds, and will meet the Lord when he returns."

Matthew 16:28 and Mark 9:1 refer not to the return of Christ, but to his kingdom. This prophecy was fulfilled in Matthew 17, when Jesus was transfigured (i.e. seen in all His power and glory. At this time His disciples view His kingdom) and exulted by God the Father.

Furthermore, the Bible has not always been in English; in fact it was translated from Greek texts. In Matthew 24:34 the Greek word for generation also means race or family, (i.e. a possible reference to the Jews, in race, or His followers, in family).

Vandals improve to 2-1 in Big Sky

By Joe Hughes
Sports Editor

The Montana State Bobcats were on top of the Big Sky Conference when they played Idaho on Saturday, but the Vandals brought the Bobcats back to earth with a 41-24 victory in the ASUI Kibbie Dome.

The Bobcats came into Moscow with a 2-0 record in the Big Sky and found the Vandals prepared to squash their hopes of an undefeated conference slate.

Quarterback John Friesz

led the Vandal attack, completing 20-27 passes for 235 yards with two touchdowns and one interception. The highlight of the game for Friesz was not a usual pass play for a touchdown, but rather a 10-yard run for a score, the first in his career at Idaho.

The Big Sky's leading rusher, Idaho's Bruce Harris, left the game with a sprained shoulder in the second quarter, but Damon Daniels was there to take up the slack as he rushed for 101 yards and one touchdown on 18 carries.

Head coach Keith Gilbertson said Daniels also carried the burden of a death in his family. He missed most of the practices last week so he could attend the funeral of his grandmother. "My main concern was to just go out and win," said Daniels.

The Vandals systematically controlled the game with long drives in the first half as they built a 20-0 lead over the Bobcats. Idaho also built leads of 27-0 and 34-7 in the second

With the split, Idaho moves to 8-9 overall on the season with a 2-6 Big Sky Conference mark. The Lady Vandals begin the second half of their Big Sky season Thursday as they travel to Ogden to meet the Weber State Wildcats.

Against Eastern, Deskines had nine digs and six blocks along with her 14 kills, and Christensen added eight digs. Karen Thompson had 12 kills and seven digs, and Stacey Asplund contributed 10 kills

Soccer club wins pair

The University of Idaho Soccer Club traveled north to Sandpoint Saturday to win a pair of games at the Oktoberfest tournament. Arnie Friling scored the single goal for the victory against Sandpoint in the opening game, then joined four teammates in beating a team from Creston, British Columbia by a 5-0 score.

Troy Reynolds opened the scoring against Creston, then was joined by Jan Friling with a penalty kick, Whitney Davies, Andy Symes, and Arnie Friling. The Idaho Club was forced to play without the services of an experienced goal keeper, but preserved the shutout by rotating players at the position.

Club president Robb Kirschenmann asked that players with keeper experience show up at Wednesday's 5 p.m. practice on Guy Wicks field. He would like to have a committed goalie who can travel with the club, particularly for the coming weekend games against Central Oregon Community College in Bend.

The Club's second team will play a game against Nacional of Walla Walla at Guy Wicks field Sunday at noon.

half and substituted freely. The Bobcats fumbled the ball on the third play of the game and Jim Medved recovered it to lead to a 25-yard field goal by Thayne Doyle.

Idaho's next scoring drive covered 98 yards in only 1:58 and was capped off by Friesz's sprint to the corner of the end zone.

David Jackson received a pass from Friesz from seven yards out to finish a 74-yard drive and Doyle booted a 47-yard field goal with 1:03 left in the first half to make the score 20-0.

The Vandals scored on their first possession of the second half when freshman Devon Pearce scored a 3-yard run to finish another extended drive of 64 yards to open up the game 27-0. Pearce finished the game with 76 yards on 12 carries.

Midway through the third period, the Bobcats finally put some numbers on the board when a John Pleas punt was blocked and recovered in the end zone by Ken Buss. The Vandals countered with a 68-yard, 8-play drive which concluded with Friesz hitting John Jake for a commanding 34-7 lead with 2:09 remaining in the third quarter.

The Vandals are now tied with MSU, Boise State and Montana with 2-1 conference record while Nevada-Reno is 2-0 in conference and 5-0 overall.

The Vandals travel to Spokane this Saturday to face Eastern Washington University at 2 p.m.

The reference in I Thessalonians 4:17 refers to Christ's return during the end times, and although Paul believed that Christ would return soon, this scripture does not state that he would return during Paul's lifetime, nor does the context of the passage indicate this.

The Bible addresses this issue even further in II Peter 3:3-4, 8-9, "Know this first of all, that in the last days mockers will come with their mocking, following after their own lusts, and saying, 'Where is the promise of His coming?' For ever since the fathers fell asleep, all continues just as it was from the beginning of creation... But do not let this one fact escape your notice, beloved, that with the Lord one day is a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slow about His promises as some count slowness, but is patient toward you, not wishing for any to perish but for all to come to repentance.

This is the answer to the question that Mr. Nielsen asked of the man who was passing out New Testaments. I have in my limited knowledge tried to give a concise treatment of that issue. However, my answer, due to lack of time and space, remains, in my opinion, superficial.

Puppets of Oedipus

Marionette artist to do Greek classic

By Art Peel
Staff Writer

Freud said we are all puppets of the Oedipus Complex. This assertion may or may not be true, but this Friday puppets, or marionettes rather, will take charge of the ancient Greek play Oedipus the King.

Washington State University's Visual, Performing and Literary Arts Committee (VPLAC) continues its 1988-89 series "The World According to Art" with the Marionette Theater of Peter Arnott.

Arnott is a Professor of Drama at Tufts University, where he teaches theater history and directs plays. Arnott has also written several books on theater history.

While specializing in the history of Greek and Roman theater, Arnott became interested both in puppetry and in the problems of presenting ancient plays to contemporary audiences. He combined the two interests when he formed his one-man performance company.

Arnott uses his marionettes to transport theater-goers to the vast, acoustically superb theaters of ancient Greece, in which plays had to appeal to a hearing rather than a viewing audience. The marionettes "shrink" the performance and give it a sense of taking place at a distance.

In addition to Oedipus the King, Arnott performs a repertoire of other classical plays. He builds and manipulates the marionettes himself and recites from memory his own translations of the original texts. Arnott combines these physical and verbal elements to create a high level of dramatic tension, while at the same time remaining sensitive to the internal rhythm of the poetic verse.

Because of the mature nature of the play, children under 12 will not be admitted. Professor Arnott stipulates this condition in his contract because he is worried that the

Cliff parody does a nosedive

Weak jokes and incorrect facts mar attempted humor

Review By Kirk Laughlin
Copy Editor

A new book by Gina and Annette Cascone, Jump Off the Cliff Notes: A Parody (Bart Books, $4.95) proves something about comedy; it's something of a strange bird, especially when authors attempt to capture it in print. Not the comedy of, say, a Shakespearean play where a situation merely turns out well and everyone has a wedding or a feast; I'm talking about prose designed to make one guffaw out loud.

Of course, there are many laughs inherent in the works of Shakespeare as well as in the works of other punning geniuses like John Donne, James Joyce and John Updike.

But what works can non-English majors sit back and enjoy for laughs? What about the hilarious essays and plays in works like Getting Even and Without Feathers by Woody Allen? There's also the oddly dynamic Cruel Shoes by Steve Martin. Shoes demonstrated, with its absurdist situations and self-mockingly arrogant essays, the versatility Martin was capable of, the same quality mainstream movie-goers are all ga-ga over in his latest cinematic work.

And of course, the obvious written word in comedy is the National Lampoon Magazine which contains enough material in it for occasional brilliance to poke through the crudity and juvenile aspects.

Unfortunately, the brilliance is muffled (if it is even there at all) in Jump Off the Cliff Notes. Seemingly, it is a work that could combine the intelligence of "classic" writers with a broader spark of comedy. It attempts to condense works like Moby Dick, The Old Man and the Sea, The Grapes of Wrath and Animal Farm in a humorous fashion. What I expected from this work is for people to mock the Cliff's Note tradition of students getting the condensed version rather than the real thing. At the very least, I expected people who knew the work well to find the flaws in the style of, say, Ernest Hemingway or in the unwieldiness of Herman Melville.

Jump Off the Cliff Notes fails to satisfy on either of these levels. To start, the Cascones assume that teachers and professors are wrong in assigning these works so the entire book (actually, more of an 80-page pamphlet) devotes its time to making fun of the "classics."

But even that isn't very funny. They begin with the obvious phallic jokes about Moby-Dick and slide steadily downhill. Here's what the Cascones think the reader will find hilarious about the climax of the white whale story: "So as the guy who tells the story drifts off into the sunset in Tattoo's canoe's coffin, the reader is left wondering, where's the beef?" Oh, yeah. Remember that "Where's the Beef" ad campaign Wendy's hamburger chain had about four years ago?

Just as dated is the cartoon of Richard Pryor reading a copy of Stephen King's Firestarter. Even if it wasn't old, old news, a free-baser setting himself on fire doesn't exactly ensure big laughs and especially not for these authors.

The summary of Animal Farm is an attempt to tell the story to the tune of "Old McDonald Had A Farm." Now it sounds like a good

Ringers split between slow pace and haunting style

Review By Brian Tuomey
Managing Editor

While I sat in the theater waiting for Dead Ringers to begin, I was haunted by the catchy lines that plague the film's advertisements (You know, phrases like "Two bodies . . . two minds . . . one soul"), but throughout the movie I thought, "Too long . . . too slow . . . I'm bored."

Honestly, I did have some high expectations for this film. Director David Cronenberg is well-known for his mixture of highly developed characters and graphically violent effects. Cronenberg is also recognized for his talent in the science fiction/horror genre as being a sort of young Hitchcock/Tobe Hooper mixture.

Cronenberg co-wrote the screenplay, based on the novel Twins (which was based on a true story) and offered some interesting things (like the "two bodies . . . two minds . . . etc."). The film centers around two gifted and prosperous gynecologists who share every aspect of each others' lives, from apartments to women, and their inevitable downfall from addiction to drugs. Dead Ringers is kind of mixture of The Parent Trap, Sid and Nancy and a "Just Say No" ad (picture two eggs in a frying pan: "This is your 'two minds' on drugs").

Jeremy Irons does a believable job as the two Mantle brothers, adding a variety of character similarities and strange idiosyncrasies. Irons plays both Elliot, the pompous, secure socialite, and Beverley, the timid genius lacking in the social graces, with enough conviction that the audience may lose track of the real fact that both characters are played the same person.

Unfortunately, actress Genevieve Bujold's character distracts too much attention from Irons' performances. Although her character is the key element to the downfall of the Mantles' sanity, her performance is over-played and over-cliched to the point of confusing the director's intent on using her in the film. She is never cured of her own drug addiction, does little to help the brothers with their problems, and basically is just too boring to be entertaining for more than five minutes.

The lighting at times resembles the best dramatic scenes from early Star Trek episodes with dramatic contrasts of lights and darks. The set designs are exceptional and Cronenberg's use of intense color contrasts parallels the differences between the two brothers.

The typical Cronenberg film fan may be disappointed in the film's low keyed topic. There are no heads exploding, strange physical transformations, or dissolving limbs; instead Cronenberg relies more on implied physical violence and intense situations than on special make-up effects (although there's one scene containing some).

But, as interesting as the characters and the sets may be, the film still suffers from a lack of definition in plot levels. The audience expects the plot to reach a transitional high-point where the characters must make important decisions that affect the final outcome of the story.

Without a strong storyline, the film seems to creep along at an incredibly slow pace, finally ending in a predictable climax with the deaths of the now drugged and insane brothers (which is no surprise since they blatantly hint at this conclusion earlier in the film).

Although the haunting style of Cronenberg's film making is refreshing and captivating, Cronenberg fans may find the content disappointing and audiences may find the film too elongated a story and too narrow a topic.

popular association of the puppetry medium with children's entertainment will lead some to overlook the inappropriateness of Greek plays for children.

The performance is free and will take place Friday, October 14 at 8 p.m. in Daggy Hall's Jones Theater at WSU.

In addition to the performance, Arnott will give a "brown bag" talk on Greek and Roman theater in general, and on his approach to presenting these plays, at 12 noon Friday in the Gridiron Room of the CUB.

Arnott's visit is part of a series called "The World According to Art" which Marty Mullen of the Visual, Performing and Literary Arts Committee said was started last year to inaugurate a new course in world civilization.

"We're trying to familiarize people with cultures from other places and other times through art," Mullen said.

WSU jazz bands perform tonight

Washington State University's Jazz Big Bands will present their first concert of the semester tonight at 8 p.m. in Kimbrough Hall.

The bands will perform jazz standards from the libraries of Count Basie and Woody Herman, as well as original music composed for the groups by director Greg Yasinitzky.

The jazz studies program at WSU is recognized as one of the finest in the Northwest. The Jazz Big Band has toured extensively, including invited appearances in British Columbia, Hawaii, California, Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

The band has recorded two critically acclaimed albums, and individuals from the jazz studies program have received numerous awards including "Outstanding Performance Awards" from Downbeat magazine, a jazz publication.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

idea, but you get about a page into it and you realize the laughs don't support the laborious rhymes and frequent dull thoughts.

A lot of the time in Jump Off, the Cascones give the impression that they just want to insult the works. By the time they get to War and Peace they turn their "wit" to one-liners. On that work they say "There was a war and eight-hundred-sixty gazillion pages later, there was peace." Crime and Punishment is given "Charles Dickens wrote a book. And we had to read it." Perhaps Dostoevsky used Dickens as a pen name. If you're going to make fun of something, at least try and get the facts right, ladies.

Only the last two pages are any good at all. The finale is a mock-essay on the Christian-existential-Darwinism reconciliation in Dr. Seuss' One Fish, Two Fish, Red Fish, Blue Fish. It's worth a look by itself; it goes nowhere near the distance needed to redeem the rest of this mess.

I got the impression the Cascones had spent their research time for this book sitting around, making fun of the English teachers they used to hate rather than actually reading the works or even reading Cliff's Notes summaries. Giggling at the mention of the word "dick" or referring to Of Mice and Men's Lennie as "a pencil-neck geek" may be fine for eighth graders in gym class but it's certainly not worth $4.95. You'd be better off throwing your money in the street and renewing your library card than buying this book.

and five blocks to the Lady Vandals' effort.

"That match really demonstrates that we can be successful," said Idaho head coach Pam Bradetich. "This match really gives us some higher hopes for the second half (of the Big Sky season)." Bradetich added that Christensen's solid performance as a starter may have been the difference in the match.

Idaho showed several signs of improvement against the Eagles, including their ability to hit well. The Lady Vandals hit .264 for the match — including .464 and .381 percentages in the first and fourth games — to improve on their .187 season hitting percentage.

Against Weber State Friday, the Lady Vandals fell to the 19-5 regionally-ranked Wildcats in four games, despite playing well enough to win the third game, 16-14.

"We can play with any team in the conference," said Bradetich when asked about the Lady Vandals' play in the third game. "But we just want to go and knock off some opponents. We've proved that we can play intensely for short periods of time, and simply need to extend that time to cover the entire match."

Dawn Colston led the Lady Vandals against WSC with 10 kills and two block assists, and Karen Thompson added nine kills and seven digs. Susan Deskines had eight kills and five digs in the match.
