Singer cries "Shut up and buy"

Biafra says Americans are letting civil rights slip away

By Julie Clark
Entertainment Editor

For at least the next four years, Americans can expect to become closer bedfellows with civil rights violations, the religious right and state-controlled media, according to Jello Biafra. Biafra, lead singer and lyricist for the now-defunct hard rock band the Dead Kennedys, warned a sold-out audience of more than 400 Tuesday night that Constitutional rights are in serious jeopardy under a renewed assault by the religious right.

From the opening of his three-hour performance, Biafra established his fears that "a bloodless coup may already have gone down," asserting that President-elect George Bush's "so-called wimp factor is more like a mirage cooked up to make him look kind of cute" so Americans won't notice that his hands may be filthy from involvement in dirty little wars around the world.

In a mock declaration of martial law, Biafra announced that "the comfort you've demanded is now mandatory," criticizing Americans' ready acceptance of issues and people as they appear on the surface.

"Who's gonna do anything about it? You? Me?" Biafra queried. "What can we do except shut up and buy? I'm scared!"

Biafra outlined what he sees as the religious right's link to government and censorship. He asked the audience questions such as: Did you know Dan Quayle's wife is a prominent member of a large right wing fundamentalist church? Or that newly chosen Secretary of State Jim Baker's wife co-founded the Parents Music Resource Center with Sen. Albert Gore's wife Tipper?

In "Urination is Freedom," Biafra suggested the drug scare may be a carefully planned hysteria to make people forget about the economy and covert actions in Central America. "How else could we get people to piss in a jar without even asking if their rights are being molested? Wake up! We're talking violation here!"

Biafra had personal experience with rights violation in 1986 when he awoke to the sounds of nine police officers searching his

"It's Rambozo the Clown, fuel for a mass lapse of common sense. Mass murder ain't just painless, we've made it cute!"

Kagi, Major win

By Beth Pettibon
Staff Writer

"I'll have to tackle all the promises I made," said Tina Kagi, the newly-elected ASUI President. She won Wednesday's election with 825 votes.

Kagi defeated Steve Smart and Jeff Friel for the ASUI presidential election. Lynn Major was elected the new vice-president, beating out Mike Gotch and Brian Workman. Senate winners include Craig McCurry, Mike Mick, Charlene (C.J.) Johnson, John Goettsche, Kurt Gustavel, and Marc Boyer.

"I was really quite surprised," Kagi said, when asked what her reaction was to her win. She attributes her budgeting experience and the time she made to visit all but two living groups as the keys to her victory.

Kagi hopes to have scheduled meetings with the future university president every one or two weeks to establish a good working relationship.

Kagi held a lead of 206 votes over second-place candidate

Steve Smart, who received 619 votes. Jeff Friel finished third with 356.

Lynn Major, who won the vice-presidential race with 702 total votes, said she was surprised and ecstatic about her win. "I have a lot of work to do," Major said.

Major was followed by Steve Gotch, who received 597 votes, and Brian Workman with 409.

The six senators elected include Craig McCurry, who received the most votes of any candidate with 1,099. Mike Mick tied with Charlene (C.J.) Johnson. They both received 1,040 votes each. Marc Boyer placed fourth with 945, followed by John Goettsche with 905. Kurt Gustavel was close behind with 902.

Candidates John Buffa, who received 836 votes, and Todd Foxall, with 739, failed to gain a senate seat. Write-in candidate Ray Horton garnered 146 votes in his last-minute bid for the senate.

Approximately 1,800 students voted in Wednesday's election, which is one-fifth of the UI student body.

Students still uninformed on food service issue

By Sherry Deal
News Editor

Even after all of the talk about the food service issue, students are still not aware of just what it is the Marriott Corp. and the present Food Services have to offer, according to University of Idaho President Richard Gibb.

Gibb said many students have strong opinions one way or the other, but they still are not educated on the issue.

He received a petition on Tuesday signed by 350 students who are in favor of keeping the present Food Services, but said he will not pay much attention to a petition like the one he received, which claims the administration is only interested in making a profit.

"Obviously, the students who signed the petition are not well informed," Gibb said. "We (the administration) are only interested in providing the students with the best possible food service."

"If we started to make a profit off of the food service, we would lower the price of the food," he added.

Gibb said many of the students who signed the petition were off campus students, and were concerned only with Joe's and the Blue Bucket, which are located in the Student Union Building. He said he is mostly interested in the opinion of the students living in the resident halls because they eat at the Wallace Cafeteria regularly.

According to David Ruch, who started the petition, there were faculty, staff members, students and at least one dean's signature on the petition. "These are the people President Gibb is calling uninformed," Ruch said.

He said he accused the administration of being out to make a profit because the students haven't been given any other reasons for the possible change.

Gibb plans to gain student input through the Resident Hall Association. RHA President Paula Wood said she is working with the administration to come up with a simplified information packet to hand out to students.

The packet will try to explain some of the facts and myths about both food vendors, and will be concerned mainly with answering the questions students most frequently ask, Wood said. She plans to have the packet out by Monday, Nov. 28.

- The Argonaut polled 600 hall residents over the weekend to determine how they felt about the proposed change in food service. The question read "Do you want Marriott Corp. to manage the Wallace Complex Cafeteria?" Of the 74 questionnaires returned, 48 said no, 15 said yes and 11 did not care. The Residence Hall Association declined to return the remainder of the questionnaires. RHA President Paula Wood explained the decision in a letter to the news editor. She wrote "If this survey said 98% of students surveyed don't want Marriott, and the administration decides to go with Marriott, then that would look like the students have no say."

Where are the yearbooks?

By Beth Pettibon
Staff Writer

Students who have been patiently waiting for the release of the 1987-88 Gem yearbook can blame the continuing delays on an out-of-state publishing company who is handling the production, according to Gem editor Patti Rambo.

The books, which were supposed to be out Oct. 12, are now expected to be here before Christmas break. Rambo said she had been promised the books would be here before Thanksgiving, but when she called the publishers on Monday, they were still printing.

"I'm sure no other college is having their book published this late, so I don't know why it's taking them so long," Rambo said. "First they promised us the books would be here Oct. 12, then it was Thanksgiving, and now it's Christmas. It would be nice if we could get them before the end of the year."

Rambo said the company, Delmar Publishing of North Carolina, submitted a bid for the job along with three other publishers. "Delmar had the lowest bid, so the university chose them," Rambo said. "They quote the lowest base prices, but after they get the bid, they start charging excessive charges in addition. And they don't even tell us how we can avoid these," Rambo said.

When the bids are submitted to the university for selection every three years, Rambo said they are all within a few hundred dollars of each other. In 1987, Delmar charged the Gem $7,000 in excessive overcharges.

"We are probably the best book they have ever printed," Rambo said. "They have absolutely no qualms about charging us with excessive make-ready charges."

This is the fifth year the University of Idaho has awarded Delmar the publishing contract, and Rambo said this is because a lot of the people who make the selection are pro-Delmar.

The Gem is far ahead of schedule in terms of book sales, with 82.4 percent of their expected sales goal as of Oct. 19, Rambo said. This translates to $20,050 in sales. Christmas mailers have been sent to parents, who can buy the yearbook for students. Yearbooks are $19 each and will be available at registration in January for students who still want to buy one.

home for evidence related to a Dead Kennedys' album. The album, Frankenchrist, was under scrutiny because of an inner-sleeve poster which drew a complaint from a 16-year old girl and her mother.

Charges were filed against Biafra and four others by the Los Angeles City Attorney's office for distributing harmful matter to minors because of the complaint. The poster in question was a reproduction of a painting by Swiss surrealist artist H.R. Giger depicting disembodied, distorted sex organs. Biafra's defense was that the poster was integral to Frankenchrist's concepts of mindless conformity and people "screwing each other over."

Of the art, Biafra said, "this is art that confronts you, makes you think. This is not Holiday Inn art and it's not for everyone."

Charges against Biafra were dropped after he spent a year and a half and $80,000 in his defense, and watching prosecuting attorney Michael Guarino try to convince expert witnesses that the poster was obscene.

"It was kind of cool that Guarino had to eat, sleep and dream H.R. Giger and Dead Kennedys albums for a year and a half," Biafra said.

Gibb said he still plans to consider student input, but questions the extremely low number of students who attended the presentations given by Marriott and Food Services earlier this month. He felt if students were concerned they should have showed up to the meetings so they could have been better informed.

Gibb said he is willing to meet with individuals or groups of students who would like to discuss the issue. "I welcome meaningful student input," he said.

Wood said she is sure Gibb will not make his decision until after the information is handed out to students.

OPINION

Food Service basics

Are University of Idaho students slow learners or has the Resident Hall Association sold out?

After a semester of being bombarded by the ins and outs of the Food Service saga, RHA President Paula Wood recently claimed students are still unaware of the real issues involved and has used that rationale as a basis for prohibiting the public disclosure of responses to a recent questionnaire.

Last Friday the Argonaut distributed questionnaires to residence hall presidents (the presidents, not RHA) asking students "Do you want Marriott Corp. to manage the Wallace Complex Cafeteria?", followed by YES, NO, DON'T CARE.

Simple enough — right? Well not according to Wood.

She charged that the student population has not yet been fully informed on the Food Service issue and the Argonaut's questionnaire was too basic.

Basic? It might be, but let's talk democratic principles . . . people have a right to their opinion, and no individual, or group for that matter, has the right to dictate when they are well enough informed to give that opinion.

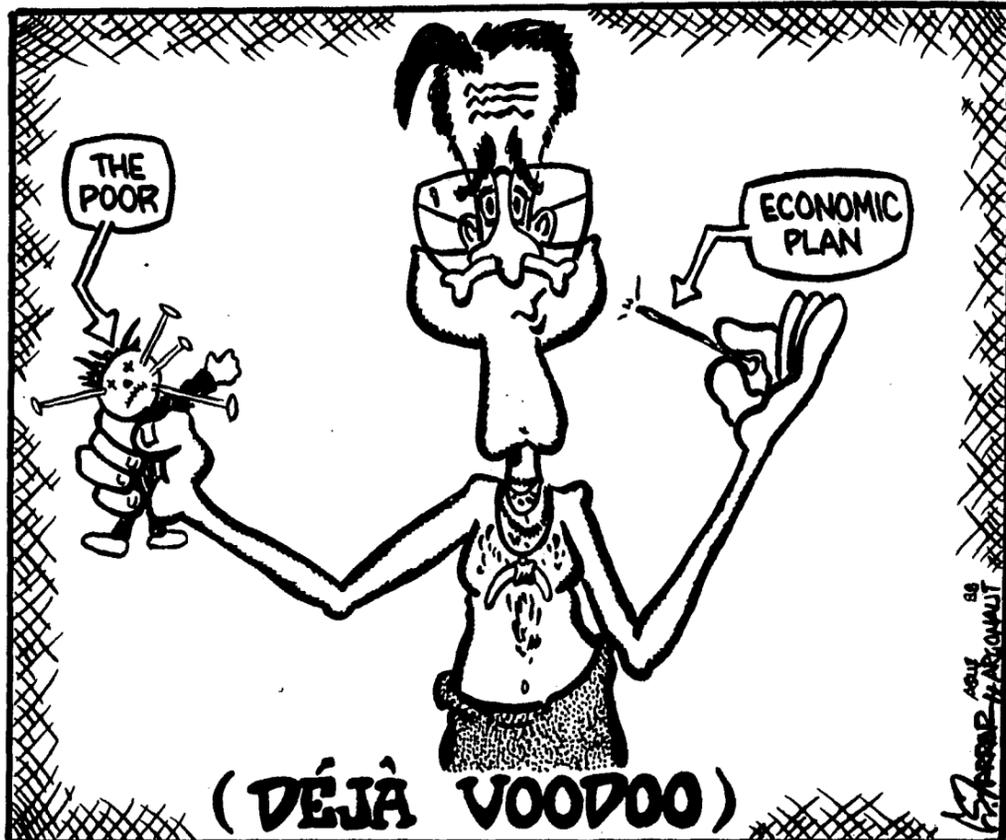

The issue began with whether or not the students desired an outside Food Service. RHA has transformed it into a much more fundamental issue — do they or any other faction have the right to dictate when and how we may express our opinions?

Now think about it, if we follow this logic, such a system more closely resembles a dictatorship than democracy.

Granted, students may not have all the facts. There is a definite need for some clear-cut answers, but then there hasn't been a whole lot of ready information available. I mean a couple of meetings at 8:30 a.m. (prime class time), and a 600 page "proposal" on display in the ASUI office (not to be photocopied or taken out of the office for that matter) are not easily digested information.

Educate us, inform us, even criticize us but don't deny us our rights to express our opinion.

Ignorance abounds

Editor:

To borrow the form of a time-tested, old adage I would counsel your readers to, "Beware of First Year law students citing Supreme Court Decisions." Jane Clark's letter of Oct. 28 displays a woeful ignorance of the history of both the first amendment and freedom to organize rights in our own country. To attempt to apply them to others without understanding them herself is folly.

Ms. Clark is appalled that the Nicaraguan government has not paralleled the advancement of these issues as we enjoy them in the United States after "nine whole years" as a functioning governmental entity. This in the face of the fact these same freedoms were not effectively enforced within our own country after over 150 years in the case of NRLB v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., and in the freedom of speech area there is significant evidence that we had not learned that lesson well until 179 years later as indicated by the series of cases during the hysterias of the early 1900s and the early 1950s which severely restricted the ability of individuals to voice opposition to our form of government (see Schenck v. US 1919, Whitney v. California 1927, Dennis v. U.S. 1951).

When placed in a similar context, that being the imminent threat of invasion by a foreign entity, the United States has illustrated similar if not more excessive restraints on individual freedoms; to wit, the wholesale relocation (and concomitant "reallocation" of their resources) of our Japanese/American population on the west coast, or the complete denial of liberty by way of incarceration for those who dared voice "ideas" inimical to our democratic institutions as was the case in those series of cases cited above. In fact, the rubric "national security" has allowed far more incursions against individual liberty on far less evidence of actual threat in this country than those current in Nicaragua.

This short attempt to give fullness to the naked equation attempted by Ms. Clark is not to be mistaken for an apology of the excesses of the Sandinistas. We should exercise all lawful and effectual means of encouraging the advancement of freedoms in Nicaragua. One of the first steps would be to decry the use of American funding of the war against the Nicaraguan people, thus withdrawing one of the principle Sandinista rationales for the restrictions of these freedoms.

. . . a rationale they may well have learned from us. Another step would be to challenge the sort of Norteamericano arrogance that presumes to deny Nicaraguans the ability to form their own "marketplace of ideas" in which, given the fullness of time, they may adequately articulate the form of government that is best for them. Nor is this another case of Liberal "blame America first." I love this country much the same way I love my children . . . warts and all! I do not cease loving either when it is pointed out to me that neither has an unblemished past or a limited future. And, I certainly will not sit by idly and witness behavior that is inappropriate to their abilities or inimical to the collective wisdom of their ancestry. Hopefully. . . prayerfully I will not be a stumbling block to either.

In that vein I humbly point out that this great country was able to stumble and lurch forward towards the achievement of individual liberties virtually unhampered by outside forces. Even so, the freedoms we know and value were, for many of our people, slow in coming. Let us not hinder that process for others by doing battle with "ideas" we find threatening through means of military aggression and raw force. For though means of military aggression and raw force. For though unstated in Ms. Clark's letter I feel confident in assuming that what Ms. Clark is really decrying is not the loss of liberty by individual Nicaraguans but rather the advancement of an ideology that may threaten her own. Unfortunately I fear that the means toward that end that currently enjoy favor will do nothing more than to fuel further conflict; whereas the means supported by Mary Voxman move slowly, inexorably towards mutual respect and a true distillation of the values we desire to share with all peoples.

New age artist to perform

Windham Hill recording artist Scott Cossu will perform Dec. 2 in the Administration Auditorium. The concert, sponsored by ASUI Productions, also includes special guest artist Danny O'Keefe.

Cossu's recordings explore acoustic music, blending ethnic influences and jazz. The result is an electronic jazz fusion that has brought Windham Hill artists to the forefront of the new age, soft fusion genre that graces adult contemporary radio.

Cossu is supporting a new album, She Describes Infinity, which is filled with original compositions that synthesize his work with various ensemble sizes and styles.

Danny O'Keefe, who has just finished a 20-city tour opening for Jackson Browne, is probably best-known for penning the 1971 ballad "Goodtime Charlie's Got the Blues." Other songs by Cossu have been recorded by such artists as Jackson Browne, Judy Collins, Leo Sayer, Andy Williams and John Denver.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. and admission is $5 for students and $6 for the general public.

The newly expanded Waterboys

Waterboys go to Irish roots

Review By Ina Hendricks
Staff Writer

The Waterboys
Fisherman's Blues
Chrysalis Records

The Waterboys aren't just your average up-and-coming Irish band trying to make it big on the American music scene. In fact, they've been around for quite a while, having created their own style familiar to many who have known one of their best albums, This is the Sea. Lead singer Mike Scott, whose vocals have been compared to those of a young Bob Dylan, doesn't disappoint here - he retains that intense, pleading, desperate-to-be-heard sound which distinguishes the group from many other rock/pop bands.

But the album has an overriding folk flavor not expressed on earlier releases. Many people collaborated on Fisherman's Blues, incorporating traditional sounds of mandolin, fiddle and harmonica into the Waterboys' unique rock style. In addition, there are several purely traditional Irish folk songs on the album, such as "When Will We be Married?" and "The Stolen Child."

Although I loved their previous efforts and style, this direction is refreshing and expresses this band's diverse talent.

("Green Pea Soup") and censorship ("Tipper Gore"). The dark, terrible aspects of life are no reason not to drive things home with a rousing and energetic song.

The Alice Donut performance will also include the hard-bluesy rock of the Fluid who are promoting their album Clear Black Paper on the Sub Pop label. The Ellensburg band Greensuit, who performed last March at a Moscow concert with Portland's Beat Happening, will also appear.

UI student Jeff Thomas, who sponsored the concert, expects the show to go well. "So far they've all been successful there (at the Combine)," Thomas said. "People have been enthusiastic and energetic."

Thomas is interested in getting more people to the Alice Donut show. "I want to get people to check it out, people who've never had a chance to see these kinds of bands before," he said.

Thomas, a member of the Pullman band Horse, has been able to sponsor three shows this year thanks to a relationship between Horse and a Sub Pop Records staff member. Thomas has sponsored Tad/Bloodcircus and Moral Crux concerts this semester.

"I'm trying to find a format for different kinds of bands," Thomas said. "There are people here who don't want to see Dokken and Aerosmith for $20."

Alice Donut, the Fluid, and Greensuit will perform at 8 p.m. at the Combine Mall in Pullman. Tickets are $4 at the door.

Biggest Idaho-BSU matchup ever

By Joe Hughes
Sports Editor

This game is the big one. Never before has the season-ending BSU-Idaho confrontation had more at stake than this season's. The conference title is at stake.

Although the Vandals have guaranteed at least a piece of the title, they can win it outright if they defeat the Broncos. For the Broncos, they must win if they want a piece of the conference title and the conference's automatic berth to the NCAA Division I-AA Playoffs.

The game features a contest between two former Coeur d'Alene quarterbacks, Idaho's John Friesz and BSU's Duane Halliday. Friesz threw for 423 yards and four touchdowns in last season's 40-34 victory over the Broncos to extend the Vandals winning streak over the Broncos to six straight games. Halliday passed two times in last year's game, one for an interception and the other an incompleting on a fake field goal attempt.

Friesz has completed 56 percent of his passes this season for 2,629 yards, 16 touchdowns and 14 interceptions while Halliday has completed 46 percent of his passes for 1,521 yards, 11 touchdowns and 16 interceptions. Idaho is the top offensive team in the conference averaging 294.4 yards per game. BSU is last with a 167.9 average.

Additional seating has been added to Bronco Stadium to increase its capacity to 23,500. The conference attendance record of 22,178 was set earlier this season in Bronco Stadium when BSU faced Nevada-Reno. Reserved seats were sold out over a month ago.

One of the Broncos main offensive threats is running-back Chris Thomas, who has gained 788 yards this season and has scored seven touchdowns. Idaho's top rusher is Bruce Harris with 757 yards and six touchdowns followed by Damon Daniels with 545 yards and five touchdowns.

The Vandals are averaging 452 yards in offense to Boise's 286.

The Vandal defense will be led by defensive end Marvin Washington, who recorded three sacks last week to set a new Vandal single season record for sacks with 12 1/2. The record was 12 set by Pete Wilkins last season.

Whichever team loses will probably receive an at-large berth to the playoffs. However, if Montana doesn't make it into the playoffs, the Vandals may have to play BSU again in Boise, even if Idaho wins this week. It's a financial matter decided by the NCAA.

The Vandals will most likely earn a playoff berth, no matter the outcome of the game. It would be Idaho's fourth straight playoff berth and fifth in the last seven seasons.

four other letter winners off of last year's sixth place team," said Turner. "Of those nine athletes, only two have had to have off-season surgery, so our overall health should be better than a year ago."

The Lady Vandals lost only one senior off last year's team - 5-11 forward Kim Chernecki - and hope to improve on last season's 7-20 overall record and 4-12 Mountain West Conference record.

The power area for the Lady Vandals this season will be in the front court where experience is in abundance with seniors Christy Van Pelt and Sheri Lehmer returning. Both started for much of last season but the Lady Vandals also return two other front court players who started at one time or another last year.

The 5-11 senior, Van Pelt, was the Lady Vandals' leading scorer last season averaging 12.7 points per game and led in steals (3.3) and second in rebounds (4.4). She was voted her team's most valuable player and best defensive player from last season.

Another important part of the Lady Vandal team will be the play of 5-11 power forward Lori Elkins. Elkins, a junior, was the team's leading rebounder averaging 6.1 per game and was second in scoring with a 10.0 points per game average.

Soccer Club loses finale

By Scott Trotter
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Soccer Club ended their fall semester season on a sour note. They lost.

The Vandals suffered their only loss of the season last Saturday in Pullman after the Washington State Cougars kept UI scoreless en route to a 5-0 victory.

According to club president Robb Kirschenmann, who helped the Vandals to an 8-1-1 final record, the team had a rough time in Pullman.

"We got beat, badly," said Kirschenmann. "We got pounded."

"Things just fell apart," he said. "Although they may have been a better team, we should have done a lot better. They got most of the breaks."

Kirschenmann said one of WSU's breaks came when UI managed to kick a ball into their own goal, helping the Cougars in their scoring efforts.

"One of our defensive men crossed the field in front of the goal and the ball deflected off him," he said. "It went into our goal."

Kirschenmann also said that the playing conditions were not the greatest. "The field was like playing on mashed potatoes," he said. "It was really wet."

Though not happy about the loss, Kirschenmann was able to remain humorous in regard to the team's only defeat. "We had 'em for the first ten minutes," he said.

Kirschenmann said the club will resume play during the spring semester.
