Finalist Anderson: 'My door is open'

By ANGELA CURTIS
Managing Editor

The oldest candidate for UI president turned the tables on the student government leaders who came to question him Monday.

David Anderson, one of four finalists for the university's top spots, arrived here yesterday for a two-day visit to meet faculty, students and community leaders.

Anderson, 54, vies to replace retiring UI President Richard Gibb.

Anderson, a Twin Falls native, is currently dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Georgia in Athens.

Included in his itinerary was a question-and-answer session with ASUI officials. However, Anderson asked as many questions as he answered, inquiring about ASUI policies, the Idaho legislature, drugs on campus and student issues.

"A lot of things have changed since I was a student in '52. What are hot concerns for the student body?" Anderson asked ASUI President Tina Kagi, one of seven students attending.

Students expressed concern about the lack of student involvement in decision-making.

Things would change if he moves into the office on the hill, Anderson said.

"If we aren't providing instructional programs for the students, there isn't any reason to be here," Anderson said. "My door is in fact open."

Anderson said he goes to his office at 7 a.m., an hour before

Tears of joy mark celebration of the century

By LEN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Tears filled the eyes of those attending the university's Centennial birthday party Monday afternoon as the audience sang along to a crackled recording of "Here We Have Idaho" blaring across Kibbie Dome speakers.

The alma mater was one of the items recorded 50 years ago on a secret record stowed in the university's Semicentennial Time Capsule.

But the record was only one of the surprises President Richard Gibb found in the copper box which had been sealed 50 years ago.

Centennial coordinators believed that messages in the time capsule were stored on a wire recording, not a record.

Based on information in a 1939 Argonaut article, officials believed they needed a wire recorder to play the messages.

"Luckily, most of the wire recorders were dual units," said Dan Schoenberg, audio technician for the Physical Plant. "So we had the situation where the unit we had here had a phonograph on it."

On the record was a message from John Warren Brigham, the Idaho legislator who helped draft Council Bill 20 establishing the university.

Also found in the time capsule were papers and letters from 1939 UI students and faculty to their modern counterparts.

One letter, written to the 1989 UI president, the "remote successor" of former Semicentennial UI President Harrison C.

MAKE A WISH. Although only 25 candles were placed on each corner of the University of Idaho's Centennial Birthday cake, retiring UI President Richard Gibb said he had to blow hard to put all the lights out. Monday afternoon's Kibbie Dome program was the culmination of the university's 18-month Centennial celebration. (JASON MUNROE PHOTO)

Dale, stated the late president's hopes and predictions for the university.

"The university community has been concerned with prospects of having our southern branch in Pocatello expanded into a four-year university, operating no longer as a part of this institution," Dale wrote.

Another letter, written to the 1989 ASUI President from the 1939 ASUI President Max Kenworthy, states different wishes and hopes for Kagi.

"It's almost kind of nostalgic to have something that old, especially for me," said Tina Kagi, ASUI president. "I think he kind of presumed that I was a male."

Kagi received a call from Kenworthy Monday morning to verify she would be present for the celebration.

Papers from the 1939 students to the 1989 students were also stuffed in the bottom of the 1939 Semicentennial box.

The papers had been distributed to the students in 1939, who returned them with many different comments and suggestions for the 1989 students:

■ "Arrange a fast moving program. This one is dead."

■ "I hope that by this time Idaho's superiority in athletics over Washington State has been firmly established."

■ "Beat W.S.C."

■ "The first hundred years are the hardest," and

■ "Happy days to the class of '89."

Also included in the time capsule were: copies of the 1939 UI Bulletin, a UI Catalog, letters to various university officials and the Board of Regents, a governor's proclamation, and a football schedule.

After the items were placed in a glass frame, the round Centennial cake was rolled out. Gov. Cecil Andrus, Sen. James McClure, Kagi and Gibb then blew out the 100 candles and served the dessert.

Present in the audience were alumni Delbert G. Larson and Winthrop Dale, son of the late UI President Dale. Both men had attended the UI Semicentennial.

Keith Peterson, author of This Crested Hill, also spoke briefly about the history of the university and the copper box, which was almost forgotten — until 10 years ago. UI officials located the lost box in the basement of the Administration Building.

"I'd like that to be a lesson for all the reporters present today to please take note where President Gibb plans to leave this time capsule so that historians in the year 2089 will know where to find it."

Andrus re-signs university charter

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

The signing of the charter that established the University of Idaho a century ago was re-enacted at the Founder's Day Banquet last night.

The document was signed Monday night by UI President Richard Gibb and Gov. Cecil Andrus. Sen. James McClure was present to witness the signing, as were numerous distinguished alumni and university representatives.

Andrus spoke of the importance Idaho's forefathers placed on education, saying that their commitment to excellence has been carried on in the UI tradition.

"The University of Idaho is indeed the flagship of education in Idaho — it always has been, and always will be," Andrus said.

He concluded by professing his pride in the university's "tremendous" first century and stated his hopes for an "equally exciting" second century.

Alumnus McClure was declared the 1989 Founder's Day Award Recipient. Gibb presented him with an award plaque and thanked him for his years of public service.

McClure spoke of the quality of the influences and contributions of UI graduates to the state, nation, and world.

"I'm proud to be a part of it," he said.

Entertainment was provided by jazz and choir ensembles from the Lionel Hampton School of Music. Directed by Dan Bukvich, the groups performed Idaho songs from throughout the past century.

SIGNED, SEALED, DELIVERED. Exactly one hundred years after Idaho Gov. Edward Stevenson signed Council Bill 20 establishing the University of Idaho, Gov. Cecil Andrus re-signed the university's charter Monday night at the University Inn-Best Western. Sen. James McClure was among those in attendance at the Founder's Day Banquet. (HENRY MOORE PHOTO)

Japanese delegation returns home with UI offer

Gibb pitched branch campus deal to visitors

By BEN LONG
Senior Staff Writer

What does Moscow, USA have in common with Yuwa, Japan? Mining, logging, farming, and perhaps soon it will have the University of Idaho as a next-door neighbor.

Similar economy and geography make the UI a perfect match with Yuwa, a small city on the coast of Japan, university officials said Friday in a meeting with 14 government and business representatives from the town. Those officials spent the weekend trying to convince the delegation to open a UI branch campus at Yuwa.

"The branch would offer an opportunity for students to go to Japan and study their language and culture," said Terry Armstrong, executive assistant to the UI president. "In a reciprocal way, students could come here and learn about us."

Before anyone goes anywhere, however, the Japanese delegation has to return home and compare their look at UI with their recent trips to the University of Minnesota and the University of Maryland. But UI officials are hopeful that the Japanese will choose UI to begin the exchange.

"Our long-range plan is to extend relations with all the Pacific Rim countries," Armstrong said. "Japan would be a most fortunate country to do so with."

The hoped-for "Off-Campus Program Location" will be funded by the city of Yuwa and will start with exchanges of UI professors who will teach intensive English. According to the plan, that would be followed by Japanese students attending the UI and eventually an exchange of researchers, said UI Academic Vice President Thomas Bell.

"We've not actually discussed any research areas at this time," Bell said. "But many interests in engineering and technology seem to be compatible."

Speaking through an interpreter, Yuwa Mayor Seiichiro Kudo said the Inland Empire reminded him of his home.

KUDOS TO YOU. Mayor Seiichiro Kudo of Yuwa, Japan, hears praise from UI President Richard Gibb Friday afternoon at a reception for a 14-member Japanese delegation. Idaho is among three American universities vying for a joint program with Japan. (JASON MONROE PHOTO)

"The air was very clean, and all the environments looked like our prefecture," Kudo said of Coeur d'Alene, where the group ate lunch. Kudo is mayor of a city of about 8,000 in a prefecture of Aki-ta which has more than a million people.

The UI instigated the communication when Dorothy Zakra-jsek, associate director of the UI Office of International Trade and Development, visited Japan in September. In November she returned to Yuwa with Philip Kleffner, acting vice president of development and university relations.

The delegation will meet with UI officials for the weekend before returning to Japan. A decision on which school is selected for the branch campus is expected within two weeks.

Trend toward joint programs is nationwide

From the Ivy League to small state schools, high school seniors aren't the only ones shopping for colleges this spring.

The delegation of Japanese businessmen and government representatives visiting the University of Idaho this week illustrates a growing trend of interaction between American schools and Japan, UI officials say.

According to a Jan. 23, 1989, Time magazine article, the Japanese are pouring millions of dollars into financially strapped U.S. universities to expand study abroad programs for Japanese students.

Temple and Dartmouth universities have established campuses in Japan, and Texas A & M and MIT, along with UI and 40 other schools, are trying to establish such branches, the article said.

In its first year of existence, the Illinois program had 400 Japanese students enrolled.

Dear UI Students:

In the past, ASUI representation for Off-Campus students has been less than adequate. In an attempt to provide you with better representation, a means for input and easy access to ASUI information and services. I am proposing the ASUI Off-Campus Student Registry. By enrolling in the Registry, you will receive ASUI Senate meeting minutes, periodic ASUI updates, access to your assigned senators and monthly invitations to attend a meeting with your ASUI representatives.

Approximately one third of UI students live off-campus; it is high time that you receive adequate representation within the ASUI and the opportunity to voice your concerns to your student government. Please enroll today -- we're waiting to hear from you! Enrollment Sheets are available in the ASUI Office (SUB) or at the SUB information desk. You also may enroll by calling 885-6331 (ASUI Secretary, Shirley Smith).

Sincerely
Tina Kagi

Forget about parking at the SUB

Rummage through your backpack and pull out your calculator. Dust off that mini-computer and let's do a simple story problem reminiscent of Finite Math and Calculus.

Problem: Take two SUB parking lots. The north lot has 58 spaces for parking, and the east lot has 123 spaces. Now consider the groundbreaking for a new bookstore and post office. The bookstore-post office will take up nearly three-fourths of the east lot. In addition, consider the possible move of Financial Aid and another undisclosed department to the old bookstore site.

Question: How much parking will be available to people using the bookstore, post office, SUB and Financial Aid?

Answer: Not a hell of a lot.

It doesn't take a math major to figure out this problem — the numbers just don't add up.

While Facility Planning has already started construction on temporary parking across from the Railroad Apartments, the 100 hundred parking spaces created will not adequately serve Moscow's newest mini-mall development. This parking lot will almost replace the number of spaces lost to the bookstore, but it does not allow for the increased number of cars traveling to the Deakin Street area.

Although the number of parking spaces remains about the same, the area will see new employees and customers patronizing an enlarged bookstore, a new central post office and two relocated UI departments. Meanwhile, the SUB continues to draw hundreds of people daily to meetings, study rooms, services and events.

And even UI Parking Committee Chairperson Glen Utzman agrees there might be a problem. According to him, the parking committee has been told what will happen and has not been asked for input in this area.

There are no easy or cheap answers to this potential parking problem. But isn't now the time to consider the long-run effects of increasing facilities and services without increasing parking?

After all, when most of us discover a problem we try to solve it — not ignore it and hope it goes away.

• GOOD FOR U. •

It appears that Executive Assistant to the President Terry Armstrong continues his diligent search for "lost" money off the University of Idaho campus.

This weekend while escorting a delegation of Japanese trade officials around the Coeur d'Alene resort, Armstrong took time to check the hotel for loose change.

Having shuffled the 16-member delegation into a resort gift shop, the trenchcoat-clad Armstrong slipped away.

Careful not to draw attention to himself, the administrator moved toward a long bank of public pay phones.

In methodical manner, he proceeded to check each machine for forgotten change. Armstrong, however, was only able to check out half the machines before being interrupted by an emerging trade official.

Observers report that Armstrong's search was in vain. Not a penny was found.

To Terry Armstrong for his continuing devotion to the "Found Money Fund" — good for U.

Editor:

On behalf of the Vandal Basketball program, I would like to personally thank you (the Vandal student body and faculty) for the tremendous vocal support you have demonstrated in the Dome at our games. We travel around the country and play in many different arenas, and you have turned the Dome into one of the better home court advantages in the West!

Our staff and players cannot promise you wins, but we will promise you an intense effort against quality Big Sky opponents. We would like to give you a "standing O" for the great job you have done in turning the friendly confines of the Kibbie Dome into a basketball "pit."

Call congress about pay raises

Dear Editor:

All concerned U.S. taxpayers please call or write your congressman voicing dissent over the nearly inevitable 50 percent increase for all members of both the House and Senate.

Congressmen setting their own salaries is sadly ludicrous. Who wouldn't want to approve a 50 percent increase for oneself? The automatic raise from $89,500 to $135,000 per year should be met with resounding protest from every tax-paying American. Where are the checks and balances in a system supposedly protected from this gross misuse of authority?

What about the campaign promises to the elderly, the homeless, the sick, the battered children and other groups who badly need our support? How can a congressman sleep at night in clear conscience of these groups' cries for help?

If President Bush thinks a pay increase is so overdue, then why not a modest "cost of living" increase like the rest of us only hope to get?

Americans rise up and call your elected officials to account for their bulging pocketbooks at your expense.

Bush's decapitation

SSCA demonstration patriotic

The true patriot is one who gives his highest loyalty not to his country as it is, but to his own best conceptions of what it can and ought to be.
Albert Camus

A mock trial and beheading of an effigy of President Bush on the UI campus has raised the ire of several students who misunderstood the meaning to be unpatriotic.

The Jan. 20 demonstration, staged by Students for Support of Central America, was held in protest of Bush's dealings in the Iran-Contra affair and other Reagan Administration indiscretions.

Although the group's activity was within their constitutional rights, students of a more conservative outlook took offense to the demonstration. The SSCA activity was called unpatriotic, immature and (heaven forbid!) radical.

These conservative responses are inaccurate and confused. With some insight, it becomes clear that the SSCA demonstration is actually an affirmation rather than a negative and unpatriotic display.

"What is a rebel?" asks Albert Camus in his book, The Rebel. The answer: "A man who says no, but whose refusal does not imply a renunciation."

In light of Camus' definition, we may call the SSCA demonstration an act of rebellion. The effigy said no to four more years of deceit, hypocrisy and murder but it is also says yes to humanitarianism and caring.

"Rebellion," writes Camus, "although apparently negative, since it creates nothing, is profoundly positive in that it reveals the part of man which must always be defended."

SSCA convictions are legitimate and their concerns are selfless. The demonstration, which was designed to raise student consciousness, was a positive act.

The lives of people in Central America, as well as our own sense of dignity and decency, are what the group is trying to defend.

The confusion on the part of student conservatives probably stems from a twisted comprehension of the meaning of the effigy. Such confusion often results from poor semantics.

The symbol is not the thing symbolized. Alfred Korzybski includes this statement among his basic principles of semantics. Accepting this principle we see that an effigy is not President Bush. The SSCA is attacking values and principles rather than a person or political office.

The demonstration then is not an assault on the American presidency, but on what the presidency should stand for. No one should want a presidency based upon the lying and hypocrisy of the Iran-Contra affair or the murder of innocents in Central America and Libya.

Some things never change

January 30, 1939.

Seven months until World War II. Pearl Harbor had no special significance. Hitler was just another ambitious politician.

The University of Idaho was fifty years old, and UI President Harrison C. Dale wrote a letter to his "remote successor," sealing it in a time capsule for five decades.

The time capsule was opened yesterday, and 1939 seemed a short while ago. About 1,000 people listened to President Gibb's mail from his predecessor:

Our Alma Mater song used to read, "Scourged on her way to fame." Some years ago this was changed to read "Winning her way to fame." The president of the university sometimes wonders if the earlier words were not truer to the facts ... with a legislature in session, and the proposal to cut our general appropriation $100,000.... May you be spared such worries.

We wish.

Wouldn't it be nice if the legislature finally realized the role of education in building a strong future? But history repeats itself. President Gibb has been forced to deal with dilemmas such as a governmental mandate for a salary increase without the necessary funds to implement the increase. The result: Don't rehire when it's time to renew a contract because when they're gone, we need their money to pay the ones left.

The familiar adage: Those who don't learn from history will repeat it. The obvious question: Have we really learned from history?

The world in my day is sadly troubled. Force rather than reason seems everywhere to prevail with the Japanese crushing China, Hitler and Mussolini dominating central Europe, and Russia in the hands of brigades.

The "War to End All Wars," World War I, had not yielded peace. And the mounting trouble before World War II was noticed by those living right here in the Palouse fifty years ago.

Are we destined to a continuing world where "force rather than reason seems everywhere to prevail?"

Certainly, fallen human nature will never see complete peace, but it would be a tragedy to ignore our present opportunities.

Communism is falling apart, and the opportunities for reconciliation with our greatest political adversaries may never be repeated.

We can see our present-day trouble spots: the Persian Gulf, Palestine, Central America. It would be foolish for America to go blindly down the path of prosperity while ignoring the need for world peace.

Now, however, we realize the conflicts not only concern the military. There are new foes: poverty, starvation, and environmental destruction.

Our world's forests are being reduced 50 acres every day, the Brazilian rain forests by clear-cutting and burning. The Sahara Desert is moving south to swallow the African continent, sped along by deforestation causing severe drought and famine.

When our descendants, if we have any, read the time capsule we leave for the bicentennial, may they be able to say that we learned from our history and environment.

classes start so he can visit with students.

Anderson recommended implementing a student-faculty liaison committee for the two groups to discuss problems. Such a committee has worked well at his institution, he said.

"What we've found is that the students and faculty can solve a lot of problems without the administration even getting involved," Anderson said.

Gibb's practice of visiting living groups and attending dress dinners would continue under an Anderson administration, he said.

"I think the students would find my wife is the most social female alive," Anderson said.

What qualities does Anderson think university presidents need?

Said Anderson, "Obviously, they would have to walk on water."

At 54, Anderson is 11 years older than Ryan Amacher, the youngest candidate. Anderson said his age, lack of experience as a university vice president and his long absence from Idaho are his biggest weaknesses.

Anderson won't bring in a new administrative staff if selected, he said.

"Unless someone told me bad things were going on, I'd certainly leave the incumbents in until I could find out what's going on," he said.

Administrative shuffling caused problems at UG, Anderson said.

"A young fellow full of vinegar came in and changed things and really mucked things up," Anderson said.

Anderson lived in Idaho until he was 27. He received his bachelor's degree at the UI, and attended veterinary school at Washington State University and graduate school at the University of Wisconsin, where he later joined the faculty. He began working at UG in 1969.

effigy are becoming necessary for groups like SSCA. We should not fool ourselves with a Mr. Smith Goes to Washington idealism that purports that effective political change will come through good representation and lobbying methods. In a conservative, two-party political system the favors most often go to the biggest pocketbook.

Demonstrations are one of the few viable methods some groups have to circumvent such a restrictive political system. This fact in itself should tell us something. The outrage of the of the real crimes of the Reagan Administration was so great that a mock crime had to be performed in order to inform the UI students of what they had been insensitive to.

Thus we see the SSCA demonstration was ultimately a giving and generous one.

Proposal No. 42...

Are athletes being cheated?

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

While coaches and administrators throughout the sports world complained overtime about Proposal 42, the University of Idaho took a time-out.

UI officials don't worry about it; they avoid it.

Proposal 42, which was passed on Jan. 11 by a 163-154 vote,

"I think we've had maybe one or two incoming athletes affected by Proposition 48 in the last three years."

— Matt Telin

imposes harsher academic requirements for incoming freshmen than its precursor, Proposition 48, which was passed in 1983 and took effect in the 1986-87 academic year. But the word "harsher" might be an overstatement.

With the new proposal effective in 1990, incoming freshmen must get at least a score of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (out of a possible 1,600) or 15 out of 36 on the American College Test, and a 2.0 GPA in 11 core curriculum classes in high school.

Many coaches, such as Georgetown's John Thompson, feel Proposal 42 is discriminatory to low socio-economic level students, especially blacks, and that athletics for many students is a way out. In some instances, sports may even be the only hope for a young person.

Since the new proposal was passed Thompson, in protest, has been leaving the court before the start of his team's games and not returning.

The main difference between the new proposal and Proposition 48 is that Proposal 42 would not allow high school students who only partially qualify for the NCAA's incoming freshman criteria to receive athletic scholarships. With Proposition 48, partial qualifiers who meet one of the qualifications can still receive scholarships.

Proposition 48 also states that non-qualifying incoming freshmen are not eligible for regular-season competition and practice during the first academic year so that they can concentrate on meeting collegiate academic standards. Thus athletes affected by Proposition 48 only have three years' eligibility.

According to Ted Koppel on last Tuesday's Nightline, Proposal 42 could affect about 650-700 incoming athletes per year, but Idaho would most likely not be affected.

Matt Telin, registrar and director of administration, is not concerned about Proposal 42, and said it will likely be rephrased before its installment in 1990. He also supports Proposition 48.

"It's been for the best," he said. "In our summer camps for football we convey a message to the incoming freshmen that if you plan on playing Division II A, you need a sound academic background."

Telin also said that Idaho hasn't run into many problems with Proposition 48 since its installment.

"I think we've had maybe one or two incoming athletes affected by Proposition 48 in the last three years," he said. "Besides, 48 is close to the UI admission standards that freshmen will have to meet this fall."

Statewide admission standards for the UI require that high school graduates have a 2.0 in 13 core curriculum classes, that students graduate in the upper three-fourths of their class, or have an ACT score of 16 or an

Volleyballers hit court

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Writer

After qualifying for regionals last year, the UI Men's Volleyball Club looks to repeat its strong performance this season.

The club held tryouts Jan. 22, and despite the showing of the Super Bowl, was able to attract enough men to qualify and fill the team. The team still has spots open, however, and has been watching the intramural volleyball teams with hopes of finding talented players.

"We have seen quite a few good players in intramurals, and we are trying to reach them," said club member Chris Clark.

Though low in numbers, the team is not lacking in experience or strength. The club is led by veterans such as player-coach Dave Price, Arthur Taylor and Ron Tang. The team also has a strong height advantage in the middle, sporting heights such as 6'8" and 6'9".

"We have a good all-around team, a very strong height advantage, as well as great dedication from everyone," Clark said.

Clark said that the club is busy planning fundraisers. Although ASUI does allocate some money for the team, the players will need to earn additional funds. Members hope to raise $400 by hosting a 10-team tournament and charging $40 per team. Clark said teams from all over the region, including Boise State University, Washington State University and possibly Eastern Washington University, will be invited. A date has not been set.

The club plans to join a collegiate volleyball league next year. Although a lack of teams has kept the UI club from entering a league in the past, Clark said that men's volleyball is growing rapidly and that the teams in this area should provide enough competition for the club to enter the league next season.

The club currently practices on weekends from noon to 2 p.m. in the upstairs gym of the PEB Building and encourages those interested to try out for a spot on the team.

Lady's charge on to WSC

Win two more matchups in Kibbie Dome

By LYNNETTE FIXLEY
Staff Writer

After picking up two wins last weekend, including a tough 75-73 victory over Weber State College Friday night, the Lady Vandals face the Wildcats again Thursday in Big Sky play.

"They're (Weber State) a very offensive team, as a result we've been working on our defense," said UI Coach Laurie Turner. "All of their starters are double-figure scorers."

Katie Weyenberg and Dawn Lawler are among Weber's solid shooters. In Friday's game, Weyenberg led all scorers and rebounders with 25 points and 11 rebounds. Lawler put up 17 points for the Wildcats.

Friday's game was a thriller, which saw Lori Elkins hit two free throws with seven seconds remaining in the game to ice the victory.

Elkins led the Vandals with 20 points and seven rebounds while Christy Van Pelt had 17 points and 11 assists.

The Lady Vandals also defeated the Eastern Washington Eagles 72-53 in the Dome Saturday, making them undefeated at home.

"We're 8-0 in the Dome this year," Turner said. "We like that. It gives us something to think about, with Montana State as our next home game. We all know what happened against Montana State last year in the Dome. We defeated them 83-79 and that was a major upset. They were 20-1 when we played them, so our kids are going to play with more confidence than we did over there."

In the game against the Eagles, Sabrina Dial led the Vandals with 10 points and had four rebounds. Jeanne Doherty added nine points.

For Eastern Washington, Tammie Lead led the team with 12 points, and Vanessa Jones added eight along with 12 rebounds. EWU fell to 7-10 overall and 2-5 in the Big Sky Conference.

The Vandals travel to Weber State with a 12-7 overall record and sit on an impressive 6-2 mark in the Big Sky. Weber is 10-4 overall and 3-2 in the conference play.

"If we play our game we'll have no problem," said center Sabrina Dial. "It's going to be who can execute the right defense."

UI Tennis hopes for success

By MARK MILAM
Staff Writer

GOING FOR THE SCOOP... Senior Shane Ristau of the UI Men's Tennis Team returns a ball during practice Monday afternoon.

With some fall semester mistakes turned into spring lessons, the UI tennis teams are anxiously awaiting the road that lies ahead of them.

The Vandals, with a crop of new talent to blend in with returning players, seem well prepared to take on their opponents this season.

The fall season found the women winning a mid-semester match at Washington State University, and the men winning a match-up against WSU. The men followed with two tough games in Oregon.

Idaho took both of the Oregon meets, beating the University of Oregon 5-4 and Portland State 6-3.

"My teams are real excited. We had a good fall season," said Coach Dave Scott. "What the fall season does for me is it gives me a little preview of areas that we need to work on, and it really gives me an indicator of some of my freshmen on how they are going to come in and adapt."

One of the freshman Scott will be keeping his eye on is Scott Anderson.

"He is a real tough tournament player," Scott said. "I was not surprised, but then again I was surprised that he would adapt to college play because it is more team-oriented. He came through like a champ, and he is going to be an extraordinary player for us."

Scott is also looking for tough play from number-one player Santiago Martinez, who sat out last season due to transfer rules.

On the women's side, the focus will be on returning players Cathy and Patricia Shanander, and Scott is looking for tough competition from Linda Voris.

The Vandals are working to improve two weaknesses of the fall season—conditioning and overall strength, Scott said.

The women's squad will also focus on increasing aggressiveness and improving the quality of their serves.

"We have good depth, and I think we can come together with some good leadership and really

WSU track outruns Vandals

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

Washington State University won both the men's and women's dual meets against Idaho Saturday in the Kibbie Dome, but UI qualified six athletes for the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships in March.

UI senior Orde Ballantyne was one of the Vandal qualifiers for the men's team. He leaped 25-6 3/4 in the long jump to break the NCAA qualifying standard of 25-4.

The women's team supplied the rest of the Idaho qualifiers with five, including Stacey Asp-lund in the high jump with a 5-5 leap, and Caryn Choate-Deeds who qualified in two events, the 55 and the 200 with times of 7.34 and 25.84.

Kim Gillar also managed to qualify with a 7.57 time in the 55, along with Anne Scott in the 400 with a 58.63 mark.

"This was the best team performance we've ever had indoors."

— Mike Keller
UI Head Coach

"This was the best team performance we've ever had indoors," UI Head Coach Mike Keller said. "We had a lot of good marks for this early in the season and competed hard."

The meet consisted of 10 dual meets in which Idaho, Air Force, and Washington State won three each, and Montana picked up the other dual meet victory. The other men's team involved in the competition, Eastern Washington, did not win any.

The collegiate schools involved in the women's 15 dual meets were Idaho, Washington State, Air Force, Boise State, Montana State and Eastern Washington.

WSU won all their dual meets in the women's competition, while Idaho could only come up with a tie to Air Force. Boise State managed four wins, Montana State had three and Eastern Washington produced two dual meet wins.

Both Idaho teams will travel to Eastern Washington for a meet on Feb. 4.

SAT combined score of 830.

Telin spends hours tracking athletes' scholastic progress, and has yearly record books four inches thick full of information on scholarship athletes.

"I follow the athletes' progress weekly," Telin said. "If an athlete is running into problems in school, we don't allow him to play."

UI men's Head Basketball Coach Kermit Davis is not going to quite the extremes in opposing Proposal 42 as Georgetown's Thompson is, but he doesn't agree with it.

"I'm all for the academic upgrading of college athletes. It helps athletes in the long run," he said. "And incoming athletes should be judged on work in high school, such as grade point average. But athletes shouldn't not be allowed to go to a Division II A school because of a test score."

Davis added, "Forcing someone to get a 13 or 14 on the ACT is unjust pressure."

Davis also dislikes some requirements of Proposition 48.

"I don't think you should lose one year of eligibility and should be able to practice."

By this Davis means that if an athlete is not allowed to play his first year so he can work on academics, the athlete shouldn't lose that year of eligibility. The athlete should be able to return to play a fifth year.

Davis also said Proposal 42 will most likely never go into effect.

"It will be voted down at the next NCAA Convention," he said.

Although Idaho chose not to support the new proposal, UI Athletic Director Gary Hunter said, "It doesn't affect Idaho."

The university avoids potential athletes who are not academically sound, Hunter said. He said he could recall only a few students affected by the Proposition 48 since its installment.

"We do not often recruit Proposition 48 students," he said. "We can't afford to offer scholarships to people who cannot practice. We need to offer scholarships to those who can practice or play immediately."

While Thompson tromps off the court in protest, it seems as if Idaho concentrates on avoiding potential problems with Propositions 48 and 42 by simply recruiting student-athletes, instead of just athletes.

The books vs. the ball

This whole issue on Proposal 42 is getting a bit old, but I would just like to give a piece of my mind. Well, not too big of a piece; I wouldn't want to chance not getting a 2.0 G.P.A. in high school or a 700 out of 1,600 on my Scholastic Aptitude Test.

I was never overly bright in high school and didn't study much. Not to brag, but high school seemed rather easy. And those college entry tests? Sure they were dreadful, but seemingly not that difficult. A score of 700 on the SAT only requires a student to get around...a third?...of the questions right.

I remember taking the SAT one Saturday morning my senior year with four torn ligaments and a broken bone in my ankle that I had injured the night before...playing hoop. My ankle was black and blue up to my knee, swollen the size of a bowling ball (o.k., maybe a grapefruit), and I couldn't even walk on it. But, I took the test before going off to have surgery — to get it over with. Although I had not prepared for the test, and was in teeth-grinding pain, I managed to score over a 1,000.

I am a fairly compassionate person in regard to mankind. Who knows, if I would have grown up in the slums, in a poor household, I may not have done well in high school or on my college entry tests. I believe everyone should have a chance to go to college. But for the right reasons.

If a student has difficulties getting moderate grades in high school, then college is going to be a great challenge. Playing a college sport, which is time consuming, along with pursuing a college degree, which is very time consuming, seems close to impossible for a borderline student. Maybe that's why nationally only 27 percent of collegiate basketball players graduate.

I would hesitate to discover the rest of the story.

Set designers bring stage to life

By CHRISTY KRETSCHMER
Staff Writer

Sure, all the world's a stage, but not all the men are actors. Some are set designers.

You don't see the set designer's face on the evening news or splashed on the covers of check-out line magazines next to the stories about alien babies. They aren't the famous ones.

But, they are the ones who breathe life into the theater. The scenic designers are capable of transforming an empty wooden stage into 17th century Europe, a deserted alley or a distant planet.

"Basically, the scenic designer is responsible for the world the actors live in," said Dean Panttaja, theater arts assistant professor.

According to Panttaja, set design is not a pure art. The job of a set designer includes skills in architecture, carpentry, painting, engineering and lighting.

"It's sort of a jack-of-all-trades art form. It uses all those other art forms to create its own," Panttaja said.

The director has the last word on interpreting the play, but Panttaja emphasized the importance of collaboration.

"It's this collaborative effort that makes the theater a living and breathing creature," Panttaja said.

"I'm not there to make a pretty picture frame; I'm there to make a place for the actors to live."

The American Festival Ballet is bringing a triple billing to the Hartung this season concentrating on dramatic and character dancing.

"A Magical Evening of Dance will run the full gamut of ballet entertainment, with a dramatic, a classical and a stylized work, each with its own magical mood and flair," said Paul Russell, artistic director for the AFB.

The magic carpet of dance will transport the audience from a Russian carnival, through the enchanted kingdom of Swan Lake, to a royal wedding in ancient Egypt, when the AFB performs at the Hartung Theater next weekend.

"This is a real advantage for Moscow; many cities this size don't have the opportunity of a ballet company," said Joann Muneta, Moscow Manager for the AFB.

The program, A Magical Evening of Dance, will include three ballets: Petroushka Suite, Excerpts from Swan Lake, and Ballet Egyptian. The program will be directed by Paul Russell, AFB's new artistic director. Russell has been a principal dancer with Dance Theater of Harlem, Scottish Ballet and San Francisco Ballet.

Opening the program will be the Russian ballet Petroushka, the dramatic story of a puppet with a human heart. Petroushka takes place at a carnival where an evil magician shows the crowd his three puppets, Petroushka, a sinister Moor, and a lovely Ballerina. The puppets take on a life of their own as Petroushka rivals the Moor for the love of the Ballerina.

Basil Thompson, a former dancer and ballet master of AFB and Joffrey Ballet, choreographed the ballet for AFB. Tim Snyder stars as Petroushka and Ann Maria Castanon, former prima ballerina of the Ballet de San Jaun, performs as the Ballerina doll.

In the second ballet Russell presents seven excerpts from Swan Lake's Acts I, II and III, including the famous White Swan and Black Swan Pas de Deux.

In the White Swan de Deux, Prince Siegfried falls in love with Odette, who is under a spell as Queen of the Swans. To free her from her fate of returning to her swan form, he must remain true and faithful; but, the evil and fascinating black swan, Odile, tricks him into betraying his love in the Black Swan Pas de Deux.

The climax of the Magical Evening of Dance will be the performance of Ballet Egyptian.

This work was made famous by Anna Pavlova in 1922. Pavlova had the ballet created to evoke the spirit of mystery and grandeur that intrigued her when she visited the Egyptian pyramids.

Russell suggests a similar vision as he pictures hieroglyphics coming to life in a portrayal of the wedding of an Egyptian princess. The lively and unusual music for Ballet Egyptian is by Alexandre Luigini.

Performances will be held at 8 p.m. Feb. 11 and 3 p.m. Feb. 12. Tickets for A Magical Evening of Dance are $9 for adults and $6 for students and children. They are on sale at University Pharmacy in Moscow, Corner Drug in Pullman and Owl Drug Southway in Lewiston.

Wash. Idaho symphony to feature UI soprano

The Washington Idaho Symphony, conducted by Keating Johnson, will feature winners of this year's Rotary Club Young Artists' Competition at this weekend's upcoming concerts.

Opening with Verdi's melodic overture from Nabucco, the concerts feature UI soprano Rebekah Demaree, singing the "Jewel Song" from Faust. Dorothy Blankenship, violinist from Eastern Washington University, will perform the third movement of Beethoven's Concerto for Violin in D, and Washington State University student Donna Plotz will play the first movement of the Concerto for Trumpet by Alexander Arutunian.

Walla Walla College student Tomasz Kolodziejek will open the second half of the program with Chopin's Concerto No. 2 in F Minor, first movement. WSU saxophonist Steven Thompson will then perform the second movement of the Concertina da Camera by Jacques Ibert.

The concert will close with the Washington Idaho Symphony orchestra playing a New England Triptych, by William Schuman.

Johnson will give a preview one hour preceding each concert.

Sarb would like to thank the old officers and welcome the new ones.

"We had some problems with being team-oriented," Scott said. "Now in the spring we are coming back as a more unified team."

"Overall the chemistry this year is there," Scott said. "We have to just go after it. This is the first year that I have really felt that chemistry."

That chemistry will be put to the test when Idaho travels to the University of Washington Friday for the spring opener.

approved and agreed upon to create this utopian world of theater.

Another set design student, Chris Brockett, spoke of the importance of creating the atmosphere for the audience. He said that even before the play starts, the audience must sense the mood of the production.

"I'm not there to make a pretty picture frame. I'm there to make a place for the actors to live," Brockett said.
