Wallace Cafeteria

Health inspection 'disappoints' boss

By JILL CHRISTINE BECK Editorial Staff

arriott's University Dining Service could use a little help in the kitchen, according to a recent Latah County Health inspection report.

Marriott scored 78 out of 100 on the Feb. 23 inspection of its Wallace Cafeteria facilities. No follow-up inspection is planned for the facility, Lynn Morrison, director of Marriott's University Dining Service, said Monday.

Most problems present during the inspection were immediately corrected, Morrison said.

UNIVERSITY DINING SERVICE

"This is disappointing to me," Morrison said of the inspection

Although the score was lower than Morrison would have personally hoped, she said inspector Richard Gabriel did not feel there were any major problems.

"He was comfortable when he left," she said

Problems which showed up on the inspection included students drinking in the kitchen, food containers lying on the floor, dirty utensils such as can openers, and meat thawing out in the open.

Morrison said that steps have either already been taken or would soon be taken to correct the problems. For example, a policy is being drafted in which students will be given a verbal warning if found eating or drinking in the kitchen. The second warning will result in suspension and possible termination upon review of the situation.

The food, which according to Wallace Cafeteria Manager Diane Holick, was standing on the floor because of shelf remodeling, was immediately placed on pallets.

And areas which were described in the report as dirty have been cleaned.

Morrison said she would work to avoid future problems through employee training.

"We need to get through it with training and the right tools and equipment," she said.

Officials could not locate copies of past inspection reports, but according to Holick, Marriott's score was lower than past university scores. Holick said many of the problems indicated were not new, however.

For example, cafeteria officials have been warned in the past about keeping the can opener

Morrison said the results of the inspection would not have been any different if the university was still in charge of the cafeteria.

Pro-Greek speaker says she's anti-hazing

By JON ERICKSON Editor

R raternity and sorority hazing will not be stopped by legislation or lectures, says the founder of the Committee to Halt Useless College Killings.

But only the individuals living within a house can prevent it, Eileen Stevens told nearly 350 people attending this weekend's Rocky Mountain Greek Conference.

'We aren't going to change anything, only you can do that," Stevens said Saturday

Stevens founded the antihazing organization, CHUCK, in 1978 after the hazing death of her oldest son, Chuck.

During her talk Stevens recounted the events leading to her 20-year-old son's death.

On the afternoon of Feb. 24, 1978 Chuck pledged a local fraternity, Klan Alpine. Later that night, Chuck and two other pledges were told to get into the trunks of three cars. They were each given a six-pack of beer, a bottle of wine and a pint of whiskey and told to drink before being released.

For nearly 30 minutes the pledges were driven around in below freezing weather conditions.

After arriving at the fraternity house, an unconscious Chuck was removed from the trunk.

According to Stevens he was put to bed to sleep it off. However, when members checked on him later he had died. The two

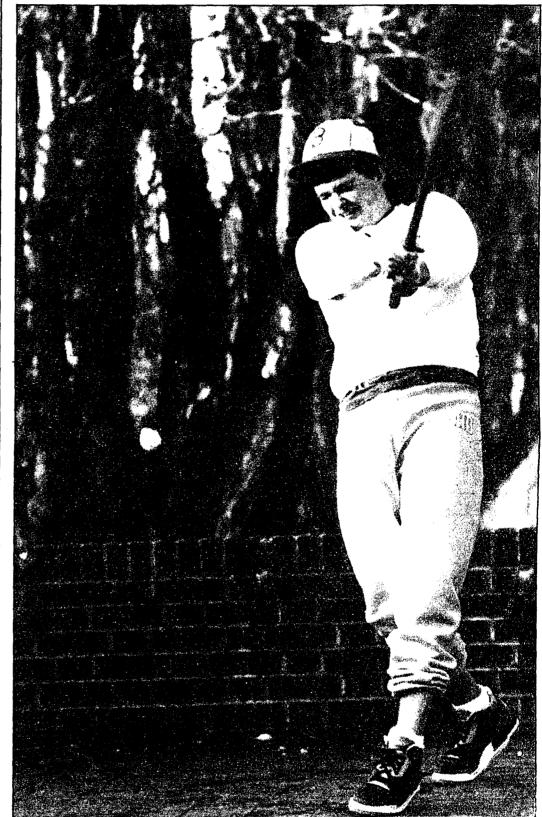

STEVENS other pledges were hospitalized in critical condition for more than 72 hours.

An autopsy report said he had died from alcohol poisoning, exposure to cold and an overfilling of his lungs with fluid.

In the ensuing months Stevens searched for answers to Chuck's death. She started CHUCK and also began lobbying state legislatures for anti-hazing laws.

Newest Zinser job offer out today

Elisabeth Zinser rejected the board's latest job proposal Mon-Idaho Board of Education's latest job proposal Monday, and instead suggested that yet another round of negotiations could lead to her acceptance of the UI presidency

Meanwhile, a local newspaper reported Monday that Zinser has been offered a total yearly salary package of as much as $110,000 to accept the UI presidency.

Zinser responded to the day by sending the board a counterproposal outlining her employment concerns.

The sole remaining finalist for the UI presidency, Zinser is expected to receive a revised job proposal from the board at 2:30 p.m. today.

The board met by conference call Monday afternoon to discuss Zinser's counterproposal, which addressed funding for the university, the UI president's salary and the mission of the university in Idaho's higher education system, said board Executive Director Rayburn Barton.

The board faxed its original job proposal to Zinser's office Friday

The original proposal included all Zinser's terms of employment, Bill Hargrove, board public affairs officer, said Thursday.

Bookstore construction limits parking te preparation for the new spaces. The two lots will be University of Idaho bookstore is scheduled to begin Thursday with the closure of all but the northern bay of the parking lot on the east side of Deakin Avenue, across from the Student Union Building.

According to Joanne Reece, facility planning director, workers will begin to prepare the site for Phase I construction, a move that will eliminate 95 parking spaces. Some metered spaces will remain available at the north side of the lot, immediately next to St. Augustine's Catholic Center.

To ease the loss of the 95 spaces, two lots on College Avenue are being readied south and southeast of the Deakin Street lot. Those two facilities are slated to open March 20, and will contain about 90 to 100 parking graveled but will be upgraded after the academic year ends.

Reece said that building construction (Phase II) begins April 17, with a target completion date of Aug. 1.

Cost of the 18,000 square foot facility, including furnishings, landscaping and other items, is $1.2 million. Reece said the bookstore will have 16,000 square feet of usable area, including five permanent checkout stations, and offices and storage. Sales and display space in the new facility will double the space available in the present bookstore.

The new building, in varying shades of gray concrete masonry units, will sit about 40 feet back from Deakin Avenue, with a covered entryway extending about 10 feet from the building.

Reece said the motif was chosen to make the bookstore as architecturally compatible as possible with the SUB and St. Augustine's.

Phase I of the construction, awarded to Motley and Motley, Inc., of Pullman, involves site preparation, including pouring the foundation and installing the utilities.

Reece said bids for the second phase of the project, including actual construction of the building, will be advertised in mid-March and opened by the end of the month.

Present plans call for the current bookstore facility to be remodeled for use by the university's Student Financial Aid and Career Planning and Placement

Thirty-one states now have laws banning both physical and mental hazing activities. Idaho does not have such a law.

"The law can't change it, you must do your part," Stevens said.

"Your founders would hang their heads," she said. "Hazing had no place then and no place now. It contradicts everything you stand for."

Stevens attributes continuing hazing problems to tradition, the "I had to do, so should these pledges" mentality, and arguements that it strengthens brotherhood and sisterhood. And she says nearly 98 percent of hazing incidents involve alcohol.

"Surely we can unify a group in a positive way," she said.

She told the gathered group to remember, "Pledges have rights members have responsibilities."

During her presentation Stevens emphasized that she isn't anti-Greek, she's anti-hazing. In fact, she recently became an honorary member of the Alpha Phi sorority.

In this, her second appearance at the Rocky Mountain Greek Conference, she said, "I'm so pleased to see you continue to grow and strengthen."

Since CHUCK's founding, Stevens has spoken to groups on more than 350 college campuses and lectured at Greek conferences and conventions.

In addition, CHUCK representatives have appeared on TV talk shows like Phil Donahue, Oprah Winfrey and Geraldo. Articles on the groups efforts have appeared in Newsweek, People Magazine and the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Contract protects $10,000 pay raise for UI assistant dean

Gibb wants job search reopened

From Staff Reports

No wage cut is planned for a university official who received a $10,000 pay raise this summer through a process that may have violated procedures in the UI Faculty-Handbook.

James Bauer, assistant dean of students for residence living, was promoted to that position and received a yearly salary raise to $33,053 from $23,051. "I would assume that he would retain his current pay for the remainder of this year simply because he has a contract," Bruce Pitman, dean of student services, said Monday.

Friday, UI President Richard Gibb said "mistakes" were made in the selection process that led to Bauer's appointment. The University of Idaho has adopted a series of five recommendations from its Affirmative Action Committee and set in motion a nationwide search for an assistant dean of students for residence living,

Gibb said

Bauer, who will continue to serve out the terms of his current

"Mistakes were made in this pro-

— Richard Gibb Ul President

contract, will be allowed to reapply for the job.

The Affirmative Action Committee submitted a four-page report to Gibb last month.

"Mistakes were made in this process," Gibb said. "However, I'm convinced they were mistakes made in good faith, with the best intentions, and in what those involved thought to be the best interests of the university."

"Nonetheless, they were mistakes and we will rectify them by following the committee's recommendations," he said.

Committee recommendations included:

Change the title of the position. The former title did not make reference to the phrase "for residence living"

Advertise the position nationally

Establish a search and selection committee with a chair and majority membership from outside student services, and Allow the Affirmative Action Office to closely monitor the process.

Pitman's own $5,000 yearly salary raise to $47,293 from $42,282 is now being studied by the Affirmative Action Commit-

College Bowl team wins national berth

By M.L. GARLAND Associate Editor

Five UI students will travel to Illinois next month where their team will compete in the National College Bowl Tournament.

A team of four and one alternate will travel to Elgin, Ill., after winning the Region 14 College Bowl Championship in February.

According to Judy Wallins, director of the Tutoring and Academic Assistance Center and adviser of the team, the UI's winning streak continues.

For the fourth time in six years a UI bowl team will attend the national competition. UI student team members are: Ray Horton, Alane Olson, Tracy Peel, Art Peel and Charles Rice.

The College Bowl National Championship Tournament will be held at the College of DuPage April 21-23. Competing schools include Cornell University, Princeton University, Rice University and Georgia Tech.

This year's UI team continued a traditional rivalry by defeating the University of Washington team in the championship round of the regional meet Feb. 25.

In the knowledge games, college bowl teams answer questions from a wide range of disciplines — mathematics, the sciences, literature, philosophy, history and current events.

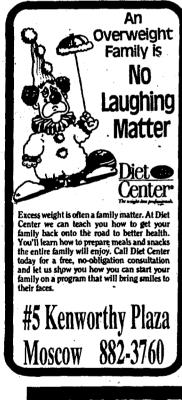

"It's a good use for all those trivial facts you pick up and never use," Horton said.

Two teams of four students each match wits against each other in 14-minute competitions.

"It's tense," Tracy Peel said.
"You have to answer the question before it's finished."

A campus intramural tournament was held in October with teams from living groups and organizations to determine who would represent UI at the regional meet.

If you have any questions or can't make it, please call Skip Sperry at 882-1876 or Darce

Derganc at 882-8270.

Members and initiates, remember the I.K. banquet April 7 in Potlatch. There will be a meeting and initiation before the banquet. Everyone please attend.

KREM TV lets fear of protest control programming

The contents of this program do not necessarily reflect the opinions of this station.

He's an all-American boy lettering in wrestling. She's the girl next door who's lettering in track. They're high school sweethearts, they're in love, and she is pregnant.

The contents of this program do not necessarily reflect the opinions of this station.

So goes the somewhat cliche character development of CBS's TV 101. But this new entry into the prime-time ratings race is tackling tough issues — teen sexuality and abortion.

The contents of this program do not necessarily reflect the opinions of this station.

That's the disclaimer Spokane's CBS affiliate, KREM 2, ran across the television screen five times Saturday night during the second part of a three-part episode of TV 101.

In the first episode the high school sweethearts consummated their relationship without taking precautions. KREM Programming Director Meg Antonius didn't feel the need to disclaim that episode.

But during Saturday night's broadcast one character mentioned the word "abortion," another visited a "clinic," and a third had "safe sex" paraphernalia in her possession. Antonius ran a disclaimer.

And next weekend, it's believed the pregnant girl will choose to have an abortion. Chances are KREM will again run a disclaimer.

According to Antonius, running the disclaimer was "no big deal." Yet, she admitted the station rarely runs them. The last disclaimer she remembered was on a Cagney and Lacey episode a few years back. And not surprisingly the show dealt with abortion.

Antonius said the "warning" may have been overstated, but the young age of the potential audience and the controversy surrounding abortion seemed to warrant a disclaimer.

It would appear that the disclaimer was intended to lessen the outcry from anti-abortionists. And it must have worked. The station didn't get a single call concerning the program.

cerning the program.

But would KREM have run a disclaimer if the girl hadn't chosen an abortion? If instead, the couple had married and kept the child, or if the child had been put up for adoption would a disclaimer have appeared? Probably not, because pro-choice supporters wouldn't have complained.

Meanwhile KREM continues to bombard the airwaves with prime-time programs featuring murder, theft, child abuse and extramarital affairs. Since KREM doesn't run disclaimers on these shows are we to assume they promote these activities?

KREM made a mistake running a disclaimer on a carefully made and sensitive show addressing a current social issue. If the character chooses to abort the fetus, she has that right. High school students also can visit a "clinic" and purchase birth control without penalty.

By including such a disclaimer on this show, KREM essentially put their editorial stamp on the program. And frankly, a majority of viewers couldn't care less what KREM personnel think. While the station has the authority to run such a warning, it should not do so simply to satisfy or squelch the outcries of a vocal minority.

The viewers this program do not necessarily agree with the opinions of KREM management.

Help Hajib get adequate defense

Said Hajib is a U.S.-supported graduate student from Morocco, currently enrolled in the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences, studying park management. As a Peace Corps volunteer serving in Morocco, I worked with Said in the Moroccan Department of Waters and Forests. Over the course of two years, we became close personal friends. He is one of the reasons I chose to do my graduate work here at Idaho.

On Feb. 24, he was arrested, charged by the Moscow Police Department with three very serious crimes and held in jail for three days, pending bail.

For myself and those of us who know Said well, this case is a very disturbing and upsetting tragedy. The charges made are very controversial, and I don't intend to discuss them here, but believe me, there is absolutely no doubt in our minds of his innocence, or the ability of our legal system to protect his rights and provide for a just trial, even if he is given adequate representation in court

Unfortunately, in the United States, this requires huge amounts of money. Latah County has one public defender, who has been assigned to defend Said, but he is overloaded with work. We are extremely worried that Said's case will not be sufficiently made.

The best answer is a private lawyer, who can devote 100 percent of his/her time and energy to Said's defense, and we have a tentative agreement with a well-regarded firm here in Moscow to take the case, if sufficient funds can be raised in time.

The total cost will be approximately $20,000. Finding this money is proving to be incredibly difficult. His closest friends have already committed several thousands of dollars, and we are now asking for help from members of the university community to help, as well as help from private individuals. As a foreign student, he is placed in an especially difficult position because of language and cultural differences and lack of personal means and family ties here.

Consider these problems carefully, and keep in mind what it would mean to you to be given adequate representation in a foreign country. Your contribution will help ensure that Said's innocence is completely shown.

The preliminary hearing will soon be held in the Latah County Courthouse, but a motion for postponement will be made; the jury trial will probably be held in 4-6 weeks. You are invited to attend, and the support will be appreciated. Checks are preferred, made out to the "Said Hajib Defense Fund." They can be brought or sent to myself, Mohammed Daa or Ahmed Fahsi in the Department of Forest Resources, College of Forestry, Wildlife, and Range Sciences. Thanks.

Shame on you, ticket-happy Moscow police

Editor:

One would like to think that the people of Moscow would be glad to have 8,000 students come to their fair city to attend college and to pump out $6,000 each into Moscow's economy in the course of nine months. That amounts to $48 million.

Apparently, though, $48 million is not enough since Moscow feels compelled to send out its police force to swarm over the UI campus to issue as many tickets as possible.

Is it not bad enough that the UI provides such little parking for both students and faculty? Even so, the city of Moscow feels the need to squeeze out an extra 10 bucks from every student they can get to. Come Parents Weekend, when there are double the amount of cars on campus, the police again feel the need to pump out as many tickets as they can, as if the parents are not paying enough now as it is.

Moscow should be ashamed that, knowing the parking predicament on campus, there is not more leeway in its on-campus ticketing.

We would like to consider Moscow our home, but we do not feel very welcome here when the police get ticket-happy. I'll pay my ticket but I would rather donate the $10 to the Moscow food bank — at least then I could consider it worthwhile.

U.S. should support Nicaragua

"The U.S., whether it likes it or not, is deeply involved in what's happening. It has to monitor Sandinista compliance and support the Central American presidents."

Adolfo Calero
 Contra Leader

The presidents of five Central American countries met in El Salvador last month. They gathered together to discuss a problem which still ravages Central America, the seven-year war between the U.S.-backed Contras and the leftist Sandinistas. The leaders of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua and Honduras are trying to disband the rebel movement and restore peace to war-torn Nicaragua and its neighbor, Honduras. This would mean that Contra forces would be removed, allowing a leftist government to regain power.

When Congress cut military aid last February, we made a series of mistakes that in time will return to haunt us, unless corrected immediately. First of all we destroyed and ripped away the morale of the Contras. Made up of small bands, the soldiers had become reliant on U.S. aid and military supplies, but we took it away. Now the forces, not only small in size, are lacking fire power. Without U.S. military involvement, soldiers and advisers, the Contras are basically little bands of guerilla fighters, and all they want is democracy. And we cannot help them. Our money and moral ethics are so screwed up that we are blind to what is going on. Every time someone screams "Vietnam," at me, I want to respond with "CUBA." We asked for the trouble in Vietnam. This time we should avoid the same type of situation.

If we plan ahead, calculate our movements and avoid rash decisions, we could have an air of calmness over an area that has been restless in recent years. It is our duty to assist the Contraswho are fighting for the cause of democracy. We involved ourselves at one time, and in doing that we provided ourselves with an obligation to Nicaragua, whether we like it or not. I would like to believe any American would be proud to assist and support anyone willing to fight against the control of a leftist government. Maybe I am wrong? ... Maybe no one really cares. It's a long way from Idaho Central America? Where's that?

The scary part of the whole chain of events is that President

Daniel Ortega has stated that he plans to move his country toward a democracy. What? This comes from a man who has an infamous history of publicly saying this and quickly doing that. He could move to a democracy by pushing all the undesirable elements out of the country. That could be accomplished quite simply. I wish someone in Washington could feel my concern. What happens after Nicaragua? Hey, I hear Honduras has some scenic spots ... Then I would recommend Mexico and, once there, just roll on up through Texas.

This twisted radical Central American dream could quite easily become an American nightmare. What person would rather see a battle raging in their front yard than on our television screens? There has to be a person sitting in Nicaragua who would rather turn on a television and see his war being fought on U.S. soil so that he could turn it off and forget about it. Yet he cannot, and we should not allow ourselves to forget either.

It's about time we had one fought at home. We have gone around creating enough trouble and strife in others' yards. If we do not step up to the challenge and get involved in the restructuring of Nicaragua, we will be far worse off than the moralists and penny-pinchers in Congress have led us to believe.

Crowd challenges Idaho cheerleaders

By RUSS BIAGGNE Sports Writer

I-D-A-H-O, Idaho, Idaho, go, go go! is a cheer that all sportsloving UI students are used to hearing.

But has anyone ever thought about the people who tirelessly lead us in this cheer and others every football and basketball game?

For those who sit in the stands oblivious to everything but the game, they are the 14 individuals who enthusiastically, yet some-times frustratingly, lead Vandal fans in cheer after cheer. They are the UI cheerleading squad.

Enthusiasm is easy to understand, but frustration?

"It gets very frustrating when we try to lead the crowd in a cheer, and we don't get any response," said song-leading captain Angie Hasenoehrl. "We usually have to ask a football or basketball player to help us get the crowd motivated when that happens."

Team member Gina Musgrove agreed, "It's very hard to keep on cheering when no one is responding."

Despite these moments of frustration, both Musgrove and Hasenoehrl love the demanding job, saying that it takes up a lot of time and effort, but is well worth

Hasenoehrl, who has been on the team for four years now, described her experience in three words: "It's been fun."

She said that the experience has helped her budget her time better and has allowed her to meet new people and get involved with the university.

In her four years as a cheerleader, Hasenoehrl has noted various changes the university has made to aid the program.

During her first year, all members paid $100 for their own uniforms. The following year the university bought the team's uniforms. This year the university gave each member of the cheer-leading squad $150 per semester, equaling an annual $300 scholarship.

The cheerleading program has benefited not only from the university but from the coaches as well, namely men's basketball coach Kermit Davis.

"Coach Davis has played a big part in our enthusiasm this year. He has inspired us with his open appreciation of our efforts, and for that we would like to thank him," Hasenoehrl said.

Earlier this year, when the basketball team held its Midnight Madness basketball game, Davis expressed his appreciation by taking the squad and the UI band out for pizza.

Despite the infrequent moments of non-participation, Musgrove and Hasenoehrl said crowds were great this year.

"We had great crowd support this year, especially during the basketball games," Musgrove

"The support has been great, notably the SAEs, who were consistent in their enthusiasm all year," Hasenoehrl said.

But what about the crowds at the away games?

"It was fun to travel, but the crowds at the games were very frustrating, especially the crowds at BSU and UM. We were always hearing comments," Musgrove

"I liked the comments from the opposing team's crowds. They inspired us to perform better, enabling us to take on a 'take this' attitude," Hasenoehrl said.

As the cheerleading season winds down with only the Big Sky Basketball Championships remaining, the squad is preparing to hold tryouts April 22-23. Although she is graduating in May, Hasenoehrl said she hopes to see more men try out for the

B-Ballers travel to Big Sky playoffs

By SCOTT TROTTER Sports Editor

The UI women's basketball team earned the second place seed while the Big Sky regular season co-champion men's team faces the survivor of the battle of the Montanas in the Vandals' respective Big Sky Conference Tournaments this weekend.

The Lady Vandals beat the Eastern Washington Eagles 66-56 last Sunday, placing them against No. 3 seed Boise State Friday night at 8 p.m. in Missoula. The win over the Eagles left the Lady Vandals with a 17-10 overall record for the 1988-89 regular season and a 11-5 Big Sky mark.

The Boise State—UI matchup will follow the No. 1 seed Montana and No. 4 seed Weber State clash, and the winners of the first two games this Friday will meet Saturday at 6 p.m. to determine the conference champion.

On the men's side of the court, UI faces the survivor of the Montana and Montana State game Thursday in the BSU Pavilion in a battle of the No. 3 and 6 seeds.

UI, entering as the No. 2 seed but as the Big Sky regular season co-champion, plays the winner on Friday at 6 p.m. In the other first-round game Thursday, No. 4 seed Nevada-Reno takes on No. 5 Weber State, with the winner playing host BSU Friday. The two winners meet in the championship game Saturday at 8 p.m.

The Vandals enter the tournament 23-5 overall and 13-3 in Big Sky after last week's thumpings — 76-68 over BSU in Moscow, and 113-70 over Idaho State.

UI closed their season impressively with the ISU win. Larenzo Nash had a career-high 11 assists to give him 157 this season andthe UI single-season record for that category, Mauro Gomes broke the single-season record for three-pointers with three against ISU, giving him 43 for the season, and 13 of the Vandals' 14 players scored against Idaho

Ross leads UI in intramural track

By GREG NUNES Sports Writer

It was the Jackie Ross show Sunday afternoon in the Kibbie Dome during the University of Idaho/Washington State University Intramural Track Meet.

Ross, a UI student, was one of the few bright spots for the Vandals, as WSU dominated much of the afternoon.

In the field events, Ross won the long jump and shot put with ease and was equally impressive in the track events.

Ross leaped 16'8 3/8" to capture the long jump title and easily won the shot put with a toss of 40'6 1/2".

Showing her all-around athletic skills, Ross took three running events, the 55-meter dash, the 55 hurdles, and the 200.

Ross, who is red-shirting this year and plans to join the Vandal track team next season, was especially impressive in the 55 meters with a time of 7.08 seconds.

In the 55-meter hurdles, Ross clocked in at 10.95 seconds, while another Vandal, Sonja Schlaefer, came in second at 11.7 seconds.

Ross' 200-meter time of 26.8 seconds was well in front of WSU's Michelle Winder at 27.9 seconds.

The Vandals struggled in the men's events. The only bright spots were a first-place finish in the 400 meters for Dwain Fagerberg and a second for Matt Muller in the 200 meters.

Fagerberg easily won the 400 with a 52.9. WSU's Josh Wirth finished a distant second at 54.9. In the 200, Muller (23.4 seconds) was beat out by WSU's William Knight (22.6 seconds).

Winners of each event received an Intramural Championship tshirt for their efforts.

guys on the team," she said. They are beneficial to the team in many different ways."

Hasenoehrl would also like to note that no, the guys are not perverts when they appear to be looking up the girls' skirts. They are merely concentrating on their timing.

"We have had a lot of people ask us how it feels knowing the guys are looking up our skirts. That is not what they are doing. They are just making sure that they don't drop us," Hasenoehrl said.

If you have new ideas for the cheerleaders or don't like what they are doing, the squad encourages you to try out for the team. They are always looking for new ideas.

If you have any questions about the tryouts, contact Hasenoehrl at 882-0816.

Soviets rock SUB tonight

By VIVIANE GILBERT Staff Writer

People are the same the world over, according to a Soviet rock star.

"It's the same there as it is over here," said Alexander Losev, lead singer of the Stas Namin Group, one of two rock groups from Moscow, USSR that will perform in Moscow, USA tonight. "People are the same everywhere."

The Stas Namin Group and Rondo, two of the Soviet Union's most popular rock music groups, will perform in the SUB Ballroom tonight at 8 p.m.

The band members held a press conference in the SUB Monday night. The press conference was aired live on KUOI-FM. WSU student Joseph Berger acted as interpreter for the conference.

The groups' representative speakers, Losev and manager Ludmilla Bratash, stressed similarities between the Soviet and American peoples.

One of these similarities is the seemingly worldwide reaction of parents to rock music. Losev said that they have the same problem in the Soviet Union with parents blaming the problems of the teenage culture on rock 'n roll music.

"As long as the teenagers are doing it, the parents don't like it," said Losev with a laugh.

The bands hope that by touring in the U.S. they can familiarize Americans with Soviets on a more personal level, and, according to Bratash, show that "Russians aren't as scary as they're seen in the movies."

The Stas Namin Group has sold more than 40 million records since 1972. This is the group's third visit to the U.S. Rondo has sold 1.5 million records since its formation in 1986, and is visiting America for the first time.

KUOI-FM and One More Time Productions are co-sponsoring the event. Tickets are on sale at One More Time and Ticket Express for $6 and will be available at the door for $8.
