Ed board guns down $50 fee increase plan

By ANGELA CURTIS
Managing Editor

A proposed $50 student fee increase will probably not take effect this fall, an Idaho Board of Education official said Monday night.

Monday, the board declined a "notice of intent" to set fee increase processes in motion, said board Executive Director Rayburn Barton.

The board is required to file notices of intent one month before it can actually consider fee increases.

"The board wasn't even receptive to that," Barton said.

"A $50 fee increase is a lot of money for some families in this state."

— Lynn Major
ASUI Vice President

The motion, submitted by the board's finance committee Monday, would have been discussed further at the board's April 23-24 meetings in Moscow.

Now, the soonest matriculation fee increases would be considered is this fall during board budget hearings, Barton said.

The notice could have allowed board members to raise undergraduate matriculation fees as much as $50 a semester for Idaho residents and $100 a semester for non-residents.

The finance committee announced the notice of intent at the request of Idaho's institutions of higher learning, Finance Committee Chairman George Alvarez said Monday night.

"I understand the rationale by the universities to bring it out on the table, because if we don't we leave ourselves without the ability to raise fees until this summer," Alvarez said.

The committee, however, may have jumped the gun, according to Alvarez.

"The move to bring it on the table today was premature because the study on fees has not been completed," Alvarez said. "I think fee increases are going to be needed, but we probably need more information to justify them."

Terry Armstrong, executive assistant to UI President Richard Gibb, also says a fee hike will be necessary.

"It's been five years since a fee increase," Armstrong said Monday. "We're so inexpensive, it's only a matter of time."

In a December interview, Armstrong said he personally favored student fee increases.

"I'd love to have $100 more a year from you," he said.

Borah Symposium Retrospective features Church, Martin

By BEN LONG
Senior Staff Writer

Can the war on drugs be won? Are guerilla forces in the world trading guns for drugs? What is the effect of the drug trade on the social, economic and political institutions of third world nations?

These questions and more will be addressed by the 1989 Borah Symposium, titled "Cocaine and Conflict: Narcopolitics in the Americas."

"All Borah Symposia are exciting," said Borah Foundation Chairman Nick Gier. "This is a hot issue and a relevant one."

The series of lectures and panels begins Thursday night with a retrospective look at past symposia, featuring Bethine Church, the widow of Sen. Frank Church, and Boyd Martin, Borah distinguished professor of political science and retired dean of the College of Letters and Science. The retrospective begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Law School Auditorium.

The regular symposium will include class visits, lectures and audience participation sessions March 27 and 28. Before the main meetings at the SUB Ballroom at 7:30 each night, meetings will be held at 2:30 p.m. in the Law School Courtroom. Monday's topic for the early meeting is "Prospects for Peace in Central America." Scheduled for Tuesday afternoon at the same time and place is a discussion of the legalization of illicit narcotics, both for consumption in the United States and production in Latin America.

The people involved in the first night's discussions are:

Edgar Chamorro, a Jesuit priest and former dean of humanities at the the University of Central America. He was Nicaraguan ambassador to the United Nations in 1977.

Elaine Shannon, Time magazine's Washington bureau chief, who has reported on the international drug trade for 10 years. She recently published "Desperados: Latin American Drug Lords, U.S. Lawmen and the War America Can't Win." The book focuses on the murder of Enrique Camarena, an agent of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency in Mexico.

Fernando Cepeda, the Colombian ambassador to Great Britain and the former dean of the University of Bogota's law school.

Mark Dion, the Deputy Assistant Secretary in the U.S. State Department's Bureau of International Narcotics Matters. Dion has been stationed in Burma, El Salvador and Paraguay.

Moderating the opening session of the symposium is Richard Craig, associate professor of political science at Kent State University. He is the author of numerous articles on the impact

After 25 years, campus operator still makes connections

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

Xythel Twist has got your number, as well as any other number you may need or want. And if she doesn't know it, she'll find it.

Twist has been a campus operator at the university for 25 years. She says she has about 300 numbers memorized, mostly those of faculty, staff and departments.

Twist says she enjoys her job, and she likes to help people by answering their questions.

"We are here to be of help to anyone that needs us and are happy to serve," Twist said.

That service is not as easy to provide as some may think, she said. The campus operators, located in the Information Center on the north end of campus, have no computerized listings for phone numbers and have to look up all numbers manually.

Another difficulty is encountered because the UI switchboard has no indicator to inform callers when the line is busy: it just sounds like the phone is ringing and ringing. Since about 80 percent of the time there is only one operator on duty, people sometimes have to wait.

Twist asked callers to "please be patient with us as we are trying to do our best."

She said about 60 percent of the calls she receives are from students asking for numbers of friends and departments. However, callers also deal with questions ranging from how to bake a cake, to the sales tax in Washington, to the cost of traveling to different places.

Twist started working for the university in July 1964. She was chief operator for seven years and officially retired in 1977. Since then, she has worked part time.

She has seen a lot of changes at the UI in the quarter century she's been here. The faculty, staff and department populations have more than doubled. The student population has risen from 6,000 to 9,000.

The equipment the operators work with has also changed. In 1964 they worked on an old-fashioned cord board. A small centrex was later installed, and now they work on a computer board.

However, Twist said the pride she has in her work hasn't changed. She says that she and the other operators are "proud to represent the university" and try to do their work as well as they can.

Said Twist, "We all try to do our best to serve the university."

The question asked at the second night of the symposium is "Can the War on Drugs be Won?" Drug trafficking as an ongoing part of covert U.S. activity, and legalization of drugs will be discussed by:

Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., a former member of the House Select Committee on Narcotics and currently a member of the House Armed Services Committee. He is the author of a recent bill for the use of military units against drugs smuggled into the United States.

Ethan Nadelman, assistant professor of politics and public affairs at Princeton University. He has appeared on numerous TV talk shows and recently prepared a classified report for the State Department on drug trafficking and money laundering.

Peter Reuter, of the Rand Corporation in Washington D.C. He has been a guest scholar at the Brookings Institute and is author of "Disorganized Crime: The Economics of the Visible Hand."

Lt. Col. Samuel Routson, a UI graduate, who oversees U.S. military units trying to stop illegal drugs from entering the country. He has a law degree from Brigham Young University and a master's degree in national security studies from Georgetown University.

Moderating the second night will be Bruce Bagley, associate professor of international studies at the University of Miami. He is also director of the Andean Studies Project at the Institute of Inter-American Studies and co-wrote "Contradora: The Limits of Negotiations."

However, the possibility of a fee hike has been met with student resistance.

Monday, ASUI Vice President Lynn Major said that for some students, the $50 fee increase could have made the difference between going to school or not.

"A $50 fee increase is a lot of money for some families in this state," Major said.

Notices of intent usually lead to fee increases, Major said.

"What a notice of intent means is 'Start sharpening your pens because that check you're going to write in September is going to be bigger' — if people can afford to write that big a check," Major said.

The board continues meetings today in Boise.

Twin UI time capsules will be buried Parents Weekend

By LEN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Some of today's UI students should be alive to watch the opening of the next university time capsule, says the university's Centennial coordinator.

"People who actually put items in the (1939) time capsule were able to return and witness the opening," said Coordinator Hal Godwin. "This was such a nice aspect that we want to be able to duplicate that in it in 2039."

A Sesquicentennial (150-year) time capsule will be buried beside the Bicentennial time capsule during Parents Weekend. The ceremony will be held underneath the flag pole in front of the Administration Building April 15 at 1:15 p.m.

Originally, the Semicentennial time capsule was to be buried at the site, Godwin said. Instead, the capsule was left in a vault beneath the Administration Building.

A stone marker will cover the crypt of the twin time capsules and will be temporarily removed during the Sesquicentennial birthday celebration Jan. 30, 2039.

Sesquicentennial directors might place a second bicentennial time capsule into the empty crypt, Godwin said. The two Bicentennial capsules will then be opened at the birthday party in 2089.

Because of molecular bonding processes used to seal the capsules, windows will need to be cut into each capsule.

"They probably (will) have a laser knife of some kind, or cutting device in which they might be able to cut simply a hole or window and remove things through the window," Godwin said. "They could cut the whole top off."

Centennial directors are still deciding what will be put into the two time capsules. As with the Semicentennial capsule, UI and state officials will write letters to their 50- and 100-year successors.

"We plan on putting in items which reflect the mood and spirit and daily life of today's campus."

— Hal Godwin
Centennial Coordinator

Many living groups have submitted items for each of the time capsules.

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity donated a cassette tape of contemporary music, an Idaho road map and a photograph of the Pike Founders' Day Dance, said

Pike President Paul Costanza.

Students may submit forms which were recently published in this newspaper. Forms received will be typed and divided between the two time capsules. The deadline to submit items for both time capsules is April 1.

"We plan on putting in items which reflect the mood and spirit and daily life of today's campus," Godwin said.

Recent regional newspapers and various Centennial items, including a Centennial coin, a Centennial medallion and a high-tech contemporary electronic recording will also be included.

But before the capsules can be filled, the Sesquicentennial capsule must first be completed.

Student engineers are constructing the Sesquicentennial time capsule with the same acrylic, transparent formula used for the Bicentennial time capsule, although it will be smaller.

Earlier this year, Godwin budgeted $2,000 for the Bicentennial time capsule building project. Student engineers Doug Anderson, Tom Garrison and Robert Nii spent $600 planning and building the 5-foot high, 2-foot wide octagon-shaped capsule. The second capsule is expected to cost far less than the first.

In addition to the time capsule burial, other events scheduled for Parents Weekend include the Phi Delta Theta Turtle Derby.

"We're also going to dedicate a grove of trees on campus at the same time to commemorate student involvement," Godwin said.

Of all the events scheduled for the Centennial, Godwin said the time capsule project is one of the most asked-about projects.

"It's a real link between the past, today and the future," he said.

Give our student representatives a little credit

HELP WANTED: The ASUI is looking for students interested in serving year-long appointments to UI standing committees. The time commitment ranges from a few hours a month to many hours a week. Benefits include no pay, no credit, no supervision and little appreciation. No experience needed. Apply today.

Each year ASUI officials might as well place help-wanted ads in their sometimes desperate search for students to fill nearly 60 positions on university standing committees.

Now for some committees, like the Parking Committee or the University Judicial Council, applicants far exceed the openings. But for many of the other 20 university committees with voting student representatives, applicants are few and far between.

And what motivates students to apply? Some may apply for openings at the insistence of their living groups, others may apply only to "pad" their resumes. A few don't hold ulterior motives and may actually apply out of some sense of commitment to their community. These folks hope their work will bring about change.

So the ASUI and the university need some way to attract qualified, energetic and enthusiastic individuals to fill these positions. Perhaps, we could reward them.

University committees are made up of faculty members and students. Faculty members are expected to do university or community involvement work as part of their position as staff members and receive their normal hourly wage for committee involvement. Students just do it out of the goodness of their hearts.

So, let's reward students for their committee work. Could we pay them? Nope, the funds probably aren't available. But maybe we could give them credit — academic credit that is.

If a student can spend less than 20 hours hanging crepe paper in the SUB Ballroom for Mardi Gras and receive one art credit, why can't a student sitting on the UI Fine Arts Committee get a credit, too?

If an ASUI Senator gets paid $100 per month for saving the entire free world and can also easily get three political science intern credits, why can't a student working on the University Judicial Council get a few?

A cooperative agreement between university administrators, the Political Science Department and the ASUI could easily work out the logistics for such a reward system. In the process, our student representatives could get a job with some credit.

Marriott adds cockroaches to lunch menu?

Editor:

I had an interesting experience in the Wallace Cafeteria the other day, and I would like to share it with the rest of you.

On March 8, some friends and I were eating a much-needed lunch before heading off to a long afternoon of classes. We had just sat down and begun to enjoy (as much as you can possibly enjoy Marriott's food) our lunch when something that was very disturbing to all of us happened.

As Craig (the guy sitting next to me) screamed, "What the hell?," I looked over and noticed this creature that had fallen from the ceiling. It looked to be about a foot long, with entirely too many legs and antennae that just would not stop. The cockroach ran across Craig's tray, onto Mark's, and then did a belly flop onto the floor. The cockroach finally died after we stepped on it and crushed it numerous times.

Through all of this we were able to get someone from Marriott's fine front office to come back and see what "the problem" was. This elderly lady was noticeably as disturbed by the sight of the dead cockroach as we were. Nonetheless, all she could manage to do was giggle.

I said, "No, this isn't too funny. You know it's really kind of bad." "I know, and would you believe that we just fumigated?" she said.

All that I could say to that was, "No, you know, I really can't believe that."

The front office lady went through her form-letter type apology and we left the cafeteria.

It's really too bad that this happened because all of us lost our appetites, not to mention the portion of the lunch we had just consumed. I don't mind telling you that I did not eat dinner in the cafeteria that night, and I am not looking forward to the next meal, and the adventure that comes with it.

In the March 7 issue of the Argonaut the cover story headline read, "Health inspection 'disappoints' boss." All I want to know is why?

Ms. Morrison, I feel you should be very happy with the inspection you received. I can guarantee you that if an inspector was sitting where I was on March 8, you would have been much more than "disappointed."

Local media unfair to KUID-TV

In journalism writing we are taught to report information in an accurate, objective and balanced way. And to make a story interesting.

In general, I think local newspapers do a good job at that, except on one particular subject — KUID-TV.

The search for dirty laundry has gone a bit far, and the muddy image portrayed by the media is too much for this telecommunication major to take.

Granted, KUID-TV is not part of the University of Idaho, at least in funding. But the image that comes to mind when I read articles in regional newspapers is one of an anti-student, anti-university organization. In my opinion, this is not accurate, objective and balanced reporting. So here's another side — from a student's point of view — on what KUID-TV is all about.

KUID-TV produces two monthly television shows, North Idaho Times and Idaho Agriculture. To produce these shows, two KUID-TV staff members are paid, and students fill in the other seven crew positions, for a total of 14 students working on these productions.

KUID-TV also produces all the UI home football and men's basketball shows. For these productions, a crew of three paid KUID-TV staff members and to me.

Local newspapers have criticized the station for not airing the Borah Symposium this year and for "snubbing" the student production of Mostly Moscow last year. KUID-TV is a television station, and television stations have to purchase programming. Television shows don't come cheap, and once programming schedules are set up, one won't find too many stations anywhere that would bump their paid programming for last-minute local productions. Especially those that don't pay for themselves. KUID-TV received some bad press on both these issues, but the poor planning was not on their part. And there's more to the bad press. The real reason is based on politics and, as a student, these political games haven't done me any favors.

KUID-TV has been my greatest teacher in the career field I have chosen. Working on productions under the expertise of Ken Segota, KUID-TV chief engineer, and Jonathan Koetiz, producer, I have learned more about television than any classroom experience could provide. And when it's time to put the resume tape together, my list of KUID-TV productions will far outdistance any other educational experiences I have had.

20-35 students work from set-up to tear-down for each game.

Student crew members have the opportunity to work with TV equipment. Students run the cameras, floor direct, run audio, technical direct and even associate produce these shows. And the students are the ones who gain from this valuable experience.

KUID-TV also lends its remote TV truck and equipment to the Student Telecommunication Society, a campus organization, to produce women's home basketball games. The KUID-TV truck rents out for commercial use at about $1,500 per production. STS has used KUID-TV's remote truck six times this year, making an estimated $9,000 donation to this group.

Another important factor is the 69 telecommunication majors attending the university. That means the majority of these students are involved with KUID-TV and benefit from the production opportunities the station provides.

That doesn't seem anti-student

Future President Zinser says thanks

Editor:

I would like to thank the University of Idaho faculty, staff and students for their warmth and hospitality during my recent visit as president-elect for the university. It was the beginning of a long, enduring relationship to begin July 1. I am deeply gratified by the overwhelming invitation you extended to me to become the 14th president of your university. My commitment to serve the UI is based upon my profound respect for the values and programs there, as well as my optimism about future aspirations. Your confidence in me is mirrored by my confidence in you.

We all know the road ahead will have unpredictable twists and turns, and some unavoidable bumps, but it will be a journey in which we will take pride and pleasure. That will require sound planning, communication, participation, good will and hard work. Although it may sound trite, it is true that the university is at a crossroad. What an exciting time to join in its development.

Each of us has a great deal ahead in forging a smooth transition. I shall orient an interim successor at Greensboro, complete some friendships, hopefully write some, not to mention sell a house, pack and move. You will honor the accomplishments of the previous 12 years, continue your Centennial celebration, set plans for the 1989-90 academic year, prepare for commencement and, if there is any time left, think about what you want most for me to learn about your units when I come aboard in July. I'll be reading avidly about Idaho and the university until then.

I was thrilled by the turnout at the reception on campus. Let's pledge to continue such a sense of community through forums that unite the diverse group across the campus. Lively intellectual discourse and mutual respect such as I have seen there is characteristic of the finest academies. It is a precious, fragile resource deserving of our most gentle regard.

—Among the many pleasures of the weekend in Boise was running into some UI students, including some sisters of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority in the parking lot of the new shopping mall. The basketball team, coaches, cheerleaders, UI contingent in Boise and hundreds of boosters impressed me by their talent and civility. What a proud moment for the university.

In closing I wish to express my heartfelt gratitude to President Gibb for calling so quickly to congratulate me, to Betty Gibb for offering to help in the transition and to Judy Reisanuer for extending her services. And, to Terry Maurer and the UI Communications Office, thank you for a stellar performance in managing these days dominated by media and public relations events. You kept me on track and out of trouble. Next time I hit town, I'll wear large reflector sunglasses. Do you think we could go Fiji style with unidentified university

"officers?" The Fijis thought that would be a grand experiment! Too late now; sorry fellas!

Thanks to so many of you who sent flowers, fruit and cards. I enjoyed them and I shared them.

Tiny humans fear executioner

Editor:

I must reply to Mr. Smith's letter in your Feb. 28 issue.

Since Mr. Smith is apparently a man, and he doesn't seem to believe that Christian men have a right to express their views concerning abortion, what twist of logic allows him to express his beliefs? It escapes me how he can deduce that Christian men, those poor misguided creatures, have no right of opinion or no right to act on their beliefs concerning this feminine issue, but he, the enlightened one, has such a right!

No, I am not a male. I am, however, a poor, oppressed, Christian female. Now, lest Mr. Smith weeps too many tears of sorrow for my lot, let me enlighten him. I neither need nor want your sorrow or pity. As a free Christian spirit I follow no man, except of my own free will and choice. No Christian man oppresses me. He who owns my strictest allegiance is he who taught "Thou shalt not kill!"

Ah, but you say it is not proven or known if the fetus is a human being. So, because you don't know whether it thinks or feels, you have no regard for it? I say that is the ultimate selfishness or cruelty.

I say it is precisely because we don't know for a certainty when life begins that we should respect this most helpless form of humanity. And regardless of what abortionists say, it is a "form" of humanity. Left alone it will become, in most cases, a human individual capable of expression, thought, fear or joy. It is not a "blob of protoplasm." From the moment of conception it has everything needed to become a creature very like the rest of us. All it needs is time, nourishment and protection.

But we don't know for sure when life begins, so why not kill it at will. It's inconvenient, it's an embarrassing statement of our own stupidity and lack of control. Why not then get rid of all who have no ability to communicate, who appear to the more intelligent and capable of us, not to be able to reason or communicate. For instance the senile or retarded.

I say where there is doubt, let us act in favor of life. I want no part of a world where those who are most helpless, who can't argue their own case, who can't by our standards perform whatever it is that makes a valuable human being, are discarded because they embarrass or inconvenience another.

I agree a woman's body is her own business. Its care is between her and her doctor. Since it is not her body that is being affected in this most ultimate way (killed), should we not have an advocate

Ballantyne, O'Brien named track All-Americans

Both place sixth individually at NCAA Championships

By LYNNETTE PIXLEY
Sports Writer

The UI indoor track and field season came to a close as two qualifiers from the men's team competed in the NCAA indoor track championships in Indianapolis March 10-11.

Orde Ballantyne had a fairly successful meet as he entered the finals in fourth place, ending up sixth with 25' 7½" in the long jump.

Dan O'Brien had a disappointing race in the 55-meter hurdles as Eric Cannon, a senior at the University of Pittsburgh, collided with O'Brien in the final race. O'Brien, who had ran a 7.25 in the prelims was a top competitor going into the finals.

"We really felt he could have placed within the top three, but that's what could have been," said Head Coach Mike Keller.

The race was followed by a protest, which claimed that Cannon had obstructed O'Brien mid-exception of Cannon, who was disqualified. Later, however, the jury of appeals overturned Tuppenny's decision and determined that the earlier race would stand. O'Brien ended up with sixth place.

Ballantyne's and O'Brien's efforts did not go unnoticed, however, as both were named All-Americans in their events.

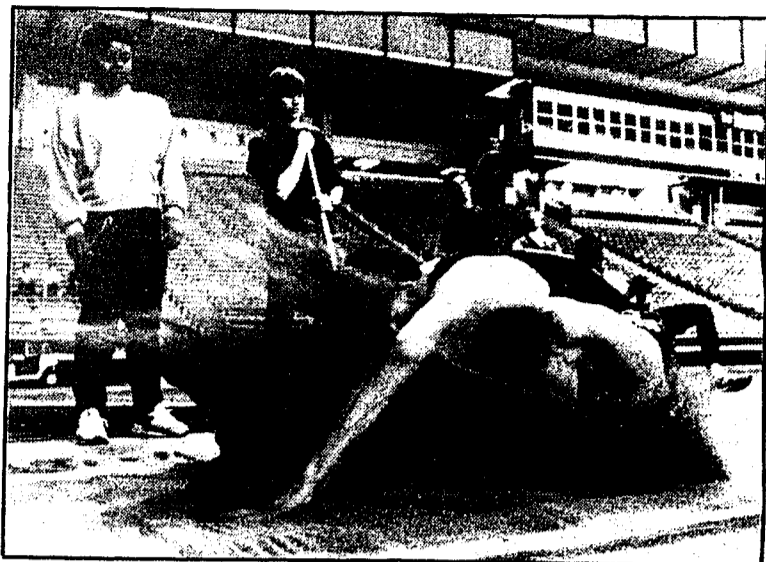

The trip to the NCAA championship capped off a successful season for the men's team, which placed second in team scoring in the Big Sky Conference Championship March 3-4. The women placed seventh in the Big Sky.

The regular outdoor season for the men's team is scheduled for April 1 at the University of Montana and the women will be at home Saturday.

Idaho ends Centennial season with style

Make first round of NCAA tourney

By RUSS BIAGNE
Sports Writer

UI Men's Basketball Coach Kermit Davis and his team set two goals for this year — to win the Big Sky Conference regular season title and advance to the NCAA Tournament.

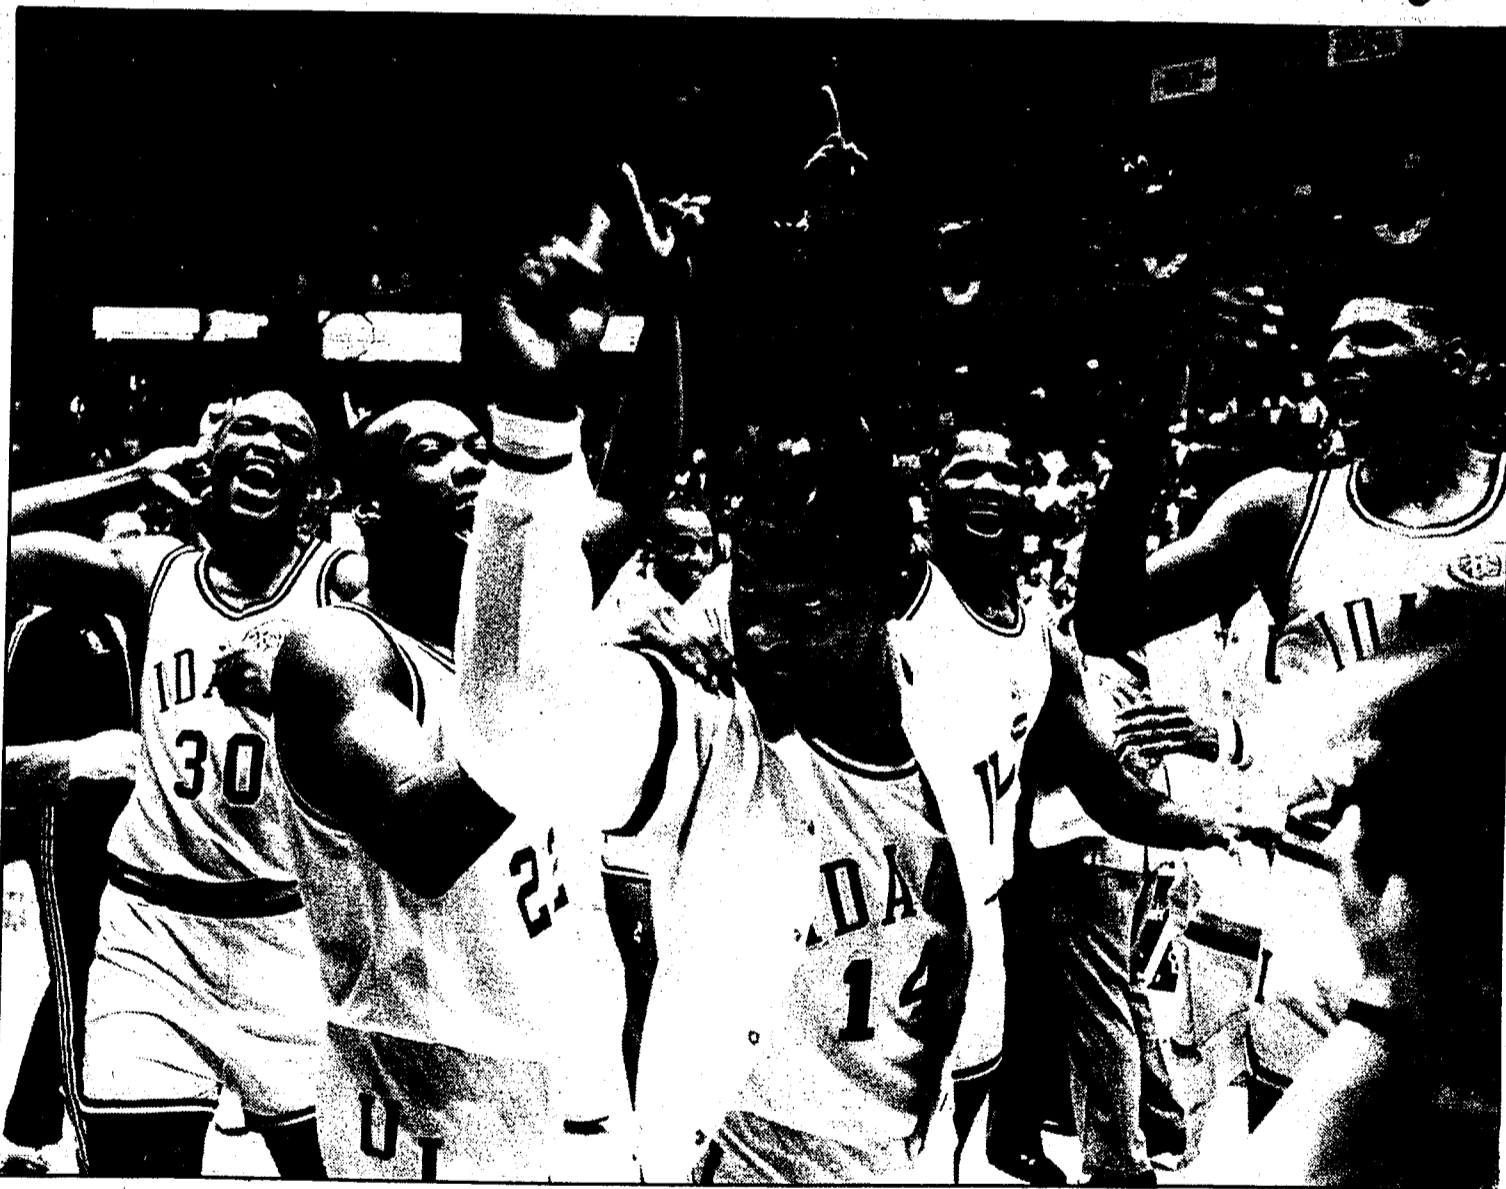

They achieved them both.

Led by Big Sky Tournament Most Valuable Player Riley Smith, the Vandals trounced Montana 77-56 in the semifinals Friday night before spring break and defeated Boise State 59-52 the next day for the championship and automatic berth in the NCAA Tournament. With the Big Sky title, the Vandals became the only team to win three conference titles in the 1980s.

Riley Smith and Raymond Brown both made the all-tournament team. Smith scored 41 points and had 17 rebounds in the two games while making 15-of-25 shots from the field and 11-of-13 from the free throw line. Brown scored 27 points and had 20 rebounds in the two games.

With the Big Sky title under their belts, the Vandals advanced to the March 16 matchup against the Runnin' Rebels of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas in the first round of the NCAA Tournament at the Boise State Pavilion. Idaho entered the tournament as the 13th seed among the 16 West Region teams in the 64-team tournament, while the Rebels were seeded at fourth.

A sell-out crowd, mostly BSU fans who switched their allegiance to UI for the tournament, watched as the Vandals, who led 14-8 after the first 10 minutes, were overpowered and defeated by the Runnin'

Rebels, 68-56.

The loss ended the fourth-best season ever for the Vandals, who finished with an impressive 25-6 record.

Not only did Idaho reach the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1982, but they also broke 11 team and individual records this season.

Among the records set was a new school and Big Sky Conference record for winning margin. Idaho scored an average of 76.2 points per game (second best in UI history) while giving up 61.1 for an average margin of plus 15.1. Idaho also set team records for most three-pointers (80), most assists (535), highest average assists (17.3), most steals (286) and highest average steals (9.2).

Individual season records were set by Riley Smith with a .651 field goal percentage, Mauro Gomes with 47 three pointers and Lorenzo Nash with 163 assists. Nash finished with 231 career assists to rank him sixth in all-time assists. James Fitch had seven steals against Portland to set another Vandal individual season record. Fitch finished with 135 career steals (second in Vandal history), and 1,004 career points, making him only the seventh player in Vandal history to reach the 1,000 mark and only the third to do it in just three seasons.

Obviously more than two goals were met by this year's team, which will lose Brown, Fitch, Gomes, Nash, Altonio Campbell and Jerry Carter next year.

Carter said he was happy with the season. "We accomplished our goals," he said. "As far as the regular season went, I was happy with how it ended — but I would of liked to see us go a little further in the NCAA's than we did."

"The NCAA's were exciting. It was the first time I've ever been there," Carter said. "It was a good way to end a career."

It was also an impressive way to end a season.

Congratulations goes out to the departing seniors, the rest of the team and first-year Coach Kermit Davis.

UI proves no threat to Montana

By MIKE LEWIS
Sports Writer

As the Idaho women's basketball team trekked to breakfast in downtown Missoula Friday morning before spring break and the start of the Big Sky Conference basketball tournament, a local passerby jokingly asked the group of 15 or so girls, "What are you protesting?"

The Lady Vandals' sophomore guard Jennifer Ballenger offered a strikingly confident response: "Montana basketball."

In a town where 3,000 fans regularly pack the UM's Dahlberg Arena for women's games and young fans line up before tip-off to get autographs from the Lady Griz players, such a comment may have been treated as a mere idle threat. After all, the University of Montana Lady Griz had won 20 consecutive games, including a spotless 16-0 Big Sky Conference regular season record, while the Lady Vandals somehow recovered from the 7-20 record of a year ago to make the BSC playoffs for the first time in three years and rank in the top 10 in the nation among most improved teams.

Unfortunately for Ballenger and the rest of the Lady Vandals, an idle threat is exactly what her remark turned out to be.

After defeating cross-state rival Boise State 56-52 in a nailbiter in the opening round of the tournament Friday night, the Lady Vandals shot just 30 percent from the floor against defending conference champion Montana, en route to a 63-49 loss in the championship game.

"We needed to have more outside shooters," said UI Head Coach Laurie Turner. "Jeanne (Doherty) did a good job, but every time we went inside, we got shut down. They blocked everything we put up inside." The Lady Griz blocked a tournament record 12 Idaho shots.

Doherty who, along with

Christy Van Pelt, Cindy Tokarz, and Sheri Lehmer, played in her last game as a Lady Vandal, rolled up a career-high 22 points on 9-of-17 shooting including four three-pointers, but it was not enough. The win was Montana's ninth straight over the Lady Vandals, dating back to the 1984-85 season.

Idaho was able to stay within 10 points throughout the first half, and trailed 31-22 at the half. Austin led the Lady Griz to an 18-4 run at the outset of the second half, however, giving Montana a 49-26 lead at the 11:03 mark.

UM took its largest lead of 57-33 on Austin's fadeaway 17-footer with 5:38 left and coasted to the win.

Despite the loss, three Lady Vandals were named to the all-tournament team. Lori Elkins, who had 27 points and 19 rebounds in the two games, Van Pelt, who had 21 points, 10 rebounds and 12 assists over the weekend, and Doherty were all named to the team. Montana's Lisa McLeod and Jean McNulty were also named to the team, and Vicki Austin, UM's point guard, was named Most Valuable Player of the tournament after stinging the Lady Vandals for 18 points on 9-of-12 shooting Saturday night.

Baseball team struggles in early season contests

By GREG NUNES
Sports Writer

While many UI students headed for the beaches during spring break, the UI baseball team took an unsuccessful road trip through Boise.

The Vandals struggled, winning just one of five games to drop their season record to 1-6.

With the split of a doubleheader March 11 against Boise State University, UI won its first game of the season.

Unfortunately for the Vandals, the win over BSU was the only bright spot throughout the week, as Northwest Nazarene College and the College of Idaho took easy victories over UI following the three-game series against BSU.

After suffering a 10-9 setback in the opening game of the doubleheader against BSU, UI bounced back to take the nightcap 9-6.

Bob Frei, who came on to relieve as pitcher for UI with the bases loaded and no one out in the first inning, picked up the complete game victory.

UI had a balanced hitting attack in the win, as six Vandals picked up one hit each in the contest.

Unfortunately, the BSU doubleheader was the only game in which the Vandals hit well — UI scored just five runs in its final three games.

"Our hitting was poor," UI Coach Wade Wilson said. "We haven't had a chance to practice outside. I think we'll play a lot better in next week's game after we've had a chance to practice outside."

Because of Moscow's poor weather, practices have been held indoors, limiting batting practice.

Frei was the lone bright spot on the mound during the trip, as many of the hurlers had sore arms after the doubleheader.

"Our pitching was somewhat suspect," Wilson said.

The Vandals will have a chance to improve when they travel to Lewiston to take on Lewis Clark State JV next Tuesday.

Take a chance on Chances

Review by DONNA PRISBREY
Staff Writer

Like the fanatical mystic said, "You never know who's lurking in your body."

Your nagging neighbor may be the spirit of your dead mother-in-law. Or that really cute guy you just met in the library may really be your dead father's reincarnated spirit. It probably isn't true, but Chances Are, a new movie starring Cybill Shepherd, Ryan O'Neal and Michael Downing Jr. turns this fiction into a very funny plot.

In 1963, Corrine marries Louis Jefferies III. He dies before his wife has their daughter. In heaven, he manages to rush through the bureaucracy very quickly, a case of 'extreme emotional attachment.' He is processed so fast that he doesn't get his memory-erasing injection. OOOPS.

He of course meets his daughter in the Harvard library, right after he graduates, and falls in love with her. Then, by a long chain of coincidences, he winds up having dinner at his old home, with his now 45 year old widow, and his daughter. In the familiar surroundings his memory returns. The plot continues to thicken with his trying to convince everyone who he is, and his ensuing romance with his wife.

The beginning was well cast, well performed, and very funny. The ending was very satisfying. It tugged very gently on my heart strings. Unfortunately the middle had some problems.

First of all Shepherd was not convincing as a grieving widow. After 23 years I couldn't accept that she would not be over her husband's death. This is tainted by the fact that I don't really like Shepherd in the first place. But, in an attempt to make her look old and sorrowful, she ended up looking like she was dying of cancer or something.

Then, there was the performance of Downing as the reincarnated husband. He was not very convincing at all. As I was watching the movie I kept saying to myself 'That's not the way he would be acting. He would be doing something else.'

However, I loved O'Neal's performance. He was very funny as the stumbling best friend.

The story was well written and very funny. Once I got over the distraction of a sickly Shepherd and an over-acting acting Downing, I enjoyed it.

Just say no to sex

Review by JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Entertainment Editor

Those who choose matrimony do well, and those who choose virginity or voluntary abstinence do better.

—Pope John Paul II.

Kind of a scary quote to start a book with, I'll agree, but when the book is written by the former producer of Late Night with David Letterman and SCTV it somehow seems appropriate.

What to Substitute for Sex is Barry Sand's humanitarian offering to the world, the ultimate in safe sex is, after all, no sex.

In his 111-page book, Sand offers tips on how to keep your mind off of sex. One suggestion is to develop a phobia. Sand suggests Coitophobia (a morbid fear of sexual intercourse), Linophobia (a fear of beds) and Eurotophobia (a morbid fear of the female genital organs), among others. Other suggestions for diversions include calling a toll-free number, and Sand conveniently provides a list which includes numbers like Alpo, the Asbestos Technical Information Service, the Butterball Turkey Talkline and Second Opinion on Non-Emergency Surgery.

The idea seemed novel at first and there are quite a few chuckles to be found in this book, but after more than a quick glance through the book I began to lose interest — you can only go so far with sex-substitution material.

As far as the design of the book goes, I was not at all impressed. The book looks thrown together. At best, Sand could have filled 70 pages without the help of the graphics. Each page is bordered with a thick distracting black edge. Letters are over-tipped, border tape is over-used, and despite all of this graphic creativity an abundant number of pages are left unfilled.

But I suppose for $4.95 the book would make a good gift for the desperately sexually-frustrated at heart.

March videos include Dundee

March movie releases are hitting the shelves of Moscow video stores.

Already released are Clean and Sober, Crocodile Dundee II and Moon Over Parador. Movies that will be on the shelves within the next few days include Betrayed, Platoon Leader and Big.

Punchline

Starring: Sally Field and Tom Hanks.

Field is a New Jersey housewife who aspires to be a comedienne. She spends her nights onstage at a New York comedy club and is drawn to Hanks who plays a self-centered Lenny Bruce type. He helps her turn her routine from flat to funny, and she helps him put his life back together.

Platoon Leader

Starring: Michael Dudikoff. Dudikoff, as Knight, finds that his four years of training at West Point could not prepare him for one day in Vietnam. The green commander is soon hardened by midnight ambushes and dead friends.

Big

Starring: Tom Hanks and Elizabeth Perkins.

A little boy makes a wish to be "big" at a carnival fortune-telling machine and wakes up the next morning inside the body of a 35-year-old man. He discovers definite advantages to being "big"—climbing the corporate ladder of a toy company, having money to spend and freedom never imagined. But he is not prepared for the romantic advances of his ambitious co-worker or the many other demands of adulthood.

Crocodile Dundee II

Starring: Paul Hogan and Linda Kozlowski.

In the Crocodile sequel, Dundee and his girlfriend find themselves up against more than the hazards of New York. This time they fight a gang of ruthless Colombian drug dealers who wind up fighting the Australian outback as well.

Moon Over Parador

Starring: Richard Dreyfuss.

Dreyfuss plays a struggling New York actor who is roped into impersonating a recently deceased puppet dictator in Latin America. He takes on the acting challenge much to the outrage of the country's political cronies but to the delight of the masses.

Betrayed

Starring: Debra Winger and Tom Berenger.

Winger, an FBI agent, goes undercover to investigate a suspected murderer. She soon finds herself mixed up in a horrifying network of crime and also finds herself in love with the suspect.

Clean And Sober

Starring: Michael Keaton and Kathy Baker.

Keaton portrays a real estate salesman whose life, due to alcohol and drug abuse, is quickly spiraling downward. He reluctantly enters a local rehabilitation program which leads not only to a revived physical and mental self but also to love.

Morrison's poetry rediscovered in Wilderness

Review by PAUL GREENWOOD
Staff Writer

*M*oment of inner freedom when the mind is opened & the infinite universe revealed & the soul is left to wander dazed & confus'd searching here & there for teachers & friends

And thus speaketh the Lizard King. "The Opening of the Trunk," like all the poems in Wilderness, a newly released collection of previously unseen writings from the late Jim Morrison, captures the essence of this mythic man, his aura, message and legacy. That persistent, relentless, almost religious quest for the ultimate freedom and liberation dominant in these poems is not surprising for a man who once vowed he would push reality to the outer limit just to see what would happen.

Wilderness is a compilation of previously never-before-seen poems from Morrison, lead singer for the Doors. Released late last year, nearly 18 years after his death, this anthology consisted of years of deciphering over 1,600 pages of notebook scribbling and diary entries, the rights to which weren't even settled until 1980.

"If my poetry aims to achieve anything, it's to deliver people from the limited ways in which they see and feel," Morrison wrote.

Morrison's obsessive quest to deliver himself and the rest of man from their limited horizons undoubtedly led to his destruction, yet at the same time remains the mainstay of his popularity. For that very reason, Morrison is viewed by many as a genius and visionary. These poems will undoubtedly enhance that repuation, as they indeed encompass a universe of subject matters with insightful, probing eyes and a yearning soul to understand the world in deeper detail.

"I am a guide to the labyrinth." Guiding the reader through a series of unorthodox poems, he adds unseen dimensions to life with his surrealistic imagery.

The Voice of the Serpent
dry hiss of age & steam & leaves of gold
old books in ruined
Temples
The pages break like ash.

Some of his poems vividly articulate bizarre dreams, incoherent daydreams, visions and more than likely, acid trips.

I received an Aztec wall of vision
& dissolved my room in sweet derision
Closed my eyes, prepared to go
A gentle wind inform'd me so
And bathed my skin in ether glow

Other poems reflect very human fears and joys, while some seem to be distant, isolated observations on life. At times there appears sensations evoked of timely depression and bleak melancholy.

Eternal consciousness
in the Void
(makes trial & jail seem almost friendly)

In most instances regardless of what these poems literally say their interpretations are vast. Morrison felt that poems should ideally be that way.

"...real poetry doesn't say anything, it just kicks off the possibilities. Opens all doors. You can walk through any that suits you."

Admirers of Jim Morrison will immediately relish Wilderness for the in-depth insight it gives into the mind and soul of this modern day legend. Yet other less zealous readers, or perhaps even critics of him, will likely admire, or at least acknowledge, his literary ability and poetic vision. Sadly, some of the poems do reflect an O.D.'d mind and burned-out soul, making them incoherent and elusive for most readers. That aside, the majority of these writings adds evidence to the artist's erratic genius and a new perspective to his artistry of simply looking out at life through very different lenses.

those who can't defend or even speak for themselves.

I do not approve of illegal acts to express displeasure with the law. I believe in working within the law to change the law. It is, however, an evil law that doesn't protect or even consider the rights of those who are to be killed without even a trial. Oh, but we don't know that they are human, do we! Perhaps they are feline or bovine or equine. Perhaps they are even less than that. On the other hand, perhaps they are more, much more. Is it a remote possibility that they are tiny humans crying out in fear and pain at the executioner's hand?

The abortionist view that we don't know they are something, therefore they are nothing, is most pitiless.

The loss left Idaho with an 18-11 overall season record, a win total surpassing the 15 wins that the Lady Vandals earned in Turner's previous two seasons at the helm.

Keep the Hardware

Keep the hardware? That's right, if you successfully complete your nine-month co-op term, you will have earned your IBM Compatible or Macintosh® computer.

Anything can happen at Microsoft. As a Technical Associate Co-op, you'll provide technical phone support to a variety of users of Microsoft software all across the U.S. On an average day, you may talk to a midwestern housewife or an East Coast executive one minute, and Julia Child or a high-level White House advisor the next.

We've got Technical Associate internships available for people who speak our language — C, Pascal, Assembly or Basic. Excellent command of the English language and great problem-solving skills are a must. Experience as a computer tutor or programmer is a definite plus because you'll be teaching thousands across the nation how to better utilize MS products.

We're looking for students who want to prove something to themselves — that they've got the enthusiasm and motivation needed to make it at the world's leader in microcomputer software.

Our paid internships are full-time (40 hours a week) and last for a duration of 9 months. Relocation assistance is available for non-local participants. Additional benefits include a competitive salary, membership in our local health club and software discounts.

There are only a limited number of internships available, so act now. Contact your Co-op Office by Tuesday, March 28 for more information about our internships, eligibility and our upcoming campus visit. Microsoft is an equal opportunity employer.
