Borah Symposium

Are drugs 'serious threat' to U.S., Latin America?

By BENJAMIN LONG
Senior Staff Writer

As propaganda subject, corrupting agent or peasant cash crop, the impact of the illicit narcotics trade is enormous, panelists of Monday night's Borah Symposium agreed.

"It's hard for average people to understand how much money (drug traffickers) have," said moderator Richard Craig. "They weigh their money, they don't count it."

CRAIG

"That kind of money buys damn near anything," Craig said.

SHANNON

"Anything" includes almost the complete economies of such countries as Bolivia and Peru, said panelist Gustavo Gorriti, a journalist and farmer from Peru. Cocaine profits equal all the profits from the legal economy in Bolivia and 70 percent of Peru's economy, he said.

That amount of money creates a paradox of governments trying to fight the illegal trade and millions of people dependent on the cash it provides, he said.

The title of this year's Borah Symposium is "Cocaine in Conflict: Narco-Politics in the Americas." Monday's subtitle was "Drugs: The Latin American Connection."

Panelists disagreed on the severity of the drug problem before about 500 people gathered at the SUB Ballroom Monday night.

"(Drugs) are the most serious threat to the survival of society," said panelist Mark Dion, the deputy assistant secretary in the U.S. Bureau of International Narcotics Matters.

"That's exaggerating somewhat ... but it could grow a good deal worse," he said.

But panelist Edgar Chamorro, a Nicaraguan who is a member of the Commission of U.S.-Latin American Relations at the International Center for Development Policy, said political factions often exaggerate news of illicit drug trade to further their goals.

For instance, the Reagan Administration accused the Sandinista government of drug running, while Contra opponents said that the army was involved in the trafficking, he said.

"It is very hard to get arrested for marijuana use. You can just about put a joint out on a cop's nose."

— Elaine Shannon
Time magazine

Nations in Central America face greater problems of poverty, debt and democracies in crisis that take priority over the area's drug trafficking problems, he said.

Recent changes in anti-drug battles switch emphasis from the supply side to the demand, panelists said.

"The biggest problem is us," said Elaine Shannon, a Time magazine reporter specializing on the narcotics trade.

"We want dope," Shannon said. "It is very hard to get arrested for marijuana use. You can just about put a joint out on a cop's nose."

Calls by campaigning politicians to "bring in the military" in Latin America to fight drugs will result in "murder of a lot of people" without stopping supply, she said.

The use of U.S. planes to chemically destroy cocoa crops in Peru would cause environmental problems and "play into the hands" of the radical leftist revolutionary group Sendero Luminoso, said Gorriti.

"We're in for a very long battle," Dion said.

He predicted better coordination between the United States and Latin America in the future, with emphasis within our borders. Surveys of high school seniors show encouraging decreases in cocaine use, but increases in crack use, he said.

The Borah Symposium continues tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom when panelists will ask "Can the War on Drugs be Won?"

ASUI Senator impeachment hearing postponed at least a week

By ANGELA CURTIS
Managing Editor

An ASUI senator facing impeachment says his case should not receive a public hearing until a senate committee can review the charges.

"The Senate Ways and Means Committee should establish whether the claims against me are valid," Sen. Steve Smart said Monday. "I don't think that should be done in public."

Student Bar Association President Jean Brennan called for Smart's impeachment last week on grounds of malfeasance, misfeasance and nonfeasance. Smart is assigned to "stay in contact" with the College of Law.

Smart said Robert's Rules of Order call for committee review before charges are heard publicly.

Chairman of Ways and Means, Smart would temporarily step down and Vice Chairman Craig McCurry would head committee meetings.

Smart's hearing, scheduled for Wednesday, has been postponed at least a week.

In a five-page bill of impeachment, the SBA accused Smart of actively participating in a bill rider which would cut SBA from ASUI funding after 1990.

However, Sen. Mike Gotch said Sen. Jason Albrecht, not Smart, sponsored the rider.

In budget hearings earlier this month, the senate appropriated $3,100 to the SBA, less than half of its $8,000 request. And while the rider technically cuts the SBA from senate funding after the upcoming fiscal year, Smart said the rider was not binding and the SBA might have received a similar amount in 1990.

"Their actions are a 100 percent guarantee that they won't receive the $3,100 next year," Smart said.

Monday afternoon, Brennan said the SBA would sue the ASUI for violating open meeting laws. SBA's impeachment bill charges that the senate created the rider in an unannounced, closed pre-session meeting.

However, Gotch and ASUI Vice President Lynn Major said all senate meetings and pre-session meetings are open to the public.

Brennan later called this newspaper Monday night to say she had talked to SBA's attorney and was changing her statement to "no comment."

300 UI classes offered this summer

By SCOTT TROTTER
Editorial Writer

Most students probably have memories of spring break on their minds and are not quite in the groove of thinking about school again — especially summer school. But this year's summer session includes 300 classes in a variety of areas.

The summer program has expanded its core curriculum offerings to more than 28 classes, including courses in communication, natural and applied sciences, mathematics, computer science, humanities and the social sciences.

The summer program also offers a few unique courses not previously available.

"Summer Intensive Spanish" is a new course that allows students to complete an entire year of language and cross-cultural study in six weeks. This course fulfills the UI core curriculum communication requirement.

"It's a unique course because students can get two semesters

"The class is also very concentrated. It's four hours a day, which is a better atmosphere to learn the language than the typical one hour a day instruction during the regular year."

Intensive Spanish Instructor

worth of Spanish in six weeks," said instructor Irina Crookston. "The class is also very concentrated. It's four hours a day, which is a better atmosphere to learn the language than the typical one hour a day instruction during the regular year."

The course schedule provides a one-week break immediately preceding the last two weeks of classes to help students digest the material covered during the first four weeks and to ensure a successful language-learning experience.

The summer program is also offering "Archaeology of the Nez Perce Country."

"The course is basically an introduction to local Nez Perce pre-history," said instructor Frank Leonhardy. "One of the instructors will be a Nez Perce, so students will get two points of view in the course."

The summer program allows students to choose from six different class sessions.

Two early sessions, May 15-June 9 and May 15-June 23, allow students to take a class and still have most of the summer to work or vacation.

Other sessions include an eight-week session from June 13-August 4, two four-week sessions during the same time period, a six-week session June 13-July 24 and a post session August 7-18.

Summer Session Bulletins are now available at various locations throughout the campus.

General Operating Budget Fiscal Year 1990

Have you ever wondered what happens to that $30.75 a semester of student fees that makes you a member of the Associated Students of the University of Idaho? The ASUI Senate recently passed the 1990 fiscal budget. All boards, programs and departments function within this budget to accomplish their duties. Here's how some of that $30.75 is spent.

■ Political Concerns Board: This board's responsibilities include providing a liaison between the Idaho Legislature and the ASUI when the legislature is not in session, working with the ASUI governance to conduct ASUI elections and keep students informed of current legislative issues.

■ ASUI Judicial Council: The council has jurisdiction over violations of the ASUI Rules and Regulations pertaining to members of the ASUI student government and questions about any ASUI organizations, policies, legislation or opinions issued.

■ Academics Board: Provides communication between student members of University Committees and the ASUI president and senate. The board oversees the functioning of the lecture notes program and updates scholarship information.

■ Communications Services: Provides operational support to the Gem of the Mountains, KUOI-FM, ASUI Advertising and the Argonaut.

HAJIB RAPE CHARGES DROPPED

Rape and kidnapping charges filed against a UI graduate student were dropped late last week.

Said Hajib, a graduate student from Morocco, had been accused of three felony counts of rape, kidnapping and a crime against nature. All charges were dropped Thursday after a local magistrate determined there was not sufficient evidence to take the case to trial.

Throughout the past month, Hajib has maintained that the Coeur d'Alene woman who accused him of the crimes had mistaken him for her possible attacker.

Friends and faculty members from Hajib's wildland recreation management department here helped raise a $3,000 bond to release him while he awaited a possible trial.

SLOW START FOR MARRIOTT PIZZA

Sales were slow for Marriott's new UI pizza delivery service this weekend. But the student manager of Marriott's Wild Pizza says that will soon change.

"Our first few nights were a bit slow, but that is a bit expected," said Student Manager James Barbat.

With up to five people working and only a few pizzas going out every hour, Barbat said there was time to help clean the kitchen and prepare for Sunday's Easter Brunch.

Thursday night Marriott's University Dining Service began their pizza delivery service to University of Idaho residence halls.

Wild Pizza prices are comparable to those offered by Moscow's other pizza delivery companies, ranging from $6.75 to $14.70. Barbat said most Wild Pizzas can be delivered to the residence halls within about 20 minutes.

Since January, a student with valid meal punch cards has been able to purchase a slice of Wild Pizza for $2.75. A free soft drink has been provided with each purchase.

Students ordering delivered pizzas must pay cash or write a check for items. Marriott officials said it would cost too much to implement a system where meal card punches could be used to pay for delivered pizzas.

Wild Pizza is open evenings Sunday through Thursday from 5 p.m. to midnight. Marriott is expected to begin offering various coupons to students, allowing them to save up to $2.50 per pizza.

CHINESE DEAN LECTURES HERE

The academic dean at the Foreign Affairs College in Beijing, China, speaks here Thursday about human rights in his country.

Professor Pan Shaozhong, whose major fields of study are American culture and English language and literature, begins his presentation at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. It is free and open to the public.

Pan, who is fluent in English, began a master's program in American literature at the Foreign Affairs College, which trains Chinese diplomats. He has been a visiting scholar at the Yale University American Studies Program and at the Woodrow Wilson International Center in Washington, D.C.

Pan's program is sponsored by the Associated Students of the University of Idaho, the UI International Trade and Development Office, and the Student Political Science Association.

Give UI a chance in BSU funding game

Perhaps the Vandal Cheerleaders should have been sent to the Statehouse to root for UI in the 89 Legislature's Building Fund game. Instead they were sent home after the Vandals had lost in the NCAA tournament, unknowing of the next loss to the UI campus.

Coach Andrus' game plan was simple: ask the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee to pay for the $500,000 interest on BSU's already-in-progress College of Technology and essentially ignore the needs of the other state institutions.

When JFAC tried to amend Andrus' playbook, providing funds for such buildings as the new UI Mines Building and library renovation, the package was fouled out on the House floor as a "budget breaker."

Speaker of the House Tom Boyd, R-Genesee, voted to kill the package. But he quickly put the ball back in play by swearing to come up with funding to appease his northern constituents.

And thus the "Hail Mary" of the legislature, the "surplus eliminator" was born.

The surplus eliminator provides $13.5 million for construction at NIC, LCSC, CSI and UI in the unlikely event that an extra $20 million shows up in tax revenues next year. This desperation play would do even Bobby Knight proud.

I've always enjoyed rooting for the underdog, but this is a "get a head start on getting out of the parking lot" situation.

The budget writers adjourned Friday leaving the ball in the air as to when, and if, any buildings would be built on this state's campuses.

Andrus' team plans to bank the first "extra" $6 million as a buffer against raising taxes in 1990. Interestingly enough, 1990 happens to be an election year.

The UI Mines Building will score its $2 million if and only if 1) extra money comes into the funding game, 2) if 1989 tax revenues don't fall short and 1990 becomes a "tax increase" year, and 3) after $3.1 million is given to NIC's computer lab.

Then comes the LCSC library, the CSI development center, the ISU chemistry building renovation and finally the $400,000 UI library planning fund.

The Idaho State Legislature went into the funding game with a $52 million surplus. But by the time the final buzzer sounded they had managed to budget themselves into a possible tax increase next year without adequately funding college building construction.

The Vandals advanced to the NCAA playoffs after overcoming BSU's home court advantage in the Big Sky Basketball Tournament. But in the building fund game, UI wasn't even allowed to take the court.

Andrus and the legislature have favored our southern rival far too long. Next year, let's hope BSU isn't the only university receiving a bid to attend the Boise Funding Invitational.

• GOOD FOR U. •

It takes a special person to prepare a free dinner and holiday party for university students and their families. But Moscow and the UI have such a special lady — Cassie Tartoue.

The pastor secretary for St. Mary's Catholic Church in Moscow, Cassie has been treating UI students to Thanksgiving dinner for six years and Easter gatherings for four years.

And this past Sunday Cassie did it again with a celebration which included a buffet dinner, a treasure hunt and a door prize drawing.

"I'm kind of alone, and have made the community my adopted family during the holidays," she said.

While she especially enjoys hosting international students who are far from home, all students and their families are always invited.

For opening her heart and "holiday home" to so many UI students — Good for U., Cassie Tartoue.

Moscow Lions serve up annual Rodeo breakfast

Editor:

It's no joke. Even though the date may be April Fools Day, the Moscow Central Lions Club is pleased to announce our Seventh Annual Chuck Wagon Breakfast to be held April 1.

This gourmet's delight is held in conjunction with the UI Rodeo Club's seventh annual collegiate rodeo to be held in the Kibbie-ASUI Dome March 31 - April 2. This event is one of the finest intercollegiate rodeos in the Pacific Northwest. Collegiate competitors are drawn from the entire Northwest and are ready to demonstrate their roping, riding and all-out rodeo skills.

Our Chuck Wagon will again serve a truly delectable ranch-style breakfast from 7 a.m. - 11:30 a.m. on the south concourse of the Dome. Grab your hats and boots, bring your family, friends and appetite and be prepared to savor the best breakfast on the Palouse.

Moscow Central Lions Club continues to work hard in providing community service and support. The proceeds of this event will again help sponsor academic scholarships for UI Rodeo Club students, as well as numerous other community projects throughout the year.

Y'all come on out and enjoy one of the best times on the Palouse — no fooling.

SBA, Senate need to meet halfway

There's a new version of an old saying on the lips of UI Law students — "If you want to get someone's attention, whisper — and if that doesn't work IMPEACH THE S.O.B.!"

And after starting impeachment proceedings against ASUI Sen. Steve Smart it appears the Student Bar Association has gotten the attention of not only Smart, but the entire ASUI Senate.

Every year about this time, just as sure as the return of potholes on the Palouse, SBA leaders trot across campus bringing with them what many ASUI leaders perceive as a high-and-mighty attitude in an effort to procure funding for such law school programs as the Idaho Law Review, Women's Law Caucus and the SBA itself.

And every spring the senate exercises the power of the purse strings by combating this perceived attitude with what SBA calls an inadequate appropria-entitled to bring impeachment proceedings under the ASUI Constitution and that process should be upheld.

Many UI law students come from other universities, and being older and under severe time constraints, they have different needs than their undergraduate counterparts.

Few senators spend much time trying to identify these needs, unless of course they are brown-nosing for votes during election time. Then after elections some senators actually seem to take pleasure in nuking SBA budgets and having power over SBA officers.

On the other hand, many law students don't have to worry about being called God's gift to public relations, and the ASUI's chosen method of combating such attitudes is, unfortunately, through the budget process. A few gestures of good will and an

a childish issue

Editor:

The Student Bar Association's concerns for fair representation and open disclosure of political forums seems to have completely escaped you, despite the fact that you were present at the March 22, 1989 senate meeting when I expressed these problems.

Your editorial accusations of "childish antics" on behalf of the SBA, and of "babysitting duties" by elected representatives indicates true lack of understanding as to what the real issues are.

The ASUI student government controls well over $500,000 a year in annual distributions of student fees. While you may believe the SBA threw a "temper tantrum" because they believe the student government failed to adequately disclose their intentions with that money, I believe most people would and are legitimately concerned with where their money is being spent.

Had you listened to the real issues presented, you would have understood that the ASUI student government is acting at best very questionably. Furthermore, when ASUI President Tina Kagi stood up and requested that no action on the impeachment take place, you should have asked, "What has she got to hide," and "What really is going on here?"

Had you asked these questions, Mr. Erickson, you may have discovered that there are some real potential abuses of power and discretion at stake here on behalf of our student government. I sincerely hope that you will see the very "grown up and adult" issues at stake and make your inquiries accordingly.

SBA should apologize to living groups

Editor:

Rarely have I seen an event which reeked of such selfish intentions as the article of impeachment filed last week against ASUI Sen. Steve Smart. This act stands to show why pork barrel politics are nearly impossible to eliminate.

In its accusations against Sen. Smart, the Student Bar Association states, "As a duly elected official of the ASUI Senate...and the designated representative to the College of Law, Senator Steven G. Smart owed an affirmative duty to...represent and advocate interests beneficial to the College of Law."

I take it there is no provision in the SBA's rule book for when the College of Law's interests collide head-on with the interests of the rest of the university's students. I hate to tell you this Ms. Brennan, but Sen. Smart owes the same duty to his living groups he represents, and the members of his living groups outnumber your organization.

At the senate meeting last week, SBA President Jean Brennan lectured the senators on representative democracy and how they had failed in that respect. Strange, but I always thought representative democracy was supposed to act in the best interests of the majority, not those of a vocal and self-serving minority. Last time I took a math class, 9,000 UI students still outnumbered 282 SBA members.

I am more than curious what the SBA needs the $3,100 from the ASUI for in the first place (much less than the more than $8,000 originally requested). Doesn't it seem like an organization that can afford the legal advice to fight this issue already has too much money? On the other hand the money the ASUI must spend on counsel will end up being paid for by all students. All ASUI expenses should be deducted from the SBA's allotment for next year.

Sen. Smart's representation of Borah Hall this last semester has been superior. The SBA's attack on Smart is an insult to all of his living groups. Ms. Brennan, you owe an apology to all members of these living groups. Of course that may not be in the SBA's "best interest," and I would be shocked to ever see such an apology.

President, Borah Hall

Are women what they wear?

Editor:

A recent alleged rape preliminary hearing in Moscow brought forth some extremely disturbing facts that have long been true but unpublicized about the ancient feelings in Idaho about women. Few rape cases are brought to trial because of the fear of the ugly publicity that is attendant to those cases. This case proved that the fear is very real and alive and healthy in local courts.

The case in question was well publicized in the Idahonian, with the testimony being carefully quoted as it transpired in the courtroom. The gist of a day and a half's testimony was that a young woman visited Moscow with a girlfriend and eventually went to a football recruiting party with the roommate of a campus friend. The woman claimed she was raped by someone not at the party but did identify him. The police, hospital and doctor all did their assigned tasks when the rape was reported. The preliminary hearing was held and Prosecutor Craig Mosman presented the evidence. The defense, represented by Ronald Landeck, brought numerous witnesses including members of the UI football team, a cheerleader and another young woman to testify that the visiting woman was of dubious character, definitely not a person any of them would ordinarily associate with.

One young man testified that he tried to have sex with her and, upon her refusal, he swore at her and left. In short, the defending attorney did an excellent job without having to work very hard of proving that this woman deserved to be raped because she was asking for it. He questioned her extensively also on the description of the apartment and sofa where the alleged rape took place. The whole case was based on the fact that if a woman does not meet the approval of the group with whom she is associating she is fair game for any rapist. The testimony of the young men and women showed that they did indeed agree with this. Several young men offered her money and made lewd remarks at her at the party, and the other women testifying agreed that she was to be scorned in her dress and behavior.

At the end of the testimony Judge Stephen Calhoun did not bind the defendant over on the grounds that the woman did not remember enough during her testimony to make a case.

There are several terrible lessons that women must learn from this. When you are dressing to go out do not wear any of the clothes advertised in magazines and on television. Party dresses, cocktail waitress uniforms, jogging shorts and summer clothes in Idaho are all so revealing that you are asking for it and want it. Do not drink with anyone you do not know, because even if they are drinking illegally and allegedly doing drugs, if you are raped you do not belong, and they will all attempt to educate senators about the valuable services and educational experiences law school programs offer, could go a long way in smoothing the rocky road to adequate funding.

The Student Bar Association continually shouts the names of their favorite candidates from the clocktower during election time, alienating the candidates that go sans an endorsement. These shunned candidates get elected anyway and can't wait to turn down law school funding. Wouldn't it make more sense to stop endorsing candidates and make efforts to work with whomever gets elected.

Mistakes and misinformation have been present on both sides of the controversy.

But the bottom line is that the programs SBA seeks funding for are an integral part of a well rounded legal education at this state's only law school. Hopefully after the curtain closes on impeachment proceedings, the law students can hop off their pedestal, senators can climb out of their sandbox, and both sides can sit down as adults and create a solution to this perennial problem.

But in the meantime, if anyone has a hankerin' for a fireworks display and can't wait until July, try attending next week's ASUI Senate meeting. And if you want to get someone's attention ...

Idaho's Cook still learning the ropes

By DERON KOSOFF
Staff Writer

To be involved in sports, you don't have to be an athlete. But you do need an interest in the game and a desire for excitement.

Just ask Dave Cook, UI's 26-year-old, energetic sports information director.

"That's the nice thing about the job. You don't have typical days," Cook said. "In this job, there's always something different."

Cook's office in the Kibbie Dome is a nucleus for all UI sports information. Media releases, media guides, statistics — you name it, Cook either writes or prints it.

Although Cook's job entails traveling, meeting new people and enjoying some of the best seats in the house, it does have a down side.

According to Cook, the busy season (when several sports events take place at the same time) is frustrating. Cook said he sets out to accomplish certain tasks during a day or a week, but those

Purdy leads Lady Vandals

UI tracksters have several bright spots in loss to WSU

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

The UI women's track and field team was pounded 102-37 by Washington State University in Saturday's Inland Empire Invitational at Pullman's Mooberry Track, but several team members had some bright performances in their first outdoor meet of the season.

UI senior Bobbi Purdy provided some bright spots with her performances in the long jump and 100-meter hurdles. Purdy took first in the long jump with a 18'-0" leap and first in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 14.89.

Purdy also helped Idaho to a first place win in the 400-meter relay ran by Kim Gillas, Purdy, Anne Scott, and Caryn Choate-Deeds.

Choate-Deeds also placed well, taking second in the 100 meters with a time of 12.46 and third in the 200 meters with a time of 25.67.

Gillas picked up a second place finish in the 400 meters with a time of 58.80. Michele Candray placed third in the triple jump with a 33'-7 1/4" performance and fifth in the long jump with a 16'-6" bound.

Scott easily beat the field with a 1:04.63 run in the 400 meter hurdles, Anna Foreman placed third in the 3000 meters with a 10:53.8 time, Stacey Asplund jumped 5'-4" in the high jump for a fourth place finish and Jean Thompson was fifth in the 800 meters with a 2:25.7 time.

Shawna Ostrem also finished strong for UI in the javelin with a second place finish on a 135'-2" throw.

The Lady Vandals also managed a strong finish in the 1,600 meter relay, placing second behind WSU with a time of 4:03.19.

The Lady Vandals will take next weekend off and then travel to Washington for the Spokane Invitational April 8.

Idaho rugby beaten by WSU in mudfest

By Russ Blaggne
Sports Writer

After losing their chance to attend the Western Collegiate Tournament, the UI Rugby Club's bad luck continued as they dropped their final league game to rival Washington State University.

UI was beaten 7-3 in what Coach Matt Hansen called a very good but slow game.

"Though we were beaten, we played a very tough game. They scored first, but we answered right back. The field was very muddy which slowed the action down, but it also kept the score down," Hansen said.

The poor field conditions also cause several injuries.

"The conditions not only slowed the game down, but also caused many more injuries than we are used to seeing," Hansen said.

According to UI player Paul Reisenburg, the game was rough. UI's Dave Bear broke his nose and a WSU player, just in his second game, broke both bones in his lower leg, Reisenburg said.

With the loss to archrival WSU, the rugby club finishes off its league games with a record of 4-4-1. The club still has several non-league games remaining, including its next matchup in Missoula followed by a home game against Snake River.

Hansen said that he hopes the team finishes year on a good note since five team members, including Hansen, are graduating.

"We are going to lose a lot of leadership after this season, but we have good depth in the rest of the team and should do well," Hansen said.

Golf course open to public

Despite long winter course in good shape

By SEAN MCGOVERN
Contributing Writer

The UI Golf Course opened in mid-March and has remained busy as students take advantage of warmer weather and low student rates.

Despite a long winter, the course received little damage from snow.

"Overall, the greens and fairways are in good shape. There are a few signs of winter — mold on the greens, but it will grow out," said assistant professional Greg Bowen.

Bowen expressed concern over lack of respect for the course in recent years. "Our main worries are divots and ball marks," he said. "Students don't understand the importance of replacing divots and fixing ball marks, especially this early in the season when the course is so wet."

According to Bowen, the course receives a lot of play, mostly from students — many of whom are from Washington State University.

"Even though this is a UI course, we offer full student benefits to WSU," Bowen said.

The UI course offers a driving range that was recently reconstructed. The top tee box was removed and leveled out, and the entire range was then replanted. The range is now longer and wider, allowing golfers to hit with drivers and fairway woods. Before the improvements were made, golfers could only use irons on the driving range.

The course also has a new video camera which will be used to record individuals during golf lessons.

Students may purchase a semester pass for $55, a summer pass for $100 or a year pass for $165. The course also offers low student green fees. Students pay $5 for nine holes of golf and $6.50 for 18 holes.

Beiser urges students to take advantage of Outdoor Program fun

By KARA ANN OLSON
Contributing Writer

With spring approaching and the abundant North Idaho wilderness at your doorstep, now is the time to take advantage of the ASUI Outdoor Program and Rental Center, says Program Coordinator Mike Beiser.

"Living in North Idaho, people must realize that the largest wilderness area in the lower 48 (states) is right in their backyard," Beiser said. "And with the available resources and local knowledge right here at the center, now is the time to benefit from both."

Beiser urges students looking for something to do on the weekends to take advantage of their time and try something different.

The rental center provides all the necessary equipment for any outdoor activity, including equipment to take students from winter to spring sports.

New equipment available for both seasons includes snowboards and the recently popular sailboards.

"The snowfall this year has provided an extended winter sports season as well as what promises to be some of the best water activity in years," Beiser said.

Both water and mountain activities are scheduled for spring. Beginning kayaking classes start April 5, with a field session on the Lower Salmon April 15-16 and April 22-23. A paddle raft trip and a sailboat trip are also scheduled in April.

Two workshops are planned for beginning and instructional rock climbing, with the first workshop March 30 and a field session April 1.

Students can plan their own trips or participate in the many instructional activities available through the Outdoor Program.

Weekend getaways and additional trips and activities are scheduled for March and April. Students should stop by the Outdoor Program Office in the SUB basement for additional information.

tasks are virtually impossible to finish when he must also deal with requests from coaches, the media and the public.

"When you get a chance to get out of town," Cook said, laughing, "you get out of town."

Cook said the biggest obstacle in his job is dealing with a tight budget and sparse help, which sometimes limits what he can do. He also considers himself his biggest obstacle.

"I'm still learning, and it's difficult at times to please everybody," Cook said. "It's frustrating to me because I really do want to make everybody happy."

Although sparse, Cook said his help is excellent and that he loves working with people who are motivated to learn. Chris Schulte, a sports writer for the Idahonian and Rance Pugmire, the assistant sports information director at St. John's University in New York, both worked in Cook's office before taking their respective positions.

"The most fun about the job is working with the students," Cook said.

Cook received his two-year degree and then transferred to Central Washington University. He geared most of his studies toward becoming a sports information director and graduated with a journalism degree in 1985.

Then came the good breaks.

In 1985, Eastern Washington University needed someone to fill the SID position for one year, and Cook got the job. The experience proved valuable, and Idaho hired Cook as their SID in 1986.

"I've been lucky," Cook said. "I've been with some pretty successful programs."

Cook said he wants to get his master's degree someday, maybe in education. He enjoys dealing with students and sharing his knowledge.

Triathlon coming in April

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

Campus Recreation's annual Palouse Spring Triathlon is almost a month away, but that doesn't mean you shouldn't start thinking about it if you plan to enter. In fact, you should probably be past the thinking stage. You should be training for it.

The triathlon, which will be held April 22, is a three-sport event consisting of a 1650 yard swim, a 26-mile bike and a 6.2 mile run.

"If the event is anything like it's been in the past, it should be very competitive," said Deborah Norum, assistant director of UI Campus Recreation. "We had 104 participants last year and 120 the year before that."

The event is open to all UI students, faculty and staff, with limited openings to the public. Individuals can participate in six categories: women's individual, men's individual, faculty/staff men's and women's individual and men's and women's relay. The person or team completing the course in the lowest elapsed time is the winner in each category.

The swimming event will consist of three heats at 7:30 a.m., 8:15 a.m. and 9 a.m. Following the 1650-yard swim, participants will exit the Swim Center and start the biking course which will travel west to Pullman, north on the airport road for two clockwise loops, east on the Pullman Highway, and return to the Kibbie Dome via Perimeter Drive, Rayburn Ave., and the Dome sidewalk.

After the 26-mile biking stint, the running event will begin on the Kibbie Dome sidewalk, proceed to the south side of the Dome through the parking lot, run north on Perimeter Drive to the intersection of the Pullman Highway, cross between the University Inn and the Palouse Empire Mall, continue north on Harding Road to KRPL Road and then retrace the route back to the Kibbie Dome to complete the 6.2 mile run. According to the official entry form, participants do not have to run the course. They can also "walk, skip or crawl."

All Palouse Spring Triathlon entries must be received before 5 p.m. April 14. Forms can be picked up at the UI Campus Recreation Office. There is a $15 fee for individuals and a $45 fee for teams.

Intramural co-rec tennis this weekend

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

The UI intramural department's co-rec tennis tournament scheduled for this weekend is open to students, faculty, staff and their spouses.

The tournament will be single elimination, and all matches will be two of three sets.

The matches will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday. All participants should check in at the PEB tennis courts before 1 p.m. Participants can either enter the competition at the start of the tournament Saturday or before Friday at 5 p.m. in Room 203 of Memorial Gym.

In case of inclement weather, the first round will be postponed until Sunday. Those who advance past the first day of competition are responsible for arranging their remaining matches.

The $2.50 per person entry fee includes a can of tennis balls which each competitor can pick up at the first round match. One new can will be used in each match, and the winner will get the unused can of tennis balls in advancing to the next match.

"We're trying to get a big turnout for the tennis tournament," said Campus Recreation Assistant Brian Williams—Rice. "There should be some good competition."

PROMOTIONAL GIRL. Madonna's latest album, Like a Prayer, has caused much controversy as it continues to climb the charts. (FILE PHOTO)

Like a promotion

Madonna offends nose not ear

By JON ERICKSON
Editor

† he newest album from Madonna, Like a Prayer, stinks — literally.

If you are a true Madonna fan and haven't already purchased the album, then a warning is in order: don't open the record, tape or compact disk in any small area. You'll be overwhelmed by a smell not unlike the soap aisle of your favorite grocery store.

That's right, the Queen of the Video Screen has become the Queen of Promotional Gim-micks. Her latest album has been obnoxiously scented. According to MTV News, Madonna had incense added to the glue used in the jacket's production. However, the Spokesman Review reports the smell is actually an aphrodisiac.

What was Madonna thinking? Did she really expect us to open the cassette, pop it into the "boom box," hold the cover under our mate's nose, and be ready for a hot and heavy evening?

The jacket also contains a warning. Titled "The Facts About AIDS," it informed the purchaser of ways to prevent acquiring the virus. Perhaps Madonna was really concerned about the effects of the aphrodisiac and felt a disclaimer was needed.

Even though she conceptual-ize a trendy jacket cover and loads of gimmicks, Like a Prayer is definitely a more mature Madonna. With a few songs like "Dear Jessie" and "Act of Contrition," she even goes out on a limb and creates some really uncommercial presentations.

But not to fear, the 11-song album is full of the music that made Madonna an international superstar. Yet at the same time, she has given us something different enough to keep us interested and entertained. Several of the tracks seem to reveal the anguish of her life, and throughout the album religious references and metaphors abound.

† No prayers are needed for the first release and title track, "Like a Prayer." It's already broken Billboard Top 10 and is headed straight to number one. The controversy surrounding the song's video hasn't hurt either. There is nothing like a pulled Pepsi commercial, outraged Italians and cross burnings to peak interest and help sales. If anyone ever figures out the "Like a Prayer" video, please let the world know. † "Express Yourself" contradicts Madonna's "material girl" image. On the Like a Virgin

Symphony plans season finale

By DONNA PRISBREY
Staff Writer

The Washington Idaho Symphony will perform its final concerts of the season April 10 at Moscow's Nazarene Church and April 11 at the Lewiston High School Auditorium.

Highlighting the concerts will be Pines of Rome by Italian composer Ottorino Respighi. This suite consists of music that Respighi wrote for a theater production and movements that describe the ancient Roman highways running through Italy.

In an unusual yet Italian twist, Pines of Rome features a recording of birds chirping. Six brass players from the University of Idaho will play in the balcony behind the audience to create an echo effect, a favorite trick of Italian composers.

"The piece is moving and very powerful," Conductor Keating Johnson said.

The symphony will also perform Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy's Violin Concerto, Op. 64, which features guest violinist Sergiu Schwartz. Internationally acclaimed, Schwartz has studied at the Rubin Academy of Music in Tel-Aviv and at the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

The symphony's third piece is L'Arlesienne, a suite by French composer Georges Bizet.

"This is the last (concert) of the season," Johnson said. "It is the most difficult, but it should be performed the best."

The Washington Idaho Symphony season runs from September through April.

The professional, community-based symphony includes student musicians from the UI, Washington State University and Moscow and Pullman high schools. Professors from both universities and other adults from Moscow, Pullman, Lewiston and Clarkston also play in the symphony.

Tickets for the concert are available at Ticket Express and at the door for $7.50 (adults), $6.50 (seniors), $4 (college students) and $2 (youth).

Boffo clueless on life

Review by JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Entertainment Editor

Ever feel like you're missing the whole point of life? That there is some strange order to things and you just haven't caught on? You're not alone.

Mister Boffo: Unclear on the Concept ($6.95, Little, Brown and Company) is the first collection of comics by Joe Martin. Martin's strip, Mister Boffo, appears in more than 100 newspapers nationwide, and if his book is any indication of what he puts out every day, he's in for continued success.

Mister Boffo is reminiscent of Gary Larson's The Far Side. Most strips are one-frame depictions of humans at their dumbest. Such as a man sitting in a plane with the wing on the other side of the plane in flames. He proudly announces to the rest of the passengers, "HA! We've still got our wing!" Or the optometrist slamming the patient into the eye chart screaming, "There pinhead! Does it still look like a 'B'!!?"

The people in Mister Boffo just seem to miss the whole concept of life. They may have missed the point as to why they are working in their chosen profession or as to how the world works.

"Earl believed fast-moving trains, like woodland creatures, were more afraid of him than he was of them...but not for long." (Picture Earl running confidently onto the tracks.)

Martin carries this sense of cluelessness through his caricatures of naive-looking people. Often he puts no expression on the faces ... like people who don't know quite how they should react to the situations at hand ... like people who are simply unclear on the concept.

album, "Material Girl" offers the advice that "the boy with the cold hard cash is always Mr. Right." Yet "Express Yourself" says, "You don't need diamond rings or 18-karat gold ... Make him express how he feels and maybe then you'll know your love is real." Maybe Madonna has discovered her $30-million-plus a year earnings can't buy her true love. "Express Yourself" has a good beat and is easy to dance to, and will probably return Madonna to the top of the dance charts.

† Why on earth Madonna teamed up with Prince for "Love Song" we may never know. But a duet by two of the top recording artists of the decade would seem a profitable idea. While both are credited with producing the song, it sounds like Prince gagged and tied Madonna, and wrote the song all by himself. Oh so typical of Prince, we have a repetitive monotone bass line, a bit of blues guitar and trademark sounds of orgasmic relief. † "Till Death Do Us Part" appears to be the tabloid story of Madonna's marriage set to music. It's no secret that Madonna's marriage to photographer-basher Sean Penn was rocky and these two songs seem to confirm it. The ballad says, "The bruises, they will fade ... She takes the keys, He breaks the door ... He takes a drink, she goes inside, He starts to scream, the vases fly."

† With "Dear Jessie," Madonna presents the listener with an unusual treat. Images of frolicking maidens, medieval English fairs, warm spring days and childhood fantasies are woven throughout this song. Orchestral accompaniment, blaring horns and violins perfectly accentuate Madonna's cooing voice. The "boy toy" has somehow produced a refreshingly festive and uplifting tune.

† In "Act of Contrition," Madonna "recites" this Catholic prayer with a gospel backup group accompanied by a screeching electric guitar. According to the album's cover it was produced "by the powers that be." She softly sings, "I reserve, I reserve, I reserve, I reserve." A little bit louder she sings, "I reserve, I have a reservation." A lot louder now she declares, "I have a reservation." She then screams, "What do you mean it isn't in the computer?" This song could almost qualify for airplay on KUOI-FM. Yap, it is that weird.

The top hits off this album during the next year will probably be "Cherish," the "Love Song" duet with Prince, "Like a Prayer" and "Express Yourself." But knowing Madonna's popularity, chances are a few more songs will make it onto KZFN's weekly top request countdown.

So go ahead and lay out a few bucks for Like a Prayer. If you do it now, you can enjoy the music before it gets massively overplayed on the radio and MTV.

Liaisons earns Oscar nominations

Review by L.M. KREPEL
Staff Writer

In Dangerous Liaisons Glenn Close once again portrays a cunning, imbalanced, sexually manipulative woman. But unlike Alex from Fatal Attraction, the Marquise de Merteuil finds an adversary worthy of her machinations.

Set in late 18th century France, Dangerous Liaisons portrays a love-hate relationship between two nobles that escalates into an all-out war that takes no prisoners.

The sexual antics of the Marquise de Merteuil and the Vicomte de Valmont (John Malkovich) at first seem a rather harmless game. They compete at collecting lovers among the nobles of Paris, most of whom have nothing more productive to do than spend hours being dressed in costumes that could have sparked the French Revolution with their decadence alone. These adventures lose their humorous aspect, however, when the game goes beyond persuading hypocritical prudes to overcome their virtuous facades. Merteuil challenges Valmont to seduce a woman known for her religious convictions, Mme. de Tourvel (Michelle Pfeiffer). Causing Tourvel's infidelity is Valmont's greatest obstacle yet, and as a reward he is promised a night with Merteuil. Tourvel is eventually worn down by Valmont's seemingly irresistible charm, but matters are complicated by the development of strange feelings on Valmont's part.

"Close is wonderfully poised and believably wicked."

At this point Dangerous Liaisons becomes a morality play. The emptiness and destruction the two main characters portray show how fruitless life is without love. Sound heavy-handed? It is, but marvelous work by the entire cast makes even this cliched storyline worthwhile.

Close, who garners an Oscar nomination for her performance, is wonderfully poised and believably wicked. She lets glimpses of her submerged emotions escape the cool, calculating exterior just enough to reassure the audience that there is a real person behind the armor. These strategically placed moments when Close lowers her shield are the keys to understanding the character, and Close once again shows her gift of walking the fine line between stiffness and emotionality.

Malkovich as Valmont brilliantly manages the transition from heartless deflowerer of virgins to anguished and frustrated lover. He is roguishly lovable at the start of the movie, unexcusably cruel at the midpoint, and pitied and possibly noble at the conclusion. He should have received an Oscar nomination for enabling the viewer to see the conflicting emotions which torment Valmont.

Dangerous Liaisons earns its Oscar nomination through its lavish production, tightly filmed encounter scenes, and superb acting. While the traditional, morally acceptable ending may leave something to be desired, the technical and emotional aspects make this film well worth the critical acclaim it has received.
