

Police investigate possible date rape of UI student

By JULIE YOUNG
Staff Writer

The Moscow Police Department is investigating a rape that may have occurred at a campus fraternity Sunday.

A complaint was filed with the police Wednesday afternoon, but until formal charges are brought against a suspect, police are withholding the names of both the alleged victim and the accused man.

"The alleged rape occurred in the early morning hours and it appears to be an acquaintance-type rape," said Dale Mickelsen, MPD community relations specialist.

Mickelsen said police officers are conducting interviews to determine whether a crime had been committed, according to Idaho state law. The incident allegedly occurred at the Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity.

The man accused is not a UI student, but he was a guest of a fraternity alumnus, said Lance Bethke, Phi Kappa Tau president. "He is not associated with the (fraternity) house in any way," Bethke said.

The alleged victim was a University of Idaho student, said Mike Smole, Phi Kappa Tau vice president.

Bethke said that he heard out about the alleged rape Wednesday on a local radio station. Fraternity members then contacted the police department and Student Advisory Services concerning the incident.

"We've made every effort possible to help the police find out what happened and are cooperating fully with them," Bethke said.

Consumption, arrests down as drinking age goes up

Editor's Note: This is the first in a two-part series on Idaho's new 21-year minimum drinking age, which takes full effect next week.

By BENJAMIN LONG
Senior Staff Writer

The wait is over. All those pseudo-adults who narrowly missed the cut-off date when the Idaho legislature bent to federal demands and raised the drinking age two years ago are turning 21.

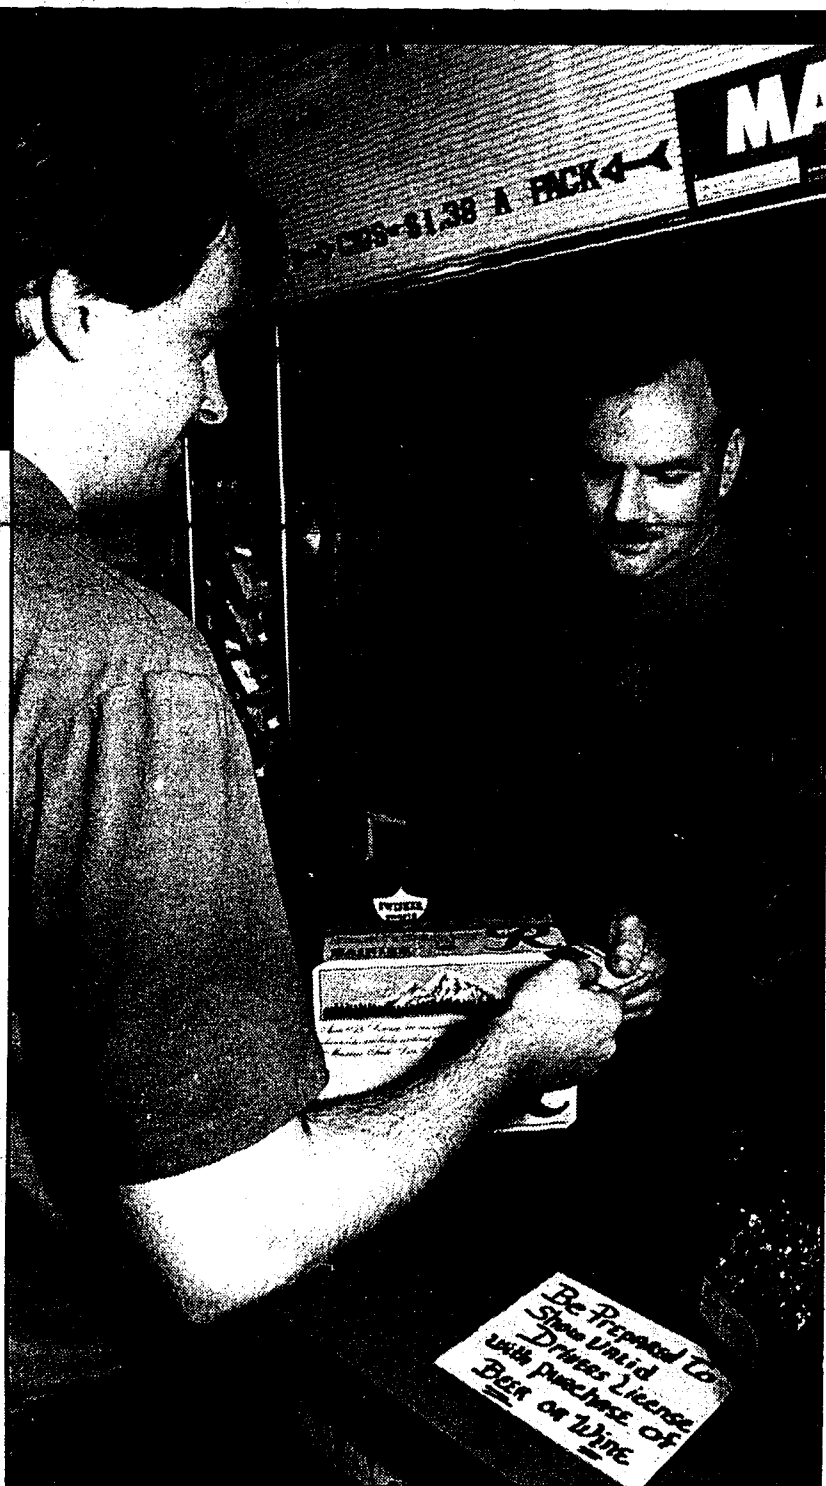

The infamous "grandfather clause," which allowed exceptions to the new minimum age to those who were already at least 19, runs out Monday, and Tuesday no one under 21 will legally drink alcohol in Idaho.

Predictions about how much effect the change would have to Moscow's economy may have been overrated, said Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Michael Judah. In 1986, chamber officials estimated local merchants would lose $2.5 million each year because of the new law.

"That was probably overstated, although I couldn't say for sure," Judah said. "That is a hell of a lot of money."

Since the ruling, four local drinking establishments — Bogart's on Highway 8, The Spruce on Main Street, Mort's Club on 5th Street, and Mirage on 6th — have gone belly-up. And those that have not been converted to office space or retail outlets stand empty.

While closing and opening bars is nothing new in Moscow, Mort's and

The Spruce were among the most traditional UI hangouts, with memories among alumni long-since graduated. The new drinking age was at least a contributing factor in the demise of those bars, Judah said.

Consumption figures of hard alcohol dropped by nearly 4,000 gallons in Latah county between fiscal years 1987 and 1988, said Claude Rogers, accountant for the Idaho Liquor Dispensary. Between June 30, 1986 and July 1, 1987, 48,839 gallons of liquor totaling $1,718,500 were sold in the county, he said. In fiscal year 1988, the total was down to 44,312 gallons, worth $1,544,023. The figures do not include most beer and wine sales, he said.

Meanwhile, a sizable drop in

Senate keeps fee hike proposal off student ballots

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

Students may not make an advisory vote on proposed fee increases, the ASUI Senate decided Wednesday night.

In an 8-4 vote, senators defeated a proposal by ASUI President Tina Kagi to include an advisory referendum on next Wednesday's general election ballot.

Thursday Kagi began circulating petitions requiring that the referendum be added to next week's ballot. If about 800 students sign the petitions by Tuesday, the measure could be included on the ballot, she said.

"I really feel that the students deserve the right to vote on this issue," she said. "Fifty dollars is a big increase, it is a lot of money for some students to pay."

Wednesday night ASUI Sen. Patty McCray said she felt the matter was too complicated for students to understand in the short time before the election.

"We have more access (to information) as senators," McCray said. "The students don't have the access, and they don't have the time."

After Wednesday night's vote, Sen. Jeff Friel said that defeating the referendum implied that the students were too stupid to vote on the fee increase.

"You should be ashamed," Friel said. "If you're saying that, then you shouldn't be sitting here, because they (the students) aren't smart enough to elect you either."

Kagi submitted a five-page memorandum to the senate addressed to all UI students. In the memo, she stated her opinions about the fee increase and advised the senate to approve the referendum bill.

"Even those students who are 'uninformed' on the proposed fee increase deserve the opportunity to voice their opinions — these students would be paying the additional money along with everyone else," Kagi said in her letter.

Kagi also said in the letter that UI Financial Vice President Joe Geiger did not support inclusion of the referendum on the ballot because he felt that students were uninformed and would vote the increase down.

Last week Geiger told a regional newspaper that students were in favor of the fee increase and that the administration was merely acting as technical support.

Kagi and several senators also expressed concerns about how administrators informed students of fee-raising intentions.

Kagi said in her letter, "By surprising both students and (Idaho) Board (of Education) members with a dramatic jump in fees, the UI did not violate any rules, however, they acted in a manner that was extremely discourteous to students."

Sen. Jason Albrecht commented on what many senators referred to as the "sales-job" they received from administrators, asking, "if they wanted to be

90 percent of campus rapists know their victims

By JULIE YOUNG
Staff Writer

More than 80 percent of the victims of sexual assaults know their assailants, according to information released by the University of Idaho Women's Center.

Statistics are even higher on college campuses, where as many as 90 percent of all victims know their assailants. And despite this university's rural location, which protects it from much of the crime that plagues large campuses, acquaintance sexual assault is a problem here.

The April/May Women's Center Newsletter reported that by mid-March, 10 students had come in for help because they had been sexually assaulted. The newsletter reports that the number is an increase from last year's figures, but does not release a specific number for last year. The reports were made since Aug. 1, 1988, said Betsy Thomas, Women's Center director.

Women's Center officials say they aren't letting the problem go unnoticed. When Thomas came to the UI in 1984, she started educating students about acquaintance sexual assault.

Under past training programs, officials visited living groups and gave presentations about acquaintance sexual assault. The program began as a psychology research project under the direction of Mark Covey. It has been run in connection with Alternatives to Violence.

According to Thomas, officials wanted to find out "what difference did education make?"

Today students give the presentations, usually in teams of two, with a Women's Center staff member to supervise and to answer any difficult questions.

The purpose of the program is to inform university students about the myths and facts of acquaintance sexual assault, the legal aspects, the emotional impact on the victims and what options and resources are available to help them.

One myth, according to Women's Center literature, is that all rapists are driven by sexual desires.

drinking-related arrests among 18- to 20-year olds by the Moscow Police Department may also be partially attributed to the new law, said officer Dale Mickelsen.

According to police records, the number of DUI arrests for that age group has gone from 40 in 1986 to 27 in 1988. For other liquor law violations, such as use of false identification and open container violations, the number of arrests dropped from 131 in 1986 to 68 in 1988.

The drop was even more dramatic in arrests of those under 18 years old for liquor violations: 111 in 1986 to 47 in 1988. But Mickelsen said the new law is probably not the only factor influencing these statistics.

"On a lot of those (false representation of age violations), unless the bar calls us, we never hear about it," he said. "A change in one bar's policy could significantly color those results. It's hard to keep track of."

Changes in manpower and enforcement priority and philosophy also could impact the numbers, he said. But the decrease of the former flow of WSU students into Moscow bars could result in fewer drunk drivers on the road, Mickelsen said.

"There have been significantly fewer numbers of people coming to Moscow from Pullman at night," he said. "All you can do is assume there are fewer drunk drivers."

SBA drops charges against Smart

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

Impeachment charges against Sen. Steve Smart were dropped Wednesday night after the ASUI Senate accepted a proposal for settlement from the Student Bar Association and the Idaho Law Review.

Under the terms of the agreement, the senate repealed the ASUI budget that was passed March 8. The senate will reconsider the entire budget at next Wednesday's meeting.

Also in accordance with the settlement agreement, the senate will have to take steps to amend the ASUI Constitution to reflect the requirements of the Idaho Open Meeting law.

Smart had been charged with acts of misfeasance, malfeasance and nonfeasance by the SBA and the Idaho Law Review March 22. If the settlement proposal had not been accepted by the senate, the impeachment procedures would have proceeded.

Prior to Wednesday night's vote, ASUI Sen. Brian Casey said he felt the senate should accept the proposal, not because of guilt but because of the waste of time and money.

"This is the students' money," Casey said. "We shouldn't waste it any more if there's another way to do it."

Sen. Jason Albrecht said that he was in complete opposition to repealing the budget.

"It's frustrating — you come to see exactly what they (the SBA) wanted in the end," Albrecht said. "They didn't want an impeachment or were worried about the Sunshine Laws. They were worried about the money."

At next Wednesday's meeting, the senate will consider the original budget as recommended by the Finance Committee March 4.

The original budget recommended $3,500 for the SBA and $1,200 for the Idaho Law Review. The budget that was finally approved allotted the SBA $3,100 and the Idaho Law Review $800. The final budget also contained two bill riders that stated the senate would no longer fund colleges and/or their organizations after fiscal year 1990. SBA was specifically mentioned in one of the riders.

extremely effective, why did they start so late?"

The plan in question calls for the increase of resident student matriculation fees by $50 per semester. Non-resident tuition could increase $100 per semester, and graduate fees by $33.

The plan calls for the first $300,000 of the $1 million increase to cover the cost of maintaining existing operations. The remaining $700,000 would indirectly address accreditation issues.

Geiger and UI Academic Vice President Tom Bell have asked students to respond by mid-April.

Let students decide for themselves, put fee increase question on ballots

Hereby let it be known, you are too uninformed to make major decisions.

That's what the ASUI Senate decided Wednesday night.

In a 8-4 vote, the senate overwhelmingly decided not to give you the chance to vote on a UI administration plan to raise student fees. While this plan may cost the typical student $50 more a semester, ASUI senators don't think you have enough facts to make an educated decision. Instead, the 13 of them should make it for you.

Senators argued that they had been elected to make decisions, and they can adequately measure student opinion on the issue without a referendum on next week's ASUI elections ballot.

Wait a minute. Are senators really able to judge the overall student opinion on a issue as divided as this one? For the past several weeks, several senators have been internally reprimanded for not actively visiting their assigned on-campus living groups. If they haven't visited their constituents, how can they judge student opinion?

Then consider the fact that more than 50 percent of UI students, because they live off campus, will not be visited by a senator. How does the senate plan to measure the off-campus opinion on the fee increase?

While ASUI senators are elected to make decisions, very few students elect them wanting them to decide the fate of student fees.

With a regularly scheduled general election next week, the senate should have given you the power of choice, not taken it away from you.

— Jon Erickson

Guests at the upcoming Parents Weekend Awards Assembly and next month's graduation ceremonies will be surrounded by a rainbow of color, thanks to the UI Student Home Economics Association.

Led by President Deanna Morgan and Adviser Laura Miller, the group has already spent nearly 100 hours creating 18-foot Centennial celebration banners.

The banners will represent each of the UI's colleges and were designed by Ed Chavez, Kibbie Dome manager.

According to Miller, the students plan to spend most of this weekend completing their part of the project. Once the group is finished, each college's name and the university's logo will be silkscreened onto the banners.

For their work in making the Centennial a more visible celebration — good for you, Student Home Economic Association members.

Drinking 'games' aren't appropriate

Editor:

I am writing about the "study-break" article titled "UI drinking games desired." I think this represents poor taste and irresponsible behavior on the part of the Argonaut. It does not recognize the growing awareness that drinking is not a "game."

Irresponsible drinking causes illness, heartache, death and oil spill disasters. An attitude that promotes drinking as a "game" ignores the responsibility incumbent on people who make the choice to use alcohol.

It is my opinion that a responsible university newspaper supports responsible personal behavior. I urge the Argonaut staff to re-evaluate their role in the university community.

seem to have all of the facts, why don't you tell us who was to blame then?

Also, Anderson said, "Maxwell, the next time you make an allegation, remember to have the facts." Well Mr. Anderson, I really do apologize for not being a senior in entomology, but I do know what a cockroach looks like, and so do the five other people who were sitting at the table with me.

I had a good purpose for writing my editorial Mr. Anderson. I wanted to let the students of the UI know just what had happened. You, on the other hand, seemed to have no other purpose for writing your letter to the editor other than to give everyone the impression that I am a liar. That isn't too cool. I would feel pretty much like a jerk if I were you.

Argonaut lacks courage, says SBA

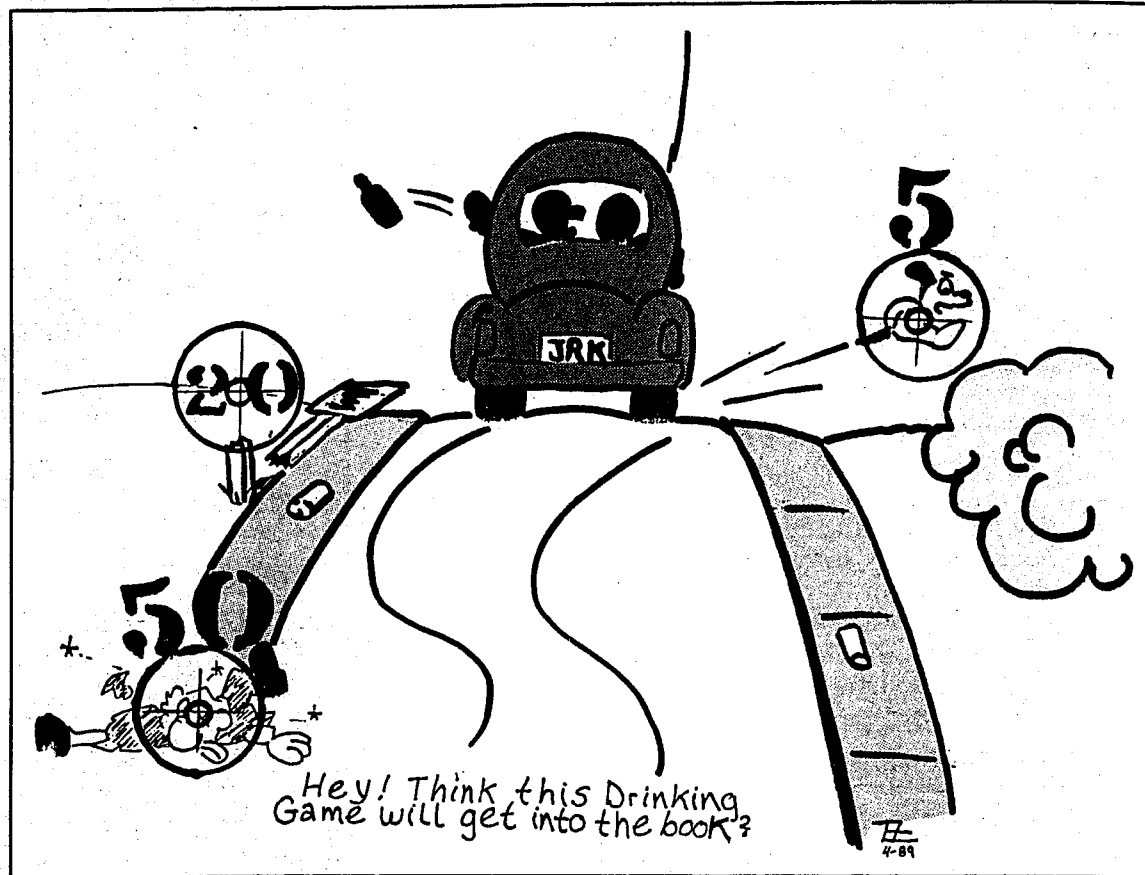

Editor:

Reading the Argonaut the past few weeks has taught me what it is like to live where the only newspaper is government-controlled ("ASUI-sponsored newspaper" per Jon Erickson's April 4, 1989 editorial). Even at my age, I naively hoped for more from our student journalists. Here are the facts as presented by the SBA and the Idaho Law Review in a public meeting and which were not reported although one reporter from the Argonaut tape-recorded the meeting.

In 1974, Idaho passed an "open meeting" law which states that "the formation of public policy is public business and shall not be conducted in secret." Any time a legislative body "deliberates towards a decision on any matter," that body is holding a meeting. The law requires that minutes be taken at meetings. No minutes have ever been taken at the Tuesday night pre-session meetings of the ASUI Senate and, as a result, those meetings are unlawful.

The ASUI Senators "deliberated towards a decision" about the entire budget and about the

A. Does Coke try to reconcile its differences with Pepsi? Do Ford and GM try to bury the hatchet? Why take action when it's easier to sustain and perpetuate the animosity which is as much an Idaho tradition as ivy on the Administration Building? Q. I work at a tanning salon. I've heard a lot of controversy and talk about something called the "Sunshine Laws." Tell me what I need to know.

A. Contrary to popular opinion and obvious guesses, Sunshine Laws are not the ones prohibiting multiple visits to tanning booths in a single 24-hour period. These were enacted due to the (undocumented but "true") story about the girl somewhere in California who cooked her innards by visiting every tanning booth in her city to prepare for the prom. Actually, Sunshine Laws require that government meetings be announced and open to the pubic.

Q. Do people from Sandpoint shower? And if they do, do they use water? I know they're all primarily Granolas. Sign Me — Stuck Up Mother.

A. In more unenlightened times, people might have said this about everyone from Idaho. Now we have electricity and cable here, thank goodness. If Sandpoint is inhabited primarily by Granolas, it's spreading. Have you seen the 12-year-old kids wearing Birks in Boise? Scary, isn't it?

Q. Why does the SUB insist on using eye-straining 25-watt bulbs in all of the study areas???? My solar calculator won't even work in any of these "study areas."

A. Dean Vettrus, SUB General Manager explained that the SUB has not decreased bulb wattage. Vettrus said that he would like to see more light in study areas, but that it's architecturally difficult. He said the study usage will be a primary concern if new study areas are created. Vettrus noted that suggestions for improvements are welcome.

rider affecting the SBA and the Idaho Law Review at the pre-session meeting held on March 7, 1989. As a result, we believe that the entire budget was unlawfully passed at the regular session on March 8, 1989. We acknowledge the right of the ASUI Senate to cut us off completely. We only insist that the ASUI Senate do it lawfully.

That is why we agreed to forego a lawsuit to compel the ASUI Senate to follow the "open meeting" law if they would re-enact the entire budget and acknowledge that the "open meeting" law applies. We do not insist on any funding for us, only that the budget be passed lawfully.

In most parts of this country, fortunately, the press is the protector of the people's right to know what their government is doing. It would take courage for the "ASUI-sponsored" press to fulfill that role. I am sorry that the Argonaut lacks that courage. Pre-session meetings were not covered because the reporter was made to feel "unwelcomed."

Did Steven Smart commit offenses for which he should be impeached? Without listing any facts, Erickson says, "No." The ASUI Constitution requires impeachment of a senator for "malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance." Sen. Smart presided over an unlawful pre-session meeting of the ASUI Senate. That was an act of malfeasance.

ASUI Senators have the duty of contacting their particular constituents to keep them informed and to obtain their opinions. Sen. Smart did not communicate at all with the SBA or the Idaho Law Review until March 8, 1989. That constitutes nonfeasance.

Before the senate meeting on March 8, 1989, Sen. Smart told us our budgets were to be reduced but he withheld the information about the rider which cut off future funding. That is misfeasance.

We agree that all senators have the duty to vote their conscience even when that vote is against their constituents. However, we believe senators have the corresponding duty to notify their constituents when that is to occur so the constituents will have the opportunity to ask another senator to speak for them. Sen. Smart did not do this.

If withdrawing our bill of impeachment will contribute to the open, lawful operation of the ASUI government, we are willing to make the contribution.

McGehee: CIA suppresses communist reality

By JULIE YOUNG
Staff Writer

Ralph W. McGehee lived the kind of life most people only see in the movies or read about in books.

A real-life 007. He spent 25 years of his life as a spy.

But working for the CIA wasn't all it was cracked up to be. McGehee reached a point in his life where reality wore the shine off his career. Much like the shine wears off of a new pair of shoes, only no amount of polish could remove the scuff marks or put the newness back into the dulled leather.

"I am going to paint a very negative picture," said McGehee Wednesday before he even began the lecture sponsored by ASUI Productions.

But McGehee warned the audience in the SUB Ballroom not to believe anything he was going to tell them.

"There is no reason to believe anything anyone is saying," he said.

McGehee attended the University of Notre Dame on a football scholarship. When he graduated, he signed with the Green Bay Packers, but was cut in pre-season.

Almost immediately afterward, McGehee said that he received a telegram asking him if he would be interested in an important government position similar to the state department.

What he wasn't aware of was that the CIA had a program for recruiting NFL rejects for covert operations.

At first, he took pride in what he did.

"I could have been another Ollie North. I really believed wholeheartedly in the company," McGehee said.

When he was sent to Thailand there were reports of 2,000 communist guerrillas hiding in the mountains who came down at night and raped, stole and carried off young men and incorporated them into the movement. McGehee was told that there was guerrilla activity in at least half of the 72 provinces. It was his job to research that activity, starting with just one province.

But McGehee said that what he found did not correlate with what the American press had been reporting. The reality of the situation was that communist representatives had come into the villages and told the people about the evils of their government and people had agreed to join the the Farmer's Liberation Movement on their own.

When McGehee reported his success at finding out the true situation, the CIA terminated the program and ordered him back to the states.

McGehee realized that if the truth were told about Thailand, then the truth would have to be told about Vietnam: there was no support of American interference in the villages of these countries. And there was always the danger of worsening a domestic situation that already disapproved of Vietnam.

And the CIA uses the same techniques that they had been using for years, he said.

For example, if it was necessary to convince the American people that a cause was worthy of their support, the CIA would send a boat loaded with communist weapons into an area. Then they would blow it up and make it appear as if the communists posed a threat. It was simply a matter of legitimizing American activity where none should have been, according to McGehee.

"Whenever the CIA wanted to overturn a government, they knew they were going to find communist weapons, and if there weren't any real ones, they would put them there," McGehee said.

But McGehee is telling his story to the American people. He is not going to be another Oliver North.

Broken hearts consoled with Milli Vanilli

By LEN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

If you have just broken up with your loved one and enjoy mixes of older songs, then the new Milli Vanilli album could be just for you.

Distributed by Arista records, Milli Vanilli's new album, Girl You Know It's True is excellent — but only to dance to.

With all its references to songs from the 1970s and '80s, just listening to the album can easily annoy a person. Songs such as "White Horse" (Laid Back), "Kiss" (Prince) and "Shake your Thang" (Salt 'n' Pepa) are three of the many references in some of the songs.

Milli Vanilli uses the terms "Girl" and "Baby" far more than it should have. The group refers to "Baby" 40 times throughout the album and to "Girl" 79 times. In the first song alone, "Girl You Know It's True," "Girl" appeared 23 times along with 23 grunts. A match set.

This fast-paced song has already hit the American Top-10 list and looks like it will travel even further up the list.

The song starts out the album, but in a different fashion than most albums. Instead of going right into the rhythm of the beat, it begins with a conversation between one singer and his girlfriend. The beginning "punch" just was not there.

Having a slightly rap-like sound, the song then emerges with a beat, where the singer continually reminds his girlfriend how much he really loves her and wishes the two of them would get back together.

The song is repeated on the flip side as a "New York subway extended mix."

"Baby Don't Forget My Number," a second promising dance beat for Top-40, has recently been on the charts in Europe and more than likely will begin here once "Girl You Know It's True" begins to slip back down the charts.

The song begins with a verse of "White Horse."

"If you wanna be rich," it begins, "You gotta be a ...," and then finishes the line, something the "White Horse" band Laid Back never attempted.

GIRL YOU KNOW IT'S TRUE. Milli Vanilli's newly released single Girl You Know It's True is currently climbing the charts. Their album, by the same name, promises to have continued success. (FILE PHOTO)

The song then emerges into a rhythm much like the first song, with similar vocals, except this time the singers must have been in a night club and thought of the song when they saw some girl which fascinated them.

"More Than You'll Ever Know" is just another way of singing "Girl You Know It's True" using different words. Despite the lack of originality, this song should eventually hit the American charts.

The first slow song on the album, "Blame It On The Rain," began a new theme on the album.

The song is desperately needed after listening to the first three fast-paced songs on the album.

Eventually to hit the charts, this song is beautiful and is filled with advice from one singer to the other about not blaming problems with his girlfriend on himself.

"Whatever you do," Milli Vanilli sings, "Blame it on the stars, or blame it on the rain."

The other songs on the album also have a good beat but again copy even more groups from Top-40 past.

However, other than the use of another writer's lyrics, Girl You Know It's True by Milli Vanilli is definitely a good album if you're interested in a good dance beat and like re-mixes of past songs. Eventually, many of its songs will hit the charts.

And if you have just ended a long-lasting relationship with someone, this album could be helpful in getting over the pain.

Group Squabbles at dinner theater

By DENA BANDAIZAN
Staff Writer

Squabbles, produced by the Pullman Community Theater, opens tonight and runs April 8, 14, 15, 21 and 22.

The production shows at the Combine Mall in Pullman and begins with a buffet dinner at 6:30 p.m. catered by Small Place and beverages catered by Mandarin Wok. The play starts at 8 p.m.

"The dinner theater began in 1969 and used to be in the banquet room at the Royal Restaurant which is now Alex's," said Director Ruth Vanderwall.

Vanderwall has been involved in the Pullman Community Theater for the last 38 years and has directed for the past 30 years.

Squabbles, written by Marshall Karp, is a comedy centered on the bickering and arguments arising in a young couple's home that they

Kym Ryder aids children's hearts

By DAVID KELLY
Staff Writer

Popular singer and recording star Kym Ryder is helping Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity raise money for the Children's Heart Foundation.

Ryder, who has recently released the album Angel Arrive will be appearing at Ratz Tuesday at 9 p.m. Cover charge has yet to be released.

"Ryder's music is a combination between heavy metal and pop," said Rick Harder, Phi Kappa Tau member and Little Sister chairman.

Although Ryder's album title may sound Christian, Harder says that the music contains more popular themes.

In addition to her album Angel Arrive, Ryder has also released the singles "Shadow the Glass" and "Quiet for Now" as well as a new video for MTV based on her album, Harder said.

"Ryder has been touring around the country, performing at Phi Kappa Tau Chapters to help raise money for the Children's Heart Foundation," Harder said. "Ryder's brother is a Phi Kappa Tau."

"This is her first tour," Harder said. Originally the performance was not to be scheduled at a bar, Harder said, but Ratz offered the best available space because of its raised stage and dance area.

The revenue from Ryder's performance is expected to exceed $400, Harder said. All proceeds will be donated to the Children's Heart Foundation.

share with their in-laws, a governess and two neighbors.

Brian Harvey is Abe Dreyfus, a retired New York cabbie and father-in-law of Jerry Sloan (Ed Steever). Jerry's wife, Alice, is played by Nancy Hackman. Jerry's mother, Mildred Sloan, is burned out of her home and joins the younger Sloan household of which Dreyfus is a part.

The squabbles are heightened by the presence of a Puerto Rican handyman, a wise retired pharmacist neighbor and the snooty governess.

All of these odd characters, mediated by the couple, are sure to add up to a fun evening of comedy, Vanderwall said.

This cast is comprised of three actors from Moscow and four from Pullman.

Tickets for the dinner and play are $15 and reservations can be made at Small Place in Pullman.

FACULTY COUNCIL CANDIDATES

TRACY WEBB

Faculty Council sets University policies on admission and academic standards, financial aid, curriculum, student conduct and faculty welfare — to name just a few. Since these are issues that effect us as students, we need to be able to make our opinions and concerns known. The best way to do this is through strong representation on the council.

I would like to serve as a Faculty Council representative because I intend to pursue a career as a university adviser. I feel that my academic background as well as my experience as McCoy Hall President, a New Student Orientation intern and as assistant to the ASUI president will make me a qualified representative.

While in office, I would like to: improve and increase communication between students and faculty, improve the quality of advising at UI, make the request for financial aid an easier process to follow, make campus services more accessible to students and make myself readily available to my fellow students so that I can accurately represent their views.

BRIAN WORKMAN

I'm running for Faculty Council because I feel that the students need strong, effective, flexible representation. There needs to be someone in those two student representative positions who can work for the betterment of the university and of student interests. I would also like to see the level of awareness of the student positions on Faculty Council elevated so that in the future there will be a generous supply of qualified applicants.

Right now a lot of students not only don't know what Faculty Council does, but they don't even know that there are students on that board. I don't think that there are very many positions in the ASUI that are as important as Faculty Council representative. I would like to see the day when Faculty Council positions are as hotly contested as senate positions.

I think that my experience with the ASUI as a senator and the connections that I have made will help a lot in pushing for student interests. I look forward to serving the students in a different capacity.

Men's tennis looking to improve 11-0 record

The UI men's tennis team will be attempting to improve its impressive 11-0 record when it opens play in the Weber State College Invitational today in Ogden, Utah. The event will continue through Sunday.

The Vandals will match up with Brigham Young University today while the rest of the field includes Weber State, Nevada-Las Vegas, San Diego State, Boise State, Nevada-Reno and Montana State.

After going 3-0 during the fall semester, the Vandals have continued their winning ways this spring by posting an 8-0 mark.

Even though the No. 1 singles player Santiago Martinez has struggled this year at 4-4, his teammates have backed him up with strong performances. No. 2 singles player Shane Ristau has had a fine season with a 6-2 mark and has teamed with Scott Andersen to produce a 5-0 record in doubles action.

Andersen has been even more impressive in singles play, as he is 7-0 thus far this season. Anderson was named Big Sky Player of the Week following his 5-0 singles and doubles performance last weekend at the Montana Invitational. Jose Palocios has also been playing well, posting a 5-1 mark.

On the women's team, Patricia Shanander has led UI with an 8-2 record and was a key part in the Lady Vandals 5-4 victory over Washington State.

Despite Shanander's fine season, the Lady Vandals are just 5-7 this year.

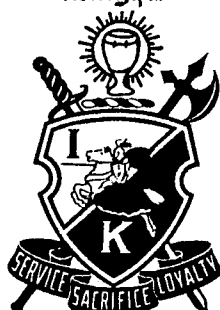

Shanander and her sister Cathy have been a successful tandem, as the two are 8-2 in doubles play.

The women's team is also in action this weekend, traveling to Missoula to take on Montana and Eastern Montana today and then Montana State Saturday.

UI Baseball Club still struggles

It has been a long season for the UI baseball team, which has been struggling with a 1-8 mark.

With a trip to Oregon this weekend, the Vandals are hoping to add to the win column during the three-game series against Eastern Oregon State.

Bob Frei is the probable starting pitcher for the opening game of the series, while Dave Schawrtz and Dave Glover are probable starters for the final two games of the series.

RUGBY CLUB ACTION: The UI Rugby Club will be at home Saturday for a matchup against the Caldwell Snakes. The game begins at 3 p.m. on Guy Wicks field.

Volleyballers work on mental attitude for upcoming tournament at Seattle

By AMY WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

The UI Men's Volleyball Club took fifth out of 12 teams in a one-day tournament in Seattle last weekend.

"We took first place in our pool (three pools consisting of four teams), but we lost in the play-offs," said club member Chris Clark. "We did pretty good for tournament play, but now with more experience we feel better about the forthcoming match this weekend in Seattle."

The club will travel to Seattle this weekend for another tournament. Idaho has been working to strengthen their mental attitude.

"During practice we've be working on blocking and covering, but what's important is mental attitude," says veteran player Art Taylor. "We're a good team and do fine during play, but we need to keep up our confidence and consistency of playing."

"They play against each other so much, they know what to expect."

Said Clark: "Our back row passes were good and our serves were there, but if we can keep positive mental attitude, we will do great."

Of the teams the UI club will be competing against this weekend, Taylor said the Seattle area opponents will be the toughest.

"They play against each other so much, they know what to expect," Taylor said.

The team's main goals for the tournament are to keep improving their play and to finish high in the final standings.

Following the trip to Seattle, the club will prepare for matches in Spokane the next two weekends.

UI track teams travel to WSU

By LYNNETTE PIXLEY
Sports Writer

Both the men's and women's track teams will be heading to Pullman Saturday to compete against Kansas State University and the Washington State Cougars.

From the men's team, Dan O'Brien was busy last weekend winning the decathlon at the San Francisco State Invitational with a school and Big Sky Conference record of 7,988 points. His point total was the best in the world so far this year, and qualified him for both the NCAA Championships in late May and The Athletics Congress Championships in June.

O'Brien will be expected to compete in only five events this weekend, including the pole vault, shot put, high hurdles, 400 relay and 1,600 relay.

Head coach Mike Keller said he hopes O'Brien gets "rest" out of Saturday's meet.

"It's a rest day for him because he's only competing in half a decathlon. And if we get some good weather, he may even long-jump," Keller said.

Long-jumper Orde Ballantyne will compete for the first time since he tied for sixth in that event at the NCAA Indoor Championships with a lifetime best of 25' 7 1/2".

With three people injured from the indoor season the sprint crew will not be at 100 percent Saturday.

"With the injured people out of competition and basically being outnumbered in every category, we're not really looking to win the meet but to make some good track marks," Keller said.

The women are looking for some good weather to come their way as Caryn Choat-Deeds, Bobbi Purdy, Anne Scott and Kim Gillas are running well right now.

"With better weather their times will be significantly better," Coach Scott Lorek said.

Choate-Deeds, defending Big Sky Conference champion in the 100 meters, had times of 12.46 in the 100 meters and a wind-aided 25:67 in the 200 meters two weeks ago, and also anchored Idaho's winning 400-meter relay team.

The meet, which will be held in Pullman, is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. for field events and 2 p.m. for track events.
