Student petition drive forces fee question onto ballots

By PAUL ALLÉE
News Editor

Attempts to prevent students from voting on proposed fee increases failed this weekend as more than 830 student petitioners forced the issue onto Wednesday's ASUI general election ballots.

More than a 10th of students here signed petitions requiring the ASUI Political Concerns

Board to place an advisory referendum on Wednesday's general election ballot. Referendum Two asks students whether they should pay $1 million more in fees, $700,000 of which would indirectly help fund what administrators have called accreditation needs.

"I'm just glad to know that all students will be able to voice their opinions on this," said Tina Kagi, ASUI president. "We want to know if students approve of a fee increase."

Last week, ASUI senators voted 8-4 to keep the referendum off student ballots. Senators argued that the matter was too complicated for students to understand, and that it was inappropriate for campus administrators to push fee increases.

The administration's plan, if approved by the Idaho Board of Education, could allow student fees to be raised as much as:

- $50 per semester for in-state fees
- $100 per semester for out-of-state tuition
- $33 for graduate fees and
- $7 per credit per semester for part-time fees.

During the past two weeks administrators have gathered with student leaders from the ASUI Senate, the Inter-Fraternity Council and various campus living groups to explain the proposed fee increases.

Joseph Geiger, vice president of finance, told students attending a March 30 breakfast that they now pay 11.8 percent of educational costs — less than the 13.8 percent students paid in 1985. With the proposed fee hike, the student percentage would be about 13.1 percent, he said.

Golf 'rangers' replace 'marshals'

Deficits resulted from Gibb's 'beer patrol'

By KARA OLSON

Golf "marshals" assigned to curtail drinking on the links will no longer work at the UI Golf Course, but pro shop employees will serve as "rangers" and patrol the course during peak periods of play.

"On busy days a group from the pro shop will periodically check the course to enforce the general rules of the game and of the course," said Don Bails, head golf professional. "They won't be designated as marshals but will patrol the course in a cart labeled as 'ranger.'"

The decision is announced just a year after the university hired its first fleet of marshals — a move officials now admit contributed to last year's $12,601 golf course budget deficit.

Terry Armstrong, executive assistant to the president, said there was a need to enforce golf etiquette on the course last year. And when the drinking age changed to 21 the idea became more pressing, he said.

"There was a question of liability involved," Armstrong said. "Complaints of beer cans on the course as well as balls being hacked clear across to Borah Avenue heightened the concern about alcohol on the course."

According to two students who served as marshals last year, many people misunderstood the job because of local newspaper articles overemphasizing the alcohol issue.

"The Idahonian made light of the job by describing it as a cushy job with big money. They called us the 'beer patrol' and said that our only job was to cruise for beer," said Mike White, a junior in mechanical engineering and a former course marshal.

White said that the articles led people to jump to the wrong conclusions when confronted by marshals, making it difficult for the marshals to enforce the rules of the game. Players assumed they were being harassed for alcohol use, he said.

Mark Frame, also a former marshal, said that the job itself wasn't bad, but it was difficult to get backing from those in charge after the press showed such little respect for the job.

"Don Bails didn't want the course marshals to begin with," said Frame, a senior in mechanical engineering. "He never saw drinking to be that big of a problem. It was more President Gibb's idea. So he (Bails) never gave the program supervision."

White also said that supervision was a problem.

"There was a need for course marshals and there still is. However, what could have been good got turned into a joke. No one had the guts to define the job or back up the course marshals. No one knew exactly what they were supposed to be doing," White said.

Both White and Frame said the job was even more frustrating because the women volleyball players who were hired as course marshals saw their job as a chance to relax.

Said White: "There were times when I was playing golf that it would take me three hours to play nine holes because the course marshal on duty wasn't watching for slow play. She was sunbathing and reading a book."

Last year there was one marshal on duty whenever the course was open. The course employed six marshals in the beginning, and as many as eight worked during the peak season.

Under this year's program, the level of play will dictate the use of rangers, said Rick Bouillon, who as Kibbie Center manager also oversees the general operation of the golf course. Days of heavier play, such as weekends and some week-

Greeks, dorms try to cope with illegal drinkers

Editor's Note: This is the second in a two-part series on Idaho's new 21-year minimum drinking age, which goes into full effect today.

By BENJAMIN LONG
Senior Staff Writer

The atmosphere and attitudes toward alcohol at UI living groups have changed since 1987, when the legislature voted to raise the drinking age from 19 to 21. But underage students who want a drink have little problem finding one.

That's the conclusion two student leaders are making two years after the Idaho legislature pulled the legal rug out from under hundreds of Idaho students who were waiting to obtain drinking privileges at age 19. In 1987, the legislature passed a law increasing the drinking age to 21, but a "grandfather clause" gave drinking privileges to adults who had reached their 19th birthday by April 10 of that year.

Those "grandfather" privileges ended Monday. Today only adults 21 and older can legally purchase alcoholic beverages here.

"It has changed the atmosphere at the residence halls," said Laura Hubbard, residence hall area coordinator.

Before the increase in minimum age, a large majority of dormitory residents could legally drink, but now she estimates 90 percent of GDIs are underage.

Doug Korn, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, said Greeks also

Most Moscow motel rooms booked for Parents Weekend

By LEN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Parents from all over the Northwest will flock to the University of Idaho as Friday kicks off the beginning of Parents Weekend.

With the theme, "A Century of Sharing," this weekend's celebration is scheduled in conjunction with Silver and Gold Day and will be one of the last events of Centennial celebrations.

Only Commencement remains.

Parents who haven't already made room reservations at local motels could find themselves staying in Pullman or Lewiston.

"A month and a half ago the Moscow motel rooms were completely booked," said Anne Stewart, Parents Weekend committee chairperson. "As far as I know there's nothing going on at Washington State University."

One of many Centennial events scheduled for this weekend is the sealing and burying of two time capsules.

These nearly identical, clear capsules will be buried under the flagpole in front of the Administration Lawn. With $600 invested into each of the capsules, officials hope that the capsules will be able to withstand 100 years of wear and tear.

One of the two capsules will only have to withstand 50 years, and will be opened for the 150-year birthday party. The other capsule will be opened Jan.

30, 2089 during the university's Bicentennial party.

A dedication of a grove of trees will also occur then. Immediately afterwards, an awards banquet will be held in the SUB Ballroom.

"A month and a half ago the Moscow motel rooms were completely booked."

— Anne Stewart
Parents Weekend Committee

Stewart said the history of Parents Weekend has seemed to be more for Greek houses only. This year, the celebration will have more to offer for residence halls with a GDI-RHA Awards Barbecue Friday evening.

"The biggest misconception of Parents Weekend is that it's a Greek event," Stewart said. "It's an all-campus event."

For Greeks, the Phi Delta Theta Turtle Derby will take place Saturday. This traditional event marks the end of Greek Week.

Greek Week and GDI Week are being held simultaneously this year.

Other events scheduled for Parents Weekend include:

- Friday-
 - 11 a.m., Honors Center Open House - Psychology Building, Room 102.
 - 11:30 a.m., Living Geography

Native American gives wilderness talk

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

Oren Lyons, an internationally respected spokesman for Native American rights, will present the university's 10th Wilderness Resource Distinguished Lecture April 20.

Lyons' lecture is titled "Wilderness in Native American Culture." He is a noted advocate of Native American rights.

Lyons is a chief of the Onondaga Nation and director of Native American Studies at the State University of New York, Buffalo. The Onondaga Nation is one of the six nations of the Iroquois Confederacy in New York State.

George Savage of the UI College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences, said the lecture will address the Native American view of wilderness and its sense of harmony.

"It's a bit different than what ours is, but our view seems to be changing towards theirs," Savage said.

Lyons has represented Native Americans at several United Nations-sponsored organizations and numerous national meetings and conferences.

The Wilderness Research Lectureship is sponsored by the UI Wilderness Research Center, with headquarters in the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. The lecture will be held April 20 at 8 p.m. in the UI Law School Auditorium.

had to adapt to the new law. "It has centralized drinking in the house," he said.

Dry rush rules started even before the new age came into effect, he said.

One of the biggest changes at the dorms is the new requirement for resident advisers to look out for illegal drinking.

"It has been hard on RAs," Hubbard said. "They've had to be put in the role of enforcer more now than in the past."

Most RAs have had to face the problem with their advisees, she said.

"They usually run against (illegal drinking) over and over," she said. "It applies more pressure and makes it harder to keep good relations."

RAs are also encountering more students with potential drinking problems, instead of drinking merely as an accepted pastime, she said.

"There has been an improvement in awareness of alcohol use and abuse," she said. "No one saw it as a problem before."

The tradition of brotherhood and sisterhood developed in the Greek system makes it difficult for fraternity and sorority members to squeal on younger members, Korn said.

"People have second thoughts about busting brothers on private property," Korn said. "It gets down to the philosophy about being old enough to get drafted, why shouldn't someone be able to take a drink?"

While the new age is recognized as law, most students still dislike it, Hubbard said. Another change at the dorms is difficulty arranging and holding dorm parties with alcohol.

"RAs usually run against illegal drinking over and over."

— Laura Hubbard
Area Coordinator

"A keg used to be the main draw," she said. "People have had to be more creative." Soon after beer disappeared from the Gault Hall party room, dance attendance plummeted, she said. Now that people are getting used to alcohol-free gatherings, attendance is increasing, she said.

But that doesn't mean the underaged are not touching alcohol, the two agreed.

"I don't think they have any trouble getting the alcohol if they want it," she said. "If you want to drink, you still can."

"(Greeks) are doing all the framework required, but it is simple to get someone who is of age to use as a friend," Korn said.

As older students used to drinking heavily move out of houses, they will be replaced by younger students who will set a more alcohol-conscious example to freshmen, Korn said.

Wednesday students will also elect seven senators and make advisory votes on a two referendums and a constitutional amendment.

Referendum One asks students whether they want to continue paying a $1-per-semester fee to create four endowments for the fine arts. Students have been paying the fee for the past two years, and about $28,000 has accumulated. The first arts event to benefit from the program will not be announced until later this year.

The constitutional amendment would allow spring student government elections to be held later in April, to keep the event from competing with other scheduled events.

Most polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. Polls remaining open until 6:30 p.m. are: the Library, the Wallace Complex (east and west), the Administration Building and the SUB.

How to annoy an Argonaut editor

The only thing more annoying than a back-seat driver is a back-seat editor.

And we have enough of them to fill every jalopy in a used-car lot.

Lately, we've had the fleet out in full force, telling us what to print, what not to print and what opinions should appear on this page.

Just yesterday, our editor-in-chief received a tongue-lashing for not rushing a photographer to immortalize the scene of one person handing a check to another. Exactly the sort of staged shot our journalism teachers warned us about.

If that's not enough, a representative of a campus special interest group isn't speaking to one of our editors because she wrote an editorial condemning a policy that group was pushing.

And apparently the Student Bar Association didn't like being criticized in this newspaper's opinion section. Now its members are accusing the Argonaut of bowing to the ASUI Senate's every whim, of being a "government-controlled" newspaper.

Grow up.

While it may be convenient for the SBA to believe that the Argonaut is being forced to condemn its tantrums, the truth of the matter is that we've chided the SBA because it deserved it.

For the record, we've also criticized the senate in these pages.

But we're not out to get them, either.

It is the duty of any responsible newspaper to act as a watchdog for public interests. No matter whose hand is in the cookie jar.

It all comes down to utilitarian news judgment. What matters most to the greatest number of readers?

If an organization is hosting a dime-a-dozen publicity stunt, the event won't appear in print. Unless it's a slow news day.

On the other hand, if a small-but-vocal minority is trying to impeach an elected official and trying to cash in on a large sum of students' money, we'll probably report on it. And maybe even write an editorial.

As always, story ideas and constructive criticism are welcome and encouraged. Just don't be angry when that government scandal appears on the front page instead of the latest ribbon cutting.

Still not satisfied?

Go hop in the back seat of the nearest Chevy and wait until the driver forgets to signal.

• SHAME ON U. •

Oops. Somebody made a mistake.

And not just a little mistake. But a great big one.

Some of the university's more than 1,500 graduates have already discovered it. Others, just now sending out graduation announcements, are finding out soon enough.

That's right, somehow the starting time for next month's general commencement exercise was printed incorrectly on the UI's Centennial graduation announcements.

A solution to this dilemma? Simple. Just print correction cards to be inserted into the announcements.

Sounds like a fine, inexpensive solution. But oh how tacky.

Why couldn't the UI splurge and give our Centennial graduation class the honor of correct announcements?

Let's just hope someone doesn't misdate those nifty Centennial graduation medallions. Remember, it's 1889 to 1989.

Students should question proposed fee increase

Editor:

Before the students cast their votes on the fee increase, there are a few things the students should take into consideration.

If accreditation is such a major problem at the UI, why didn't the administration work with the student government on it, instead of in secret with the State Board (of Education) until they rejected it? How much of an increase in funding did the university get from the state? Who is responsible for the welfare of the UI? Is it the students' responsibility to make up for the state's shortcomings? If accreditation is such a problem, why didn't the state fund the university better? And why is the JFAC saying that the administration is "jumping the gun?"

Why did Dr. Joseph Geiger, UI financial vice president, say he has the support of the student body and also say that he would bet $100 against the fee increase if it were to be voted on by the students? Where is the money going? Why are we being asked to launder money to get more faculty when the state constitution prohibits students from paying for the faculty? How can we be sure that the administration will spend the money on what they promise, or even if it is legal to do it?

Is the administration telling the whole truth? Why did accreditation officials say we didn't have to worry about losing our accreditation next fall? If the administration only needs the money next year for the accreditation issue, why are they asking for a permanent fee increase? Is accreditation a scare tactic to get students to support a major fee increase the year before the state starts making fee increases in accordance with inflation? Is this fee increase too drastic?

Please keep in mind, the State Board of Education has already rejected the proposed fee increase. The only way they will hear it again is if they have strong student support. So vote. It's your money.

Become aware of the big picture

Hegel would probably be amazed and possibly quite smug if he could learn of our contemporary environmental problems.

Georg Wilhelm Hegel (1770-1831), a German idealist philosopher, thought of the world as "a harmonious whole, an organic life which is determined in accordance with ends." However, Hegel recognized that this "harmonious whole" is made up of individual beings.

According to Hegel, a being is distinguishable "only insofar as it is positing itself or the mediation between a self and its development into something different." In other words, a being can only reach self-awareness once it has distinguished itself from and set itself against another.

This creates a problem because although we can distinguish ourselves or consciousness from that of others, we are also positing ourselves against the outside world. This problem becomes less abstract in the context of our environmental problems.

Our most grave environmental problems are man-made. Man has attempted to master and exploit nature rather than co-exist with it. Nature, on the other hand, plays the role of the slave, subordinate to mankind's designs and wishes.

The negative effect of this master-slave relationship has never been more apparent than today. To promote the expansion of grazing land for cattle, Brazilian rain forests are being cut and burned down. The effect is that for some cheap and unneeded beef, entire species of flora and fauna are being exterminated.

Acid rain and the "greenhouse effect" are two results of unrestrained industry. Acid rain is killing forests and lakes in the Northern Hemisphere. Industrial emissions are releasing more carbon dioxide than plants and oceans can absorb. The resulting "greenhouse effect" is the warming of earth's atmosphere — a warming that could lead to increased periods of drought.

The recent oil spill off the coast of Alaska has killed thousands of fish, birds and other sea life. In cases such as this it becomes tragically apparent just how little "mastery" we exercise over nature when we are unable to clean up our own accidents.

In order to stop the destruction of our global environment, Hegel suggests that we recognize the "higher unity" of our world. By realizing our master-slave relationship and adding to it a recognition of our own subjective realities and eco-systems we come to the synthesis of "higher unity." Thus, we must develop an awareness of our global situation.

A good way to develop such an awareness would be to take part in the International Week lectures and seminars this week. Tomorrow, Merlyn Brusven will present a lecture titled "Integrated Resource Systems: Environmental Conflicts of Values, Ethics and Ignorance" at 3:40 p.m. - 5 p.m. in the SUB Borah Theater.

Thursday Maynard Miller will present "Global Climate Chaos and the Greenhouse Effect" at 3:40 p.m. - 5 p.m. in the SUB Appaloosa Room. For more information about other International Week activities call 885-8984.

Hegel would attend these events if he wasn't dead. What's your excuse?

Don't pass fee increase without student support

Guest Opinion by TINA KAGI
ASUI President

After considering the many angles to the proposed matriculation fee increase and examining the arguments for and against, I cannot support this proposal. The only condition under which I will take any action to pursue a fee increase is if the issue is brought to a vote of the students. If a majority supports the proposal, I will make every effort to see their request through.

By surprising both students and members of the Idaho Board of Education with a proposed dramatic jump in fees, the UI did not violate any rules, however, they acted in a manner that was extremely discourteous to students.

It could be inferred that by asking the state board to repeal the decision it just made regarding fees and to violate set procedures, students are convinced that extraordinary measures need to be taken to meet an extremely urgent and significant shortage of funds.

Administrators have held that the UI's accreditation may be in jeopardy during general and specific accreditation interim visits scheduled for this fall. The Idaho Legislature appropriated $0 of a requested $2.9 million for accreditation purposes through the board to the UI (note that UI's appropriation from the board is not set in stone at this time), therefore the funds available to make last-minute improvements prior to the accreditation visit are limited.

The administration's proposal to raise student fees by a maximum of $50 per semester for full-time resident students would generate an estimated $1 million per year to be used, indirectly, for accreditation purposes. The $1 million in fee-generated revenue would actually be allocated to the Physical Plant fund, $700,000 in state revenue (already in the Physical Plant fund) would then be redistributed to areas of accreditation concern.

The Constitution of the State of Idaho prohibits charging "tuition" (or instructional fees) at the UI. Ironically, in UI's completed "first century of distinction," the administration is indirectly asking the students to pay for the cost of accreditation needs (a large portion of which would include the costs of additional faculty).

Obviously, the state board did not receive the desired UI appropriation from the legislature this year. What message would we be sending to Idaho's budget-conscious legislature in Boise if, after every "bare bones" budget the UI received, the students kicked in with a fee increase to make ends meet?

And, administrators have admitted that if the fee increase is levied, Financial Aid may not be bumped up accordingly — those who can least afford this increase (those depending on financial assistance) will be hurt the worst.

power drills boring holes into cinder blocks? Then move into the dorms. How would you like to walk into the bathroom/shower in an attempt to get ready for class and find two men with more tools strewn across the floor than your high school shop class ever had? Move into the dorms.

How would you like to come back from Christmas break to find the contents of your closets piled on your bed, holes drilled into your closet walls, and a cable casing installed across one-half of the wall? Or, how would you like to come back from spring break to find that the hole they drilled for the now installed cable wasn't big enough, so they drilled again. This time they didn't remove the closet's contents and they managed to get cinder block particles all over your clothes, sheets and towels? Move into the dorms.

What I am referring to is the university's decision to install a new fire detection/alarm system in the dorms. I don't know who is in charge of this insanity, but I would like to ask him, "What the hell are you thinking?" Why aren't the residents' opinions being considered? I am paying an ungodly amount of money to stay here. I thought it was worth it since I don't have to cook, clean or do dishes. But then again my housing contract never mentioned live-in maintenance men.

Why can't the university install this fire alarm system in the summer when no one lives here?

Why is the system necessary in the first place? I've been trying to think of a way that the Theophilus Tower (where I live) could be consumed in flames. It can't happen. Every room has a smoke detector and fire extinguisher. The inside walls are made of cinder block. The ceilings in the rooms are blown cement. Less than 50 percent of the building is carpeted. It would take an explosion to cause any major fire damage. And that isn't very probable unless we are the victims of a surprise terrorist attack, or my fellow chemistry and chemical engineering students decide to turn my room into an explosives lab. Don't worry, I don't like lab that much.

In closing, I would like to say that between the installation of this fire alarm system, the new food service and the invasion of privacy by the powers that be on each floor, the university is doing an extremely poor job of encouraging the residents to return next year. I'm counting the days until I move out.

Smart: OK guy but dishonest, unethical

Editor:

Question: "What's the difference between a dead snake and a dead SBA member in the middle of the road?" Punchline: "There are skid marks before the snake!" Since Idaho Law Review and Student Bar Association "bashing" has become the preferred pastime of selected ASUI officials, Argonaut staffers and other uninformed individuals, I felt compelled to provide these bashers with some new material to propagate. Lest it not be told law students can't take a job.

However, what these "bashers" fail to realize is that the filing of a bill for impeachment is no joking matter. Contrary to what ASUI officials and its government-run newspaper would have this university community believe, the SBA impeachment bill was not filed in retaliation for a reduction of its funding. This is an absurdity perpetuated by ASUI senators and its $35,000 subsidized Argonaut.

John F. Kennedy said, "Too often we ... enjoy the comfort of 'opinion' without the discomfort of thought." Think about it and decide for yourself. What did the SBA have to gain by filing an impeachment bill? The empathy of ASUI officials? Additional funding? An improved public image? Certainly not. By filing, the SBA ran the risk of losing its funding entirely and may still.

What the SBA attempted to do was dismiss an elected official because (we believe) he misrepresented his position, failed to perform assigned official duties, used his position for personal gain, lied to his constituents, and presided over a secret senate meeting that violated Idaho State statutes. During the presidential elections this past fall, Sen. Steve Smart and President Tina Kagi both pledged to support a line-itemed SBA budget of $5,000. In fact, the SBA has in its possession a letter in which Sen. Smart states his commitment to seek a $5,000 line-itemed SBA budget. Subsequent to Sen. Smart's failed presidential bid, the SBA did not have an assigned representative to the ASUI Senate. Please note that the

SBA endorsed President Kagi who was a past SBA senator. After receiving assurances regarding Sen. Smart's commitment to his pre-election pledge, the SBA requested he be designated their representative. Thereafter, Smart never communicated information essential for the submission and hearing of ASUI budget requests. Through its own initiative, the SBA and Idaho Law Review were fortunate to submit a budget request that resulted in the finance committee's approval of a $4,600 budget by a 4-0 vote. Then, in violation of Idaho's open meeting laws, Smart presided over a secret senate session which unprecedentedly reconsidered the 4-0 vote and $4,600 budget. In this meeting, Smart admitted he said, "Let's just (expletive) ax the SBA (budget)." The budget was then reduced and a rider attached which precluded all future funding for the SBA. Immediately before the senate approved the ASUI budget, Smart finally notified a SBA official of the budget reduction. Yet, he intentionally omitted any mention of the "rider" eliminating all SBA funding. As if this wasn't enough, Smart then wanted to abstain from voting on the budget but was instructed to vote against the measure.

Budget reduction was not the reason the SBA filed a bill for impeachment. Rather, the bill was filed on the mistaken belief that no ASUI member, not even Ray Horton, would tolerate senatorial misrepresentation of this nature, and the ASUI Senate would not condone actions that are injurious to the honorable character, integrity and purpose of the ASUI. Personally, I think, Steve Smart is an OK guy. Professionally, Sen. Smart committed several dishonest and unethical acts.

—Tim Durkin

Smart says no to direct senate funding for SBA

Editor:

All right, it's my turn to talk. A certain select few from the Student Bar Association have been doing everything in their power to "make things difficult" for me for the last three weeks, and the Argonaut has been defending me in editorials. Now that's not very fair. After all, the power of the media far outweighs that of a very small special interest group that wants every elected official to believe its group is 10 times its actual size. Too bad.

Editor Jon Erickson, being a former ASUI senator himself, is very familiar with the tactics used by the SBA to ensure continued and increased line-item status in the ASUI General Operating Budget. Things like candidate endorsements in the College of Law for anyone willing to commit to something they know is wrong. Unfortunately, in the heat of my bid for ASUI president last fall, I made the mistake (something I hope is still a human trait) of saying I supported the idea of line itemization for the SBA. I didn't get the endorsement of the SBA. Sorry folks, the deal is off.

Probably my biggest mistake was being honored by SBA President Jean Brennan's request that I become the College of Law's senator (what is wrong with this picture?). I should have figured she was going to use me as a means to receive more funding. What I did figure at the time of granting her request was I was in for a battle. I didn't want to put anyone else through what I was going to have to deal with—little did I know. I find it rather peculiar that Ms. Brennan has remained silent since she showed up in front of the senate to announce her intentions of impeachment.

SBA officers and members make comments like "You'd better grow up kid, that's how real politics works." Agreed, but it works this way too.

The SBA had every chance to effectively lobby me into at least arguing their cause with some level of conviction. But instead, my phone calls were not returned, I was blamed for Brennan's apparent lack of concern for the SBA budget, and Brennan precursed her every comment with "you will," and "it is your duty to the SBA as our senator to ... " Wrong, I say.

The SBA has "bit the hand that feeds it" for the last time. I will do everything in my power to see that the SBA follows the same procedure every other club or organization on this campus must follow to receive ASUI monies. If they want funds, they can go to the ASUI Activities Board.

The whole impeachment fiasco should be viewed by the students of the law school as an embarrassment. I hope you realize your very own officers knew they had no grounds for impeachment. On top of that, they knew they weren't going to succeed. Pretty foolish for someone looking out for their reputation as an ambassador of "what is right." Not only did they do all this, but they probably cut the jugular of your funding body.

If there are members of the SBA so concerned about what is going on in the ASUI, then they should run for office. Do something positive for a change because a negative attitude will get your chunk of the pie thrown out.

In closing, I want to thank the incredible amount of campus-wide support I have received during the impeachment proceedings from both undergraduates and graduate students. You are very much appreciated.

—Steve Smart

UI officials need a long-range spending plan

Editor:

Our student body president, Tina Kagi, should be applauded for her firm stand on the fee increase issue. Kagi is refusing to allow the student senate to be stampeded into a fee increase without a student vote. Tina Kagi is protecting student interests. The administration appeared to be a carnival-style snake-oil salesman when they lobbied for that fee increase. It would be difficult to take them seriously.

Surprisingly, I found myself agreeing with administration spokesperson on two issues. I agree they won't see much of a funding increase without student support. Administration credibility isn't high at the UI right at the moment. They need student cooperation to loosen purse strings.

I also agree that students don't have enough information to approve a fee increase at the present time.

We students can only hope the administration realizes we have a student body president gifted with some common sense. We can only hope the administration listens to her input and develops a needs-assessment evaluation by the fall semester.

Students deserve to see a needs-assessment evaluation that establishes firm short-range spending priorities. We deserve an evaluation that makes clear the long-range spending priorities here at the UI. We all need a needs-assessment program that establishes a basis for cooperation among departments in degree programs.

This type of lobbying will require more time and effort than the carnival side show. It probably won't be as much fun to watch either. But who knows, such an evaluation might look like a class act to the Idaho Board of Education, as well as to UI students. This type of an effort might even impress people who review accreditation standards.

Who's right, Jesus or plant scientists?

Editor:

For several years now Francis Northam, a Ph.D. candidate in plant science, has been claiming in the local press that scientists can know only that which they can directly observe in the laboratory. At the same time, however, Mr. Northam makes us believe that the Bible is an infallible science textbook.

I would like him to perform an experiment in his laboratory which meets his own peculiar definition of science and compare the results with what the Bible says. Take some orchid seeds, which plant scientists say are the smallest seed in the world, and compare them with some mustard seeds, which Jesus said are the smallest seeds in the world (Matthew 13:22, Mark 4:31). Examine them carefully under a microscope, Mr. Northam — and don't sneeze, or you'll blow the orchid seeds away — and then tell us which are the smallest seeds in the world: mustard seeds or orchid seeds.

Fraternity raises $425 for philanthropy

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity took advantage of Saturday's warm weather and with the help of 15 women's volleyball teams raised $425 for The Crisis Line, which aids victims of domestic violence.

"The warm weather made it a big hit," said ATO Dennis Wagner about the fraternity's second annual volleyball tournament held at Ghormley Park.

Each of the teams donated $30 to participate in the tournament which began at 9:30 a.m. and lasted until 3 p.m.

"We had four nets set up over at Ghormley Park," said member Steve Williams. "We also had four team pools where each team played two out of three games. This gave each team an opportunity to play several games."

"We had a great turnout for the event," said Wagner, who said only a few of the women's living groups did not participate.

A team from Carter Hall won the competition. "The event turned out well. I was really happy," Williams said. "Hopefully it will be as successful next year."

Baseball club loses, again

By GREG NUNES

Winning has been a rarity this spring for the UI Baseball Club, and the problems continued for the Vandals last weekend.

During a three-game series against Eastern Oregon State College in La Grande, UI was swept by the Mounties and was unable to hold leads in the final inning of two of the games.

The Vandals' record now stands at 1-13.

On Saturday, the two teams matched up in a doubleheader in which EOS won the first game easily, 12-2.

UI took an early 2-0 lead in the first inning when Dave Schwartz made a double to start the frame, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored on a sacrifice by Wade Wilson. The final run of the inning came when John Konrad was hit by a pitch to force in a run with the bases loaded.

With the Vandals holding onto a 2-1 advantage heading into the third, EOS sent 14 men to the

GDI Week kicks off with 'Gross Out'

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

Snow Hall's Jeff Fisher and Julie McCoy of Carter Hall are the driving force behind the residence halls annual GDI Week, which kicked off yesterday.

Fisher and McCoy offered a detailed description of the week's events.

Monday's events began at 7 p.m. with Fisher what described as Gross Out Night held in the Gault-Upham party room. "There are five different events scheduled for Gross Out Night," Fisher said. "A pie-eating contest in which participants must keep their hands behind their back will be one of the events."

"This event involves stuffing as many jumbo-sized marshmallows into your mouth as you can and then saying Chubby Bunny."

— Jeff Fisher
Snow Hall

Fisher added, "We'll be using cream pies because food pies would be too hard to digest. Whoever eats the fastest wins."

Teams of four persons from each hall then participated in the milk chug, in which each member of each team will chug one sixteen ounce glass of milk, one at a time. When finished chugging, participants turned the glass over and placed it on the table before the next member could proceed. "Spillage is very important in the milk chug," McCoy said. "We count the amount of spillage."

Next came the Banana Relay where each member of four-person teams ran a specified distance with a banana under each arm and one between the legs.

"If you drop the banana you have to eat it," Fisher said.

"There is also the raw egg toss where two people per hall toss an egg back and forth at varied distances, and when the egg breaks you're out," Fisher said.

And of course there's the Chubby Bunny event. "This event involves stuffing as many jumbo-sized marshmallows into your mouth as you can and then saying Chubby Bunny," Fisher said.

Also Monday was a Win, Lose or Draw competition with each team consisting of three players.

"On Tuesday we have skits and an airband contest at 7 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom," Fisher said. Skits will be judged on originality, props, continuity and judges' personal view, and the airband contest will be judged by similar standards.

Wednesday is a scavenger hunt and assassination game.

"The scavenger hunt begins at 4:15 p.m. and will start at Targhee Hall," McCoy said. Teams of five players will venture the campus for 45 minutes and accumulate specified items worth points.

Following the hunt is an assassination game from 5 p.m. - 5:30 p.m. in the aboretum. The object is to shoot other participants (not judges) while avoiding being shot in the 30-minute time.

"Participants will be using plastic water pistols with colored water," Fisher said.

Thursday at 7 p.m. is the GDI Games, held in the Kibbie Dome. A tricycle race is one of the featured events. Each participant will ride 20 yards around a cone and ride 20 more yards to the finish line. "We need one more tricycle donated," Fisher said.

An eight-person-per-team tug-o-war contest is also scheduled, along with a pyramid building contest.

"The pyramid building contest will consist of 15 people for the men and 10 for the women. We figured we should only have 10 people involved for the women because if we had 15 there could be some back problems for the girls on the bottom," Fisher said.

The remaining event are a keg toss "and the obstacle course from hell," Fisher said. The course will consist of crawling under an obstacle, hopping 10 yards in a potato sack, running 10 yards with a basketball between the legs, spinning around a baseball bat 10 times

Greek Week includes pizza eating fest

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

It's that time of year again. The beginning of every UI fraternity and sorority person's favorite, fun-filled four-day event. Greek Week.

Greek Week Co-Chairpersons Jeff Cook and Melanie Matthews and their Greek Week Committee have been working hard this year to set up the annual event which began Monday.

"It's going to be a lot of fun this year," said Cook, a member of Lambda Chi Alpha. "Our committee has been working really hard in setting up the event and all the houses have been very supportive and helpful — and Co-Chairperson Melanie Matthews has also helped out a lot."

Cook has offered his time to give comments and tactics in preparing participants for the remaining festivities.

Monday kicked off Greek Week at 3 p.m. with a pyramid race on the Administration Building Lawn.

"The pyramid race consists of 10 people from each living group running 10 yards and building a 10-person pyramid," Cook said. "Once it's built then everyone yells the Idaho Song as fast as they can. You know — the one that goes — I — D — A — H — O, Idaho Idaho, Go Go Go."

"The obstacle course is the same place and time and involves teams of four doing different things such as somersaults, a bat spin, putting a volleyball between your legs and running and the frisbee toss which involves hucking a frisbee at a target," he said.

Monday activities concluded with a progressive dinner at 5:30 p.m. Campus fraternities traveled around to different sororities for appetizers, dinner and desert.

Today at 3:30 p.m. behind the Pike house is the egg toss, involving a thrower and a catcher hurling raw eggs to each other at measured distances.

"Tuesday should be very fun," Cook said. "This event involves skill with intelligence. In the egg toss last year we had one team with a throw that was at least 50 yards without it breaking," Cook said. "Any hardboiled eggs will be DQed."

Also at 3:30 p.m. is the empty keg toss. The winner is the one who hurls the keg the farthest.

Following that at 4 p.m. is the UI tennis catches winning habit

By DERON KOSOFF
Staff Writer

The UI athletic programs have a catching habit this year — winning. And the men's and women's tennis teams seem to have caught it.

Vandal Head Coach Dave Scott said the successful seasons of other Vandal teams have inspired the tennis teams to give it their all.

"I'd like to thank the other athletic programs for doing so well," Scott said. "It kind of inspired us."

"Our goal is to provide our part in winning the all-sports trophy," Scott said. "We'd like to be a part of that, because the other athletic programs have definitely done their part."

Although the 9-2 men's team went 1-2 last weekend in the Weber State College Invitational in Ogden, Utah, Scott said the team fared well.

"We need to play quality teams like that," Scott said. "It let's everyone know what Division I tennis is all about."

Quality is right. The Vandals lost to Brigham Young University 2-7, Nevada-Las Vegas 1-5, but scored a big win over Boise State, 7-2.

"We had a great win over Boise," Scott said. "That was our goal."

Coaches from UNLV and BYU approached Scott after the matches and said Idaho has a very good team. Scott said the big name schools intimidate players just because of their name.

"If I flip-flopped names, the talent was real close," Scott said.

Freshman Jose Palacios defeated Yuta Tsunoda, 7-5, 2-6, 6-2, for UI's sole victory against UNLV. Against BYU, the formidable duo of Scott Andersen and Shane Ristau, now 7-0, defeated Hardin and Skoller, 6-7, 7-6, 7-6. UI's Martinez and Lewis also won their doubles match. Idaho crushed BSU in all doubles matches and four singles matches.

Meanwhile in Montana, the women's team beat Montana 7-2, lost to Montana State 4-5, and beat Washington State 5-4. UI's Patricia Shanander won three matches at number one singles and three matches at number one doubles with her sister Cathy. Patricia is now 11-2 with an eight-match winning streak, and is 9-2 in doubles. Scott said she has a good shot at winning the Big Sky title at number one singles.

UI clobbered at WSU meet

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Writer

Not much went well for the UI men's and women's track teams last Saturday in a dual meet against Washington State and Kansas State at WSU's Mooberry Track.

The UI squads watched as WSU easily took first in both the men's and women's standings. The meet came down to a second-place matchup between KSU and UI, which the KSU squads ultimately won.

For the women, sprinter Caryn Choate-Deeds placed first in the 100 meters with a time of 12:37. Other top placers were Kelley Carmody who finished second in the 800 meters, and Bobbi Purdy and Anne Scott who placed second and third in the 100-meter hurdles.

UI's Dan O'Brien took second in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 14:06. Although he finished second in the event, his time set a new UI record in the 100-meter hurdles previously set by Trond Knaplund. Knaplund ran a time of 14:23 in 1983. O'Brien's hurdle time ranks him ninth in Big Sky Conference history.

Other top finishers for the men were Mike Davis, with a second-place finish in the long-jump with a leap of 23-4 1/4, and a fifth place finish in the 100-meter hurdles. The steeplechase event was won by Mark Bechtel, Adam Schade finished third in the javelin, and Rob Demick (1:51.75) and Eversley Linley (1:52.36) finished first and second in the 800 meters.

Last week O'Brien broke the UI and Big Sky record in the decathlon with a total of 7,988 points. Knaplund held the previous record as well.

Both UI teams will travel to Boise Friday and Saturday for the Bob Gibb Invitational.

Rugger's drop game to Snakes

By LYNNETTE PIXLEY

The UI Rugby Club lost to the Caldwell Snakes 22-4 Saturday at Guy Wicks Field.

"This weekend was tough, they (Caldwell) are an older team that is well experienced, they have a smart style of playing rugby," said UI player David Bear.

The team takes on a Spokane area team Saturday on Guy Wicks field at 1 pm.

"Spokane is a tough team also, it should be a good match if the weather is good," Bear said.

plate and scored eight times to put the game out of reach. The Mounties picked up eight hits in the inning and were helped by one Vandal error.

Jeff Wilson, 0-1, took the loss in his first start of the season.

UI bounced back in the nightcap, only to see the Mounties score four runs in the final inning to win 8-7.

After one was out in the last frame, EOS collected three consecutive walks followed by a hit batsman to cut the Vandal lead to two at 7-5. John Pinto followed with a double to clear the bases and give the Mounties the come-from-behind win.

"We just haven't learned to win yet," UI player-coach Wade Wilson said. "We seem to tense up in the last inning. Instead of playing to win we've been playing not to lose, and when you play not to lose bad things will happen because you're not aggressive enough."

With the Vandals trailing 1-0 in the fourth, Wilson walked to start the inning and advanced to second on a passed ball. After Jim Davis singled, Dan Wordell singled to score Wilson and tie the game. On a Bob Frei grounder, UI took its first lead of the game and John Konrad pushed across the final run of the frame with a base hit.

The Mounties grabbed the lead back, 4-3, in the bottom of the inning with three runs of their own, but UI scored four in the fifth with Davis keying the rally with a three-run homer.

Sunday the contest was shortened to just five innings due to a time limit, but the two teams produced more runs in the final game of the series than in the previous two games combined in the Mounties' 20-19 win.

UI's hitting attack included home runs by Schwartz and Davis as well as a 3-5 performance by Wilson. Davis also had three hits while Kent Erickson, Martin Maxwell, Konrad and Wordell each had two hits.

The Vandals will take on Lewis Clark State junior varsity tomorrow at 5 p.m. in Lewiston.

SOCCKER CLUB SCRIMMAGES: The UI Soccer Club first team kicked into gear after a deadlocked 1-1 first half to take a 3-1 victory over the second team in an intersquad match held under game conditions Sunday afternoon. The scrimmage was the first full game action for either side this spring. Both teams are hoping for games within the next few weeks.

TRIATHLON ENTRY DEADLINE: The entry deadline for the April 22 Palouse Spring Triathlon is 5 p.m. Friday. Entry forms, maps and more information can be obtained at UI Campus Recreation, Memorial Gym 204. Applications for the event can also be picked up at the SUB Information Desk and entry fees are $15 for individuals and $45 for teams.

UPCOMING INTRAMURAL ACTION: Intramural Badminton doubles is Saturday in the PEB large gym. The men play at noon and the women at 3 p.m. The schedule of remaining 1989 spring intramural activities:

SPORT	PLAY BEGINS
Badminton (D).....	April 15
Horseshoes (D).....	April 22
Paddleball (D).....	April 22
Frisbee Golf.....	April 29

TROUT DISCUSSION: Cutthroat Trout and other endangered trout will be discussed during a seminar by Dr. Robert Behnke Thursday. The 7:30 p.m. program is free and open to the public and will be held at the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences, Room 10. Behnke, a professor at Colorado State University, is internationally known for his work on the classification of Western Trout.

HEALTHY COOKING CLASSES: Gritman Memorial Hospital will be offering a series of cooking classes for a "healthy heart." Nancy Kure, Gritman's Registered Dietitian will be teaching the five offered classes. The first class will be held Tuesday, 7 p.m. — 9 p.m. in the third floor of the Education Classroom at Gritman Memorial Hospital. Contact Jennifer Reynolds at 882-2232 for more information.

The week will then conclude on Friday with a barbecue held outside near the tennis courts next to the Wallace Complex from 4:30 p.m. - 6:30 p.m. Each hall will also receive points for making a poster advertising the barbecue.

"The events should be a lot of fun," McCoy said.

egg spoon relay — a four-people-per-team relay where each person will carry a spoon with an egg on it in his/her mouth for about 25 yards each way.

From 6:30 p.m. - 10 p.m. is the Greek Bowl, involving questions from many different areas, including science and history, which participants from each house try to answer.

Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. is the bake sale contest. Each group enters one baked good from each category which are cookies, cakes and pies. Judges look for taste, originality and difficulty of the recipe.

The baked goods will then be sold and the profits will go to Wishing Star (a foundation for terminally ill children), according to Cook.

Also at 3:30 p.m. on the Administration lawn is the tug-o-war competition. Each house is eligible to enter a six-person team.

No boots or cleats or spikes are allowed for traction, Cook said.

A new Greek Week event is the Greek Week Volleyball Tournament, which is a single-elimination, two-day event.

Preliminary rounds will be held Wednesday and the finals Thursday, Cook said. The tournament will be held at the SAE house and the Pike house.

"Also on Wednesday is something that everyone enjoys — Songfest. The event is worth major Greek Week points this year," Cook said.

Songfest begins at 7 p.m. in the Lionel Hampton School of Music Building.

Thursday at 3:30 p.m. is the boardwalk, which consists of five people per team who strap their feet to of 8-foot two-by-four boards and walk around a designated area.

Also on Thursday at 3:30 p.m. behind the Pikes is the pizza fest. Participants will try to devour a whole 12-inch cheese pizza provided by Pizza Perfection as fast as they can. "The event should make some good photos," said Cook.

Topping off Thursday and Greek Week events is the Greek Banquet at 6:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom.

Blue Planet shows nature's subtleties

Review by PAUL GREENWOOD
Staff Writer

It would be an interesting scenario indeed watching the director of Blue Planet trying to describe his film to a potential producer.

"Well, you see I want to make this really experimental, minimalist film with no actors, no plot, no story situations, no climax, no real action, but just a lot of real cool scenery of running water and spiders eating other helpless insects ... oh, and no soundtrack either, except the sound of water dripping, birds chirping and cows mooing for their dinner. Neat, huh?"

Although one must sympathize with the director's desperation in trying to convince anyone of the merit of this seemingly flaky idea, the raised eyebrows of a skeptical producer would not be wholly unjustified — Blue Planet is basically a film with no plot or characters, but a lot of real cool scenery of running water, hungry spiders and cows mooing for their dinner.

Giving it slightly more credit, this film is essentially a camera's odyssey into the world of nature and the beauty of the everyday scenes of bubbles slowly drifting to the surface of a frozen lake, dew dropping from a leaf and being bathed in morning light, steam rolling down from a mountain into a desolate valley, clouds tumbling swiftly into the sun's rays and close-ups of animals that almost make them reveal a human personality.

An intriguing idea and ambitious premise, to say the least,

Visiting journalist

U.S.-Soviet relations discussed

By DAVID KELLY
Staff Writer

Visiting Soviet journalist Vladimir Pozner will discuss U.S.-Soviet relations from a Russian journalist's point of view in a lecture Wednesday at Washington State University.

Pozner broke into journalism with the Novosti Press Agency in 1961. He has also been managing editor of Soviet Life magazine, published in the United States as the Soviet counterpart to America magazine, which appears in the USSR. He was also managing editor of Sputnik, a monthly magazine digest of the Soviet Press, said Sue Hinz, WSU Director of News and Information Services.

"(Pozner) is a very well versed and well qualified person," Hinz said. "We are so pleased that we could get him."

In 1970, Pozner became a commentator for the USSR State Committee for TV and Radio and in 1986, he was promoted to political observer, the top journalistic position in the Soviet Union and awarded the Soviet National Prize for journalism, Hinz said.

The lecture, to be held at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum at 7:30 p.m., is open to the public free of charge.

"Feel free to ask questions," said Dan Maher, program advisor for Activities/Recreational Sports. "There will be a question-and-answer session following the lecture."

"It is always more fun when people come prepared with really good questions," Maher said.

MFA candidates exhibit art to gain degree

Review By MICHAEL KERNER
Staff Writer

Planes, snakes, swastikas and James Joyce comprise some of the subject matter influencing the work of four artists currently on display at the UI campus Ridenbaugh gallery.

The show, which opened last evening, marks the second phase of the Master of Fine Art thesis exhibition. A total of six artists will earn the degree from the UI College of Art and Architecture this spring, with the thesis show serving as their final requirement.

Working in an aeronautic aspect resembling World War II images, Anthony VHR captures the romance of an era gone by. His pieces range from sculptural paintings of airplane wings to jets leaving trails of turbulent paint in their wake.

VHR uses a variety of media to create his images from the war era. Stretched canvas over wooden frames creates the forms of two sculptural airplane wings called Up side down. Many of the pieces are composed of metal tape formed over various surfaces. The tape is then buffed, painted and textured to create elements of sky, landscape and ground.

Shown with the works by VHR are the wearable textiles of Nancy Taylor. Taylor's pieces are articles of clothing constructed with everything from stuffed snakes and treated paper to mosquito netting.

The 'dresses' are displayed on manequine forms allowing the fabrics and construction of the pieces to be seen. Photos of women modeling the pieces are also shown to demonstrate their function as 'wearable art.' Taylor modeled one of her creations at the opening.

"I use snakes because of their history of association with men and what they have been known to represent," Taylor said.

Taylor's work Carnal Desires carries strong biblical contexts through her use of snakes. Miniature figures of Adam and Eve bearing reptilian embellishments are perched on top a bright red apple in a struggling embrace.

Although this reptilian influence can sometimes become overwhelming or disgusting, the significance of the creatures cannot be overlooked.

Sheila Flinchpaugh's work also contains several allegorical aspects. Flinchpaugh defines her pencil drawings and watercolors as 'character sketches' of close friends and family members, as well as literary characters.

In James Joyce Flinchpaugh

portrays the author as a frail, fragile man lacking his eyes. In contrast, Nora Barnacle, Joyce's companion, is portrayed as a strong figure, rendered three dimensionally and framed by weathered floor boards and door frames.

In addition to using traditional the media of pencil or paint, Flinchpaugh adds another dimension to her work by using common materials such as tea stains and dried honey to create texture and color.

Similar to Flinchpaugh's texture, Todd Trakinat's work is based entirely on the texture and surface of the paint.

"These pieces are founded in the formal aspects of the paint and its surroundings," Trakinat said.

The paint on the surface of Trakinat's paintings is up to three quarters of an inch thick in some areas. The texture varies from thin, trickling washes of color, to paint applied directly from the tube.

Although Trakinat's work is concerned with paint, subject matter and technique are also present as seen in Little Painting About Germany, Limp Swastica. The almost six foot square canvas depicts a dismal forest landscape. Such items as trees, lame animals and dead foliage serve as a background for a red and white floating swastica with four limp arms. An actual tree branch rests against the painting with the same texture as represented in the surface of the paint.

The six MFA candidates, the four in this show and Deborah Allen and Melanie Weston who exhibited earlier this month, must prepare written thesis statements and oral defenses about their work.

The thesis showings of Bachelor of Architecture and Bachelor of Fine Art candidates' work will complete Ridenbaugh Gallery's exhibition season.

Love and Money sleek, jazzy

Review by DENA BANDAIZAN
Staff Writer

Love and Money has a sound all their own. Their new album, Strange Kind Of Love, is a curiously classy kind of pop.

"Hallelujah Man" is the only release from the album so far. You may be familiar with its danceable sound. A catchy beat accompanies singer/guitarist James Grant's unique vocals.

The consistent sound of this album can almost be described as jazzy. "The Shape Of Things To Come" is the first love song on the record and it is a slower, sexier-sounding song of a man thinking about his lover. The lyrics expose a certain sensitivity: "You're like the sun against my skin, my affliction, sweet addiction."

In the cut "Jocelyn Square," Grant sings about a lost love that he is still hating himself for missing. If you've ever had a broken heart, you'll probably be able to relate to this song. The ballad says, "Nothing much has really changed, I still think about you, but only when it rains ... I hate myself for wishing, missing."

"Walk The Last Mile," probably one of the best cuts on the album, has an alluring beat and is about a man in love.

The last four songs, "Razorsedge," "Inflammable," "Up Escalator" and "Avalanche" are money-oriented songs about greed and success. Many people may see themselves in these songs, wanting to get to the high-paying job and the lifestyle that goes with it, regardless of what it takes to get there.

This Scotland band's second album includes a good mix of slower, sexy music and stronger sounding tunes, and correspondingly, a mix of themes about love and money.

The record works well as background music — definitely nothing harsh. The tunes are all variations on a similar sound and you'll definitely be able to recognize Love and Money's sleek sound after hearing Strange Kind Of Love.

Two authors will read from their works today and tomorrow in Moscow.

D'Wayne Hodgkin will be reading "Bait and Switch" and "Family Vacation" as part of his personal selections at Cafe Spudnik tonight at 8 p.m.

Jane Barnes will be reading her work Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the UI Law School. Barnes has published screenplays with Warner Brothers, TV series for The American Masters and several short stories and novels.

Hodgin has been writing for about 20 years and is currently teaching business and technical writing classes at the University of Idaho.

Hodgin said both stories are set in the South where he grew up. He has also written a series of stories based on a fictional town on the Idaho-Washington border.

Barnes, who is originally from New England, has been teaching at different universities throughout the country and also taught at the Iowa Writer's Workshop. She is conducting a writer's workshop at the university this month.

She will be reading from her novel "Academy of Passion," a story set in the 1960s from the point of view of "youth struggling with insensitive parents," she said.

this film is more than merely a nature-hike scrapbook. The driving idea behind this film is to expose and unlock our world's hidden mysteries and beauties that are sabotaged by the often clouded powers of sight.

Using merely a series of subtle imagery combined with powerful camera shots this film at times reaches poetic heights. Each shot portrays a small aspect of life and nature in a complete frame, presenting the the harmonious relationship between the elements within the frame, and showing us, as in the art of photography, that a scene of light bouncing chaotically off running water is, indeed, a complete universe in itself.

Unfortunately, this ambitious project does have some flaws that detract from the overall effect. At times the film proves to be undeniably boring, incredibly repetitious and a great deal of the middle portion of the film contains shots which, even with carefully planned camera angles, are uninteresting and uninspired. A more discriminating choice of subject matters and more precise editing would have enhanced the film's final impression.

That aside, Blue Planet is a worthwhile effort as a whole and very powerful during certain segments. Although not "exciting" in the traditional definition of the word, this film appeals to the more subdued state of the soul, and proves that there is a certain charm in subtlety and tranquility.

■ UI SCHEDULES PRE-ADVISING

The University of Idaho will conduct its first pre-advicing session April 17-28 as a forerunner for pre-registration next fall and a completely computerized pre-registration package by spring 1990.

Pre-advicing is being developed as a result of close cooperation between the Office of Academic Affairs and the Faculty Committee on Retention. The committee's recent final report recommended adoption of pre-advicing as a student retention tool. The report was adopted by the UI Faculty Council at its April 4 meeting.

According to Thomas Bell, vice president for academic affairs and research, the procedure will be conducted as follows:

Sample registration cards are completed, with one kept by the student and one by the department.

When the student returns in the fall, they consult the time schedule for corrections. If the schedule developed during pre-advicing has no conflicts, the student can complete the registration packet and see the departmental secretary or other designee. That person signs the packet and certifies on the departmental copy of the sample registration that the schedule is one agreed upon by the adviser.

If the pre-adviced schedule presents major conflicts after the time schedule is consulted, the student will work out the problem with the adviser.

"We also expect that, by conducting pre-advicing and, eventually, pre-registration, we'll be able to allocate a much larger share of our attention and resources at the beginning of each semester to our new freshmen and transfer students," Bell said.

■ KORN REPRESENTS WESTERN GREEKS

OAKLAND, Calif. — The president of the UI Inter-Fraternity Council was elected Saturday to serve as Area One Representative to the Western Regional Greek Conference.

IFC President Doug Korn will represent Northwest Greeks in planning next year's WRGC, scheduled to be held in Arizona.

The springtime workshop gives Greek student leaders a chance to discuss everything from rush plans to academic programs.

"I think he'll really do something," said Pam Stone, UI Panhellenic President. "The past (representatives) didn't even show up to the Rocky Mountain Greek Conference."

In March, the UI hosted the Rocky Mountain Greek Conference. About 320

Greeks from more than a dozen Northwestern universities attended.

Stone was one of four UI students attending this weekend's Western Regional Greek Conference. Also attending meetings were: Korn; Tonia Wilson, Panhellenic Rush Chairman; and Fred LaClaire, IFC public relations chairman.

■ ENGINEERING CONTEST ON

Most bridge builders don't design a bridge just to watch its destruction.

But for an Idaho high school student, such devastation could be worth a one-year scholarship to the University of Idaho. That's the top prize in the Centennial bridge design contest, sponsored by the university's College of Engineering.

According to Richard Nielsen, assistant professor of civil engineering, kits with contest materials were mailed last December to more than 750 high school students throughout the state who requested them.

Cash prizes of $50, $100 and $250 will be awarded to the top three designers in each of the five locations. Also, the top overall designer for the five combined locations will receive a scholarship equivalent to in-state fees for one year to attend the UI.

► RANGERS from page 1 day afternoons, will require more rangers. Rangers won't go out if the play doesn't warrant it.

"Rangers will go out once or twice each hour and take a cursory view on what is going on and deal with problems such as keeping the play moving and alcohol use," Bouillon said.

The rangers will be patrolling the course and performing other duties.

"We will utilize them in other ways such as behind the counter or on the driving range to keep them busy when the play is slow," Bouillon said.

The program was changed in July, Bails said.

"We knew last year that there would be changes in the program," he said. "We had adequately taken care of the problems."

Bails refused to comment on what those problems were.

"That is not for you to know or anyone else for that matter," he said.

However, White said some problems weren't adequately solved.

"If our job was to curtail the drinking, then we did. We drove it underground," he said. "If our job was to enforce the rules and speed up play, then we didn't."

Frame said that drinking was never a real problem.

"The drinking problem was minimal compared to the problems involving the general safety rules of the game,"

Frame said. "You're risking the safety of the golfers if the general rules aren't followed."

White said he was never sure who he and other marshals were working for, but he was told when the job began it was not for Don Bails and the UI Golf Course.

"Rumor was that President (Richard) Gibb wanted the marshals right away and that he would find a way to pay for them later," White said. "When we started at $6 and hour we weren't working for Don Bails, but when the hourly rate went down to $4 we were. Where the money was coming from before, I do not know."

Armstrong said that Gibb told UI Controller Gerry Reynolds that the marshals were needed and to find the funds to pay for them.

Asked where the money came from, Reynolds said, "Salaries came from the operational fund for the golf course."

According to Don Amos, Business Manager of Financial Affairs, the UI Golf Course had revenue of $187,283 last year, but expenses exceeded this by $12,601.

Bouillon said that the marshals were part of the reason for the deficit but not the total reason for the loss.

"Many factors were involved," Bouillon said. "Reconstruction, general maintenance of the course and the weather all contributed to the loss."

KUID-TV to help produce Borah Symposium documentary

By MIKE LEWIS
Staff Writer

Borah Symposium organizers and KUID-TV officials will team up to produce a 30-minute video documentary targeted for widespread distribution on the Public Broadcasting System.

B.J. Hargrove, a member of the Borah Symposium Committee, will edit the program using symposium footage provided by KUID and action footage acquired from PBS.

"From all the information, we'll break it down into a 30-minute documentary with the intention to air it on PBS with as much national coverage as we can get," Hargrove said.

"We'll be showing drug raids and plantations in Central and South America," she said. "There will be a lot of action footage so it won't be just a talking heads kind of thing."

In the past, about 30 stations have televised the documentaries, said Jim Owens, former symposium chairman. Owens, a former UI sociology professor, said that although the program may be distributed in many parts of the nation, it will be broadcast at the discretion of individual stations.

According to KUID Station Manager Russ Spain, Hargrove will do the "off-line" editing before KUID produces the final broadcast tape.

"From what she has done, we use that as a guideline to edit on the broadcast tape," Spain said. KUID will air the documentary when it is completed, he said.

"I can't praise KUID enough with what they've done helping us," Hargrove said. "Except for the engineer and director, it was all students who had the functions, and I think it was really professional."

Hargrove said the video program should be ready for distribution next month.

KUID came under fire last month for refusing to televise the symposium for a second consecutive year. But the station struck a last-minute deal to produce a live broadcast of the event, which was televised on cable Channel ITV-8. KUID officials said they would not televise the event because it interfered with previously scheduled programming.

This is all you need to apply for the Card.

With Automatic Approval, it's easier to qualify while you're still in school.

Now getting the Card is easier than ever. For the very first time, students can apply for the American Express® Card over the phone.

Simply call 1-800-942-AMEX. We'll take your application by phone and begin to process it right away.

It couldn't be easier.
