Bands, bars raise money for racism protest march

By MIKE LEWIS
Staff Writer

Members of the campus-based group Students Against Racism are organizing fundraising efforts in an attempt to generate support for Saturday's anti-racism march in Coeur d'Alene.

The group is sponsoring three local bands — Ignatius, Imaginary Friend and Evidence — which will perform at the SUB Ballroom Friday at 8 p.m. Admission is $2.

"We want to take 200-plus people," said Christy Kretschmer, a member of the group. "The $2 is to raise money for advertising for the march and for busing."

Kretschmer said the group will car pool to the march and encourages student participation in Saturday's march. Car pools will depart from the ASUI-Kibbie Dome Saturday at 7:30 a.m. The march begins at 11 a.m.

The seven-mile march will take place along the bike path in Coeur d'Alene beginning in front of Rosauers. The march is being held to protest the national neo-Nazi youth conference at the Aryan Nations' compound in Hayden Lake April 21-23. The march is expected to attract

"several thousand people" from throughout the Northwest, according to organizer Lisa Anderson of the Coeur d'Alene-based group Citizens for Nonviolent Action Against Racism.

Kretschmer said she wants people to understand that Students Against Racism is separate from Anderson's group.

"We're a campus group and we're going because we're opposed to what's going on and don't think it should be happening," she said.

Anderson's group has been in conflict with several area human rights groups, including the Kootenai Human Rights Task Force, which decided not to sponsor Anderson's march because of its potential to incite violent reactions.

Kretschmer said that the group "unconditionally requires all marchers to take a pledge of non-violence" and asks that all signs and banners display messages of peace and social justice. The group is also encouraging marchers to wear blue and red bandanas.

"The blue ones symbolize justice and the red ones symbolize courage," Kretschmer said.

Private industry asked to bring libraries on-line

By LEN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

West One Bank donated $100,000 to the UI Library Monday for computerization of library services.

The donation is a portion of funding needed for new projects to turn the library into a "21st century library," said Eileen Hitchingham, dean of library services.

Also on the renovation agenda is the installation of a state library computer system. Two librarians will travel to Boise Wednesday to request $1.5 million for the system from U.S. West Direct.

People throughout Idaho would be able to use the computer system by telephone if the library obtains funds to complete three phases of the project, said Ron Force, associate dean of library services. Force and Hitchingham will present the plan to U.S. West Direct.

If the plan is approved and completed, Idaho citizens would be able to use a computer modem to call the UI library via the "Info-Idaho Network." People using the system could obtain information about which books, government documents, magazines or newspapers were available at state libraries.

"The whole idea is to allow somebody to use the library without coming to the library," Force said.

Many states already have similar systems. The Colorado Alliance of Research Libraries (CARL) system is hooked up to 115 libraries throughout the state and gives Colorado citizens access to any publication in those libraries. Newspaper articles are typed out on the system for library patrons to read right from their home computers.

More than 5,000 journal titles are listed in the CARL system, Force said. The system is being expanded to hold 10,000.

To use the CARL system, a person types a reference word and CARL will show the number of entries. To narrow the entries to what is wanted, he/she can type in another referral word. When the list is narrowed down, CARL will tell where the publications are located and whether they are checked out or not. The person then can order one or more of the books to check out.

UI librarians may want a system different than CARL, Hitchingham said.

"We would choose the one that would best serve the needs of Idaho," she said.

In Phase One of the Info-Idaho Network, which may be much like CARL, will be eventually hooked up to various buildings on campus for a test run if the library receives the funds, Hitchingham said. At

Steel House wants to regain control of kitchen

By KARA GARTEN
Staff Writer

Steel House residents are working on an agreement that would let the cooperative regain control of its own food service operations.

Steel House food service has been managed by the university since a spring 1988 audit of another campus cooperative uncovered problems in that living group's bookkeeping system.

"We've had a lot of discussions with the administration and we hope to come up with an agreement we can live with and they can live with," said Michelle Meloy, Steel House bookkeeper.

At this point, Marriott has control of Steel House's food service.

Meloy said house residents hope to finalize an agreement with the Housing and Food Service office that would give the residents control of dining responsibilities. The agreement would provide for a co-op council consisting of four administrators and the president and treasurer of Steel House to advise and oversee the arrangement.

Steel House's food service was taken over by the university this year after the audit of Targhee Hall, another co-op, revealed some internal accounting problems.

John Farbo, director of auditing services, said Steel had better accountability than Targhee but there was still room for improvement of internal control.

Until this year, Steel had $60,000 in certificates of deposit. The CDs were issued in past treasurers' names.

"We suggested that it be set up so the university could have control of the CDs also," Farbo said. "When we're looking at $60,000 that is not good control at all. There is quite a chance for abuse."

Terry Armstrong, executive assistant to the president, said the Targhee audit was prompted by some accounting difficulties with student accounts receivable at Targhee.

"What we got involved in was their budgeting procedures. We were most concerned about their petty cash," Armstrong said. "We

Latest UI computer chip developed for NASA telescope

The most complex computer chip designed thus far at the University of Idaho will become an integral part of NASA's space telescope program.

Produced at NASA's Space Engineering Research Center in the College of Engineering, the processor resides on a single square of silicon measuring one-third of an inch. It contains about 200,000 transistors and performs approximately 800 million operations per second.

Hewlett Packard, working with the UI team of researchers, fabricated the chip. It has been sent to the Goddard Space Flight Center to be installed in the communication hardware for the space telescope, slated for a Dec. 11 launch.

"I have been testing the chip and it's working fine. The chip will be used in the data capture facility at Goddard," said Greg Henegan of the Goddard Center.

"We were delighted with the hard work of the Microelectronics Research Center team in meeting NASA's schedule," said Sterling Whitaker, project manager at the UI.

Engineer Kelly Cameron noted that the testing process went exceptionally well despite the chip's complexity. He said sophisticated tests used at the fabrication factory to verify that a chip works correctly normally take weeks or even months to complete. However, the UI-generated tests were passed in a single day.

Working on the project with Whitaker and Cameron are Peter Vincent, John Canaris and Lowell Miles.

"I had confidence that this quality team of professionals and graduate students who built this computer would indeed meet a difficult schedule, and provide the nation with an important piece of electronics that will help us understand the universe," said Thomas Bell, UI vice president for academic affairs and research.

LOGGING COMPETITION BEGINS. Idaho's biggest logging event of the year begins today as the UI hosts the 50th Anniversary Conclave of the Association of Western Forestry Clubs. Events this week include talks, tours and a logger sports competition. Today's events include a tour of the UI Experimental Forest, dinner at Potlatch's Log Inn and a talk on Idaho's white pine history by local historian Keith Petersen. Contact the College of Forestry for more information.

BUSINESS, FORESTRY EARN GRANT. The UI College of Business and Economics and College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences have jointly received a grant for more than $80,000 for a project funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Pakistan government. Pakistan faces a shortage of timber used for fuel, construction and paper. The grant will be used to fund UI courses designed to teach international forestry management skills.

150 watch burial of twin time capsules

Centennial tree grove dedications symbolize future

By LEN ANDERSON
Staff Writer

More than 150 people witnessed the Centennial tree grove dedication and the burial of the 50- and 100-year time capsules at the Administration Building Saturday.

"The western white pine, the state tree, represents scenic beauty," said UI student Shelley Watson, who helped dedicate the grove of five trees. "The hybrid poplar represents high technology. The douglas fir represents strength and stability. The western larch represents rapid growth and diversity. And finally the ponderosa pine represents perseverance and longevity."

The tree grove dedications began last summer when Centennial coordinators planted trees in each of Idaho's 44 counties and four counties in other states.

"These trees and the trees that have been planted across the state are living, growing representations of the relationship which exists between the University of Idaho and the citizens of Idaho," said Flip Kleffner, acting vice president for alumni relations and development.

The trees, however, are only symbols of the university, Kleffner said. It is up to individuals to give them meaning, he said.

Immediately after the tree grove dedication, Centennial Coordinator Hal Godwin began the time capsule ceremonies.

Centennial officials filled the two clear, high-tech plastic time capsules with various items, including a pizza box, a Vandal helmet, several shirts, audio and video cassette tapes, letters from UI and state officials, and copies of items from the time capsule opened in January. The time capsule memorabilia will help future UI students learn about campus life 50 and 100 years before their time.

"This is a wonderful way for us to forge a link between today and our future 50 years and 100 years hence," Godwin said.

After a dedication by UI President Richard Gibb, Centennial officials asked those present to write comments on cards, which were then placed in the time capsule.

"You must be present to win," Godwin said while officials collected the cards that will be read in 50 years.

A crew then sealed the capsules and prepared them for their final lift into the cement vault located under the flag pole.

"Bicentennial Time Capsule," a white sign on the 100-year capsule reads. "To be opened in the year 2089. A gift to the future."

A similar sign was placed on the 50-year capsule.

Tom Garrison, one of the student engineers who constructed the capsules, said that although the plastic capsules must be destroyed to be opened, in 50 years someone may discover another way to open them.

The crane arm slowly lifted the two capsules, one after the other, into the vault. Two men squeezed white paste from a tube onto the vault's rim, and the crane lowered the cement lid onto the vault to seal it for 50 years.

The crew, however, didn't notice a blue and white Phi Gamma Delta sticker that a fraternity member had placed on the vault.

As the festivities ended, silver and gold balloons were released. The crew shoveled dirt over the vault and marked the spot with a large rock and a plaque.

And there the twin capsules rest until 2039.

Vandals' Cafe to replace SUB Blue Bucket study area

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

A plan to tear out the SUB Blue Bucket study area and replace it with a new Vandals' Cafe was changed last week after students complained the interior designer's color scheme was inappropriate.

The original plan, under which Marriott's University Dining Service would redecorate the cafe with a crimson and gray color scheme, was changed after students complained the colors were more akin to Washington State University than Idaho.

Marriott officials presented the plans to students last week at Wednesday night's Senate meeting.

The floor plans call for extensive remodeling of Joe's Cafe, said Mike Thomsen, retail dining director for Marriott's University Dining Service.

According to the plans, new doors will be placed on the SUB's east side providing Deakin Street access. The cafe will be made into a "scramble" area which will be surrounded by various food counters. There will be several corner booths as well as regular tables and chairs.

"There will be a lot of comfortable, private seating space in there," Thomsen said. "There will actually be more study space."

The proposal will increase available seating by about 30-40 seats.

New tentative color combinations for the Vandals' Cafe include black carpet and grey tile.

And "a little bit of gold to fit in with the Vandal theme," Thomsen said.

Construction should be completed this summer, according to Thomsen.

"We're really under the gun to get it done by next fall," Thomsen said.

He said Marriott may be able to bypass Idaho Board of Education inspections required of school construction, since Marriott is a private corporation. The inspections could take two to three weeks, Thomsen said.

It has yet to be decided whether the study area will close when Marriott does or would be left open later for studying. Joe's is currently open until 8 p.m. with the study area open until 11 p.m.

"But I'm sure we'll be able to work something out," Thomsen said.

Aid office offers debt management workshop

By ANN ROBISON
Contributing Writer

Graduating seniors who have received Stafford Guaranteed Student Loans are urged to attend an informal meeting Wednesday with UI financial aid officials.

Dan Davenport, director of student financial aid, said the meeting will cover topics such as repayment options and consolidation of loans and deferments. Other areas of discussion include explanations of the loans available to students and how to apply for loans.

The low-interest Stafford loans are made by a lender such as a bank, credit union or savings and loan association. Sometimes the school acts as the lender.

"Anyone is welcome, but we strongly encourage anyone with loans to attend," Davenport said. "Taking out loans is something to be concerned about. Plan your debt before you take out a loan."

The meeting will prepare students who have received Stafford

Loans for their exit interviews. The interviews are counseling sessions in which the school gives the student information on the average amount borrowers owe, the amount of the monthly repayment and information about deferment, refinancing and loan consolidation options.

Students will receive letters from the financial aid office indicating when their exit interview will be held.

Mary Jane Bauer, financial aid adviser, will conduct the loan debt counseling meeting.

The meeting begins at 4 p.m. in UCC Room 110.

the same time the system will be directly linked to Idaho State University.

Phase Two of the project will be to involve Boise, Twin Falls, and Coeur d'Alene.

With Phase Three, school districts throughout the state will have easy access to the system. The system will be then nearly complete.

The full project will take five years to complete, if the library receives the $1.5 million.

Eventually the system will be linked to neighboring states for even more access.

Along with the Info-Idaho Network funds, librarians have been waiting for surplus state taxes to plan for the expansion of the library by 50 percent.

Phase One of the plan consisted of the basement redevelopment project, in which constructors put in easy-rotating shelves and an alarm system. The basement was dedicated Monday.

Thanks for making UI a better place

Forget the white stretch limousines and hundreds of adoring fans. Forget the fancy gowns, hokey dance routines and world-wide TV coverage. Even forget the perfectly paired award presenters. It just didn't happen that way.

But don't you dare forget the winners of this year's university and Greek awards. These are some of the groups and individuals who make the UI a better place to be.

Last Thursday with the conclusion of Greek Week, the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council recognized the accomplishments of its membership.

And the Pi Beta Phi sorority needed a moving van to get all of its awards home. The group took the Intramurals Award, a Chapter Excellence Award, the Scholarship Award and was named Greek Week champion for the fourth straight year.

Phi Gamma Delta and Delta Delta Delta received the Alumni Relations Award, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon took the fraternity Intramurals Award. Sigma Chi and Alpha Gamma Delta received the Public Relations Award. Chapter Excellence Awards also went to the Gamma Phi Beta sorority and FarmHouse, Delta Tau Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Sigma Chi fraternities.

At Saturday's Parents Weekend Awards Assembly, dozens of students were recognized for their academic and activity contributions to the UI.

Louise Mainvil received the the university's highest student award, the Theophilus Award. Meanwhile, Vicki Renfrow and Laura Woodworth shared the Outstanding Senior Woman Award. And Debbie Clayville took home the Frank Childs Award for outstanding service to the ASUI.

During the ceremonies, the 29 winners of the Outstanding Senior Award were announced. Recipients include Mark Bechtel, Amanda Brailsford, Debbie Clayville, Eric DeBord, Paula Engel, Jeffrey Friel, Ronda Goin, Lois Griffiths, Susan Hamlin, Kathryn Hemberry, Heather Herrett, Michael Kerner, Brett Kleffner, Louise Mainvil, Esther McCall, Craig McCurry, Inger Molina, Karolyn Nearing, Nicole Peterson, Kenneth Pratt, Richard Rees, Vicki Renfrow, Wendy Reynolds, John Sims, Tami Thompson, Sean Wall, Molly Weyen, David Wimer and Laura Woodworth.

For all the winners' dedication, determination and devotion to the university — Good for U.

It took nearly a week to break through the UI's red tape, but members of the UI Veterans Club say it was worth it.

Last week after receiving the go-ahead, eight members of the ASUI-affiliated organization spent the day cleaning plaques in the Memorial Gym lobby. The 10 plaques honor Idaho citizens and UI alumni who died in battles ranging from the Spanish-American War to World War II.

According to Joe Martin, president of the student club, the plaques haven't been spruced-up since 1975. All it took was a few emery cloths, some steel wool and a lot of elbow grease, he said.

This isn't the group's first effort this year, however. They've also raised the Administration Building flag on Veteran's Day and are searching for names of university alumni killed in the Korean conflict.

"They been forgotten all these years and it is about time to remember them," Martin said.

SISCA says don't believe every poster you read

Editor:

Do your research, anonymous author(s) of "SISCA supports communist revolution in El Salvador." The time you spent posting the campus would have been more wisely spent discovering the reality of El Salvador.

SISCA does not support Soviet communism in El Salvador. SISCA not only supports a stop to U.S. aid in El Salvador but, more accurately, a stop to all political economic and military intervention, whether the sources be communist or not. Only then will the civilians of El Salvador (minus the 60,000 already dead) be able to govern themselves as we do in the United States. We feel that Central America must no longer be a political and literal battlefield for East-West confrontation.

Your proposed "results" of an end to U.S. aid are so ludicrous that you're obviously a hopeless victim of brainwash. They must be discussed however, because they are yet another source of false information. You state that a stop to U.S. aid "will destroy any chance for political or economic freedom in El Salvador." I can only assume that you refer to the freedom of the El Salvadorans. On Dec. 26, 1988, ARDE, garrisons of the armed forces and organized by the ARENA party now in power, declared a new death-squad campaign to "totally exterminate the horde" of trade unions, peasant groups, human rights organizations and political parties opposed to the policies of the Salvadoran government. What chance of freedom does that declaration represent to you?

You state that an end to U.S. aid "will tip the balance of power in favor of Marxist revolution and further Soviet military presence." Gorbachev has declared his support of a "zone of peace" throughout Central America. Recently in Cuba he said that the Soviet Union "does not seek for itself political, strategic or military advantage in the Western Hemisphere." He expressed Soviet displeasure with Cuban use of economic aid and said that the Kremlin will refrain from putting military bases or nuclear weapons in the region. Does Gorbachev sound like a man who's ready to move in on the rubble of El Salvador when he appears to be loosening ties with Cuba, a country full of well-fed, well-educated declared communists at the back door of the U.S. and at

THOUGHTS TO CONSIDER WHILE PRESIDENT BUSH TAKES HIS SPUR-OF-THE-MOMENT JAUNTS AROUND WASHINGTON...

Help fight racism in northern Idaho

Street gangs have become a commonality in America. Traditionally street gangs, mainly Italian and Chicano, waged war over turf. Soon the drug trade became indoctrinated into street gangs, and black, Jamaican, Asian and Cuban gangs turned drugs and money into power. A new form of the street gang has emerged on the horizon, motivated not by turf or power, but by racism.

Young white racist gangs, or skinheads, have sprouted up predominantly in California, Chicago, Dallas, Orlando and several other southern locations. There are approximately 2,500 skinheads and their numbers are growing rapidly. Due to their exponential growth, skinheads have become the new core of the neo-Nazi movement.

Motivated by an intense hatred for all non-whites, skinheads hold no empathy for minorities. Between 1980 and 1986, neo-Nazi groups committed 121 murders and 302 assaults against minorities. Chicago area skinheads have continually defaced the Holocaust memorial and in 1987, skinhead violence in California shot up 121 percent.

Los Angeles detective Mike Brandt said, "They are a threat to the moral fiber of our society."

The white-hot hatred inherent in the racist mentality and the goals espoused by their leaders are encapsulated in a statement by Tom Metzger, leader of the White Aryan Resistance and guru of several skinhead movements. Metzger said, "It's a Jewish conspiracy... WAR's position is... once we get the people's minds right and we get rid of all of these white traitors, the Jews will be a weekend operation, baby!"

Aryan Nations leader Richard Butler has organized a skinhead convention near Hayden Lake Friday through Sunday.

The Aryan Nations is composed of 7,000 members nationally who believe that only whites can become true Christians, that racial mixing is forbidden by God, that Jews are children of the devil, and that Aryans are the proper inheritors of God's Promised Land. The Aryan Nations initiates children into its conclave and provides its members with paramilitary training. The group has equipped itself with a military armada and its offices, meeting hall, and "church" all are protected by a tower and stockade patrolled by armed guards.

During the winter of 1983, a sub-group of the Aryan Nations known as the Order waged a terrorist war of bombings, robbery and murder across the Pacific Northwest to overthrow what they termed the "Zionist occupational government."

Butler's motives in organizing the skinhead rally are quite clearly to recruit young racists that he feels are capable of furthering his aims. Racist leaders such as

You state that a stop to U.S. aid "will open the door for Nicaragua to sponsor more guerrilla warfare against the peoples of Central America." The guerrillas of Central America are not at war with the peoples of Central America. The guerrillas of Central America are the peoples of Central America at war with their U.S.-backed oppressive governments. But your most ludicrous statement is that a stop to U.S. aid "will produce terrible death, misery and poverty for the people of Central America." Well those of us who have been to Central America, those of us who read newspapers and magazines, those of us who identify ourselves and discuss our convictions and those of us who seek the truth about our government are deeply concerned about the death, misery and poverty which plague Central America today. Let's clear up some tax facts

Editor:
Just a quick correction on Todd Harper's commentary. Although I agree with him wholeheartedly, he did make a few mistakes concerning income taxes. First, even if your part-time job income is low, you can still elect to have taxes withheld. There is a line on your W-4 which asks how much additional money you want withheld. The amount you fill in will be deducted on top of the $0 that is automatically deducted. Second, only "the amounts you used for expenses other than tuition and course-related expense are taxable." In other words, financial aid is not taxable on the portion you spend on fees and books. Increasing housing costs will, however, increase your taxes if financial aid pays you housing. Hopefully this will clear things up.

'Human Sexuality' should be offered as a core class

Editor:
The Center for Disease Control has reported that 50,670 Americans died prior to March 20, 1989 due to AIDS, and by the end of 1991 that number is projected to rise more than 150,000.

I personally will not take the risk of having sex with someone that I do not know well. I'll do a lot for love, but I'm not ready to die for it. The key to preventing AIDS is education. Many colleges across the nation offer a core class called "Human Sexuality." The course focuses on the human reproductive system, contraceptives and contemporary social issues related to human sexuality.

Our university does not offer such a course as a core class. Instead, we have some interesting courses in our core curriculum to choose from, such as "Film and International Culture," which we do not see very often in other colleges. While I agree the university should offer a course in film and international culture, I feel a course in human sexuality has much more merit to be included in the core.

Now which is better: to get a glimpse of a foreign culture which probably has little impact on my future, or to become knowledgeable about human sexuality and problems related to it? Such a knowledge can help me to make better decisions and to pursue a safe, planned and fulfilling life.

If such a course is offered and taught by an inspiring instructor who can make the course interesting and appealing to students, I guarantee that nine out of 10 students will take this course for their core requirement. And that would allow the chance for our university to massively educate her children on vital and indispensable issues regarding human sexuality.

Let me close this letter with a quote from AIDS victim James Hurley, an attorney from Bloomfield, Conn., who died at the age of 33 and recorded his final reflection just 10 days before he died. "Start to focus on the real issue, and that's prevention.

There is no doubt how AIDS is passed. What we should be doing now is educating people. I want to close by saying that AIDS is not my problem any longer. AIDS is your problem, and I hope you'll do something about it."

Cross says paper has a new spirit

Editor:
This semester the Argonaut has seemed to generate a new spirit, providing well-written and well-edited news of the campus and its students in an attractive package. You are also stimulating a lot of thought and discussion through your opinion pages.

In short you and your staff are doing a good job and you should be congratulated. It is not an easy job nor is it very often an appreciated one.

The Argonaut is now in its 91st year and is one of the oldest independent student newspapers in the Northwest. It has a lofty and proud tradition that you are helping to carry on. It is as it has always been—a student newspaper run by the students for the students.

I hope that I, along with the Argonaut, can survive another nine years when the newspaper celebrates its 100th birthday. Won't that be a whindinger.

Wallace Cafeteria: looking for a few good can openers

Editor:
I have this certain urge to write about our recent health inspection ("Wallace Cafeteria: Health inspection 'disappoints' boss," Argonaut, March 7, 1989.) One remark was about a dirty can opener.

I don't consider our precious can opener dirty. It is well-used and there was probably some paper or foil or tomato sauce from a can that was just opened on it. When you consider one can opener for all to use and that we open probably 100 cans a day, then is there any wonder there is something hanging on it or whatever the inspector saw?

When our former cafeteria manager retired four years ago we tried to give it to her for a going-away present. But, she couldn't take anything from the cafeteria, so we still have it.

So what I ask, if anyone has a good can opener, we would gladly take it. And if we should get more than we can use, we will find a corner in the cafeteria for them and maybe we could call our pace of the can opener cafeteria.

Market, not media caused potato panic

Editor:
R.D. Vesser raised some interesting questions spurring on a barrage of conservative causes while blaming the "liberal media" for threats to whole sectors of our trade and economy. His analysis was so ludicrous that it compels a rational response. I would suggest that the economic system is threatening itself and using the media as pawns to satisfy its own speculative gains.

Despite what the National Geographic article "sounds like," its source of information was the Department of Energy's own report, released in December 1988, which labeled the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory as their worst case of contamination among the federal weapons facility waste sites. I sincerely doubt that the DOE would exaggerate the extent of contamination at one of their own reserves. I also doubt that the DOE has been infiltrated by "liberals" or other subversives, as more than half of their budget is dedicated to the defense of this country. That same report exposes an extremely serious problem with this country's radioactive waste disposal system which ex-Secretary Herrington himself estimates to be a $100 billion cleanup cost. Remember, this man and his report operated under the Reagan presidency.

You were indeed correct in stating that the employees at the INEL are drinking the water contaminated by the "plume of tritium" (see the DOE report). The acknowledged radiation contamination is spreading beyond the boundaries of the INEL reservation in one of the nation's largest aquifers. The problem is that no scientist will or can honestly represent that exposure to any amounts of radiation is harmless. The fact remains that woefully

Metzger and Butler develop educated racists who have the potential to permeate the government, the military and other powerful social institutions.

Orange County WAR director Brad Robarge recently said, "It doesn't matter if your hair is long or short. At this point in the game, anybody who's white and racially conscious, come on over."

To protest Butler's skinhead convention a civil rights march is being held in Coeur d'Alene Saturday. Supporters of the march include the Seattle City Council, the Portland Board of Commissioners, citizens for Nonviolent Action Against Racism of Coeur d'Alene and Students Against Racism of Moscow. The march begins at 11 a.m. along U.S. Highway 95.

A dance Friday night at the UI SUB will feature the bands Imaginary Friend, Ignatius and Evidence. Proceeds from the dance will be used to transport Moscow marchers to Coeur d'Alene.

Those who want to participate in the march must be at the Kibbie Dome parking lot by 7:30 a.m. Saturday. Arrangements will be made for those without transportation.

Join in this march for racial solidarity. Don't let apathy prevent you from making a statement in favor of civil rights. Help shatter the myth that Northern Idaho is a bastion for racism. It is high time that this region is recognized for what it truly is—a region of tolerance.

few scientific tests on the subject have been undertaken. Read your National Geographic article which suggests some individuals believe radiation may be good for you. However, no doctor could explain why my 27-year-old sister-in-law's five-month fetus died in the womb. She is a chemical engineer at the INEL. Any doctor will tell you that her loss was a rare occurrence.

I, too, am concerned about the economic effects of this information on the Idaho potato industry. My father raises potatoes for his livelihood 20 miles from the INEL border. I also agree that the media should be more responsible for the headlines they publish. But, I would submit that their reasons for sensationalism are not "liberally" motivated but are caused by the very conservative notion of "anything for a buck." Those types of headlines sell papers and increase ratings which translate into money. In this case, it is at the expense of the individual family farmer. The information I received regarding the potato panic was that the report which initiated the panic was incomplete and applied to a very narrow sector of the industry. Publication of the report, however, resulted in a $1-per-hundred weight drop in the price of potatoes in a year when the farmer was finally going to get ahead. That information being released benefited the market buyers a great deal. It also benefited, illegally, anyone who knew the information was going to be published and capitalized on it beforehand. It is eminently clear that market manipulations rather than "liberal media" lead to any tragic economic results to those in a less than equal bargaining position such as the Idaho potato farmer.

Finally, I would like you to explain to the bleeding, maimed and terrified children on that playground in California their inherent right to self defense against a "modified" AK-47 assault rifle. Explain to the dead children's parents, siblings and friends how it could have been much worse if the "psycho" would have had a "kitchen knife, ball bat, single shot .22, a bucket of gasoline or a car." Why are those weapons necessary? To protect ourselves from the enemy threat? I thought the ICBM was taking care of that problem. Do you use assault rifles to hunt deer? That certainly sounds sportsmanlike. You probably like to soften up your hunting area with a few mortar rounds before you move in. I always found that tossing a couple of grenades into a lake gets a lot more fish than a line with a hook.

Parting shot: The coincidence that "Earth Day" was Lenin's 100th anniversary (of what?) apparently implies that all individuals concerned about their environment are communists. Perhaps you should enroll in the logic course available on campus and not waste people's time with trite innuendos.

Please keep your generalizations to yourselves

Editor:

This letter is in response to last Tuesday's article, "Golf 'rangers' replace 'marshals.'" Do you, Mike White and Mark Frame, realize you insulted the whole women's volleyball team? Every member of the team is innocent of your accusations.

Both of you stated, "The job was even more frustrating because the women volleyball players who were hired as course marshals saw their jobs as a chance to relax."

You two should get your information straight before you get your false accusations printed. The fact is there were two women hired, who may still play volleyball, but no longer play with Idaho's team.

Your facts are outdated and, therefore, your comments unnecessary. In the future, if you two are going to publicly criticize someone, be sure not to include innocent people in careless and broad generalizations.

Christian bigot provides chuckles

Editor:

It's spring, life is in the air, people are wearing sunglasses and bermuda shorts, and the nut cases are beginning to emerge to ruin the good weather for the rest of us.

Yes, our local advocate of closed-mindedness, willful ignorance and hypocrisy, Doug Wilson, is at it again and I couldn't be happier. No one provides an intelligent, well-adjusted person with as many good chuckles as Wilson's very existence does.

Three recent examples of the fallacy of this "man of God's" life are a recent column he wrote for the Lewiston Morning Tribune, and his two most recent sermons in front of the library.

About three weeks ago Wilson wrote an article spreading massive disinformation (a much prettier and less slanderous word than calling him a liar, though I don't deny that that is my intention) about AIDS.

Last week he preached at us about being "hard-hearted."

This week he decried atheism and agnosticism, and tried to tell us that without God there is no good or evil.

Anyone who has ever read one of Wilson's columns in the Lewiston Morning Tribune knows that Doug Wilson is a certifiable loony, and anyone who read the column referred to above and heard his sermon last week, will agree that the man is a hypocrite.

In that column, Wilson claimed that several well-known facts about AIDS are all lies. The reader was supposed to ignore two truths. The first being that these facts are all recognized by the American Medical Association, and the second being that the examples Wilson cited to "prove" his point were either undocumented (meaning he made them up) or he left out crucial facts about the cases.

In light of his lies and the lack of compassion which his columns are full of, who does Doug Wilson think he is to call anyone else "hard-hearted"?

And just what is "hard-hearted" anyway? Sounds to me as if it means it's time for open-heart surgery, or something.

But seriously, said lack of compassion (hard-heartedness) make it hypocritical for Wilson to call anyone else hard-hearted.

Whining to us that our refusal to listen to him prove that we are hard-hearted is not only a stupid, cheap, psychological trick, but it's insulting as well. It was refreshing to see that so few people paid attention to his childish "if you don't see things my way then you're a jerk" attitude. It shows me that today's college students are generally more intelligent, or at least more mature, than they are often given credit for, especially by certain right-wing morons.

And now onto his thesis concerning atheism and agnosticism.

Wilson stated that an agnostic admittedly "doesn't know..." But what such a person admittedly doesn't know is if there's a supreme being and/or an after-life, and if there is, what it is like.

And atheists deny the existence of a supreme being. Doug got that right, but again floundered when he said that good and evil mean nothing to an atheist, that atheists believe that one should do what one wants to and that whatever one does is simply an alternative lifestyle. Wrong. There's a difference between being an atheist and being an immoralist, an atheist denies the existence of a God, while an immoralist believes in "live and let live," without restrictions.

Also, Wilson is wrong to say that without God there can be no good or evil. Wrong again. People have had moral codes much longer than Christianity or Judaism have existed.

If Wilson would speak for Jesus Christ, he's going to have to lighten up and become more honest. After all, as I understand it, Jesus was a good man, honest, kind and compassionate. If Wilson really expects educated people to see the good in Christianity, then he's going to have to abandon his medieval, closed-minded mentality and make some more serious attempts to emulate the man whose message he professes to represent.

Phi Delt Fraternity gives $500 to charity

By AMY WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

Phi Delta Theta Fraternity once again came through for Special Olympics by raising $500 during their annual Turtle Derby Saturday.

"Overall, the Turtle Derby ran smooth," said house member Mike Blower. "We had good crowd support."

The Turtle Derby was packed with numerous fun-filled events that entertained a large crowd of students and visiting parents.

"Madge," the turtle owned by Madge of The Perch, won the best dressed competition, while Gamma Phi Beta's turtle, "Paul," was the fastest.

A separate race featured the proverbial tortoise-hare matchup. The Phi Gamma Delta rabbit easily outran the Phi Delta Theta turtle and the Beta Theta Pi rat to win the race.

Pi Beta Phi took first in the skit event and won the contest for the most money raised with $170.

Elizabeth Cushman of Kappa Kappa Gamma was named Turtle Derby Queen.

"It went well for Parents Weekend," Blower said. "A lot of parents attended and seemed to enjoy it."

Idaho track teams run in weekend of second bests

By GREG NUNES
Staff Writer

It was a weekend for second bests for the UI track team, as the Vandals placed nine runner-ups in the Bob Gibb Classic in Boise.

Despite all the second-place finishes, UI's Dan O'Brien took the 110-meter hurdles and was also part of the UI 1,600 meter relay team which won its event.

O'Brien finished at 14.33 to nudge out teammate Mike Davis (14.48) in the 110-meter hurdles, while O'Brien teamed with Lenford O'Garro, Rob Demick and Eversley Linley to capture the 1,600-meter relay in 3:13.63.

Unfortunately for the Vandals, those were the only two winning moments during the Friday-Saturday event.

O'Brien and Davis were both successful in the long jump on Friday, as O'Brien finished third by leaping 24'11", marking a personal outdoor best in that event. Davis also established his own best with a 23'10" jump to place sixth.

"This was just kind of a breakthrough meet."

— Scott Lorek
UI Track Coach

Linley was impressive in the 800 meters by coming in second with a time of 1:52.65. O'Garro took second as well in the 400 meters at 47:78.

Other second-place finishers for the Vandals included Eric Haynes (100 meters) and Bernardo Barrios (5,000 meters).

On the women's side, UI was unable to come home with any winners, but Caryn Choate-Deeds had a fine showing in Boise.

Choate-Deeds set a pair of school records in the 100- and 200- meter races. Both of her school marks were good enough for third in each race, as she finished at 12:07 in the 100 meters and picked up a 24:61 time in the 200 meters.

"This was just kind of a breakthrough meet," UI Track Coach Scott Lorek said. "She's just starting to come around."

UI's Bobbi Purdy was impressive in the heptathlon by accumulating 4,690 points to finish second, while Kelly Carmody and Kim Gillas also placed second in the 800- and 400- meter events respectively.

"We're just looking for good times," Lorek said. "A lot of people ran their best times here."

Palouse triathlon's 26-mile bike ride will be fast-paced

Editor's Note: This is the second story in a three-part series on the Palouse Spring Triathlon which begins Saturday morning. Today's topic is the 26-mile bike ride.

By SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

UI student Rich Steckler will compete in his first triathlon Saturday, the annual Palouse Spring Triathlon, a three-sport event consisting of a 1,650-yard swim, a 26-mile bike ride and a 6.2-mile run.

"I've been riding my bike three times a week to Pullman and back in preparation for the event," said Steckler, who has also been training on a turbo trainer, an indoor device he uses at home.

"During the winter I use a turbo trainer. The back wheel of my bike sits on a roller, and the faster I go the more resistance it builds," he said. "It keeps your cardiovascular system up and just basically keeps you in shape. It's real loud, though."

"Most people think that 26 miles is a long way, but it's really not in biking. The miles go by pretty fast."

— Rich Steckler
UI Student

Steckler said he has been an avid biker for years.

"I've been biking for about six years," Steckler said. "I like it because it's a lot less strenuous on the legs and joints than running. It's also a lot faster, and you can cover a lot of territory and see more things."

The bike transition is the second event of the triathlon, following the 1,650 swim.

Steckler doesn't think he will have any problems with the swimming-to-biking transition. "My plans are just to wear my biking shorts while I'm swimming and then go to the biking and running transitions. I'm not going to bother with changing."

Steckler and other participants will get their bike bags and, in designated places if desired, change from swimwear into biking gear. The bikers will then exit through the southwest door of the Swim Center.

From the Swim Center, bikers will proceed north on Rayburn, west on Sixth, travel to Perimeter Drive and continue north on the Pullman Highway. Bikers will then turn north on the Airport Road for two clockwise loops and on the second loop will turn east on the Pullman Highway. Finally, to conclude the 26-mile ride, bikers will return to the Kibbie Dome via Perimeter Drive, Rayburn Ave and the sidewalk of the Dome lawn.

"I've just been doing parts of the course because

Egerton wins Mr. Washington State

By TIM DAHLQUIST
Staff Writer

The crowd is quiet. All eyes are focused upon the stage where a single figure stands in the spotlight. With a boom, the music floods the coliseum and the audience retaliates with a wave of cheers and applause ... the show is on.

For Ted Egerton, a junior in civil engineering at UI, this is the signal to put his best foot forward. And that he did last Saturday night when he won the Mr. Washington State middleweight body building competition.

"I decided to take a year off from showing to build up for this year's competition."

— Ted Egerton
UI Student

So far, this is Egerton's third win this year. His titles include Mr. Evergreen State lightweight division and second in the overall competition, Mr. Northern States middleweight division, and as of last weekend in Pullman, Mr. Washington State middleweight division.

Egerton started showing in competition two years ago. Last year, though, he took off from posing in any competitions.

"I decided to take a year off from showing to build up for this year's competition," Egerton said. "When I first started, I was competing in the lightweight division and now I'm showing in the middleweight division."

During the body building season a lot of Egerton's time is spent in the weightroom.

"I lift twice a day. Each session is around two hours long and then I finish off the lifting with a 30-minute bike ride," he said.

Along with having to be loyal to the weightroom, Egerton says the tough part is keeping on the strict diet.

"When a show nears I have to eat extremely careful. For this last competition I was taking in only 1,500 calories a day," Egerton said. "Mainly eating potatoes, rice and dry tuna fish. Also, I drink about three to four gallons of water a day."

With an "irritating" diet like that, Egerton keeps his fat percentage level down to 5.2 percent — which is low considering the average male has a fat percentage level of 15 to 17 percent.

Egerton is sponsored by Pilgrim's Nutrition Center in Moscow. "They (Pilgrim's) have been real supportive while I was on the circuit," Egerton said. "My entry fees were all paid for and they supplied me with all the vitamins I needed."

Next Saturday, Egerton will travel to Spokane to compete. He will be competing for the Mr. Rocky Mountain States middleweight title.

Weightlifting isn't worth the effort?

By SCOTT TROTTER
Commentary

For all you weak individuals embarrassed to show your frail bodies in the UI weightroom, don't worry ... I'm right there with you.

I stood in front of the mirror a couple months ago, gazing at my pooched out stomach and bulging love handles, and decided I had to do something about my physique. I accepted an offer from an avid lifter in my fraternity to join him in his weightlifting efforts.

Teaming up with another wimp in the house — Chris, Big Boy Dwight Bershaw and I forced ourselves out of bed at 5:30 a.m., put on our sweats and headed for the weightroom for its prompt 6 a.m. opening.

After helping us put on our weightbelts, Dwight showed us his basic workout for chest and arms this fine first day and to be quite honest, Chris and I, the wimps, did rather well.

We lifted a reasonable amount of weight for wimps, learned how to powder up the ol' hands to reduce slipperiness, and learned weightroom lingo. For example, a 25-pound weight is not called a 25-pound weight; it's a quarter. And a 10-pounder is a dime.

Dwight reassured us, though, that the following week of workouts would not be so festive, for this first week we were tearing down our muscles (in other words we were en route to experiencing severe pain) and the next week would be the beginning of working up our muscles.

We worked our backs and shoulders the following day and legs the next and the pain did not delay in inflicting our bodies. By our second cycle on chest and arms — our fourth workout — our first week — we realized we were indeed wimps and embarrassed to be in the weightroom.

Our muscles were so sore we managed only lifting a fraction of our first lifting workload. In fact, after peeling off numerous weights to get a set of 10 in on the chest incline exercise, I peered over to my right, red-faced and in the midst of grunting, and noticed that a volleyball player — a girl — was lifting almost as much as I was.

I was disgusted. And Chris even more so, because he was a bigger wimp, at one time sporting the 12-pounders in each hand in an effort to do a series of dumbbell flies. Twelve-pounders. Most pitchers of beer weigh that much.

Chris and I both began to whimper and whine and realized that having a Body by Bershaw was not going to be easy or fun. And besides, people in the weightroom were starting to look at us funny.

But you've got to start somewhere right? Right. But start someplace where you can't be seen by other members of society — like in a dimly lit, cockroach-infested closet with the cement-filled, plastic-coated weights that you picked up at a garage sale from some other poor soul with intentions of becoming huge.

The embarrassment is not worth it. Besides, running is better for you anyway and not so humiliating. Just don't trip.

VANDALS SIGN PLAYERS: Coming from a trio of schools with a combined 92-11 record this past season, four junior college players have signed national letters of intent to attend UI and play basketball for the Vandals next season.

The players include All-American Dave Henderson of the College of Southern Idaho, Clifford Martin also of the College of Southern Idaho, Ron Shields of South Plains Junior College in Levelland, Texas, and Raymond Lester of Kankakee, Ill., Junior College.

The four players bring to seven the total number of players signed by the Vandals. Last November, UI signed Scott Flock of Post Falls High School, Leonard Perry from McLennan Junior College in Waco, Texas, David Foot of Northeast Mississippi Junior College and Sammy Freeman of Odessa, Texas.

O'BRIEN EARNS HONORS, AGAIN: Last week UI's Dan O'Brien was named the Big Sky Conference's Track Athlete of the Week for the second time this year. Conference coaches honored O'Brien for his performance in an April 8 meet in Pullman.

FOOTBALL TEAM IMPROVES: A week made a lot of difference for the UI football team — particularly when it came to mistakes as the Vandals concluded their second week of spring practice with a scrimmage Saturday in the Kibbie Dome.

Although the offensive numbers went down from 620 yards in a scrimmage in last Saturday to 391 yesterday, so did the team's turnovers. Idaho had just one interception after turning the ball over seven times last week.

The Vandals made the greatest amount of improvement defensively, and not only in the yardage category. Riddled by long pass plays and giving up seven touchdowns a week ago, the defense allowed only four touchdowns and one long pass play.

Vandals tie for first in playoffs

By LYNNETTE PIXLEY
Sports Writer

The Lady Vandals' tennis team was successful in defeating three out of four teams this past weekend in the Big Sky Northern Division Playoffs, tying with Boise State and Montana State 3-1.

Friday, Idaho easily beat Eastern Washington University 9-0. Patty Shanander defeated Sheri Maxwell 6-1 and 6-0 in singles. Cathy Shanander was also successful in defeating her opponent Wendy Manning 6-1, 6-2. The two sisters went on to play doubles against Suzie Lam and Manning, winning the event 6-2, 6-0. Along with the Shanander sisters all six players were able to beat out Eastern in singles and doubles action.

The match against the University of Montana Saturday was shortened because of rain, nonetheless Idaho came out on top with a victory of 5-2.

Idaho's only loss came on Saturday as Montana State University defeated the Vandals 6-3.

"They are a tough team, we're well matched, in singles and doubles as well as for Big Sky Championship action," Head Coach Dave Scott said of Montana State.

Sunday, in singles against Boise State, Patty Shanander defeated Teri Croson after losing the first match 2-6, coming back with wins of 7-5 and 6-2. Cathy Shanander easily beat out her opponent Ronne Rhodes 7-6, 6-3. UI's Linda Voris and Dena Thomas were also impressive winning their third singles match of the weekend.

"It was a great win, we beat them soundly and had great performances from all the players," Scott said.

Overall, Cathy was undefeated this weekend making her record for singles this season 13-4, Patty's overall is 15-3, and in doubles the two have a 14-2 record. Overall the team is now 9-9.

Tuesday the team takes on Lewis Clark State College and Oregon and Washington State Friday and Saturday here in Moscow.

"LCSC is a weaker team, so competitively we aren't too worried. Washington on the other hand is going to be a tougher team to beat," Scott said.

Scott said he feels the team is where they should be at this point in the season.

"This tournament was a great confidence builder, overall I'm very pleased with the attitudes and performances of the players, they all seem to be goal-oriented and that's how we need to be going into the Big Sky Championships," Scott said.

Sherlock Holmes AFB sponsors musical

By DAVID KELLY
Staff Writer

The world's most famous detective is on his way to Moscow.

New York City's Theaterworks/USA will perform the musical Sherlock Holmes and the Red-Headed League Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Moscow High School Auditorium.

Theaterworks/USA, America's largest theater, creates, produces, and performs plays for young audiences.

"Young people should be exposed to live professional arts performances," said Joann Muneta, Moscow manager of the American Festival Ballet. "We are tremendously excited about the opportunity to present this nationally-known theater company in Moscow."

The musical starts "from the moment an Indian prince is shot while watching the same theater performance that Sherlock Holmes and his friend, Dr. Watson, are attending. The ingenious detective uses his amazing powers of observation and deductive reasoning to find the elusive solution to the mystery," Muneta said.

"Disguise is heaped upon disguise, and action, danger, suspense and a good deal of freewheeling fun abound in this colorful and intriguing musical suitable for all ages," Muneta said.

The upcoming production of Sherlock Holmes and the Red-Headed League was adapted from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's original works by John Forster, with lyrics by Greer Woodward and music by Rick Cummins.

"An endearing foil for Holmes, his rather gullible, but decidedly lovable companion, Dr. Watson, is as dazzled by the sleuth's brilliance as will be the audiences who see this production," Muneta said.

Holmes is played by Greg Zerke, and Watson is played by Gordon Stanley.

Sherlock Holmes and the Red-Headed League is sponsored by AFB with assistance from the Moscow School District and the Western States Arts Foundation. The performance is part of the AFB's Great Shows for Families series that has brought to Moscow such productions as Cinderella and The Wizard of Oz.

Tickets for the production are $4 for children and students 16 and under and $6 for adults. Ticket outlets include University Pharmacy in Moscow and Corner Drug in Pullman. Tickets will also be on sale at the door.

Group defends our Earth First!

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
Staff Writer

The group that former Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus once called "totally unacceptable to responsible conservationists in America" will be leading a discussion tomorrow evening.

Members of the organization Earth First!, sometimes referred to as Guerrillas for the Earth, will be discussing the vitality of environmental conservation.

The ASUI Productions-sponsored talk will feature environmental activists Dave Foreman and Mitch Freedman. Called the most controversial conservationists of our time, they offer no compromise in defense of "Mother Earth."

Freedman helped organize the Washington Earth First!. He is co-writer, editor and publisher of the book Forever Wild: Conserving the Greater North Cascades Ecosystem.

Foreman has spent the last 15 years as a professional conservationist. After leaving his position at The Wilderness Society in 1980 he co-founded the more militant Earth First!.

Foreman is editor and publisher of Earth First! The Radical Environmental Journal and has written the book Ecodefense: A Field Guide to Monkeywrenching.

Both publications detail effective ways of damaging construction equipment, destroying roads that cut into wilderness areas, spiking trees with nails to prevent logging, cutting down billboards and other property destruction methods.

Others, including the National Wildlife Federation, share Andrus' view of the organization. Each year "ecotage" exploits cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to timber, oil and gas and mineral exploration companies.

Members of the group say they believe that compromise is defeat. They are working to protect ecosystems and preserve natural diversity. Fear and disgust of oil spills, loss of wilderness area, pesticide sprayings and other human exploitations have led an increasing number of people concerned with the environment to turn their backs on conventional protest methods and towards more militant offensive or deterrent strategies.

Foreman said in an interview with The Animals' Agenda magazine, "Our most fundamental philosophical view is that all things have intrinsic value and that human beings are not the measure of value for all things. You preserve wilderness for its own sake, you defend a grizzly bear because she has just as much right to be here as any of us do."

The discussion starts Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. Admission is $2.

The Proclaimers seek to make steady ripples

Review by PAUL GREENWOOD
Staff Writer

In an era where the pop world has come to demand glamorous, sleek, overly-marketed "rebellious" images with safe, dependable, generic accompanying sounds, the rising popularity of a humble yet daring band like The Proclaimers revives even the most-skeptic-of souls.

Glamorous? Not exactly. Unless, perhaps, you have an overly generous perception of glamour and beauty in the form of two twin brothers with lost-puppy eyes, crew cuts, Buddy Holly glasses and a fashion statement straight out of 1950s Americana.

Charles and Chris Reid, a.k.a. The Proclaimers, will probably never be hailed as fashion messiahs and, unfortunately, their humble image is bound to restrain them from being received by a wider audience.

Too bad. Sunshine On Leith, their second release, is an album that should definitely be heard, and The Proclaimers are indeed a band that should be regarded as a solid addition to the world of folk-influenced music.

Hailing from Scotland, these two talented twins certainly haven't forgotten their Gaelic influences. Sans bagpipes, they nevertheless have a rich, Scottish, folk influence of acoustic guitar-laden melodies, and ballads with an accent as beautiful in its richness as it is, at times, almost undecipherable.

The Proclaimers, if for no other musical distinction, undoubtedly have one of the most distinguishable sounds of any current band. It is almost impossible to confuse one of their songs with any other band.

Musical traditions are not the only means by which The Proclaimers pay tribute to the

Composer Brouwer visits UI for concert

A chance to hear something different is being offered to area music lovers in a concert featuring Margaret Brouwer and her works at 8 p.m. Friday.

Brouwer, assistant professor of music at Washington and Lee University in Virginia and a summer faculty member for the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Mich., will visit here for the concert, and will conduct some of the music.

The program includes compositions for mixed chamber ensemble, brass quintet, electronic tape and a premiere performance for French horn solo.

Brouwer has recently been recognized for many of her chamber and orchestral works. Among them are "Third From the Sun," performed recently by the St. Louis Symphony at the American Symphony Orchestra League's New Music Reading Session.

She has been given grants by Indiana University and the Indiana Arts Commission and has won prizes on San Francisco's Composers, Inc.'s annual composition competition, the Carmichael competition and others.

The concert will be held in the University Auditorium and is free and open to the public.

Cocktail available on video

Those that are tired of what pay TV has to offer, shouldn't forget the video option. For just a few dollars you can rent a VCR and movies you want to watch. Check out these movies now available on video.

Cocktail

Starring: Tom Cruise

Cruise is Brian Flannigan, a young, confident and ambitious bartender. With the help of a seasoned pro (Bryan Brown) he becomes the toast of Manhattan's Upper East Side.

But when he moves to Jamaica and meets an independent artist (Elisabeth Shue) their romance brings a new perspective to the self-centered bartender's life.

Cocktail, rated R, will be available in video stores Thursday.

Dead Ringers

Starring: Jeremy Irons and Genevieve Bujold

Irons plays identical twin doctors who share the same apartment, the same practice and the same women. Then one special woman (Bujold) enters their lives and causes their strange relationship to undergo a terrifying change.

For the first time they question the strange ties that bind them, throwing them into a downward spiral of sexual confusion, drugs and madness.

Dead Ringers is rated R.

Gorillas in the Mist

Starring: Sigourney Weaver

Weaver plays Diane Fossey, a strong-willed woman who studies gorillas in Africa. She battles two countries' governments, poachers and a native tribe to try to save the endangered gorillas.

She gets very close to "her" gorillas and is willing to sacrifice anything for them.

Gorillas in the Mist is rated PG-13.

Tucker

Starring: Jeff Bridges

Bridges plays an entrepreneur who designs the "perfect" car. He drums up a few supporters and sets out to produce it.

However, the big car corporations won't let him into the car industry. He fights deadlines, the government and the corporations trying to produce his dream machine.

Tucker is rated PG.

Dead Ringers, Gorillas in the Mist and Tucker are now available in video stores. Other new releases include They Live and Stealing Home.

heritage of their homeland. Lyrically their music encompasses a wide variety of subject matters with a distinct Scottish flavor. "Cap in Hand" is a passionate anthem against English domination of the Scots.

"But I can't understand why we let someone else rule our land."

Other songs express similar political thoughts.

"What do you do when Democracy's through What do you do when minority means you?"

The Proclaimers are, however, more than merely a band revolving around bitter beliefs of political oppression. Many songs are simple songs about life, love, pain, happiness and celebration. Actually, with an upbeat, highly danceable sound, they nicely suffice as an ideal party, beer-drinking, and all-around fun band.

"I'm on my way from misery to happiness today

I'm on my way to what I want from this world
And years from now you'll make it to the next world
And everything that you receive up yonder
Is what you gave to me the day I wandered."

The Proclaimers, who have already had two number-one hits in the UK, have yet to make a serious dent in the American music scene. They are, however, rapidly gaining a zealous reaction in the college music scene, preferring to make steady ripples rather than large waves.

With a concentration on the fusion between traditional Scottish folk and a modern progressive beat, this band is bound to appeal mainly to people who are searching for alternate forms of music. Granted, not everyone is going to be enticed by this type of music, but for the adventurous, experimental listener The Proclaimers, and their album, Sunshine On Leith, offers a refreshing, unusual sound that is bound to attract a loyal cult following.

The group will also post fliers campus-wide, encouraging students to participate. However, the last time the group distributed fliers, they were ripped down within a day, Kretschmer said.

The Moscow Task Force, led by chairperson and UI Associate Professor Alan Rose, has endorsed both the march and other efforts planned by the Kootenai task force.

Also three area bars have joined in the fundraising efforts. Mingles, Murdoc's and Cafe Spudnik have agreed to charge $1 for patrons to post messages of peace signs at the bars. Kretschmer said the messages are similar to those that several local bars sponsored on St. Patrick's Day.

didn't know where the money was going. Our supposition was that the money went to parties."

Targhee Treasurer Scott Christensen said past treasurers used savings to pay expenses rather than collecting room and board payment from members to cover expenses. Overdue accounts have now been turned over to a collection agency.

Even though Targhee's food service was also taken over by the university this year, Jim Bauer, assistant dean of student services said the co-op hasn't changed much.

"The essence of them being a co-op on this campus has remained the same," Bauer said.

The university takeover of both Steel and Targhee food services was a surprise, Meloy said.

"We didn't find out until we got to school and we were quite upset because we had planned on having those jobs," Meloy said. "We had some accounting discrepancies but we felt we did an adequate job and we would like to have that responsibility back."

Unlike Steel, Targhee residents don't have any plans to negotiate an agreement to regain control of their food service.

■ NEW BOOKSTORE TO OFFER MORE ARTS SUPPLIES

What's in store for UI students when the doors open on the new bookstore?

"Basically, we'll be increasing the merchandise we already have," says Gilman Martin, bookstore manager.

Art and drafting supplies, which have been limited because of lack of space, will be expanded to include more of the mid-range items. In the past, the bookstore was able to provide the low-priced and the more expensive supplies, Martin said. But next fall the bookstore will be able to offer a larger variety of supplies.

Snack foods is another line of merchandise that will increase, Martin said.

"We're trying to stay away from being in direct competition (with Marriott)," he said, so snack foods will be limited to packaged goods like cookies and chips.

The store's textbook offerings will remain about the same. The additional space in the store will allow more books and clothing items to be displayed.

■ ED BOARD TO CONSIDER FEE HIKES

The Idaho Board of Education may hear a student fee increase proposal this week, despite a student referendum which voted down a fee hike almost 2-1.

UI Financial Vice President Joseph Geiger said Monday that UI President Richard Gibb will decide whether university administrators will ask the board to conduct a hearing on fee increases.

"As of today, I think he's going to leave it on the agenda," Geiger said.

The student referendum which voted down the possible $50-per-semester fee hike 820-439 was only advisory, Geiger said.

"I don't see where fee increases are a unilateral decision by the students,"

Geiger said.

Item Six on the board agenda outlines a proposed student fee policy which lists "peer institutions" for the UI and compares fees between the universities. The plan calls for Idaho student fees to be limited to 110 percent of the peer group's average for the following year.

The "peer institutions" include Arizona State University, the University of Montana, New Mexico State University and Washington State University.

However, ASUI President Tina Kagi said the comparisons may be unfair.

"I'm not real comfortable with being compared to schools I know are a lot bigger," she said.

Before the board considers a fee increase, administrators are required to hold public hearings on campus with students.

"If we had a hearing like that I just wonder how accurately the results would be conveyed to the board," Kagi said.

Call BofA
Student Loans
1-818-578-7626

Now all you have to worry about are midterms and finals.

We don't believe academic pressure should be complicated by financial pressure. That's why BofA has been offering student loans for more than 25 years. To find out if you qualify for one, just make an appointment with your school's Financial Aid Administrator. Then call 1-818-578-7626, collect, and we'll mail you an application. Or send in a card from one of our posters on campus. Go ahead—it could be the easiest answer to the toughest question you'll face all year.
