Food fight GDIs boycott UI housing contracts

By BENJAMIN LONG
Senior Staff Writer

Members of Graham Hall are encouraging GDIs to refuse to sign housing contracts to protest proposed changes in university dining programs.

About 800 fliers urging students to return their housing contracts unsigned are being distributed this week, said Michael Weitz, Graham Hall president. He said by participating in the contract boycott, students are sending a message that they are displeased with Marriott's plans to either raise meal plan rates or reduce Snack Bar services.

"No one agrees with either proposal at all," Weitz said Thursday. "We should keep things the same. It works out well for everyone."

Not well enough, says Lynn Morrison, director of Marriott's University Dining Service. Earlier this week she proposed either a $47 per semester rate hike (for 14-meal food service plans) or revisions limiting Snack Bar meal ticket punches to two per night. Other proposed changes included:

- Revamping the Snack Bar menu to include only freshly prepared items that could not be stock-piled or stored by students for later consumption
- Serving Sunday brunch instead of breakfast
- Closing the Snack Bar on Sunday nights — the night most students have traditionally used meal punches to stockpile Snack Bar items.

Thursday Morrison said the boycott isn't an effective means of communicating with food service officials. She refused to comment further.

Morrison will meet with housing officials and student representatives this morning to discuss the matter.

"The proposals are unacceptable to the students the way they are right now," said Paula Wood, Residence Hall Association president. "We're just trying to make them acceptable before we leave."

Wood said she was confident a compromise could be reached.

Fee fan resigns senate position

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

Craig McCurry resigned from the ASUI Senate Tuesday — just days after he came under fire for asking Idaho Board of Education members to raise UI resident student fees $50 a semester.

But McCurry, who graduates in May with a degree in political science, maintains that his resignation was not spurred by criticisms issued against him regarding the fee hikes. In a resignation letter addressed to ASUI Vice President Lynn Major, McCurry said he resigned because he needed study time for upcoming finals.

"Please be assured that this in no way reflects my commitment to my actions at the State Board of Education meeting, dated April 20, 1989, and is not in response to any pressure that you or anyone else has seen fit to attempt to exert upon me," McCurry wrote.

MCCURRY

Major accepted the resignation and declared McCurry's senate spot vacant at a Wednesday night meeting. She said she had planned to ask for McCurry's resignation anyway, but he submitted it before she took the opportunity.

"I talked to Tina (Kagi, ASUI president,) and I talked to a few other senators, and the general consensus seemed to be, 'let's get rid of him,'" Major said.

McCurry was criticized heavily for telling Idaho Board of Education members to ignore the results of spring ASUI elections, in which students voted down proposed increase nearly 2-1.

UI administrators invited McCurry and engineering student Pat Standley, who also supported fee increases, to fly to the meeting in Pocatello in an administration-chartered plane.

Kagi, who opposed the fee increases, also traveled to Pocatello on the plane. As student body president, she is routinely invited on such flights.

At Wednesday night's Senate meeting, several senators expressed their disapproval of McCurry's actions.

Sen. Jeff Friel called McCurry's actions a "grave, grave error." Sen. Mike Gotch said the student body should be "appalled" at McCurry's behavior.

McCurry was serving his second term as a senator at the time of his resignation.

Warning: Bomb threats lead to fines, imprisonment

Individuals phoning in bomb threats are guilty of federal crimes that could land them in jail, says the director of University Communications.

Director Terry Maurer said Thursday the university will prosecute anyone caught making such threats. Violators risk criminal charges that could result in as much as five years in prison, he said. Individuals can also be sued for thousands of dollars in civil liabilities, including the cost of evacuating and searching buildings.

"I suspect that people do not understand the extent to which they are getting involved when they perpetrate a hoax like this," Maurer said.

UCC classrooms were evacuated Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. after an anonymous bomb threat. A Thursday threat closed the Administration Building from 1 p.m. - 1:35 p.m. Both cases are under investigation.

Students interviewed Thursday night had mixed feelings about bomb threats.

Machelle Pugsley, a freshman studying accounting, said while she didn't condone bomb threats, she enjoyed a break from class.

Chris Wuthrich, a senior studying communication, disagreed.

"Unquestionably, it's a big inconvenience to both the students and everyone else involved," he said.

Although bomb threats can be disruptive, Maurer said they are ineffective.

"If someone's calling to get the buildings closed so they don't have to take a test, it never works," Maurer said. "The test will be rescheduled."

Students can receive college credit for the research, to be conducted July 1 - August 24 in the Juneau Icefield, Alaska, and in the Atlin Lake Region of Canada. For application information, contact Dr. Maynard Miller, director of the Glaciological and Arctic Sciences Institute.

FEE INCREASE HEARING SET. Students are invited to attend a public hearing on proposed UI fee increases. The hearing will be held Tuesday from 1:15 p.m. - 3:15 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. In June the Idaho Board of Education will consider raising resident student fees $25 a semester and out-of-state tuition an additional $100 a semester.

ENGLISH FOLDERS RETURNED. Students who took English 103 or English 104 last fall can pick up their folders in Brink Hall Room 200 during dead week and finals week.

GIBBS HONORED AT RECEPTION. A community-wide reception honoring UI President Richard Gibb and his wife, Betty, begins today at 1:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. In July, Gibb will step down after serving 12 years as president. He returns to teaching next fall. Students, faculty, staff and members of the Moscow/Pullman community are invited to attend the reception.

Officials: Parking garage costs too much

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

Seventy-two percent of UI students are satisfied with parking availability, according to a survey conducted by parking staff members last winter.

Despite complaints that parking here is inadequate, a UI official told students Tuesday that the problem is mainly one of misinformation.

"A lot of people in the survey said, 'I don't have a problem with parking, but it sure sounds like you people do,'" said Risk Management Officer Carol Grupp.

Some 793 UI students, staff and faculty were surveyed by telephone from Nov. 28 and Dec. 9.

Representatives from the UI committees dealing with parking met with a group of students to discuss the issues and ask for suggestions.

The UI's campus planning staff is in the "data gathering" stage of preparing a review of the campus parking situation, said

Joanne Reece, director of Facility Planning.

"We are trying to define the problem and trying to come up with recommendations for change," Reece said.

The committees will report to UI's Financial Vice President Joe Geiger by June, Reece said.

Issues discussed included the new parking lots which will be built on College Avenue to replace the spaces lost to construction of the new bookstore. About 35 spaces will be metered to account for the commuter traffic the bookstore will generate.

Parking officials also listed reasons why they say a parking structure is not a possibility. Development costs of a multi-level garage are estimated to range from $5,500 to $8,100 per space. This cost would have to be carried by the students.

"We have free parking within eight minutes of the main campus area that people aren't using," Reece said, referring to the Kibbie Dome parking lot west of campus, "so why would they double or triple their permit fees to park three minutes closer?"

Grupp discussed the possibility of creating storage lots for students who don't drive their vehicles very often. The lots would be further from the center of campus, but permits would be considerably cheaper, Grupp said.

Tom LaPointe, UI parking coordinator, said that UI parking officers wrote about 18,000 tickets last year, as compared to the 33,000 tickets issued by BSU and the 43,000 issued by WSU.

WSU's student population is about twice the size of the UI's, while BSU has traditionally been a commuter school.

It costs $200,000 to operate and maintain UI parking lots, officials said. Half of that amount comes from ticket revenues. The other $100,000 comes from the sale of parking permits, LaPointe said.

■ INTENSIVE SPANISH CLASS OFFERED

Summer Intensive Spanish is one of the many high-lighted classes offered by UI this summer.

The six-week program, offered June 13-July 28, 8:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m., combines intensive language study with exposure to Spanish culture through lectures, slides, films and music. And it allows students to complete an entire year of language and to fulfill the UI core curriculum requirement in the communication category in only six weeks.

"Having the class compacted into a short time period will not make the class more difficult," said Assistant Professor of Spanish Richard Keenan, who is one of the three instructors teaching the course. "The more intense a class is the more control students have.

Learning a language is like learning a skill and the more concentrated a class is the easier the language is to learn."

Professor of Spanish Robert Surlles and Lecturer of Spanish Irina Crookston will teach the course along with Keenan.

Information on other summer courses offered can be picked up at the Summer Sessions office in the Education Building.

■ HALL MEMBERS COLLECT LITTER

Idaho Highway 8 between Moscow and Troy is cleaner today after about 20 residence hall members picked up litter along the road last weekend.

Resident Advisers Susan Cory and Kelly Wilhite organized the clean-up effort, in which students helped gather about 30 large bags of trash. But aluminum cans and paper waste wasn't the only thing students discovered beside the road, Cory said.

"Somebody found an old transmission to a car," she said. "And there were a whole bunch of snakes out there."

■ GDI TIRES DONATED TO LOCAL SCHOOL

Borah Hall residents have donated more than 20 tires that were used in GDI-Week events to the Russell Elementary School.

Last week, hall members loaded up 20-25 small tires and two big tractor tires onto a used truck and took them out to the Hilton Building near Ratz.

"The very night we thought about it, the idea sort of spurred up in my head," said Borah Hall Resident Adviser Jim Baker.

The school is planning to build a tire climb on a hill in the Russell School playground, said Sue Goetz, a member of the Russell School Parents' Committee.

"It was a nice help for them to deliver the tires to our storage spot," Goetz said. "We have the smallest playground in Moscow and this tire climb will be built on a hill that isn't used at all."

Goetz said parent volunteers will build the structure, and an architect to draw up a sketch of the tire climb. The volunteers will ask for more tires in addition to those donated by Borah Hall residents.

Saturday, members of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and Theta Chi fraternity are hosting a barbecue to congratulate local Special Olympics athletes and coaches. The event begins at Theta Chi at 3 p.m.

UI Centennial: the dollars and 'non-cents'

It's been said that history repeats itself. But for the sake of future generations, let's pray that the UI's Centennial "celebration" doesn't repeat itself in another 100 years.

Somewhat like a major motion picture, the UI's birthday party was much heralded and overpromoted. From cookbooks and songbooks to time capsules and tree dedications, the party had token public relations efforts covered. From resigning Centennial coordinators and an overpaid foundation president to class closures and graduation medallions, it was a controversial Centennial celebration. And from the revamped Phonathon and "Buy-a-Brick" programs to honorary fundraising co-chairmen and campus fix-ups, the university set out to make a mint.

With a goal of raising $43 million, officials knew the true purpose of the Centennial. It wasn't memories, honoring past supporters, students and faculty or appreciating what we have — it was about money, pure and simple.

For example, the Phonathon will start soon and be staffed by professionals, not students. After all, the pros can get more money out of alumni. And even if alumni tie themselves to five-year capital campaign pledges, they will still be bugged each year for more money.

To get more graduating students to participate in Commencement exercises next month, the university is holding the $4 Centennial medallions over their heads. If graduates don't play along with this trick, they won't get the treat. Meanwhile, university staff and faculty will receive the medallions via intercampus mail. Attendance at graduation isn't mandatory for them.

And then there are the honorary co-chairman of Centennial "Second Century of Distinction" fundraising program — Sen. James McClure, potato magnate J.R. Simplot and international diplomat and alumnus Philip Habib. The honor was token at best. Administrators were planning to ask Simplot for a $4.3 million donation, but were making apologetic phone calls instead after one official leaked the information to the press beforehand.

And to reach the monetary goal, the university is "adding" every extra dollar to the fund. Even money the school would have gotten regardless of the Centennial, like scientific research grants, has been thrown in the kitty. Watch out Terry Armstrong, the Found Money Fund may be next.

Maybe it's naive, but a birthday celebration shouldn't be just another reason to get presents. Donations and financial contributions should be one result of the celebration, not the purpose of it.

Had the Motion Picture Association rated this Centennial it probably would have gotten an "R" rating — a ridiculous rampage for revenue.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Supreme Court should re-affirm abortion rights

Editor:

The Supreme Court will soon make a decision about a challenge to its 1973 decision on abortion. In an unprecedented move, the Justice Department has filed a brief which asserts that "the fundamental right to abortion can draw no support from the text of the Constitution or from history." Anyone who takes the time to study the history of abortion will find, to the contrary, that our own traditions — in law, religion and philosophy — do not recognize the fetus as a person from conception on.

In an equally unprecedented move, more than 200 historians have recently filed briefs protesting the Justice Department's historical distortions. The government's attorneys argue that the fetus should have rights under the 14th Amendment. They support this claim with the observation that in 1868, when the amendment was ratified, some states already had anti-abortion laws.

The historian's brief counters that this fact has no relevance with regard to the status of the fetus. The historical record is clear that the principal reason for these laws was to protect the woman's, not the fetus', life. The historians list other reasons for the passage of these laws, but recognizing the fetus as a person was not one of them.

The Supreme Court should reject the Justice Department's sloppy arguments and re-affirm, even more strongly, the long-standing right of a woman to have an abortion.

Bieter forgets facts in Murdoc's accusations

Editor:

In reply to Mr. Bieter's letter published last Friday, in which he wrote about alleged misconduct by Murdoc's employees, I wish to point out that Mr. Bieter omitted several facts and did not mention the conduct of his guest in regard to the incident.

In his letter he wrote that the Murdoc's staff tried to remove his beer after closing time, sooner than what he thought was proper and did so in unprovoked verbal abuse.

After interviewing my manager and staff on duty at the time and guests who witnessed the incident this is what really happened. At approximately 1:15 a.m. bar time, the only time that counts, Mr. Bieter and everyone else were told probably for the second time with a loud, "Let's drink up and get out of here." This is normal and it is difficult to get patrons to leave and give up beer by the 1:30 a.m. curfew we have to enforce. Mr. Bieter was passing through on his way to Boise where they do have a 2 a.m. closing, and may have been unprepared for our earlier closing in this area. When asked to give up their beer, Mr. Bieter and his guest protested and demanded their right to drink until 1:30 a.m. at their leisure. Their pitcher was removed leaving their glasses, which is my instruction to our staff.

Mr. Bieter did not include the fact that it was at this point his guest threw the remainder of her beer all over one of our doormen. That doorman walked away to get the manager and when the manager returned he found a "patron" friend of the doorman and an off-duty employee trading verbal remarks with Mr. Bieter and guest. The manager defused the situation.

In Mr. Bieter's letter to the editor he left out that he had made the statement in a letter to me that I received the same day his letter was published — that the manager was OK and quote "at the end there were five or six people gathered around but I only have a complaint against two of them." He also forgot to mention to the readers that the manager had offered to give him a free pitcher of beer any other evening of the week.

I received a letter from Mr. Bieter asking for an apology the same day his letter appeared in the Argonaut. If he had been interested in being fair to Murdoc's management, he would have given me the courtesy to respond to his complaints before going public with a letter of half truths and incomplete information.

Mr. Bieter asked for compensation of their host's two beers. One was thrown on my doorman, so I will not pay for that. But I am

Is proposed sex policy 'sensual?'

Q. What ever possessed the KUOI station manager to schedule a heavy-metal "music" show every Monday morning from 5 to 8? Don't they know that waking up to nasty thrash metal combined with early-morning classes can turn mild-mannered students into homicidal maniacs?

A. KUOI Station Manager Ken Fate says "What else will get people out of bed on Monday mornings?" Apparently, he's not aware of these nasty side effects. While the philosophy for getting people out of bed makes sense, the problem that many will only get out of bed long enough to change the channel should be considered.

Q. For the love of Lucy, can someone tell me what the heck that little house on Nez Perce Drive is used for? The sign says "Home Economics Annex" but the building hours say closed every day.

A. That's the late Lucy to you! The Annex building is used to house the Leila Old Historic Costume Collection as well as Emeritus Faculty offices, a Color and Design Lab and research facilities for faculty and graduate students. In other words, it's "Closed" to most people. Maybe you can visit the costume collection by special appointment.

Q. The university's consensual sex policy has been a high-profile item during this semester. I couldn't understand the term "consensual" until I read an article in the April 1989 issue of U. which came with April 18's Argonaut. Therein someone is quoted as saying "It was a consensual thing." Which is right? "Consensual" communicates the idea of "consent" more clearly, while "consensual" provides a confusing reminder of the word "sensual."

A. The word "consensual" does not appear in a 1976 edition of Webster's Third New International Dictionary, but "consensual" does. The definition reads: "existing or made by mutual consent without the intervention of any act of writing."

Q. When I was in grade school my teacher told me that if I swallowed my gum, it would stay in my body for seven to eight years. If this is true, where is this gum storage unit located?

A. No, it's not true, especially if you drink cola soft drinks. Remember the other story about if you left a regular nail from any hardware store in a cup full of a cola soft drink, it would be eaten away overnight? Think what it would do to the gum! So the story isn't true, especially if someone drinks cola soft drinks. Besides, all those stories are products of the previous summer's workshops, like when your grade school teachers started calling you "pea-pull" instead of "boyzandgurls."

Q. Why are the lights on the UCC blue? Wouldn't another color provide more light?

A. Eric DeBord, an Important Person at this University, said he heard once that when the UCC was built, there was a contest to name it. He said the Kappa Kappa Gamma women's fraternity won, and they got to pick the color for the lights on the building. Bonus Question: Who was judging? Why did the name that sounds like "UCK" in acronym form win?

Marriott deserves a boycott today

Editor:

In January, against many students' better judgment, the university brought us the profit-seeking Marriott Corp. to repair a food service that was never broken.

We were soon rewarded by a better sandwich bar, a jungle of plants, numerous pretty signs and the pride of Lynn Morrison — an improved salad bar offering dozens of new veggies to put on our wilted lettuce.

The changes in both the sandwich bar and salad bar were a very positive first step. Even the recent addition of a second lunch-time sandwich line speeds things up when the prepared dishes leave something to be desired (as they often do). However, the pretty signs and jungle plants did nothing to improve the taste or even appearance of the food. They seem largely a waste of my food dollar.

During the four months with Marriott, we've seen some changes in the snack bar also. Most of it in price increases. Such as the 43 percent jump in the price of a box of cereal. Then there is the wonderful Wild Pizza. Just what I wanted to do — spend an entire punch on one piece of pizza and a cup of pop. This is all an attempt to price the students out of the snack bar. If this succeeds Marriott could make its real money on unused punches.

Though no need to worry about the snack bar. Madame Morrison wants to do away with it anyway.

"We can't operate in the black on 100 percent participation. We want 80 percent participation," said Morrison.

Come on Lynn, of course 98 percent of us eat our meals. We are already paying for a service we are not satisfied with. Why should we pay for a service and only use it 80 percent of the time? Marriott has no justification to be surprised. They know what the students wanted when they put in their bid to take over our previous food service.

You Greeks shouldn't laugh. These are the same people that want to remove the Blue Buckets from the SUB this summer. This will remove a lot of very convenient study space.

The only thing Marriott and the students can agree on it that we aren't at all happy with the treatment we are getting. So let's make everyone happy and get the Marriott Corp. off our campus. Quick, someone wake up Mr. Bruce Pitman — I thought it was his job to watch Marriott.

It's time for students to unite against the money-oriented Marriott Corp. Let's remind them that they are working for us. I encourage all dorm residents to participate in the student boycott of Marriott by not signing housing contracts until next year's food plans have been decided, as suggested by Graham Hall residents.

Pet Sematary makes good transition to screen

Review by JILL CHRISTINE BECK
Entertainment Editor

Sometimes dead is better, and Pet Sematary is determined to prove it.

Based on the novel by Stephen King, Pet Sematary delves into the taboo subject of death and shows that it may not be such a bad option, at least as far as the living are concerned.

Like many of King's stories, Pet Sematary is set in a small Maine town. Dr. Louis Creed (Dale Midkiff) and his family move from Chicago to Maine when he is hired as the new doctor at the local college.

Dr. Creed and his family soon discover a few things about the new house. First, the home is near a highway frequented by fast-rolling semi trucks which manage to run over a lot of the neighborhood's pets. Second, the house is just a short walk away from the "Pet Sematary" where broken-hearted children bury their dead pets.

But beyond the serenity and innocence of the "Pet Sematary" is another burial ground, once belonging to the Indians, which has the power to bring the dead back to life. This burial ground is now "sour," however, and those resurrected from this ground are no longer the same beings as before they died.

Louis finds this out for himself when he buries his daughter's cat, Winston Churchill. The cat returns home the next day, no wounds left from where the truck had hit him. Church, however, is not the same fun loving cat he used to be. First of all, he smells of the earth he was buried in, second he's just plain evil.

But alive is alive and Louis doesn't have to explain the concept of death to his daughter, who was on vacation when the cat was hit ... at least not right away.

Pet Sematary makes a good transition to the movie screen. Naturally, condensing a novel into a screenplay leaves some gaps, but Pet Sematary makes this transition well. Those who have read the book will not be disappointed in this film.

Midkiff gives a good portrayal of Louis Creed and Fred Gwynne is quite believable as Creed's neighbor, Mr. Crandall, right down to the typical Northeastern twang.

One expects blood and gore from a horror movie, but in this film it is not used excessively to "gross out" the audience. Rather, blood and gore is used as a powerful tool.

While Pet Sematary is definitely not an Academy Award winner, it is one of the better horror movies to come along in quite a while. It's more than just people getting their heads chopped off and brains shot out. There is a story line to follow and characters to believe in.

Unlike most King story lines, Pet Sematary does not resolve itself in the end. The last scene of the movie drives home the message, "Sometimes dead is better."

Bon Jovi plans Pullman concert stop Tickets still available for group's Beasley performance

By DENA BANDAIZIAN
Staff Writer

If you were born to be Jon Bon Jovi's baby, don't worry, tickets are still available for the May 7 concert in the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum.

The group's New Jersey tour will be in Pullman following a concert at Boise State University. The tour began in January in Honolulu, Hawaii. Following the Pullman concert, they travel to the coast to perform in Portland and Tacoma.

New Jersey is Bon Jovi's fourth album. Released September 19, 1988, New Jersey was certified quadruple platinum in the United States.

Tickets for the concert went on sale mid-March and 7,500 have been sold. The coliseum has a seating capacity of 11,500.

Concert coordinators hope to sell between 9,000 and 10,000 tickets.

Sales have slowed this last week but typically pick up before the show according to Karen Trotter, coliseum ticket department secretary.

"Ten thousand tickets is an optimistic figure since Washington State University graduation is May 6," Trotter said.

The technical crew will arrive the day before the show to set up.

"It will have to be a quick transition from graduation to a Bon Jovi concert," Trotter said.

The design is for an open stage, so people with seats behind the stage will not have an obstructed view. A cat walk goes out into the audience, according to Trotter.

Skid Row is the opening band for Bon Jovi.

So if you need a dose of bad medicine, get your tickets at the Coliseum, or any G&B Select-A-Seat outlet, the nearest ones are at Cavanaugh's in Moscow and at the Depot in downtown Pullman or call 1-800-325-SEAT. Tickets are $18.50 plus a $1.75 outlet service charge.

Touch Troupe dances tonight

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

The UI Dance Theater presents Esoteric Rumbings tonight, a concert featuring seven conceptual works choreographed by dance major Shelly Werner.

The concert will be performed by Touch Troupe, an extremely expressive group, according to Werner.

"Their strongest talent lies in their ability to move their audience," she said.

The works have been choreographed utilizing all areas of the arts: theater, dance, literature, music and painting, according to Werner, with titles like "Primordial Ink Blot" and "Seizure of the Guggenheim Museum and Laundromat."

Werner's concepts may prove to be unique. She describes her approach as theatrical in that she uses characterizations and props to convey her ideas. Her stylistic movement is sculptural, she says. "It creates three-dimensional space with and around the dancers."

Werner also said that she uses her dancers as an artistic medium to manipulate the environment in which they move.

In talking about the group, Werner described them as "extremely expressive," adding that "it is rare to experience such love and unity among a working group."

The concert will be accompanied by live music performed by Monte Thompson as well as "guttural and percussive accompaniment" by Touch Troupe.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. in the Physical Education Building, Room 110. Admission is free and there will be a reception following the performance.

Chorale gives spring concert

By DONNA PRISBREY

School children, symphony members and a chorale are combining to perform the Washington Idaho Symphony Chorale Spring Concert.

The theme is wedding music. Dr. Harry Johansen will direct the program.

Members of The Washington Idaho Symphony will accompany the chorale in Bach's most popular cantata, "Sleepers Awake." Soloists for the cantata will be Rebekah Demaree, soprano; Robert Demaree, tenor; and Paul Klemme, bass.

The chorale will also be performing "Wedding Cantata," by Daniel Pinkham; "Make our Garden Grow," by Bernstein; and "My Romance" by Rogers and Hart.

Some songs will be a capella and some have piano accompaniment.

The Moscow Arts Commission Youth Chorus will also be participating in the concert.

The Youth Chorus, the newest choir in the area, was organized a year and a half ago. Melissa Kleinert directs the 42 school-age children.

"(The chorus) will have their own part in the program," Johansen said. "It's the first time they'll be in a program like this."

The concert will be at 8 p.m. April 29 at the Simpson United Methodist Church in Pullman and April 30 at the Lewiston First United Methodist Church. Tickets are $3 and are available at the door.

M.C. RELL. 20-year-old rap artist M.C. Rell joined with the Houserockers to release their first album, Into the Future. (FILE PHOTO)

M.C. Rell debuts a real sleeper

Review by RICH STECKLER
Contributing Writer

Get the No-Doze out for M.C. Rell and the Houserockers' debut rap album.

This sleeper album is a crude awakening to the overabundant abuse of hip hop music. A 20-year-old Philadelphia native, M.C. Rell demonstrates his mediocre music technique and his ability to contradict himself.

Although the album's songs vary from fast, hard-driving beats to slower, more subdued melodies, they are tainted by irregular scratches, bizzar organ music and annoying chants. The album is mostly comprised of non-directional music laced with self-righteous lyrics that produce nothing more than a few Zs.

Furthermore, Rell manages to preach one thing and practice another. For example, in "Hole In My Pocket" he raps about how he spends money like it's going out of style. Besides ranting and raving how he continuously turns in late rent payments, he professes his obsession with purchasing gold jewelry, Gucci shoes and fast cars. Ironically, masked behind his materialistic tendencies, Rell states that "Money is my only fulfillment besides God, yes He comes first, because what good is money inside a hearse." Irresponsibility reigns in this doozy of a message.

There are, however, a couple of songs void of this monotonous beat and vanity. "Common Knowledge" and "My Vision" were influenced by Rell's greatest roll model, Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. These tunes reiterate King's prophesies and mention that the things he (King) went through are reoccurring now. Unfortunately, these two tracks are the only ones worth salvaging because Rell seems to have fallen into the same practice as the majority of new rappers:

producing lyrics with the intent to impress and teach while, in fact, they regress into words of worthlessness. The rhymes are then backed up by tired bass lines and a myriad of instruments and sounds.

M.C. Rell and the Houserockers don't necessarily rock the house, but they'll more likely rock you to sleep.

Rap can be an important and enjoyable facet of music. Rappers such as Tone Loc and D.J. Jazzy Jeff and the Fresh Prince have managed to successfully cross into the pop music area. This is not to say that the only good hip hop tunes are the ones that hop on the top 40 chart, but it does represent rap's growing popularity.

Technically, rap is becoming more complex. One such complexity is electronic sampling. All types of music from hard rock to pop use this technique, however it is most visible and probably most prevalent in rap.

According to this year's May/June issue of Option magazine, the derivation of sampling began out of club dance music. The DJs would spin records while the emcees talked during and in between songs. After a while the DJs started manually manipulating the turntables back and forth, thus scratching. Soon afterwards they started playing a few bars, or "samples", of another song over a song already playing. The emcees had space to rap as well as state their philosophies of life. Option explains that "it was actually a mutant North Americanized form of the Jamaican custom of 'toasting,' which means talking during instrumental parts of pop songs."

Thanks to advanced technology, music can be sampled on microchips and manipulated. Today sampling is used to incorporate certain parts of older songs into the new ones. This raises the question whether or not this is a form of plagiarism or just a form of art. Advocates of sampling say that by using old songs, they make something new. Critics retaliate by saying that it merely exploits and illegally capitalizes on previously recorded music.

The debate continues to enthrall the rap world. Meanwhile, rap continues to use sampling to diversify its sound.

Softball title comes easy for Frozen Ropes

By GREG NUNES
Sports Writer

A busy week of intramural playoff action came to a close Thursday afternoon when the Frozen Ropes knocked off Big Red 10-2 in the men's competitive softball championship.

The win marked the end of a perfect season for the Ropes at 7-0, while Big Red finishes at 5-4. The Ropes were able to score at least one run in every inning en route to the win and had a 7-0 lead before Big Red could get on the scoreboard.

In the top of the first, the Ropes jumped out to a 1-0 lead when Pat Arnold singled and later scored with the help of a Big Red error.

The Ropes continued to add to its lead in the third inning with John Ney, who opened the inning with a triple, scoring on a double by Herb Sprinkle to make the score 4-0.

Big Red finally made an effort to get back in the game in the fifth by scoring a pair of runs to cut the deficit to 7-2. Ron Swanson and Tony Brede each picked up RBI singles in the inning.

However, with three runs in the final inning, the Ropes put the game out of reach.

Dan Haynes led the Ropes at the plate with a three-for-three performance along with three RBI, while Rob Robinson picked up a pair of singles for Big Red in a losing cause.

In other softball action, the Sigma Nu Oldies breezed to an easy 16-1 win over the Sineps in the men's recreation league final, while the Sluggers nipped the Brewers 5-4 in the women's championship.

Sigma Nu ends its season at 6-0 and the Sluggers were just as impressive at 7-0.

Volleyball playoff matches were completed Tuesday with Alpha 3 capturing the title.

Women's tennis closes at Big Sky

By RUSS BIAGNE
Sports Writer

The Vandal tennis teams face a big weekend as the women wrap up their season with the Big Sky Championships, and the men head to Bozeman for the Montana State Invitational.

For the women, the Shanander sisters will be looking to win the No.1 doubles spot as they face five other Big Sky teams in Boise for the championships (Idaho State University and University of Montana were previously eliminated). The Shananders are putting a nine-game winning streak and a 15-2 record on the line for the tournament. Last year, the sisters were 21-0 before losing to Weber State's Christina Beer and Roxanne Engle. The duo is returning this year to defend their crown.

The men's team will prime their skills for the Big Sky Championships this weekend by traveling to Bozeman to participate in the Montana State Invitational. The Vandals are now 17-2 overall after defeating Washington State University 6-3 Tuesday.

UI golfers end tough season

By LYNNETTE PIXLEY

The last golf match of the season is this weekend as the UI golf team hosts an invitational for seven teams from the Northwest.

Of the seven, WSU, the University of British Columbia, Treasure Valley, Walla Walla, Spokane Falls and Whitman Community College, Coach Kim Kirkland says the University of British Columbia and WSU are among the top competitors.

"I really feel Idaho has a chance of placing within the top three," Kirkland said.

Kirkland said that although it's been a tough season with the UI Golf Course in bad condition and the weather limiting their practices, he feels the team has been playing with consistency.

Kirkland said junior Matt Gustavel and senior Steve Johnston have played exceptionally well for the Vandals this season.

"They have managed to play fairly consistent throughout the season considering the circumstances," Kirkland said.

The team will be playing 36 holes Friday at 8:30 a.m. and will finish up the season with 18 holes at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.
