Cougars maul Vandals

The Battle of the Palouse. It was ugly. The University of Idaho football team took its worst beating of the decade as the Washington State Cougars tromped the Vandals 41-7 Saturday in Pullman. The Cougs took what started as an exciting, evenly matched game and turned it into a nightmare for UI. “(I feel) miserable. It hurts. We got our tails kicked as the score indicated,” said first-year Head Coach John L. Smith. “We moved the ball well in the first half and did everything we wanted to,” Smith said of the Vandals, who at halftime only trailed WSU by a score of 17-7. But WSU buried UI in the second half as the Cougs put up 30 unanswered points to continue WSU's dominance in the 95-year-old rivalry between the two teams. “I really thought we would play better (in the third quarter),” Smith said. “There were a couple of times when we were walking on and off the field. One time we didn't have enough people on one of our special teams out there. Things like that are not going to happen again. I don't care if we're getting beat 100-0.” Although UI lost its intensity in the second half, that wasn't the case in the first quarter, where the pumped-up Vandals stopped star Cougar runningback Steve Broussard and dominated WSU's defensive line in front of 33,914 disbelieving fans. WSU put up the first points of the game on a Jason Hanson 23-yard field goal with 8:25 left in the first quarter, but UI quickly rallied back with a Devon Pearce one-yard touchdown run following an impressive 73-yard, eight-play drive. UI held the Cougs to three plays and a punt on WSU's next possession and then took the ball down to WSU's three yard line, threatening to go up 14-3 with time running out in the first quarter. Then tragedy hit the underdog Vandals as quarterback John Friesz tossed a lob pass into the arms of Cougar cornerback Ron Ricard, who ran the ball out of the Vandal end zone to the 15 yard line. Two minutes and 49 seconds later, the Cougs got the go-ahead touchdown on a pass from quarterback Brad Gossen to C.J. Davis,

Armstrong loses job

Zinser makes first personnel changes

By KARA GARTEN
News Assistant

University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser has decided to “refurnish her cabinet” by re-establishing the office of vice president for student affairs, a position that was dropped when Richard Gibb was president. This is the first major personnel change Zinser has made since taking office in July. The person who fills the position of vice president for student affairs will take over the duties Terry Armstrong has been responsible for as executive assistant to former President Gibb. Armstrong has held the position of executive assistant to the president since its creation approximately ten years ago, but he says he will not pursue the vice presidency. Instead, he will return to teaching at the College of Education. Armstrong said he is not surprised that Zinser is making some personnel changes.

“It is perfectly normal for a new president to refurnish her cabinet,” Armstrong said. “I am more than content to return to teaching.” Armstrong's position was created early in former President Gibb's tenure in an attempt to strengthen the lines of communication between administration and faculty. Armstrong, who was then a professor in the College of Education, was asked to be an assistant to President Gibb on the assumption that the position was temporary. The arrangement worked out so well that Armstrong remained in that position for almost a decade. Gradually, Armstrong's duties have been extended to supervising at least ten divisions of student services, including housing and food service. The vice presidential position will be opened for a nationwide search later this fall and Zinser hopes to fill the position early this spring. Armstrong will keep his student services duties until that time and former UI Centennial Coordinator Harold Godwin will temporarily serve as assistant to President Zinser.

Gem goes out tomorrow

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

The 1989 Gem of the Mountains is here and ready to be distributed to students, according to Patti Rambo, 1989 yearbook editor. The yearbook has arrived earlier than in previous years. According to Rambo, the book is right on time. “It's on time this year,” Rambo said. “It's unusual for it to arrive later.” 1990 Gem Editor Jill Beck is confident that the early arrival of the 1989 Gem will help sales of her book. Beck is pleased with the layout of the '89 Gem. “I think it will probably be a Gold Crown Award winning book,” Beck said. “There are some good concepts in it.” Rambo is also pleased with the yearbook. “I'm really happy with it,” Rambo said. “It's much more colorful, it's smaller, and I think more enjoyable.” Because of high sales last fall and spring, virtually no extra copies of the 1989 Gem will be available for sale this fall. The Gem staff ordered 1,500 books, but by registration 87 percent of those books were sold, according to Rambo. Students purchased 1,421 yearbooks last year, a large increase from 1988. Zinser to consider Kagi's reforms

Student fees and tuition top the agenda

By M.L. GARLAND
Editor

A memo to President Zinser and the Idaho State Board of Education addressing student concerns about fees and tuition has been rescinded to allow Zinser an opportunity to reply and deal with the matter on campus, according to ASUI President Tina Kagi.

"I really respect her ability to solve problems on campus without going to the Board," Kagi said.

The original memo from Kagi, addressed to the Board and Zinser, disclosed the students' concern over tuition vs. fees and the administration's handling of the situation last spring.

"It is time the University of Idaho's tuition/student fee issue be resolved," Kagi wrote. "We hope this end can be accomplished in a peaceful, non-confrontational manner."

However, Kagi also revealed in the memo the ASUI Senate's intention to place attorney Ray Givens on retention. Givens recently won North Idaho College's student fee battle.

"We are in mediation. We never said we would go to court," Senator-elect Lisa Krepel said. "We are not fighting the fee increase, but rather trying to figure out a legal foundation between tuition and fees."

Zinser has informed student leaders that she will respond to the memo within two weeks and work toward a compromise.

"After we met with Zinser we decided to allow her to address our concerns on campus," Kagi said. "However, she said if her proposal is unsatisfactory, she would understand if we took the issue to the Board."

The fee in consideration was approved in June by the Board despite student protests last spring. The UI student body voted down the fee increase 2 to 1.

Employees receive pay increase

By BETH PETTIBON
Staff Writer

Over the summer most University of Idaho faculty and non-teaching employees received larger raises in their paychecks than in previous years.

"Raises were given on a pay-for-performance. We compiled a report, and in general the raises were averaged out to five percent."

— Mark Brainard
UI Assistant Budget Officer

This year non-teaching employees, such as secretaries and custodians, received raises based on their performances. In the past, non-teaching employees received automatic pay increases each year, but this year the Idaho Legislature directed agencies to award raises on a merit system.

"Raises were given on a pay-for-performance," said UI Assistant Budget Officer Mark Brainard. "We compiled a report, and in general the raises were averaged out to five percent."

Brainard said the vice presidents needed to approve pay increases of less than two percent or more than 12 percent. Overall, the budget office stayed very close to the five percent increase guideline.

"We showed a number of zero increases, but most were vacant positions or people who have just been hired," Brainard said.

Brainard said the salary increases also provided the budget office with an opportunity to even out some salary inequities.

UI President to rename Parents Weekend

By MARY HEUETT
Staff Writer

Family Weekend will replace Parents Weekend this spring in an effort to recognize the large non-traditional student population at the University of Idaho.

The focus of the traditional Parents Weekend will shift to include students with families of their own. About 55 percent of the student body is 27 or older, and many of them have their own families.

UI President Elisabeth Zinser suggested the change when she was asked to write the introduction for the Parents Weekend brochure. She was concerned that non-traditional students were not included in the concept of the weekend.

According to Zinser, the changes for Family Weekend will be minimal. Activities will include students and their parents, as well as students with families of their own.

Immature Cougars need art lessons

After the game Saturday, Washington State University left more than its mark on the University of Idaho. They also did some unsportsmanlike vandalism on our turf.

In the form of spray paint. Certain WSU fans felt the need to express their artistic abilities on campus and in the community at the following sites:

- Pullman highway at the border, the result of which left marks on the underside of several cars
- Back wall of Ridenbaugh Hall
- Alley behind the Student Union Building
- Pi Phi fence
- Beta back door
- Pi Kappa Tau entrance
- Kappa Sigma bench in the front yard

- Sigma Chi entrance
- Tau Kappa Epsilon walls and sign
- FarmHouse sign
- Sidewalks and crosswalks all over campus

Don't they have a decent art department over there?

A possible solution for these frustrated big-city artists is to send them back to their respective towns to sign up for a kindergarten finger painting class. Or let them join their favorite gang so someone will actually appreciate their abilities.

To add even more injury, WSU Head Coach Mike Price, when asked if he favored the WSU-UI rivalry, is quoted as saying, "Yeah, I'm all for playing anybody that we can beat 41-7."

That just reeks of good will. Speaking of good will, wasn't there supposed to be some for the game? There was a walk Friday depicting the friendship between the two campuses. Some of you even shook hands with your counterparts. A lot of good it did us. Little did we know they held spray paint cans in their other hands.

The Moscow Police Department has reported that there have been several vandalism complaints from campus already. It's time to do more than complain.

It's the golden anniversary of the initiation of the loser's walk. This year we are going to issue a different challenge to the student body of WSU.

Pay for the damage.

WSU President Samuel Smith and ASW-SU President Bill Stauffacher should be mortified by their guerrilla artists' behavior and make amends immediately.

Nice pill box

Editor:
Contrary to what appears to be the majority opinion, I am quite pleased with the new UI bookstore. The building is aesthetically appealing. It may not be any architectural wonder, but it is still a welcome and handsome addition to the UI campus.

Some have complained that the new bookstore has eliminated parking space. Well, that sort of thing happens when you construct a building. Like all matter, a building occupies space.

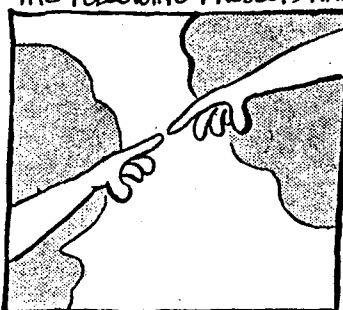

The UI still has ample parking despite the new building. I am amazed to hear people complain about the lack of parking space here. They should try moving to a larger city college sometime. There they would find driving to be a luxury.

The new bookstore may very well be something of a pill box, but it is a welcome change from the smaller pill box that we had to suffer with before.

Rubella outbreak rumor inspires check-ups

By AMY JAMISON
Staff Writer

Last year, prior to graduation, an outbreak of rubella hit the University of Idaho campus. Now rumors are spreading that it's back.

There are no known cases of rubella in this area, however, according to Karen Hamed, a registered nurse at the Public Health Center in Moscow.

"There has been no sign of an outbreak since last spring," Hamed said.

Dr. Donald Chin of the UI Student Health Center said no cases have shown up on campus, either. However, he and his staff are still concerned that another outbreak may occur.

"We are trying to get a rubella policy to prevent a future outbreak," Chin said.

On college campuses, communicable diseases spread rapidly due to close contact among students. The Student Health Center is trying to prevent another rubella outbreak by encouraging reimmunization. The staff is sending letters to students recommending that they reimmunize.

According to Chin, reimmunization at the age of 12 may become mandatory in the United States in one year.

Rubella is a mild, communicable virus characterized by swollen glands and small red spots on the skin. It is an outpatient disease that can be treated at home.

"The best thing to do is to warn students to keep up-to-date on their shots," Hamed said.

Student count increases, housing situation tight

By BETH PETTIBON
Staff Writer

One glance through the off-campus housing list is enough to realize that students are facing a crunch this year when it comes to finding places to live.

The housing shortage in Moscow has left University of Idaho students with very few options for finding affordable and decent places to live this fall.

Major apartment complexes have been full since the middle of July, and students that hadn't already signed apartment leases early in the summer are being forced to find other alternatives.

UI housing officials aren't sure whether the increase of students in the residence halls this year is a result of the apartment shortage or of the decrease in men's rush.

"It's a mystery," said Stuart Davis, assistant director of housing. "At this point, we don't have the exact figures, but our numbers are up about six percent over last year."

Many students are commuting to school from places such as Lewiston, Troy and Deary, according to Director of Family Housing Don Surfus.

Surfus said this year it is especially difficult for non-traditional students with larger families to find places to live. Family Housing had only two of their three-bedroom apartments open this fall.

"I still get occasional calls," Surfus said. "As far as family housing here on campus, there isn't any. It's tight."

Surfus hopes to have another phase of the family apartments, Southhill Terrace, built by next fall.

"We've been full in the past, but not this bad," Surfus said. "It's reached the saturation point."

Many apartment complexes have been full since May and are still receiving calls daily from students looking for vacancies.

Stephanie Curry, ASUI Communications operations manager, said mobile homes are good options for students. If students can borrow money from parents or get a loan, they can sell the homes in four years and probably lose less money than if they paid rent during that time.

The apartment situation doesn't look like it will improve much in the future, according to a Palouse Properties employee.

"We're not in the market to build. The taxes are just too high to build right now," said the spokeswoman. "It's a hard market to have a management. That's why we're taking care of everyone else's property."

"mutant terrorist," and, well, we all have a list that won't quit.

By now you and your roommate may be asking, "What's this guy's point, and how many roommates has he really done away with?"

This is college. We're adults now. The key here is survival of the fittest: this is evolution in its prime. It's you or your roommate, so it's time for some frame-ups.

First, call all your roommate's teachers frequently, be obnoxious, and be sure to use his name. Second, plan pizza parties with all his friends; however, fail to inform him that $100 in pizza is on the way, and don't forget to go for a long swim just before the pizza arrives. Third, have some friends completely furnish the community shower with all his belongings.

These are all fun, but don't forget the added little personal touches to his everyday life, like setting your alarm very early and just sleeping through it every morning with a smile on your face. Or, how about several late, late nights where you just have to hear the stereo at NASA test levels?

Oh, don't forget to get the upper bunk. This way your roommate will always be awake to say "good night" (even better if you've been drinking heavily that evening).

It is easy to win over your roommate — and I don't mean his friendship.

The name change is not unique to the University of Idaho. Several other colleges have shifted the concept of Parents Weekend to include the growing population of non-traditional students.

The Family Weekend will be a one-year-only measure unless the ASUI Senate changes it permanently. A bill has been drafted to officially change Parents Weekend to Family Weekend, according to ASUI President Tina Kagi.

Family Weekend, scheduled for April, 1990, will coincide with President Zinser's inauguration and the annual Honors Convocation.

The brochure announcing the weekend will be addressed to "all family members of students."

In the past, ASUI representation for Off-Campus students has been less than adequate. In an attempt to provide you with better representation, a means for input and easy access to ASUI information and services, I am proposing the ASUI Off-Campus Student Registry. By enrolling in the Registry, you will receive ASUI Senate meeting minutes, periodic ASUI updates, access to your assigned senators and monthly invitations to attend a meeting with your ASUI representatives.

and WSU never looked back.

"I think it (Friesz interception) really changed the complexion of the game — let the air out of the balloon," Smith said. "We withered up at that point."

"The guy I threw it to (Kasey Dunn) has real good legs and can jump," Friesz said. "I'm thinking, 'Get it up in the air and let him jump to it.' It sounds like I threw it a little earlier than he expected and he never got off the ground. The other guy (Ricard) was watching and he got off the ground."

The Ricard pick off was one of two Friesz interceptions. Friesz completed 19 of 32 passes for 225 yards and did not throw a touchdown pass for the first time in 25 starts.

Gossen threw for 288 yards and three touchdowns in his debut, while Broussard overcame an early thrashing by the Vandal defense and punished UI with 115 yards.

WSU wide receiver Tim Stallworth ended with one touchdown and 154 yards on five receptions.

"They were exactly what I expected," Friesz said. "They were good."

Smith said the sheer physical strength of the Cougars over the Vandals was also a factor in the loss. Smith remains optimistic about the rest of the season, however.

"I was pleased in the first half with how the defense played," Smith said. "We're going to be a good football team."

UI's biggest point spread losses of the '80s include a 38-7 win by Furman in last season's Division I-AA Playoffs and a 38-7 win by Nevada-Reno in 1980.

UI travels to Portland State Saturday and will return home Sept. 16 to play Sacramento State.

We not only give you the money for college.
We also give you the time.

If you think the best way to pay for college is to put it off for a few years and join the military, you're half right.

Because with the New GI Bill, you can join the Army National Guard and get a guaranteed minimum of $18,000 for college.

But best of all, you serve two days a month and two weeks a year. Which means you can go to school full-time. Right now. On us.

So the question you have to ask yourself is not, can you afford college.

The question is, can you afford to wait.

Mountain bike trend on an upswing

By Mike Sterling
Sports Writer

Move over 10-speed bicycles. Mountain bikes are becoming the hottest way to travel on campus.

In the past, 10-speed bicycles were the traditional mode of transportation on campus, but since the invention of mountain bikes in 1976, 10-speeds have been losing ground.

The current trend has also hit the Palouse region by storm.

Area mountain bike sales account for nearly 90 percent of the total bikes sold, and biking enthusiasts are buying the bikes almost as fast as the dealers are receiving them.

Mountain bikes have bigger tires and wider rims to hug the ground, sturdy frames and upright handlebars to provide a more stable ride. The bikes can take the toughest terrain and still provide a comfortable ride around town and on campus.

The bikes are popular in the Palouse region because they can withstand the diversified and rugged terrain of Moscow Mountain, Laird Park and Elk Creek Falls.

Mountain bikes help keep the environment clean and provide a great way to get in shape and see the great outdoors.

Mountain bikes come in different styles and classes to match any rider's style, capabilities and price range. While some mountain bikes cost as much as $2,000, the average bike costs $400.

Mountain bikes are also becoming popular among police officers. In Seattle and Spokane some officers are donning biking shorts and mounting the bikes to patrol the downtown areas and maneuver in and out of traffic.

The UI intramural program has noticed the increased interest in mountain biking and has scheduled a mountain bike rodeo for Oct. 1. All UI and WSU students, faculty and staff are invited to participate in the rodeo, which will consist of a hill climb, an obstacle course and a 2.5 mile race.

Basketball recruitment in high-gear

By DAYNA WILLIAMS
Sports Writer

The Vandal basketball team won't be practicing until Oct. 15, but Head Coach Kermit Davis already has a positive outlook on the upcoming season.

"Expect good things from the basketball team this year," Davis said.

Davis spent most of the summer traveling and looking at possible recruits. Unfortunately, the National Collegiate Athletic Association prohibits coaches from talking to players during the summer.

Coaches can evaluate players during the summer but must wait until fall to begin recruiting. Davis and the other coaches are currently recruiting for the 1990-91 season.

Recruitment is a never-ending process. Davis, a Mississippi native, has spent much time recruiting in the South and has some good players from that area in mind.

Although many players are not returning, Riley Smith, Ricardo Boyd, and Ceasar Prelow will be playing again this year. Right now the team needs a point guard and a low post. Riley Smith will be graduating, so his replacement is also a main concern.

Last year the Vandals won the Big Sky Conference

Championship and received a berth to the NCAA tournament. UI was eliminated by the University of Nevada-Las Vegas in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

ODOR DROVE WORKERS FROM UCC

A strong odor resembling fiberglass resin filled the University Classroom Center earlier this summer and drove workers from the building for several days. University officials determined that the smell hadn't originated in the UCC, but from the steam tunnels. The smell was sucked up through the circulation systems, according to Matt Racki, University of Idaho News Bureau writer. The problem was probably linked to the annual closure of the university steam plant for routine maintenance, according to a university safety committee inspector. The steam plant closes each year during the week after Memorial Day weekend to allow workers to conduct routine maintenance. Laura Fisher, the university's industrial hygiene specialist, said in a memo to UCC employees that the smell may have been caused by materials growing on the building's plumbing or by steam from hot, mineral-rich water.

Paramount price policies affect discount theaters

Local owners concerned

By LEILONI REED
Staff Writer

The owners of the area's two discount theaters have mixed feelings about the recent per capita price increases Paramount Pictures now requires theaters to pay.

Paramount now requires that all theaters pay $1.05 per capita each time theaters show Paramount productions. This increase has little effect on movie houses charging regular prices but creates a problem for discount operations.

Admission to first-run theaters, such as the Excellence Theaters located in Pullman and Moscow, is generally $4.75. This margin above the $1.05 now required by Paramount enables such box offices to meet the new increases without much strain to their revenues.

The increases concern the owners of discount businesses such as Pullman's Old Post Office Theater and Moscow's Micro Cinema, however.

According to Jack Clark, owner of the Old Post Office, Paramount's demands are "damaging in terms of discount businesses, because the total outcome will be fewer people going to movies."

Clark and Bob Suto, owner of the Micro, currently charge $1.50 admission to their movies. With Paramount's per capita price increases and indications by officials that Warner Brothers, another major film company, is following suit, decisions must be made.

Both Clark and Suto said they have basically two choices. They must either raise prices or stop showing the companies' films.

Clark said the two companies combined carry such a "big portion" of the movies he runs that a price increase to $3.25 is almost unavoidable, although he did not say when the prices would change.

Suto, on the other hand, has an almost opposite view about the situation.

"We're pretty adamant about keeping prices low," he said.

Suto said he can't afford to run Paramount and Warner Brothers' films. He said that since the two Bug Radio and a children-produced show will premiere this month on student station KUOI-FM, according to Station Manager Ken Fate.

In July, Fate and program director Matt Kitterman traveled to New York to attend the Tenth New Music Seminar, where they discovered Bug Radio. They also generated innovative ideas for future programs with 5,000 other radio and recording representatives attending the seminar.

Bug radio, a weekly hour program, features musical groups from around the world and includes interviews and poetry from the local clientele.

"It includes everything from New York rock to Ethiopian drum jam," Fate said.

Seven kindergartners will debut with their own weekly show in a few weeks. According to Fate, it will be produced for and by the children.

KUOI plans to start a radio talk show and produce radio plays this fall. A video show on channel 8 is in the works for next spring with a KUOI simulcast, according to Kitterman.

"Videos (will be shown) that aren't seen around here," Fate said.

KUOI is one of the few stations that allows its disc jockeys to format their own programs. With approximately 60 disc jockeys, shows range from rock to rap to urban folk and Pakistani music.

"We're doing a good job covering all kinds of music," Kitterman said. "Everything gets a chance for air play."

companies' films are not a large portion of his usual showings, his business should not be greatly affected.

The Micro owner has scheduled Warner Brothers' Batman, but he will not take it off the schedule.

"Once the schedule comes out, that's what you get," Suto said.

Both owners seem determined to, as Suto put it, "take their stand" against the new price policies.

Clark is a founding member of the National Association of Discount Theaters, which includes 500 second-run theaters nationwide. Clark wants consumers to become involved in the process.

"We try to get consumer groups motivated about what has been going on," Clark said. Suto makes his "stand" by not running the films.

Suto said if theaters give in and raise their prices, the remaining film companies are going to take it as a cue to raise their per capita requirements.

Suto is determined that he "won't raise prices until there's absolutely no choice."
