ASUI finishes with surplus

Increased student enrollment credited

By VIVIANE GILBERT
Staff Writer

The ASUI ended fiscal year 1989 with a $33,384 surplus, even though 10 departments exceeded their budgets.

According to 1988-89 Senate Finance Chairman Mike Gotch, the surplus was due to additional money from increased student enrollment and the unexpected savings of the Communications departments.

The ASUI budget is split into four divisions: Administrative, Outdoor, Productions and Communications.

The Administrative and Productions divisions had negative totals for the year.

Student fee revenue was up $39,178, primarily due to increased enrollment, according to their projected expenses by more than $23,000.

"Much of the savings can be attributed to larger than expected savings from the purchase of the Mycro-Tek computer system and laser printers, and tight control of expenses by department heads," Gotch said.

Gotch said the other ASUI department totals nearly matched the amounts projected in the budget.

The surplus will be added to the fiscal year 1990 ASUI General Reserve.

"Several years ago the ASUI was running a deficit twice that of this year's surplus."

'Marriott' tag dropped

Replaced by University Dining

By KARA OLSON
Staff Writer

The University of Idaho Administration no longer wants to associate its dining services with Marriott, the corporation the university contracted to operate food services last January.

"Advertising for Marriott Corporation is not part of their contract, and to promote any outside advertising would not be proper," said Joe Geiger, vice president of UI Financial Affairs.

"This is not a slam on Marriott," Geiger said. "It is just that the University Dining Service is the function, and Marriott is the corporation we hired to operate the dining services."

Geiger said that in the contract, Marriott is identified as "University Dining Services." Therefore, even though employees' paychecks come from the Marriott Corporation, they work for the university.

"Marriott is under the current contract, and their performance will decide if they will remain at the university, because the University Dining Services could be run by any corporation," Geiger said.

Lynn Morrison, general manager for University Dining Services by Marriott, says that other schools such as Boise State University and Idaho State University use Marriott on their logos.

"Boise State wants people to know that Marriott is the corporation running their

Vandalism runs rampant

By JULIE YOUNG

Some Washington State University students may have taken a little too seriously the idea that they "vandalized" the University of Idaho in the Sept. 2 football game.

That weekend someone painted "WSU" and "Wazoo" on UI campus sidewalks and on several UI fraternities.

Sergeant Don Lanpher of the UI Campus Police doesn't have any leads, and no witnesses have come forward with any information. But Lanpher isn't giving up.

"There are people running around this campus all night. It stands to reason that somebody had to have seen something," Lanpher said.

Some of the areas vandalized were "Hello Walk" on the Admi-

Favorable weather and lots of enthusiasm made this year's Sigma Alpha Epsilon Olympics a success, according to SAE Intramurals Chairman Barry Allman.

"Last year it rained on the day of the Olympics, but the girls still enjoyed themselves," Allman said.

The Gamma Phis won the five-event competition, followed by the Delta Gammas who took second.

The Alpha Gams came in fifth place, and the Delta Delta Delta sorority took sixth.

food services because Marriott itself symbolizes quality," Morrison said. "However, in the case of University of Idaho, Marriott has come to represent a big corporation made up of uncaring people. An overall bad image has been created."

"Marriott is the people involved with it. It is myself, Joe Schnechenburger, Mike Thomson, and others," Morrison said.

"We care about the students and we are here to listen to their needs."

Last year the food services were usually referred to as "Marriott's University Dining Services."

"Marriott was late getting started last year and hadn't come up to speed on their contract terms, so we used their name as the dining services," said UI Controller Gerry Reynolds. "However, it was not in their contract to promote themselves outside of the university."

"It was a convenient way to discuss the new dining services as Marriott last year, but now they will be known as University Dining Services," Geiger said. "Any trucks or advertisements cannot display Marriott because this would be improper advertising. However, in the case of news articles, a compromise has been made to use University Dining Services by Marriott."

▪ MOUNTAIN CLIMBER VISITS BOOKSTORE

Lou Whittaker, chief guide of Rainier Mountaineering, Inc., will be at the UI Bookstore Friday from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Whittaker, who led the successful 1989 American Kangchenjunga Expedition in Nepal, is visiting UI as part of a special JanSport athletic clothing promotion. JanSport was a major sponsor of the Expedition.

Peg Godwin, UI Bookstore assistant manager of books, said the bookstore is offering door prizes and special prices on all JanSport merchandise for Friday's promotion.

"We sell a lot of JanSport backpacks and clothing, and JanSport offered to bring Lou around," Godwin said. "Anyone who is interested in mountain climbing should try to visit with Lou. I'm sure he'll have a lot of interesting stories."

The cart offers baked goods and breakfast items in the morning and hot dogs and sausages starting at 10:30 a.m.

▪ STATE ED BOARD PLANS BUDGET

The Idaho State Board of Education will meet here Thursday and Friday to decide how much money to request from the Idaho Legislature for fiscal year 1991.

In previous meetings, Board agencies and institutions have requested funds totaling $213 million from the State General Account.

The largest portion of the request comes from Idaho's four-year colleges and universities which are asking for $130.9 million from the General Account for their operating budgets.

▪ MOSQUITO APPE-TITE SUPPRESSANT?

University of Idaho researcher Marc Klowden has come up with an appetite suppressant for mosquitoes.

Klowden's compound, when injected into female mosquitoes, tricks them into believing they are full, so they stop feeding.

Klowden said that there is a gene that causes mosquitoes to create the appetite suppressant, but that gene has not been found yet and its discovery may be a long way off.

Abuse outweighs rhetoric

Gov. Cecil Andrus designated 1989 the "Year of the Child" as a call to action against child abuse and to sensitize the state to the problem.

But has it really been the year of the child? Many cases of child abuse are taking place in Idaho and perhaps at an increasing rate.

Bettie Hoff of the Latah County Department of Health and Welfare said that Latah County alone is averaging 14 child abuse cases per month. As of August a total of 119 cases have taken place in Latah County this year.

This so far is an increase from the 1988 Latah County total of 139 reported cases of child abuse.

The number of sexual abuse cases in 1989 has already surpassed the number in 1988. Already 24 cases of sexual abuse have been reported in 1989. Only 20 total cases were reported in 1988.

Latah County is quickly approaching last year's total of physical abuse with 30 reported cases so far. Last year's total for physical abuse was 34 cases.

Still, child abusers are being prosecuted.

Last week a Lewiston man was sentenced to 14 years in prison for raping two girls under the age of 12 and taking indecent liberties.

Another Lewiston man prosecuted for sexual abuse of a child was placed on probation last week after a one-year prison term. He was ordered not to be alone with anyone younger than 18 after his release from jail, assessed a $500 fine and ordered to pay any counseling costs for the victim.

But these are only two cases. Many other cases go unreported. Many other children continue to be abused.

According to a 1988 annual nationwide survey by the National Center on Child Abuse Prevention Research, over 2.2 million reports of child abuse were filed in 1988. This is a 3 percent increase over 1987.

Anyone knowing of any sort of child abuse should report it. More important than the "war on drugs" is the "war on child abuse." Only by ensuring the welfare of children can we ensure the future.

High ideals like the "Year of the Child" are well and good, but they need to be removed from the realm of platitudes and rhetoric.

— Matt Helmick

SHAME ON U.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones is a paradox. "The best way to combat the drug problem is to do it at home," Jones said. "It can't be shoved off on the government."

And yet Jones on the other hand said last Thursday that he will specifically ask state lawmakers in January for an emergency $1 million appropriation to augment drug enforcement efforts.

Nothing like handling the drug problem at home. Jones also said officials should produce "about the optimum drug enforcement program for the state" and that "drug enforcement is a necessity not a luxury."

Then, after the drug offenders are incarcerated, Jones said we should allocate an extra $1.9 million in state support for drug treatment of prison inmates and juveniles.

While the latter suggestion sounds desirable, it seems more logical and less costly to deal with the problem before the enforcement process. In other words, why not educate and help people before jailing them?

It's not orthodox or Bush-like, but it might work and would be much less costly.

Of course, it would require that the government would have to help families. They cannot do it on their own.

In any case, Jones still has to decide whether or not the state footing $1 million is "shoving off" responsibility on to the government.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Vandal Cafe 'tea's off customer

Editor:

University Dining Services has hit a new low.

Today I purchased a large "Sun-Tea" for 74 cents. In just about every other establishment in Moscow a person ordering iced tea is offered free refills, i.e., a bottomless glass of iced tea. I was foolish to think a monopolistic dragon like University Dining Services might offer a free refill on its "Sun-Tea." Could the costs associated with providing free refills be so prohibitive? Let's examine the possibilities.

How much labor is required to produce "Sun-Tea"? After all, someone must fill the jar with water and insert the tea bags. Then an individual must walk to the window carrying the jar and place it on the window sill. The sun, which must drag itself above the horizon, is then put to work generating the tea from simple water and tea bags. After our hardworking, underpaid sun has finished working its magic, someone must pick up the jar and carry it to the dispenser and pour it in! With those high labor and manufacturing costs addressed, let's look to the costs of equipment.

An argument could be made that if free refills were offered, demand would exceed supply and University Dining Services would face additional costs obtaining equipment necessary to meet the new demand. The purchase, or appropriation, of more glass jars could be burdensome!

Maybe all of us "Sun-Tea" drinkers are helping subsidize low prices on other food items and free refills could cause increased prices in other foods. It's more likely University Dining Services is taking advantage of its position as the only food service provider on campus and ripping us all off!

Postscript: After writing this letter I was discussing the problem with my husband and Voila! he had lunch in the Blue Bucket Inn today. Guess what he had to drink? Iced tea! Both my husband and his lunch companion received free refills. Fancy that!

Bush dream lacks direction

As George Bush clutched a bag of crack cocaine seized across the street from the White House and emphatically called the entire morally bound citizenry of the nation to arms in the war on drugs, images of other presidents and their pleas to the people were recalled:

■ FDR and his rallying cry at the beginning of World War II.

■ JFK and his call for our country to lead the world into the space age.

■ Roosevelt invoking our country to do battle with the evils of fascism.

By directing us toward the moon, Kennedy's force of will helped establish what once was only a dream. Bush's speech spelled out a program that he believes will successfully defeat the evils of the drug crisis and establish the dream of a drug-free America. Unfortunately for our society, Bush has neither the manpower nor the sense of direction in the assault on drugs that Roosevelt and Kennedy possessed in establishing their particular initiatives.

The most glaring problems with Bush's proposed $7.9 billion war on drugs are his priorities in the dispersion of funds. In 1990, Bush is planning to spend $2.2 billion above the current anti-drug outlay of $5.7 billion. Over half of the increase is specified for expansion of federal prison cells.

Enlarging the very place where criminals refine their trade will prove to be devoid of any effect in handling the drug problem. Drugs are as prevalent inside prisons as outside — perverting the notion of rehabilitation.

Bush and his cronies argue that the creation of more jail cells will have a positive effect by cleaning the streets of criminals. Where this notion fails is that for every crack dealer that is locked up, there are 20 waiting eagerly as replacement. We can expect the prison population to stand at around 725,000 inmates by the time Bush leaves office.

Bush's plan earmarks the majority of funding for law enforcement and corrections, while less than a third of the funding will be in the form of prevention, education, and treatment.

The money Bush proposes allocated for treatment ($300 million) is less than the amount slashed from treatment programs by the Reagan administration. As it stands, adequate drug treatment is only available for

China unjustly criticized

The demonstrations in China earlier this summer provided the American news media with a great deal of material for moralizing.

When the Chinese government used violent methods to suppress dissent, the American press unleashed a typically American outcry: The Chinese government was criticized for not being as fussy about its exercise of power as the United States would have been in the same situation.

Most columnists failed to mention that the long process of fine-tuning our form of government was not always peaceful or pleasant. The situation of the Chinese government should be put in perspective. The Chinese people are only 75 years away from the overthrow of their Manchu emperor. They and their government are still evolving as a state and should be given credit for their quick progress.

Some columnists were honest enough to mention the four white students killed at Kent State University. However, not one I read mentioned the black students killed at Jackson State College the same day. Also forgotten were the Watts riots, the occupation of Washington D.C. by National Guard troops, the riots in Detroit and many other incidents which followed the assassination of Dr.

CHARLES RICE

Commentary

Martin Luther King Jr. Also neglected were the countless times that American army regular troops and National Guard units were used against the labor demonstrations, draft protests, and race riots that have occurred since the founding of the United States.

It would appear that the American press has a short memory and little understanding of the passion for order shared by all governments. I believe that if a million students and workers tied up the central area of Washington D.C. and blocked movement of police and army units for several weeks, the result would be the same. There would be a gradual escalation of force by the American government with the same final use of violence that occurred in China.

The American press was ecstatic about the Chinese demonstrators' stated goal of democracy. What do the Chinese mean when they say the word "democracy"? This word has been so misused by politicians around the world that it no longer has a clear definition. Cuba, Israel and South Africa all claim to have democratic governments, yet most observers claim they are oppressive governments.

It seems obvious to citizens of Idaho that democracy does function and is benign, although Idaho has not always been so peaceful or democratic.

Before the passage of federal voting laws in 1964, Idaho law denied many non-white Idaho citizens the right to participate in the voting process. The labor troubles at the turn of the century 300,000 of the approximately 6.5 million dope addicts.

Our country contains an estimated 23 million recreational drug users who spend more on drugs than companies such as General Motors earn. Clearly a higher degree of emphasis must be placed on educating our citizenry of the horrors of drug abuse, preventing drug abuse, and treating those people who suffer the unfortunate plight of being an addict. The drug epidemic is not so much a problem of supply as it is of demand.

We have to tip our hats to George Bush in one area. He is following through with his campaign promise not to raise taxes. This means that a huge sum of money must be diverted from other programs to foot the bill for the anti-drug proposal.

Unfortunately, Bush has deemed that programs such as housing and economic development will be shorted. A lack of housing and economic opportunity are focal points of why drugs are dealt in the first place. Dealing a kilogram of coke with a street value of $30,000 is an easy way of rectifying the fact that decent housing, education, and employment are an anomaly within many inner-city neighborhoods.

The cause of the drug epidemic in this country is the enormous demand for drugs. Its effect is the plethora of drug dealers who capitalize on the illicit and lucrative commodity.

George Bush has placed emphasis on solving the drug crisis through its effect — prosecuting drug abuse, rather than its cause — a high rate of drug demand and the socioeconomic realities of life in the inner-cities where the drug trade is predominant.

By placing primary emphasis on the causes of drug use and the socioeconomic factors that induce drug dealing, our nation would greatly enhance the chances of waging a successful war on drugs.

Bush's answers to the drug problem remind one of the plight of President Lyndon Johnson and his similarly short-sighted and mismanaged handling of the Vietnam affair. Hopefully this country will have enough intellect and fortitude to reject Bush's bungling proposal and halt what is gradually becoming a domestic form of Vietnam.

Dear UI Student:

The ASUI has recently created several new programs aimed at NON-TRADITIONAL and OFF-CAMPUS students; we encourage you to take advantage of these programs and to give us your suggestions for improving them:

*THE OFF CAMPUS STUDENT REGISTRY: Provides off-campus students with a direct line of communications to student government representatives. Once enrolled, you will receive ASUI Senate meeting minutes, periodic updates, and invitations to attend monthly meetings with your assigned ASUI Senators.

*THE ASUI CHILDCARE DIRECTORY: This service allows local childcare providers to list their services with the ASUI free of charge. The Childcare Directories are available to parents at no cost through the ASUI Office.

*THE ASUI EMPLOYMENT SERVICE: Allows local businesses and campus departments to publicize job openings through the ASUI (without charge). All employment opportunities are posted on a bulleting board in the Student Union Building; students may obtain applications for these positions in the ASUI Office.

Early this fall, the ASUI will be recruiting students for an ASUI Ad-Hoc Committee on Non-Traditional and Off-Campus Students.

The Committee's goal is to assess and report on the special concerns of this distinct sector of our student body. The Committee will also make specific recommendations to the ASUI for modifying current programs or creating new ones in an effort to better meet the needs of our growing non-traditional student population.

If you are interested in obtaining more information on these or any other ASUI programs, please stop by the ASUI Office on the main floor of the Students Union Building or call 885-6331.

Sincerely,

Tina Kagi, ASUI President

Students manage cafeteria

By KARA OLSON
Staff Writer

Lynn Morrison, general manager of University Dining Services by Marriott, has a philosophy that students should serve students.

Therefore, 12 student managers have been incorporated into the program to oversee different cafeteria operations.

"The idea of student managers comes from a philosophy that I have always had that students should be hired to serve other students in such a way that they learn the responsibilities and pride that come with leadership, and at the same time providing them with excellent job opportunities for their future," Morrison said.

Joe Schnechenburger, resident dining director of University Dining Services, holds the same philosophy.

"Who understands students best but another student," Schnechenburger said. "Student managers can understand fellow workers because they are closer to them. Therefore, they can relate to other students' class schedules and their need to organize their time and classes."

The idea of student managers was discussed last January and the actual announcement for manager positions was posted last April.

"We had between 30 and 40 applicants for the positions, and we hired 12," Morrison said.

Morrison said that all student managers hired had previous experience in cafeteria work and were of sophomore or higher academic standing.

"All student managers are experienced and well-trained in all aspects of food service and have a good understanding about how things run," Morrison said. "Overall, they see the big picture."

Morrison said the Marriott Corporation provides many benefits to student managers.

"Many student managers move into managerial positions in Marriott by starting out in a university setting," she said.

Morrison said that full-time student managers are qualified to receive additional Marriott benefits.

"Student managers on a full-time basis receive medical benefits, holiday pay and tuition reimbursement," Morrison said. "Tuition reimbursement provides a student to be reimbursed 90 percent of their tuition cost."

Schnechenburger said the student manager positions give incentive to other workers by providing them with a goal.

"Cafeteria workers make $3.50 an hour and student managers can make between $4.25 to $5.50 an hour," Schnechenburger said. "This gives other workers a goal to work toward to make more money. I believe that students make our colleges and we have a commitment to help them in any way possible."

Schnechenburger said the program can give students more than a way to earn some money.

"We can help students earn money while they are going to school and at the same time provide them with a challenging role as a leader," he said.

nistration lawn, the southwest corner of the Graduate Art Studio, the side of Ridenbaugh Hall that faces Nez Perce Drive, most of the sidewalks that line Greek Row, and several fraternities.

Randy Pipal, president of Beta Theta Pi, isn't too happy about the red "WSU" painted on their brand-new back door, but said the fraternity hasn't filed a formal report because he felt that unless authorities catch the person, it wouldn't be worth it.

However, Mike Gotch, president of Tau Kappa Epsilon, has filed a formal complaint about the "WSU" painted on their brickwork and the red line drawn over the sign in front of the house.

"If they find out who it is, our house is willing to press charges," Gotch said.

Lanpher said that he wasn't sure if people have withheld information because they expect this type of vandalism from the rivalry.

But Sigma Chi Vice President Robert Blinzler doesn't consider the "WSU" painted on their entrance overhang just a "friendly" rivalry.

"At first I thought it was someone from our campus using the rivalry as an excuse, but now I think that it's only going to get worse if the games continue," Blinzler said.

Pi Kappa Alpha President Paul Costanza agrees that vandalism shouldn't be a part of the WSU-UI rivalry tradition.

"An overt act like that goes beyond any rivalry," Costanza said.

Lanpher said he doesn't know if any groups other than the Tekes plan to press charges. No one from the UI has contacted him about the damages yet, but he said he is trying to be optimistic that something will surface and that the problem can be taken care of.

"Hopefully, we can get to the bottom of this, maybe turn up some witnesses with some license plate numbers that we can run down," Lanpher said.

Trio performs

Free concert
Thursday at WSU

By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

After a rather long vacation, the Dozier-Jarvis Trio is back, bringing with it a unique modern jazz sound to the Palouse. This reunion will be formally christened in the form of a free jazz concert Thursday in the Kimbrough Concert Hall on the Washington State University campus at 8 p.m.

The trio is made up of bass player Dick Dozier, his wife Dody Dozier on piano and drummer Dave Jarvis. Jarvis is an assistant professor of music at WSU. Dick Dozier is an English professor here at the University of Idaho and Dody Dozier is a piano teacher.

The concert promises to appeal to a wide range of musical tastes as it will be divided into two sets. The first set features the group's acoustic talents in such favorite jazz standards as "Green Dolphin Street" and "Thou Swell."

The second set will demonstrate a more modern sound as the group performs its "electric" set. In this half of the show, the trio will perform such selections as

"Black Tie" by the Yellowjackets; "The Pipes of Pandora," recorded by Tom Scott; and "Better Days Ahead," from Pat Metheny's new album.

The group was split up in 1981 when Jarvis left to become assistant director of bands at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa. He later accepted a similar position at the University of Dayton.

The Trio was reunited when Jarvis accepted a teaching position at WSU. The group has been playing locally ever since, having established a position of resident jazz group every Friday and Saturday night at the Crow's Nest in Moscow from 9:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., with an occasional performance at Rico's in Pullman.

"They're a tremendously talented group," said Bob Frankovich, owner of the Crow's Nest, a lounge located in the newly opened Jolly Roger Rib and Steak House. "The group has been together for a long time and can read each other well," he said, adding that this familiarity with each other along with an extensive repertoire adds up to a spectacular performance.

Frankovich urged that jazz enthusiasts attend more than one night of the trio's lounge performance as their act changes every time they play, "they can just about play anything," he said.

Bland. This one word describes the latest album by Scandinavian rocker Micheal Monroe.

Not Fakin' It is the second solo album by Monroe, former lead singer of Hanoi Rocks.

Monroe's press release promises a "...primal scream-gutsy, raw, relentless. Erotic. Menacing," album, but what Monroe delivers is a gutless, unrelenting carbon copy hard rock/pop album.

The album has almost nothing on it to differentiate it from other hard rock singers but his completely scary portrait on the album cover. The man is not Jon Bon Jovi or even Vince Neal in the looks department.

Don't get me wrong, the album is not terrible, it's just not anything special. Seeing that the producer of this album, Michael Frondelli, has worked with artists like Crowded House, Billy Idol and Keith Richards, I expected more than I got from this album. It doesn't sound like a well produced album.

Side one starts out with a semi-rowdy number titled "Dead, Jail, or Rock-n-roll", co-written with Little Steven. The song has a fast and easy beat, somewhat reminiscent of Motely Crue, but Monroe's voice just isn't right for the song. He tries to sneer out the lyrics but just ends up sounding like he smoked too many cigarettes the night before.

The next song "While You Were Looking At Me", makes Monroe's voice problem even more obvious. Again the music is right but the voice is wrong.

Most of the songs on the first side are good, but just seem to be missing something. I think that if somebody else sang them I might like them more, although I don't think they would ever be on my favorites list. The songs just aren't distinctive enough from those of other hard rock artists.

Side two is just plain bad all the way around. The music is wishy-washy, nothing gutsy or raw; and the lyrics are silly.

For example in the song "Man With No Eyes", the lyrics go "Stalemate in the city/all alone/I'm a nomad/no pity". What does that mean? Apparently lyrics aren't that important to Monroe.

Not Fakin' It is a mediocre album. It's not awful, but it's not great either. In my opinion, Monroe does not have what it takes to be commercially successful singing hard rock. However, he does have the potential to be cast as a vampire in a horror movie.

Hammond sings the blues

By DENA BANDAZIAN
Staff Writer

ASUI Productions brings John Hammond to the University Auditorium Friday at 8 p.m. to perform a solo blues program.

"You don't hear much blues these days. It is historically interesting and it keeps influencing contemporary rock music."

— Whale
Owner of Guitar's Friend

Hammond plays traditional blues, the style played predominantly by blacks in the deep South. "He really retains the flavor of the blues from the South," said Whale, owner of Guitar's Friend in Moscow. "I like his music," Whale said. "You don't hear much blues these days. It is historically interesting and it keeps influencing contemporary rock music." Hammond has been playing the blues on the road for more than 20 years. His career began in 1962 in Los Angeles, where he played in small clubs and on street corners.

Working his way east to New York, Hammond continued playing in small clubs until he was hired to play at the Old Gerdes Folk City. While performing there he signed his first recording contract.

His first album, John Hammond, was released after his appearance at the 1963 Newport Folk Festival.

Hammond said that his early inspiration came from the recordings of Robert Johnson, the legendary blues singer of the 1930s. "In hearing Robert's music, I was moved so deeply that I felt changed inside," Hammond said.

Hammond was also influenced by a wide range of blues stylists. Willie McTell, Son House, Leroy Carr and others from the rich source-point of the Delta performed their rural blues unaccompanied and are echoed in Hammond's style. "A solo blues artist is so effective," Hammond said. "The focus is entirely on the vocals and the instrument. The dynamics are very intense and personal."

Hammond has been producing records and touring the world, performing in England, Greece, Australia and North America.

He has cut more than 10 records from the time he played on the street corner to today as he performs at prestigious jazz, folk and blues events.

A highpoint in Hammond's career was winning a Grammy Award in 1985 for his performance on Blues Exposition, the 1984 Atlantic Records recording of the 1982 Montreux Jazz Festival.

More recently, Hammond has performed several concerts with The Robert Cray Band, Van Morrison, Stevie Ray Vaughn and J.J. Cale.

Tickets for the John Hammond show can be purchased at Ticket Express. The tickets are $4 for students and $5 for the public.

UI International Soccer Team debuts against UI club

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

The University of Idaho International Soccer Team served notice that it is ready for competition by defeating the UI Soccer Club 2-0 Sunday.

Two second half goals by Allal Samih and Ralph Van Delden broke a scoreless deadlock that featured strong defensive play on both sides. Jan Friling anchored the defense at his sweeper position for the club team, while Ahmed Fahsi, co-captain of the international team, performed a similar role for his team. Reza Oskui, goalkeeper for the international team, receives the shutout.

Ron McFarland, faculty adviser for the UI Soccer Club and defensive back on the international team, said that while both teams have international students on their rosters, "the international team is composed of over 50 percent of athletes from outside the U.S."

The club team will go into action at home Saturday against Washington State University at noon, then travel to Spokane Sunday to face Whitworth College. The UI International Team will play in the Oktoberfest Tournament in Coeur d'Alene Oct. 14-15.

Vikings deal Vandals second straight loss

Five Vandals injured

By ERIC ELG
Sports Writer

Before Saturday's game with Portland State University, University of Idaho Coach John L. Smith predicted his team would be in store for a tough battle. Unfortunately for the Vandals, Smith's words turned out to be prophetic.

Injuries, mental mistakes, and the inability of the Vandal defense to stop Viking running back Curtis Delgado all contributed to the 29-20 loss.

Before the game Smith said that stopping Delgado would be a key to UI's success. Delgado repeatedly hurt the Vandals enroute to finishing with 278 all-purpose yards, including a 62-yard touchdown punt return.

What will loom larger than the Vandals' loss are the injuries that occurred during the game. Starters Brian Smith (broken thumb), Vince Mann (knee), Brian Cockrell (knee), Chris Hoff (ankle), and reserves Reggie Smith (knee) and Jerry Keating (knee) were injured in the first half and did not return to action.

The loss of three key defensive players allowed PSU to roll up 364 yards of total offense.

UI looked good at first and got out to a 14-0 first quarter lead on a one-yard run by Devon Pearce and a 10-yard pass to Lee Allen from John Friesz.

PSU then scored 29 unanswered points to take a 29-11 lead with 10:24 left in the game. Idaho closed the gap to 29-20 on an 11-yard pass from Friesz to Allen with 2:46 remaining, but failed a two-point conversion and the on-side kick that followed.

After the game Smith said some freshmen may play for those who were injured.

"There will be maybe some more freshmen coming out of redshirt. We will have to wait and see," Smith said. "Any time you play on artificial turf you are going to get more (injuries). Normally you don't expect quite as many as this."

The Vandal offense finished with 411 yards in total offense behind the 22 of 36, 318-yard performance of Friesz and the career high 11 receptions, 175-yard day of tight end Kasey Dunn.

After the game Dunn provided words of encouragement for next week's home opener against Sacramento State.

"All I can say is, we will be back, very strong," Dunn said.

Hunter plans additions for dome

By AMY JAMISON
Sports Writer

A speed and strength center, offices, and a University of Idaho Hall of Fame displaying athletic trophies and familiar faces may be added to the Kibbie Dome, according to UI Athletic Director Gary Hunter.

Hunter has recently proposed a plan for a three-story addition to the west end of the Kibbie Dome.

According to Hunter, one floor would house additional offices and locker rooms, one story would be used for the Vandal Hall of Fame and Vandal Booster and academic support offices, and one floor would contain a speed and strength center, which he hopes add in order to relieve

"We desperately need a speed and strength center. The weight room is very small and overused."

— Gary Hunter
UI Athletic Director

the crowded weight room.

"We desperately need a speed and strength center," Hunter said. "The weight room is very small and overused."

Hunter said he is hesitant about asking the state for money for the project that has been a "dream" of his since he joined the UI Athletic Department just over a year ago.

Since the university has several other building needs, the money for the $1 million to $2.5 million addition would come from private sources.

"It would be inappropriate for us to ask," he said. "We'll have to fund it ourselves."

Hunter is consulting with the UI Facilities and Planning Department and with the Art and Architecture staff on campus. He is also interested in working with students on a class project.

AWAITING ADDITIONS. If things go according to Gary Hunter's plans, the Kibbie Dome could receive new additions in the near future. (JASON MUNROE PHOTO)

Lady Vandals win two, lose one in Spokane

By AMY WILLIAMS
Sports Writer

The Lady Vandals extended their record to 6-2 at the Gonzaga Tournament in Spokane Friday and Saturday.

In the opening match, the Vandals fell to Gonzaga University in four sets.

"They're (Gonzaga) an excellent team. The level we played last weekend didn't prepare us for these games," said Head Coach Tom Hilbert.

Saturday morning the Vandals were prepared for the University of Portland and beat them in four sets.

Volleyball Head Coach

"Our blocking was effective against Portland, as was our serving and setting," Hilbert said.

Against their last opponent, Notre Dame, the Lady Vandals' size at the net won out.

"We have strong hitters that contributed to our aggressive play," Hilbert said. "Notre Dame is a young team. Our experience showed in the win."

Karen Thompson, along with Stacey Asplund and Jodi Boggs, contributed to the Vandal victories.

The Lady Vandals are preparing for action against Western Oregon Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Memorial Gym.

Baseball signs players

By MIKE STERLING
Sports Writer

The University of Idaho Baseball Club held its annual tryouts this past weekend but attendance wasn't as high as organizers had hoped.

According to team captain Wade Wilson, the attendance was low because the tryouts were held too early.

"This year we held tryouts too early in the semester, and some of the people who were planning on coming out couldn't make it," Wilson said. "There were quite a few fraternity functions also."

The baseball club was able to sign 12 new players to the roster, but the club is still looking for college level pitchers.

"We are still very short in the pitching areas," Wilson said. "Pitching doesn't take as much of a commitment as fielding does,

The student managers at the cafeteria supervise Wild Pizza, snack bar and the cafeteria in general.

Sheila Steinhoff, senior student manager, said there were similar positions before the new program, but the new program is broader.

"It is my understanding that Marriott has student managers in all their operations to cut down on management and to provide career opportunities for their students," Steinhoff said. "Student managers can work in the evenings, thus giving the full-time managers a break and a chance to catch up on the day's work."

Steinhoff supervises the other student managers and also hires, trains, and schedules other workers.

"I ultimately deal with any problems students may have with work," she said.

Steinhoff, who already has a degree in finance, is currently a junior in accounting. She said she would like to pursue a career with Marriott.

"I would like to continue working with Marriott after graduation as an auditor," Steinhoff said.

James Barbat, student manager of Wild Pizza, is also responsible for other student managers and shares responsibilities for the new "menu hot line."

"The menu hot line provides students with the menu for that day plus any upcoming happenings in the cafeteria," Barbat said.

Barbat worked as a snack bar manager in the cafeteria before Marriott took over, but since then his role has expanded.

"As manager of Wild Pizza I work with the financial and budget aspects of the job and also train other student managers for the position," said Barbat, an organizational communication major.

Wild Pizza started delivering pizzas to campus residents last March.

"Wild Pizza sales are up since last year, and it is encouraging to us because we are becoming very competitive with other pizza delivery services in town," he said.

Student managers can also fill in wherever extra help is needed, according to student manager Stephanie Stewart.

"We put out the fires so to speak," Stewart said. "If we can be of help to anyone, we are there."

Stewart, a senior in human resource management, said that working as a student manager has helped her deal with others in a positive way.

"I've learned to tell others what needs to be done and changes they need to make without bringing them down," Stewart said. "I've learned to discipline nicely."

Student Manager

David Gariepy, student manager of snack bar, also says the job has taught him how to work more effectively with others.

"It's a great experience being a student manager. I used to have a difficult time dealing with people, but being in a supervisor position has given me the opportunity to deal with people more," said Gariepy, a junior in wildland recreation.

As snack bar manager, Gariepy makes sure that things run smoothly and that the product lines remain stocked during snack bar.

"Working as a student manager provides wonderful experience for career work," Gariepy said. "But if I wanted to come back after I graduated, Marriott would be there."

Student managers have been especially helpful to the cafeteria managers this semester as they try to deal with higher enrollment in the dorms.

"We are serving 1,678 on our meal plans. In the past we were looking at around 1,400," Schnechenburger said. "We have a crunch during the lunch hour because the majority of students have 11:30 to 12:30 classes, and there is a big need for student employees at this time."

"The job description calls for 20-25 hours a week, but due to the extra students we have been putting in 30-40 hour weeks," Stewart said. "However, these hours will go down when we become more organized."

"The larger number of students is straining our facilities, but it is making our jobs interesting to make everything fit," Barbat said.

in Idaho cost the lives of hundreds of workers and Idaho's Gov. Steunenberg.

The development of our current form of democracy has taken over 200 years, and that form stemmed from the British tradition. At the time the United States was founded, only white male citizens who owned property above a certain value were allowed to vote.

If our struggle for democracy has been so long and difficult, it would seem ridiculous to expect the Chinese government, which has no tradition of democracy, to develop it instantly.

Many of the articles this summer made the assertion that crushing the demonstrations was a typical Communist trick. None of the columns I read mentioned that the Chinese desire for democracy is as much a result of years of Communist propaganda, which calls for power for the people, as it is any new contact with the Western democracies.

Analyzing events in foreign countries is difficult at best. It is impossible to produce accurate commentary without a broad historical and cultural perspective. The American press needs to put events into perspective for its readers, or it is no better than the Soviet revisionist historians that change Russian history whenever it is convenient to explain a change in the Soviet "Official Policy."

The press in the United States claims to be unbiased and free, but this summer's reporting on China resembled propaganda more than reporting.

It was a long weekend for members of Beta Theta Pi and Sigma Nu fraternities, and a beneficial one for the Wishing Star Foundation.

This weekend the two fraternities competed in their fifth annual softball marathon. The marathon, which lasted 48 hours from noon Friday to noon Sunday, raised approximately $2,500 for the Wishing Star Foundation.

Wishing Star is a non-profit organization which grants wishes to terminally ill children. The wishes range from dream vacations and trips to Disneyland and Disneyworld to meeting favorite actors and athletes.

Bob Nuzman, Inland Empire Director of the Wishing Star Foundation, was on hand for the opening pitch Friday and expressed his gratitude by congratulating every player he met. Nuzman remained at the marathon off and on throughout the weekend.

The Betas eventually defeated the Sigma Nus by a score of 442-399 after playing 238 continuous innings within the 48 hours. The Betas now lead the Sigma Nus 3-2, ending a two-game winning streak by the Sigma Nus.

Area businesses got in on the action as well. The fraternities received free pizzas from Domino's, Pizza Hut and Pizza Perfection, sub sandwiches from Subway and Sam's Subs, softballs from Tri-State, and a tent and tarp from Herman's.

Beta Theta Pi Vice President Darren Gould cited this marathon as being the most productive.

"We felt that we earned more money for a better philanthropy, with better community support," Gould said. "The guys all have sore muscles and are very tired but are happy to know that they were able to help some terminally ill child get his wish," Gould said.

so we can really work around interested players' schedules."

The club plans to have more tryouts later this fall and early in the spring before practices begin. The club will play 35 to 40 games.

"We want to have as close to a regular college season as we can without university support, since we are only a club sport," Wilson said.

Anyone interested in the baseball club can contact Wade Wilson or Gary Logosz.
