

Student presidents discuss concerns with Andrus

By VIVIANE GILBERT & M.L. GARLAND

Gov. Cecil Andrus listened to the concerns of the student body presidents of Idaho's universities Monday morning in Boise, and expressed enthusiasm about the Idaho State Lobby.

"It was helpful to get his input on Idaho State Lobby," ASUI President Tina Kagi said. "He was interested in and talked about what is on our minds."

At a meeting with student body presidents earlier this month, Kagi proposed a constitution to reinstate the ISL, which died out in the late 1970s. The purpose of the group is to allow the various university student governments to be represented as a whole at the state level of government.

Andrus voiced his support of the ISL, and suggested that the group not rely totally on a professional lobbyist, but maintain its own student representatives.

The proposed ISL would get information about student concerns to the Idaho State Board of Education and the Idaho Legislature through a paid, professional lobbyist.

The meeting was set up by Tony Rodriguez, Idaho State University's student body president.

"Gov. Andrus and his staff are always very willing to meet or talk over the phone," Kagi said. "I think we are very fortunate to have the opportunity to discuss our concerns with him."

Later that afternoon, Andrus arranged for the presidents to meet with Rayburn Barton, the board's executive director. At that meeting, a student session was added to the agenda of the Oct. 18-20 board meeting in Sandpoint.

At the last board meeting, both the student and the faculty meetings were left off the agenda. The board usually meets separately with both faculty and student representatives.

Andrus suggested that the student lobbyists meet with a professional lobbyist, who would train the students and acquaint them with the legislators. He also encouraged student lobbyists to meet with local board and Legislature members.

Kagi said Andrus asked the presidents about relations with their university presidents.

"I told him our relationship with Zinser was very positive, so far," Kagi said.

Kagi said that Mike Mitchell, chief of staff to the governor and former board member, thought it was "awful" that there were no UI interns with the Legislature this year.

"Those people see every bill that passes through the Legislature," Kagi said. "They're a strong component on a lobbying effort."

Federal aid recipients must be drug-free

By BETH PETTIBON — Staff Writer

Students and faculty who receive federal financial aid and research grants are now required to sign an anti-drug abuse statement prior to receiving their checks.

The statement is a result of the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988, which requires all individual federal grant recipients to certify to the federal agency that their grant activity conduct will be drug-free.

"It certifies that the university should be a drug-free workplace," said Grants and Contracts Manager Ron Smith.

Smith said the drug statement, effective in March, affects 600 to 700 faculty members who receive federal research grants.

Students receiving federal Pell grants are required to sign the drug statement, and institutions receiving federal grants must certify that information, according to Dan Davenport, University of Idaho director of Financial Aid.

"All the other grant money that we get actually comes to the institution, and then the institution disburses the money to the students," said Davenport, referring to the grants that are not federally funded and do not require the recipient to sign a drug statement.

Students who are caught using drugs after they have signed the contract and have received their grant face a number of consequences, according to a "Dear Colleague" letter from the U.S. Department of Education.

The letter states, "If the institution has knowledge that a student is convicted of unlawful manufacture or distribution, ... possession or use of a controlled substance after the student signed a statement certifying that he or she would be drug free and the institution has reason to believe that the certification was fraudulent, the suspected fraudulent certification by the student must be reported to the office of the inspector general or to the appropriate state or local enforcement office."

Confusion arises over food committee formation

By M.L. GARLAND & VIVIANE GILBERT

University of Idaho students have expressed dissatisfaction with University Dining Services by Marriott, and both the university and UDS are attempting to solve this problem. However, there seems to be some confusion over who is establishing a retail advisory committee to deal with student concerns.

UI Dean of Student Services Bruce Pitman and ASUI President Tina Kagi are currently taking applications for the University Retail Food Service Committee.

Mike Thomsen, retail dining director of University Dining Services by Marriott, tried to set up a retail dining advisory committee at a student feedback meeting Sept. 14. Due to poor attendance, a committee was not set up, but Thomsen planned to schedule another meeting to form a committee.

When the Argonaut informed Thomsen of Pitman and Kagi's plans to set up a committee, he was surprised.

"Nobody's told me," Thomsen said. "I wonder if we're setting up the same type of thing. It wouldn't make sense to do two committees."

Thomsen said he assumed Pitman would work with him on the committee.

"Right now I'd say they're helping me set up the committee," Thomsen said. "I would hold it, run it and make sure I get good ideas and input."

However, according to Pitman, the committee would give advice and suggestions about improvements to Thomsen and Lynn Morrison, general manager of University Dining Services by Marriott.

"To effectively communicate, one (Morrison or Thomsen) should be there," Pitman said. "I expect them to attend."

Kagi said she wasn't sure what the UDS committee was about, and said Pitman wasn't clear about their intentions, either.

"It doesn't seem right for Marriott to form their own advisory committee," Kagi said. "How effective would it be?"

Thomsen said UDS would be "more than happy" to work with Pitman and Kagi.

"Just so we do what people want to see done," Thomsen said.

Kagi said she and Pitman hadn't discussed the details of the committee yet. However, she expected it would perform the following tasks: 1) collect grievances, 2) discuss and research grievances as a committee, and 3) make recommendations to Morrison and Thomsen.

Pitman said the purpose of the committee would be "to make sure our food service managers know what customers want. We need accurate and clear feedback so we can produce the best service possible."

Faculty, staff and students interested in serving on the committee should sign up by Oct. 3 at the ASUI Office in the SUB.

Career Center can get you started

By SALLY GILPIN
Staff Writer

Students often find problems arise that interfere with their studies. The Student Counseling Center can help students with such problems through a variety of services.

"I went to the counseling center a lot last year when I was having difficulties with stress and anxiety," an anonymous student said. "They helped me to learn how to deal with it on my own."

The center offers educational counseling, career counseling, personal counseling, group counseling, marriage counseling and diagnostic testing.

Educational counseling involves helping students plan their educational goals, resolving test anxiety, and dealing with other performance anxiety problems.

The Counseling Center works with the Tutoring and Academic Assistance Center and academic advisers to help students develop solutions to academic problems, according to Jim Morris, the center director.

Career counseling aids students in choosing a career, forming career goals and establishing long-term plans. The center has a vocational library where students can look up thousands of different career descriptions.

In addition, the counselors often use computerized tests, a process called computer psychometrics, to help determine a student's values, work interests and personality type.

Personal counseling involves helping students resolve problems with family members, roommates, relationships, self-esteem, substance abuse or any other problem students might want to talk about.

"We try to help with anything that interferes with someone's school work," Morris said.

The center also provides group counseling, which allows small groups to work with a psychologist on topics of interest. In the groups students learn to share personal feelings and improve interpersonal communication.

The counseling center has nine counselors on staff, including professional psychologists and graduate students. Each counse-

UI's Idaho Law Review elected to national board

By PAM KUEHNE
Staff Writer

The Idaho Law Review, published three times a year by the College of Law, has been among the 10 reviews on the board of the National Conference of Law Reviews since 1984.

According to Idaho Law Review editor Jim Martin, this is quite an honor for the University of Idaho, since distinguished schools such as Harvard, Pepperdine and the University of Chicago attend the conference.

Board members are elected every two years by everyone attending the conference.

UI's Idaho Law Review was elected to the board in 1984, and since then has managed to stay there, Martin said.

At the conference, editors discuss how they go about publishing their respective reviews.

In addition, tips are given on ways to obtain material for the reviews, Martin said.

The Idaho Law Review has existed for 26 years under that name and is a non-profit publication funded mainly by subscriptions.

The review is published three times a year and averages 250 pages per issue, Martin said.

Law students are responsible for all the steps involved in publishing the review, which deals mostly with Idaho law. However, if students need help writing or reviewing articles, two College of Law professors and the dean can give advice.

"It's a tool for improving written communication, which is something that lawyers will spend the majority of their time doing once they get out into the real world," Martin said.

The three issues of the Idaho Law Review published each year are somewhat different in content.

The first issue is concerned with updating Idaho law on all the state's appellate and Supreme Court decisions and legislative changes for the year.

This allows subscribers, the majority of which are practicing Idaho attorneys, to keep up-to-date with changes in state law, Martin said.

The second issue is a more general one in which students review articles by other students and by professionals from Idaho and other places. Students also write articles on "controversial issues or general areas of law that are of interest to them," Martin said.

Martin said the third issue is a "symposium issue."

"It is devoted to the hottest issues in that area of law that we can get people to write on," Martin said.

This year's symposium issue will focus on family law.

Students who wish to work on the Idaho Law Review must write a publishable article in their second year of law school and edit several articles, Martin said.

Third-year law students who meet these requirements become members of the Idaho Law Review Editing Board.

Board members do not receive money for their work but can receive "non-classroom" credits in their last semester, depending on what board position they hold.

"Basically, the Law Review is the honor society of the Law School," Martin said.

Textbook manager juggles students, professors and books

By J.E. ERICKSON
Senior Staff Writer

Godwin cites professors, course changes as reasons for book delays

Without hesitation, she can spurt out the name and author of any one of the nearly 1,300 different textbooks used at the University of Idaho this fall. She can probably also give you a detailed description of the book, including its availability, cost and the class for which it's required.

For the past eight years, Peg Godwin, assistant manager in charge of textbooks for the UI Bookstore, has coordinated the massive job of providing a textbook for every student in every UI class. "I view my job as a service, but students may not see us as a service because of the money they have to spend on textbooks," Godwin said.

According to Godwin, there are two "flash points" or misconceptions students have about the textbooks department — selection and cost.

Godwin said she believes it is important for students to realize the faculty, not the bookstore personnel, submit the textbook selections and the number of books to stock.

Godwin cites instructors' failures to inform the store of changes as a significant problem. For example, she stocked the correct book for one of this fall's science courses. However, on the first day of class the instructor notified Godwin that she wanted to use a different book.

According to Godwin, 30 students had already purchased the book and had to return it to the store.

Complications also arise when new sections of a course are added at the last moment or when a department over-enrolls a class.

"Students really get upset when they can't get their books," Godwin said.

One of Godwin's primary goals is to provide textbooks at the lowest price possible.

While other university bookstores in Idaho have a 25 to 30 percent cost margin on textbooks, the UI Bookstore has only a 20 percent margin. The margin on a textbook is the difference between the book's suggested retail cost and the price the Bookstore pays to buy the book from the publisher.

According to Godwin, the store does not make a profit on textbook sales. In fact, the 20 percent margin barely covers the cost of running the textbook department.

In addition to her textbook responsibilities, Godwin manages the store's "trade" book department. Trade books include everything from dictionaries and thesauruses to the best-selling novels of Judith Krantz and Stephen King.

And while the Bookstore is the exclusive seller of textbooks for the UI, Godwin believes the trade book selection also sets the store apart from the competition.

"My goal is to present an academic selection of books," she said. "We carry titles you won't find at Waldenbooks."

The store's recent move to a new facility has resulted in changes for Godwin and her five full-time staff members. For the first time, Godwin's two departments are located adjacent to one another. In the old store the textbook department and Godwin's office were located in the basement, while the trade book department was upstairs.

According to Godwin, this has required some cross training for her staff. Employees who used to deal exclusively with trade books are now spending nearly 75 percent of their time answering questions about textbooks.

With the move so close to the beginning of school, the past month has been quite hectic, she said.

"The move made it very confusing early," Godwin said.

According to Godwin, alumni and visitors often judge a university by its bookstore.

"The Bookstore is the only point that everyone gets to," she said.

Two food committees make a cruel gruel

Too many cooks in the kitchen spoil the soup. Just as too many campus food service advisory boards may hinder the soup and other practices and products of University Dining Services by Marriott.

The University Retail Food Service Committee, an advisory board formed by University of Idaho Dean of Student Services Bruce Pitman and ASUI President Tina Kagi, is looking for interested students to serve on their board.

"I know there's a lot of mad people out there, and I hope we can spark some interest," Kagi said.

Yes, but for which committee?

Apparently Mike Thomsen, UDS retail dining director, wants to set one up, too. He made what turned out to be a futile attempt at the Sept. 14 student feedback meeting, which virtually no one attended.

"Nobody's told me (about the University Retail Food Service Committee)," Thomsen said. "It wouldn't make sense to do two committees."

Thomsen has a good point.

"People have already complained to Marriott, but it seems they haven't been satisfied," Kagi said. "This will give strength to their concerns."

Residence Hall Association President Ray Horton claims a victory for the food service committee dealing strictly with the Wallace Cafeteria.

"We won one concession," Horton said. "They moved the billing week for snack bar so students can get punches Sunday for Monday snack bar."

Marriott has expressed concern about student complaints with their corporation's service. However, forming their own advisory committee is somewhat questionable.

Ever heard of objectivity?

One seriously has to question Marriott's, ahem...University Dining Services' motives in forming their own committee. It is best to leave the UDS cooks in the kitchen and keep the University Retail Food Service Committee at the drawing board.

Pitman expects Lynn Morrison, UDS general manager, and Thomsen to attend his committee's meetings. Attending meetings is all they will accomplish.

How can they get any changes made?

The University Retail Food Service Committee, headed by Pitman and Kagi, is already rolling and becoming reality. Would it not make sense for Thomsen/Marriott to simply join this committee rather than form a new one?

If UDS were truly concerned about student concerns and representation, they would (and should) join Pitman and Kagi in their endeavor. Certainly UDS could be represented on the committee. It is UDS input, not advisement, that is needed.

Communication lines between UDS and the committee could be opened, and all concerned could be satisfied with the results. This gives everyone an opportunity to express their complaints with a guaranteed reaction.

What's needed now is your input. Interested faculty, staff and students must sign up for the University Retail Food Service Committee at the ASUI Office in the SUB by Oct. 3.

Remember: One man can make a difference. In this case, one committee just might.

Students might be able to enjoy sipping soup for a change rather than suffer from choking on two-committee gruel. - M.L. Garland

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Stinginess at students' expense

Editor:

It seems strange that in a year that the residence halls are basically full to capacity, the housing administration seems as stingy as ever. I have talked many times with the housing director about re-instituting semester contracts for the dorms.

As the contracts currently are written, students choosing to move out at semester for personal reasons are penalized $700 even if they only lived there for a day or two. According to the housing director, these unfair finances are looked at as revenue.

In fact he flat-out told me that the residence halls were a business. Gosh, and I thought the residence halls were a student service, not a business driven to suck as much out of the students as possible. And I thought Marriott was bad.

Many other students have inquired about semester contracts including RHA, IFC and several student body presidents. The university's attitude about this policy must change. The residence halls have much to offer and there is no need to continue to unfairly tax the few students

"The less I search my source for some definitive the closer I am to fine."
— Emily Saliers

I have a question to ask you. What the hell are you doing with your life? OK, so it sounds a little preachy, but let's face the fact that everyone stands on some sort of a soapbox from time to time. I am having a little difficulty trying to decide what exactly I am doing, so just for kicks, I want to know what you're doing.

We're here at school from one week to a lifetime, shelling out bucks for one of the most obscure commodities, learning. Supposedly, we're learning to deal with people, to understand ourselves, to stand on our own and, less significantly, learning our class work. Are we getting anywhere, or more importantly, are we getting to the place where we want to go?

When it comes right down to it, and despite how ethereal or trite it might sound, we're all looking for happiness, a little satisfaction in our being. We all may choose different means: to become inordinately wealthy, raise a strong family, or save the world. We are still looking for the same thing. So, I ask again, are we getting there?

CHRIS OLSON
Commentary

A friend and I have a personal addiction to "journey" movies, those movies whose interframework is not a well-defined plot or stunning action, but a simple journey: characters and situations just plodding their way forward. To me they seem a little more real, and quite a bit more revealing as far as understanding ourselves.

The more satisfying of these movies are not the ones where they are going somewhere and then get there, but the ones where the characters make their way on a less defined, less predictable way. We're on the road.

I really feel there is no great secret being kept from us. We are not missing a grand epiphany. Happiness may or may not find us out on the road; she's a wanderer also. But, just perhaps, if we slow down and give ourselves a little more leniency on taking side paths, we won't be so prone to pass her.

I am not advocating apathy or fatality; it is important to be able to feel, and every breath and every action is by choice. I guess what I am saying is that everything is not clear-cut, the roads are not straight and easy, and once we get to the place we're going, we'll need to take another trip because happiness wanders even when we won't. We are on the road, and I think that's where we are supposed to be.

What "journey" movie would I recommend? Try Harold and Maude. It has great laughs, serious lines, a multitude of symbolic props, and music with key lyrics.

Fees constitutional

Editor:

ASUI President Tina Kagi and the ASUI Senate have retained attorney Ray Givens of Coeur d'Alene to represent our interests in the fee increase debate. Both President Kagi and the senate have, in our estimation, failed to present both sides of the issue. They would like us to believe the institutional maintenance fee each student pays is unconstitutional. If these people had done their homework, they would realize that not only are their charges incorrect, but their policy of grasping at straws is a poor way to represent their student constituency.

Section 33-3717 of the Idaho Code states, "Tuition at state colleges and universities not required." However, the follow-tion shall not include those costs associated with said colleges and universities, such as maintenance and operation of physical plant, student services and institutional support, which are complementary to, but not a part of the instructional program.

Additionally, President Kagi has urged/pressured the senate to pursue a lawsuit against the university. Doesn't she realize to file such a suit is the same as suing the students she represents? She has proposed using collected ASUI monies (which are state funds) to sue the university (a state university). The ASUI is not a separate entity from the UI but a part of it.

Another important piece of information she has failed to impart is if it is determined by the attorney for the State Board of Education that state monies (ASUI fees) cannot be used to sue the university, the $2,000 she has already spent will have to be paid back by the students — that translates to you and I.

Are you willing to be held responsible for the repayment of this money? How about the $32,000 or more that a lawsuit would cost?

President Kagi has presented her case as being unloseable. If ing exception is listed: (a) Tuition shall be defined as the cost of instruction at the colleges and universities. The cost of instruction she is so confident of victory, why is she afraid to tell all the facts?

In the unlikely event she could win, how long would it take the state Legislature to legalize tuition? Ms. Kagi says it won't happen because a two-thirds vote in both houses is required to institute tuition. Don't you think the Legislature could find more than two-thirds to support such a measure if the state suddenly lost $3 million per year as a result of this action? Once instituted, tuition could be raised every time the university wanted to build a new road, remodel a building, or even start and finish the University Center project.

Let's let the professionals deal with these problems. The governor and Legislature are elected to deal with issues funding the university. President Kagi has been entrusted to serve the students — a trust she has broken by pursuing this issue before getting student opinion.

Last Friday's letter, "News coverage not hypocritical," was copied wrong from the original text. The third paragraph should have read:

"The article also raises a lesser-of-many-evils defense I call comparative guilt: 'Cuba, Israel and South Africa claim to have democratic governments, yet most observers claim they are oppressive governments.' South African apologists also claim that criticism of apartheid is unfair because they allege that native Africans have more rights in South Africa than in some of the independent African states with self-rule. I do not accept that logic. Would Hitler's death camps have been morally or ethically acceptable if other European nations engaged in similar practices?"

WSU VET CLINIC OFFERS HEALTH CHECKS

The Washington State University Veterinary Clinic is offering post-purchase health checks on exotic and non-traditional pets for $5, according to Erik Stauber, WSU veterinarian and professor.

Exotic pets include birds, fish, reptiles, hamsters, rabbits and gerbils.

Stauber, who is in charge of the veterinary clinic's exotic pets division, began doing health checks on exotic animals after visiting local pet stores.

"I went over to the pet stores in both Moscow and Pullman and found out that there wasn't a great deal of knowledge about such pets as birds and snakes," Stauber said. "So I started providing health checks on exotic animals."

Stauber said he will offer detailed background and information to anyone who has an exotic or non-traditional pet.

Along with a general health check, Stauber will help pet owners learn about the proper care of their pets.

"I want pet owners to know they can take their bird or their hamster to the vet and get knowledgeable care," he said.

The clinic will provide health checks to anyone for a $5 fee within 3 days of purchasing the animal. The fee is charged to establish a record file.

The post-purchase health exam does not apply to cats or dogs.

CENTENNIAL WALK TO FEATURE PLAQUES

Work on the University of Idaho "Centennial Walk" at the north part of the Administration lawn should be complete by the end of next month, according to Eve Magyar, architect planner at Facility Planning.

The Centennial walkway will feature colored concrete or bricks with donor and commemorative nameplates. Walkway donors will receive a nameplate, and the money raised will fund the project. Any remaining money will go to a student leadership endowment and possibly to a student scholarship fund.

The Centennial Walk is just one of the many campus projects underway to improve university grounds.

Other projects include street overlaying, sidewalk reconstruction, and outdoor lighting improvements. All projects are funded by the Division of Public Works.

Parking lot entrances to the Lionel Hampton School of Music and to lots 10 and 17 are being moved to other locations for easier access.

"(When you drive,) you would have to go down these steep ramps, and I know my (car) bottom would sometimes hit," Magyar said.

Lady Vandals lose two over weekend

By AMY WILLIAMS

The University of Idaho volleyball team's six-game winning streak ended this weekend with losses to Boise State University and Idaho State University.

The Lady Vandals fall to 10-4 in season play and 2-2 in conference play.

"Our offense just shut down. We couldn't pass well or get our middle going," said Head Coach Tom Hilbert. "We weren't that far off from winning. If we would've only blocked better."

BSU proved they were a good team as they set the game at a fast-pace level.

"In order to beat Boise, we have to compete at their level," Hilbert said.

BSU won 15-11, 9-15, 15-8 and 15-10 to take a 4-0 Big Sky Conference record and an 8-2 overall record.

ISU held Karen Thompson and Debbie Thayer to only 10 kills each while recording 24 blocks in beating the Vandals 15-8, 15-9 and 15-11.

"The blocking was definitely a factor," Hilbert said. "They totally shut down our hitters."

ISU is 1-1 in conference play and 13-4 for the season.

"We can beat these teams," Hilbert said. "We just need to improve in some areas. We're not that far away. Whoever is at the top of the conference is because they win on the road."

The Lady Vandals prepare for another road trip this weekend. They will face the University of Montana Friday and Montana State University Saturday.

Senior Marianne Moore fires up Lady Vandals

By SCOTT TROTTER
Associate Editor

Editor's note: This article ran last Friday before the two conference losses this weekend. Unfortunately it was laid down incorrectly. The Argonaut regrets any confusion or misunderstandings it may have caused.

It's her senior year, and what would be better for Marianne Moore than winning the Big Sky Conference?

Nothing.
"Your best year should be your senior year," said the Lady Vandal volleyball team's part-time setter. "It's great to see us succeed, and I think we'll make the conference tournament and finish right up there in the top spot."

The Lady Vandals are enjoying their best start since the 1980 season and head into tonight's matchup at rival Boise State University with a Big Sky Conference leading 10-2 record.

Moore, who splits time with junior setter Kellie Morgan, is a big factor in the Lady Vandals' early success. She leads the team in assists with 276 and is second in service aces behind Dee Dee Bailey with 22.

"I like to serve," Moore said. "Aces are a lot of fun."

Moore also likes the responsibility that comes with being a senior and playing setter.

"Sometimes during games we need someone to get in and play with a lot of intensity," she said. "As a senior, I feel it's part of my job to get in and get something started."

"I also like the responsibility that comes with being a setter,"

Moore said. "It's a challenge getting the ball to the hitters, and I like making decisions."

Moore, a biology major on athletic scholarship at UI, was a standout athlete in high school. She was an all-conference and all-state performer in volleyball at Wood River High School in Sun Valley. She also won all-state honors in tennis and participated in track and basketball.

"We had a strong high school volleyball program," she said. "My coach really got me into volleyball, and we were really successful as a team. So I chose to go after volleyball in college, and I came up here (UI) when they recruited me."

After playing all but two matches at setter for UI as a freshman, Moore was riddled by inju-

1st annual Mountain Bike Rodeo

By RUSS BIAGGNE
Sports Editor

The first annual University of Idaho - Washington State University Mountain Bike Rodeo will be held Oct. 1.

"Safety is our main concern."

— Brian Williams-Rice
UI Campus Recreation Office

Sponsored by UI and WSU intramural sports departments, the rodeo is open to all students, faculty and staff from both schools.

The rodeo, which will take place at the UI animal science farms, is divided into three individual timed events: an obstacle course, a hill climb and a 2.5 mile circuit race. The farmland terrain is rugged and full of holes and will provide a challenging rodeo for riders.

Safety is a main concern of both intramural departments, so a pre-rodeo bike check-in has been set up. All bikes used in the rodeo must be checked by a professional to ensure they will be able to handle the race. Helmets must meet satisfactory standards as well. Any participant without mountain bike and helmet checks will not be allowed to race.

"We want everyone to have a good time, but we would also like to stress safety. Safety is our main concern," said Brian Williams-Rice of the UI Campus Recreation Office.

The entry deadline for the rodeo is Sept. 27 at 5 p.m., and the entry fee is $2. For more information, contact the Campus Recreation Office.

UI wins conference opener Sets sights on showdown with Montana

By ERIC ELG
Staff Writer

After falling behind 19-14 at halftime, the University of Idaho Vandals exploded in the second half to score on every possession but one and defeat Weber State College 46-33.

The victory, which evens UI's record at 2-2, opens up the conference schedule on a winning note.

The Vandals dug themselves into a hole in the first half by turning the ball over twice, sailing a snap over the punter's head, having a run to the one yard line negated by a penalty, and botching a field goal attempt. The Wildcats capitalized on the Vandal miscues to take the halftime lead.

The second half was a complete turnaround for the Vandals. Weber State's first three possessions of the second half ended in turnovers, as middle linebacker John Rust picked off two passes and Jeff Robinson recovered a fumble.

The Vandal offense converted two of the turnovers into touchdown passes from John Friesz to Kasey Dunn and Scott Dahlquist to put UI ahead 29-19.

The remainder of the game was dominated by the Vandals' running attack, which churned out touchdown drives of 70 and 67 yards. Twenty of UI's final 24 plays were runs, as the Vandals piled up 196 total yards rushing. Devon Pearce (88 yards) and Damon Daniels (84 yards) spearheaded the rushing assault.

"In the second half, we started blowing them off the line," said offensive tackle Todd Neu.

Senior quarterback Friesz connected on 25 of 37 passes for 389 yards and four touchdowns. Dunn and Lee Allen were Friesz's primary targets, catching seven passes each.

The defense was led by free safety Chris McCall and linebacker Damon Taggart, who had nine and eight tackles respectively.

The Vandals will host the University of Montana Grizzlies (3-1) Thursday night in a nationally televised Big Sky Conference contest.

"I think we have the advantage because we don't have to travel," said Head Coach John L. Smith. "It should be an interesting game."

The Grizzlies figure to be one of the toughest challenges for the Vandals. In preseason polls Montana was picked to finish second behind UI, and the Grizzlies defeated Portland State University 30-21 earlier this season. Portland State defeated UI 29-20.

worked on our basic skills — things we needed to work on. We're a lot more relaxed and have a new feeling," she said. "It's not a chore to go to practice anymore."

"The freshmen are also really good, and that allows us to scrimmage against tough competition during practice," she said.

Moore also said the support of the UI fans has helped the team during home games, and her favorite fans, her parents, come to most of the games.

"My parents have been up every week and also make it to the road games," she said. "They like to watch us play."

And so do the rest of the Lady Vandal fans, as Moore fires up UI to a hopeful Big Sky Championship.

"Splitting time with Kellie works out really well," she said. "We are both very competitive and work together in trying to get the team fired up."

Moore, who has seen UI volleyball at its worst, attributes this season's early winning spurt to both new Head Coach Tom Hilbert and the Lady Vandals' freshmen.

"Tom has brought a totally different approach and attitude to the team. During the spring we

Cross country teams struggle at Emerald City Invitational

AMY JAMISON
Staff Writer

When the University of Idaho men's and women's cross country teams trekked to Seattle for the Emerald City Invitational Saturday, one runner was left behind.

Unfortunately, he is UI's top men's runner.

Bernardo Barrios was recently declared ineligible for cross country due to a missing transcript from a school he attended in Mexico. Barrios will be ineligible for

"It wasn't a great weekend."

— Scott Lorek
Women's Cross Country Coach

meets until the transcript arrives by mail from Mexico.

Mike Keller, men's cross country head coach, said that Barrios is capable of placing within the top 10 at meets.

"We ran without our top runner," Keller said.

According to Keller, the situation is unusual and has come up late. A year late, in fact.

Barrios was eligible for the team last year but suddenly ineligible this year.

Without Barrios, the men's team placed ninth out of 10 teams at the invitational.

"We did worse than expected,"

Keller said.

Keller said that for the team to be respectable, several runners will have to improve.

In the 8,000-meter run, Mark Lynch placed 25th out of 84 runners with a time of 26:20, and Wayne Bunce finished 47th.

The women's team finished much the same way.

"It wasn't a great weekend," said Scott Lorek, women's cross country head coach.

The women's team tallied an eighth place finish out of nine teams. The University of Washington ran away with the first place honors.

Lorek said the UI team ran into a few tactical mistakes that made it hard for them to catch up.

On the bright side, Diane Knudson placed 13th overall with a time of 18:16 for the 5,000-meter run, which makes two top races for Knudson this year.

"She has the capabilities of being an all-conference performer," Lorek said.

Kayakers brave Lower Salmon River

By MATT WALO

With the beautiful weather this past weekend, it's no wonder participants described the ASUI Outdoor Program's kayak trip on the Lower Salmon River as "sensational," "exhilarating," and "relaxing."

According to Todd Bauch, Outdoor Program intern, this year's trip generated more interest than any previous kayak trips. The 11 available spaces filled up within 20 minutes, and many more students were on the reserve list. Bauch attributed the increased interest to the low cost and a growing national interest in white-water rafting and kayaking.

Bauch described the water as "too chilly for swimming" but perfect for rafting. He also said most people involved had gone white-water rafting before, but not kayaking. This prepared them for the "almost class 3" rapids they encountered, which included three-foot standing waves and numerous obstacles.

The expedition encountered some rough water, and waves that were challenging enough to allow everyone to improve by the end of the second day.

The next Outdoor Program trip will be a wilderness canoe trip to Upper Priest Lake Oct. 14-15. For more information about the trip and other upcoming events, contact the Outdoor Program Office in the SUB basement.

KUOI goes international

A newly revamped format reflects KUOI's remodeled control room and lobby, as the student-controlled radio station gears up for the new year with an original program list.

"This is the international year of KUOI," said Program Director Ken Fate only half in jest, referring to two new radio programs.

The first is "Bug Radio," a nationally syndicated program featuring music from around the world. The second program, "Poetry International," consists of discussions and recordings by poets and translators, usually in the original language first, followed by English translations.

The music featured in "Bug Radio" was compiled by a team of sound crews sent across the globe. The program includes "punk rock from Algeria, Pakistani house music, psychedelic sounds from Madagascar, and everything in between," Fate said.

"Bug Radio" premiered Sept. 18 and will continue to play each Monday from 3:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

According to Fate, "Bug Radio" is sponsored nationally by the TDK cassette company. The Stereo Shoppe of Moscow donates the program cassettes to KUOI.

For those interested in literature as well as international perspectives, "Poetry International" is devoted to engaging a multicultural audience. This program will present writers who have been recorded before live audiences, complete with room ambience, background noise, traffic and auditorium echoes.

The 13-part series will be broadcast Tuesdays from 11:30 a.m. to noon this semester.

Working hard behind the scenes

By MARY HEUETT

Marjorie (Rozlyn Simmons) sprays Raul (Tim Johnson) in the face with Raid and later throws ammonia and bleach in his eyes. Makeup artist Shaun Carroll will make these burns come to life in Extremities, playing September 28-30.

Carroll has created a foam mask to fit over Johnson's eyes. The mask has been molded to show the effects of the chemical burns.

Carroll began by making a plaster cast of Johnson's face.

"He put this gel-kinda stuff on my face," Johnson said.

Carroll put plaster over the gel, leaving two nose holes for Johnson to breathe through. When the plaster had set, about an hour later, Johnson tipped the casting off his face.

To make an exact replica of Johnson's face, Carroll made a negative casting of the first cast.

Working from the negative cast, Carroll sculpted the burn effects in clay. He spent hours researching the effects of chemical burns before deciding how the mask should look.

Carroll then made a casting of the molded burn effects. The clay was removed from the replica of Johnson's face and replaced by liquid foam. The foam and plaster sandwich was baked for several hours to solidify the foam.

The final mask will mold per-

Folk singer performs in Pullman

Folk music lovers will get a treat Wednesday when contemporary folk singer Heidi Muller performs at the Combine Mall in Pullman.

Muller grew up in the '60s, with Joan Baez and Joni Mitchell as musical role models.

"I discovered Joni Mitchell when I was sixteen," Muller said. "I saw her record in the record store. The cover was interesting, so I decided to get it. That's what got me into folk music."

Since this first introduction to folk music, Muller has traveled with bands across America. Her exposure to singer-songwriters in the Boston area led her to become a solo performer in the late '70s.

Betty Frederickson, owner of the Combine Mall, is looking forward to Muller's appearance.

"We are expecting about 150 people," Frederickson said. "It should be a very entertaining evening."

The Palouse Folklore Society is sponsoring the concert. Tickets are $6 for the general public and $5 for society members.

Dark comedy offers insight

REVIEW By BETH BARCLAY
Staff Writer

The twists and turns in what we call love and the trouble some people have understanding them are the focus of the dark new drama sex, lies, and videotape.

Graham Dalton (James Spader) is a mysterious man who has returned to visit his old college friend John Millaney (Peter Gallagher).

John seems to have everything going for him. He's a successful lawyer with a beautiful wife, and he's a little disenchanted with the sad figure of a man his friend has turned out to be.

But John's wife, Ann (Andie MacDowell), finds Graham interesting with his dark philosophy and probing questions, and the two soon become close friends.

Rather than reacting with jealousy toward his wife's interest in Graham, John encourages the friendship, since it conveniently frees his time and allows him to devote his attention to Cynthia (Laura San Giacomo), Ann's sister and John's current love interest.

Ann has no idea of this torrid affair and can only begin to imagine the extent of her husband's dark personality; she thinks that her lack of sexual desire toward John is the cause of the separation that is building between them. Her interest in Graham is strengthened further when he tells her that he is impotent.

After mentioning her interest in this man to her sister, Ann finds out that his sexual potency manifests itself in a way that is repulsive to Ann's somewhat prudish personality.

But something in Graham's personality appeals to Cynthia, who is always looking for new sexual experiences. Graham, it seems, has been rendered impotent by some experience in his dark past. This experience has bothered him so deeply that the only way he can deal with sex is by filming women talking about their sexual encounters and fantasies.

Eventually, of course, Ann discovers John's infidelity and, in the heat of the moment, convinces a reluctant Graham to film her, bringing everything to a catharsis that reveals all secrets and neatly wraps things up for all parties involved.

This movie is original, and its award from the Cannes film festival for Best Film is certainly deserved. It may move a little slow in places for those of us who are used to a little more action, but its topic is dealt with in a refreshing new way.

Besides the topic of sex, a sub-theme emerges as the relationship between the two sisters develops. After disappointing roles in Tarzan: The Legend of Greystoke and numerous appearances in L'Oreal commercials, MacDowell's performance comes as a refreshing surprise, as the multi-faceted Ann is portrayed with startling depth and emotion.

fectly to Johnson's eye area and will be attached with spirit gum. "My eyes will be swollen shut," Johnson said of the final effect.

The remainder of the burns on Johnson's face will be created with makeup by Carroll.

Carroll has designed makeup for numerous shows for the Hartung and the Collette theaters. He worked with Barb Hill on A Christmas Carol.

He was trained by Fred Chapman of the University of Idaho theater arts department, both in and out of classes.

Carroll graduated from UI last spring with a degree in theater arts education. He will move to Portland soon to find work in the theater, and he hopes his makeup and props training will help him get a position.

Carroll said that doing makeup for Extremities will look good on his resume.

When Carroll heard Angel Katen was directing the show, he begged her to let him do the makeup.

Extremities shows Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Moscow Community Center. Tickets are $4 at One More Time, Book People and Cafe Spudnik, or $5 at the door.
